Proceeding from the love of self, evil men and seducers wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived. Men became covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high, minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. 2 Tim. 3:1-4. To this conspicuous list of end time evils the apostle James adds still another sign of the last times in his reference to the enormous fortunes that would be amassed in the last days. If Adam had earned ten thousand dollars a year from his day until now, he would have earned sixty million dollars, but in these last days many men have amassed fortunes of that magnitude in much less than a lifetime. But says James, "Your gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you." Then to the faithful brethren he offers these comforting words: "Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and latter rain." James 5:3,7.

Before His departure out of this world our Lord briefed His disciples concerning the abounding iniquity of the last days. He made it clear that this great resurgence of sin would be due to an unprecedented falling away from the faith. So great was this regression and backsliding to be that it would be a question whether or not the faith would survive until He returned. I cannot agree in the least with those people who are predicting a world wide revival before the end of this age and before the Lord returns. It is most evident that the entire body of Holy Scripture loudly proclaims an ever, increasing corruption, not only in the world and its corrupt systems, but in professed Christendom as well. If our age is going to end in a world shaking revival, as so many preachers are so fond of predicting, then why did Jesus ask, "When the Son of man cometh, will He find the faith on the earth?" The indisputable evidence is that He will not, except it be in a few elect. Again, if the days of the coming of the Son of man are going to be a repetition of the days of Noah, then how would this substantiate the idea that there will be a world-wide, earth-shaking revival? In Noah's day the whole world was full of scoffing and unbelief and in the days of Sodom, in spite of Abraham's fervent intercession, not even ten righteous could be found. Gen. 18:23-33. The idea of a great revival before the end of the age is not founded on fact. The scripture that describes our time gives evidence in these words: "Evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." 2 Tim. 3:3. Considering the facts, we can scarcely avoid the conclusion that those who are persuading themselves and the people who follow them that a mighty revival is on the way are themselves the true deceivers.

The present generation is seeing a clear vindication of the foreknowledge of God and His apostles and prophets. Those who today devoutly accept and believe the full counsel of the Lord are a tiny fraction of the human race. Even in the so, called Christian west the number of truly faithful is declining lamentably. As the older generation, who knew somewhat of the glory of God, is passing away, a new generation is rising with its hard rock music, its lightness and frivolous pretense, its mingling the things of God with the things of the world, its ecumenical spirit and its relentless drift back into pagan Rome with all her idols and abominable enormities. The furious hurricane of evil both in the existing church and outside of it receives so little attention from the so-called shepherds of the flock that a tide of sheer Satanism has set in, a corrosive, rotting condition so degrading that the normal decencies of community life have become the subject of jest, derision, and hilarity.

Is it not a tragedy that big strong men are so afraid of becoming "involved" that they will hear screams for help from a fourteen year old girl who is being raped and turn a deaf ear and like craven dastards slink into the darkness instead of coming to the rescue? What hope is there for a so-called Christian community whose citizens are as spineless as this? Though we know all these things are so, we have become so calloused, so seared as with a hot iron, that abominable crimes scarcely cause the raising of an eyebrow. It seems clear from all the predictions of the word of God that this foulness will not only continue to the end of the age but will grow worse and worse.

During the great, earth-shaking revivals of George Whitefield, Benjamin Franklin, himself not a believer, remarked, "It seemed as though the whole world had suddenly become religious." That is the kind of result that follows a true revival, but the imagined revivals of our day are not born of God. They do not produce such results as this, the reason being that they are the result of man's engineering and not the moving of the Spirit of God. One world, renowned evangelist, who claimed thirty thousand souls were saved in one of his campaigns, upon returning six months later admitted he could not find thirty. That is not a revival. It is a farce and a dreadful indictment against modern evangelism. The sooner we wake up to this shameful sham and turn away from such falsities and failure the sooner we will discover God's glory and enter His presence in sincerity and truth. A generation ago every pulpit in the land would have been fulminating against the wickedness and rottenness we see everywhere about us, including the backslidden church. It is to the eternal shame of the church system that condemnation of viscous, venal rottenness all about us does not come as much from the preachers as from the worldly media, which are usually concerned with other things.

Some fifty years ago Dr. Spock, to his eternal shame, introduced and advocated the despicable doctrine of self-expression. His teaching, among other things, was that children should not be inhibited by their parents. They should be allowed to freely express themselves in whatsoever manner they wished. As a result of this stupidity the Bible exhortation, "Bring up a child in the way he should go, and, when he is old, he will not depart from it," was laid aside in favor of the new theory, which he supposed would develop much superior men and minds. The result has been a generation of undisciplined, rebellious, insecure and disturbed youngsters. The world now faces the horrible spectacle of seeing a rebellious, undisciplined generation, often dependent upon mind changing drugs, taking over the government of the world. Thus the world rushes like a loaded toboggan into destruction and tribulation. Man has sowed to the wind and he is now reaping the whirlwind. No wonder the cry in the book of Revelation echoes all across the world: "Woe, woe, woe to the inhabitants of the earth!"

It is not my intention in any way to enter into argument with people who hold beliefs other than my own. Often times they have come to their conclusions sincerely enough, but sometimes, of course, our firmest beliefs have not come to us either by study or by revelation, but are simply traditions that have been handed down to us. Many thousands of people are preaching the tradition that the church will be taken out of the world before the tribulation comes. Not long ago, L. E. Maxwell, in one of his articles, warned of the danger that lies in embracing false hopes. Mr. Maxwell, as you may know, has been largely responsible for the sending out of some fourteen hundred missionaries to many heathen nations on every continent in the world. In warning against the no tribulation doctrine, he cited how the Chinese and Koreans had been taught that, before tribulation came upon them, they would all be raptured, but, he said, terrible tribulation and fierce persecution came to these saints and so caught them unawares. Being thus thrown into great persecution and death, they were made to wonder about the truth of other things they had been taught.

I am firmly convinced that this same unexpected persecution and tribulation is going to come upon the Christian in every part of the world. The preachers have been lulling the Christians to sleep by telling them that they will never see tribulation; but they are misinforming the people and filling them with a false hope. Now, if the elect are all going to be taken out of the world before the great tribulation, can you explain to me why it was that Jesus said, "Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken: and then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. And He shall send His angels with a great sound of a trumpet, (the last trump. Cf. 1 Cor. 15:52), and they shall gather together His elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." Matt. 24:29-31. The question then is this: If the elect are to be gathered after the tribulation, then what ground does any man have to affirm that they will be raptured before the tribulation takes place? The idea is not founded on fact. It is, to say the least, a very shaky doctrine that is bound to leave people confounded and amazed when trial and great tribulation shall come.

Jesus taught us that in the last days iniquity would abound and, because of this, the love of many would wax cold. Matt. 24:12. The Bible meaning of iniquity is lawlessness and rebellion. We will not now concern ourselves with the flagrant lawlessness that fills the whole world with depredation and woe. There is another lawlessness, however, that has crept in upon the world and into the hearts of believers as well, and, though it is a sinister thing full of subtle evil, it is everywhere looked upon as good. It is simple for anyone to see that the world is full of people who are covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, high minded, and lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. It does not take much thought to know that this kind of lawlessness abounds in the world, but what do the scriptures teach about family life? What do they say about husbands and wives and children? It is in this realm that rebellion has its beginning.

We hear a great deal in our day about women's lib and other feminist movements in which women are taught to rebel against the authority of their husbands. Do they not know that in so doing they are rebelling against the commandment of God, "Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord, For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is head of the church... Therefore as the church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in everything." Eph. 5:22-24. We may be certain that Paul is directing this command to women who have husbands who are worthy to be called husbands and fathers - not to the violent, the abusive, the drunken, the dissolute, the demanding and overbearing. I do not say that any woman need submit to a devil incarnate, but there are many women who are rebelling against good husbands. Many are deserting their God-given responsibility to their families in favor of being a career woman. Women who refuse to be in subjection to their husbands never need imagine that they are in subjection to Christ.

On the other hand there are countless men who are lawlessly rejecting their responsibilities as husbands. Instead of being faithful husbands and fathers, they opt to spend endless hours in the office trying to heap up riches and make themselves a success, but take no time at all to love their wives and children and be a father and a head to them all. It is an enormous tragedy that the average American father, sometimes called the vanishing father, spends an average of thirty seconds a day playing with his children and being a father to them. The remainder of his hours are spent at work, on the golf course, or in any one of a dozen other ways. He leaves for work before the children are up and comes home after they are in bed, or else he sits with his eyes glued to the television and hardly sees them or talks to them. If home life is the bulwark of the nation, is it any wonder the world is full of woe!
If any man should think that God has forgotten his iniquity and rebellion against His laws, he might well consider the warning of Peter. "The Lord knoweth how to... reserve the unjust unto the Day of Judgment to be punished: but chiefly them that walk after the flesh in the lust of uncleanness, and despise government. Presumptuous are they, self-willed; they are not afraid to speak evil of dignities." 2 Pet. 2:9-10.

We see the spirit of lawlessness manifest in modern music, and in that continual savage uproar that is completely against nature and opposed both to the rhythm of the physical body and the harmony of the universe. Modern music has a tremendous grip on the young people of the day. Its weird rhythm and jungle beat urge its listeners to cast off restraint and morality and abandon themselves to the depravity of the drug culture, the sex craze, drunkenness and so many other evils of our day. The devil has been careful to introduce the "rock beat" into the modern church service under the false and shameful disguise of "gospel rock", and this is little else than a blasphemous revolt against all that is sacred. This evil is constantly promoted by singing groups, who themselves have never had a sound experience with God. From all such evil let us turn away.

In all the world there is no power that is such a rebel against the authority of Christ as in the carnal mind. The carnal mind is enmity against God. It is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be, so that those who are in the flesh cannot please God. It is impossible to walk in the flesh and walk in the Spirit, too. We will be found either obeying the desire of our physical man or walking after the leading and holiness of the Spirit of God. The carnal mind is the body mind. It is the mind that is bent on fulfilling and satisfying the demands and lusts of the body. It is the mind that does the wish and will of the physical man, obeying his lusts and walking after his corrupt desires. "Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these; Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like; of the which I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." Gal. 5:19-21.

Notice now the contrast between the manifestations of the carnal mind, which is motivated by the flesh, and spiritual mind, which is motivated by the Holy Spirit. "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law. (Not even in Communist countries.) And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts. If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit. Let us not be desirous of vain glory, provoking one another and envying one another." Gal. 5:22-26.

In our day there is much indiscriminate use of the Biblical term "born again." Tens of thousands of people are claiming to be born again who have never known true repentance, who have never wept over their sin, known the depths of godly sorrow or turned away from the world with its lusts, its corruption, its filth and its pleasure. They cannot say in truth that they are new creatures. The expressions Hey! and Wow! I've found it! and Honk if you love Jesus! Are as sounding brass and tinkling cymbal to those who dwell in the depths of His Spirit, and they are foreign to Him whose name is above every name and in whose presence cherubim and seraphim cover their faces and cry, "Holy! Holy! Holy is the Lord of hosts; The whole earth is full of His glory." God is not in their abominable gospel rock nor yet in their food, fun and fellowship. "Spots they are and blemishes, sporting themselves with their own deceiving while they feast with you." 2 Pet. 2:13. He commands all men everywhere to repent of these vanities and turn to God with a pure heart for the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Spirit.

In the face of the abounding corruption, the lightness, the frivolity and make believe that overflows in the church system, no man need deem it a mystery when he hears the Lord's stern rebuke to the church of Laodicea, the church of the twentieth century. "Because thou sayest, I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked: I counsel thee to buy of Me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear:" Neither need any man wonder that our Lord Jesus Christ, speaking of this Laodicean mass of corruption that calls itself the church, scolded and reproached them thus: "I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot: I would that thou weren't cold or hot. So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of My mouth." Rev. 3:15-16. Such forceful words of remonstration and rebuff are not statements to be taken lightly. They are fearful indictments against the careless professors of our day. It is no hand-clapping matter of exuberance to be told by Christ Himself, "I will spue thee out of My mouth." Neither is it any light matter of minor importance to be told, "Thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked." Yet these dire statements of truth come from the lips of Christ and they are spoken to the entire church system as it exists in our day. Can we wonder, then, that God sees it as mystery Babylon the great or that He calls to His elect, "Come out of her, My people?"

That which is wretched is unsatisfactory. It is worthless in ability and quality, despicable, contemptible, dejected and unhappy. To be miserable is to be in a state of misery, poor health, unhappiness and discomfort. It is something of inferior quality, paltry, meager and skimpy. That which is blind cannot see, and to this we may say that in all the history of the world the professing church has never walked in greater blindness than now. Well did Jesus say, "Because ye say, We see, therefore your sin remains." Can we wonder that the message of Jesus to this lukewarm, blind, naked, miserable, wretched church system at the end of the days includes the melancholy picture of the Lord Himself, standing on the outer side of that which professes to be His temple and His body. To add to the disconcerting portrayal the Lord is not seen asking admittance to the system, for that would be useless in the extreme, but addressing the individual, saying, "If any man hear My voice and open the door, I will come in to him."

We are living in an appalling hour of unbelief and blindness. We dwell in the Laodicean age and know it not. This is the end of the age and we know it not. Ours is an hour of gross darkness when the Christian conscience is seared as with a hot iron. Concerning this dread hour Jesus Christ counsels, "Buy of Me gold tried in the fire that thou mayest be rich, and white raiment that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eyesalve, that thou mayest see." Rev. 3:18. It is pitiful to be blind, but lamentable to be blind and not know it. It is shameful to be naked, but it is appalling for one who is naked to imagine himself well clothed. It is pathetic to find one wretched, but sad indeed when the miserable imagines he has need of nothing. But thus it is in our day. Jesus himself stands outside, and there from His exterior position He calls to you, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her sins and that ye receive not of her plagues, for strong is the Lord that judgeth her." "Let us go therefore unto Him without the camp, bearing His reproach." Heb. 13:13.

The term the antichrist is not strictly a scriptural term. We need not say it is unscriptural, but it is, to say the least, misleading. God's people have been tragically misled by the traditions that have been foisted upon them until today, as in the days of Jesus, we make the truth of God of none effect by our tradition. Mark 7:13. So much of what has been taught as gospel truth is in fact a caricature of the truth. All of us are inclined to use terms that are supposed to be scriptural but which are in fact little more than hackneyed cliches and trite phrases, handed down from generation to generation. These expressions are supposed to be long established truth, but so often they darken truth and withhold from us any true searching after real understanding. Expressions such as the antichrist, the rapture, spiritual Israel, eternal torment and many others are heard readily on the lips of God's people, yet none of these terms are actually scriptural terms. Therefore, instead of serving to reveal truth, they cast a shadow over it and become definite obstacles in the path of truth and understanding.

Whenever the term the antichrist is used, our minds immediately conjure up the specter of some hideous creature who in the future is going to arise on the world scene. Indeed, such a hideous creature may very well appear, but we are deceiving ourselves if we think that antichrist belongs only to the future. The real truth of the matter is that both the antichrist spirit and the antichrist system have been with us for a very long time. We could scarcely be wrong in believing that the antichrist spirit was manifested when Cain killed his brother Abel, or earlier still when the serpent deceived Eve. It was manifested in evil Athaliah, who wickedly sought to murder all the seed royal and thus destroy the line through which Christ would come. 2 Kings 11:1-3. The spirit of antichrist was manifested in Herod when he killed all the boys two years old and under in the vain hope of murdering the Christ child. It was manifested in Judas Iscariot when he betrayed the Lord, and has been obvious on an ever increasing scale all through the church age. In our day it is openly evident to those who are aware of its working.

Centuries ago the Holy Spirit gave us some definite indications concerning what and who antichrist would be. John, writing in his day, said, "As ye have heard that antichrist shall come, even now there are many antichrists." Then significantly he adds, "They went out from us, but they were not of us." 1 John 2:18-19.

Doubtless those who went out still called themselves Christian, but their teaching was against Christ rather than for Him. In chapter four John, continuing his exhortation regarding antichrist, points out in verses 1-3 some definite identifying marks of antichrist. These identifying marks were not to be so evident in the things men say as they are in the spirit of the person who says them. Therefore John's exhortation is: "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they be of God; because many false prophets are gone out into the world." If God's people will take time to consider the wide scope of professing Christendom, we will be forced to conclude that in our day there are far more false prophets in the existing church than true ones. It is very easy for a preacher to wave a Bible over his head and shout, "I believe this book from cover to cover." It is an easy statement to make and, of course, it sounds convincingly fundamental, but quiz that man a little and you will find that he denies far more truth than he believes. Does he believe in predestination? Does he believe in the reconciliation of all things? Does he believe that God hath reconciled all things to Himself? Does he believe in a literal kingdom of God? Does he believe that God had a purpose for the world and all things in it and that all things, absolutely all things, are working according to the purpose? The spirit that denies any truth in favor of church tradition is the spirit of antichrist. Let us make no mistake about that.

It was Dr. Price who once said that, while he was surveying the world scene for a man who would fit the description of antichrist, he found that the real antichrist was within himself. That is a very true statement, for all and everything that belongs to the carnal mind is of a certainty antichrist.

John continues to disclose the unmistakable fingerprints of antichrist in these words: "Hereby know ye the Spirit of God: Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God: and every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God: and this is that spirit of antichrist, wherof ye have heard that it should come; and even now already is it in the world." 1 John 4:3. I thoroughly believe that Jesus Christ was God manifest in the flesh, but is it possible that we have entirely missed the truth that John was faithfully trying to teach us? If Jesus Christ was God manifest in the flesh, which He certainly was, then would we not be right in saying that Jesus Christ manifest in the flesh refers, not to Christ's incarnation, but to the Spirit of Christ living and dwelling in you and me? "Christ in you is the hope of glory," but there are many who deny that this is true and that Jesus Christ is come in His people. These same people, thus manifesting the spirit of antichrist, spend their whole earthly existence trying to climb up some other way, hoping to gain heaven by their good works. They know not that in so doing they are thieves and robbers. They rob Christ of His place in themselves and they rob themselves of eternal life. The prophets long ago proclaimed the message, "I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be My people." 2 Cor. 6:16. The apostle Paul in like manner proclaimed the truth of this when he testified, "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave Himself for me." Gal. 2:20.

It is almost two millenniums ago that the apostle John wrote to the saints, saying, "As ye have heard that antichrist shall come, even now are there many antichrists." 1 John 2:18. From the analysis of this solemn warning it is right to conclude that the antichrist spirit was manifest in many people in John's day and in all periods of the church age. The distinction between antichrist and many antichrists indicates that many antichrists will find their head in one master antichrist, who would rise in the church so that "he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God." (The temple of God, of course, is the church — not Solomon's temple, as many imagine.) Now, while the majority of Christians rightly believe that a great master antichrist will arise, these same Christians have been deceived by the teaching that this antichrist is a personage who will appear in the future and who has not yet appeared on the world scene. This in my opinion is a gross error, the result of which will be that millions of Christians will unite themselves with the mother of harlots, over which antichrist now reigns.

At the beginning of the Reformation, in which under God Martin Luther played such an important part, this great reformer made the unqualified statement that the Pope is antichrist. In his Smalcald articles Luther laid special stress upon one declaration of the apostle Paul, which in his opinion pointed unerringly to the Pope and his successors. From 2 Thess. 2:3,4 he fastens upon the following mark of identification as unquestionably the true fingerprint of antichrist. "Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; who opposeth and exalteth Himself above all that is called God or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God." Martin Luther saw this statement concerning antichrist as definitely fulfilled in the papal system. The Pope raised his head above all. The teaching of Paul shows forcefully that the Pope exalted himself above and opposed himself against Christ because he would not permit Christians to be saved without his power. This, properly speaking, is to exalt himself above all that is called God, as Paul stated in 2 Thess 2:4. For confirmation of the above statement by Luther we quote the following from Bull Unam Sanctum of Pope Boniface 8th. "To submit to the Roman Pontiff we declare, say, define and pronounce to be absolutely necessary to every human creature to salvation." Then again, from the Council of Trent, we have the following: "If any one says that justifying faith is nothing else but confidence in the divine mercy which remits sins for Christ's sake, or that this confidence alone is that whereby we are justified, let him be accursed."

Centuries ago Israel, particularly that segment of Israel known as Jews, was expecting the Messiah to come, but her people were not expecting Him to come as He did, lowly and riding upon an ass, despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief - born to be crucified and die, not for His own sins, but for the sins of the world. They expected Him to come as a mighty conqueror who would destroy their enemies and bring them to an hitherto unheard of prominence and glory. The prophecies that are to be fulfilled at Christ's second coming they expected to be fulfilled at His first coming. They could neither understand nor believe nor accept the fact that their long awaited Messiah would be wounded for our transgressions, bruised for our iniquities and that the chastisement of our peace was to be upon Him or that by His stripes we were to be healed. Such thoughts as these were the farthest from their imagination. What they wanted was pomp and prominence in the earth not tears of repentance or humility of heart. They saw no need of conversion. They understood not that a man must be born again before he can see the kingdom of God.

No man can see the kingdom until his life has been touched and moved upon by the Holy Spirit. It is true, not only that man cannot enter the kingdom in his unregenerate state, but that he cannot even see it. As heaven is higher than earth, so the kingdom of God is of an order so much higher than the kingdoms of this world that the natural man cannot see it, perceive it or understand it. He has no insight into it or any cognizance of it. His soul and mind are unenlightened concerning its heavenly nature. No glimmer of light pierces his understanding. Indeed, such a carnal man may have great theories about the kingdom of God, as was true of the dissenting and blinded Israelites of long ago, but to behold the kingdom of God as an age of righteousness, joy and peace in the Holy Ghost is something beyond the ken of the natural mind. For this cause our Lord Jesus, speaking to Nicodemus, a good man with a natural mind, went about to show him what all men need to know, that if we are to so much as see the kingdom of God, we must be moved upon by the Holy Spirit from above. Our spirits must be touched and transformed by the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Spirit. We must be made new creatures in Christ Jesus. We must be born again. John 3:3. We must be born of that incorruptible seed, the word of God that liveth and abideth forever.

In the light of such truth as this it is small wonder that Israel, blinded by the darkness of the natural mind and cursed by the willfulness of an unconverted heart, could not see the kingdom of God. They could comprehend the workings of the kingdoms of Babylon, Medo-Persia, Rome or even the kingdom of David, but the higher realm of the kingdom of God with its transformation of man and earth and all things therein, its incorruption, its glory, its justice, equity, peace and joy in the Holy Ghost they could never be expected to see until they were born from above and received in themselves that eternal life which is the life of the kingdom and of the ages to come.

Now in the same way that Israel in the flesh was unable to see the kingdom of God or the true Messiah, but looked instead for a Messiah after the vain imagination of their own carnal minds, so also the church, knowing that antichrist will come, has looked for a tyrant to appear at the end of the age to tyrannize and oppress the whole world. The real truth is that antichrist is an ever present, deceiving pseudo Christ. Just as Christ came and the people of his day knew Him not, so antichrist has been in our midst from the beginning and we knew him not. As John in his epistle warned, "Even now there are many antichrists." 1 John 2:18.

According to Paul the mystery of iniquity was already at work in his day, 2 Thess. 2:7, and this was to be the manner of his coming and moving among the people. He was to come with all deceivableness of unrighteousness. He was not to come as a world conqueror, but as a deceiver of great power and authority, whose spurious gospel, miracles and speaking with tongues would be a crafty imitation of the real workings of Christ. He will come with power and signs and lying wonders. 2 Thess. 2:9-10. Because so many Christians follow like dumb sheep after every spectacular thing and will not endure sound doctrine, God allows them to be deluded so that they might believe a lie. Verse 11. In the book of Revelation we find this beast performing great signs and wonders, even calling down fire from heaven in the sight of men. Furthermore, we are told that he deceived the people who dwell on the earth by the miracles he had power to do.

I am a firm believer in the manifestations of the Holy Spirit, in gifts, in ministries, in baptisms, in the working of miracles, in signs and wonders, in helps, governments and diversities of tongues, all of which are given to bring the saints to perfection; but I would be a fool indeed if I closed my eyes to the indisputable fact that in our day - even as in the days of the apostles - there are false prophets, false apostles, false miracle workers, false pastors, false healers, false baptisms, pseudo gifts and even false conversions. The world is thronging with false ministries and false prophets who exalt not Christ, but self and serve not Christ, but "their own bellies." As the beautiful word love has been desecrated and defiled, its true meaning completely lost as blind and craven people dare to associate that sublime word with adultery, fornication and illicit sex, so the heavenly truth that fell from the lips of Christ, "Ye must be born again," has largely lost its meaning because the pompous and unregenerate play with the term and profess the experience while their lives remain absorbed in the things of earth and the lusts of the carnal mind and still find their glory in the kingdoms of this world.

Christian brethren, never set your hearts on miracles and signs and wonders. Set your hearts on Christ and the glorious light of life that streams from His heavenly face. Ardently refuse to honor men except it be where honor is due. Refuse to let men exalt and adore you lest you be like Herod, who gladly received the acclaim of the people as they shouted, "It is the voice of a god and not a man." Wherefore God smote him and he was eaten of worms and died.

As we come nearer to the consummation of this age, we are going to see an ever increasing move among the churches, both modernistic and evangelical, toward unity with Rome and the Pope. The Archbishop of Canterbury, head of the Anglican church, is unquestionably in favor of union with Rome. Many among the Lutheran congregations are not only in favor of reunion with Rome, but condemn themselves for ever having separated in the first place. What are we to conclude when we see all manner of Protestant denominations (and I mean all manner) gathering together for charismatic meetings with the Church of Rome? Is this not a means of uniting them under one head? But that "one head" is not our Lord Jesus Christ! Perhaps you think this is good. The truth is that this is the deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish, because they love not the truth. 2 Thess. 2:10. If Paul had not warned the saints of this dreadful deception of the last days, I would not be repeating the warning now. Many Christians apparently imagine that this antichrist leopard has changed his spots and the mother of harlots is not the enemy of Christ she once was, but this is not so and, if you examine the countries where Rome holds sway, such as the nations of South America, you will see she has not changed; and she has emphatically stated that she has no intention of doing so. It is never my joy to write such things as these, but if the antichrist spirit of this, the end of the age, is to come with all deceivableness of unrighteousness to such an extent that, were it possible, even the very elect would succumb to his devilish wiles, then with all longsuffering I exhort God's people to look only to Christ for their instruction, their knowledge and their wisdom. Ask of Him bread and He will not give you a stone. Ask of Him an egg and He will not give you a scorpion. Let the fervent exhortation of Paul ring continually in your mind: "Wherefore come out from among them and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." Furthermore give fervent heed to these inspired words from the book of Revelation, which above all previous words are given for the admonition of all who live in the end of this perilous age. "I saw another angel come down from heaven, having great power; and the earth was lightened with his glory. And he cried mightily with a strong voice, saying, Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird. For all nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth are waxed rich through the abundance of her delicacies. And I heard another voice from heaven, saying, Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." Rev. 18:4. These are solemn warnings. They are given for the age in which we live, but, though God has spoken so often in calling His people to come out of the systems of religion so prevalent in our day and remain no longer in touch with the unclean thing, for all His admonition only an elect few ever heed the call to separation that Christ may be all and in all and that God may be our Father and we may be His sons and daughters.

Many heart stirring and almost terrifying messages were spoken by inspired men concerning the last days of this age. Our Lord Jesus, foremost among them, bore faithful witness that the last days of this age, the time just preceding His second coming, would be as the days of Noah, days described vividly in Gen. 6 as days of violence that filled the earth, a time of universal corruption when the thoughts and imaginations of men's hearts were only evil. He told us that the end of this age would be a time when faith had fled from the earth as it had in Noah's time, who alone walked with God. The days of Noah were days of indiscriminate racial desegregation when the sons of God, the Adamites, were intermarrying with all colors and races as they are now doing, bringing swift and terrible judgment on the world. Furthermore Jesus said that as it was in the days of Sodom, so would it be in the days of the coming of the Son of man. In our day sodomy is rampant from the high places to the low. The appalling result of this sordid crime is that men and nations receive a reprobate mind to do those things that are inconvenient and wrong, even as Paul taught us in Romans, chapter 1.

Perhaps the saddest picture of all is found in the letter to the church of Laodicea, that church, which above all others represents the church system at the end of the age. There at Laodicea we see the Lord Jesus Christ standing without - both outside the system and outside the hearts of the lukewarm multitude. From His position without Christ is seen knocking, not at the door of the Laodicean church - never could He hope to find admission there - but rather He stands before each troubled heart, knocking and saying, "If any man hear My voice and open the door, I will come in to him and sup with him and he with Me." This is the final promise of our age. It is the promise for you and me. God never leaves Himself without a witness. There are yet seven thousand in Israel who have not bowed the knee either to Baal or to Babylon, but if you are bowing to the system or adhering to it in any way, then you are still in it and awaiting its condemnation. The call of the hour is, "Come out of her, My people."

Saints of the Lord, has the Holy Spirit ever impressed upon you the astonishing truth of who and what you are? As I was kneeling this morning with the Bible before me, my spirit was absorbing with reverent joy the almost incredible statements made by the beloved Peter to the saints of the Most High. After Peter had honored our Lord Jesus Christ by telling us that He was a living stone disallowed of men, but that He was chosen of God and precious, he went on to say that we also are living stones, and that, being living stones, we are being built up into a spiritual house. Peter stated further that we are a holy priesthood, ordained to offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God. These truths we find in 1 Peter 2:4-5.

Never before as today did the truth of what we really are dawn upon me so forcefully. The stones of Solomon's temple in all its costly glory were nothing but hard, cold, lifeless rock, unable to speak or feel or see. The stones which compose the temple of Christ's glorious body are not as these. The temple of His body is a living temple composed of living stones, each one throbbing and alive with the eternal life, which Christ is, each stone endowed with the seven Spirits of God. Not flickering lights burning olive oil, but each one blazing more brightly than the glory of the noonday sun. Ah, what a temple of glory and beauty God is building! A temple not made with hands, eternal in the heavens! The habitation of God through timeless ages! As God has said, "Ye are a building which is rising upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief corner stone; in whom the whole building, fittedly framed together, is rising to form a fixed abode for God through the Spirit." This building, of which Paul spoke in his letter to the Ephesians, is the spiritual house of which Peter was speaking when he revealed that we are living stones, standing in order upon a foundation of glory. "Fade, fade each earthly joy! Jesus in mine!" I would not barter my place on that foundation for all the temples that have ever been built. "Break every tender tie," for no joy of earth can have the slightest appeal to those who know that through His marvelous grace we are the habitation of God forevermore.

But, lest our lives should be momentarily swept away by the fun and foolishness of this present world or by the vanity of its treasure, its gold or silver or costly array, or lest we should be swamped with the cares of this world or the deceitfulness of riches or the lusts of other things entering in, forget not, but rather call to remembrance, that you who are living stones in God's living temple are therefore separated from all others unto God as an holy priesthood. How those words of inspiration enlightened my heart as the light of the Spirit streamed upon them today! Here in the realization of the meaning of this truth we come to the parting of the ways. Here we priests of God become separated from the noisy, capricious throng with their food, fun and fellowship, their giddy religious culture with its hand clapping, back slapping merriment to the accompaniment of hard rock music, which has everything in common with earth and nothing in common with Christ.

The holy priesthood of God is ordained to draw nigh to Him, not only on behalf of themselves, but on behalf of whatsoever and whomsoever the Spirit will lay upon their hearts. Unto this priest the way into the most holy is wide open. The veil has been rent asunder, and now henceforth the only veil that can hinder the priest from entering is the veil of his own flesh. Yet, if he will reckon it to be crucified with Christ and reckon himself dead indeed unto sin and alive unto God, there is nothing that can hinder his entrance into His presence. Did not the great apostle plainly tell us, "Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which He hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, His flesh... let us draw near..." Heb. 10:19-22. When the flesh of Christ was rent on Calvary, my flesh was rent with His. In that He died, He died unto sin once, but in that He liveth, He liveth unto God, ever to make intercession as a priest for the saints of the Most High.

Herein lies the joy of the Lord. Without like a restless sea is the frivolity of a religion born of the flesh and not of the Spirit. The flesh, I find, is one of the most religious things in creation. Even Cain brought his offering to the Lord, unacceptable as it was, but this holy priesthood, these living stones, are ordained of God to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ. The revelation and the realization of what we are and who we are and what we are called unto comes to us as a tremendous awakening, even as life from out the tomb. Here old things die and new are born. Here the world with its vanity recedes and the life in Christ matures and grows exceedingly.

There is today, as there has been in all the ages that have passed, an elect company of saints who are not satisfied with anything less than the true glory and the true presence of God. Self-centered sermons do not satisfy these elect saints. The lightness and frivolity of the Charismatics leave them cold. The devilish rock beat that now holds sway in so many supposedly full gospel churches leaves them appalled and repulsed in spirit. The "Hey, let's give God a clap" crowd incites grief and pain to their hearts. The repugnant greed of the money grabbers with their multitudinous human programs repels their spirits. The elect according to the foreknowledge of God are sanctified by the Spirit and their belief of the truth. Therefore the manipulating and maneuvering of all modern forms of religion become a devastating abomination in their sight. Have you never read the awesome words of Isaiah the prophet, who spoke of these times of religion without God in the following words? "Bring no more vain oblations; incense is an abomination unto Me; the new moons and Sabbaths, the calling of assemblies, I cannot away with; it is iniquity, even the solemn meeting. Your new moons and your appointed feasts My soul hateth: they are a trouble unto Me; I am weary to bear them. And when ye spread forth your hands, I will hide Mine eyes from  you; yea, when ye make many prayers, I will not hear: your hands are full of blood. Wash you, make you clean; put away the evil of your doings from before Mine eyes." Isa. 1:13-16.

Saints of God, the conditions in the church system will not change. They will grow worse and worse until it will be literally true that, when the Son of man comes, it will be an open question as to whether or not there is faith on the earth. When the Son of man cometh, the elect of the Lord will be scarce, as they were in the days of Noah, but violence, greed and spoil will fill the earth as it did then; and as judgment followed the days of Noah and fire followed the days of Sodom, so judgment and fire are about to fall upon the hosts of mankind. As the darkness gathers and the shades of night are descending upon this final stage of man's rule, the Spirit of God sends forth His final call to the saints who still dwell in the Babylon of the existing church system. It is this: "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." And unto you who still pause on the brink of decision, I ask with all humility, "Why are you so afraid to walk with Christ alone." When at last your frail bark is borne from out the realm of time and place, is it not He who will guide you across your Jordan of death? Why then do you fail to heed His warning now and come out and walk with Him before judgment falls on the Babylon system and upon all who are within? You may indeed be "disallowed of men," but if you are chosen of God and precious, how little does the disfavor of the harlot matter! If we as living stones are built up a spiritual house, destined to become habitation of God forever, let us then strip for the race and leave the cunning devices of the harlot behind to run with patience the race before us.
I have endeavored to make this chapter a simple exhortation, knowing full well that the end of the age is upon us and the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.

"Never give your hearts to the world, little children, or to any of the things in it. A man cannot love the Father and love the world at the same time; for the whole world system, based as it is on man's primitive desires, their greedy ambitions, and the glamour of all they think splendid, is not derived from the Father at all, but from the world itself. The world with all its passionate desires will one day disappear; but the man who is following God's will is part of the permanent and cannot die."

CHAPTER SIX
THE GATHERING STORM AND THE GLORY BEYOND

_The signs around in earth and air_
_And painted on the starlit sky,_
_God's faithful witnesses, declare_
_That the coming of the Master draweth nigh._

In ages and dispensations past God's people lived to see many wonders wrought by God. In times of meditation we have thought how good it must have been to have seen the mighty arm of God made bare as signs and wonders were performed in the midst of His people. Can we imagine the abounding joy that Noah felt when, after six centuries of enduring the doubt and unbelief of godless people and after one hundred years of faithfully preaching the incredible message that God would soon destroy the world with a flood, he built an ark to the saving of his house, and now, safely sheltered in its kindly fold with beasts and birds and creeping things, which seemed to have more faith than men, he saw the storm clouds gather like angry portents in the heavens? The thunders roared as lightnings raced from sky to sky and tiny raindrops, never before seen in all earth's history, began to fall. Gently, perhaps, at first, then with increasing tempo and fury it came until the floods rose, first to the ankles, then to the waist as the fountains of the deep were broken up, until the ark itself was born aloft upon the mighty deep. Trees once stately and tall floundered helplessly in the waters until they sank beneath the waves to be seen no more. Hills and mountains to whose safety men and beasts had fled soon were buried in their watery grave and tongues that once had scorned God fell cold and silent and still, too late now to partake of His mercy.

What child of God could refrain from rejoicing to see the might of the Lord displayed as it was in Egypt when God's time had fully come to release from bondage His people, whose hopes were almost dead through the demeaning effect of two centuries of slavery? But could their unbelief make the faith of God of none effect? God forbid! This could never be! His purposes do not depend on the strength or weaknesses of man. He who has promised will surely bring it to pass, even when all hope that we should be saved has fled away. In God's own time He sent a deliverer, a man once learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians but now taught in all the wisdom of God. From the sheepfolds God took him, a man of fourscore years, so lacking in eloquent speech that God sent his brother to be a mouthpiece for him. These two brothers were sent by the Lord to stand before the mightiest monarch of the earth with the message, "Let My people go." Then with signs and wonders never seen before nor since they led God's people forth with a high and mighty hand. Even the waves of the sea rolled back at the Father's omnipotent command, and Miriam, a woman of ninety years and more, led the ransomed hosts in singing this redemption song: "I will sing unto the Lord, for He hath triumphed gloriously: the horse and his rider hath He thrown into the sea. The Lord is my strength and song, and He is become my salvation: He is my God, and I will prepare Him an habitation; my father's God, and I will exalt Him. The Lord is a man of war: the Lord is His name. Pharaoh's chariots and his host hath He cast into the sea; his chosen captains also are drowned in the Red sea. The depths have covered them: they sank into the bottom as a stone." Exod. 15:1-5.

How good it would have been to see the works of Christ as He spoke as never man before had spoken and performed mighty signs and wonders never before seen or heard or known by mankind! Though He was crucified through weakness, He arose by the power of God and ascended up into heaven in the sight of more than five hundred brethren who both saw Him go and heard the word of promise made by men in white
There was a day when the disciples led their master about the temple grounds, proudly showing Him all the great and beautiful buildings that were there. "See," said they, "what manner of stones and what buildings are here!" Mark 13:1. But the Lord, knowing that these were temples made with hands, and that all things belonging to this realm of darkness must be destroyed, answered them and said, "See ye not all these things? Verily I say unto you, There shall not be left here one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down." Matt. 24:2. And as He sat upon the Mount of Olives, the disciples came to Him privately, saying, (1) "Tell us, when shall these things be? (2) and what shall be the sign of Thy coming, (3) and of the end of the world (age)?" Matt. 24:3. These three questions have been paramount in the minds of millions from time immemorial. No generation since the days of our Lord Jesus Christ has lacked its array of faithful saints who possess a heartfelt longing for the coming of the Lord. Not all those who believed in the Lord's coming have desired to see it. Many people who have believed that the end of the age is near have not anticipated that glorious event with pleasure and hope, but with doubt and fear, hoping that it would not come in their day.

If mankind could know the answer to the age old problem voiced by the disciples of Jesus - "When shall these things be?" - I am sure they would be willing to go to great lengths to find it. "When shall these things be?" was the earnest question of the disciples, "and what shall be the sign of Thy coming, and of the end of the age?" Almost all prophecies have a double or triple fulfillment, first the small and local meaning, secondly, the larger and more general meaning, and finally, the fulfillment in all its power. Therefore, when they asked, "When shall these things be?" He gave them at first signs of immediate impending disaster. He spoke of certain local events, now long passed into history. Then, leaving the immediate future, He spoke of things, which were to happen in the latter days that would tell us clearly that the coming of the Master was drawing nigh. "Ye can discern the face of the sky," Jesus said to the Pharisees. "When it is evening, ye say, It will be fair weather; for the sky is red and lowering. O ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky; but can ye not discern the signs of the times?" Matt. 16:2-3.

The signs of the times are all about us on every hand. Not only are they appearing in all the world, but they are pressing hard upon the heart and the conscience of all mankind. All people seem to know that the end of the present system is at hand. Never before has there been such a universal sense among the godly and the ungodly, the wise and the unwise, warning that some event of surpassing importance is about to take place. I do not mean to say that all men know what that event will be, but, as birds stop their singing minutes before earthquakes and volcanoes strike and rats forsake a ship that will be lost at sea, so God has placed in the minds of millions the consciousness that the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.

It hardly seems essential that one should repeat the ever, increasing signs of the times along with statistics to prove that we are in the end of the age. I doubt that there are very many who are unaware of them. Nevertheless, as it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the days when the Son of man shall come. They were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark and the flood came and took them all away. In that evil day men and women were marrying and divorcing and inter-marrying with people of strange flesh. Even the sons of God took the daughters of men and the result of that corrupt union was that "there were giants in the earth." Their sordid union was loathsome to God and the offspring of it were wicked men of renown, bent on every evil purpose. "And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually. And it repented the Lord that He had made man on the earth, and it grieved Him at His heart." The earth was corrupt then as it is now from the lowest den to the highest offices in all the land, for all flesh had corrupted his
The earth itself became filled with violence of every kind. Violence always follows when those in high places become corrupt. So loathsome had the condition become that naught but total destruction could serve to cleanse the earth of the degraded works of men. "And God said unto Noah, The end of all flesh is come before Me; for the earth is filled with violence through them; and, behold, I will destroy them with the earth." "My Spirit shall not always strive with man, for that he also is flesh."

I see no difference between their condition and our own, nor are the sins of our day of lesser weight than theirs. All flesh has corrupted God's way upon the earth. Men are more polluted in mind than they are in body and the thoughts and imaginations of their hearts are only evil continually, as they eat and drink, marry and divorce, murder, commit adultery and sodomy, and lightly murder millions of unborn children, while all unknown to the world at large the elect are gathering into the ark of safety.

For many centuries the world has known wars and rumors of wars as great armies have fought their battles and raised their banners over the new territory they had won, but Jesus gave one faithful word concerning the wars that will curse the world at the end of the age. He declared that nation would rise against nation — not merely army against army, but whole nations against whole nations. It was not until 1914 that we saw this for the first time as mighty nations and empires girded for war and locked themselves in furious and mortal combat. Peaceful men were summoned from the hilltops and called in from the glens. They left their farms, their merchandise and their professions to learn the dreadful arts of war. Not only in the front lines did men battle and die, but every person was in the war and in the front lines as devastating weapons of destruction fell upon innocent men, women, and children in the towns and cities, wreaking untold havoc everywhere.

Jesus told us there would be a rise of false prophets in the last days, men not sent of God, but trained in the arts of public preaching, hirelings who were false because God had not sent them and His Spirit had not led them. I will incur the wrath of many well-meaning people when I declare that false prophets in our day are innumerable. Thousands of preachers now occupying the pulpits of our land are further from truth and sincerity than were the prophets of Baal. False Christs have arisen in the form of denominations and sects, telling the people that except they follow their way and their group they cannot be saved. Some of these deceived persons are requiring their people to go out into the wilderness places and propounding many other such schemes, hoping to escape the coming judgment. Had they enquired of the Lord, He would have told them, "Go not forth." Matt. 24:26.

When iniquity abounds, the love of many waxes cold, but there is an elect people who know in their hearts that the awful conditions of these present times are portents, warning us that the great day of tribulation is upon us to try the heart of man who lives upon the earth. We have often spoken of the coming of the great tribulation and, though I may be wrong, I have an inner conviction that we are even now in the very early part of that earth shaking event, which will end with the revelation of the Lord and the destruction of all this world's governments, systems, and religions.

Even now the mighty hosts of Gog and the land of Magog (Russia) are poised and ready to strike. During the 1973 Palestinian war Russia's seven air born divisions were on high alert and ready to cover the land of Israel as with a cloud. Ezek. 38:9. Her ninety ships were steaming in the Mediterranean Sea, loaded with infantry, deadly weapons, and men of war. We may look for the European Common Market to shortly find political union through the good offices of the Pope or some other superman, and the nations who are now in such turmoil and disarray will gladly put their future in his hand, because they will see no other salvation from the whirlpool into which the world is now sinking in despair. The crisis of the moment tells us clearly either political union of many nations or else total disintegration is near at hand. The nations of Europe will gladly choose political union. Then will come a struggle for power as Gog with all his forces, together with the armies of the Orient, march with their many millions against Palestine to seize her vast resources, which today exceed that of almost any other nation.

It may seem late in the day to relate the things which the prophets of old declared would come to pass. Little that is new can be said about the signs of the times. All that was written is present with us now. The signs will no doubt increase in intensity and numbers, but the signs of the end of the age are all about us. Our blessed Lord spoke of famines and pestilences and earthquakes that would greatly increase along with the general unrest of the people. One only need look at his newspaper or listen to his radio to know that earthquakes have greatly increased. A very large portion of the world is feeling the ravages of famine and many others see its skinny finger pointing their way. Should the crops fail in this present year, whole continents would face its stark reality. Everywhere on earth there is talk of shortages. Even the affluent nations are feeling the pinch. Instead of hope that things will improve, every passing month sees the shadows thicken as the clouds grow darker and descend lower.

My prayer to God is that the eyes of God's elect may be opened wide to see that the world is swarming with false prophets, just as Jesus said it would be. Men who know nothing of regeneration are standing in pulpits like the prophets of Baal, instructing the people in error. I do not refer to the pagan religions often imported from heathen countries. I refer to the false prophets in the church system. Many know nothing of Christ, redemption, the blood, or the Spirit, yet they stand as teachers of the people. But far more serious than this is the fact that vast moves are afoot to hastily bring together into one harlot union all sects and denominations of professing Christians. People who live like the devil in private, who themselves have never known true repentance, are claiming to be the proud possessors of spiritual gifts. Young people pride themselves in their ability to speak with tongues, but have never gone home to their parents to repent of their fierce rebellion and hatred toward them. It is true that some parents are not worthy to own a dog, let alone a son or a daughter; yet, if that son or daughter has really found the Lord and is a possessor of the experience they claim, then they will earnestly desire the redemption of their parents just as Christian parents earnestly pray for the redemption of their children.

Among professing Christians today there is a woeful lack of repentance. They have not repented. Godly sorrow worketh repentance unto salvation, not to be repented of, but the sorrow of the world worketh death. They would like to have the good things of heaven and still live after the flesh, but that just simply cannot be done.
Everywhere we see what one has described as salvation without repentance, baptism without separation, and communion without discipline.

I make mention of these things because Paul warned us that in the last days men would come working miracles who would be "of that wicked one," "even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish:
because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: that they all might be damned (condemned) who believed not the truth but had pleasure in unrighteousness." 2 Thess. 2:9-2. Think of the dreadful import of this scripture! There were signs and wonders and miracles among those who did not love the truth, and for that reason God - not Satan, but God - sent them strong delusion that they might believe the lie and so all might be condemned.

Many times I have warned the people that the days of revival as we have known them in the past are over and gone. With regret I say that I stand almost alone in this belief; nevertheless, it is true. Everywhere people are talking of one great final revival before the Lord comes, but they do not know that the rain is over and gone and now the sound of the turtledove is in the land. The people who love Christ more than life itself are gathering unto Him within the ark of safety. The so-called "breath of fresh air" and the "pouring out of the Spirit on all flesh" is largely a counterfeit revival. If it were a true outpouring, the world would not be sinking deeper and deeper into the quicksand of iniquity. The next great revival will be at the end of the tribulation, when Christ reveals Himself to His people, Israel. There will be no other revival except a false one. The Ecumenical Movement, the Interchurch Renewal, the Jesus Movement, and all such kindred things are not true revivals.
They herald the rising of Mystery Babylon to her dizziest heights in preparation for her fall. See how she swaggers in pride and filth at the end of the age, full of names of blasphemy, drunk with the blood of saints, decked with riches and wealth, but full of the filth of her fornication! Rev. 17:1-7.

When John in Revelation saw the seals opened, the living creature bade him, "Come and see," and, when he looked, he saw a white horse go forth. His rider had a crown on his head and a bow in his hand, but no mention is made of an arrow. He went forth conquering and to conquer. There is very little similarity between this one and the glorious rider of the white horse in Rev. 19, who came forth with the armies of heaven. "He that sat on him is called Faithful and True, and in righteousness He doth judge and make war. His eyes were as a flame of fire, and on His head are many crowns; and He had a name written, that no man knew, but Himself. And He was clothed in a vesture dipped in blood: and His name is called The Word of God ... And out of His mouth went a sharp sword, that with it He should smite the nations..." Rev. 19:11-15. The horseman in Rev. 6 with the crown and the bow is, in my opinion, the false religious movements of this present hour of deception. Take, for instance, Key 73 with all its wasteful pomp and human show. What has become of it? I need not answer that question. The answer is only too obvious. If there were even one genuine revival in all North America, the effects would be evident immediately as they were in the days of Finney, Moody, Billy Sunday, and during the mighty Pentecostal outpouring beginning in 1901 and continuing for almost forty years. Paul spoke of our age when he said, "Because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold." That is what we see all about us forms of religion denying the power thereof and others professing to have the power, but producing no fruits of repentance. Remember the word of Jesus, who said, "When the Son of man cometh, will He find faith on the earth?"

Eloquent words of wisdom fall far short in their ability to express or explain those things, which the eyes of the faithful shall soon see. The six days of man's labor and travail are almost over and then will follow the seventh day, the kingdom day, which will endure for one thousand glorious years. What man can describe the power and glory of the resurrection? Even the raising of one man, Lazarus, from the dead back to the corruption of this present realm was an event of earth-shaking importance, but the hour cometh and now is at hand when all that are in the graves will hear the voice of the Son of God, and those who hear will come forth. The resurrection now at hand is not the act of raising men from the dead to return to their former corruption. The resurrection, which our Lord Jesus Christ has promised is a resurrection like unto His very own when we, as He, shall see no more corruption. Acts 13:34. Christian men and women should treat their corruptible bodies with great respect because God's word has given us abundant assurance that this corruptible must put on incorruption and this mortal must put on immortality. This same corruptible body that has been compassed by infirmity and has held us in bondage for so many years will be changed like unto His glorious body. The word changed is from the Greek word metamorphoo, from which comes our English word metamorphosis. The same word is translated transformed in Rom. 12:2, transfigured in Matt. 17:2, and changed in 1 Cor. 15:51,52. So often have I heard God's people say that the resurrection body has nothing to do with our present body, but is something entirely different and apart from this body of our humiliation! No, my brother, that is not the meaning of the words changed, transfigured, or transformed. Neither is it the meaning of metamorphosis. The beautiful butterfly that flies through the heavens on starry wings is the same body that was once a worm, crawling on its belly and satisfying its voracious appetite with the corruptible things of the earth. This same creature fashioned itself a cocoon, entered into the chrysalis stage, then the pupa stage, and finally came forth from its cocoon of death a transformed creature of the heavenlies, flitting about on starry wings, bearing the rich hues of all glorious things.

"There are also celestial bodies and bodies terrestrial: but the glory of the celestial is one (thing), and the glory of the terrestrial is another (thing). There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars: for one star differeth from another star in glory. So also is the resurrection of the dead. It (the body) is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption. It is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power: it is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body. And so it is written, The first man Adam was made a living soul; the last Adam was made a quickening spirit." 1 Cor. 15:40-45. "The first man is of the earth, earthy: the second man is the Lord from heaven. As is the earthy, such are they also that are earthy: and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly. As we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly." Verses 47-49.

"Behold, I shew you a mystery; we shall not sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory.... Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmoving, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord." 1 Cor. 15:51-58.
Great were the glories seen by Moses and Enoch and Noah. Heavenly were the visitations that swept the Judean hills when our Lord spoke as never man spoke and healed as never man healed. Sublime beyond imagination were the holy visitations at Pentecost and in the days that followed as multitudes, both of men and women, were added to the Lord, and the Lord added to His church daily such as should be saved, and by the hands of the apostles God wrought special miracles and special signs and wonders until the world was literally turned upside down with the glory of the heavenly visitation. It would have been wonderful to have dwelt there then and to have rejoiced with them for all the wonderful works of God. Wonderful were the works of God as He instituted His infant church! Blessed as were all those things and glorious as were the results, yet "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him." We have seen them afar off in the Spirit, but within millions of hearts in our day there is a rising wave of assurance, bidding us to believe that the ineffable wonders once seen afar off are soon to be revealed.

The supernal glories that lie like un trodden snow before us are beyond compare. The grandest event of all time is now at our doors. The resurrection of the inChristed is now at hand. The trumpet soon shall sound, the dead in Christ shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. Centuries ago the eyes of poor, suffering Job looked far beyond the turmoil and pain of his wretched despair. His vision caught a glimpse of things far beyond the law with its bondage and far beyond the dispensation of grace in which we live. Beholding as with transfixed gaze, he saw the hour now but a step before us, the hour in which God would raise the inChristed in like manner as He raised Jesus the Christ from the dead. As Christ the Head, was raised from death's dark gloom, so also will He raise Christ, the body, that that multitude of sons of God composing Christ, the body, might be forever joined to their heavenly head, thus forming one Christ - many members, yet one body. Job saw these wonders afar off and, knowing that beyond his awful hurt and despair, he too would be among the glorified throng, he lifted his voice in ecstasy of the hour to utter these immortal words: "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that He shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God: whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another; though my reins be consumed within me." Job 19:25-27. Yea, and, glory be to God, many ten thousands of souls now living and waiting are taking up the glad refrain, for they know that their Redeemer liveth. Nothing is more certain than that. The Spirit witnesses that in the latter days this same Redeemer that was taken up to heaven long ago shall so come in like manner as He was seen to go. Once upon a time He said, "I am He that liveth and was dead, and, behold, I am alive forevermore, and hold the keys of death and of Hades," Nothing is more certain, dear saint, than the fact He lives. Mohammed is dead. Buddha is dead. Confucius is dead. The multi-million gods of India and Africa are dead; but Jesus Christ the Lord is alive forevermore and holds in His omnipotent hand the keys of death and of hell.

Millions who now live, together with millions who long ago passed from the earthly scene of corruption, having won the victory and overcome through the blood of the Lamb and by the word of their testimony, are saying, "He shall stand in the latter days upon the earth." The cry of the groaning creation and the prayer of the travailing saint are joined with the unutterable longings of the Holy Spirit, all crying in unison and harmony for the manifestation of the sons of God. Their prayer, praise God, is soon to be answered. The long awaited revelation is at hand. The glorious Lord is soon to be revealed from heaven, and, when He comes, the cry will go up from all creation, "the Lord cometh with ten thousands of His saints," for every eye shall see Him. Those who pierced Him will mourn and those who ministered unto Him will rejoice. And one shall say unto Him, "What are these wounds in Thy hands?" Then He will answer, "Those with which I was wounded hi the house of my friends." And those who thus enquired of Him will remember that once it was prophesied, saying, "Awake, O sword, against My shepherd, and against the man that is My fellow, saith the Lord of hosts: smite the shepherd and the sheep will be scattered: and I will turn mine hand upon the little ones." Zech. 13:6-7. "And His feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east, and the mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west, and there shall be a very great valley; ... And it shall be in that day, that living waters shall go out from Jerusalem; half of them toward the former sea, and half of them toward the hinder sea: in summer and winter it shall be. And the Lord shall be king over all the earth: in that day shall there be one Lord, and His name one. All the land shall be turned as a plain from Geba to Rimmon south of Jerusalem: and it shall be lifted up and inhabited... And men shall dwell in it, and there shall be no more destruction; but Jerusalem shall be safely inhabited." Zech. 14:4-11.
"In that day the Lord will be king over all the earth." Zech. 14:9. That will be the time of the long awaited kingdom of God. No more shall the inhabitants of the earth endure the misrule and treachery of ages past. The six thousand years of human injustice will be ended, and that forever. The Lord with His inChristed saints will reign upon the throne of David. Of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David to order and establish it with justice and judgment from this time forth, even unto the age. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this.

A rod has come forth from the stem of Jesse, and the branch, which is the body of Christ, has grown out of His roots. The Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon Him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and the fear of the Lord; and the Lord shall make Him of quick (living) understanding in all the fear of the Lord. He shall never judge by what He sees; neither shall He reprove according to things He hears, but with righteousness shall He judge the poor and reprove with equity the meek of the earth. And He shall smite the earth with the rod of His mouth, which is the word of God, and with the breath of His lips shall He slay the wicked. Righteousness shall be the girdle of His loins, and faithfulness the girdle of His reins. So glorious will be the rest and peace of that wonderful day that the wolf will dwell with the lamb and the leopard shall lie down with the kid, and the calf and the young lion and the falling together; and a little child shall love them and lead them. The cow and the bear shall feed.

Their young ones shall lie down together and the lion shall eat straw like the ox. The sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp; the weaned child shall put his hand in the cockatrice' den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all God's holy mountain, for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea. Read Isa. 11.

Never again shall there be such utter destruction as has cursed God’s earth from that day when in his fratricidal rage Cain lifted up his hand and slew his bother. In the kingdom day shall all the swords be beaten into plowshares and all the spears into pruning hooks, for man shall not lift up his hand against his brother; neither shall they learn war any more, and Jerusalem shall be safely inhabited. "And this shall be the plague wherewith the Lord will smite all people (those nations) that have fought against Jerusalem; their flesh shall consume away while they stand upon their feet, and their eyes shall consume away in their holes, and their tongue shall consume away in their mouth. And it shall come to pass in that day that a great tumult from the Lord shall be among them; and they shall lay hold every one on the hand of his neighbor, and his hand shall rise up against the hand of his neighbor. And Judah also shall fight at Jerusalem; and the wealth of all the heathen round about shall be gathered together, gold, and silver, and apparel, in great abundance. And so shall be the plague of the horse, of the mule, of the camel, and of the ass, and of all the beasts that shall be in these tents, as this plague. And it shall come to pass that everyone that is left of all the nations which came against Jerusalem shall even go up from year to year to worship the King, the Lord of hosts, and to keep the feast of tabernacles. And it shall be, that whoso will not come up of all the families of the earth unto Jerusalem to worship the King, the Lord of hosts, even upon them shall be no rain." Zech. 14:12-17. He who now rules with a rod of iron will not permit His glorious kingdom to be filled with rebels as all kingdoms of the past have been. "And if the family of Egypt go not up, and come not, that have no rain, there shall be the plague, wherewith the Lord will smite the heathen that come not up to keep the feast of tabernacles. This shall be the punishment of Egypt, and the punishment of all nations that come not up to keep the feast of tabernacles." Zech. 14:18-19. The feast of tabernacles signifies the coming of the Lord. He dwells among His people and reigns over all the earth.

All will be holy in that reign of lasting peace. Upon the bells of the horses shall there be holiness unto the Lord, and the pots in the temple of the Lord shall be like the bowls before the altar. Yea, every pot in Jerusalem and in Judah shall be holiness unto the Lord of hosts, and there shall be no more Canaanites in the house of the Lord. In that glorious day, the acceptable year of the Lord, the eyes of the blind shall be opened and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. The lame man shall leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb man shall sing the songs of Zion. In the wilderness, long parched with dreadful thirst, shall waters break out and streams in the desert. "And the parched ground shall become a pool and the thirsty ground springs of water. In the habitations of dragons, where each lay, shall be grass and reeds and rushes. And an highway shall be there and a way, and it shall be called the way of holiness. The unclean shall not pass over it, but it shall for those: the wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein. No lion shall be there, nor any ravenous beast shall go up thereon, it shall not be found there; but the redeemed shall walk there. And the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads. They shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." Isa. 35.

The Lord God will open rivers in high places and fountains in the midst of the valleys. He will make the wilderness a pool of water and the dry land springs of water. In the wilderness He will plant the cedar tree and the pine and the box tree together that men may see and know and understand together that the hand of the Lord hath done this and the Holy One of Israel hath created it. Isa. 41:18-20. "Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low: and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain. And the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." Isa. 40: 3-5. "O Zion, that bringest good tidings, get thee up into the high mountain; O Jerusalem, that bringest good tidings, lift up thy voice with strength; lift it up, be not afraid; say unto the cities of Judah, Behold your God! Behold, the Lord your God will come with a strong hand, and His arm shall rule for him:... He shall feed His flock like a shepherd: He shall gather the lambs with His arm and carry them in His bosom, and shall gently lead those that are with young." Isa. 40:9-11.

"In that day thou shalt say, O Lord, I will praise Thee: though Thou wast angry with me, Thine anger is turned away, and Thou comfortedst me. Behold, God is my salvation; I will trust and not be afraid: for the Lord Jehovah is my strength and my song; He also is become my salvation. Therefore with joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation. And in that day shall ye say, Praise the Lord, call upon His name, declare His doings among the people, make mention that His name is exalted. Sing unto the Lord; for He hath done excellent things; this is known in all the earth. Cry out and shout, thou inhabitant of Zion: for great is the Holy One of Israel in the midst of thee." Isa. 12.

These are the things our eyes shall behold. We shall see them for ourselves and shall not hear them from another. These are the things the Lord Jesus came to preach when He came with a message sweet as the breath of heaven, saying, "Repent, for the kingdom of God is at hand." Entering into the synagogue, He stood up to read and, finding the place from Isaiah the prophet, He read, "The Spirit of the Lord is upon Me, because He hath anointed Me to preach to gospel to the poor; He hath sent Me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord." Luke 4:18-19. The acceptable year of the Lord is the kingdom age. There is a special gospel of peace for that dispensation. All other ages of the past have been but a preparation for that kingdom hour when men will know God from the least to the greatest as the waters cover the sea. This is the age in which all previous ages find their culmination. The inhabitants of this kingdom will enjoy an innocence far beyond that of Adam, a conscience void of offence, a human government that knows only the mind of Christ, a people in whose hearts is written with ink indelible all the laws of the Lord. No more will men need to say, "Know the Lord," for all shall know Him from the least to the greatest. Neither shall men say, "Love the Lord," for the love of God is shed abroad in every heart by the Holy Ghost that abides in them and they in Him. None shall covet or murder or steal. How can he who loves his neighbor do anything to work him harm? Men shall lust no more, having passed beyond the realm of the flesh when they reckoned it crucified long ago in the days of their temptation. These are they who in the days of their sojourn were poor in spirit, but now the kingdom of God is their portion. These are they who often mourned, entering into the feelings and infirmities of the Lord, but now they are comforted. This is the company of the meek of the earth, who once walked among ravening wolves, trusting only to the grace of God for their preservation, but now they have inherited the earth as their portion forever. Hunger and thirst were once their portion - not a hunger for bread or a thirst of water, but for righteousness they hungered, a righteousness much higher than their own. Now they by their God are filled with that for which they hungered and thirsted. These are they who, though cruelly treated and often mercilessly judged, were themselves both merciful and righteous, because they knew the ignorance of those who hated them, often praying, "Father, forgive them and lay not their sins to their charge," and, having been merciful, they obtained mercy of Him who sees and knows all and will have all to be like Himself. How blessed are the pure in heart, because God has been their portion! No unclean thing can see His face or approach unto Him, but saith He, "Blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall see God." The peacemakers shall inhabit the kingdom, bringing the fruits of their peace to all the earth. These are God's children. Yea, they are sons of God and in His image who is the Prince of Peace. Many for their righteousness have been persecuted. They have been accounted as sheep for the slaughter, but in all these things they were more than conquerors and their portion is the kingdom of God.

Blessed are you when men shall revile and persecute you in this life, for great is your reward in heaven. Men revile and persecute you and say all manner of evil against you falsely because they are from beneath and you are from above. If you were of the world, the world would love his own. Because you are not of the world, but He has chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hates you and speaks all manner of evil against you falsely. But rejoice in this with exceeding joy, for great shall be your reward in that heavenly kingdom of God.
I learned to know a Name I highly treasure;
Oh, how it thrills my spirit through and through!
Oh, gracious Name beyond degree or measure
My heart is stirred whenever I think of You.

My heart is stirred whenever I think of Jesus.
That blessed Name that sets the captive free.
Dear holy Name through which I found salvation!
No name on earth can mean so much to me.

That Name still lives and will live on forever
When kings and kingdoms will forgotten be.
Through mists and rain 'twill be clouded never;
My heart is stirred whenever I think of Thee.

"In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by Him; and without Him was not anything made that was made. In Him was life; and the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehended it not." (John 1:1-50)

Is it possible that, amid the confusion of the age, even God's own people are forgetting who Jesus Christ really is? What greater tragedy can overtake a world in need of salvation than to lose sight of the Saviour who came to bring deliverance and emancipation to all mankind? Whether we believe it or not man's pseudo religion, his higher criticism and his human tradition of worship have done nothing to open the gates of understanding but these things have served only to hide him from the Eternal and to close the doors of salvation in the face of those for whom Christ died. The time has certainly come for us all to do some solemn thinking, some seeking after the wisdom of the Lord, for without doubt we are living in the extreme latter end of the dispensation of grace. We are in the closing hours of the Laodicean period of the church age, an age distasteful to God and so repugnant to Him that it is likened to lukewarm water fit only to be spewed out of God's mouth as a thing obnoxious to Him. The Laodicean age is a period replete with every form of godliness, but it is powerless godliness, consisting of empty lip service where men draw nigh to God with their lips but their hearts are far away from Him.

With what divine genius does the Holy Spirit on the deathless page of God's word portray the tragic scene of Jesus Christ, the blessed Saviour, standing at the end of this age completely outside the Laodicean church! No longer is He seen dealing with the apostate church system, but knocking, knocking, knocking at the heart's door of individual men and women, saying to them, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear My voice and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him and he with Me. To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with My Father in His throne.

"In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by Him; and without Him was not anything made that was made. In Him was life; and the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehended it not." (John 1:1-50)
He that hath an ear to hear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches." Rev. 3:20-22. However much we may dislike to hear it, however much you may resent my telling you so, even the blindest man could scarcely fail to see that the scripture quoted above refers to our particular day and none other. Times without number good people write to tell me that it is absolutely necessary that they belong to some sort of church group, but consider this, oh tradition bound man! If Christ is outside the church system as He is pictured in Rev. 3:20, what good will it do you to be inside no matter how comfortable and self-assured it makes you feel? Christ in you is the hope of glory and the hope of sonship, but you in a Laodicean church group means only that your doors are barred against Him.

The greatest need in the Christian life is Jesus Christ, for by Him everything comes, through Him everything exists and in Him everything ends even as the Holy Spirit has said: "For of Him and through Him and to Him are all things." Rom. 11:36. "What shall we say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us? He that spared not His own Son but delivered Him up for us all. How shall He not with Him also freely give us all things." Rom. 8:31-32. God does not give His people either this or that; He gives them Jesus Christ, and, in giving Him, He gives them all things, for He is before all things, and by Him all things consist. He is the "image of the invisible God, the first born of every creature: For by Him were all things created, that are in heaven and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones or dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by Him and for Him. And He is before all things, and by Him all things consist. And He is the head of the body, the church; who is the beginning, the firstborn from the dead; that in all things He might have preeminence. For it pleased the Father that in Him should all fullness dwell." Col. 1:15-19.

God has provided salvation for the whole world, yet if you should seek salvation apart from Jesus Christ, you will never find it, for there is no other name under heaven given among men whereby you must be saved. But if you seek Jesus Christ, you will find salvation even though you sought it not for "he that findeth Me findeth life and shall obtain favor of the Lord." For thirty-eight years a destitute man lay at the Pool of Bethesda in Jerusalem vainly seeking healing for his stricken body with only frustration and withering disappointment as a reward, but the moment he met Jesus he took up his bed and walked, for Jesus Christ is life. John 5. The woman with the issue of blood had suffered many things of many physicians and was nothing better, but rather grew worse, but she said within herself, "If I can but touch the hem of His garment, I shall be made whole." There were no eloquent prayers on her behalf, no demanding or commanding the sickness to leave, no big preachers to lean on, no microphones or T.V. cameras to enthuse the crowds, no prayer cards nor any other abominable paraphernalia, but just a confident assurance in the heart of a desolate little woman that God gives everything with His own Son, Jesus Christ. "If I may but touch the border of His garment, I shall be whole," she said in her heart, and pressing her frail body through the unwilling obstacles, she touched Him, for He is not far from any one of us, but nigh unto all who are of a broken heart and who call upon Him. As he who touches an electric wire is immediately filled with its current, so she whose hand touched God's Christ was that moment filled with the life and health which He is. "And she knew in herself that she was made whole of that plague." Mark 5:25-29.

Oh, touch the hem of His garment
And thou, too, shall be free,
His healing power this very hour
Will bring new life to thee.

Men and theologians have made the things of God far too complicated. You do not need a set of rules to govern your life; you need vital communion with God's Son, for He is the way, the truth, and the life. He who spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things?"

All the blessings of God are in Christ Jesus. All the promises of the Father are yea and amen in Him. We cannot attain sonship apart from Him, for we will find in the end, when sonship has been attained, that it came because the Christ dwelt in us. We cannot attain immortality apart from Him, for He only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto. 1 Tim. 6:16. We will never attain the resurrection because of the correctness of a doctrine or by some effort of our own. We will attain it only through His indwelling presence, for He is the resurrection and the life. Salvation is not a doctrine; salvation is of the Lord.
Call sonship a doctrine if you want to, but our sonship depends not on doctrine and codes but on the indwelling presence of Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God. Millions of sermons have been preached on the resurrection, but we will find in the end that the resurrection is not a doctrine, but a person, and that person is none other than our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. "I am the resurrection and the life," He assured the grief-stricken women in the long ago, and of us as of them He still enquires, "Believest thou this?" "Our friend Lazarus sleepeth," Jesus said, for the dead Lazarus was the symbol of all mankind, but "I go that I may awake him out of his sleep." Neither darkness nor death could dwell with Jesus, for He is the light of the world and life eternal to all who touch Him.

No man that ever lived has been able to comprehend or explain the deep mysteries of God, though to a few some understanding has been given. Be it far from me, therefore, to attempt to explain that which I understand not. Faith gives grace and form to the unanswerable; therefore, the hidden things of God are to be believed and not pried into. We would all do well to heed the words of the Jewish rabbi who said, "Where there is faith, there are no questions; but where there is no faith, there are no answers." I may not be able to explain to your satisfaction this statement of John the apostle: "There are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost, and these three are one." 1 John 5:7. But my lack of understanding alters nothing of the mystery of God. Indeed, I may not be able to explain the rest of the statement. "There are three that bear witness in earth, the Spirit, and the water, and the blood: and these three agree in one." 1 John 5:8. Yet Jesus gave these three -the Spirit, the water, and the blood - at His death on Calvary. In His agonizing cry of death He said, "Father, into Thy hands I commit My spirit," and when He had said this, He gave up the ghost: And, when the soldier pierced His side, there flowed out blood and water. Thus He gave the Spirit and the water and the blood - incorruptible blood better than the blood of Abel, blood to atone for sin, blood to purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God. And with the blood flowed out water, even the water of life, the water of which Jesus said, "If any man thirst, let him come unto Me and drink, and he that believeth on Me as the scripture has said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water." And to the woman by Samaria's well He said, "He that drinketh of this water shall thirst again, but whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst, but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life." In like manner also the Spirit that He yielded to God that day hath He sent forth to abide with us forever to be our comforter and baptizer and to transform us into that same image of our Lord Jesus Christ.

I do not even understand myself! How then can I understand the mysteries of God? The Bible never hesitates to describe me as a triune being of spirit, soul, and body. 1 Thess. 5:23. It is much too great for my puny mind, but I know it is so.

Of all the vast creation of Almighty God nothing has delighted Him so much as His only begotten Son, Jesus Christ our Lord. So great is God's joy in Him that all things were made for Him, whether they be things in heaven or things in earth, thrones, dominions, principalities, and powers, things present or things to come. Col. 1:16. He is the brightness of God's glory and the express image of His person. Upholding all things by the word of His power, He has purged us from our sins by His blood, and has sat down at the right hand of the majesty on high. When the Father brought His only begotten Son into this world, He said, "Let all the angels worship Him." And to the Son He said, "Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever: a scepter of righteousness is the scepter of Thy kingdom. Thou hast loved righteousness and hated iniquity; therefore God, even Thy God, hath anointed Thee with the oil of gladness above Thy fellows." Heb. 1:8-9.

Our Lord Jesus Christ did not have His beginning in the manger of Bethlehem. He did not come into existence the night the angels sang, "Peace on earth, goodwill to men." That was His beginning as a man. That was His enfleshment or His incarnation. He who gives eternal life is Himself eternal. He existed long before the angels announced His birth. He existed before the world was, for the world was made by Him, but the world knew Him not. That which is eternal has neither beginning nor ending.

Matthew and Luke begin their Gospels with an account of the royal ancestry of Jesus. Matthew traces His lineage from Abraham through David to Joseph, the husband of Mary, of whom Jesus was born (Matt. 1:1-6), first, to show that He was in truth the promised seed of Abraham (Gen. 13:15, Gal. 3:16), and second, to show that Jesus was of the royal line of David, the king, to whom it was promised: "Thine house and thy kingdom shall be established forever." 2 Sam. 7:16. The genealogy given by Luke in chapter three of his gospel is in reality the genealogy of Jesus Christ on the side of His mother Mary, who was the daughter of Heli, the father-in-law of Joseph, the husband of Mary. See Luke 3:23. This human genealogy goes all the way back to Adam, proving that Jesus was in truth a man and a member of the human race as truly as you or I.

John, however, does not concern himself with either the royal line of David or Christ's human descent from Adam. His great concern is to prove that Jesus was the Son of God, pre-existent, immutable, and eternal; existing with the Father in the beginning, which expression (in the beginning) is used only to accommodate us poor creatures of time, for God is eternal and that which is eternal has no beginning and no ending. He is not made after the law of a carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life. Thus the opening sentences of the Gospel of John burst like an eternal fiat upon the listening ear. "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God; the same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by Him, and without Him was not anything made that was made. In Him was life; and the light was the light of men; and the light shineth in darkness and the darkness comprehendeth it not." John 1:1-3. This in one divine proclamation from heaven is the genealogy of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, for God, not man, was His father, and He, being born of eternal substance, is Himself eternal even as His Father is eternal.

For some strange reason it has always been difficult for men to believe that the Son of God existed with the Father from all eternity, yet there is no truth more plainly taught than this, nor anything more essential to the salvation of the world. It was on one of the many occasions when Jesus was confronted by those high-minded theologians that He asked the amazing question, "What think ye of Christ? Whose Son is He?" They answered, "The son of David." Then Jesus asked them, "How then doth David in spirit call Him Lord, saying, The Lord said unto my Lord, sit Thou on My right hand till I make thine enemies Thy footstool? If David then call Him Lord, how is He his son?" And no man was able to answer Him a word. Matt. 22:41-46. Certainly Jesus was the Son of David, and the Son of Abraham, and the Son of Adam according to the flesh only, for He became a man; but He was eternally the Son of God and was therefore David's Lord as well as yours and mine.

Our Lord made certain that the world would not be left in doubt as to His divinity and existence in the Father before the world ever was. Listen to the words of John the Baptist as he proclaims the eternal existence of Christ in these inspired words: "John bear witness of Him and cried, This is He of whom I spake; He that cometh after me is preferred before me, for He was before me." Nothing was more blasphemous to the carnal minds of the Pharisees than Christ's teaching of His pre-existence, but, when He told them He existed before their father Abraham, their wrath knew no bounds, and when in doing so He called Himself "I AM", which was God's name at the burning bush (Exod. 3:14), they took up stones to kill Him. But He, passing invisibly through their midst, proved that He was God just as He had said. "If I honor Myself," He said, "My honor is nothing; it is My Father that honoreth Me, of whom ye say that He is your God; Yet ye have not known Him; but I know Him: and if I should say, I know Him not, I shall be a liar like unto you: but I know Him and keep His saying. Your father Abraham rejoiced to see My day: and he saw it, and was glad. Then said the Jews unto Him, Thou art not yet fifty years old, and hast Thou seen Abraham? Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, before Abraham was, I AM. Then took they up stones to cast at Him: but Jesus hid Himself, and went out of the temple, going through the midst of them, and so passed by." John 8:54-59.

Evidences of the deity of Jesus Christ and His existence with the Father before the world was can be produced by the score and from almost any Bible source you wish to name. The four Gospels Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, guilelessly teach the deity and pre-existence of Christ, each one recognizing from beginning to end that He was the promised Son of God that should come to the world. In like manner also do the apostles in their various epistles set forth the deity of our Lord, "who is the image of the invisible God, the firstborn of every creature, for by Him were all things created that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones or dominions, principalities or powers. All things were created by Him and for Him." Col. 1:16.

It is always the guileless approach that is the most convincing. If a man looks like a Chinaman, acts like a Chinaman, has a Chinese name, speaks Chinese, and comes from Shanghai, we have every right to believe he is a Chinaman. This is what I mean by the guileless approach. There is no need to try to prove or disprove anything. Does not the same guileless principle hold true with our Lord, who came from the very bosom of the Father, who scores of times in scripture is called by divine names, who performed divine acts, was miraculously born, who refused not to be worshipped, and whose name is frequently associated with those of the Father and the Holy Spirit? Dare we come to any other conclusion but that such a one is certainly God? Furthermore, Jesus performed acts of omnipotence, acts of omniscience, and acts of omnipresence. Was anything too hard for Him to do? Were the secrets of men's hearts hidden from Him? Did He not say, "Where two or three are gathered in My name, there am I in the midst of them?" These are not intentional proofs of deity. They are what I term guileless proofs. They prove the fact without intention. He ever lived with the consciousness that He had come forth from the Father, and that He would soon leave the world and go to the Father again. John 16:28.

In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. John 1:1. (In the Greek original it reads: In the beginning was the Logos, and the Logos was with God, and the Logos was God.)

Jesus Christ is here given one of His almost countless names. He is the Word of God. That is His name just as surely as Jesus, or Christ, or Immanuel are His names. A most remarkable manifestation of this most excellent title is seen in Rev. 19:11-16 where among other titles of deity He has the name, the Word of God. "And I saw heaven opened, and behold a white horse: and He that sat upon him was called Faithful and True, and in righteousness He doth judge and make war. His eyes were as a flame of fire, and on His head were many crowns; and He had a name written that no man knew but He Himself; and He was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood: and His name is called the Word of God... And He hath on His vesture and on His thigh a name written, King of kings and Lord of lords,"

Each and every one of the scores of titles given to our Lord teaches us some new truth of the wonder and magnificence of His eternal being. Jesus means Saviour; Christ means anointed; Immanuel means God with us. I AM demonstrates as nothing else can that ever present, eternal abiding existence, whether past or future. No name is sufficient to embrace all He is, for He is the first and the last, the beginning and the ending of all things. Because of this, even our efforts to interpret become a nuisance to us and we find it better to leave each name as it is as far as possible. Like all other names, the Logos has its own meaning — a meaning which does not appear in the English translation, the Word. Logos carries with it the idea of a word spoken, speech, eloquence, reason, thought and concept. It was by His word that all things were done, for the Word flowed forth from eternal wisdom by which God is declaring the purposes of His infinite mind, wherein now He has abounded toward us in all wisdom and prudence; having made known unto us the mystery of His will, according to His good pleasure which He hath purposed in Himself. Eph. 1:8-9.

The plans and purposes of God for the ages of ages were conceived and spoken forth in an eternal fiat by the Logos, the living speaking Word that was with the Father in the beginning. "All things were made by Him, and without Him was not anything made that was made." Life itself was to have its source in Him, and that life was to be the light of men. John 1:4. How truly did Jesus say, "Without Me ye can do nothing!" Every plan or purpose of God for all future ages was made to depend on Christ, for this was the decree of the Logos, (the Word), that in Him should all fullness dwell. It is in union with Him that all our hopes for eternity lie embodied, and it is in union with Him and through the shedding of His blood that the world and all creation has its hope.

How marvelous are the words of the apostle Paul to the Ephesians as, seemingly overcome with the glory of inspiration, he wrote these words: "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath crowned us with every spiritual blessing in the heavenly realms in Christ; even as in His love He chose us as His own in Christ before the creation of the world, that we might be holy and without blemish in His presence, for He predestined us to be adopted by Himself as sons through Jesus Christ, such being His gracious will and pleasure, to the praise of the splendor of His grace with which He has enriched us in the beloved One. It is in Him and through the shedding of His blood that we have our deliverance, the forgiveness of our offences, so abundant was God's grace, the grace with which He, the possessor of all wisdom and understanding, lavished upon us, when He made known to us the secret of His will. And this is in harmony with God's merciful purpose for the government of the world when the times are ripe for it — the purpose which He has cherished in His own mind of restoring the whole creation to find its one Head in Christ; yes, things in heaven and things on earth, to find their one Head in Him." Eph. 1:3-10. (Weymouth).
My heart's desire and prayer to God, both now and for years past, has been to make all men see that the hope of mankind for all ages lies hidden in Christ. If you are going to be saved, then the Logos has declared that there is no other name under heaven given among men whereby you must be saved. Those who are to attain the resurrection from among the dead will attain it because He is declared to be the resurrection and the life. He is the one who liveth and was dead and is alive forevermore and holdeth the keys of both death and the grave, and he who believeth on Him, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and he that liveth and believeth shall never die.

Glorious as the resurrection shall be, there is a better resurrection of which some shall be accounted worthy. It was to this better resurrection that Jesus referred when He said, "Whosoever liveth and believeth in Me shall never die." And it was to the better resurrection that Paul referred when he said, "If the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ shall also quicken your mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in you." Perhaps not all who read can see it, but it was the thought of the better resurrection that filled Paul's heart when he wrote the words of 2 Cor. 5:4. "For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened, not that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life." 2 Cor. 5:4.

The apostle Paul was getting to be a very old man when he wrote, "Yea, doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung that I may win Christ, and be found in Him, not having my own righteousness which is of the law, but that which in through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith: that I may know Him, and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings, being made conformable unto His death; if by any means I may attain unto the resurrection of the dead." Phil. 3:8-11.

If any man who ever lived could look back on an eventful life, it was certainly the apostle Paul. His life had been extremely eventful from the beginning. From a very young man he had been brought up at the feet of the learned Gamaliel. There was no article of the law of Moses that he did not know; and when it came to the keeping of the law, he pronounced himself blameless. He was an Hebrew of the Hebrews, of the tribe of Benjamin, a strict Pharisee, having obeyed all the ritual required by the law. In his zeal for what he positively knew was right he had zealously persecuted and put to death all who he felt were opposed to God's way. But for all this his soul was an empty void that could not be satisfied with form and ceremony, for the heart of man is a golden temple not made with hands, expressly formed for an habitation of Jesus Christ by the Spirit. For Thou, Lord, hast made us for Thyself and we are restless till we rest in Three.

Our souls are like the beautiful dove released by Noah from the window of the ark. She found no rest for the sole of her foot amid the swelling waters of judgment and the stinking bloated things that floated about, so she returned to the window of the ark, and Noah put forth his hand and took her in. But afterward she returned with an olive leaf, and Noah saw her no more, for that which is spiritual feedeth upon Spirit and cannot be satisfied with the rotting, decaying things of a world under judgment. But the unclean raven, delighting himself with the rotting carcasses of a dead age, returned no more to the ark, for his satisfaction lay in the realm of the flesh. Gen. 8:7-12.

Not only had Paul an illustrious past in all things that concerned the Law of Moses, but he had later lived and moved in a spiritual ministry unexcelled by any man in any age. By the hands of Paul God wrought special miracles. He knew what it was to be acclaimed as God by the crowds and have people fall down to worship him. He had seen the frenzy of the multitude as they rushed into the market place, crying, "The gods have come down in the form of men." And when it came to spiritual revelation, he had seen and heard things unlawful to be uttered. A whole dispensation was committed to him, and a gospel, which he called the gospel of grace, was given to him by a special revelation from God. So abundant were his revelations that the Lord chose the drastic measure of giving him a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet him lest he should be exalted above measure. No man ever labored with more fervent zeal than he; no man ever saw more people turn to the Lord, and no man ever saw more people turn away, until one day he wrote these bitter words: "This thou knowest, that all they which are in Asia be turned away from me." 2 Tim. 1:15. And again: "At my first answer no man stood with me, but all men forsook me: I pray God that it may not be laid to their charge. Notwithstanding the Lord stood with me, and strengthened me ... and delivered me out of the mouth of the lion." 2 Tim. 4:16. Paul knew what it was to be thrown into the lions' den with the Christians and makes passing reference to the experience when he says, "If after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me if the dead rise not?" Yes, indeed, his was an illustrious life.

But these are not the things on which he depended nor in which he gloried. What he wanted above all else was to know Christ. How I would love to sit down and talk to him now! But, if I could he would not want to tell me of his knowledge of the Jewish law, nor yet of the special miracles of God wrought by his hand, nor of the crowds who acclaimed him as a god at Lystra, nor of the long terms he spent in jail. The story I would want to hear him tell would be of the day he met Jesus on the Damascus road and of a light brighter than the noonday sun that shined into his soul, dispelling all the darkness of his religion, there and then bringing forth in his ransomed soul an explosive consecration that would never fade nor falter, whether men acclaimed him or stoned him. I think I would hear him say:

Jesus is all this poor world needs today;
Blindly they strive, for sin darkens their way,
Oh, to draw back the grim curtains of night!
One glimpse of Jesus, and all will he bright.

I think he would tell me never to seek to have men follow me, but to be like John the Baptist who so pointed his vast crowds to Christ that at last he stood alone rejoicing, for all his people had gone seeking Jesus. But he was not alone — not even in his prison — for I am sure he could have sung:

Best beloved of my soul,
I am here alone with Thee;
And my prison is a heaven
Since Thou sharest it with me.

If you could talk to Paul today, you would come face to face with those deeper truths that were so evident in all he did and said, for he counted everything but dung for the excellency of the knowledge of Jesus Christ the Lord, for whom he had suffered the loss of all things. You would hear him say, "For me, to live is Christ, and to die to everything else is great gain."

In this day we hear so much about gifts of the Spirit, of prophecy and tongues, of miracles and healings. The more spectacular these things are the more men seek them and the more diligently they covet to bring them into their midst. But for all their tireless efforts something is sadly lacking. Whether people care to believe it or not, with all their much seeking of these spectacular gifts Jesus Christ Himself, who is the giver of every good and perfect gift, is left outside their busy camp. The carnal mind seeks spiritual gifts because they appear to be spectacular and promote the individual who has them. Men and women will turn themselves inside out to possess a gift of the Spirit, but the desire to know Christ in all His excellent fullness never once crosses their carnal minds. They do not weep like Mary at His blessed feet as they pour out the sweet perfume of their love or break the precious alabaster box to anoint His head. Ah no! It is not He they want; it is gifts, for "every man is a friend to him that giveth gifts." Prov. 19:6. I do not like to be dogmatic, but it will do little good to debate the issue with me, for I have seen as much of the fickle crowd as most men. I have seen them come by the fifties and leave by the fifties, but, while the multitude came for healings and for gifts and for a score of personal blessings, only a paltry few were willing to count all things but loss that they might know Him, and be found in Him without blemish.

Those who would long to be leaders of men will soon learn that of all the things on earth crowds of people are the most fickle. They will cry, "Hosanna! Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord," today and nail you to the accursed tree tomorrow. As long as you are handing out loaves and fishes in the form of gifts and healings, they will crowd so thick around you that there will be scarcely time to eat or sleep. But when you stand in Pilate's hall, alone in your rejection, they will leave you to your fate as they did with Jesus and with Paul. It doesn't take much to offend people, and it is impossible but that offences will come. Never seek crowds and disciples, for they will fail you when you need them most and, despising all your love, will leave you unrequited while they return to their fishing.
Back to their tasks the crowd had gone,
And He was left alone
Save for a little company whom
He could call His own.
What use was there for restless crowds?
That worldly, giddy throng
Would listen to the music,
But never hear the song.

We are living in a day that is fraught with a thousand dangers. Never in the history of the world has religion been so popular, but it denies the power of God. The Almighty God Himself is shoved away off into the background like some mystical convenience to be called upon when a stalking Hitler threatens to overwhelm our nation or a fearful Dunkirk fills us with despair, a sort of handy legend that serves in a remote way to alleviate the spiritual longing inherent in every man on the face of the earth; but to recognize Him as a personal God, almighty, omniscient, omnipresent, immutable, eternal and full of love for His creation - such a God is unknown to them. Strange as it may seem we have come to the place where religion and church membership is the popular thing. To have no membership in any religious organization is to class oneself as a heathen. It really matters nothing at all what we believe nor where we go as long as we at least profess to believe something. How often we hear the exhortation, "Go to the church of your choice, but go to church!" This may sound like superb wisdom, but it is the wisdom of man, which is nothing but foolishness with God, for such religion with all its Christless form and ceremony serves only to act as an antidote against the truth, lulling men into a false sense of security. They become like a man who is slowly freezing to death, who begins to feel calm and comfortable, sleepy and warm, until his eyes close in death and his body is found a corpse on the ground.

I think one of the most treacherous shoals in life's threatening sea is found in the religion of the so-called evangelical and fundamentalist groups of Christians. Once upon a time the fire of God's love burned hot among them, but as the saints died from their midst a second generation has grown up who know not the God of their fathers. True, they preach the doctrines of their fathers, but they possess none of the experience in God that crowned their lives. They preach regeneration but do not experience it. They conduct great revivals, but they are only revivals in word and name - not in deed and in truth. Genuine repentance is not there in spite of all their claims. Cities which have been visited by such pseudo revivals are not shaken and transformed by the electrifying power of the Holy Spirit, but crime, ungodliness, and worldliness increase apace in their wake. There is an infinite difference between a revival born of the Holy Spirit and a pseudo revival that is nothing more than the result of vast, expensive and well-planned organization. In the former even the unbelieving are changed by the transforming power of God as men and women cry, "What must I do to be saved?" But in the latter vast throngs go sweeping into the enquiry room, not because of the moving of the Spirit, but because of thorough and well-planned organization by the advance agents. Call this what you like, but it is not a true revival and not a true move of the Spirit, but that, which exalts man and man's ways of doing things. In my opinion from long observation these man-made revivals have become the easiest, safest, and most lucrative racket ever sprung on a gullible public. Masquerading as it does in the name of religion, it is safe from the law and respected by the people and beyond the long, bony arm of taxation.

Every effort today is being made to capture and hold the minds of men in every imaginable form of Christianity, but it is a sort of Christless Christianity, founded far more on respectability than on repentance and the forgiveness of sins. We may not like to hear it; we may get angry and flatly reject the statement, but the sad portrait of Rev. 3:20 which pictures the Saviour of the world standing outside knocking at the door of individual hearts is the scene fitting for the day in which we live. Christ is outside the camp of the world's religious systems, and, verily, all who will find Him must "go unto Him without the camp, bearing His reproach." Heb. 13:13.

Solomon said, "By means of a whorish woman a man is brought to a piece of bread, and the adulteress will hunt for the precious life." Prov. 6:26. What words could be clearer than these? What else under heaven does the harlot of Rev. 19:2 represent if it is not the professing church system that, like a brazen harlot, has corrupted the whole earth with her fornications? "True and righteous are Thy judgments for Thou hast judged the great whore which did corrupt the earth with her fornications, and hath avenged the blood of His servants at her hand." Instead of modern church systems producing saints shining with gold, silver, and precious stones, this whorish woman has brought them to a crust of dry bread.

"For me, to live is Christ and to die is gain." Phil 1:21. The whole life of this great apostle was Christ. For him, to live was Christ. Christ was his purpose for living and Christ was his only purpose for living. Whether he lived or whether he died, he was Christ's. He was in a strait between two good things - whether to stay here living for Christ, or to die and go to Christ; but, in any case, whether he lived or died, he was the Lord's. The glory of Christ ought to be the supreme end of our lives, the grace of Christ the supreme principle of our lives, and the word of Christ the rule of them. From the rising of the sun to the going down thereof Christ must become the beginning and the ending of our very being. Just as His name is the First and the Last (Rev. 1:11), so He must become the first and the last in our life that we, too, might say, "For me, to live is Christ."

It is difficult to explain all the fullness contained in this superb statement, for merely to live as a Christian is far beneath the meaning of its eternal truth. Your only reason for living is Christ. Yea, yet more, the life that you live is the life of Christ, even filling up in your flesh that which is lacking of the afflictions of Christ for His body's sake, which is the true church. Col. 1:24. Further still, Christ must become so much your life that nothing, absolutely nothing outside of Him, matters even to the slightest degree. You must come to the place where you count all things, absolutely all things, but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus the Lord, for whom by actual consecration you have suffered the loss of all things and do count them but dung that you may win Christ and be found in Him without spot or blemish. Yea, and further still, the life you now live in the flesh becomes a life literally lived by the faith of the Son of God, who loved you and gave Himself for you. This is, indeed, the life of a son of God; Christ the Alpha, Christ the Omega, Christ the first, Christ the last, Christ the beginning, Christ the end that you may say in truth, "For me, to live is Christ."

How shoddy and cheap in comparison do the lives of men appear who can never say in truth, "For me to live is Christ," but who, if they told the truth, would certainly say, "For me to live is to enjoy the carnal things about me - my friends, my business, my respectable church-going, my listening to sermons, and my taking in big campaigns." Is this your life and purpose supreme? Nay, I trust not, for only those whose lives are hid with Christ in God shall know the glory of sharing His kingdom.

We are certainly at the end of the church age. Like the age of law, it has waxed old and is ready to vanish away. There is no use trying to sew the riven veil together as the Jews did long ago to try to make it last a few more years. We are at the end of the age. The sun is setting on a dying dispensation, and while the shadows lengthen over a dispensation that has gone, the gladsome rays of the kingdom age come stealing o'er the meadows of that wonderful seventh day, the Sabbath rest, when

Jesus shall reign where'er the sun
Doth his successive journeys run;
His kingdom spread from shore to shore
Till moons shall wax and wane no more.

Let us now see if we can determine some of the steps the Lord has taken to assure that all fullness should dwell in His Christ. When Paul made the statement, "For it has pleased the Father that in Him should all fullness dweir (Col. 1:19), he was not giving place to idle words, but was in truth uttering by the Spirit one of the mightiest edicts whether of time or eternity.

In the first pages of this chapter we considered at some length that mighty edict, "In Him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily." Col. 2:9. The mystery of godliness, and consequently the mystery of God, is so incomprehensible to the human mind that all things concerning Him must be understood by faith or they will not be understood at all. The man who believes he understands God or His glorious Christ is deceiving Himself. He is vainly puffed up by his fleshly mind. He knows nothing as he ought to know. But if a man, though admitting that his poor, puny, human brain cannot comprehend the glory of God, yet manifests deep love and affection for all that God is, then that man is known and recognized by God. No man hath seen God at any time. The only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, He hath declared Him. And of His fullness have we all received and grace for grace. The man who loves God desires to be like Him, and through his love and desire he grows to be like Him, because "if any man love Me, he will keep My words: and My Father will love him, and We will come unto him, and make Our abode with him." John 14:23. God once again becomes manifest in the flesh. God dwells in man and man dwells in God that in Him all fullness might dwell.

The true church, which is the body of Christ, is the fullness of Him who filleth all in all. Eph. 1:23. Now hear the vividness of Weymouth's translation of that passage. "For I always beseech the God of our Lord Jesus Christ - the Father most glorious - to give you a spirit of wisdom and of insight into mysteries through knowledge of Him, the eyes of your hearts being enlightened so that you may know what is the hope which His call to you inspires, what the wealth of the glory of His inheritance in the saints, and what the transcendent greatness of His power in us believers as seen in the working of His infinite might when He displayed it in Christ by raising Him from the dead, and seating Him at His own right hand in the heavenly realms, high above all other government and authority and power and dominion, and every title of sovereignty used either in this age or in the age to come. God has put all things under His feet, and has appointed Him universal and supreme Head of the church, which is His Body, the completeness (fullness) of Him who everywhere fills the universe with Himself" Eph. 1:17-23. This passage fills my soul with glory, for, while all fullness dwells in Christ, God has ordained that the completeness of Christ should be the true church, which is His body, and this, my brethren, is the completeness of Him who everywhere fills the universe with Himself.

The high and holy calling with which we are called of God is no small thing, but a thing both universal and eternal in its endless domain. I know these things are so. The Spirit witnesses that they are truth, but how can puny man, born in sin and shapen in iniquity, understand the marvelous working of such grace that would take man, who before was an enemy of God, and make him to be the fullness of Him who fills the universe with Himself? This is grace incomparable, incomprehensible, fathomless and divine. No wonder those who see it even afar off count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus our Lord, and do count them but dung that they may be found in Him who filleth all in all.

Let us now notice in greater particular what things God has included in Christ Jesus and let us grasp by faith the all-embracing, yea, the universal extent of those things to be included in the fullness of Him who filleth all in all.

Because of the extent of the things I now propose to declare, it would be wise for us all to examine afresh our devotion to the infallible truth of God's word. Many times in my life I have seen preachers stand in the pulpit and in a great gesture of faith in the veracity of God's word cry aloud as they waved the Bible over their heads, "I believe this book from cover to cover and I believe the cover!" But, if you were to ask that preacher if he believed Paul's words, "Having made peace through the blood of His cross, by Him to reconcile all things unto Himself; by Him, I say, whether they be things in earth or things in heaven" (Col. 1:20), he with ninety-five percent of all evangelical preachers would begin to make excuses or try to explain the truth away and show that it did not mean exactly what it said. Why, I think it to be a thing of unspeakable importance that not only has Christ reconciled the world to Himself, but He has committed unto us the word of reconciliation, that we should preach this very truth. Was not this Paul's meaning when he boldly declared, "All things are of God, who hath reconciled us to Himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation: to wit, that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself, not imputing, not imputing, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation." 2 Cor. 5:18, 19.

Never once in all the Bible is there the slightest suggestion that could possibly lead us to believe that God ever needs to be reconciled to man, though this is the inexcusable lie we hear continually from the pulpit. It is not God who needs to be reconciled to man. God was never man's enemy. It is man who is God's enemy and needs to be reconciled to Him. "Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God. For He hath made Him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him." 2 Cor. 5:20-21. But I hear the unbelieving say, "If I believed that all men were to be eventually reconciled, I would just go out in the world and enjoy myself." Little do you know, dear friend that such reasoning can only come from a heart that has no true love for God. Those who love Him abide in Him, loving Him yet the more because of the vastness of His infinite grace and the universal extent of His redemption.
Having then established our faith in the correctness and veracity of God's word, let us see what sweeping statements follow this mighty edict, "For it pleased the Father that in Him should all fullness dwell;" Col. 1:19. The sentence ends with a semicolon. It is not by any means the end of the thought. God, having declared that all fullness should dwell in Christ, straightway proceeds to show what things of His creation go to make up that glorious fullness. Therefore He follows the fiat, "In Him should all fullness dwell," with these words: "And, having made peace through the blood of His cross, by Him to reconcile all things unto Himself; by Him, I say, whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven." His clear purpose in reconciling all things in earth and in heaven is that they all might be included in the fullness of Christ, and that they might share in the completeness of Him who everywhere fills the universe with Himself. "And you, that were sometime alienated and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now hath He reconciled in the body of His flesh through death, to present you holy and unblameable and unreproveable in His sight: if ye continue in the faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel, which ye have heard, and which was preached to every creature under heaven." Col. 1:21-23.

Thus in His mighty work of reconciliation Christ has reconciled all things unto God. They are already reconciled if they had but heard the truth of God's edict. The word of reconciliation has not reached them as yet, but it will do so in God's good time. It was for this very reason that Jesus Christ, after His death, went to preach to the spirits in prison, the spirits of the men who had been disobedient in the days of Noah. To them He carried the word of reconciliation, showing not only that Christ had died for their sins, but that He was risen for their justification. If perchance our minds are numbed with the glory of such a thought, let us again consider the words from Weymouth's translation. "Christ also once for all died for sins, the innocent One for the guilty many, in order to bring us to God. He was put to death in the flesh, but made alive in the Spirit, in which He also went and preached to the spirits that were in prison, who in former times had been disobedient, when God's long-suffering patiently waited in the days of Noah during the building of the ark, in which a few persons - eight in number — were brought safely through the water." 1 Pet. 3:18-20 (Weymouth). The glorious proclamation that God has reconciled all things to Himself will eventually be told to all men - that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them.

The proclamation that it pleased the Father that in Him should all fullness dwell is not only followed by the promise of the reconciliation of all mankind, that they might add to His bountiful fullness, but is preceded by a statement of such incredible magnitude that it boggles the imagination. He says in Col. 1:14-18, "In whom we have redemption through His blood, even the forgiveness of sins: who is the image of the invisible God, the firstborn of every creature: for by Him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities or powers: all things were created by Him, and for Him: and He is before all things, and by Him all things consist. And He is the head of the body, the church: who is the beginning, the firstborn from the dead; that in all things He might have the preeminence. For it pleased the Father that in Him should all fullness dwell."

O, what a vast and all inclusive statement that is! Principalities and powers are to be included in His fullness. O, what a mighty redemption! O, what a universal reconciliation! O, church of the living God, unto you is the word given, "To make all men see what is the fellowship of the mystery, which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God, who created all things by Jesus Christ: to the intent that now unto principalities and powers in heavenly places might be known by the church the manifold wisdom of God, according to the eternal purpose which He purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord." Eph. 3:9-11.

THE PEACE OF GOD

When winds are raging o'er the upper ocean,
And billows wild contend with angry roar,
Tis said, far down beneath the wild commotion,
That peaceful stillness reigneth evermore.

Far, far beneath, the noise of tempest dieth,
And silver waves chime ever peacefully,
And no rude storm, how fierce soe'er it flieth,
There is no truth greater or more necessary to be understood than the truth that concerns the mind of Christ. I feel it is very wrong to assert that we are going to study the subject of the mind of Christ, for the mind of Christ is not a subject. The mind of Christ is in reality the omniscient, immutable, eternal mind of the Father. We have wasted far too much precious time trying to study about things only to find later that we have wandered off into a desolate wilderness of theories where no living water flows, but only the bitter streams of stagnation and death. What good will it do to form ideas and opinions about the mind of Christ? All the ideas in the universe will not bring us any closer to its eternal reality. How much better would it be to heed the exhortation of Paul and begin to let this mind dwell in us, for one moment of thinking with God's mind would place us in eternal harmony with His glorious will and purpose even as the sage has written, "God nothing does nor suffers to be done but thou wouldst do thyself couldst thou but see the end of all events as well as He."

Let us then consider the truths that follow, not with the thought of studying them, but with the hope of being made partakers of the mind of Him who everywhere filleth the universe with Himself. The truths contained in this writing have not come to me through much study, but they have come as I sat alone with Him and walked and talked with Him in the beautiful garden of communion. To many these truths will be the savour of life unto life, and to others they will be the savour of death unto death. The hearts of some will beat wildly with understanding and expectation. But others will see only with the flickering light of human understanding and will go away nursing resentment against the truths that have been spoken. Christians have walked so long in the frail light of human understanding that the true color of everything God has purposed and planned has become distorted until good is taken for evil and evil is accepted as good.

Science has declared that, if it were possible for man to build a machine even remotely comparable to the human mind, it would need a space the size of Rockefeller Center to contain it. It would take three lifetimes to wire it, three quarters of the electric energy of New York City to drive it, and the Hudson River to cool it. Let us consider then how great even the human mind must be, remembering that man in his fallen state is capable of using only about five percent of this brain power. Considering yet further that the wisdom of man is foolishness with God, behold with what reverence and godly fear we should cast away the death and darkness of the carnal mind that the mind of Christ with all its transforming light and life may richly dwell in us. Here in truth is the mind that hath wisdom. In its fathomless depths are locked up all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge. There are hidden the secrets of the universe; there abide the hidden purposes, known and understood only by the creator of being Himself. In the fathomless depths of His mind are hidden the secret mysteries of the heights above and the depths beneath. There are the purposes of good and evil, the purpose of both fall and redemption. His ways are too wonderful for us and His thoughts past finding out.

How crude and presumptuous must be the frail carnal mind that would lift its voice in pretentious wisdom to understand Him or to know the way He takes. How dare we attempt to study about Him or fathom depths of wisdom that are fathomless indeed? We must consider such eternal truth with reverence and godly fear, remembering above all else that God has willed that we be partakers of His mind, and that His mind should dwell in us. I have no hesitation in declaring that just as surely and truly as the mind of the Father dwelt in that first begotten Son, Jesus Christ, so also that same mind that dwelt in Him will dwell in all that blessed company who are becoming sons of God. It is by that mind of wisdom and understanding, counsel and might, that the world will be governed in the kingdom age and the whole universe in the ages to come.

God will never consent to give His mind to you until you are willing to admit that your mind is a worthless enemy of God leading you into error and death and at the same time deceiving you into believing that you are on the right track and on the way to life. True life and true light are the same thing. There is absolutely no difference in them. To have true light is to have true life, and to have true life is to become incorruptible and be as He is. "I am the light of the world," said Jesus. He that followeth Me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." Jno. 8:12. "In Him was life, and the life was the light of men, and the light shineth in darkness and the darkness comprehended it not." This means that the darkness of the human mind could not receive the true light of God. It could not appropriate, comprehend, apprehend, believe, or understand it. The world was made by Him, yet we knew Him not. What a paradox that is! He came unto His own and His own received Him not. Why did they not know Him? Because He is from above and we are from beneath. The veil of human flesh still hides the light of the Holy of Holies. We walk in the frail flickering light of the candles of the Holy Place, but we do not know that just beyond the veil of the flesh, just beyond the realm of the corruptible body, shines the light of God's presence, the Shekinah. God is light and in Him is no darkness at all. Can you imagine standing in a light where there are no shadows? No darkness at all? Where all about you is light, or should I say from within is light? John the Baptist was a burning and a shining light, and for a time men were willing to rejoice in that light, but Christ had greater light than the light of John, even the works which the Father gave Him to finish.

I am saying these things now so that we will see where we stand. When we are willing to reject our minds and our own wisdom, then God will draw nigh to us and give us light, true light. He will give us light into which no man has been able to approach, for that is the light in which He dwells. Let us come to God with a true heart of repentance. Let us rend our carnal minds asunder and cast away all our self-will and all ambition to fulfill the desires of the corruptible body and the carnal mind, and let us come to God praying that we may be forgiven for having placed our wills ahead of His will, for having rebelled against light and hidden our nakedness behind the fig leaves of the garden of human reason. Let us admit that we have lived after the flesh, that we have desired the things of the body more than the things of the Spirit, and that we have loved the visible realm and ignored the invisible. Let us confess that our hearts have been set on gaining temporal things while we have given only passing thought to eternal things. Let us confess that we have taken comfort in any teaching that would leave us free to seek after earthly things. Let us cease to love the world and all the things that are in the world, for all that is in the world is the lust of the flesh, (the things craved by the corruptible body), the lust of the eyes (the visible things we see and want to possess), and the pride of life, (the pride we feel in possessing these visible things). Let us confess that we have loved the world and not God. We have loved the visible and not the invisible. We have loved the mortal, which is seen, rather than the immortal, which is not seen. We have loved the corruptible bread, which is visible. Let us repent of having been troubled as Martha was about many, many things that concern our physical and temporal welfare and of having forgotten the better part of partaking of the mind of Christ. Let our confession and repentance be real and let us seek to reject our minds while we seek to be partakers of His.

Let us not deceive ourselves. We have not been all out for God. We have been lovers of all visible and mortal things, and no man can love the visible things of the world and love the Father at the same time. For, if we love the world and the things that belong to it, then the love of the Father is not in us. Let us not be deceived by that great deceiver, the carnal mind. The carnal mind is a real and a wicked antichrist, and all who put their trust in the reasoning of the carnal mind will find themselves greatly deceived.

I am a strong believer in fasting and meditation before God, but I do not believe in fasting from food only. I believe we must fast from the carnal mind. Fasting is denial of corruptible food for the body, but Jesus taught us to deny self. Self is you. It is your carnal mind. What your mind is, is what you really are. Self is everything that concerns you. Jesus not only taught us to deny self; He also said, "Take up your cross." Now why take up the cross when we deny self? Because the cross is for the crucifixion and death of self. Saul of Tarsus thought he was doing God a service by putting other men to death, but he later found that he was doing both God and himself a service by crucifying himself rather than others. "I am crucified with Christ," he cried. "Nevertheless I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." When the self begins to die, then the Christ life rises from its tomb and lives eternally within you.

During a time of great distress I was much strengthened in God by a letter I received. I quote the following paragraph from the letter: "Before your eyes can see God, they must be incapable of shedding tears for any suffering of your own. Before your ears can hear, they must have lost sensitiveness to all sounds but the sound of His Spirit speaking. Your voice may not speak eternal wisdom until it has no power to wound. If once thou doest the will of the Father as His obedient child, this is the atonement, for He shall give strength to do every work of the Creator of being. It will seem to take thy very life. That is because it takes the lower soul (the carnal mind) and masters it. But this is where the Spirit comes in and this is the time for the silence of the soul. Strive to learn the peace of silence, for this is time-abiding wisdom." This paragraph is of tremendous power and truth. The frivolous and earthly can never see it, but the wise shall understand. How can God speak while I am speaking? How can He impart wisdom while I love my own? How can I love the invisible and the real while my heart is set on the visible and the unreal? How can I speak the word of wisdom when my heart is set on wounding others?

The carnal mind is an enemy of God. It is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked, and who can know it? The carnal mind is such an enemy of God that it makes all good things appear evil and all evil things appear good. It masks error as truth and brands truth as error. It puts truth forever on the scaffold and wrong forever on the throne. The carnal mind is so deceitful that it will fill you with confidence that you are seeking God's best when all the time you love the world and the wretched things that are in it. Let us not be "deceivers of our own selves," but let us honestly confess that we have not sought God. We have been all taken up with the things that concern the body and have been troubled and careful about the physical realm, but have put forth only half-hearted efforts to become acquainted with the spiritual realm. Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom, and none of the things that concern this realm can help us toward the kingdom, but only hinder us. We, like Martha, may be very, very good people, but we are troubled about the wrong thing. The better part that Mary chose concerned the realm of the mind of Christ, not the realm of the flesh. While good Martha strove to provide corruptible food for perishing, corruptible bodies, Mary drank at the fountain of eternal wisdom and partook of the bread of life, which if a man drinks, he will never thirst, and if he eats, he will never hunger again, but live forever. The church is full of Martha's — good, good people but troubled all their lives with the passing, corruptible, and mortal things. Only a few are wise enough to seek the kingdom and find their needs supplied in it.

Mary sought first the kingdom as she sat at Jesus' feet and, having sought it, she found that all else had been added to her, for she had need of neither food nor drink. Jesus at Samaria's well, having done the mind of God, had no need of food nor drink nor rest. So Mary, having put the Spirit first, found that all else was met in Him. When this is made real to us, we can understand much better why our blessed Lord taught us saying, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you."

I know of a certainty that no man on earth will ever become a partaker of the mind of Christ until he has first plainly seen that his own carnal mind is lord of his present existence, ruling and controlling him at every step. The carnal mind is an enemy of God. It is not subject to the law of God, neither, indeed, can be; so they who are in the flesh cannot please God. They cannot please God because the flesh lusts against the Spirit. The flesh is anti-Spirit and therefore anti-Christ. Anti means against and the flesh is against the Spirit. No wonder all who are in the flesh find it impossible to please God! No man will ever become a lover of the Spirit until he is a hater of the flesh and all its works.

It is completely necessary that we be brought under conviction about our condition. It is very easy for a sinner to be saved once he is convinced that he is a sinner, but, until he becomes awakened, it is almost hopeless to bring him to a desire for justification. So also it is with the carnal mind. It is impossible for any man to seek the mind of Christ until he is awakened to his carnality.

The scripture says, "They who are in the flesh cannot please God." Why can they not please God? Because everything about the flesh is completely opposite to the Spirit. The flesh is the dust of the earth; the Spirit is the breath of God. One is of the earth earthly; the other is the Lord from heaven. The flesh can only live by taking the life of other creatures such as plants and animals. The Spirit has life in Himself. The body of flesh can only bring bondage to the spirit; the spirit brings life to the body. Every tendency of the physical body is downward toward the dust and the grave; every tendency of the spirit is upward toward God. Every tendency of the flesh is toward death; every tendency of the spirit is toward life. Every desire of the flesh is toward itself; every desire of the spirit is toward others. Everything after the image of Adam dies; everything after the image of Christ lives. The flesh is mortal; the spirit, immortal. The flesh is visible; the spirit, invisible. The flesh belongs to time; the spirit, to eternity. The physical, corruptible body of flesh is the most tremendous factor at work in the earth today. Every war in history has been fought to obtain more things for the physical body of flesh. Every doctor spends his life trying to heal the corruptible body. We spend a third of our time resting it in bed. We nurse it in sickness, feed it, clothe it, and shelter it. We cater to its taste and various fancies.

The carnal mind is the fleshly mind. Carni means flesh. The carnal mind is the mind that is devoted to the desires and demands of the human body of flesh. If you do not think you have a carnal mind, then just compare how much time you devote to the demands of the body with how little time you devote to the demands of the spirit. Compare how much time you spend in working for the body with how little time you spend in the interests of the spirit; how much time you spend talking about the things that are temporal with how little about spiritual things. How much time do you spend like Martha bothered and burdened with temporal things? How little time do you spend like Mary partaking of the mind of God which is the bread of life! Let us confess it quickly. Let us get under conviction about it. Then for the first time we will be on our way to a life in the Spirit.

We will never get this picture straight until we are able to see that the carnal mind is the fleshly mind. It is the mind that is concerned with the body and all the things that pertain to the welfare of the physical man. Paul calls this mind the fleshly mind. (Col. 2:18). In previous writings I have pointed out that everything in the world is for man's body. I mean every visible thing. There is not a trade, occupation, or industry that is not for the body of man. All things from the grass of the field that feeds the cows to the mightiest concern on earth have their end in the satisfaction of the corruptible. Every perfume is for the nose. Every sight is for the eyes. Every taste is for the palate. Every sweet sound is for the ears and every thrill for the feelings. There may be no sin in any of these things but they are all the product of minds that are concerned only with lavishing upon the body every transient enjoyment, and whether such things are good or evil they have their end in death.

Until we grasp the far-reaching yet transient effects of the carnal mind and come to realize that all men both in the church and out of it are concerned almost entirely with the realm of the body, we never will be able to pass into the realm of the Spirit and the mind of Christ. Until we are able to see that the realm where we have lived so long is earthly and to realize that all things that belong to that realm are passing away, we will never be able to partake of the mind of Christ.

The carnal mind will lie and cheat and deceive. It is very religious and will pretend to be the mind of Christ. I am certain that many people who walk after the dictates of the body actually think they are in the Spirit and those who know only the carnal mind actually think they have the mind of Christ. We can tell what mind a man is in by the things he does and says. If he talks much of earthly things, then that is where his mind is. If his conversation is in heaven, that is where his mind is. No man or woman can feed his mind for hours on Hollywood's trash, which is without doubt the product of the most carnally minded men on earth, and still have the mind of Christ. How can one sit for hours watching shootings, fightings, violence, sex, stabbing, intrigue, hate, and every rotten thing that is produced by the carnal mind and still come away pretending to have the mind of Christ? Such people deceive themselves and all who listen to them. Let us turn from these vanities and give our time to prayer, to the reading of the Word, to fasting, and to fellowship with the saints, and let us rise into the arms of God where we belong. Feed on flesh and we will be carnal. Feed on the bread of life and we will be joined to the eternal.

The Apostle Paul through the eternal wisdom given to him by the Spirit of God gave us the secret formula for a life in the Spirit and the development of the mind of Christ. 2 Cor. 6:4-10. "In all things approving ourselves as the ministers of God in much patience, in afflictions, in distresses, in necessities, in stripes, in imprisonments, in tumults, in labors, in watchings, in fastings, by pureness, by knowledge, by long-suffering, by kindness, by the Holy Ghost, by love unfeigned, by the word of truth, by the power of God, by the armor of righteousness on the right hand and on the left, by honor and dishonor, by evil report and good report, as deceivers and yet true; as unknown, yet well known; as dying, and behold we live; as chastened and not killed; as sorrowful, yet always rejoicing; as poor, yet making many rich; as having nothing, yet possessing all things. The life outlined here is very different from the attitude of the life and mind of the average Christian, and I would say that among the so-called clergy of our day not one man in a thousand attempts to order his life after the fashion described here by Paul. Love of money, love of ease, comforts of home, family ties, pride of position, prestige, love of food, and delight in fine apparel have torn the heart out of Christian zeal and dimmed the eyes of the spirit, and make consecration a meaningless farce. It seems to me that the only fasting the ministers know is fasting from the "Word of Truth" which is the bread of life. See verse 7. But they know nothing of the fast from the bread of corruption which strikes the flesh, that enemy of God, with a mortal wound, loosing the spirit from the icy bonds of corruption into the glorious liberty of God.

I do not know how the Eternal Father looses the band of Orion in the heavens, forcing the icy grip of winter to loose its hold on the earth. But I do know it happens, Job. 38:30,21, and, when it happens, the waters that were bound up in a rock of ice are loosed to flow forth and water the earth. I do not know how the Eternal Father looses the bands of the flesh on earth breaking the icy grip in which it holds the spirit, but I do know that through prayer and fasting it happens. The moment the body of flesh looses its icy grip, the spirit leaps upward to the Eternal from whence it came and rejoices in those heavenly realms where it is at home with God.

God in infinite kindness has given us a simple way to begin to break the bondage in which our corruptible bodies, which are dust, hold our spirits, which are eternal and divine. Every man from Adam until now who has found his way into that heavenly realm has been a man of fasting and prayer. The list of such honorable worthies is far too long to investigate here, but it includes both men and women and embraces such immortals as Moses, Elijah, Jeremiah, Job, David, Hannah, Elizabeth, Christ and the Apostles, Luther, Wesley, Knox, and every reformer through the centuries. The Pentecostal revival that swept the earth at the turn of the century and the blessed out-pouring of recent years all began through days, weeks, and months of prayer and fasting. No man can rise into the realm of God and take the flesh with him. The celestial realm is "out of bounds" for the flesh. Flesh and blood can no more inherit the kingdom than corruption can inherit incorruption. God has made this a starting point; "Draw nigh to God and He will draw nigh to you." Before God draws nigh to us who are saved, we must first draw nigh to Him. With the sinner the reverse is true, but with the regenerate the first step is ours. I know all the arguments against fasting and prayer, and I know also that they are all the product of the natural mind. The flesh hates fasting because it is deprived of the food of corruption. The spirit loves fasting because it is filled with the bread that is eternal.

The veil that hung in the temple represented the flesh. It separated the Holy Place where the priests ministered from the Holy of Holies where the Lord dwelt. No light of God's glory ever filtered through the veil of the temple into the Holy Place, and neither will the life of the Spirit ever appear until the flesh is made subject to the Spirit. Away with all this light talk about passing beyond the veil. Learn first what the veil is. The veil is our corruptible body of flesh after which we live from morning until night and from infancy to old age. Away with all this foolish talk that would lead us to believe that we have already passed the veil of the flesh. Such utter nonsense! How can any man who loves his corruptible body say he has passed beyond its power? How can men who die say they do not live after the flesh, for it is only those who live after the Spirit who do not die. Enoch did not die because he pleased God. Those who are in the flesh cannot please God. Jesus died, but rose again because He did always those things that pleased the Father. Elijah did not die because he had the mind of God. Melchisedec did not die because he had departed so far from earthly things that he was not known by fleshly relationships. He was without father or mother, beginning of days or end of life, but had entered the eternal realm of the Spirit.

You may ask me this question: Do you believe that some men will never die? Most certainly I believe it. Many men have been taken out of this world without dying. We need only two or three witnesses and we have them in Enoch, Elijah, Melchisedec, and the Apostle John. But the scripture tells us of a great number who at last will rise to meet the Lord in the air without ever tasting death as we know it. But let us not deceive ourselves! All those who are found worthy to escape the grave will first have cast down the flesh with all its power. They will have crucified the flesh with its affections and lusts. They will live; yet it will not be they, but the blessed Christ living within them.
If we were asked to give a description of flesh and blood, we would immediately point the inquirer to our physical bodies, which are both flesh and blood. Paul teaches us that it is just as impossible for flesh and blood to inherit the kingdom of God as it is for corruption to inherit incorruption. Flesh and blood and the kingdom of God are two completely different entities. One is visible; the other, invisible. One is corruptible; the other, incorruptible. One belongs to time; the other, to eternity. One is dead; the other, living. The one minds only the things that are visible and temporal; the other is concerned only with the eternal and unchanging. Paul taught us this: The things that are seen are temporal; the things that are unseen are eternal. Nothing that is visible is important, for everything that is visible passes away. I sat in deep meditation one day pondering over the visible and the invisible. My thoughts led me to search all the visible creation to find out if there was not something visible to human eyes that was eternal and therefore important. I thought of man's body that returns to dust. I thought of all the vegetable kingdom that springs up and passes away. I thought of the rocks that deteriorate with time and return to dust. So I thought of the dust itself and the earth and the visible heavens and the sun and the moon. Were there not eternal things to be found there? But I remembered the word of the Lord when He declared, "The heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up." 2 Pet. 2:10. And again: "And Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the works of Thy hands: they shall perish, but Thou remainest. They shall wax old as doth a garment and as a vesture shall Thou fold them up and they shall be changed, but Thou art the same, and Thy years fail not." Heb. 1:12. Can you not see, then, that nothing visible to human eyes belongs to the eternal? And can you not see likewise that nothing visible to human eyes is important?

When I use the word 'visible,' I mean visible to our poor, corruptible, human eyes. When we speak of God's being invisible, we mean only that He is invisible to the kind of sight that we possess. Every invisible thing can be clearly seen, but not with mortal eyes. Every heavenly voice can be heard, but not with mortal ears. Every heavenly perfume can be smelled, but not with the nostrils of man. When man fell from the image of God, he was shut off from the sight of God, the voice of God, the Bread of Life, and every important and eternal thing. His ears could no longer hear the eternal voices. His taste could no longer partake of eternal flavors. The eternal perfumes of heaven he could no longer smell. All the transcendent joys and sensations were cut off from him. Every important, eternal, immortal thing became invisible to his eyes, inaudible to his ears, incomprehensible to his mind, and so on all the way through. Only the passing, transient, corruptible, mortal, unimportant things were left for him to dimly see, hear, smell, taste, and feel. Furthermore, all these sensations were in the realm of his visible body, and his visible body is also corruptible and passing away.

It will be a happy day for us when God makes it clear to our hearts that the world where we struggle for existence is of no importance whatever, because it is passing away and therefore has no permanent value. No word written or spoken could hold more truth in this regard than the word of John: "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world, for the world passes away and the lusts thereof, but he that doeth the will (mind) of God abideth forever." A man plays the fool when he loves the passing, because it will soon slip away from him and be no more. But a man who is a lover of the eternal, the immortal, and the invisible is a lover of that which is real and abides forever. Let us cease to seek after all the glitter the world has to offer, for it is false and blinds our minds to truth. A man cannot love the world and love the Father at the same time, neither can he serve two masters. If he loves one, he hates the other. If he clings to one, he despises the other. He cannot serve God, who is invisible and real, and mammon, who is visible and unreal. Only those who meditate continually at Christ's feet and spend their time in conversation concerning the eternal realities can be partakers of the mind of Christ. Do not deceive yourself. If you spend hours feasting your eyes and ears on the products of man's carnal mind, you will have a carnal mind. If you can enjoy the fleeting, transient rubbish presented to us by a world of unbelievers, then it is because your mind is only carnal. A man who walks with God is always nauseated by contact with the carnal mind. The great and righteous Job once declared that, if he could come before God, he would fill his mouth with arguments and order his cause before Him. Job. 23:3. But one day he came into God's presence and, when he did, he found he had nothing to answer or to say except to confess how vile he was. Job. 42:5-6. Likewise you also, my brothers, may imagine you are living in the Spirit and that you have passed beyond the veil of the flesh, but, should you only hear Him whisper, all your comeliness would turn to corruption and you would cry for deliverance from your worldliness.

The realm to which God is leading us is a new realm. It is a new land, a new plane, a new disposition. It cannot be reached by human organization. It cannot be reached by any standards of the past. Truth is the most potent force in the universe, for God is truth. Truth breaks asunder the bars and cuts the cords of bondage. Truth floods light into shadowy valleys and makes the tender herbs spring forth. Truth is a light that is set on a candlestick. It is a city that is set on a hill and cannot be hid. All the great upheavals of the religious world have been caused by the entrance of truth. Yet truth has been on the scaffold from the shedding of Abel's blood in the field to the shedding of the blood of Zacharias between the temple and the altar. From the head of John the Baptist, the cross of Christ, the murder or the apostles, the catacombs of Rome, and the fires of Smithfield to the more refined persecutions of our day truth has suffered at the hands of the carnally minded. In spite of this it is as Paul once said, "You can do nothing against the truth, but for it." 2 Cor. 13:8.

We cannot have the mind of Christ and the carnal mind at the same time. If we would seek the mind of Christ, we must crucify the carnal mind, which is interested only in the things that concern the carnal, the flesh, or the corruptible human body of flesh and blood. Paul was the greatest authority on this subject who ever lived. Enquire of him what he meant when he declared, "I keep my body under and bring it into subjection lest, after I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway." Did he not speak of casting down imaginations and every high thing that exalts itself above the knowledge (mind) of Christ? You wonder how such things can be done, but those who become lovers of the eternal, the immortal, and the invisible find no difficulty whatever in keeping the body under or in casting down the imaginations of the carnal mind. Only those who dwell on that carnal plane wrap themselves in a cloak of humility and pretend that all must be left to God. I know for certain that those who would have God draw nigh to them must first draw nigh to Him. They must first cleanse their hands from sin and cast away their double minds.

I have written all these things that our hearts might be prepared for the truths that concern the mind of Christ. No man can have the mind of Christ and retain the carnal mind at the same time, for that is a double mind. That is an eye with a beam in it, that is, an eye that is not a single, but sees double and fills the whole body with confusion that is worse than darkness. A double-minded man is unstable in all his ways and cannot receive anything from the Lord. All his teachings are high-sounding nonsense and never draw anyone nearer to Christ.

To be carnally (fleshly or bodily) minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life. It is the coming of the mind of Christ that will make the change. When these corruptible bodies are presented to Him as sacrifices, then they will begin to be renewed and transformed and come into the image of Christ in incorruption and immortality. As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he. Whatever our mind is, that is what we are. If our mind is carnal, we are carnal and our body is corruptible. When our mind is displaced by His mind, then it is spiritual and we are spiritual, and the body of corruption and humiliation begins to be transformed because the mind is renewed.

I would like to show you as best I can what a tremendous power the mind really is. Even the natural mind of man is a very great power and accomplishes things that stagger the imagination. Everything good or bad that is in the world today is the product of the mind. All the remarkable inventions, all the outstanding feats of engineering, and accomplishments too numerous to count had their first existence in the mind of man. Every means of transportation from the cave man's cart to the jets that break the sound barriers was in the mind of man before it was visible to the eye. All the musical instruments from the monotonous beating of the tom-tom by the savages of the jungle to the sweet strains of the harp or the violin had their beginning in the mind of man. Every mode of communication from the ancient smoke signals on the distant hills to the breathtaking speed and accuracy of communication of our day began and was developed in the mind of man. Steam engines, electric dynamos, self-starters, radios, television, and radar are all the products of man's natural mind. Think on as long as you like about everything that man has made and you will agree that, before it existed, it had its birth in the mind.

The power of life and death is in the tongue. Prov. 18:21. If the judge says, "Not guilty," the prisoners goes free, but if he says, "I find this man guilty of murder," He goes to death. Surely the power of life and death is a great power, but is this power of life and death really in the tongue or is the tongue merely the instrument of the mind? Can any of us deny that it is out of the abundance of the heart (mind) that the mouth speakah? The words that are articulated by the tongue first had their being in the mind. Did not James say that the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity that setteth on fire the whole course of nature? But is it not true that the words spoken by the tongue were first conceived in the mind? Of course it is so, unless we have the ability to speak without thinking. Who can deny that it is from the abundance of the heart that the mouth speaks? Whether it speaks of life and brings forth life or whether it speaks of death and brings forth death, it is certainly speaking from the thoughts that are formed in the mind.

"As a man thinketh, so he is." Proverbs 23:7. The word of God tells us: "Eat not the bread of him that hath an evil eye, neither desire thou his dainty meats: For as he thinketh in his heart, so he is. Eat and drink, saith he to thee; but his heart is not with thee. The morsel which thou hast eaten shall thou vomit up and lose thy sweet words." Now this is a very revealing scripture, for it tells us that as a man thinketh in his heart (mind) that is what the man really is. He may connive nice things to say, but the thing that is in his mind is the thing he really is. He may feign friendship and bid you to eat and drink and make yourself at home, but in his mind he hates you and his heart (mind) is not with you at all. Presently you will discover his true attitude toward you and you will feel like vomiting up the food he gave you and the sweet words as well.

Let us now consider some of the truth we have before us. First: what your mind is, is what you are. Let us make it even plainer and say, what your mind is, is your true nature. I do not see how any man can argue against this truth. Would you not expect a man with a clean mind to be a clean man? If he has an orderly mind, would he not be tidy and orderly in all he is and does? If a man has an unclean mind, will he not be unclean? And if there is no order in his thinking, will this disorder not show up in his home, his business, and his occupation?

The word of God tells us many things about the mind. It speaks of the doubtful mind, Luke 12:20, the reprobate mind, Rom. 1:28, the double mind, Jas. 1:8 and 4:8, the carnal or fleshly mind, Rom. 8:5-6; Co. 2:18. If a man has a doubtful mind, what kind of a person would you expect him to be? Would you expect to find a man who believes everything and doubts nothing, or would you rather expect to find a man who believes nothing and is skeptical about everything? Because he has a doubtful mind, he doubts everything and cannot help it. Thomas was one of the chosen disciples of Jesus, yet he found it hard to erase doubt from his mind. "Whither I go ye know and the way ye know," said Jesus, but Thomas replied, "Lord, we know not whither Thou goest and how can we know the way?" When all others were enthusiastically rejoicing over the resurrection of the Saviour, Thomas was shaking his head sadly in unbelief and saying, "Except I shall see the print of the nails in His hands, and thrust my hand into His side, I will not believe." We cannot blame him for this. He had a doubtful mind and doubt was his nature. But a change of mind came to him that day and history records that none of the disciples worked harder or with more faith and consecration than Thomas. Thank God, He is able to renew the mind and give us the mind of Him who created us.

What then would you expect a man to be who had a reprobate mind? Would you not expect such a man to be a reprobate? Certainly you would. You would deplore his actions and be disgusted with all his deeds, but lying back of all his profligacy is his corrupt and reprobate mind; for as he thinketh in his heart so is he.

There is a most remarkable description of the gradual degeneration of the mind in the first chapter of Romans. Beginning with verse 21, we read, "Because when they knew God they glorified Him not as God, neither were thankful; but became vain in their imaginations and their foolish heart (mind) was darkened. Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools and changed the glory of the incorruptible God into an image made like to corruptible man and to birds and four-footed beasts and creeping things. Wherefore God gave them up to uncleanness through the lusts of the own heart (mind) to dishonor their own bodies between themselves: who changed the truth of God into a lie and worshipped and served the creature more than the creator, who is blessed forever. Amen. For this cause God gave them up to vile affections; for even their women did change the natural use into that which is against nature: and likewise also the men, leaving the natural use of the woman, burned in their lust one toward another, men with men working that which is unseemly and receiving in themselves that recompense of their error which is meet. And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge (mind), God gave them over to a reprobate mind to do those things which are not convenient." The remainder of the chapter bears witness of the great evil and degeneration that followed. We must conclude then that a man who has a reprobate mind will certainly be a reprobate and, barring a miracle to his mind, we can do nothing about him.
A double-minded man is an unstable man. Jas. 1:18. You can never depend on him and for that reason God does not depend on him either. He is one thing today and something different tomorrow. He is spiritual one hour and carnal the next. He walks in a fog of opinions and clouds up the minds of those who listen to him. If you want to be spiritual, he shows you how to be spiritual, and if you want to be carnal, he makes excuses for it. He runs with the deer and chases with the hounds. If you do not agree with his talk, he will swing around to your side and agree with you. He is not dependable and, when you lean on him, he is like a staff that breaks and pierces through your hands. Do you wonder what makes him that way? The trouble is all in his mind. He cannot help himself. He is in the same predicament as the doubtful and reprobate and, barring a miracle, he will never recover himself.

Satan's mind is the mind that is always looking to exalt self. You will find a vivid description of it in Isa. 14:12-15. "For thou hast said in thine heart (mind), I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God, I will sit also upon the mount of the congregation in the side of the north, I will ascend above the heights of the clouds, I will be like the Most High. Yet thou shalt be brought down to hell, to the sides of the pit." I will! I will! I will! That is Satan's mind. I have often seen that same mind working in the hearts of Christians. They are not satisfied with the thing that God has given them, but they must rise up and take away the thing that God has given to others. That wretched mind is at work in the world. It reaches out to grab that which belongs to another so that it can be consumed upon self. That same mind of Satan is at work in the church. We can see it everywhere. It was this mind that made Saul hate David. It was this mind that made Joseph's brethren sell him into Egypt. It was the same mind that was responsible for the gainsaying of Korah in his rebellion against Moses. I will! I will! I will! Did not the blessed Lord teach us that, if we would follow Him, we would have to deny self and take up the cross? The cross is for the crucifixion of self that Christ may live.

"Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus." Phil 2:5. The mind, which was in Christ Jesus, was the Father's mind. Let us not miss this most essential point of truth. Jesus Christ divested Himself in absolute completeness of every trace of His own mind. The mind and the will, we must understand, are one and the same thing. The Son of God came not to do His own will but the will of Him that sent Him. The works He spake were not His own words. The works He did with all their signs and wonders were not His own works, but He did them at the bidding of the Father's mind. The self-life did not exist in Him. He never once pleased Himself about anything. Never once in all His blessed life did He seek to amuse Himself with excitement, but He found the apex of pleasure and joy in His unity with the Father's mind. The holy and glorious God finds all His pleasure in one thing and one thing alone, and that one thing is the fulfilling of His own infinite and eternal purposes, which were ordained in Him before beings, worlds, or ages began. Before angels hymned praises to His name or universes rolled into their orbits, before morning stars sang together or sons of God shouted for joy, the eternal purposes for all ages flourished in the mind of Him who is omniscient, immutable, omnipotent, and eternal. In the fulfilling of those eternal edicts the pleasure and joy of God finds complete satisfaction. There and there alone do those who have become one with His mind find their unending joy. While the world and a carnal church find transient pleasure in the excitements and trivialities of a passing age, rejoicing in the petty things they can hear or feel or taste or see or smell, those who are coming into the mind of Christ find pleasure in that thing which alone gives joy to the Lord; that is, the immutable purposes of His will. Poor ignorant little man strives to find satisfaction in the pleasurable excitements of the life he lives. He tries to enjoy himself in a moment's pleasure, an exciting game, an exotic scene, a delightful banquet, harmonious music, the pride of possession, or a thousand other fleeting things, all of which, when apart from the eternal purpose, leave us bereft of eternal joys.

In speaking of the mind of Christ, we are speaking of the greatest power and authority in the universe. The truth I will endeavor to show you now will prove that all your eternal hopes of sonship and of the kingdom to come depend on one thing and one thing alone: that the mind of Christ dwell in you and that your own mind be crucified. We have already shown that "as a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." It is with the mind that a man thinks, and as he thinks, so he is. What your mind is, is what you are, and there is no escaping this conclusion. Your mind is your personality and your character. If a man has a niggardly personality, it is because he has a niggardly mind. If a man is a sadist, it is because he has a sadistic mind. If a man is generous, it is because he has a generous mind. You have often wondered why some unsavory people are the way they are, or perhaps you have wondered what makes you the way you are. Why are some people so mean? Why do they tell so many lies? Why do they love malicious gossip or delight in another's hurt? It is all in their minds. What their minds are, they are, too.
Doctors have known for many years that a great variety of physical ailments come from the mind. Few people wish to hear that, but it is nonetheless true. Recently I listened to a medical report in which it was stated that sixty percent of all operations in the hospitals have a mental connection. I believe this to be true, and possibly, if we understand all the truth, the percentage would be much higher. If a man then has a carnal mind, will he not be carnal? If a man has a reprobate mind, will he not be a reprobate? And if a man has a covetous mind, will he not be covetous? Whatever a man is, whether covetous, proud, boastful, cantankerous, shiftless, two-faced, kind, gentle, generous, patient, or ten thousand other things, he is that way because his mind is that way. As he thinks in his mind, so he is.

Let us now carry this thought a little further and we will soon come to the conclusion that the state of a man's mind is often manifested by physical changes. If a man is in a towering rage, no one needs to ask him, "Are you angry, sir?" The fact that he is angry is manifested all over his physical being. His eyes bulge and redden, his fists clench, his face may redden or go livid, and his heart doubles or triples its pace. Food will not digest in his stomach as long as he is angry. A glutton soon begins to look like a glutton. A harlot begins to look like a harlot. A drunkard begins to look like a drunkard, and a mendicant like a mendicant. I was interested in a paragraph from the magazine, Healthful Living. Because it confirms what is stated above, I will quote it here.

"The individual who is given to worry, fretting, and other emotional and mental upsets is the one who is most likely to suffer from enlargement of the thyroid. It is a well-known fact that hyperthyroidism does not occur among drifters, beach-combers, bums, morons, idiots, and savages. They are a happy, careless, unworrying lot. For them there is only this afternoon and tomorrow never comes. They never suffer from high blood pressure, ulcers of the stomach, diabetes, or hyperthyroidism. These are diseases of civilization and of people who have too much on their mind." So you see that, according to medical science, the mind has a tremendous power over the body.

The questions I am now going to ask will seem silly and preposterous at first, but you will soon see that they are both sane and scriptural and will bring into focus as nothing else I know the almost unbelievable power of the mind. Let us then ask the question, "If I could take your mind and put it in my head, would I not be exactly like you?" Is there anything you know that I would not know? Or anything that you could do that I could not do? If you were a musician, would I not also be a musician? If you were a skilled surgeon with many years experience, would I not be the same? I would have the same thoughts, the same reactions, and the same outlook on life as you. If, indeed, you could take my mind and let it dwell in you, would any knowledge, ability, or learning of mine be withheld from you? No! Absolutely not! Now then, if it were possible for a man to have his mind taken from him and the mind of a beast given him, what do you think he would be like? You would have no hesitation, I am sure, in saying, "The man would be like a beast," and so he would be.

Recently the book of Daniel has opened many new treasures to my heart. This book that was closed up and sealed until the time of the end is opening and the seals are being broken. As I read the fourth chapter of the book that contains the awesome experience of the great and terrible king Nebuchadnezzar, I was amazed beyond words at the truth it bears concerning this hour when we shall in God's mercy become partakers of the mind of Christ. We will quote extensively from this chapter, but I wish that all those who are reading would take time to familiarize themselves thoroughly with the fourth chapter so that we will understand better the thoughts we are to consider.

The fourth chapter of Daniel was written by King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon. It is perhaps the only chapter in the Bible written by a Gentile. Nebuchadnezzar was a mighty monarch in his day, king of earthly kings. We are told by Herodotus that the city of Babylon was laid out in the form of a square occupying both sides of the river Euphrates. It was surrounded by an astonishing brick wall three hundred feet high, eighty-five feet wide, and from forty to sixty miles in length. The wall included about two hundred square miles of territory. A moat ran along the outside of the wall. The clay dug from the moat was used for sun dried brick. The wall was guarded by two hundred and fifty towers and was wide enough for four-horse chariots to turn about on. It was pierced by one hundred brass gates hung in brazen frames, and a wall along each bank of the Euphrates was pierced by twenty-five gates. Roofed bridges spanned the river and ferry boats plied from quay to quay. The city was surrounded by orchards and gardens all irrigated by canals from the river. The hanging gardens of Babylon, one of the Seven Wonders of the World, were gardens of trees and flowers planted on terraces, one upon another, to a height of not less than one hundred and fifty feet. Magnificent temples adorned the city. Blocks of magnificent stone quarried in Armenia were brought and used for inside finish of the most expensive kind. We do not have space here to go on describing the magnificence of the city and empire, which Nebuchadnezzar had built. Suffice it to say that it exceeded all else then known, and like all other pomp and magnificence it made the king exceedingly proud and boastful to the point where Almighty God intervened to show the king that it was He who ruled in the kingdoms of men and gave them to whomsoever He would.

This brings us to the fourth chapter of Daniel and to the awesome story of a mighty monarch of earth who had his mind taken from him and the mind of a beast given to him. This is not the story of a man who went insane and became a mad man, or who lost his reason and became a slobbering idiot. The story has nothing whatever to do with insanity. This is the account of a great king, powerful and clever and wise beyond most men, who had his mind taken away from him and the mind of an animal given to him in its place. In our meditations above we have already concluded that should a man receive the mind of a beast, he would immediately become like a beast, and like a beast Nebuchadnezzar became.

For the convenience of all in our investigation of this matter we will here quote extensively from Daniel chapter four and make comments as we go along.

Daniel 4:4. "I, Nebuchadnezzar, was at rest in my house and flourishing in my palace. I saw a dream, which made me afraid, and the thoughts upon my bed and the visions of my head troubled me. Therefore made I a decree to bring all the wise men of Babylon before me that they might make known unto me the interpretation of the dream. Then came in the magicians, the astrologers, the Chaldeans, and the soothsayers and I told the dream before them; but they could not make known unto me the interpretation thereof. But at the last Daniel came in before me, whose name is Belteshazzar according to the name of my god, and in whom is the spirit of the holy gods: and before him I told the dream, saying, O Belteshazzar, master of magicians, because I know that the spirit of the holy gods is in thee, and no secret troubleth thee, tell me the visions of my dream that I have seen, and the interpretation thereof.

Thus were the visions of my head upon my bed; I saw, and behold a tree in the midst of the earth and the height thereof was great. The tree grew and was strong, and the height thereof reached unto heaven, and the sight thereof to the end of all the earth. The leaves thereof were fair, and the fruit thereof much, and in it was meat for all. The beasts of the field had shadow under it and the fowls of the heaven dwelt in the boughs thereof, and all flesh was fed on it. I saw in the visions of my head upon my bed, and, behold, a watcher and a holy one came down from heaven; He cried aloud and said thus, Hew down the tree and cut off his branches, shake off his leaves and scatter his fruit: let the beasts get away from under it and the fowls from his branches. Nevertheless leave the stump of his roots in the earth, even with a band of iron and brass in the tender grass of the fields; and let it be wet with the dew of heaven, and seven times shall pass over him, till thou know that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever He will. And whereas they commanded to leave the stump of the tree roots, thy kingdom shall be sure unto thee, after that thou shalt have known that the heavens rule. Wherefore, O king, let my counsel be acceptable unto thee, and break off thy sins by righteousness and thine iniquities by showing mercy to the poor; if it may be a lengthening of thy tranquility. All this came upon the king Nebuchadnezzar. At the end of twelve months he walked in the palace of the kingdom of Babylon. The king spake and said, Is not this great Babylon that I have built for the house of my kingdom by the might of my power and for the honor of my majesty? While the word was in the king's mouth, there fell a voice from heaven, saying, O king Nebuchadnezzar, to thee it is spoken; the kingdom is departed from thee. And they shall drive thee from men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field: they shall make thee to eat grass as oxen, and seven times shall pass over thee, until thou know that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men and giveth it to whomsoever He will. The same hour was the thing fulfilled upon Nebuchadnezzar; and he was driven from men, and did eat grass as oxen, and his body was wet with the dew of heaven, till his hairs were grown like eagle's feathers and his nails like bird's claws." End of verse 33.

Here then is the inspired story that describes as nothing else could the truth that a man's life and personality is wrapped up in that unsearchable, untouchable thing we call the mind. We have already stated that a carnal mind makes a carnal man, a reprobate mind makes a reprobate man, and so on. This great story of Nebuchadnezzar proves beyond doubt that should a human being receive the mind of a beast, he would Immediately think, act, and begin to look like a beast.

Can you form a mental picture of this strange happening? One day a man is a wise and a mighty king, sought out by all, ruling an empire beyond all empires of his day, of whom it was said to Belshazzar in Dan. 5:18, "O thou king, the Most High God gave Nebuchadnezzar, thy father, a kingdom and majesty and glory and honor; and for the majesty that He gave Him all people, nations, and languages trembled and feared him; whom he would he slew, and whom he would he put down. But when his heart (mind) was lifted up and his mind was hardened in pride, he was deposed from his kingly throne, and they took his glory from him; and he was driven from the sons of men, and his heart (mind) was made like the beasts, and his dwelling was with the wild asses. They fed him with grass like oxen, and his body was wet with the dew of heaven."

Can you picture this great king, all nations trembling and fearing before him, keeping alive whom he would, killing whom he would, raising up whom he would, and putting down whom he would? It was no ordinary mind that enabled him to build up such a magnificent earthly realm. But suddenly a strange thing happens to him. His mind is taken from him and a beast's mind is given to him. Immediately a fearful change takes place. He forgets all about his mighty city with its towering walls. No longer does he care for his orchards and hanging gardens. The magnificent temples and sculptures are of no more interest to him than they would be to an ox or an ass. He does not care for the association of wise men and beautiful women, but he dwells with the wild asses. The sumptuous food and banquets of kings are traded for grass of oxen. He will not sleep in a feathery bed, but enjoys the grass wet with dew of heaven. Not only does his new mind change his disposition and nature, but it begins to change his physical appearance as well. His hair begins to grow out like bird's feathers and the nails of his fingers and toes grow out like claws of a bird or an animal.

If you will allow me a little imagination, we will dwell together on another aspect. Let us answer a few questions. Do you think that this man, pushed down to the level of a beast, could remember his former majesty and glory? Certainly not! He had a beast's mind and could remember none of the former things. Do you think he ever longed for his palace or his wife or his children? Certainly not! He had a beast's mind and enjoyed the realm where he lived. What more could he want? None of the higher things ever crossed his animal mind. He did not remember his former glory neither did it ever cross his mind to attain it. It was forgotten and a thing of the past.

Now all that I have written above is for the express purpose of demonstrating the following points and to make alive the great truths that face us at this most important hour. While I was reading this wonderful story, a flash of revealing light flooded over my understanding. I no longer saw this strange story of Nebuchadnezzar as just another chapter of the Bible, but it was made clear to me that this wonderful account was actually a prophecy of the whole purpose of God for man from the Garden of Eden where man had the mind of Christ until he re-enters that realm and is again possessed of that mind that rules the whole universe

I want you to take notice of these points one by one.

1. Nebuchadnezzar reigning in all his magnificent glory.
2. Nebuchadnezzar loses his mind and gets a beast's mind in its stead. Vs. 4,16,30.
3. Nebuchadnezzar dwelling on the plane of beasts because his former mind is lost and he has the mind of a beast.
4. Nebuchadnezzar oblivious to his former glory.

5. Seven times pass over him while in this condition. Vs. 16,23,25,32.

6. At the end of the days he lifts up his eyes to heaven. Vs. 34.

7. His mind is restored and with it his kingdom. Vs. 34,36.

8. Excellent majesty is added unto him. Vs. 36.

I have a great witness in my heart that just as Daniel interpreted this dream for Nebuchadnezzar, so the following is the true interpretation of the dream for all mankind today and for the sons of God in particular. The story of Nebuchadnezzar is the story of man from his fall to his restoration in God's image.

First: Nebuchadnezzar in all his glory and wisdom represents man created by God and placed as lord in Eden with all the earthly creation made subject to him. Adam in the Garden of Eden had the mind of Christ. There can be no doubt about that. And both you and I had the mind of Christ in Adam before he fell. As Levi was in loins of Abraham when Melchisedec met him (Heb. 7:10), so I was in the loins of Adam when he was in the Eden of God possessed with the mind of Christ, and in him I, too, had that blessed and wonderful mind of the Father. How I would love to spend hours speaking of this glorious truth, but it will grip you as it has gripped me. When Paul speaks of the renewing of the mind, we must not forget that nothing can be renewed except that which was once new. For my mind to be renewed is for me to receive again that mind of Christ which I had in unfallen Adam.

Second: Nebuchadnezzar through pride and sin had his mind lowered to that of a beast. Here is man after the fall. No longer is he possessed of the mind of Christ, which concerns itself with the things of the glorious kingdom, but he now has a carnal mind, a fleshly mind, a beastly mind. Now, instead of being a "little lower than the angels", he is only a little higher than the beasts, because he has lost the glorious mind of Christ, and has received in its stead a mind concerned only with earthly things, a mind that is at enmity with the mind of Christ. Do not be deceived by thinking that the type is too strong, for I am sure that the fall of man from Adam in the garden of Eden with the mind of Christ to our present state was infinitely greater than the fall of Nebuchadnezzar from king of Babylon to the status of a beast. After all, the fall from the carnal mind to the mind of a beast is just a slightly lower order for the same mind, for beasts also have carnal minds. But the fall from the mind of God to the carnal mind is a gulf that is well nigh impassable.

Third: Nebuchadnezzar's dwelling on the plane of beasts was because he had the mind of beasts. It is impossible, completely impossible, ten thousand times impossible, for anyone to dwell on a higher plane than his own mind. As birds of a feather flock together, so fools go hand in hand and wise men counsel together in wisdom. A jewel of gold has no place in the snout of a swine, neither have words of wisdom place in the mouth of a fool. A man with an animal's mind cannot be king of magnificent Babylon. Much less can he who has a carnal mind reign with Christ. Small wonder the blessed Master declared, "Unless a man be born from above, he cannot see the kingdom of God." He not only cannot see it, but he has no desire to see it. It is a shadowy mystery to him. He can neither discern nor comprehend it and he has no desire in himself to attain it. The sow returns to her wallowing in the mire because that is the level and standard of her mind. She resents all efforts to cleanse her of it and will resist with struggle and noise all efforts to make her a clean animal. So likewise does the dog return to his own vomit and the carnal mind to his carnality. Except for a regeneration from a higher realm we would all be doomed to carnality forever.

Fourth: When Nebuchadnezzar had the mind of a beast, I am certain that he completely forgot all his former glory. If you would tell him he had been the mighty king of Babylon with all nations at his feet, he would have looked at you as dumb as an ox and would have understood not a word you said. He would have returned to his nibbling of the grass like the oxen, or gone galloping across the fields with the wild asses. Convince this beast that he was ever a king dwelling with men? No! Never! What did he want with men? He was a beast and never dreamed of being anything else. The great point of interest here, however, is this. As Nebuchadnezzar could not remember his former glory in his kingdom, neither can we remember the glory we had in Adam before the fall blighted the world. You say we were not in Adam? Oh yes, we were. It is written. "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." But fallen men that we are, inhabited and ruled by the carnal mind, we cannot remember any of the glory we had in Him while yet we had the mind of Christ. In fact, we stare in dumb animal amazement at anyone who would tell us that we once shared His magnificent glory. Many centuries ago God asked Job, "Where were you when I laid the foundations of the earth?" Job. 38:4. Poor Job did not answer, for he did not know. But let me tell you this; just as surely as Levi was in the loins of Abraham when Melchisedec met him, so also we were in Adam's loins and in Adam's mind before he fell.

Fifth: You will notice that four times over in this fourth chapter, - verses 16, 23, 25, 32, - it is said that seven times were to pass over the king before he would receive his own mind back again. God has made it wonderfully clear to my heart that this seven times represents the seven dispensations from Eden to the fullness of times during which man is condemned to the wretchedness of the carnal mind. He has been lowered to a level just above animals until seven times pass over him, and it will not be until the millennium is over that all mankind will be gathered together in one in Christ. Nevertheless, there is a first-fruit of the resurrection that at the evening of the sixth day will come back to the mind of Christ. The church is travelling and will bring forth the sons of God. I say without hesitation that there is one thing and one thing alone that makes a son of God. It is neither miracles nor signs nor wonders. It is the mind of Christ.

Sixth: "At the end of the days, I, Nebuchadnezzar, lifted up mine eyes to heaven and mine understanding returned to me." Verse 34. At the end of the seven times something strange came into the heart of the poor beast of a king. Something began to stir within him and to tell him that he had not always been in that wretched state. What am I doing running about with the wild asses, he wondered? Why am I on my hands and knees eating grass like an ox? Was I not a king once? What am I doing here? Something told him there was help for him in heaven and unto heaven he lifted up his eyes in longing. He began to deplore his condition and hate his degradation, and with longing and prayer he lifted up his eyes to heaven. Oh God in heaven, deliver me from this bestial mind and restore my mind and my reason and my kingdom. And his mind returned and the beast nature departed from him. Once the heart is awakened to the awfulness, the baseness, and the low estate of the carnal mind, we will have no trouble surrendering to the will of God. It is only those who are deceived by the carnal mind who have no desire for the things of the Spirit.

When the prodigal son was having a riotous time, he had no desire for his father's house, but when destitute and starving he sat in the swine pen and would fain have filled his belly with the husks the swine did eat, he said, "I will arise and go to my father and say, Father, I have sinned against heaven and in thy sight". Oh, let us leave this wilderness of the carnal mind, this bestial realm of asses and swine, and let us return to our Father's will and the glory of His eternal kingdom!

My beloved brethren, we are nearing the end of the days. This beastly condition brought about by the carnal mind is about to be replaced by the mind of Christ. The mind that was in Christ, even the Father's mind, is about to dwell in us and transform us soul and body as well. It is the end of the days. Hallelujah! It is the end of the days. Everywhere I go people have come to hate the flesh and the fleshly mind and are lifting up their eyes to heaven to partake of the mind of Christ. It is the end of the days. Hearts leap in anticipation of the glory to be revealed at the revelation of Jesus Christ. Nebuchadnezzar the beast is to be Nebuchadnezzar the king. The mind we lost in the first Adam is to be restored in the last Adam, even Christ.

Seventh: When his mind was restored, his kingdom was restored. Verse 36 says, "And I was established in my kingdom." The great lesson this king was given to learn was this: No kingdom can be established by man or man's mind, but God giveth the kingdom to whomsoever He will. Verse 32. God's dominion is from generation to generation and His kingdom is an everlasting kingdom. Over and over we are told that God giveth the kingdom to whomsoever He will. Let me assure you of this, that though in the past He has given the earth to the basest of men (verse 17), it is God's will to give the final kingdom to those who are partakers of His mind. What other mind could ever rule the kingdom of the Lord? It may cost us sweat drops of blood to come to the will (mind) of Christ, but none save those who have His mind will be lords over His heritage.

Eighth: There is one more point I wish to make. After the king's mind returned to him, excellent majesty was added unto him. Verse 36. The dreary years in the realm of the beasts had not been in vain. He knew now things that he had not known before, and he understood now things that he had not understood before. He was a better man now. Never again would pride and arrogance enter his heart. He knew from experience and would never fall again. In like manner also the dreary dispensations of carnality and sin we have endured will not be in vain. Adam fell because he had a lesson to learn that naught but the fall could teach him. When at last we return to the mind of Christ, we will never fall again, but the fall itself will have added excellent majesty unto us that will never be taken away through all eternity. When Nebuchadnezzar had the mind of a beast, he could not remember that he had been a king, but methinks that when he was restored to his kingly state, he still remembered the desolation of his beastly mind. I cannot now remember my former state, but I know that, when we are in Him, we shall never forget the lessons we have learned in our humiliation, and we shall never fall again, but excellent majesty will be added to us all and we will praise the God of heaven, all whose works are truth and His ways judgment.

Can you not now see that whatever your mind is, is what you are? Can you not see that, if to have the mind of a beast is to become a beast, to have the mind of Christ is to become a son of God? Through the mind of a beast the king's body began to look like that of a beast. So, conversely, will these corruptible bodies of our humiliation be transformed by the renewing of the mind (Rom. 12:2) that they may be fashioned like unto His glorious body according to the power whereby He is able to subdue all things unto Himself. The end of the days is upon us. Let us then like Nebuchadnezzar lift up our eyes to heaven that the mind of Christ may dwell in us and we may walk as sons of God.

CHAPTER THREE

LET THIS MIND BE IN YOU

"Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: but made Himself of no reputation, and took upon Him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men: and being found in fashion as a man, He humbled Himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Wherefore God also hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a name which is above every name: that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." (Phil. 2:5-11)

"If any man thinketh he knoweth aught, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know: but, if any man love God, the same is known of Him." The humble admission before God and man and ourselves that we know nothing as we ought to know is the proper attitude to maintain in all our seeking and searching after truth. I am convinced that all mankind is so blinded by those things we think we know that it is scarcely possible for light to shine into our hearts. Because we depend on our own understanding, our minds are forever clouded over with the dark veil of earthly tradition, human understanding, and natural ways of looking at things. It does not take long to embrace a falsehood, but it often takes a lifetime to disengage ourselves from it, for we, thinking that our minds are clear and honest and free from human tradition, are continually obstructing and refusing the true light which Christ is wherever we find it running contrary to the doctrines which have established themselves in our minds and have become our religion.

When Jesus walked among men, speaking words of life such as none other ever spake, the truth He unfolded was always bitterly rejected because of the blindness and ignorance of tradition-bound men. Because the truth He taught was not as they saw it, they branded Him a deceiver, controlled and possessed of a devil. Then one day He told them plainly the source of all their trouble. "... Ye have made the commandment of God of none effect by your tradition." Matt. 15:6. Those inspired words of rebuke are as true today as they were then as tradition enthroned in the hearts of men smites at truth with the sword of pride and human understanding. As the flesh lusts against the Spirit and the Spirit against the flesh, and these two are contrary one to the other so that we cannot do the things we should, so truth and human tradition run contrary one to the other so that we cannot believe the things we should. Truth is forever pointing with hallowed finger to the limitless expanse of the everlasting hills of God's unfolding glory while tradition draws its threadbare mantle about its skinny bones and runs away to hide itself in the dismal cave of its own misunderstanding. Religious tradition is like the legendary frog who lived in a well who, thinking he possessed all the water in the world, refused to believe that outside his dreary hole there were sparkling streams, mighty rivers, placid lakes, and boundless oceans. Just so long as we are determined to keep our understanding anchored to the musty dock of our own tradition, we need never, never hope to receive anything of the Lord. We may pray with fervor, work with zeal, and try to believe for revival "in our church", and all the other things the flesh craves after, but in spite of all our efforts we will be like the two drunken men who rowed hard all one night to reach the other side of the lake only to find, when the sun arose and they were sober, that their boat was still anchored to the shore.

Confession is good for the soul, and I must confess that, during the past twenty years as God has graciously let the light of His Son Jesus Christ shine into my heart with ever increasing brightness, the path of every new horizon to which He beckoned me led me through a valley where my feet stumbled over the dry bones of my own tradition or were hurt by the crumbling walls of my own understanding. There was a time when I was a denominational minister until the Spirit of God through many fiery trials and jolting tribulations revealed that denominationalism in every aspect, large or small, honorable or dishonorable, fundamental or modernistic, Protestant or Catholic is part and parcel of the harlot system which God declares is fallen. There was a time when I was principal of the largest Pentecostal Bible Institute in Canada until the Lord revealed to me that His ministries are neither called nor chosen from the schools of men, but those whom God would choose to bear the vessels of the Lord are called and chosen, taught and prepared of the Lord. From time immemorial God has been calling men, but never once in all scripture do you find Him accepting any who were not both called and prepared by Himself. From the call of Abraham to the call of Paul and Barnabas at Antioch every vessel was chosen of God and all their training was of the Lord. Oh, so often we hear this cry: God wants volunteers for His work! You are misinformed, my friend. This is a lie. It is not the truth and never will it be. God never asks for volunteers. Never! He conscripts His ministers, calling and choosing whom He will. Many thus called of God were very unhappy and displeased with their calling as was Moses, Saul, Jeremiah, and even Paul, but no arguments about lack of eloquence, inability to speak (Exod. 3:10-18), being of a small and insignificant house (1 Sam. 9:21), or being a child (Jer. 1:6-7) altered the mind of the Lord concerning the thing He had ordained before the ages were formed.

Some time ago a young man boarded a train to make his journey to the far city, which was his home. He adjusted his baggage about him and, looking out the window, admired the scenes as they swept past. The conductor was slow in coming to collect his ticket. He fell asleep and rode along peacefully for many miles. Finally a hand on his shoulder awakened him from his slumber. Seeing it was the conductor, he handed him his ticket, but pleasure turned to consternation when he found he had boarded a west bound train instead of the one going east. He was going the wrong direction. How often in our journeys we find we have missed the turn or taken the wrong road! We are all wise enough to know, however, that, having discovered our error, our only hope is to retrace our steps and start all over again. All over the world today preachers who know nothing of God's purpose for the ages are calling on their people to "pray for revival in the churches", but the revival their human hearts crave will never come in the churches for the simple reason that the confused thing they erroneously call the church is not the church at all but the art of man's device, a house made by human hands. It is the wrong way. It is man's own building. It is man's project. It is refused by the Lord. It is the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. Look back into history and it will teach you that never once during all this dispensation of grace has God ever revived a denomination. Whenever showers of heavenly rain fell upon waiting hearts, it came to those longing souls who were sick and tired of the so-called church with all its deadness, worldliness and abomination. As they waited on God in fasting and prayer for the reviving of their own souls, the Spirit fell upon them, ravishing their souls with the sight of the jasper walls and the golden streets of a celestial city not made with hands. Leading them over the weed-filled fences of a man-made church system, He led them to feed in the green pastures of His ever expanding truth and to freely drink of that living water which Christ is, of which if a man drink he will never thirst again.

No, my brother! God will not revive a man-made church system though you rend the heavens with your prayers and your tears flow like rivers of water. He will never revive it, I say. He is calling His people out of it. The Christians have become sinners and, serving God and mammon together, they have become double minded. Therefore the call of God goes forth to them, "Cleanse your hands, ye sinners; and purify your hearts, ye double minded. Be afflicted, and mourn, and weep: let your laughter be turned to mourning, and your joy to heaviness. Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and He shall lift you up." Jas. 4:8-10.

It is my hope in this writing to awaken the pure minds of God's people to true understanding of the mind of Christ. The natural man cannot receive the things of the Spirit of God; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned. Therefore I approach this sublime truth, this celestial realm of the mind of Christ, with more than usual fear and trembling.

"As heaven is higher than the earth," saith God, "so are My ways higher than your ways, and My thoughts than your thoughts." Therefore we cry out in our ignorance and earth-bound understanding, "Where is the wise man? Where is the scribe? Where is the debater of this age? Has not God made foolish the wisdom of the world? For since, in the wisdom of God, the world did not know God through wisdom, it pleased God through the folly of what we preached to save those who believe. For Jews demand signs and Greeks seek wisdom, but we preach Christ crucified, a stumbling block to Jews and folly to Gentiles, but to those who are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God. For the foolishness of God is wiser than men, and the weakness of God is stronger than men." 1 Cor. 1:20-25. (Revised Standard).

Dare we then in the light of such an admonition as this approach God proudly displaying our D.D.'s, our Ph.D.'s, and our L.L.B.'s? Do you know that all such is the wisdom of this world which comes to naught? Have we never learned that the world by wisdom knew not God? 1 Cor. 1:21. Have we forgotten the exhortation of the apostle James when he said, "Not many of you should become teachers, my brothers, for you know that we who teach will be judged with greater strictness." James 3:1. (Goodspeed). Oh that men, Christian men, would humble themselves before the feet of God and divest themselves of all their pride in every form of human wisdom, confessing that they know nothing as they ought to know! Oh that God's children would cast aside the filthy garments of human understanding and throw away the leafy aprons fashioned from the evil tree of human knowledge that gives us man's understanding of what is good and what is evil and what is right and what is wrong! Then would God teach us His secret wisdom, even the wisdom hidden from all ages and dispensations but which is now being revealed to those who are wholly His. All who would learn God's doctrine and those who would receive God's knowledge must first be weaned from the milk of human understanding and drawn from the breasts of our earthly mother. There is a natural realm and there is a spiritual realm. There is a wisdom from beneath and there is a wisdom from above. There is a man who is one mind with the Lord from heaven.

In the first two chapters of Paul's first epistle to the Corinthians the apostle unfolds a wealth of truth concerning the mind. I think I am right in saying that Paul clearly shows that all conditions whether good or bad extant among us are the product of the mind. Whether those conditions be wars, fightings, divisions, or blessed harmony and peace, all stem from the mind. The point that I wish to make very clear is simply this: Three kinds of minds are clearly shown in scripture. There is no possible way of avoiding this conclusion. There is the natural mind, which possesses the natural man. It is his natural unregenerate mind that keeps him a natural man. The natural mind cannot possibly receive the things of God. 1 Cor. 2:14. Everything that man does is totally in the natural. He is of the earth earthy. He thinks in the natural realm, talks in the natural realm, understands only in the natural realm. His conversation may be very interesting, he may be very well learned, well versed and very clever after this present age, but all his understanding is in this earthly realm and hermetically sealed in the natural. The simplest of spiritual truths are far over his head. In all probability he has never once heard the call of God in any way, much less responded to it. He is a natural man with a natural mind. Living in a natural world, he sees, hears, and understands only what is natural. As the ears of the deaf are fast closed to every beautiful sound - the singing of the birds, the voices of loved ones, the roaring of the surf - so his ears are closed to all that is spiritual and none but God can ever open them. As the eyes of the blind are fast closed to the beauties of the sunset, the magnificence of the mountains and the glory of the hills, so his eyes see not any spiritual thing, because he is a natural man with a natural mind, totally insensitive to the wonders of that heavenly realm that is high as heaven is high above the earth. A man cannot be spiritual and natural at the same time.

The second mind is the carnal mind. The carnal mind is described in scripture as being the enemy of God. Rom. 8:7. It is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be, so that they who are in the flesh cannot please God. Those last words, in the flesh, show us exactly what the carnal mind is. Our word carnal comes from the Latin word carni. Carni means flesh. The only part of man that is made of flesh is his body. The physical body is the flesh. The carnal mind is the fleshly mind. The fleshly mind is the mind that is always concerned about the welfare of the human body and how to cater to its passions - eating, drinking, hearing, seeing, smelling, and feeling. It is nothing more or less than this. It is the body that stands in the way of all spiritual progress. The flesh is such a deceiver that its true identity was hidden from God's people for centuries, so that scarcely anyone knows what the flesh really is. Almost all erroneously represent it as some spiritual evil.

I speak the truth with all soberness that it is our own flesh rather than the devil that hinders us in all our approaches to God and battles against our every effort to draw nigh to Him. Was it the devil or was it the flesh that put the disciples sound asleep when they should have been watching one hour with Jesus? Did He not give the answer to them when He said, "The spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak." Matt. 26:41. Is it not the flesh that demands food when the spirit longs to fast and pray? Is it not the insistent demanding of the body of flesh that causes God's people to break a fast they have declared unto the Lord when it has scarcely begun? I am being neither mean nor sarcastic when I tell you that most of the difficulty Christians find in understanding the scripturalness of fasting and prayer is brought on by the strenuous revolt of the stomach, and, if you will be perfectly honest with yourself and with your God, you will freely admit that the true and honest reason for your lack of fasting is that your body, your flesh, rebels against it with such violent rebellion that you are quite afraid to enter this sacred realm. You are discovering by experience that the flesh lusts against the spirit to such an extent that you cannot do the things you would. The spirit longs to break the shackles of this earthly realm. It longs to soar away into the heavens where it can freely partake of that which eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither has entered the heart of man, but the body, the flesh, says, "No, No, No! I'll be hungry! I'll be weak! I won't be able to earn my bread and do my job!" But the lying thing never once tells you that it is when you are weak that you are strong, or that it is the spirit that quickeneth while the flesh profiteth nothing. Every true fast from physical things enables us to better lay hold upon spiritual things. The power of the flesh is brought to naught. I think we should always remember this tremendous truth of scripture: If you live after the flesh (the body), you will die, but, if you through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body (the flesh), you shall live. Rom. 8:13. Notice these three things: First, in this scripture the terms the flesh and the body are used interchangeably, and this proves beyond doubt that the flesh and the physical body are one and the same thing. Second, if you live after the flesh by obeying the demands and dictates of the body, you will die. You will die physically and spiritually as well. You will be a very mediocre and carnal kind of a Christian. The flesh, therefore, can offer but one thing to those who obey its demands and whims - death, spiritual and physical death. Third, those who live after the Spirit, casting off the flesh and reckoning it to be the dead thing it really is, will find that two great results follow. The first is abounding spiritual life, wisdom, power and understanding, and the second is that the Spirit, thus nourished by the glory and power of God, is now able to give resurrection life to the mortal body. Is not this the only possible meaning of the inspired statement, "If you live after the flesh, ye shall die; but if you through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live"? Rom. 8:13. In verse 11 Paul has just finished saying, "If the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken (make alive) your mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in you." The conclusion of the matter, then, is this: Those who deny the spirit its necessary communion with God, because of the demands of the body with all its endless lusts, die - not only spiritually but physically as well; but they who deny the body (the flesh) to live after the Spirit not only gain great spiritual life but find that same Spirit quickening their bodies as well. It is not divine healing you need, my friend. It is the life that flows from a vibrant and healthy spirit that you need, for the spirit has a strange and godly way of giving "health to the navel and marrow to the bones". It is the Spirit that makes alive; the flesh profits exactly nothing. John 6:63.

Finally, there is the spiritual mind. The scripture has declared, "To be spiritually minded is life and peace." It is impossible to divorce the spiritual mind from the mind of Christ. A man cannot have a natural mind and a spiritual mind at the same time, but he can, alas, and usually does, have a spiritual mind and a carnal mind at the same time. This fact is plainly taught by Paul throughout the first eight chapters of his epistle to the Romans. The flesh lusteth against the Spirit and the Spirit against the flesh, and these are contrary the one to the other so that we cannot do the things we would. The flesh is a very real and terrible enemy. I shall not hesitate to say that our greatest enemy is neither the world nor the devil. Our greatest enemy is our own flesh, for, were it not for our flesh, Satan would have no power over us in any way. We would be able to stand with our Saviour and say, "The prince of this world cometh and hath nothing in Me."

The wisdom of this world is foolishness with God, but the wisdom, which is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy. James 3:17. The wisdom of this world flows forth from the corrupt fountain of the natural mind. The wisdom, which is from above flows forth as a pure river from that omniscient fountain head, the mind of God. The world’s corrupt wisdom, which is the wisdom of the natural man with his natural mind, has filled the whole earth with the abounding corruption seen and felt on every hand in this dread closing hour of the age. The natural mind with its finite wisdom cannot see tomorrow. It can only see this afternoon. It does not see that the corrupt egg it lays today will hatch a viper tomorrow; neither does it know that, because it sows the wind today, it will reap the whirlwind tomorrow.

The story of the natural mind runs like this: "When they knew God, they glorified Him not as God, neither were thankful, but became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened. Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools, and changed the glory of the incorruptible God into an image like to corruptible man, and to birds, and four-footed beasts, and creeping things. (That is what the world is doing today.) Wherefore God also gave them up to uncleanness through the lusts of their own hearts, to dishonor their own bodies between themselves: who changed the truth of God into a lie, and worshipped and served the creature more than the Creator, who is blessed forever, Amen. For this cause God gave them up unto vile affections: for even their women did change the natural use into that which is against nature: And likewise also the men, leaving the natural use of the woman, burned in their lust one toward another; men with men working that which is unseemly, and receiving in themselves that recompense of their error which was meet. And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind, to do those things which are not convenient; being filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity; whisperers, backbiters, haters of God, despiteful, proud, boasters, inventors of evil things, disobedient to parents, without understanding, covenant breakers, without natural affection, implacable, unmerciful: who, knowing the judgment of God, that they which commit such things are worthy of death, not only do the same, but have pleasure in them that do them.” Rom. 1:21-32.

That is the story of the corrupt and natural mind. And, if you will read it all with thoughtfulness, you will see that even now at the time I am writing we have entered the final phases of this terrible condition.

Twice in this passage it is stated, "God gave them up", and once it is stated, "God gave them over". Because of their vain imaginations they were given up to uncleanness, and because of the extent of their uncleanness God gave them up to vile affections, the principal sin being all manner of unnatural sex vices, bestiality, sodomy, and the intermingling and intermarriage of races, whom God in infinite wisdom has commanded to be separate the one from the other. And now, because of the abhorrent filth into which mankind has fallen, God gave them over to a reprobate mind to do those things which are not convenient, the last stages of which we now see everywhere about us - no understanding, covenant breaking, an absence of natural affection, a thing greatly accentuated by the rise of the so-called women's liberation, the despising of babies, the dissolution of the home, abortions, divorce, remarriage, wife-swapping. And the most devilish thing of all is this: Knowing the judgment of God, that they which do such things are worthy of death, not only do the same, but have pleasure in them that do them. Filth has become the popular thing, the accepted thing, of a permissive, depraved, and reprobate society, but I warn mankind that, as sure as verse 32 is the last verse in the chapter, we are now seeing the final acts of man's hateful rebellion before the judgment of God falls upon these lovers of all that is corrupt and carnal. Every modern evil springs from that wisdom from beneath. It is the fruit of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, which is man's crude notion of right and wrong, good and evil, at war with God's wisdom from above.

"I will destroy the wisdom of the wise," saith God, "and the cleverness of the clever will I thwart." 1 Cor. 1:19

(Revised Standard). Hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world? I am most thankful to God that those of us who love Him do not need to concern ourselves with the wisdom of this world which cometh to naught. Since God has given them up and given them over, there is nothing that you or I can do to change them. Let us then who are after the wisdom which comes from on high, even the wisdom which Christ Himself is, turn our eyes, our hearts, and our attention to the receiving of that wisdom which is from above, which before all else is first pure.

Jesus Christ is the wisdom of God. His name is the highest authority in the universe. The mind that dwelt in Christ Jesus was the Father's mind. "I and My Father are one," He said; therefore, the mind of Christ and the mind of the Father are one. When God's word tells us, "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus," He is not asking us to try to think like God would think, but He is asking us to let the very mind of Christ take possession of us as the mind of the Father took possession of His Son, Jesus Christ. Such glory can never be attained by trying, nor will it be attained by crying or struggling. It takes place as Christ abides, sitting daily... upon the throne of our life, ruler of His kingdom within us, Lord and Master of our mind until every thought is in obedience to Him and all wisdom and understanding comes from Him. If Christ is the wisdom of God, then it is Christ I must enthrone. "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world: but ye be transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God." Rom. 12:1-2.

When I came to chapter 2:5-11 while reading that beautiful letter which Paul wrote to the Philippians, a bright flash of inspiration gripped my heart. I could see in those wonderful words a truth I had never known before. Here Paul is describing with the concise but vivid detail of inspiration the entire story of the humiliation and exaltation of Jesus Christ the Son of God from His glory with the Father before the ages were formed through birth, manhood, death, resurrection and ascension to even greater glory. If you now have the faith to believe it, you will clearly see that the path of His humiliation that perfected His Sonship through suffering, leading Him at last to His exaltation far above all heavens, is also the identical path that you and I and all the sons of God must follow until all are presented faultless and tried, proven and faithful, in the glory and majesty of His presence to be, with our wonderful elder brother, exalted far above all heavens. This hope was in the heart of God in the day He said, "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion ..." Gen. 1:26.

Sonship is the hope of all creation. It is the hope dearest to the heart of God. He has irrevocably purposed to rule the world by sons upon whose shoulders will rest the government of the world. Isa. 9:6. But in the ages yet unborn, when His sons are multiplied and countless as the stars, the whole limitless universe, restored and repopulated, will be ruled by the sons of God in a harmony surpassing the sweetest symphony the earth has ever known. Not only will God have one beloved Son, only begotten and dearly loved of the Father, but He will have countless millions of sons dearly beloved and individually begotten of the Father, and at the head of that vast family of sons will stand Jesus Christ, the firstborn of all heaven, the firstborn from among the dead, the firstborn of every creature, and the firstborn of His many brethren. Each and every one of that vast family of sons will be filled with the mind of God, and thus, while ages of ages endlessly roll, no schism will ever be found in that body of sons, for they, each possessing the mind of God, though numbered in countless millions, are but one sonship, the only begotten of the Father.

In the book of Ezekiel, chapter 1, the prophet was overwhelmed by the vision of the coming forth of that bright one who could be none other than the Son of God. Knowing as we do that Jesus Christ came forth from God (John 16:28) and was in the form and likeness of the Father (Phil. 2:5-6), we can better understand the inspired words that flowed from the heart of Paul: "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God." He was the perfect Son of God before the ages began. Not only was He in the form of God, but He was equal to God, and it was in Him, with Him, and through Him that God began the whole process of sonship of which you and I are now a part. In the days of His earthly walk, when Jesus "learned obedience by the things which He suffered" (Heb. 5:8), He was being perfected as a Son of man that He might be perfect both as Son of God and Son of man. This perfecting was in order that we, being men, might be perfected both as sons of men and sons of God, that He, who in all things was made like His brethren, now does make His brethren in all things like unto Himself.

Now when Paul says, "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ", he is exhorting us to follow in His exact steps that the Father's mind may dwell in all His sons as it dwelt in Christ. He is showing us that the path that leads to our sonship and adoption is the same path that led to His Sonship and adoption. There is no other path besides this. All else is robbery and false pretence. All else is to climb up some other way. He is the door by which men enter - not a gate that swings on hinges, but an image that we bear. He is the way - not a path over which men tread, but a likeness into which they come. He is the truth - not a word which men speak, but the tree of life in the midst of the garden which they are. He is the life - not that mist which the wind driveth away, but that which endures, unaffected by endless ages.

In my book, The Adoption of Sons, I pointed out some evidences from God's word that led us to believe that our beginning was not on that day when we came into this world, but that we had our beginning in Him before the ages began. Surely the single sentence of inspiration found in the book of Ecclesiastes, "the spirit returns to God who gave it”, Ecc. 12:7, should help us to see that we also came forth from God, for we can only return to places we have once been. I cannot return to China because I have never been there. But I could return to England or France because I have been there. Surely this same principle applies here also. The spirit returns to God who gave it. When God said to Job, "Where wast thou when I laid the foundation of the earth ... when the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy", (Job 38:4-7), He was not telling Job that he did not exist; but he was asking him if he knew where he was on that day. The very fact that He asked Job where he was should be proof enough that he was. Furthermore it is indicated that he was among that very company who shouted for joy at the wonderful unfolding of God's plan for the countless ages that were yet to come. Even in the darkness of this present night I can scarce restrain myself from shouting as I anticipate the purpose of God that will yet unfold. Why then would I not shout with the morning stars in that world of light before the ages began long before I was lowered into this realm of darkness, heaviness, and death? Whatever may be the case with you and me, one thing is certain. Our blessed Lord and Christ was in the form of God before the ages were formed.

The great confusion that exists in the world today is caused almost entirely by man's ignorance. I am sure we understand that any man, suddenly finding himself in the middle of a vast wilderness, knowing neither whence he came, whither he is going, why he exists, or who he is, could not possibly know aught but terror and confusion. Yet that is almost exactly the position in which the vast multitudes of earth, God's people included, now find themselves. The reason they find themselves in such a sad predicament of ignorance and fear is because blind leaders of the blind have led them into a wilderness of uncertainty. Now, if I try to explain my existence by beginning at the time of my birth in 1909, I encounter all manner of confusion whether I am aware of it or not. Not knowing where I came from, I know not why I am here, nor why I was born in sin and shapen in iniquity. I am here not by choice. I live a life I didn't ask for. I die a death I don't want. In fact, I am much worse off than Columbus, who, when he set out, didn't know where he was going. When he got there, he didn't know where he was, and when he returned, he didn't know where he had been. But thus it is with us if we begin our reckoning from the day we appeared in a body of flesh.

It is little better if we conclude that we had our beginning in the Garden of Eden, for Eden itself with all its glory and all its calamity is a fruitless experiment completely gone astray if purpose divine, omniscient, immutable and omnipotent had not been formed in the mind of the Eternal before the ages began to be carried out in the minutest detail that none but God could devise. Let us, then, who are coming to maturity in Him begin our understanding, not on the day we came into this world, or with Adam in the Garden of Eden, but rather let us stand together with God our Father on that blessed day before the world was and, looking through His eyes of fire, let us behold the unfolding of the purpose of the ages. Then will the world and all things therein make wisdom and understanding as we behold the knowledge of the Lord? Well can we endure tribulation when we are aware of its purpose. The annoying thorn in the flesh is cause for naught but praise when infinite wisdom reveals that our strength is made perfect in weakness. The sting of death vanishes completely in the light of the truth that through death he is destroyed who has the power of death, that is, the devil, and they are delivered who through the fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage. It is time to learn that we are not saved from death, but saved by it and through it. Let us stand once more with Job and the heavenly hosts of God before the foundation of the world. Let us gaze once more through God's vast telescope that sweeps the very horizons of the ages of the ages, and let us shout once more the praises of God as we by inspiration see again the unfolding of the purpose, which we, since being lowered into this realm of death, had long forgotten.

So much depends upon our vantage point. So much depends upon where we stand to view the purpose of God for the ages. I exhort, therefore, that the men and women who read these lines will never again try to survey or understand the plan of God from the unimaginable narrowness of the natural mind, or from the low valleys of this realm of death into which all mankind has been lowered. But let us stand in spirit upon the mountains of God before the ages were formed. Let the inspiration of the Almighty awaken our memories to the glory of that day when the morning stars sang together and the sons of God shouted for joy as the almighty and all-wise Father rolled out the blueprint of the ages before our wondering eyes. There we saw the plan for the perfection of the sons of God. There we were made acquainted with the unspeakable benefits of the fall. There we beheld the value of testing and the fiery trial of tribulation, the blessing and strength of temptation and the final glorious outcome of our overcoming. It is he that overcometh who eats of the tree of life which is in the midst of the paradise of God. Rev. 2:7. It is he that overcometh who is not hurt by a second death. Rev. 2:11. He that overcometh eats of the hidden manna. Verse 17. He that overcometh is given power over the nations. Verse 26. He that overcometh is given the white garment of righteousness. Rev. 3:5. He that overcometh shall be made a pillar in God's temple. Rev. 3:12. And he that overcometh will sit with Christ in His throne. Rev. 3:20. Cease from this day forward, my brother and sister, to look on God's plan from the lowly tomb of this present death. It is the Spirit of the Almighty that gives you understanding. There is a mountain even higher than the mount of transfiguration from which Christ will show you both the glory of the coming kingdom and the majesty of the plan of the ages. And methinks, as your eyes once more behold it, you will shout again as you shouted then, when the morning stars sang together and the sons of God shouted for joy.

When Paul wrote the words, "Let this mind be in you that was also in Christ Jesus", he traced the path, which Jesus Christ followed that He might be perfect God-man. This rugged road His feet must tread before God could highly exalt Him and give Him a name that is above every name, a name before which eventually every knee shall bow of things in heaven and things in the earth and things under the earth (Phil. 2:10), and every tongue shall confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father (Phil. 2:11). Knowing as we do that no man can say that Jesus is Lord except by the Holy Spirit (1 Cor. 12:3), this verse excludes all possibility of being or terror and tells us plainly of the day when every creature which is in heaven and on earth and under the earth and such as are in the sea will be heard saying, "Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever." Rev. 5:13.

God is interested not only in perfecting His Son, Jesus Christ, but He has chosen to make Him (Jesus) the head and firstborn of a vast family of brothers (Rom. 8:29, Weymouth), everyone a son of God, everyone perfect, everyone filled with the mind of Christ. Who else could govern the world and the universe in righteousness and harmony and peace but he who has the mind that was in Christ Jesus? Has not the natural mind proved that it can produce nothing but wars and fightings and divisions? Did not James ask the question, "From whence come wars and fightings among you?" And did he not answer his own question in these words: "Come they not hence, even of your lusts that war in your members? Ye lust, and have not: ye kill and desire to have, and cannot obtain: ye fight and war, yet ye have not because ye ask not. Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts. Ye adulterers and adulteresses, know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God?" James 4:14. Do you not see, then, that both the carnal mind and the natural mind can produce nothing but war and division and bloodshed and every imaginable lust? Human knowledge, man's conception of right and wrong, is the tree of the knowledge of good and evil which kills with death all who partake of it, but the wisdom from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy. James 3:15. The mind that was in Christ is the Father's mind, possessing the Son, and God has decreed that the mind which filled and possessed His first Son, Jesus Christ, shall also fill and possess all His sons. I shall say without fear of contradiction that only those persons who "let" the mind of Christ dwell in them will be exalted to His throne or be given power over the nations. Never again will anything natural or carnal be permitted to rule after this present age of grace has concluded.

The wisdom that descends from above, which is pure, peaceable, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruit, without partially and without hypocrisy is the mind of Christ. Christ Himself is the wisdom of God. We cannot possess God's wisdom apart from Christ. We cannot possess God's mind apart from Christ. None of the blessing of God can be possessed apart from Christ - no gift, no righteousness, no joy or peace. That is why I am forever stressing the infinite value of our personal relationship with Him. God is looking for the hour when not only our lips, but our very life, will proclaim the message, "For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." It is when we reckon ourselves dead with Him that the Christ life springs forth. That is why Paul said, "To die is gain." What else could it be but gain since the life that comes forth from the tomb of our crucified self-life is the Christ life? Of course it is gain when from the carcass of this dead lion comes forth the honey of that Living Word, Christ Himself. Not I, but Christ! Not I, but Christ! George Hawtin is dead. It is gain that he died. "I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life that I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God who loved me and gave Himself for me.

So Paul has exhorted us: Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ. He came from God. He came out of God. He was in the form of God. He was God's Son, and because He is God's Son, He is God, for kind begots kind in God even as it does in all creation. When we are born of men, we are men. When we are born of God,
He who was in the form of God and thought it not robbery to be equal with God took seven steps to enter into a perfection never before experienced in heaven or in earth. (1) He made Himself of no reputation. (2) He took upon Himself the form of a servant. (3) He was made in the likeness of men. (4) He was found in fashion as a man. (5) He humbled Himself. (6) He became obedient unto death. (7) He became obedient even unto the death of the cross. I suppose the world itself could not contain the books that could be written from these words of inspiration, but it is not in the multiplicity of words that we are interested, but rather that we may clearly see that the course He trod to His exaltation is the exact course that we also must follow. The truth of the matter is simply this: The holy and all-wise Lord, our God, has already launched us upon this same course, even without our knowledge or understanding. The path to exaltation and glory through humanity, humiliation, suffering, and death was that which caused the morning stars to sing and the sons of God to shout for joy. The path that leads to the mind of Christ and exaltation at God's right hand lies not through the realm of greatness and honor nor spiritual gifts nor cleverness nor fame. Nor is it found with those whom the world calls great or whom Christians praise. The path leads instead through the valley of no reputation, servitude, and humanity with all its ills and pain, the likeness of men and all that is depraved and fallen, and finally death itself, the whole realm of it - death to self, death to the world, death to the flesh, and that particular kind of death that above all else identifies us with our Lord, even the death of the cross.

As we walk through the wilderness of this world, we are always confronted by men of reputation, wise men after the flesh, mighty men, noble men, men of pedigree and genealogy, men of race and lineage, man-made men, self-made men, world renowned preachers, internationally known evangelists, great healers and miracle workers. So great and important are they that their pictures appear from a dozen to sixteen times in one issue of their magazine. I do not say this from sarcasm or irony, but rather that you may know that the mind of Christ is not attained by the exaltation of self or by making a reputation for self, but by letting the self-life die away into dust and ashes that the new man, Christ Jesus might rise from the ashes of your crucified self. Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but, if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit. It is not a matter of trying to make ourselves nothing, but the great requirement is that we know ourselves as we actually are. Nothing! In my flesh dwells no good thing. Rom. 7:18. “What hast thou that thou didst not receive? Now if thou didst receive it, why dost thou glory, as if thou hadst not received it?” 1 Cor. 4:7. Beware when all men speak well of you. There is something wrong when they do, and that something is that self is on the throne and Christ is on the cross. Let Christ be now exalted to the throne of your heart and you yourself be of no reputation.

There is a hidden wisdom that flows like a river from the mind of Christ. It is a wisdom which none of the princes of this world can possibly know. The wisdom from beneath is earthly, sensual, and devilish and ends in death. The wisdom from above is pure, peaceable, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocrisy. Jas. 3:17. “Where is the wise man after the flesh? Where is the debater of this age? Has not God made foolish the wisdom of this world? For since, in the wisdom of God, the world did not know God through wisdom, it pleased God through the folly of what we preach to save those who believe. For Jews demand signs and Greeks seek wisdom, but we preach Christ crucified, a stumbling block to Jews and folly to Gentiles, but to those who are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God. For the foolishness of God is wiser than men, and the weakness of God is stronger than men.” 1 Cor. 1:20-25. Revised Standard.

There is a secret wisdom that comes to the mature in Christ. It is a wisdom that can come from one source and one only - the mind of Christ Jesus. It is a wisdom that comes by revelation directly from the mind of God, and, whenever it comes, it opens the eyes of the understanding and transforms the life of him who receives it. I can never believe men who boast of a revelation whose lives remain unchanged. Revelation renews the mind, transforms the life and body, and cuts off conformity to the world. Is that not exactly Paul's teaching in Rom.
12:1-2? "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God... be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind..." The wisdom from beneath conforms all men to this world's order, or should I say, disorder, leaving them in slavish bondage to the harlot system. The wisdom that comes from Christ, because it is the mind of Christ, wonderfully renews our mind, giving us the mind of Christ. It transforms our spirit, transforms our soul, transforms our mind, and begins the transformation of the body as well. For this reason the passage begins with the exhortation, "I beseech you, therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice." Certainly I believe there is healing for the body, but healing, however great or remarkable, still leaves the body corruptible and on its journey to the grave. The renewing of the mind begins a transformation, a change, a transfiguration of the body that ends in incorruption and immortality. Was not this transformation of the body the end Paul had in view when he bade us present our bodies a living sacrifice that we might by the renewing of the mind be transformed?

"There is a wisdom that we utter among the mature, a wisdom, however, not deriving from the present age nor from the powers who are in control of this age, though their days are numbered. We speak God's wisdom in a mystery - that hidden wisdom which, before the world began, God purposed for our glory, a wisdom which not one of the powers that control the present age have learned, for, if they had learned it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory. But we speak, to use the words of scripture, of things which eye has not seen, nor ear heard, and which have not entered into the heart of man, all that God has in readiness for them that love Him. For to us God has revealed them through the Spirit, for the Spirit searches everything, including the deeps of God. For who among men knows a man's thoughts, except the man's own spirit within him? In the same way also only God's Spirit is acquainted with God's thoughts. But we have not received the spirit of the world, but the Spirit, which comes from God, that we may know what is freely given us by God. This we also utter, not in language, which man's wisdom teaches us, but in that which the Spirit teaches, adapting spiritual words to spiritual truths. The unspiritual man rejects the teachings of the Spirit of God: to him they are folly, and he cannot learn them, because they are spiritually appraised. But the spiritual man appraises everything, although he is himself appraised by no one. For who has learned the mind of the Lord, so as to instruct Him? But we have the mind of Christ." 1 Cor. 2:6-16. Weymouth. I think it is very clear from the above passage that the secret wisdom which the world (and this includes the church system) cannot possibly receive, is the wisdom that comes from the mind of Christ, yea, the wisdom, which is the mind of Christ. What other reason could the apostle have for concluding this dynamic statement with the simple explanation, "But we have the mind of Christ!"

In conclusion of this frail study I disown any attempt to establish theory or to produce doctrine or any such thing that would leave your life unaffected or unchanged. There is a wisdom, which comes to the mature in Christ. It cannot come to the wise men of earth or the theologians of the church system. It comes only to those who empty themselves of the wisdom of this age. It comes to those who turn a deaf ear to the world and its program and to the religions and doctrines of men, which are little else than the conclusions of the natural mind, handed down by tradition as a stumbling stone for all mankind. The hidden wisdom of God comes to those who, seeking glory and honor and immortality, eternal life, empty themselves as Christ did, divesting Himself and becoming obedient to the cross, and not only the cross of Calvary, but the cross which this whole valley of death really is. Having done this, He was raised incorruptible and given a name which is above every name. Are we not members of His body? Are we not of that same Christ? Are we not the in-Christed people? Shall our way be different from His way? Shall He empty Himself while we remain full? Shall He humble Himself while we remain exalted? A thousand times no! For it behooved Him, in bringing many sons to glory, to make the captain of our salvation perfect through suffering.

Do you not think it was a remarkable thing that Paul, having written, "Let this mind be in you", should say, "What things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ. Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord; for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ;" Phil 3:7-8. And again, "Let us therefore, as many as be perfect, be thus minded; and if in any thing ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even this to you." Phil. 3:15. "For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto His glorious body..." Phil. 3:20. Knowing as we do that none may reign with Christ in His kingdom nor in the ages of ages which will yet unfold except those in whom the mind of Christ dwells in fullness, I exhort you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God that ye be not conformed to this world, but present yourselves as living sacrifices upon the altar of God to be transformed by the renewing of your mind, that you may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God.

EAGLES’ WINGS

Can Christians grow by holding firm
To doctrine or to creed?
The Shepherd leads His sheep to where They in new pastures feed.
Can food of yesteryear suffice
For hunger of today?
Was it not for our daily bread
That He taught us how to pray?
A soul can never grow in grace
That is content to stay In blissful contemplation of The things of yesterday,
And live alone in memory
Of some bright evening star
His grace had sent to lead us on;
Not keep us where we are.
Unfolding revelation is God's purpose for this hour.
Why live in flesh?
The stratospheres
Are vibrant with His power!
There is a Spirit realm to which We can triumphant rise,
And blend redemption’s melodies
With music from the skies.

CHAPTER FOUR
THE NEW REALM

The words of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, spoken in the secluded quietness of night to the seeking heart and attentive ear of Nicodemus, hold a significance far beyond the scope of human understanding. The greatest sermon ever preached on the new birth has failed to do anything more than to proclaim that the new birth was necessary that men might see the kingdom of God. We have proclaimed much the necessity of the new birth and have declared emphatically that none could see the kingdom of God without it, yet we understood little what the new birth really was, and few had even the faintest idea of the reality of the kingdom, which becomes our life, our breath, and our complete satisfaction when we are born of God’s Spirit.

No one but God could have over-ruled the gross ignorance of men, making their ignorance and lack of understanding redound to His glory and to, the extension of His immutable purposes. The world can never come to know God through human wisdom, but, since human wisdom is the only wisdom we possess, it therefore “pleased God by the foolishness of preaching Jo save all those who believe.” The truth of the words “the foolishness of preaching” becomes more significant with every measure of increasing light. It is very hard for me to understand why men love preaching and why they simply rejoice in having their pictures taken in front of microphones and before crowds. There is nothing wonderful or wise about preaching, for God’s word names it as foolishness. It is a means that God has taken to help ignorant, foolish men to believe. Because they are devoid of the wisdom of God, impotent in understanding, and destitute of His knowledge, therefore it pleased God by the kindergarten foolishness of preaching to save all who would simply believe.

Perhaps the anger of some will be aroused because of this statement, but if you will carefully scrutinize your own life and the lives of those around you, you will be forced to agree that no man has ever been perfected by listening to sermons. The reason that believers are on such a desperately low plane is that they have spent their lives listening to re-hashed sermons, holding out their withered spiritual hands like beggars pleading for a pittance to sustain life and keep them saved for another week. What a desperate tragedy that really is! Then, to make matters infinitely worse, times without number the preacher himself has less spiritual life, experience, and truth than the people he is trying to feed. Juveniles with a graduation diploma in one hand and a Bible in the other, full of self-confidence and destitute of experience, stand to recite their childish sermons before the ancient grey head. The mighty Isaiah, speaking with prophetic exactness, cried, "As for my people, children are their oppressors and women rule over them. O, My people, they which lead thee caused thee to err and destroy the way of thy paths." Isa. 3:12. The times of this ignorance God winked at (Acts 17:30), but now He is commanding all men to repent and come to a knowledge of Himself, separate and apart from sermons, systems, and ceremonies, teachers, preachers, and things. He is putting in the hearts of men a longing to know Him as sons of God should know Him, a longing to be like Him who was the pattern Son, the sign Son, the Apostle of our profession, the High Priest of our calling to sonship, who maketh intercession that we should be even as He is, exactly as He is, the likeness of His likeness and the image of His image.

On the great windswept prairies where we live it is possible to stand on certain hilltops to sweep with unobstructed vision the vast plains that lie between distant horizons perhaps a hundred miles apart. But all things seen from a great distance are found to be very different when we see them face-to-face. In our readers in public school was the story of the House with the Golden Windows. It told of a barefoot farm lad who loved to look across the distant valleys as the sun was setting to a little house with windows of shining gold. He was a faithful little worker about the farm and as a reward his parents gave him a day off to do just as he pleased. With a lunch in his pocket he set off across the great valley to see the house with the golden windows. He told the kind lady who met him at the door that he had come from across the valley to see the golden windows of her house. "Ah," she said, "We are much too poor to have golden windows, and besides glass gives much more light, but stay with us until the morning and I will show you a house with golden windows." And when the sun arose in the morning, she pointed far across the valley to his own little home where the windows shone like gold in the rays of the rising sun. So it is in the spiritual realm. We hear of the new birth and we think we understand it. Faintly we hear the truths of sonship and we imagine we are already the sons of God. We hear of victory over the flesh and we think we have attained it. We mistake conversion for the new birth, and believing for receiving. We have seen through a glass darkly, but face-to-face we shall presently behold all things as they are. The mists that have hung like shrouds upon the shoulders of the distant peaks sublime are fleeing away before the rising sun of righteousness that we may know as we are known.

As sure as we breathe, a new day is dawning; a dispensation is at hand. The weakness and unprofitableness of the dispensation of grace in which men only walked in faith is giving way to the kingdom age when all men shall know the Lord from the least to the greatest, and the knowledge of the Lord shall fill the earth as the waters cover the sea. The new birth is becoming a reality.

Believers of all ages have sold themselves woefully short on all the great promises of God. We have been content to say that every believer was born again and needed but to wait until some distant day when he would fly away to heaven either by death or by rapture. I remember seeing this sign vividly portrayed by the public highway: Except a man be born again, he cannot go to heaven. That statement, I fear, has been the sum and substance of Christian belief, but we have missed the true meaning of the truth given to Nicodemus so long ago. John 3:3.

To be born from above is to be born from a higher realm. Spirit is higher than flesh even though both should dwell together in one body. To be born of the flesh is one thing, for there you are born into a natural realm capable only of partaking of natural things. But to be born of the Spirit is to be born into a new and higher realm where the eternal things are clearly seen before us even as natural things are seen by natural men. Without the birth from above it is impossible to see the kingdom of God, for natural men have not been given the power to see spiritual things.

The realm of the new birth is the realm of sonship. It is the realm where Jesus Christ, the Son of God, lived and moved and had His being. Not that He was born again, for He had never sinned nor died and needed not the regeneration of ordinary men. But He lived and moved in the realm of sonship full and complete. He lived and moved in the realm of the kingdom, which He came to proclaim and which for three years or more He demonstrated in small part. As Moses led Israel to Kadesh Barnea (Num, 13:14) where they could actually see the promised land but through unbelief turned back to the wilderness, so Jesus led the whole world to a sort of spiritual Kadesh Barnea where the glory of the coming kingdom came into full view only to be lost sight of in a spiritual wilderness in which we have wandered for almost two thousand years. Jesus Christ, the Son of God, lived in a realm above and beyond the realm of ordinary men, for while we have lived as sons of men, He lived as the Son of God. While we have been from beneath, He was from above. While our kingdoms have been of the earth, His was not from hence. While all this is undeniably true to any honest man, yet, praise be to the eternal purpose of God, Jesus Christ, the Son of God, became the Son of man that we who were born sons of men might become sons of God.

The Holy Scriptures bear the eternal promise, "Behold, I make all things new." Not all things are to be made new at the same time, for God is making some things new right now, and all things will be re-born in their own order and time. Even the earth and the heaven will be re-born as a result of this most precious promise.

Jesus is the apostle of our faith. He is the sign Son, the first begotten Son, the pattern Son. All who are to come to sonship through the ages shall come into that same wonderful image of Jesus Christ. It is time now, above all times, for us to mightily stress these truths. I see no possibility of any long delay until the hour of the manifestation of the sons of God becomes a reality.

We do not attain the realities of sonship by thumb twiddling. They appear as a great vision before our understanding and we attain them through surmounting faith, patience, endurance, and eternal vigilance.

The heights of great men reached and kept
Were not attained by sudden flight;
But they, while their companions slept,
Were toiling upward in the night.

I for one shall be surprised indeed if much more time elapses before the kingdom day breaks in its glory upon the whole earth. The woman of Rev. 12:1-6 is without doubt in travail and the manchild, who will shepherd all nations with a rod of iron, is coming forth as a result of her travail. The forces of organized religion, typified by the great dragon, are banding closer and closer together ready to devour the sons of God, the manchild, as soon as he is born. But they will not succeed, for these sons do not belong to the weakness of an earthly realm but to an heavenly realm far above corruption, mortality, and death.

The realm of sonship is an entirely new realm. Jesus Christ was the pattern Son of God. All God's sons will be in His image and His likeness in everything. When we use the terms image and likeness, we are always prone to think of a sort of physical resemblance as a son bears physical likeness to a father, but the likeness which the sons of God bear to Jesus Christ goes infinitely beyond physical likeness. It includes all wisdom, knowledge, power, holiness, truth, justice, love, understanding, judgment, government, authority, and unity with the Father. We may name any attribute of sonship found in Jesus Christ, whether visible or invisible, and the truth abides eternal and sure that such is the pattern for all God's sons. We shall through infinite grace enter into that same image.

The prayer found in the sixth chapter of Matthew which we call the Lord's Prayer is really a pattern prayer. It was a guide and a compass that was intended to keep all man's prayers in the channel of God's will. There need be no objection made to reciting the prayer as is so often done in public and private. But these words were not given us to be mumbled thoughtlessly as a part of our ritual and form of worship. This prayer is a life that is lived. Until the individual request becomes an experience in our own life, we have understood but little of the pattern Jesus gave us that day.

The request, Thy kingdom come, is followed by the request, Thy will be done. It is the coming of the new will, which ushers in the kingdom of God. For six thousand years the will of man has ruled the nations of the earth. Man's own self-will has ruled his own life and the will of man has forever been imposed on other men. Monarchs and dictators have risen up, bombastically imposing their will and authority over whole empires, delighting in the bondage and slavery they brought to their own subjects. Men impose their wills on men.
Nations impose their wills on nations. When no domineering taskmaster enslaves us from without, we immediately become captive to our own will which is the will of the flesh, and, thus held chained to its carnal desires and ambitions, we pass our lives on earth as groveling slaves to our own self-will. We lay up treasures where moth and rust corrupt and where thieves break through and steal. We put our money in bags that are full of holes. Instead of passing our time in communion with God and thus partaking of the mind of Christ, we spend our time lolling in an easy chair allowing our minds to partake of filth and corruption that has had no equal since Noah's day. We allow the image of the adulterer and the adulteress, the thief, the murderer, and the crook to erase the image of Christ from our minds and the hope of sonship is slain in the dens of murderers and thieves. Do not try to tell me it doesn't matter. Can a man take fire into his bosom and his clothes not be burned? Can one go upon hot coals and his feet not be burned? Prov. 6:27-28.

Nay, World! I turn away
Though thou seem fair and good;
Thy friendly outstretched hand
Is stained with Jesus' blood.
If in the least device
I stoop to take a part,
All unawares thine influence steals God's glory from my heart.
I miss the Saviour's smile
Whene'er I walk thy ways;
Thy laughter drowns the Spirit's voice
And chokes the songs of praise.
Whene'er I turn aside
To join thee for an hour,
The face of Christ grows blurred and dim,
And prayer has lost its power.

The coming of the will of God into a believer's life is a personal experience far, far greater than the receiving of any spiritual gift. The coming of the will of God into our life is in truth the coming of the mind of Christ. It is the beginning of the very spirit of the kingdom within us. It is the crowning and enthroning of Jesus Christ in the throne room of our heart. As long as self sits on the throne, carrying out its private ambitions and ordering our life according to the human will, Jesus is still rejected, still despised, and still crucified. The world is full of men and women who proudly boast that they want God's will and only God's will, yet they spend their whole lives carrying out their own ambitions and trying to fulfill their own purposes. They venture not to come before God with fasting and with the prayer, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" Men have become so busy presenting their programs before God and asking His blessing upon their own works and their own ideas that they never think to cast their ambitions aside while He leads them into His purpose and will.

Those rejected men who will come to the Lord, saying, "Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in Thy Name and in Thy Name done many wonderful works?" (Matt. 7:22), were not liars nor even deceivers. They were self-willed men who preached and performed miracles because that is what they wanted to do. They were not doing it because Christ had either called them or sent them. Therefore their works, though wonderful, amounted to nothing because they were done after man's own will. The existing church system has an endless variety of this type of men and women who lay claim to being great servants of God, but who in reality are serving their own bellies.

There are three very definite stages that transpire in becoming one with the divine will. First there comes the Gethsemane struggle in casting off our own will. It is here above all other places that we face death to self. It is here in dust and ashes and bloody sweat that we begin to plead with strong crying and tears, "Not my will but Thine be done." It is here that we are faced with the fact that this cup cannot pass except we drink it. This struggle between my will and His will is fierce and bitter and often long, but I tell you of a truth that His will cannot be manifest in us until Gethsemane is passed clear through.

Did you ever notice that when David, the king of Israel, was rejected by his kingdom, driven from his throne by his son Absalom, and betrayed by his best friend Ahithophel, he passed weeping over the brook Kedron? 2
Sam. 15:23. It was over this same brook Kedron that Jesus Christ passed on His way to Gethsemane. The longing for unity with God's will brought David across the brook to his Gethsemane. Unity with God's will brought Christ across the brook to Gethsemane, and our longing for God's will will also bring us across the brook that separates us from the purpose of men and the will of the flesh into the garden of His passion where we become one with Him.

This is an experience that we must face alone. We will not have many friends who can help us through the darkness of Gethsemane. It was only a few hours before Gethsemane that Jesus said to Judas, "That thou dost do quickly," and Judas went out and "it was night." It was night in so many ways. It was night for Judas; it was night for the disciples; it was night for the world; and it was night for Jesus. The darkest loneliest night we will ever go through is when we pass through our Gethsemane, for this is the place where we pass from our will to His. The don't-care noisy world will rush on, intent with its business. The don't-care priesthood will be busy preparing its robes, its sermons and sacrifices for the Sabbath. The professing church will be relentlessly pushing ahead with its programs. Our best and most devoted friends will all be idly slumbering, and somewhere there is sure to be a traitor carefully scheming our crucifixion. Gethsemane is the loneliest place in all the world of spiritual experience. Even Calvary was graced by the presence of a few heart-broken women and "that disciple whom Jesus loved," but Gethsemane was alone.

How often I have thought of the Gethsemane struggle of self-willed Jacob as he journeyed back to the land of his fathers after an absence of many years. Gen. 32. He was on his way to meet his twin brother, Esau, who was coming against him with four hundred men. Esau is the flesh. Jacob, in fear of his brother Esau, sent all his belongings over the brook and Jacob was left alone to wrestle and gain the victory over the will of the flesh. Even back there in Genesis 32:23 behold the brook! The same old brook that divides us from our loved ones and our earthly possessions as we struggle to attain unity with the will of God. The cunning, conniving, old Jacob nature within every one of us must be confessed and destroyed that our name should be no more Jacob, but Israel, the prince with God. A prince with God is without doubt a son of God. "Jacob called the name of the place Peniel, for he had seen God face to face and his life was preserved." Verse 30. Jacob becomes Israel and Gethsemane becomes Peniel, the face of God.

I tell you in truth that I know by experience that these things are so. Well do I know by experience what it is to cross over the brook and enter alone into the Garden. I know the heartache of trying to awaken sleeping brethren only to have them despise and hate you and fall asleep again. I know what it is to see the hand of the traitor at work hoping to gain by your awful loss, but most of all I know the long, long, lonely hours when no prayer could pass the lips except to say, "Not my will but Thine be done." It is here and here alone that we begin to tread the ground of true sonship, for sons must know only God's will. None but those who know God's will can ever hope to be led by the Spirit. But as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God. We said above that the entering in to God's will was in three definite steps. First there comes the mighty struggle of Gethsemane, the awful clash between the will of man and the will of God. Then second, when the victory is gained, we will find ourselves meekly submitting, meekly saying "amen" to all the will of God. But there is a third stage which will eventually come. It is the time when we "delight to do God's will." Psa. 40:8.

Whereas in the beginning we sought to be conformed to God's will, now we hunger and thirst after it. We seek it out that with joy we may follow it in life or death. The will of God becomes the highest and grandest prize. All else becomes utter dung by comparison. "I delight to do Thy will, O my God," is the theme of our song from month to month while our soul is always enquiring to be enlightened with the revelation of His mind for us. The very thought of living after the counsel of our own will is a repugnant odor in our nostrils, and the evil thought of counting the cost of following Him never darkens the soul. This indeed is the new will.

With great earnestness I pray that God will open your understanding, for it is of perfect truth that we tell you that no man can ever hope to reign in the kingdom of Christ until his will has thus become one with the will of the Father. Were it possible for one man to reign in the kingdom while still possessing his own will and not being in accord with the will of the Father, confusion, hatred, and rebellion would follow even as it did in lovely Eden in the beginning. Therefore all who seek the kingdom praying, Thy kingdom come, must first be filled with the knowledge that His will must be done in earth as it is done in heaven. The will of God in the earth is in truth the kingdom of God.
CHAPTER FIVE
THE NEW MIND

The wisdom of men is foolishness with God. We will all agree that the puny wisdom of man has sought out many inventions. It is remarkable to see what he has accomplished as he has set his mind to work on the tasks that confronted him. The scripture says, "God made man upright, but they have sought out many inventions." Ecc. 7:29. The expression "but they hath sought out many inventions" shows us that his inventions have tended to degrade him rather than to help him. It is certain that whatsoever a man does to bring himself freedom in one direction serves to bring him into bondage in another, for he must work harder to pay for the things that make his work easier, and what time he saves he uses to indulge the flesh.

It is not the weakness and unprofitableness of the human mind that we want to stress, for that is only negative at best, but what we want to show is the greatness of the mind of Christ. God has chosen to demonstrate the infinite gulf between the mind of man and the mind of God by a simple comparison of the two in which He shows that "the wisdom of man is foolishness with God." 1 Cor. 3:19. Actually there is no such thing as foolishness with God, for with God "the thought of foolishness is sin" but He has chosen this form of expression to show us clearly that the highest flights of human wisdom are no more than foolishness in His sight. In this world things are only big or strong or wise by comparison with things that are small or weak or unwise. A man who stands 6'8" is a giant compared to most men, but, when he stands beside a man who is 8'6", he appears to be almost a midget. Thus it is with human wisdom. When we compare the wisdom of man with the wisdom of God, then we are forced to conclude that the wisdom of man in its highest degree does not compare with that which God calls foolishness. The world by wisdom knew not God; therefore it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe. Because it was impossible for human wisdom to comprehend even the simplest of God's purposes, the Lord in grace laid aside the necessity of human understanding and made faith the only requirement necessary to man's justification. Thus it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe. See 1 Cor. 1.

God seldom chooses wise men after the flesh for any of His work because wise men after the flesh are not a whit wiser than a fool in spiritual things. Thus it is written, "I will destroy the wisdom of the wise and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent. Where is the wisdom? Where is the scribe? Where is the disputer of this world? For after that in the wisdom of God the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe. For the Jews require a sign and the Greeks seek after wisdom: But we preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumbling block and unto the Greeks foolishness, but unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God, because the foolishness of God is wiser than men and the weakness of God is stronger than men." 1 Cor. 1:19-25. It is for this reason that Paul says, "Not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called, but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise, and the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty." 1 Cor. 1:26-27.

"The world by wisdom knew not God." What greater argument can we propose to demonstrate our utter need of the mind of Christ? It is the mind of man that keeps the world in continual turmoil. It seethes and bubbles and erupts like a vast cauldron and the wisdom of man is powerless to help it. We live in an era of international tension such as the world has never known. In spite of plenty, hunger stalks the earth. Justice and equality have taken wings and righteous judgment is scarcely known. The earth abounds in forms of godliness that deny the power, and men both in the church and out of it are lovers of pleasures/are more than lovers of God. For six thousand years man has struggled to bring about a sort of Utopia, but the human mind, prone as it is to all manner of greed and selfishness, can never deliver the world or bring a reign of righteousness.

The mind that was in Christ was the Father's mind. We must never overlook that fact. When Paul said, "Let this mind dwell in you which was also in Christ Jesus," he knew well that the mind that was in Christ Jesus was the mind of God the Father. There can never be unity of mind until all have one mind. It was the Father's mind dwelling in the Son, Christ Jesus that made Him completely one with the Father. "I and My Father are one," He said, and so They were. The wonderful unity between Christ, the Son of God, and His father existed because Christ dwelt in the Father and the Father dwelt in Christ. In Christ dwelt all the fullness of the godhead bodily. The great truth that is wide open to our understanding is this: We shall be made one with God the Father and Jesus Christ the Son in exactly the same way as They are one. Christ knew perfectly the one and only place of true unity. It was this knowledge that prompted His prayer and caused Him to ask, "That they all may be one, as Thou, Father, art in Me and I in Thee, that they also may be one in Us; that the world may believe that Thou hast sent Me. And the glory which Thou hast given Me I have given them that they may be one, even as We are one: I in them, and Thou in Me that they may be made perfect in one." John 17:21-23. This is unity indeed. It is the kind of unity God demands. It is unity of mind and unity of glory.

All over the world today there is talk of unity. Councils are being held with ever increasing regularity in an effort to unite all phases of the church system. The words of Christ, "that they all may be one," are being wistfully repeated, but the kind of unity they are striving to attain is not the unity of which the Bible speaks. Man strives to unite all people under one authority and one earthly head that a united front might be presented to the world, but this is a false unity based on slavish servitude to a system. It has nothing in common with the unity that comes from oneness with the Father and with the Son. All the great religious systems of the world are certain to come together and nothing can stop them. But do not be deceived by it. Rather flee from it as from a plague, for it has the horns of a lamb, appearing harmless and good, but it has the voice of a dragon. Rev. 13:1. Isaiah turned his prophetic telescope down to our day to behold the frantic endeavors for religious unity, then spoke with exactness in these words: "Behold, they shall surely come together, but not by Me." Isa 54:15. This is not the unity we need, for it will not be unity but slavery based on dread and fear. The only true unity is the unity that flows like a universal river of life from the indwelling mind of Christ.

It is the mind of Christ that will order and govern the world in the kingdom age. Every son of God will be imbued with the mind of Christ and from those holy omniscient minds the law and government of the Lord will flow forth with a harmony that will encompass the earth with perfect peace and fill it to overflowing with the knowledge of the Lord. Men will learn war no more, for there will be no cause for division. Then shall men know the meaning of the prayer, "Give us this day our daily bread." No longer shall greedy, carnal minds seek to lay up vast wealth for future days, but all will know the glory of living daily from God's bountiful hand.

At this trysting hour we cannot possibly emphasize too strongly the need to seek to become one with the will of God, to cast off the carnal mind and let the mind of Christ dwell in us. As it is impossible for the oak that fell last winter to up-rear its shattered stem, so also it is impossible for the natural mind to attain sonship. Only the indwelling mind of the Father, which also indwelt Jesus Christ, can bring us to sonship, for as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God. It is the Spirit of His mind that brings us into unity with the Father, unity with the Son, and unity with each other.

Christian people of all ages have sought unity on the basis of beliefs and doctrines. They have tried to hammer out doctrinal differences on the basis of the Bible, all viewing the distant mountain peak from a different angle, all coming to a different conclusion, but all thoroughly convinced that they are right. We have been like the six blind men of Indusstan who went to see the elephant. The natural mind can never bring unity. It knows only in part and an infinitesimal part at that, but the mind of Christ brings perfect unity, no secret is hidden from its universal wisdom. The apostle Paul opened the gates to a profound secret when he said, "Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that you may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God." Rom. 12:2. We have heard a great deal about the corruptible putting on incorruption and the mortal putting on immortality. We have embraced many theories as to how this would be accomplished, but in one mighty word of inspiration the apostle sweeps aside all theories to tell us that we shall be "transformed by the renewing of the mind." Therefore he declares, "I beseech you, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice..." We present them to Him for transformation, and this transformation takes places by the renewing of the mind. The old mind, carnal and human as it is, is always conformed to the weak and beggarly elements of the world. It leaves us mortal, corruptible, and unchanged, but the mind of Christ, which is the new mind, is a transforming mind. It renews not only the mind, but the body as well.

A few years ago an article appeared in the Life magazine. It was most enlightening when spiritually applied to the renewing of the mind. For many centuries biologists had wondered what could possibly cause a caterpillar to change to a butterfly. At last one biologist discovered a very significant thing. He found that this remarkable transformation was caused by a hormone in the tiny brain of the caterpillar. He found that, if the hormone was removed, the caterpillar would remain a caterpillar until death, but, if the hormone was left in the brain, the caterpillar would change to a beautiful butterfly. To prove his theory he joined five caterpillars together, removing the hormone from the brains of the first four and leaving it in the brain of the last one. The first four remained as they were while the last changed to a butterfly. He then reversed the process, leaving the hormone in the head of the first worm, and removing it from the last four. To the amazement of all the whole five changed to butterflies, or shall we say, became the same as the head one. The spiritual significance of this remarkable discovery cannot be overlooked, for it is God's word in His creation, teaching us that as a worm is transformed to a celestial creature by a tiny cell in its mind, so also are we transformed by receiving the mind of Christ. Thus Paul says, "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that you present your bodies a living sacrifice - and be not conformed to the world, but be transformed by the renewing of the mind." Rom. 12:1-2.

The renewed mind will transform you and me to mature sons of God who know God's perfect will. Rom. 12:2. Notice in particular that Paul says that we are transformed by the renewing of the mind that we may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God. Since it is the mind of Christ in God's sons that will govern the world in the coming age, it is therefore perfectly evident that this same renewed mind will change and transform the entire earth, bringing in righteousness, justice, equity, and truth that the knowledge of the Lord shall fill the earth as the waters cover the sea. Jesus called this glorious kingdom age the regeneration, (Matt. 19:28), and declared that every one who had followed Him should sit with Him in the regeneration. Just as the mind of man is now bringing desolation, war, famine, death, and disease upon the earth with an appalling darkness that deepens with every passing day, so the mind of Christ in the sons of God will bring order from the chaos. Once again the Spirit of God will move upon the waters restoring order from the chaos. The Eternal Word will once again command, "Let there be light," and the light of the mind of the Son of God will roll back the gloomy clouds of the darkness and death of the carnal mind, and Eden, lovely Eden, shall reappear.

THE NEW ATTITUDE

Jesus Christ is the apostle and high priest of our profession. Heb. 3:1. An apostle is theirs/advocate of a new order. He is not necessarily a worker of miracles or a performer of signs. A high priest is an intercessor between God and man. As our apostle Jesus Christ deals with us on behalf of God, and as our high priest He deals with God on behalf of us. He is a mediator both ways. The life and ministry of Jesus Christ demonstrated as nothing else could what the realm of sonship really is. He is the Word of God, and I declare with all emphasis that the life He lived was just as much the word of God as the words He spoke. Our trouble is that we have preached one thing by mouth and preached another thing by life. But the life of Christ was in exact accord with the words He spoke. We will now demonstrate and clearly show that the life of this apostle and high priest of our profession is without doubt the same life into which we as sons of God are now coming.

The attitude of Jesus was one of complete independence of ordinary necessities. "Take no thought for your life," He said, "what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than meat and the body more than raiment? Behold the fowls of the air, for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns, yet your heavenly Father feedeth them. ...And why take ye thought for raiment? Consider the lilies how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin, and yet I say unto you that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these." Matt. 6:25, 26, 28, 29. Devout men of all ages have wistfully listened to those blessed words of life, yet none have been able to partake fully of their truth. Truly, many have lived by a faith in God, and many have known what it was for God to supply their needs, but far more than bare faith is implied here. Taught here is an experience of abiding in God where God is the source of all things, our food, our raiment, and our very existence. This, men have not yet discovered.

Jesus showed us clearly that the life He taught was completely independent of every earthly tradition and custom. That life belonged to the realm of the kingdom, which we are to seek first of all. "Seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." Matt. 6:33. Jesus came to preach the kingdom. That was His gospel. He did not come to set up His kingdom. He came to proclaim it.
and tell the world that it was coming. All the things that were spoken in the Sermon on the Mount pertain to the kingdom, which we are soon to enter. These are the laws that will govern the dispensation of the kingdom just as surely as the law of Moses governed the dispensation of the law. The kingdom age is the age of sonship. It is the age of the will of God. It is the age of the mind of Christ. It is the one thousand year Sabbath of rest from the preceding six thousand years of labor and travail since Adam fell. Adam in his unfallen state was no more careful about raiment than a lily of the field. He had far less concern about daily bread than the birds of the air which sow not, neither reap, nor gather into barns. Adam was a Son of God, living and moving and having his being in God. But, when he lost that blessed estate, he was condemned to a life of care and travail, for God said, "Cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shall thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns and thistles shall it bring forth unto thee: and thou shalt eat the herb of the field; in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground." Gen. 3:17-19. This has been man's awful travail for six thousand years. All that time he has sought to find life where no life is, forced to labor for that which is not bread. All man's labor is for his mouth and yet his appetite is never full. Ecc. 6:7.

But now for a brief period Jesus appeared proclaiming a new age, a new realm, and an entirely new attitude. The strange and wonderful things He proclaimed, He lived, demonstrating that it was possible for a Son of God to live as lilies live. Yea, He taught more than that; He showed that such a life was the true life of a son of God, all else falling far short of the blessedness of sonship.

Jesus was independent of the need of human learning. "How knoweth this man letters having never learned?" was the question of the learned doctors of the law. John 7:15. While other men wearied their flesh with much study and pored over books of earthly wisdom, here was one who knew all things both visible and invisible, yet had never studied a book nor learned an alphabet. When He was twelve years old, He was found sitting amid doctors and lawyers, hearing them and asking them questions until all were amazed at His understanding and answers. He knew the thoughts of men's hearts; He knew who would betray Him. He knew the graces and virtues of all and He knew the sins of all though He never studied lessons nor learned of men. And how was it that He knew all these things, which men can never attain through schools and books? It was because the omniscient mind of the Father dwelt in Him. His was the wisdom of which you and I are about to partake. This was a display of the wisdom that will govern the world in the ages to come. Let us not sell ourselves short on this most important theme. Think not that we have the mind of Christ dwelling in us just because we have had a few hunches and inspirations that have been correct, or even a few definite leadings of the Spirit. This mind belongs to a new realm. This mind brings us into an entirely new attitude toward all things, both on earth and in heaven.

It would be very easy to go on endlessly, demonstrating the glory of the wisdom of the mind of the only begotten Son of God. But the magnificent secret of it all is found in these words: "For I have not spoken of Myself; but the Father which sent Me He gave Me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak. And I know that His commandment is life everlasting; Whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto Me, so I speak," John 12:49-50.

The life of Christ demonstrated that He lived far above all of earth's systems, and because of the realm in which He lived, He was completely independent of them in every sense of the word. While foxes had holes and the birds of the air had nests, the Son of man had nowhere to lay His head. Though He was called the carpenter's son, yet He built neither mansion nor hut for Himself. No mention is ever made of any abode He called His own. One day He turned and saw two of the disciples of John following Him, and said unto them, "What seek ye?" They replied, "Master, where dwellest Thou?" He said unto them, "Come and see." John 1:35-39. I have often wondered where He took them and what He showed them, but I do not think it was a house, a cave, or a nest. Perhaps it was the secret place of the Most High where He abode under the shadow of the Almighty.

John 8:1 really belongs to chapter seven and should read like this: "And every man went to his own house, and Jesus went to the Mount of Olives." The Son of God, who told us to take no thought for any of these things, lived out exactly what He preached. Don't you try to do it! You will only make a fool of yourself. But I tell you beyond a doubt that the realm of sonship in which He dwelt is the realm to which we are also now coming, and that before the end of this age. What else do you suppose Jesus meant when He prayed saying, "Father, I will that they should be with Me where I am." John 17:24. He was the first Son of a vast family that He is bringing to His own power and glory, and to even greater glory because He has gone to the Father. "The works that I do shall ye do also," He said, "and greater works than these shall ye do because I go to the Father.

Notice next that Jesus was independent of natural food. Though He often ate natural food, He was never in bondage to it, nor did He have to slave for it by the sweat of His face. The scripture records at least five places where Christ showed that He lived on a plane where His need for food and drink was supplied from a source far above that which men and women know. Though all men, in fact, all creatures, are more in bondage to food and drink than to any other thing, yet this Son of God was never in bondage to either. The very first miracle He performed was to supply wine for a wedding feast when they had none. John 2:1-12. Certainly there is a spiritual significance to this intriguing story, but our point just now is that He needed not to depend on any natural thing or on any natural course of events. He supplied all things from an infinite supply which, was neither enriched by withholding nor impoverished by giving, for saith God, "If I were hungry, I would not tell you, for the world is mine and the cattle of a thousand hills."

For three days the hungry multitudes had endured the desert heat as they listened to the words of life that fell from the Saviour’s lips. They had brought their sick and afflicted from afar and many were the marvelous scenes of joy as demons went out, lame walked, lepers were cleansed, blind men saw, deaf heard, and sins were forgiven.

At even, when the sun was set,
The sick, O Lord, around Thee lay;
Oh, with what divers pains they met,
And with what joy they went away.

But now the three days were over and well the Saviour knew that, if He sent the multitudes away without food, they would faint by the way, so, calling Philip to Him, He said to prove him, "Whence shall we buy bread that these may eat?" Philip replied, "Two hundred pennyworth of bread is not sufficient for them that every one may take a little." Then Andrew (that man who loved to introduce people to Christ) ventured to suggest, "There is a lad here which hath five barley loaves and two small fishes, but what are they among so many?" And Jesus said, "Make the men sit down." So the men sat down in number about five thousand. And Jesus blessed the loaves with the blessing of the Son of God, and five thousand hungry men, beside women and children, ate until they were filled. And when they gathered up the fragments that nothing be lost, they had twelve baskets full. John 6:12.

Jesus had no concern about how much money was in the bag. Whether there was much or little meant nothing to Him. He was a Son of God and in the realm of sons food is the bread of life from heaven and drink is the water of life. In this eventide of the age I hear Him saying, "Labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give you, for Him hath God the Father sealed."

On his journey through Samaria, weary, thirsty, and hungry, Jesus sat at the wayside well. He had sent His disciples away to the village to buy food, and, as He waited by the well, He asked drink of a woman who came to draw water. But in the conversation that followed the woman forgot to give Him water, for He had told her the story of the water of life which He would give, and, of which if one should drink, he would never thirst again. When the disciples came back with food from the village, He would not eat, for He said, "I have meat to eat which ye know not of." John 4. He was a Son and He lived in the realm He proclaimed.

Few of our bondages present more difficulty than distance. Our methods of travel are always awkward, growing more costly with each advance in technology. The Son of God lived in a realm independent of earth’s modes of transportation. It is true He often walked, or rode in ships, but it is also true that He walked on water as though it were dry land, and once, upon entering into a ship, immediately the ship was at the land whither they went. John 6:21. He needed not to buy an ass to ride to Jerusalem, but sent His disciples with the message, "The Master hath need of him." And when the wonderful hour of His departure from earth arrived, He ascended to heaven to the wonder and amazement of some five hundred witnesses who had gone with Him to the Mount of Olives. Luke 24:49-51.
As time and space will fail us, we will mention but one more important point. Jesus lived beyond the power of earth’s laws and governments. It is scarcely possible to describe properly the story of Christ’s arrest in Gethsemane by the angry mob with lanterns and torches. There was such blind hate, envy, and confusion on the part of the angry mob, and such overflowing fullness of love, patience and kindness on the part of Christ! But notice! When Christ asked the mob, "Whom seek ye?" they replied, "Jesus of Nazareth." And when He calmly told them, "I am He," they all fell flat on their backs, completely impotent and helpless at His feet. Then He, standing over their helpless, prostrate forms, asked again, "Whom seek ye?" They replied, "Jesus of Nazareth." He answered again saying, "I have told you that I am He; If therefore ye seek Me, let these (the disciples) go their ways." John 18:2-9. Truly none but a Son of God could display such power over human authority. Not only before the violent mob was this divine authority manifest, but before the might of imperial Rome as well, for when Pilate insolently enquired, "Answerest Thou nothing? Knowest Thou not that I have power to crucify Thee and power to release Thee?" Jesus replied with the assurance of sonship. "Thou couldst have no power at all against Me except it were given thee from above." John 19:10-12.

Therefore let it be known with truth and assurance that the sons of God belong in all things to a higher realm. Unto this high realm many are now proceeding, and from it the world will be filled with the knowledge and government of the Lord.

The following remarkable prophecy, given in the year 1619, forcefully confirms the truths written above. We quote it in its entirety for your blessing and benefit. Please read and re-read it, for its truths are profound - author unknown.

"There shall be a total and full redemption by Christ. This is a hidden mystery not to be understood without the revelation of the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit is at hand to reveal the same unto all holy seekers and loving enquirers. The completion of such a redemption is withheld and abstracted by the seals of Revelation. Wherefore as the Spirit of God shall open seal after seal, so shall this redemption come to be revealed, both particularly and universally. In the gradual opening of the mystery of redemption in Christ doth consist the unsearchable wisdom of God, which may continually reveal new and fresh things to the worthy seeker. In order to which the ark of the testimony in heaven shall be opened before the end of this age, and the living testimony herein contained shall be unsealed.

"The presence of the divine ark (Christ) will constitute the life of this virgin church, and wherever this body is there must the ark of necessity be. The unsealing of the living testimony with the ark of God must begin the promulgation of the everlasting gospel of the kingdom. The proclamation of the testimony will be as the sounding of a trumpet to "alarm" the nations of professed Christendom. Authority shall be given by Christ to the putting an end to all controversies concerning the true church that is born of the New Jerusalem mother. His decision will be the actual sealing of the body of Christ with the name (or authority) of God, giving them a commission to act by the same. This new name (or authority) will distinguish them from the seven thousand names of Babylon.

"The election and preparation of this virgin church is to be after a secret and hidden manner, as David in his ministry was chosen and anointed by the prophet of the Lord, yet was not admitted to the outward profession of the kingdom for a considerable time afterward. Of the stem of David a virgin church, which hath known nothing of a man or human constitution is to be born, and it will require some time for it to get out of the minority and arrive at full mature age. The birth of the virgin church was typified by St. John's vision where the great wonder appeared in heaven, bringing forth her first born, that was caught up to the throne of God (or identified with the authority of God). For as a virgin woman brought forth Christ after the flesh, so shall a virgin church bring forth the first born after the Spirit, who shall be endowed with the seven spirits of God. This church so brought forth and sealed with the mark of divine authority will have no bonds or impositions; but the holy unction among these new born spirits will be all and all.

"There is not at this day (1619) visible upon the earth such a church; all profession being found light when weighed in the balances, therefore they are rejected by the supreme judge, which rejection will be for this cause that out of them may come a new and glorious church. Then shall the glory of God and the Lamb so rest upon this typical tabernacle that it shall be called the tabernacle of wisdom, and though it is not now known in visibility, yet it shall be seen as coming out of the wilderness within a short time. Then will it go on to multiply and propagate itself universally, not only to the number of the first born (144,000) but also to the remnant of the seed, against whom the dragon will make war continually. Wherefore the spirit of David shall revive in this church and most especially in some elect members of it as the blossoming root. These will have might given them to overcome the dragon and his angels even as David overcame Goliath and the Philistine army.

"This will be the standing up of the great prince Michael, and it will be as the appearing of Moses against Pharaoh in order that the chosen seed may be brought out of hard servitude. Egypt doth figure this servile creation under which Abraham's seed groans, but a prophet and a most prophetical generation will the Most High raise up who shall deliver His people by the force of spiritual arms; for which there must be raised up certain head powers to bear the first office, who are to be persons in favor with God whose dread and fear shall fall on all nations, visible and invisible, because the mighty acting power of the Holy Spirit shall rest upon them. For Christ will appear in some chosen vessels to bring into the Promised Land the New Creation state.

"Thus Moses, Joshua, and Aaron may be considered types of some upon whom the same Spirit will come; yet in greater proportion. Whereby they shall make way for the ransomed to return to Mi. Zion; but none shall stand under God but those who have become "tried" stones after the pattern and similitude of Christ. This will be a fiery trial through which a very few will be able to pass or bear up in it; whereby the waiters for this visible breaking forth are strictly charged to holdfast, and wait together in the unity of pure love.

"This trial will be of absolute necessity to all for the clearing away of all remaining infirmities of the natural mind, and the burning of all wood, hay, and stubble, for nothing must remain in the fire, for as a refiner shall Hz purify the sons of the kingdom. There will be some who will be fully redeemed, being clothed upon with a priestly garment after the Melchisedec order. This will qualify them for governing authority. Therefore it is required on their part to suffer the Spirit of burning and fanning of the fiery breath, searching every part within them until they arrive at a Fixed Body from whence the wonders are to flow out.

"Upon this body will be the fixation of the Urim and Thummin that are the portion of the Melchisedec priesthood whose descent is not counted in the genealogy of that creation which is under the fall, but in another genealogy which is a new creation. Hence these priests will have a deep inward search and divine sight into secret things of deity, will be able to prophesy in a clear ground, not darkly and enigmatically, for they will know what is couched in the first originality of all beings, in the eternal anti-type of nature, and will be able to bring them forth according to the divine counsel and ordination. The Lord sweareth in truth and righteousness that from Abraham's line, according to the Spirit, there shall arise a holy seed, produced and manifested in the last age. The mighty spirit of Cyrus is appointed to lay the foundation of this Third Temple and support it in building. "There are characteristics and marks whereby the pure, virgin church shall be known and distinguished from all others that are low, false, and counterfeit. There must be a manifestation of the Spirit whereby to edify and raise up this church, bringing heaven down upon the earth, and representing here the New Jerusalem state, in order to which Spirits are thus begotten and born of God, ascend to New Jerusalem above where their Head in majesty doth reign. None but those who have ascended and received His glory can condescend and communicate the same, being thereby His representative upon the earth and subordinate priests under Him now; He that has ascended and glorified has made Himself as it were our debtor; consequently He will not be wanting in qualifying and furnishing certain high and principal instruments who shall be most humble, and as little regarded as David was, whom He will dignify with honor and priestly sovereignty for drawing to them the scattered flocks, and gathering them into one-fold out of all nations.

"Therefore there should be a holy emulation and ambition stirred up among the bands of believers that they may be of the first fruits unto Him that is risen from the dead, and so be made principal agents for Him and with Him, that they may be, if possible, of the number of the First-born of the New Jerusalem mother. All true waiters of His kingdom in Spirit ought to be numbered among the virgin spirits, to whom this message appertains. Be watchful and quicken your pace."
Great is the mystery of God and great is the mystery of man. Few there be among the earth’s millions who can say with truth, "I know myself, for the heart is deceitful and desperately wicked. Who can know it? Jer. 17:9. Man above all else is spirit. He is not body, soul, and spirit, but spirit, soul, and body. Thus in God’s word he is always defined. 1 Thess. 5:23. But man in the darkness of his understanding has chosen the visible things before the invisible, putting the last things first and the first things last. He has placed the visible and temporal ahead of the invisible and eternal, the passing before the permanent, the earthly clay in preference to the heavenly spirit. The perishing things that belong to time he has chosen to supersede the things that belong to the eternal. Into what deceit he has fallen.

How pitiful is to read of the vain and silly notions advanced by men of science as they vainly hope to preserve man’s mortal flesh which, should it be preserved a thousand years, would at last fade away in obscurity and vanity, for all natural things are in the end vanity and vexation of spirit. Will man in his wicked desire to live without God become so base that he will indeed endeavor to deep freeze the human body, vainly hoping to restore it in some distant century when medical science has perfected a cure for the disease that was about to cause death in that particular person? Those who strive for such things have never learned that man is above all else a spirit being. They have never learned that the body is but an earthly dwelling place for the spirit, which is being prepared here in the lowest parts of the earth to bear the image of the eternal and to perform ministries of light and glory in a realm where pain never stalks and where death never prows nor raises his ugly head. In those endless realms of light, whose fadeless flowers human eye hath not seen and whose deep songs of eternal joy human ear hath not heard, the spirit enters the realm of which it was created and the place in God where it can find rest.

If you, dear man of God, had a clearer vision of what you are, your whole life would take on an entirely different pattern. If you for even one day could forget the continual grinding and groveling enforced by the demands of the physical body to live and walk for that fleeting moment in the light of the eternal spirit which you are, you would never be the same man again. As long as you are not sure that you are above all else a spirit, there will be endless confusion in your life, for the spirit will ceaselessly reach out for communion with God while things of the natural realm, the realm of the body, will seek to crush all eternal desires and choke out all spiritual intercession. You will be driven as a slave by a taskmaster away from the realms of God back to your labor and travail to supply the demands of the corrupt human body of flesh. Never make the mistake of thinking you are the same today as you were before you partook of the divine nature. This wonderful partaking of God’s nature should have been the signal for you to escape the corruption that is in the world through lust to take your glorious flight into purer realms of the spirit. From now on you must know that you are basically and principally a spirit being. You are no longer to confuse your true self with the body of clay in which you dwell, which has held your spirit in bondage, and for which all your labor in time past has been spent. Your physical body is not the true you. The body without the spirit is dead, but the spirit without the body is much more alive than before. The body is the house in which the spirit dwells during its earthly pilgrimage. When these solemn truths are borne home to our minds, we begin to adjust ourselves to the glory of a new life to live where God lives in the spirit.
It is not that the body shall not be a partaker of redemption, for in my flesh shall I see God; but it is the spirit that first partakes of life, then the body is quickened by the spirit that has become completely one with God. The first consideration of the believer is that his spirit should be born from above and it, being thus renewed, should have opportunity to reach beyond the restricting walls of the flesh to commune with God that he, like Christ, may become one spirit with the Father. It is unity with the Father that produces sons of God even as Jesus said, "I and My Father are one." As it was with our blessed Lord, so also will it be for all believers who through the spirit reach out beyond the corrupting powers of the flesh and the feculent powers of the age in which we live that they might become one spirit of the Father. 1 Cor. 6:17.

There is a spirit in man and that spirit is the true man and the true personality. The spirit can never rest satisfied until it rests in God. It ever seeks communion with God and longs with unutterable longing and unceasing desire for fellowship with the Most High. This should not seem strange, for God is the Father of spirits. Heb. 12:9. Therefore it is no wonder if the spirit is restless until it is one with Him.

The spirit that is born of God is renewed in the image of God and God sees it thus, though regretfully we seldom do. Our lack of understanding of our true position in God greatly impedes our spiritual progress, for while we should be growing in grace and growing in God, we seem to be putting forth a vain endeavor to grow into grace or grow into God. It is very simple for a tree to grow in a garden where it has been planted, but I see no way by which a tree can grow into a garden. Paul recognizes our position in grace when he says. "Grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ."

When the Philippian jailor came trembling and falling down upon his knees before Paul and Silas, crying, "What must I do to be saved", the answer of the apostle was clear and distinct. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shall be saved." Acts 16:30-31. To believe on Christ means more than to merely believe in Christ. There are many who believe that Jesus was the Christ, the Saviour of the world, who have never cast on Him their hope of eternity that they might be justified freely by His grace, cleansed by His blood, and purged and renewed by His Spirit. Even devils believe in Christ and tremble, but believe on Him they never do. Men do not need religion. They need Christ. They do not need to know doctrine. They need to know Him. Tradition can do nothing for them but cause them to walk in blindness, but Christ is the light of men and the light of the world, and all who follow Him will not walk in darkness but have the light of life. It is not psychology they need to still their troubled spirit. It is Christ. An hour a day spent waiting upon Him in the silence of their bed-chamber with His Word open before their eyes will do a thousand times more to still their troubled nerves and calm their troubled spirit than all the psychology that men can offer.

"They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength." "Wait on the Lord; be of good courage and He shall strengthen thine heart. Wait, I say, on the Lord." "This poor man cried, and the Lord heard him, and saved him out of all his troubles." "Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me."

The calmness and assurance that fills the heart of the man who knows that all things, absolutely all things, are in God's hands can never be measured. Resting in the fathomless depths of eternal wisdom and leaning every moment on arms that are everlasting, he knows that "there shall no evil befall you nor any plague come nigh your dwelling." Then can the inner man sing in the face of every calamity, "The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures. He leadeth me beside still waters. He restoreth my soul. He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake. Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me. Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me. Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies. Thou anointest my head with oil. My cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life;
And I shall dwell in the House of the Lord forever."

What greater comfort could ever be offered the believing heart than the blessed assurance given by David in Psalm 91? "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty. I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress: my God; in Him will I trust. Surely He shall deliver thee from the snare of the fowler and from the noisome pestilence. He shall cover thee with His feathers, and under His wings shall thou trust."

Man with all his religion, his church membership, his preachers and priests, his bishops, cardinals, popes, and the like has not found God. What good, O man, will these things do if after a lifetime of trusting in them and looking to them for help you find yourself dying without knowing Christ? The fineness of temples and the beauty of ceremonial robes will not suffice in that hour. What difference will it make, O man, when thou art dying, whether on a bed or on cold earth thou art lying?

First believe. Come first to know Christ as the almighty and eternal Saviour. Repent of sins and turn from the ways of all the earth. Renounce them all and believe on the Lord Jesus Christ that you may be saved, for, when this has been done, the miracle of the rebirth of the spirit takes place. You are an infant son of God. Henceforth the doors of heaven are open that you may go in and out and find pasture that you may grow in the grace you have so freely received, coming into mature stature and full sonship in Him.

There is not a religious system on earth that can bring you nearer to God. Call them churches if you will. They are not churches. They are whorish religious systems, a deep ditch and a narrow pit. Prov. 23:27. No system can bring you closer to God. Only Christ can do that. "I am the door", said He. "By Me if any man enter in, he shall be saved." John 10:9. Again He increased the clearness of this statement by saying, "I am the door of the sheep". Verse 7. "All that ever came before Me are thieves and robbers." And so they are, for they rob men of communion with God, standing between the seeker and Christ. They are thieves because they are more interested in making man their disciple than that he should know and love Him above all else in the universe.

The reborn spirit is ever reaching out to God. It is ever seeking God's face and God's presence and is restless and dissatisfied until it finds rest in Him. The spirit longs to be in God's image as a caged eagle longs to burst the restraining bars that it may rise into the celestial realm where it really belongs. Some years ago, while visiting a large zoo, I stopped beside a huge cage to watch the birds. The cage appeared to be at least one hundred feet in diameter and perhaps fifty feet in height. It was with great interest that I watched the score or more of varieties as they ran about picking up eatables thrown to them by the crowd. After admiring them with interest for some time, my eyes for no particular reason strayed upward to the top of the cage where to my surprise and delight sat a great eagle on the highest perch. Heedless of the squawking birds below and oblivious to the crowds of people he sat at the very summit, peering through the restraining bars and looking with unblinking eyes to realms above, longing to spread his mighty wings to roam the eerie regions where he belonged. How I wished I could climb up there and cut the bars to set him free! For eagles are types of God's sons who long to burst the binding fetters of the natural to soar to purer realms far above the sordid and slavish demands of the physical body and the carnal mind.

Far too often we meet with good people who wander about from here to there, trying to find a congregation where they will be happy and satisfied. They look for what they think will be the ideal church. Such people are often known by their fellows as "church tramps" because they go back and forth like Noah's dove and find no rest for the sole of their feet. But it is not the sole of their feet that needs rest. It is the soul within that is longing for communion with its creator. Misguided man understands not the longing of the spirit within. He does not know that the deep yearning that fills his breast must find its satisfaction in communion with Christ and not in fraternizing or chumming with other Christians. He does not know that the fellowship he seeks with people is often the thief that robs him of the fellowship with God for which his spirit craves. Learn then, O man of God, to fellowship with Christ, rejoicing in His Holy Spirit, communing with the Father, becoming one with Him in all wisdom and spiritual understanding, walking in His will and doing His bidding, being His sheep and knowing His voice and not the voice of strangers.
"Oh that I had wings like a dove!" said the psalmist, "for then would I fly away and be at rest." Psa. 55:6. But where, pray, would he fly? Would he fly to some great congregation there to listen to the sermons of preachers who are interested in building up their little kingdom? I tell you, nay! He would fly away to the secret place of the Most High to abide under the shadow of the Almighty, to hear His voice and abide in His presence, for the spirit, being one essence with the Father, is truly happy in His presence alone.

The things of the Spirit of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God; but the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God. Cf. 1 Cor 2:10, 11. I am at a loss to know whether the spirit here refers to God's Spirit or man's spirit, but why should we not believe that both the Spirit of God and the reborn human spirit are active in their searching and longing for the great hidden mysteries of God? The spirit that is born of God is a partaker of God's Spirit and is one spirit and one essence with the Father. It is not the well-trained human mind that comprehends the deep things of God, but the reborn spirit that leaps within at the revelation of the Lord.

There is a very great misunderstanding among God's people today. Seldom do they ever realize or consider that the natural man is an enemy of God. The natural mind is completely blind to the things of God. It does not receive the things of God, neither can it know them. It can never be trained to know them. Great stress in our day is placed upon learning, but it is not education that reveals the mysteries of God. And, if you will bear with my boldness, I must declare that education without God is in reality great ignorance. The more of it we have the lower our morals sink and the more loose and ungodly the nation becomes. The corrupt religious moves in the earth today come forth from the minds of the highly educated as the unclean spirits like frogs came forth from the smoke of the pit. Rev. 16:13. The "God is dead" movement does not spring from the hearts of the unlearned and illiterate, but from the highest learning in the land, but learning, alas, in the natural realm where God can never be known. Indeed, their God is dead, for the God they imagine never lived.

The Babylon of religious confusion that permeates the whole world like leaven is the direct result of the activities of the carnal mind as it wrestles with spiritual problems that it can neither comprehend nor touch with one of its fingers. While the world cries, "Sirs, we would see Jesus," the preacher often presents another Jesus whom we cannot receive, (2 Cor. 11:4), for the Jesus he preaches and the law he expounds are all too often the product of his natural mind and not the glory of a revelation.

The wonder of the ministry of the apostles was not their unexcelled learning, as it was easily seen that they were "unlearned and ignorant men", but the thing that captivated the souls of the people was that "they had seen Jesus". Acts 4:13. If you live in the natural realm, then all that emanates from you is natural. Your most polished sentences will shrink to the realm you are in. Though you preached one of Paul's sermons, it would be without effect unless you lived where he lived in the Spirit. The natural mind weighs the spirit down with learning and heaviness, for much study is a weariness to the flesh, and you may be sure it is an even greater weariness to the spirit. But if you live in the Spirit, those who listen to you or read what you write are carried, momentarily at least, into the same realm where you live to behold with open vision the things that you behold, even as the servant of Elisha momentarily beheld the things that were always familiar to his master. 2 Kings. 6:17.

As there was a great gulf fixed between Abraham and Dives (Luke 16:25-26), so also there is a great gulf fixed between the natural and the spiritual realms. There is no bridge from the one to the other; and so it will remain until the things that were gain to us are counted loss for Christ and our new born spirits, like flowers bursting through the cold earth, reach into the pure and undefiled realms of the spirit where God abides and the natural mind never yet has entered.

It is the reborn spirit alone that reaches out to God. The spirit alone prays according to the mind and will of God. While the human understanding is completely fruitless, the spirit is rejoicing in the wonderful will of God, leaping across the impassable gulf and impenetrable barriers to the bosom of the Father. So it was that the apostle said, "My spirit prayeth, but my understanding is unfruitful." 1 Cor. 14:14. This is a secret of inestimable value in every intercession if we by God's grace can learn the truth of it. It is not easy to explain how the spirit prays while the understanding is unfruitful. It must, I think, be experienced rather than explained. How many millions of God's people have experienced that inward groaning as the spirit reached out to God!
More than likely there were no words coming forth to express the longing felt by the spirit within, or perhaps there was some simple expression as "Oh, Lord!" or "Dear heavenly Father!" that was somehow expressing the deep but mighty and inexpressible longing of the spirit for communion with its Lord. The saint of God who thus groans out his unutterable longings to the Father would never be understood by the ordinary Christian whose prayers are often on his lips but seldom in his heart. Do not mistake the noisy pulpit prayer that so often is nothing more than part of the order of a service as being a prayer of the spirit. It is more often the prayer of John Doe than the prayer of the spirit. Long ago our Lord condemned the Pharisees for their public prayers, saying, "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye devour widows' houses, and for a pretense make long prayer: therefore ye shall receive the greater damnation." Matt. 23:14. Much cress hypocrisy is often whitewashed over by loud, long, and what appears to be fervent prayer.

Consider now how great these two statements are: My spirit prayeth - but my understanding is unfruitful. There are two things definitely involved here, first the unfruitfulness and dearth of the natural understanding, and secondly, the effectual prayer of the Spirit, who is acquainted with the will and purpose of God. God is not interested in answering the multitude of requests that come forth from mere human desire couched in the form of prayer. God is interested only in the things that concern His will and His eternal purpose. Why should God be interested in satisfying human demands since the natural mind is His enemy, asking for and demanding a thousand things to gratify itself with no concern about God's will at all?

For decades it has been taught that it is always God's will to heal the body. But it is not always God's will to heal the body. What benefit is there for the body to prosper and be in health if the soul must remain infirm and crippled, stifled by the demands of a physical body intent on satisfying its own lusts? "I wish above all things that thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth." Third John 2. Verily, if it were always God's will to heal the body, then you may be sure He would always do His will and heal, but the very fact that ninety-nine per cent or more of the people are not healed should scream the fact that it is not God's will to heal under existing circumstances.

If God's dear children would turn the searchlight within, they would see that the multitude of their spoken prayers are nothing more or less than the desires of their own hearts, which they, alas, imagine to be the will and plan of God. I have seen people almost beat their heads against the wall in their determination to pray a revival into their church, but no revival came. "Well," you ask, "why did not God answer prayer?" The answer is simple. The people were praying for something that it was not God's will to do. "But," you reply, "was it not God's will to revive His people? Was it not God's will to save souls?" The answer to that is simple also. God always does the things that are His will. Therefore, had it been His will, He would have done it.

The thing that many fail to see is that the people who pray in this manner are very often more concerned about seeing their prayer answered than they are about God's will and purpose. They are concerned that a revival should come, a revival after their own liking, that they might have a thriving church and a real spiritual boom. But the idea never enters their minds that God, having now called His elect, may now choose to scatter the flock as He did in Jerusalem long ago. Acts 8:1, 4.

Oh, that men would heed the words of Jeremiah! The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked; who can know it? Jer. 17:9. So, you see, it is never safe to ask God for anything that proceeds from the natural mind, for the natural mind will hide its true ambitions behind a cloak of fervent prayer, availing itself of the subtle suffix, "We ask it in Jesus' name," or, "We ask it all according to Thy will." But the natural mind cannot ask anything according to God's will and it may as well not try. "When thou standest in the presence of a prince, let thy words be few. And put a knife to thy throat if thou be a man given to appetite." Let this apply to our prayers in the presence of God.

Paul the apostle further demonstrates the unfruitfulness of our human understanding by saying, "We know not what we should pray for as we ought." Rom. 8:26. Whether we wish to believe it or not, this is the naked truth, for man, whether he be a Christian or not, simply does not know what to pray for as he ought. He thinks he knows and he goes right ahead making all manner of requests according to his own will, but if he would stop his talking long enough to do some considering, he would see that his prayers are born, not of the will of God, but of his own wishing. Thus his wish is not only father to his thoughts, but father to his prayer as well. How often have you heard Christians dreamily say, "I wish the Lord would send us a revival." "I wish the Lord would save my husband." "I wish the Lord would heal my body." "I wish the Lord would send us a good rain," or some such thing. Then they will make request in the congregation desiring the people to pray that these wishes of theirs, which they call prayer requests, will be answered. Then when such requests go unanswered for years we wonder why the Lord did not hear us. Why should He hear us when the request is born, not of His spirit, but of the natural mind?

"I asked for life, and this is what He gave me.

My lot is hard; my tears flow like the rain. I asked for hours gay with sunshine spattered, But, lo, my waking hours are filled with pain.

How could I know that crushing brings forth fragrance like perfume from some crushed and bleeding rose? That in the process of my better making, God used the methods He approved and chose?

"As heaven is higher than the earth, so are My ways higher than your ways and My thoughts than your thoughts." There is far too much rushing into God's presence with our boots on, far too much lifting up of unholy hands, far too much stepping where angels fear to tread, and far too little preparation of the heart in waiting for the spirit of God to put the yearnings of the Almighty in the spirit and on the lips of man.

Many years ago, when I was nineteen, a much older brother taught me a lesson I have never forgotten. "George," he said, "Learn to kneel for hours before God without saying anything." Then he added with simplicity, "I have found that to be a great blessing through life." I must admit that, when I first heard this statement, it seemed like a fruitless and somewhat unnecessary waste of time; nevertheless, I began to practice it. When I did, I discovered some strange and remarkable things. First I found that it often took me an hour or more to get rid of the thousand human thoughts that crowded like unwanted guests into the parlor of my mind. I found that my heart was far more charged with earthly things than with heavenly things and far more filled with my own fertile ambition than with God's will, but I also found that, as I waited like Mary at His blessed feet, He began to unfold to me the secrets that are hidden from natural men with natural minds, but which are disclosed to those who thus wait long in His presence to drink deeply of His Spirit. Now I shall testify that this silent waiting in His presence has been a blessing to me also throughout my life.

The mysteries of God are always hidden from the wise and the prudent, but are revealed to those who like innocent babes come into His presence. Oh, that men would wait upon the Lord! Oh, that men would cease from their constant requesting and everlasting demanding, taking time instead to wait upon the Lord, until He Jills the spiritual mind with the unutterable longings of God! Refuse, then, to trust your own desires. Refuse to approach God with your own requests. God is not interested in those who think they will be heard for their much speaking. Matt. 6:7. He is interested only in the things that concern His immutable will. Our blessed Lord taught us this lesson when in great agony He prayed in the Garden of Gethsemane, saying, "Oh My father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from Me: nevertheless, not as I will but as Thou wilt." And may we all thank God that the cup did not pass from Him, but He drank it completely according to the Father's will for the salvation of us all.

Let us now look at the other side of the question. My spirit prayeth. Having taught us that our understanding is unfruitful, God has not left His people bound hand and foot by the inability of the natural mind to pray according to the will of God, but He has given us freely of His Spirit. He has touched our spirit with the life of His own eternal Spirit and we have been reborn, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible by the word of God that liveth and abideth forever.

There is no way to measure the longing of the reborn human spirit after God. "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after Thee, O God. My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God: When shall I come and appear before God? My tears have been my meat day and night, while they continually say unto me, Where is thy God?" Psa. 42:1-3. David knew what it was to have lovers and friends and kinsmen stand afar off (Psa. 38:11) in complete indifference and lack of understanding while he cried in the agony of his spirit, "Lord,
When Paul said, "We know not what we should pray for as we ought", he spoke of the natural mind of the Christian, and the natural mind simply does not know what the will of God is. Consequently, it cannot pray aright and its prayers, therefore, must go unanswered, for God is not trying to prove His power to anyone nor is He trying to please anyone. Rather, He would that we should know His will and walk according to His purposes. Then He will help us and that right early. For this reason, then, and in this connection Paul has written, "Likewise the Spirit also helpeth our infirmities; for we know not what we should pray for as we ought; but the Spirit Himself (not itself) maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered. And He that searcheth the hearts (God) knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit, because He maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God." Rom. 8:26-27. There is enough truth in those two verses to hold our meditation for a lifetime, and there is enough truth to completely transform the prayer life of any saint of God from the poverty of unanswered human requests to the richness and fullness of the prayer of the spirit that is always answered.

"The Spirit also helpeth our infirmities, for we know not what we should pray for as we ought." The greatest infirmity of the whole human race is lack of knowledge, and the greatest infirmity of every Christian is his lack of knowledge and understanding concerning God's will. Man is not only self-righteous. He is also self-willed. As the self-righteous are devoid of God's righteousness, so the self-willed are devoid of God's will. We reach the righteousness of God when we repent of our own righteousness and, believing on Jesus Christ, we receive the righteousness of God. In like manner, when we are delivered from the self-will of the natural mind, the Spirit comes to our aid and makes request to God according to God's will. You have heard it said that God always answers prayer. But no! that is not the truth! God turns a deaf ear to the demands of the natural mind however loud they may be shouted or however often they may be repeated, but His ear is attentive to the prayer that rises from the spirit and from a heart that has been cleansed and made pure from human desires. All other prayer than this is idle fancy.

There is no way by which these truths can be explained by use of the English language or of any other language on earth. These are spiritual things and are therefore quite beyond the realm of human explanation or definition. Even the apostle Paul himself left off his explanations to dip richly into the realm of experience when he said, "The Spirit maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered." Rom. 8:27. In Wey-mouth's translation we have these significant words: "The Spirit Himself pleads for us in yearnings that can find no words, and the searcher of hearts knows what the Spirit's meaning is, because His intercessions for the saints are in harmony with God's will."

The people of God who have experienced the "groanings which cannot be uttered," the sighings of the spirit that find no expression in human words, do not need my frail explanation, for they know by experience that unquenchable yearning within the human breast, the sighings of the inner man, the spirit, which can only be interpreted by the Lord who searcheth the hearts. Though such sighings are to the human onlooker mere nonsense, yet to the mind of God they are true spiritual worship and true prayer. It was of this kind of worship Jesus spoke when He said to the woman at the well, "The true worshipper must worship in spirit and in truth, for the Father seeketh such to worship Him."

When Paul wrote to the church at Corinth, he left an open secret for all who long after God with unutterable longings. Would it not seem right to you, since certain longings are unutterable and beyond the limits of human tongues to be expressed, that God would in omnipotence bridge this impassable gulf by putting into the lips of men a supernatural tongue, a heavenly language, which could without let or hindrance freely make request according to even the unknown will and purpose of God? This very thing the Lord has done for those who will avail themselves of it. God has provided another tongue, unknown even to him that speaketh it, but fully known to God, for it, being the language of the spirit, is capable of bypassing the natural mind to freely speak the mysteries of God. Let us then take earnest heed to these few scriptures, which explain so well the things we have spoken of. "For he that speaketh in an unknown tongue speaketh not unto men, but unto God; for no man understandeth him; howbeit, in the Spirit he speaketh mysteries." 1 Cor. 14:2. Then again: "For if I pray in an unknown tongue, my spirit prayeth, but my understanding is unfruitful. What is it then? I will pray with the spirit, and I will pray with the understanding also." 1 Cor. 14:14. All praying and singing in the spirit is a great edification to the spiritual man, a blessed uplift and an almost unbelievable building up of the inner man. Therefore he adds, "He that speaketh in an unknown tongue edifieth (buildeth up) himself: but he that prophesieth edifieth the church." 1 Cor. 14:4.

When our blessed Lord Jesus Christ hung upon the cross, He uttered seven short significant cries, each one full of meaning and dwarfing human understanding as the sun outshines a candle, but none more meaningful than the cry, "I thirst." Perhaps our first reaction will be like that of the men who filled a sponge with vinegar to press it to His lips, for indeed His physical thirst must have been unbelievably great because of the torture He endured. But when He had tasted the vinegar, He would not drink, for this cry had come forth from His spirit and, being borne upon the wings of God's Spirit, it penetrated to every corner of heaven and the secret places of earth.

There is one God and one mediator between God and man, the man Christ Jesus. Jesus Christ was God incarnate. He was God manifest in the flesh. He was God and He was man. He was God-man. He who was in the form of God "thought it not robbery to be equal with God: but made Himself of no reputation, and took upon Him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of man: And being found in fashion as a man, He humbled Himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." Phil. 2:6,8. Nothing less than a God-man could be a mediator between God and man. For this reason the sayings of Christ from His cross are the more significant. As God He said to the thief, "Today shall thou be with Me in paradise", and as man He said to God, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." And when He cried, "I thirst", I think we will have to enlarge our understanding that we may stand where He stood at that moment and where He still stands to day. On the one hand this Son of Man was expressing the insatiable desire of man for communication with God, and on the other hand this Son of God was expressing the insatiable desire of God for communication and fellowship with man. Never in the story of all creation did words more eloquently express the unspeakable longings of the human spirit for communion with God than was expressed by those two agonizing words that fell from His parched lips, "I thirst." And never in the annals of all heaven did God ever express so intense a desire for communion with man as He did when through His blessed mediator He cried, "I thirst."

From the Garden of Eden where our Lord called, "Adam, where art thou?", to the new Jerusalem where "the Spirit and the bride say, 'Come' " our blessed Lord has been ever thirsting to bring man back to communion with Himself. This same thirst that is born of Him He hath also placed in the hearts of His people who, though they know not how to pray as they ought, have been empowered through the Spirit to make intercession with deep sighings and unutterable longings according to God's divine will. Such thirsting on the part of God for man and such thirsting on the part of man for God cannot go long unrequited, but they will rejoice as one on that ground where mercy and truth are met together and righteousness and peace have kissed each other. Psa. 85:10.

"Deep calleth unto deep at the noise of the waterspouts." Psa. 42-7. A waterspout is a narrow, rapidly spinning funnel-shaped cloud of water, similar to a great whirlwind or tornado, occurring at sea. The whirlwind agitates the water into a cloud of spray, drawing the water up its vortex often to a height of several hundred feet and sometimes lasting half an hour or more before it disperses and collapses into the sea. Who can plumb the depths of the ocean or who can fathom the depths of the human spirit, much less the Spirit of God? In scripture water often represents people (Rev. 17:15), and wind is likened to the spirit (John 3:8). Waterspouts are caused by the action of the wind as the whirlwind draws the mighty deep of the ocean up into itself as the deep of the ocean calls to the deep of the sky. Nature cannot endure a vacuum but fills it immediately. There is an emptiness in the deep of the human spirit that only God can fill and there is an emptiness in the deep of God that only man can fill. Thus the deep of the reborn spirit is ever reaching out for God, and the deep of the Spirit of God is ever reaching out to man.

While yet my understanding remains unfruitful, my spirit prayeth, and He that searcheth the hearts knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit, for He maketh intercession for the saints according to God's will. Even now, while we meditate upon these wonders, the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now, and not only they but ourselves also, which have the first fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within... ourselves, waiting for the adoption (the sonship), to wit, (which means), the redemption of our bodies. Rom. 8:22-23.

"Why, the sufferings of the present I deem not worth considering compared with the glory soon to be disclosed to us. All creation is yearning, longing to see the manifestation of the sons of God. For the creation was made subject to futility not of its own choice, but by the will of Him who so subjected it; yet with the hope that at last the creation itself would be set free from the servitude of decay to enjoy the liberty that comes with the glory of the children of God." Rom. 8:18-21. Weymouth.

Never in the history of all the world was there a time when it was so necessary for saints to be in harmony with God. Never, not even in Noah's day, was there greater carnality and wickedness, whether in existing forms of religion or in the world itself. With all man's learning and with all his church-going there is an unutterable dearth of knowledge of God. While millions throng to meetings to salve their consciences with a form of worship, Jesus Christ is left outside. Those who know God separate and apart from all else are in an unbelievable minority.

"When the Son of man cometh, will He find faith on the earth?" Yes, He will, but He will not find it in the great congregations or among the crowds. He will find it among those few who, leaving all others, cling only to Him. The hour is now here when "neither in Jerusalem nor in this mountain shall men worship the Father, but the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth, for the Father seeketh such to worship Him."

The time has come for men to wait on the Lord, and wait patiently for Him, lest coming suddenly He find us sleeping. It is by waiting long and alone in His presence that we come to know Him, and it is here in this secret pavilion that He fills our spiritual minds with His thoughts, His purposes, and His will. It is here that He empties the soul of all human desire, of appetite, avarice, and earthly ambition, and, though my understanding should for a time remain unfruitful, it is here that my spirit prayeth and maketh intercession according to God's will.

Come in, come in, Oh Tide of Grace!
   Fill every parched vacancy.
   Flood over all; fill every space.
   Come, Tide of Grace, from Calvary!

CHAPTER TWO
THE PREPARATIONS OF THE HEART

"The preparations of the heart in man, and the answer of the tongue, is from the Lord." (Prov. 16:1)

In this chapter we will concern ourselves, not with the "answer of the tongue" as mentioned in the scripture above, but with four important things concerning the "preparations of the heart" to make it a fit vessel to receive truth. I have recently had the experience of beginning to write a message concerning a truth of great importance and feeling compelled to lay it aside for the time being because of the inability of the majority to receive the truth of it. This will not be the first time that truth has had to be withheld until the hearts of men were prepared even as a field is prepared and made ready to receive and nourish the living seed placed in its earthly womb. Well do we remember the occasion when our blessed Lord said to His disciples, "I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now." John 16:12. And Paul likewise, having commenced to teach the Hebrew Christians concerning the excellent wonders of the priesthood of Melchisedec, was forced to cut short his teaching while he rebuked them soundly for the dullness of their minds and lack of spiritual understanding, saying, "Of whom (Melchisedec) we have many things to say, and hard to be uttered, seeing ye are dull of hearing. For when for the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need that one teach you again which be the first principles of the oracles of God; and are become such as have need of milk, and not of strong meat. For everyone that useth milk is unskillful in the word of righteousness: for he is a babe. But strong meat belongeth to them that are of full age, even those who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil." See Heb. 5:1-14.

How unspeakably sad it is to find that in our day, two thousand years after the above rebuke was written and with the kingdom of God coming on apace, millions of Christians are still babes at the breast! Worse still, I fear, they are not even at the breast where they could receive the true milk of the word, but are on the bottle, receiving milk, which was never intended for spiritual growth. My heart sinks and my soul is filled with a sadness which is beyond expression when people who have been professing Christians for many years, often claiming the fullness of the Spirit, write to me demanding to know what I think about water baptism, what I teach about the Sabbath, what I think about Easter, why I do not write something about the way people dress, what I teach about the rapture of the church, where I stand on the communion, what I think about the gifts of the Spirit, and the laying on of hands! Honestly!! Did you never read Heb. 6:1-2?

Did you ever wonder what Jesus must have suffered in His Spirit when in the days of His earthly ministry He traveled through the land demonstrating the power and glory of that kingdom age which is yet to come, healing every imaginable disease, delivering men from the power of sin and Satan, demonstrating the mastery of the sons of God over the elements of sea and air, walking on water, miraculously feeding vast multitudes, speaking with the authority of the sons of God, and unfolding mysteries hidden from ages and dispensations, and then, right in the middle of that display of supernal glory, we are told, "Then came to Jesus scribes and Pharisees, which were of Jerusalem, saying, Why do Thy disciples transgress the tradition of the elders? for they wash not their hands when they eat bread." Matt. 15:1-2. Such a childish, petty, peevish, irrelevant question! What a sinking feeling it must have given our Lord to find men who were leaders and teachers asking such asinine questions, casting away the key of knowledge, and blocking the pathway to the distant peaks of revelation by stumbling over such human tradition as the washing of pots and cups and hands! They did not care how much a poor man suffered the pain and inconvenience of a withered arm just so long as their childish tradition about the Sabbath was respected. It was perfectly alright for a lame man to lie forty years in misery at the pool of Bethesda, but he must not be healed nor carry his bed on the Sabbath day. A blind man could grope in darkness from his birth and they cared not a straw for that, but the Man who made him whole must certainly be of the devil because He healed him on the Sabbath day.

How I admire our wonderful Lord and Christ for walking rough shod over their worthless traditions and calling them hypocrites, vipers, serpents, and liars for drawing nigh to God with their lips while their hearts were far removed from Him! Indeed, they were whitened sepulchers full of dead men's bones, clean on the outside but vile and rotten and stinking within. I tell you, if Jesus were preaching in the church system today, Christians would still come demanding to know how He stood in relation to their doctrines, voiding the glory of the kingdom for the sake of their tradition, and making Him an offender for a word.

What does it matter what I think? What I think or what you think will change neither jot nor tittle of the truth. If men are guided by what I think, they will probably be wrong. The question to be decided is whether or not what I am saying is the truth. If it is, then let us walk in the glory of its light. Let us repent of the gross carnality that everywhere darkens our pathway that we may walk in the light of Him who dwelleth in the light, which no man can approach unto. 1 Tim. 6:16.

Never was there written a more faithful word of truth than this: "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him. But God hath revealed them to us by His Spirit, for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God." 1 Cor. 2:9-10. According to this scripture we must conclude that there is one way and only one way by which spiritual truth can be received and understood by the human heart, and that one way is by the illumination of the Holy Spirit of God. It is when He, the Spirit of truth, takes the things of God and shows them unto us that we see, understand, comprehend and enter into those truths hidden from every natural mind from the very foundation of the ages. Decide then in your heart immediately that the deep things of God cannot be learned in schools, colleges, or universities. They cannot be dug out of books of learning. They cannot even be received from sermons though Isaiah, Paul, or Jesus were to preach them to you. Truth must be revealed by the Spirit; otherwise it cannot, simply cannot, be received.

"Why do you speak in parables?" the disciples asked their Lord. "Because to you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom, but to them it is not given" was His revealing reply. How helpless, then, we are if the Holy Spirit is not present to open these hidden things to our minds!

What hinders revelation? "Whom shall He teach knowledge? and whom shall He make to understand doctrine? Them that are weaned from the milk, and drawn from the breasts." Isa. 28:9. This passage of scripture very forcefully teaches that true spiritual knowledge and true doctrine are never entrusted to men and women who subsist on spiritual milk. They are yet babies in spiritual things and no more capable of receiving the knowledge or doctrine of God than an infant of days is capable of understanding the arts and sciences of the natural world. According to Peter newborn babes are to desire "the sincere milk of the word" (1 Pet. 2:2), and they need not be deprived of it, but according to Paul strong meat belongs to them who are of full age (Heb. 5:14), that is, Christians who are no longer "little children", but developing "young men" and mature "fathers". 1 John 2:12-13.

Now let us notice what class of people it is who are to be considered spiritual babies and let us also notice in particular who those Christians are who are capable of digesting nothing stronger than milk and who consequently are never able to see "the deep things of God." What I now write will deeply wound many who read it, but it will be a blessed wounding, indeed, if thereby the eyes of their understanding are opened and repentance may be followed by the receiving of great spiritual truth and the receiving of spiritual truth followed by spiritual maturity.

Hear now what the inspired apostle says: "And I, brethren, could not speak unto you as unto spiritual, but as unto carnal, even as unto babes in Christ. I have fed you with milk, and not with meat: for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able. For ye are yet carnal." 1 Cor. 3:1-3. There should be no difficulty for even the most sluggish and unspiritual mind to see that carnality is the curse that keeps Christians in spiritual infancy. It alone is capable of denying them that strong meat which alone can bring them to spiritual maturity.

Let us now investigate what particular carnality it is upon which Paul puts such forceful emphasis. He does not here speak of adultery, theft, gluttony, uncleanness, lasciviousness, or any such thing, but he fastens his attention upon that one carnality which is the root cause of all carnality, successfully robbing Christians of spiritual growth during all the ages, that carnality which has made spiritual dwarfs of prospective giants and hidden from their eyes the glory of those things which eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man. That carnality for which he rebuked the church at Corinth is the same wretched carnality that in our day curses the entire professing church system. It is the carnality of sectarianism and denominationalism. I think it is completely reasonable to believe that 1 Cor. 3:3-4 is speaking of the sectarian spirit and the entire sectarian system. When Paul said, "Whereas there is among you envying, and strife, and divisions, are ye not carnal, and walk as men? For while one saith, I am of Paul; and another, I am of Apollos; are ye not carnal?", he was emphasizing the divisive tendency that inevitably follows wherever and whenever men choose to call themselves by some name whether it be Paul, Apollos, Cephas, Luther, Wesley, Knox, or Pentecostal, Apostolic, Baptist, or any one of a thousand other names that purport to describe some distinctive testimony. "Is Christ divided? Was Paul crucified for you? or were ye baptized in the name of Paul?" 1 Cor. 1:13.

I repeat without the slightest hesitation or without fear of any successful contradiction that sectarianism in all its forms, and denominationalism in all its forms, is the carnality that exceeds all other forms of carnality. It is the root of the tree of carnality and from its bad and discordant root of bitterness all branches of carnality derive their food and subsist as a green bay tree. It is this most devilish form of carnality that stunts all spiritual growth and keeps Christians drinking the milk of infancy when they should long ago have become spiritual fathers. Every Christian must repent of it and turn from it with all his heart if spiritual growth is to be attained.

How often I hear the time, worn objection, "We need these denominations to keep evil out". You lie, my friend! You do not keep evil out. Evil is rampant among you. It is God who is kept out and with Him the unfolding of His plan for the ages. You say we need these things so we will have a place for the five ministries to develop, but that statement is made only because people have failed to understand, first - what the true body of Christ is, and second - what a true ministry is. Surely you will agree that our true pattern, the Lord Jesus Christ, was an apostle, prophet, evangelist, pastor and teacher all in one as well as a worker of miracles, a healer and a speaker of wisdom, and all these ministries functioned perfectly outside the carnal conglomeration of man-made systems. He taught in the temple, raised the dead in the cemetery, by the highway, or in the bedroom, and proved His Sonship while walking the waves of Galilee. Seek not to defend and justify that which God has cursed and which in itself is the very root from which the confused and divided image of Babylon has sprung. What nonsense is it, which teaches that we need carnal institutions to promote spiritual ministries?
Let every one who has ears to hear stop and take earnest heed, because the Spirit of God now warns a carnal people, divided and held in infancy by the sectarian system, that, unless they repent of their division, mourn the carnality of their sectarian ways, and, forsaking all, go unto Him without the camp bearing His reproach, they are doomed to spend the remainder of their lives in spiritual infancy and in outer darkness insofar as the deep things of God are concerned.

Not only has denominationalism and all forms of sectarianism been used of Satan to dwarf and blind the minds of Christians but the division which these wickedly uphold has also been the darkness which has blinded the eyes of sinners for whom Christ died. How can sinful men who see nothing but war and strife and division among Christians ever believe that Christ has given them peace? I exhort, therefore, that all men and all women do now repent of this wickedness, and, casting out the evil spirit of sectarianism from their hearts, flee unto Christ, who is head of that mystical body, the true church, which will reign with Him, undivided, in the ages of the ages yet to come. Amen.

The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; neither can he know them, for they are spiritually discerned. While we are "at home" in the body, we are absent from the Lord; and I think you will agree with me that most of us are much more "at home" in the body than we are in the spirit. But you will also agree that the spirit is much more important than the body, because the spirit is one essence with God's Spirit while the body is identical with the flesh. "For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live." Rom. 8:13. Even the statement, "The body without the spirit is dead". James 2:26, should lead us to understand that the body itself has no life except what it derives from the spirit. Thus every sin of the flesh is an outrage against the spirit whence it derives its life. Paul taught that, "If the Spirit of Him that raised up Christ from the dead dwelleth in you, He that raised up Christ shall also quicken (make alive) your mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in you." Rom. 8:11.

In the days of Noah men were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, which things concern the body and the physical realm only. In our day likewise, as Jesus said it would be, men are eating and drinking, marrying, divorcing, remarrying, and spending themselves into poverty in a vain effort to please and satisfy the flesh, which, of course, can never be done. All labor and effort in our day is for the body and not the spirit. Whether it be food and drink, clothes, shelter, comfort and speed of travel, dope, drugs, wine, women, song, perfume, or tobacco - name it all and you find that all things are either directly or indirectly concerned with the physical realm of the body, which is the flesh, the implacable enemy of the spirit. Even the religious gatherings and conventions of our day put great emphasis on their plush motels for accommodation, their good eating accommodations, and the beautiful buildings in which their meetings are held. How often we hear the deceptive expression, "food, fun, and fellowship"! The truth is that food and fun have no more in common with spiritual fellowship than oil has with water. They are iron mingled with clay. Each is the antithesis of the other. I tell you with solemn sincerity that, while you are thus at home in the body, you will find an absence from the Lord. There may be much frothy verbosity in preaching. There may be clapping of hands, singing of hymns, and shouting and praise, but what good are any of these things if you are the same tomorrow as you were yesterday?

Now God has provided a very simple method by which men can begin to become strangers to the body and at home with the Lord. You will find nothing popular or beautifully acceptable about the truth I now describe, but, if you will persevere in it and consider the message it teaches, you will find yourself growing in grace, growing in understanding, departing from sectarianism, and coming into harmony with the plan of the ages. God has ordained fasting and prayer as a means by which the interests of the physical body, which is the flesh, are greatly decreased while the interests of the spirit, so long neglected, are greatly increased. You will probably not be immediately aware of any spiritual progress during a time of fasting and prayer. In fact, you may feel much more dead and listless than at any other time in your life, but it is the flesh only that is growing weak. It is not the spirit; and I guarantee that, if your heart is honest and your motives are pure before God, a new understanding of the spiritual will begin to possess you. Things that were hidden, dark, and cloudy will begin to scintillate with the light of God. Truth long obscured by the carnal mind will awaken to become a part of you.

Men are forever talking about the sonship message, but, O my brother, when you have earnestly fasted and cast off the carnal mind, you find that sonship is something more than just another message. It is the relationship of a mature son to his Father in heaven. It is the adoption by which God places you as "a son" in... the spiritual body of sons of which Christ Himself is the head. People talk about the kingdom, but so often their talk portrays a dreadful dearth of the spirit of the kingdom. They talk much about coming out of Babylon, yet they adhere to and advertise every putrid thing that belongs to her harlot system.

God has ordained fasting and prayer as a means of casting down the carnal mind and raising up the spiritual mind. Fasting closes the eyes to the natural realm, displaying its deadness and ugliness while opening the eyes to the glory of those heavenly realms. If you show me a man who never fasts, I will show you a man who never quite sees the fullness and import of the present truth. Yes, he may be able to talk well. He may put it over, so to speak; but his talk, though all unknown to him, always leaves a pitiful vacuum which need not be there.

Whenever the Spirit of God intends to emphasize the Importance of any truth, you will find that it is brought to the forefront over and over again by teaching, by prophecy, by type, by allegory, and in many other ways. Take, for instance, the importance of the blood of Christ, which was shed for the sins of the world, not merely to save us from the penalty of sin, but to save us from sin itself. Over and over, times without number, in sacrifice, in offering, in prophecy, in type, in anti-type, in allegory we have this scarlet thread running through the Bible from Genesis to Revelation. So also it is with any truth that concerns God’s plan of the ages. You will find it line upon line and precept upon precept throughout the pages of the good Book until its many aspects shine out in one great revelation of Christ.

In view of the above I should think that fasting must be a matter of great importance. So great it is that we must conclude that it was vitally connected with the life and ministry of every man of God whether he be a Bible character or whether his ministry be recorded elsewhere. And should I not say further that, in this day of ours when above all other ages our god is our belly and our glory is in the things that should make us ashamed, Phil. 3:18-19, it is high time for us to take account of our own spiritual dearth and avail ourselves of that simple, lowly practice of fasting and prayer, which always determines the difference between those who would enter into the realm of the Spirit and those who would remain in the realm of the flesh. I would not make such a statement as this without thought and consideration. Fasting, though a very simple and valuable act, is undertaken by very, very few people simply because it is hard on the flesh, and "no man ever yet hated his own flesh". Why is it that so many people manifest a hatred for their spirit by keeping it in bondage to that cruel taskmaster, the body that can promise it nothing but spiritual decrepitude and impoverishment?

Moses, the man of God, fasted forty days on two occasions, and, if I am not mistaken, those two occasions had no interval between them, so that he actually fasted for eighty days without eating or drinking. In Deut. 9:9 Moses, relating his experiences to the children of Israel, told them that he had been in the mount with the Lord for forty days and forty nights. "I neither did eat bread nor drink water," he said. Upon descending from the mount, he found the people had corrupted themselves and had worshipped a golden calf, whereupon he took the two tables of stone and broke them to pieces before their eyes and fell down again before the Lord forty days and forty nights. "I did neither eat bread nor drink water," he said again. See Deut. 9:17-18. There was a great deal of the sovereignty of God in this act because it is quite impossible for natural man to endure eighty days without drinking and in very few cases could it be accomplished without eating. But it is not this that we are trying to prove. The truth is that the most remarkable revelation ever given by God to man, at least up to that time, was accompanied by fasting from all bodily and physical necessity.

The natural man is completely incapable of receiving the things of the Spirit of God; therefore, the more the natural man with all his beastly natural cravings is put out of the way the more the spirit, which is made after God's image and likeness, is capable of drawing nigh to God. Paul made the seemingly contradictory statement, "When I am weak, then am I strong." To the natural mind such a statement as this is silly, but it is silly only to the natural mind. The spiritual man knows that of all the enemies that bar the way of spiritual attainment the body of flesh is by far the strongest and most persistent and demanding of them all. It is an absolute fact that, while the flesh with its cravings is strong, the spirit is helpless and very weak. On the other hand, when the power of the flesh is at a minimum, then the spirit is freed of its bondage and chains and flies away to its own habitat in the realm of God. God is Spirit and they that worship Him must worship Him in Spirit and in truth. It is this that Paul meant when he said, "When I am weak, then am I strong."

I will gain no friends by saying it, but the truth remains that in all human effort to accomplish something for the Lord there is a super-abundance of flesh. Where the flesh is strong human organization is great.
is upon education, fine singing, fine speech, fine buildings, and above all else money is made the prime necessity. Well have they nicknamed it "the almighty dollar". Carnal men love to display their pictures. They love to be called doctor, teacher, apostle, prophet, evangelist, man of the hour. The ever present glorying in spiritual gifts and ministries is a fleshly thing. Harsh words, you say? Yes, but too terribly true, nevertheless. What Christians need in this hour when darkness covers the earth and gross darkness the people is not a manifestation of fleshly niceties, but fasting and repentance and prayer that there might be unity with the will of the eternal Father and oneness with the mind of Christ.

As we consider the value of fasting and prayer, our minds usually turn quickly to the account of Daniel the prophet. Daniel was a man dearly beloved in the sight of God. Whenever the Lord expresses His exceptional love for any man, we will always discover that His love is not favoritism, but rather it is the Father requiting the love He sees in the man's own heart. God loves the whole world and everybody in it, but He especially loves those who love Him, Prov. 8:17, making them special objects of His correction and thus also of His favor. Daniel was greatly beloved, Dan. 9:23, because he cherished no interest of his own. God's interest was his interest and God's concern was his concern. The whole ambition of his life was knit together with the purpose of God, and besides that he had no ambition. Though he was the third ruler in the kingdom of Babylon - by necessity rather than by desire - his heart was not in Babylon but in Jerusalem, and it was with his window open toward Jerusalem that he kneeled three times a day in his chamber to pray and give thanks to God. Daniel 6:10.

The plans and purposes of God are forever hidden from the natural mind. Please mark that statement well. The natural mind is completely incapable of grasping eternal purpose. That is the reason for so much childish thought among Christians. Daniel was no more privileged than other man, nor was he more beloved than any other man who has a heart like his. Furthermore, he was no more capable of understanding the purpose of God for the ages than you or I. This fact is surely evident by his prayer in Dan. 12:8 where he states, "I heard, but I understood not: then said I, O my Lord, what shall be the end of these things? And He said, Go thy way, Daniel: for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end."

In the 9th chapter of Daniel we have a manifestation of the true spirit of fasting and prayer. Would you give special attention to the three prominent points that follow?

(1) The occasion of his seeking God with fasting and prayer arose from his lack of understanding of a prophecy given by the prophet Jeremiah. Dan. 9:1-2. His lack of understanding evidently troubled him greatly and caused him much concern. We should always give special attention to fasting and prayer when any great concern disturbs or troubles our hearts, for more than likely the concern we feel is a concern born of the Holy Spirit, and, if we will follow it faithfully by fasting and prayer, God will meet us with an answer and an assurance which is of Him. It is positively of no avail whatever to fast and pray in an endeavor to persuade God to give us something we personally desire. Our prayer and our fasting must always be in accord with God's purpose for the ages, always remembering that the present is a most important part of the ages. God has a plan for now.

(2) Daniel set his face unto the Lord God to seek by prayer and supplication, with fasting and sackcloth and ashes. Notice: - Our seeking of God must not be casual, but with purpose. Daniel sought with prayer and supplication. Supplication denotes humble and earnest seeking and requesting special favor. See further how he used all means at his disposal - fasting, prayer, sackcloth and ashes - not to persuade or bribe God into giving an answer, but rather to separate himself from the uncrucified flesh, which hindered his approach to God, and to place his spirit in harmony with God's will and purpose. Many times I have written and spoken my firm conviction that there is only one element in faith, and that one element is the will of God. He who concerns himself with the will of God will find no problem with faith.

(3) He made confession of sin and the committing of iniquity and of rebellion against the precepts and commandments of the Lord. Wherever the word iniquity is used in the Bible the true meaning is rebellion. There are many Christians who live without sinning but who continually live in iniquity (rebellion). God speaks to them about fasting, but they rebel and refuse to do it. That is iniquity. God speaks to them about prayer and the reading of the Word, but they won't make the sacrifice. It is easier to read the newspaper, talk to friends, or watch TV. God speaks to them about tithing, but they won't do it. They rebel against it and console themselves... by speaking against it. That is iniquity. God rebukes them for their backbiting and evil speaking, but they won't stop it. All this is iniquity because it is rebellion. Rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft, and stubbornness is as iniquity and idolatry. 1 Sam. 15:23. Is it any wonder that this stubborn man, Saul, later turned to a witch to answer his problem! 1 Sam. 28:7-25. Notice Daniel's confession how this truth is further emphasized. "We have sinned, and have committed iniquity, and have done wickedly, and have rebelled, even by departing from Thy precepts and from Thy judgments." Dan. 9:5. A verse-by-verse study of this whole passage (Dan. 9) will reveal much truth to the earnest seeker, and God will prepare his heart and reveal his need of cleansing to him.

The fast recorded here took place in the first year of king Darius (Dan. 9:1) and the results were beyond description, but these we must leave for the reader to search out for himself. In the third year of Cyrus, king of Persia (Dan. 10) Daniel again set aside three weeks for another special period of fasting before the Lord. During this fast he allowed himself certain foods, but stipulates that he ate no "pleasant bread" (no dainties) and he abstained from "flesh and wine". Verse 3. Again because of limited space we must leave the remarkable results of this fast and the glory of the blessed revelation Daniel received for the reader to search out for himself in the remainder of the chapter.

I think we may safely say that all the prophets were men of fasting and prayer. David states that his knees were weak from fasting, Psa. 109:24, and that he humbled his soul with fasting. Psa. 35:13. Paul makes mention of his own fasting by the simple expression, "in fastings often". 2 Cor. 11:27. Martin Luther in his longings for God fasted until sometimes he fainted. John Wesley and John Knox were men who spent almost countless days in fasting and prayer. Charles G. Finney found that, whenever his great spiritual power was ebbing, a few days of fasting would restore it.

I am sure it would be right to conclude that all the successful fasting and prayer accomplished though the ages concerned God's plan for His present truth. There is always a present truth, and it is with the present truth that we should concern ourselves. In the days of Noah the present truth was that the whole world, because of its abounding wickedness, was to be destroyed by a flood of waters. It was with this purpose and this alone that Noah concerned himself, and in obedience to God he built an ark to the saving of his house. The present truth for Abraham was that God had chosen him to be the father of a nation by whom and through whom He would bless the whole earth. It was to this revelation that he was obedient in all things. The present truth for Moses concerned the deliverance and instruction of those same chosen people. They were his concern day and night, and for them he fasted and prayed. The present truth for Paul the apostle was that the dispensation of grace had been committed to him, and because of that trust he was in watchings with fasting and prayer, continually preaching and writing to fulfill the demands of the time then present. In Luther's day the present truth was justification by faith, and to that all his efforts turned.

We should be very foolish people indeed should we allow ourselves to believe that the hour in which we live has no present truth. I am satisfied that no more important hour has ever dawned on the world's horizon than this hour in which we now live. It is, however, an hour as far beyond the understanding of the natural mind as the flood of waters was beyond the understanding of the disobedient of Noah's day. We simply cannot comprehend the message of these closing days of the age except it be by divine revelation. We may talk of Babylon all we wish, and think we have come out of her, but Babylon is a revelation. We may listen to sermons on sonship and imagine we have entered its blessedness, but these truths cannot be comprehended until the Lord God Himself breaks them open to the heart, enlightening the mind and giving understanding.

My dear brother and sister, I believe it is my duty before God to tell you that without fasting and prayer the present truth of sonship and union with Christ will never quite come alive to your spirit. You will always fall just short in understanding. While you preach that men should flee from Babylon, you yourself will yet embrace her harlot daughters. You will exult about the body of Christ as though it were a visible thing, but fail to know that for two thousand years that body has been rising in mystery completely outside the pale of human machinery, being perfected by ministries set of God and not made of man, to form a fixed abode, a mysterious house not made with hands for God Himself in the Spirit. Wake up, my sleeping brother! Tear the darkling veil from off your eyes! The body you are now trying to perfect is not the body of Christ, and the ministries you are desperately trying to establish are not the ministries which Christ has set. Oh that men would avail themselves of that mighty key to revelation available to every sincere heart, fasting and prayer!
It was Solomon who said, "Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom, and with all thy getting get understanding." Again he said, "When wisdom entereth into thy heart and knowledge is pleasant to thy soul, discretion shall preserve thee and understanding shall keep thee." These are remarkable words of inspiration and truth. All who read them would do well to take time out to consider them carefully and prayerfully. There is nothing more frustrating and detrimental to spiritual growth than to walk in darkness and ignorance; but, if darkness and ignorance give place to understanding, then doubts, fears, misgivings, and frustration are all erased, and we walk in the light that shines from the face of the Lord.

How often during the journey of life circumstances arise that are beyond our understanding, bringing frustration, disappointment, and even anger! In our dilemma we reproach ourselves, we censor those who seem to be responsible for our failure, we accuse the devil, and we blame circumstances, but, when at last we learn that God's hand was in our trial, then we understand. Hence, had our understanding been enlightened in the first place, we would have saved ourselves from the frustration and complaining that served only to befuddle our lives.

As I am writing these words, the three astronauts, Lovell, Haise, and Swigert, together with the control crew at Houston are desperately struggling with all the skill at their disposal to bring the crippled Apollo 13 back to earth. A few days ago millions of people felt a sympathy for a disappointed Thomas Mattingly whose years of training together with his ambition to take part in a great adventure were frustrated by the miserable prospect of German measles. But today I think we might congratulate him for his good fortune. If understanding can grip our spirits and open our eyes that we might see that "all things are of God", 1 Cor. 11:12, then we will not only save ourselves much frustration and misgiving but will rejoice in the knowledge that, because "all things are of God", it certainly follows that all things must be working together for good to those people who love God.

When we consider how God made promise to Abram not only that he would be the father of a nation but that he would be the father of many nations, that his seed would be as numberless as the sand of the sea and as countless as the stars of heaven, and that in his seed all nations would be blessed, dare we blame him if at times he grew a bit frustrated or disappointed as he saw the years pass by the score with no sign of fulfillment of the promise? But we read, "He staggered not". Yet I think the only thing that could have kept him steadfast during those long, long years of waiting was a faith that rested on understanding, unaffected by frustrating and changing circumstances. If I know anything about people, then I am positive that Abraham must have had many well, meaning friends who chided him about his peculiar confidence and blessed him with many uncomplimentary remarks about his fanatical notions. No doubt they offered him much excellent advice as to how he should get back into the main stream of things. But here was one man who understood what the will of the Lord was. Permit me to say with all the emphasis born of many years of experience that he who understands what the will of the Lord is must certainly turn a deaf ear to all the free advice of well meaning friends and brokenhearted relatives who tearfully mourn, "What a blessing he could have been if he had only listened to our good advice."

There is a wealth of information to be found in the words of David, "He made known His ways unto Moses, His acts to the children of Israel". No man ever comes to an intimate relationship with God by watching His acts no matter how great they may be. It is a knowledge of the ways of God that brings us to mature faith and understanding. The children of Israel based their faith on the acts they saw God do. They saw the plagues desolate the land. They trembled at the judgment that overtook Pharaoh. They saw the waters divide and marveled at the pillar of fire and covering cloud. They drank the water that gushed from the rock; but, the moment these signs were absent, they whined and complained like spoiled children because their confidence was not in God and His purposes, but in acts and miracles that tickled and pleased their imaginations. Moses was not of this coil. His faith rested in the eternal purpose of Him who works all things after the counsel of His own will. To the children of Israel, if there were no "acts", no miracles, no signs, no wonders, then God was not there. To Moses God was there, working the immutable purpose of the ages, acts or no acts, miracles or no miracles, healings or no healings, water or no water, manna or no manna.

The faith and simple trust that all things are of God and all things are working together for good to them that love the Lord is the faith that the Father is looking for in you and me. I am fully persuaded that neither death nor life nor angels nor principalities nor powers nor things present nor things to come nor height nor depth nor any other creature is able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus the Lord. And not only are these things unable to separate us from the love of God, but all these things are ministering together and working together to mould us into the kind of sons God is demanding. They are all ministers of His to do His pleasure. Yea, they are among the all things working together for good to them who love God and who are the called according to His purpose.

If a man cannot see that the temptation of Satan in the life of Job was a necessity, then he has completely missed the point and failed to discern the value of temptation altogether. If we cannot see that the temptation of Adam and Eve was a necessary part of God's plan, then I fear we have missed the point and failed to see the plan. The temptation of the Son of God in the wilderness was a necessity, and so also are temptation, trial, suffering, misunderstanding, disappointment, poverty and all else necessary in your life and mine. When we understand what the will of the Lord is, we can say blessed is the man that endureth temptation, for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord has promised to them that love Him. James 1:12.

My heart's desire is that all who read these truths may be filled with the conviction that God our Father is preparing a people to share the image of Christ and reign with Him. First we shall reign with Him in that age we call the millennium, which is the kingdom of God, when the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord. Second, we shall reign with Him in the dispensation of the fullness of times when all things will be gathered unto Him. Eph. 1:10. Then we will reign with Him in the ages of the ages when the whole universe becomes subject to the Father in heaven. 1 Cor. 15:25-28. If we imagine that our main ministry is now in this present age, we have accepted one of the greatest errors the system of Babylon was capable of teaching. We all are subject to the Father in heaven. 1 Cor. 15:25-28. If we imagine that our main ministry is now in this present age, we have accepted one of the greatest errors the system of Babylon was capable of teaching. We all should realize that, while we are given some opportunity to minister in this age, this age is principally a time of preparation for the true ministry to come. With this understanding we begin as true sons of God to lay hold on the hope set before us. Even our blessed Lord Jesus Christ lived with this hope in view. He knew that His main ministry lay in the ages to come, for thus it is written of Him: "Who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God." Heb. 12:2. Why did He sit down at the right hand of the Father? The answer is that He sat down by the Father's throne to take the reins of government, first, to reign by Himself over the mystical church; second, to reign with His brothers, the sons of God, over the kingdom of God; and third, to reign with the sons of God and the bride in the dispensation of the fullness of times. How clearly we see in this the ever increasing glory of His kingdom, and our understanding is enlightened as to the true meaning of this statement: "Who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God." How marvelous are Thy works, O God Almighty, and Thy ways past finding out! Who hath known the mind of the Lord or who can instruct Him? For from Him everything comes, by Him everything exists, and in Him everything ends. Glory to Him unto the ages of the ages! Amen and amen!

Since, then, we have such marvelous hope pulsating in our breasts, what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness? If this is the age of preparation, should we not prepare ourselves? Ought we not in this one thing to imitate our Lord, who for the joy set before Him endured all things? Let us avail ourselves of every means of grace, laying aside every weak and beggarly thing that binds us to this present age that we might partake fully of Him and share with Him in that abundant glory which is set before us. As for me, I shall gladly count all things but loss and utter trash, unworthy of the least notice that I may share with Him in that infinite glory and reign with Him unto the ages of the ages.

Hear now the wise instruction of our brother, Peter, for it is true that God gave to him the keys (plural) of the kingdom. "Rid yourselves, therefore," said he, "of all ill-will and all deceitfulness, of insincerity and envy, and of all evil speaking. Thirst, like newly, born infants, for pure milk for the soul, that by it you may grow up to salvation; if you have had any taste of the goodness of the Lord. Come to Him, the living Stone, rejected indeed of men, but in God's esteem chosen and valuable. And yourselves also like living stones be built up into a spiritual house, as a holy priesthood to offer spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God through Jesus Christ. For it is contained in scripture, See, I am placing in Zion a cornerstone, chosen and valuable, and he whose faith rests on Him shall never be disappointed." 1 Pet. 2:1-6. (Weymouth). "You are a chosen race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a people belonging to God ... I entreat you as strangers and foreigners to restrain the cravings of your lower natures which wage war upon the soul; to live honorable lives that God may be glorified; to submit for the Lord's sake to the authority set up by man, (emperor or governors), for it is God's will that by doing well you silence the ignorant talk of foolish persons. Servants, submit to your masters with respect, not only to the kind, but to the unreasonable. Married women, be submissive to your husbands. Married men, love your wives and live with them with a clear recognition that they are not as strong as you are, but, being heirs together of the grace of life, treat them with honor, that your prayers be not hindered. Be kind, harmonious, sympathetic, tender-hearted, lowly-minded, not requiting evil with evil, but blessing instead, because you have been called to be a blessing. He who wishes to enjoy life (the life of the ages) let him restrain his tongue from evil and his lips from deceitful words. Let him turn away from all evil and do good; let him seek peace and pursue it. For the eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous, and His ears are open to their supplication; but the face of the Lord is set against evil-doers." See 1 Pet. 2:9-20 (Weymouth).

In the epistle to the Hebrews we have this simple and instructive statement: "Wherefore, seeing we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us." Heb. 12:1. Runners in a race always lay aside their garments so that the race may be run with the least possible impediment. The world's best swimmers often shave off all the hair from their bodies so that their passage through the water will not be impeded. If men to win a corruptible crown lay aside every weight with every hindering thing and strain every well trained muscle and nerve to win, how much more then should their example teach us to lay aside all hindering weights that we for whom an incorruptible crown is being prepared may better run the race that is set before us. See, then, what wisdom Paul uses in this urgent exhortation: "Lay aside every weight, and the sin that doth so easily beset us."

You will rightly conclude from this passage that weights and sins are not necessarily the same thing. Christians are forever impeding their spiritual progress with seemingly harmless weights. "What harm is there in it?" so often they ask. But they are weights none-the-less, so completely able to handicap their progress in the race of life that they will be instrumental in denying them a place in His body and in His throne. There is no sin in eating, but, if a runner over-indulges even in such a simple pleasure, he will not only lose the race, but possibly fall out long before the finish line. Those who indulge the flesh to the detriment of the spirit can do nothing but fail, because ours is a spiritual race.

While Peter is saying, "Lay aside all malice, and all guile, and hypocrisies, and envies, and evil speakings," 1 Pet. 2:1, Paul is exhorting, "Put off all these; anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth. Lie not one to another". Col. 3:8,9. Again in verse 5, "Mortify (kill) your earthly inclinations (Weymouth); fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection (sensual passion), evil concupiscence (unholy desire), and covetousness (greed), which is idolatry."

We do not have space here to consider in detail any one of these weights and sins mentioned above, but it is time God's people disassociated themselves from all forms of the sex craze of our day. Sex in all its inordinate manifestations was the chief offender in bringing about the flood in Noah's day. Sex in every perverted form was responsible for the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, and sex - rampant, perverted, twisted, mingled, exposed, unabashed, and depraved - is hurling the present age into the fearful maelstrom of the great tribulation. Blessed is he who in this hour of filth and corruption watcheth and keepeth his garment spotless!

Paul, who said "put off" all these corrupt things that impede our progress, exhorted us to "put on" those things that would quicken our step and hasten our growth. "Put on" therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, longsuffering; forbearing one another, and forgiving one another ...And above all these things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness. Let the peace of God rule in your hearts (remembering that He is our peace) ...Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly ..." Col. 3:12-16. He who feasts upon the living word sups with Christ, giving Him place to dwell richly in the heart. "Whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus... Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as it is fit in the Lord. Husbands, love your wives, and be not bitter against them. Children, obey your parents in all things: for this is well pleasing unto the Lord. Fathers, provoke not your children to anger, lest they be discouraged. Servants, obey in all things your masters..." Col. 3:17-22. Walk in wisdom toward them that are without. Col. 4:5. Let your speech be with grace. Verse 6. Continue in prayer and thanksgiving. Verse 2.
Now "blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to His abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead to an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time." 1 Pet. 1:3-5. Seeing we have such a hope, we use great plainness of speech, and, beholding as in a mirror the glory of the Lord, we are changed into the image of Christ from one glory to another by the Spirit of the Lord. See 2 Cor. 3:18.

Let us, then, cast aside all hindering weights that tradition has heaped upon us and, delivering our feet from the snares that impede our progress to the distant peaks sublime, let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking only to Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith.

CHAPTER THREE
CONCERNING FASTING AND PRAYER

The heights by great men reached and kept
Were not attained by sudden flight;
But they, while their companions slept,
Were toiling upward in the night.

Never for any length of time has there been any peace between Israel and her Arab neighbors. The hatred between them does not arise from nationality nor national boundaries, but from the spiritual fact that Ishmael was born by the will of man through the operation of the flesh and Isaac was born by the will of God through the fulfillment of the promise. One is born through the scheming of man and is therefore after the flesh; the other is born after the promise of God and is therefore after the Spirit. These two nations are an allegory representing the flesh and the Spirit. Canaan, the land, represents the believer, that land of promise and of conflict which you are, a land in which the flesh lusts against the spirit and the spirit against the flesh, a land where these are contrary the one to the other so that you cannot do the things that you would. Gal. 5:17.

It was about the year 890 B.C. that war arose between Benhadad, king of Syria, and Jehoram, king of Israel. Jehoram was by no means a good king, for, though he had put away the images of Baal, he continued in the sins of Jeroboam, the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin. 2 Kings 3:1-3. During the course of the war Benhadad, king of Syria, was frustrated again and again because all his tactical maneuvers against Israel had failed. In his frustration he called his generals and chief advisors for council, and this is the story of what took place. "Then the king of Syria warred against Israel, and took counsel with his servants, saying, In such and such a place shall be my camp. And the man of God (Elisha) sent unto the king of Israel, saying, Beware that thou pass not such a place; for thither the Syrians are come down. And the king of Israel sent to the place, which the man of God told him and warned him of, and saved himself there, not once nor twice. Therefore the heart of the king of Syria was sore troubled for this thing; and he called his servants, and said unto them, Will ye not show me, which of us is for the king of Israel? And one of his servants said, None, my lord, O king: but Elisha, the prophet that is in Israel, telleth the king of Israel the words thou speakest in thy bedchamber. And he said, Go and spy where he is, and save him. And it was told him, saying, Behold, he is in Dothan. Therefore he sent thither horses, and chariots, and a great host: and they came by night, and compassed the city about. And when the servant of the man of God was risen early, and gone forth, behold, an host encompassed the city both with horses and chariots. And his servant said unto him, Alas, my master! how shall we do? And he answered, Fear not: for they that be with us are more than they that be with them. And Elisha prayed, and said, Lord, I pray Thee, open his eyes, that he may see. And the Lord opened the eyes of the young man; and he saw: and, behold, the mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha." 2 Kings 6:8-17.

I have quoted this beautiful story in full because it demonstrates in a particularly vivid manner that two worlds or two realms exist all about us. The first is the realm we all know so well, the natural realm. It is a realm that can be seen with natural eyes, heard with natural ears, touched with the natural hand, tasted with the natural palate, and smelled with the nostrils. The second is the realm of the spiritual, a realm that, to those who touch it, is ten thousand times more real than the natural world. Man has been excluded from this heavenly realm ever since that mundane hour when he stretched forth his inquisitive hand to discover for himself that which is good and that which is evil. On that unhappy day his eyes were fast closed to the metaphysical and spiritual realm to discern the physical and natural and to see his own nakedness and the nakedness of everything that belongs to this barren realm of death. Scales of spiritual blindness beclouded his vision, shutting out from his sight for the dispensations to come the effulgent glory of that world where God dwells in the Spirit. And yet that realm is as close to us today as it was then, the only difference being that our darkened vision cannot see it!

So it was that distant morning in the dusty little town of Dothan that two men looked out upon a scene that possibly has never again been repeated in the annals of human history. Standing before the gates of the town and encircling its walls stood the hosts of Syria with horsemen and chariots, spears and swords and banners, a mighty and well-equipped army sent to capture one humble and inoffensive prophet of God. It was this army that Gehazi, the servant, saw. But there was another army that stood round about Dothan that day, for far up in the mountain nearby stood the numberless hosts of the Lord with horses and chariots of fire.

"My father, my father," cried the disconsolate Gehazi. "Alas, what shall we do?" For naught did his natural eyes see but the encompassing hosts of Syria, and well did he know the impossibility of escape. The knowledge that the hosts of the Lord with drawn and glittering swords were filling the skies could not penetrate the darkness of his natural mind. But with Elisha all was different. Well he knew that the hosts of Syria stood before him, but so small and insignificant did they seem to him that he scarcely noticed them at all. His gaze was fixed in a higher realm, a world with which he had become familiar as he walked in the Spirit with God, a world so wonderfully real that all who once have their eyes opened to it beg to remain in its celestial precincts, never more to return to the lowly estate and the level of the beasts. The frustration and fear that gripped the mind of this young man filled the heart of Elisha with pity, and, lifting his heart to God in prayer, he prayed, saying, "Lord, I pray Thee open his eyes that he may see." And the Lord opened the eyes of the young man, and he saw. And, behold, the mountain was full of the horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha.

The truth is, my friend that the heavenly hosts were there all the time. The blindness was with the young servant, whose eyes were holden, allowing him to see only that which is natural, and not that more real world of the Spirit. And now I declare that not only the heavenly hosts but heaven itself is all around about you even as you read these lines, and, should the Lord but take away the veil of flesh from your sight, your eyes would behold the celestial realm and you would see and know and clearly understand; for the Lord is not far from any one of us. Acts 17:27. As Jacob said with trembling, "Surely the Lord is in this place and I knew it not." Gen.
28:16.

Our knowledge of God and our understanding of the things of God depend entirely upon where we dwell. If our dwelling place is in the natural realm, then the things of the natural realm become all-consuming and very real to us, but the things of the higher realm grow dim and far away. They become ethereal and unreal and sometimes so removed that they are scarcely worthy of our belief at all. But to those who dwell in the realm of God and walk in the world of the Spirit the things of earth grow dim and distant, very unreal and far away. The noise and strife of the nations and peoples fade away, while angels hymn their praises and we walk in the light of the Lord.

The aged man sits in his old arm-chair,
And bright is the light of the evening sky,
His wife close by his side with her silvered hair
And the open book of God close by.
Sweet on the day the gloaming falls,
And bright is the light of the evening star;
But dearer to them are the jasper walls
And the golden streets of the land afar.

The Lord hath made of one "all nations of men to dwell on the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation; that they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after Him, and find Him, though He be not far from every one of us". Acts 17:26-27. The Lord is not far from any one of us. He is nearer than hands or feet. If we seek after Him, we will find Him, and He will reveal Himself unto us. Why, then, do men dwell so far away from God, seeing he is not far from any one of us? Why do they not feel after Him and find Him, seeing He is nearer than hands or feet? Why must our lives be lived devoid of God's Spirit, since the apostle declared, "In Him we live and move and have our being?" Acts 17:28. The answer to these questions is abundantly clear. It is simply this: God dwells in the realm of the Spirit and men dwell in the realm of the natural. There is a natural realm and there is a spiritual realm, but between the two realms hangs the veil of the flesh that darkens our eyes and beclouds our understanding.

In my book, The Meaning of the Cross, I have taken great pains to point out how God included all men in Christ long before we were born into this world, and that, when Christ was nailed to the cross and died, you were nailed to the cross in Him and died. Then in the book, From Death to Life, the truth was emphasized that the body is dead because of sin, but the Spirit is life (alive) because of righteousness. Rom. 8:10. Thus the believer, the saved man, has a live spirit in a dead body. This present existence, which you and I fondly speak of as life is that which God speaks of as death, and death it really is. The only life God recognizes, as life is the life that Jesus gave us when we believed. He that hath the Son hath life. All else is death and all else is corruption.

I have no hesitation in saying that it is the flesh that separates all men from the realm of God. The flesh is the body; nothing more and nothing less. This I have made very clear in the book Two Realms. The carnal, or fleshly, mind is the mind that concerns itself entirely with all things physical - how it may cater to, please and satisfy the desires and lusts of the body whether in feeling, tasting, seeing, hearing, or smelling. To the carnal (fleshly) mind the flesh and the satisfaction of it is an end of great importance, though the flesh is never satisfied. It is the flesh that hinders all spiritual revelation. It is the flesh that hides the mind of God from us. The flesh influences us to attempt things that are of the will of man. The flesh has its own worship, and its god is itself. Even the massive healing campaigns so painfully evident in our day are not conducted that Christians may attain to spiritual heights, but that they may attain physical benefits that the present evil world may be enjoyed the more. Great spiritual heights are not attained through ease and luxury or physical well-being. They are more often attained through suffering and affliction, a path so opposite to the cravings of the natural man.

The Lord has graciously given to man a simple though difficult means by which the heavens may open to him and he may begin to enter beyond the veil of the flesh into the celestial realm. It is through fasting and prayer. I am not now speaking of the spiritual fast which seems to be indicated in Isaiah, chapter 58, but the thing most needful in our day is the simple act of fasting from food that we may more fully devote ourselves to prayer and communion with God. Let us consider some examples from scripture. The Bible teaches fasting more by example than by precept or doctrine. We who desire to learn the spiritual value gained by special seasons spent in complete abstinence from food as we seek the face of God must examine the instances in scripture where godly men and women laid aside the delights of eating and drinking and all other things pleasant to the flesh that they might reach beyond the veil of the flesh into those higher realms where God most surely dwells.

The disciples of John the Baptist came to Jesus with this question: "Why do we and the Pharisees fast oft, but Thy disciples fast not?" And Jesus said unto them, "Can the children of the bride chamber mourn, as long as the bridegroom is with them? But the days will come, when the bridegroom shall be taken from them, and then shall they fast." Matt. 9:14,15. Let there be no doubt in any mind but that the bridegroom is now absent and these are the days of which the Saviour spoke, saying, "Then shall they fast." And I think great force is added to this statement in view of the fact that we have no account of the apostles' fasting while Jesus was with them; but, after He left them, there is abundant evidence that these same men gave themselves to much fasting and prayer, and to this putting off of the flesh and rending its veil asunder we may confidently attribute both their fullness of power in service and the saintliness of their lives.

The Lord Jesus Christ commenced His ministry with what we call a prophet's fast, a fast of forty days duration. After identifying Himself fully with man by His baptism, and after being filled with the Holy Spirit, He was led by the Spirit into the wilderness for forty days of the severest testing. The entire forty days were spent completely without food, and during those days of severe temptation He gained complete victory over the world, the flesh, and the devil and angels came to minister to Him. He gained the victory over the flesh in that, though He hungered, He refused to turn the stones to bread to satisfy the desires of the body. He gained the victory over the world in that, when Satan offered Him all the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them as a reward for His worship, His answer was, "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and Him only shall thou serve." Matt.
4:10. And He gained the victory over the devil in that He said, "Get thee hence, Satan, for thou savorest not the things which be of God," and the devil departed from Him for a season. Also overcome were the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, those three things which in the beginning were instrumental in the fall of man. It is written of Eve that she saw the tree was good for food. This is the lust of the flesh. She saw it was a tree to be desired. This is the lust of the eyes. She saw it would make one wise. This is the pride of life.

Let the reader remember that it was the putting forth of the hand to partake of food, of whatsoever kind it was, which caused the heavens to be shut up from man in the beginning, and I think it is quite reasonable to believe that our refusal of that food which is only for the body will greatly assist us in our seeking to enter those realms of the Spirit where we share with the saints the glory of an open heaven.

Jesus returned in the power of the Spirit; and so will all men return who lay aside natural things that they may freely partake of heavenly things. "The flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh, and these are contrary the one to the other: so that ye cannot do the things that ye would." Gal. 5:17. Fasting is a God-given means of breaking the power of the flesh, rendering it helpless and submissive, that our spirit, which is in the image of God, loosened from the binding shackles of the flesh, may rise up into those realms of light where it truly belongs. The stronger the flesh, the weaker the Spirit; the weaker the flesh the stronger the Spirit. In this strange fact we find the answer to Paul's anomaly, "When I am weak, then am I strong." You will never know just how much you are in the flesh, nor just how much you cater to the flesh, nor what great and merciless power the flesh has over your spirit until the day comes when you announce to your flesh that you are going on a ten day fast from all food. Then you will learn that, until now, your spirit has been weak and your flesh has been very strong. Then you will know what a drag, what a nuisance, what a domineering, placating tyrant this body of death can really be. Then for the first time in your life you will better understand why Paul cried from the depths of his spirit, "O wretched man that I am! Who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" Rom. 7:24.

Nevertheless, he who fasts has this end in view: My spirit grows stronger. The corrupting power that held it fast in its vise-like grip, causing it to grovel as a slave within the carnal house of death, begins to relax its hold. The ice of winter melts slowly away while the spirit as a vapor ascends to those pure realms of God where it truly belongs. Let every Christian know with all certainty that he who lives in such low estate as to cater to the demands of the body of flesh is bringing his spirit into captivity, inertia, bondage, and death. Our living after the flesh produces a double curse in death to the body and death to the spirit, but hearken to this saying and learn it with all thoroughness and clearness: If you live after the Spirit, there will be a double benefit in life, for the living Spirit will also quicken and make alive your mortal flesh. Divine healing is not God's best. It never was and never will be. God's desire is that men shall walk in the Spirit to such an extent that, without thought or effort concerning the body, the life of the Spirit will quicken and make alive the mortal flesh. Rom. 8:11. It was in this realm of the Spirit that Moses walked, and, as a result, at the age of one hundred twenty years he found his eye was not dim, nor his natural force abated. Deut. 34:7.

There is a spirit of understanding that accompanies fasting and prayer. It is quite possible for one to read this article through only to emerge with faulty conclusions and wrong decisions. First of all let me say that is totally wrong for us to fix our minds on some objective and decide we are going to fast and pray until we receive it. This may seem a very reasonable thing to do, but it is wrong. The heart of man is deceitful and the heart of man is desperately wicked. Who can know it? The human heart is so deceitful that men are forever coveting the things of God entirely for their own benefit and aggrandizement. Such an attitude, whether recognized or not, is a great evil and a deceitful fraud. There are, for example, hundreds of men who have fasted and prayed that they might receive the gifts of healing. I have heard of men who fasted forty days that they might receive the gift of healing, but they did not receive it; and neither would they have received it had they fasted twice forty days. Some one will ask, "Why wouldn't they receive it, since they sought it so earnestly?" The answer is simple and the truth is forthright and jarring. "Ye have not because ye ask not. Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts." James 4:2-3. Few men take kindly to such brutal truth, but the earnest searching of the heart would reveal that our much seeking was in our own interests, neither for the glory of God nor the benefit of mankind.
It is quite natural - and natural is the correct word - for people to imagine that to ask for a gift that would appear to be for the benefit of mankind and for the glory of God would certainly assure their receiving it without question. But let a man examine himself whether he be in the faith. Let him examine his motives for asking and his reasons for fasting, for that which is a gift God divides to men as He wills. 1 Cor. 12:9-11. Let him examine himself and he will probably discover the hidden and deceiving fact that his desire for the gift may have been much more for the benefit, the exaltation, and the promotion of himself and his ministry than for the glory of God or the benefit of mankind. How wicked and impure and deceitful the heart of man can be that it could thus deceitfully desire the gift of God for its personal promotion, hoping and expecting as many have done that the possession of a spectacular gift would draw the multitudes and he would become a great and notable man, and partaker of all the benefits that greatness and notability bring! "Ah, but," you say, "such a circumstance could not be." Ah, but it is true that such a circumstance could be, and such things happen over and over again in the lives of most of us! Was not this the deceptive thought that motivated the heart of Simon the sorcerer when he offered the apostles money for the gift and power they had? "Give me this power," he said, "that on whomsoever I lay my hands he may receive the Holy Ghost." And did not Peter discern his impure motives, telling him in no uncertain manner, "Thou has neither part nor lot in this matter, for thy heart is not right in the sight of God... For I perceive that thou art in the gall of bitterness, and in the bond of iniquity." Acts 8:18-25.

And was it not in the hope of financial gain that Balaam sought to curse Israel, and was rebuked for his covetousness? The dumb ass, speaking with man's voice, forbade the madness of the prophet. 2 Pet. 2:15-16. Of course it was, and I have no hesitation in saying that the modern church system is full of Balaams who prophesy and heal for gain, and many preachers have the spirit of Simon and desire God's gift for their own aggrandizement. I will further say that the church system is crowded with men and women who have no gift at all, only pretending they have, but with sleight of hand and cunning craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive, they gull and gudgeon, dupe and deceive, fool and fox, if it were possible, even the very elect. The healing meetings and healing campaigns of our day have for the most part become such an abominable money-raising hoax that I am often tempted to believe that in some cases at least they are the work of the Mafia. When will Christians awaken to the disturbing truth that the Wicked One, who will be destroyed by the brightness of Christ's coming, is one with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish (2 Thess. 2:9-10), and that men will receive strong delusion to believe lies and all manner of deceiving things that they might be condemned? Let us learn here and now, before we begin our fasting, that it is useless to fast for these things the natural man lusts after.

There is, of course, a true and right spirit that will motivate and lead us to fasting and prayer. What, then, must our attitude be? How are we to know whether our attitude is right or wrong, since we are so easily beguiled and deceived through the deceitfulness of our own human heart? The all important question is simply this: Am I seeking to attain something for myself, or am I seeking through the crucifixion of self to become acquainted with the fullness of the mind and purpose of God? The longer I live and the closer my association with God becomes the more certain and assured I am that the secret of all success, all power, all faith, all knowledge, all wisdom, yes, and all holiness finds its beginning when our spirits enter into harmony and unity with the eternal purposes of the Lord. Once the Spirit of God makes clear to the human heart the design and desire of His own mind and the purpose of His will concerning any matter or any occasion, then he who walks in harmony with that eternal purpose cannot fail, but must succeed in whatsoever the Father bids him and leads him to do.

It is unnecessary for a man to fast and pray for mountain-moving faith. Not only is it unnecessary, but it is completely fruitless and useless. The secret of faith lies in the will of God, and in the will of God alone. It is not for you to fast and pray that you will have faith to remove a mountain, but it is for you, through fasting and prayer, to discover whether or not God wants the mountain removed. If He does want it moved, and if He wants you to move it, then it will be done - not because of your great faith, but because of His great will. But, if He does not want the mountain removed, all the praying and shouting and claiming promises will avail no more for you than the shouting and screaming and cutting themselves with knives availed for the prophets of Baal. How often we hear preachers talk about the faith of Elijah! How vividly they describe the things he did and the things he said while the audience giggles with glee! Though I have heard many preachers talk about the faith of Elijah as he stood before the prophets of Baal, I do not remember ever hearing any one draw attention to that rather insignificant verse which says, "Let it be known this day that Thou art God in Israel, and that I am Thy servant, and that I have done all these things at Thy word" 1 Kings 18:36. Here lies the true secret of his faith. God had told him beforehand what he should do. Elijah did exactly as he was instructed of God and the result was exactly as the Lord intended. Any man or any woman reading these lines could do exactly the same thing that Elijah did, providing God had told him to do it, but Elijah himself would fail to repeat the same miracle if God had not told him to do it. Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God. That is the one and only source of faith.

For many years I read of the marvelous faith of George Mueller - how he built great orphanages, feeding and sustaining many hundreds of children for many years without ever mentioning his need or asking any one for a penny. How I coveted a similar faith by which mountains and obstacles could be removed! Well, the truth is that mountain moving faith is very simple. There is nothing to it at all - nothing except complete harmony with the will of God and the purpose of the Lord. Elijah himself could not have done what Mueller did simply because God had not asked him to do it. And George Mueller could not have called down fire on the altar simply because God did not ask him to do it or lead him into a circumstance where such an act was necessary. A lifetime of experience has taught me that there is only one element necessary to real faith, and that one element is the will of God. Therefore harmony with the divine mind is the secret of faith and it is this harmony and submission to God's purpose in us that must be the single thought and the compelling spirit that controls all our fasting and all our prayer.

Perhaps you will say that it is simple to come into harmony with God's will, and that is true; but let me first remind you that you will soon discover that all which is of the Spirit is contrary to all that is of the flesh. It is good to recognize the deceitful power of the carnal mind and to accept the brutal fact that all its desires are contrary to the will of God. It is not until you come to the place where you have no mind of your own that you will be able to receive the mind of God and come into harmony with His merciful purpose.

If you were to ask the average Christian the question, "What is it that the world needs most today", he would probably tell you that the greatest need is a heaven-sent revival. If you were to ask him whether or not a revival would be God's will, he would probably answer in the affirmative in no uncertain terms. But is it God's will? Of course it is not. If it were His will, He would send it, and nothing in the universe could stop Him. The notion that the church has to be just-so-so before a revival comes is poppycock. It is not more preachers we need. It is not more radio broadcasts or T.V. churches. It is not more missions and missionaries. It is not more tracts or even more Bibles. All we need is an elect people who know the mind of the Lord for the hour; and may I quickly add that there is an elect people who know the mind of the Lord for this hour, and they are in the exact place God said they would be when almost two thousand years ago Jesus said, "And He shall send His angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together His elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." Matt. 24:31.

The spirit of "understanding what the will of the Lord is" (Eph. 5:17) is the spirit that must accompany all our fasting and all our prayer if we are to have success. "Let me see Thy purpose, O Lord, as it concerns me. Let me see Thy will as it concerns me. Lead me in the path Thou wouldst have me go. Guide me with Thine eye." This is the true spirit of prayer and the true spirit of fasting. All self-seeking is vain, useless, and degrading.

Many instances of fasting and prayer are recorded in the scripture. Each one, if studied prayerfully and with meditation, will add some definite conviction concerning this great truth. I would not presume to compare the value of one scripture with another, but much help and understanding concerning fasting will be found simply by reading the ninth chapter of Daniel. Daniel had been considering the writings of the prophet Jeremiah, who foretold the captivity of Judah in the land of Babylon for a period of seventy years. There was something about this truth that mightily stirred Daniel's heart, causing him godly concern. So greatly did God's Spirit move upon him that he said, "I set my face unto the Lord God to seek by prayer and supplications, with fasting and sackcloth and ashes." Dan. 9:3.

Let all God's people know and thoroughly understand that the answer to every spiritual question lies in the realm of the Spirit. The mysteries of God can never be fathomed, solved, or pried into by the natural mind. Those dear saints whose hearts are stirred to know the secrets of the Most High must, must, must first pass beyond the veil of the natural mind and natural understanding to stand where God stands in the Spirit. The truths of the Bible are to the natural mind little but dead, lifeless stories, filled with all manner of futility, but, when the glory light of God shines upon them, then from the cold meaningless shadow there materializes the substance of eternal truth.
Daniel knew, as I trust you also know, that the answer to the perplexities of his mind lay far beyond the wisdom of man. No amount of prying, or figuring, or enquiring of wise men, or adding two and two together to make four could possibly solve the mystery that baffled his mind. These were the secrets of God and the answer was not in man. The secret was hidden in God and the interpretation must come from Him. Well did this Daniel know that God had placed in his hand the master key that would open the door to the understanding of the omniscient One, though the lock itself was concealed beyond the veil of the flesh and beyond the reach of the natural mind. That magic key is fasting and prayer, and those who use it often will discover the secrets of the Lord and His eternal purposes unfolding before the eyes of their understanding. Would God that every Christian would learn that the secret things of the Lord cannot be received second hand. However adept a teacher may be his ability to unfold the mysteries of God is limited and confined to the realm in which his hearers dwell. Even Jesus Christ Himself felt the agonizing pains of this restriction as His words of life continually fell on ears dull through the flesh and hearts gross and heavy and incapable of understanding anything beyond the natural realm.

Paul, when speaking the simple truth to the Jews in Rome, suffered the pangs of an exasperated helplessness until he cried in his frustration, "Well spake the Holy Ghost by the prophet Isaiah, saying, Go unto this people, and say, Hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand; and seeing ye shall see, and not perceive: for the heart of this people is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes have they closed; lest they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their hearts, and should be converted, and I should heal them." Acts 28:25-27. How strange that we, the children of God, should consent to grope as children of men in the outer darkness of the natural mind while within our hand lies the key that opens the door to the treasure house of eternal wisdom!

At the moment of Christ's death upon the cross the veil of the temple was rent asunder opening the way to the holy of holies. There is no stronger conviction within my soul than the conviction that a dedication to fasting and prayer will begin the rending of the veil of the flesh in that temple which we are, opening the way into the holy of holies of spiritual revelation and understanding. Without any hesitation whatever I make this statement, which I know to be true: If men and women would enquire of God with fasting and prayer concerning the things that mystify and trouble them, they would hear from heaven and, being convinced of God, would find it unnecessary to ask endless questions of men, the answers to which often fall on dull ears and hearts made gross and heavy with the cares and troubles of this present evil world. How unkeen and unsharp do our spiritual senses become by much partaking of the bread of men! How good and wise is the Lord our God to have secretly hidden all spiritual understanding just beyond the reach of the natural man in that secret place of the Most High! There beneath the shadow of the Almighty it may be touched by those who are willing to reckon themselves dead and to prove it so by the laying aside of every weight and every besetting sin that, free from defilement, they may receive of His wisdom.

The temple of the Lord at Jerusalem was but a type of the true temple "which ye are". The tabernacle in the wilderness and all that pertained to it was also a type of the temple "which ye are" and that greater temple, the body of Christ, a temple composed of all the elect believers. That mysterious tabernacle contained in type every possible aspect of the true church, which is Christ's body. In type or in pre-figure it taught every doctrine in the New Testament without exception. Within its confines were three distinct places of spiritual worship - the outer court with its brazen altar of sacrifice, which is the cross; the holy place with its candlestick, the altar of incense and the tables of shewbread, a holy place of communion, indeed; and beyond that the holiest of all, the holy of holies, where was the ark of the covenant, the cherubims of glory overshadowing the mercy seat, beneath which lay the law of God, the golden pot with the manna, and the rod of Aaron that budded and blossomed and brought forth almonds in one night, which typifies the resurrection. But I am burdened now to emphasize in particular the fact that over the door to each of these spiritual places hung a veil, which Paul says typifies the flesh. Heb. 10:20. It was impossible even to enter the outer court without passing through the outer veil. It was impossible also for the priests to enter the dimly lit holy place without passing through the second veil, which also represents the flesh, and the high priest, who entered the holiest of all once a year, could not enter the holy of holies without passing through the inner veil. The holiest of all was not dimly lit with candles as was the holy place nor even by the light of the sun as was the outer court, but the light that flooded it with glory was the shekinah, the light which God Himself is, the light which Jesus is, the light beyond the light of the sun, even that light which will lighten the New Jerusalem in the blessed day when they have no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it, for the glory of God will lighten it and the Lamb is the light thereof. Rev. 21:23.

It is the glory of God to conceal a thing: but the honor of kings is to search out a matter. Prov. 25:2. God has never engaged in the artless business of casting pearls before swine. For that very reason He veils the precious treasures that only those who seek may find, only to those who knock will the door be opened, and to those who ask in sincerity with no conditions attached will the blessing be given from His bountiful hand. Thus for good reason was the door to each holy place shrouded by a veil, a curtain, which in its first analysis the flesh. The truth we are taught by this should be clearly seen by all who have understanding and by all who have eyes to see. If we enter only the outer court, which in type represents the realm of justification by faith, we must pass through the first veil of the flesh, laying aside by the power of God all those outward lusts and manifestations of the flesh so common among the ungodly, the lying, the swearing and committing adultery, the drinking, the smoking, and a thousand other corrupt things freely indulged in by the world of the unregenerate. If the cross does not change these things and deliver us from them, then the cross has not been reached nor the blood of cleansing applied. Justification does nothing if it does not deliver men from overt sin, separating them unto the Lord.

No sooner is a man justified by faith and cleansed from open sin than he finds himself facing a second veil, the great curtain that hung between the outer court and the holy place of sanctification and communion with its altar of incense, its bread of communion, and the light from the sevenfold candlestick. Those who advance to this second realm deal with the flesh as it appears and manifests itself within the soul, for those who were cleansed from adultery, fornication and uncleanness when they passed the outer veil are still possessed with idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions and heresies, things always common in the Babel of denominationalism. Beyond the second veil lies the third, guarding the way to the holy of holies and teaching us that all who would enter the presence of God must be cleansed from the filthiness of the flesh as it appears in the spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord. Those who enter into this third and celestial realm live no longer in the realm of the senses of the body, but in the realm of seeing, hearing, tasting, touching, and smelling in the realm of the Spirit, the realm where Elisha lived.

How long should one fast? There is no set length of time to govern our fasting and prayer. The scripture tells us nothing concerning the length of time we should abstain from food during times of special seeking after God. Let us always remember that we are not fasting to earn a reward, but to seek the face of God unhampered by the flesh. A fast may mean anything from the simple omission of a meal to long and extended periods up to forty days. The Pharisee who prayed, saying, "I fast twice in the week", is usually regarded with contempt, but, though his heart attitude was admittedly faulty and unworthy of the praise of God, his practice was one that, if pursued in the proper spirit, would have brought a bountiful blessing to his spiritual life. John Wesley was so convinced of the value of fasting twice in the week that he stated he could as readily contemplate cursing as contemplate not fasting twice in the week. This is a strong way of emphasizing his point, but it vividly shows the value this great reformer placed on the sacred art of fasting as an enabling means by which we can more readily enter into the spiritual realm. Slavishness to rules and regulations in the hope of gaining the favor of God should be cast from us, but times and seasons consecrated to the Lord are accepted of Him, and we should be fervent in our performance of them.

Paul said that he was often in fasting (2 Cor. 11:27), and clearly stated that he approved himself as a minister of God by labors and watchings and fastings. 2 Cor. 6:5. He makes little reference to the length of time of his often fasting, yet I suppose these fasts varied in length from one or two days to much longer periods. The time of his shipwreck on the Isle of Melitus indicates a fast of fourteen days (Acts 27:33), at the end of which time the angel of God stood by him and delivered all who were on the ship, bringing them safely to shore. See also Acts 14:23. Daniel's fast was of three weeks' duration, during which time he seems to have abstained from pleasant bread and wine and all other gastronomic delights. After twenty-one days of fasting, confession, and consecration he was visited by the angel Gabriel, who enlightened him with an understanding of the ages such as was never before revealed to man. See Daniel, chapters 10, 11, 12. The revelation he received that day was a vivid outline of the ages to follow, a pre-written history of great events by which we in these last days are being vitally affected.
Then there was the fast of Elijah (1 Kings 19:8) in which he went for forty days on the strength of one meal, given him by an angel - a fast after which the Lord revealed to him many necessary things, telling him to anoint Hazael to be king over Syria and Jehu to be king of Israel and Elisha to be the prophet in his room (1 Kings 19:15,16), a fast after which he was soon taken up into heaven in a whirlwind to walk forever in the celestial realm. The longest recorded fast in the Bible was the fast of Moses, the man of God, who, after fasting in the mount of the Lord for forty days, fell down at the sight of Israel's idolatry and continued fasting for a second forty days, apparently without touching food at all. Deut. 9:9-18. And what shall we write of Hannah, who waited before God in fasting for a son (1 Sam. chapter 1), and of the fasting of David in his awful distress until his knees were weak from fasting. Psa. 109:23,24. And of the Ninevites who, upon hearing the preaching of Jonah, covered themselves with sackcloth and denied food or water even to their animals while they themselves fasted and cried mightily to God; and God heard their prayer because of their sincerity and because of the thoroughness of their repentance, turning away His wrath and sparing the city. Jonah 3.

Carnal men "whose god is their belly" (Phil 3:19) can always find convenient excuses for refusing to fast. I am not remotely interested either in answering their corrupt and carnal arguments or in interpreting the scriptures they advance to prove their point. My ministry was not given to tickle the ears of men who love the flesh and live for its demands every day, but to those blessed folk who have esteemed the words of His mouth more than their necessary food. Job 23:12. This wicked aged is still blessed by the presence of those who "hunger and thirst after righteousness", and these are they whose hunger and thirst for spiritual realities far outweighs their hunger and thirst for things of time and sense. The bread of heaven stands compared to the bread of earth as bread stands compared to a stone, an egg to a scorpion, or a fish to a serpent.

Fasting, you may expect, will be a misery to the flesh. Unless you are an exception to the rule, your whole life has been spent living by bread alone. Your body demands food and rebels violently against your decision to lay aside the bread of death that you may partake unhindered of the bread of life. I shall not hesitate to tell the novice who has never practiced fasting and prayer that you will experience a very bad time at first from the demands of the body. Your body will feel weak. Your head will probably ache. Your back will ache and your stomach will cry incessantly for food. Your friends will tell you that you are ruining your health that they know of people who died from doing just what you are doing. I tell you this before it happens that you may know what to expect. I see now the wisdom of God in telling us to fast in secret. Matt. 6:17,18. It is one way of avoiding the bad advice of the public. How often I have had people tell me, "I get sick when I fast, so I just can't do it." I have no sympathy for you, my friend. Your whole trouble is, though you are loath to believe it, that your spirit, your soul, your mind, and even your Christ is in bondage to your flesh, which is your body. Learn the deceitfulness of the natural heart and turn away from it. Have I not already said that there is a veil of flesh standing before each holy place and each new experience with God? It is only when we reach out our hand to rend these fleshly veils that exist in every life that we realize how strong they really are. It is abundantly true that Jesus in His death rent asunder the Veil in the temple but it is now given to you, O Son of God, through faith in Him to rend asunder the veil of the flesh in the holy temple which you are.

As soon as we begin fasting, we are doing the greatest possible favor to our physical bodies. It is an absolute fact that practically any physical distress or ailment and many diseases as well can be completely cured by long periods of fasting. I personally knew a lady who had suffered a physical disability for almost fifty years. She fasted for thirty days, not for healing but just to draw nigh to God. At the end of her fast she discovered to her joy and amazement that not only had she drawn nearer to God but her body was perfectly cured from that day forward. My own mother suffered intensely from continual headaches, but on hearing from a friend that four days without food had helped him, she also made the attempt, and to my knowledge from that day forth she was free of this blighting distress. I am also acquainted with a man who, after fasting for thirty days, found he was completely healed of prostate gland trouble, that fearful disease so common to western civilization. Even the doctors of the German army found that fasting was a more effective cure for the sick and wounded soldiers than drugs. The body is not composed of drugs and should not be forced to accept them. Fasting will do more for your ulcer than all the diets and medicines imaginable. No doubt there are cases where special care is needed, but the man or woman with an ordinary degree of health can receive nothing but lasting benefit from fasting.
The headache and fever that sometimes accompanies fasting for the first few days is evidence that the body is cleansing itself. Unhampered by an over-loaded stomach, it is now free to burn up, destroy, and cast off poisons that have accumulated in the system for a lifetime. You must completely ignore this temporary physical distress and keep your mind away from the thought of food or of yielding to the temptation to eat. Refuse to even open the cupboard door to take a look lest you add to your distress. Drink all the water you wish, and the more the better, warm or hot if you prefer. Go and have a sleep if you must. Take courage that you are not only cleansing your body, but you are laying aside that one thing which has long hindered you from entering the higher realms of Christian experience. After you have fasted about four or five days, you will probably discover that you are now experiencing less physical weakness, distress and hunger. Your stomach pangs are lessening. Your headaches and fever are disappearing. You are now passing the difficult period. Much poison has been cleansed from your body. The spirit is rising to pre-eminence. The flesh is less demanding. The experience of practically all people who fast is to discover that, by the time they have fasted ten days, physical hunger has practically ceased and physical distresses have gone also. Their strength is largely regained and they are quite capable of a good day's work. There is no reason to believe that we cannot continue our work while fasting unless, of course, it is work that requires more than usual physical effort, a thing sadly lacking in our day.

I write these simple instructions so that people will understand some of the difficulty experienced while getting into a fast. People who know what they must expect will not be so easily dissuaded, knowing that after the distress comes healing and after the weakness comes strength. People who are in fastings often do not suffer this same distress over and over every time they fast. The first fast is usually the most difficult. The person who has once accomplished a two week fast will probably find that, upon fasting a second time, he will experience practically none of those things I have mentioned. This is simply because his body is in much better condition. A word of caution is in order about breaking a fast. You must break your fast carefully. This is very important. Because the stomach has not had food for some days, the first few meals must be very light, such as fruit juices or salads. Never break a fast by eating a big meal. It is a very bad thing to do and may cause you much distress. Eat very little at first until your body once again becomes accustomed to taking food. If you were customarily overweight before you fasted, your body will strive hard to regain the weight it had, but if you watch carefully for a few weeks, weighing each morning, you will be able to maintain the weight you had at the end of your fast. After a few weeks your body will adjust to this new weight and you will have no further problem.

It is unnecessary, when you are fasting, to worry about starving to death. This will not happen. After a week or so your hunger disappears and it will not return until your body has completely cleansed itself of all the accumulations of poison. However, after this has been accomplished, your hunger will return in no uncertain manner. It is then time to start eating since to continue longer would begin the process of starvation. Healthy persons may not reach this end before thirty or forty days.

After you have fasted six days or so, you will notice how clean you feel in body and spirit. After two weeks you will be surprised at the lightness of your step. It is after you have passed the misery of the first few days that you begin to realize the tremendous benefits that have begun. Then you will realize what a liar the flesh has always been. You will understand better why I have often said in my writings that the flesh is our greatest enemy. Satan himself has no power over us except through our flesh. Our real enemy is our own flesh, it is certain that we both were and are crucified with Christ, but it is just as certain that God has placed within our grasp the ability to see that this great work of Christ is accomplished in us in spirit, soul, and body.

Like all the great truths of scripture the varied aspects of this truth are practically exhaustless, and we cannot make an exhaustive study of them. Let us remember, however, as we have pointed out in the first part of this chapter, that the main benefit to be derived from fasting is the spiritual benefit. Our wise heavenly Father has placed all Christian experience in different realms, each realm one step higher than the preceding one. There are three definite and distinct realms portrayed in scripture, though not mentioned in so many words. There are the natural realm, the spiritual realm, and the celestial realm. Our journey is from the natural through the spiritual to the celestial. These three realms are clearly demonstrated in the three sections of the tabernacle - the outer court with its natural sunlight, the holy place with its sevenfold candelstick, and the holiest of all where was the shekinah, the glory light of God's presence. The first realm, the outer court, is where the crowds gathered. This is the natural realm with excitement and activity. The second realm is the holy place, the realm of communion, of bread and incense. The third realm is where the high priest entered to minister before God Himself. This is the celestial realm.

Remember, then, that in fasting and prayer our chief aim is not the attainment of physical benefits, but the releasing of the spirit from the bondage of the flesh that it may enter beyond the veil into the realm where God eternally dwells in the Spirit. "It is the Spirit that quickeneth. The flesh profiteth nothing. The words that I speak unto you, they are Spirit and they are life." John 6:63.

CHAPTER FOUR A PLACE BY ME

O Christ! Who once has seen Thy visioned beauty —
He counts all gain but loss;
And other things are naught if he may win Thee,
And share with Thee Thy cross.
And he on whom its shadow once has fallen Walks quietly and apart.
He holds the master key of joy and sorrow
That opens every heart.
The burdened souls that pass him on the highway
Turn back to take his hand;
And murmur low with tear-wet eyes of anguish,
"You know — you understand."
ANNIE JOHNSON FLINT

There are every increasing signs that some people are abandoning their natural way of looking at things. More and more they are opening their hearts to the spirit of revelation from God, which alone can make the invisible things, hidden from the creation of the world, clearly seen and thoroughly understood. The natural mind because it is natural gets every spiritual truth inside out, upside down, and back end foremost. Therefore the further man goes with his human reasoning and finite understanding the further he strays from the path of truth. His theology may resemble the truth. It may be a very plausible imitation; but it is error, nonetheless, and not the truth.

The Spirit of God alone can "take the things of God and show them unto you". John 16:13-16. Let us then pause in our path, retrace our steps, abandon all human theology and philosophy, and there in utter abandonment to God and the Spirit of truth cry as David, "Lord, open my eyes." Psal. 119:18. Never under any circumstances do I ever permit myself the dubious luxury of religious argument, the reason being that all debate and dispute is on the level of the natural mind, and the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned. 1 Cor. 2:14. Our human theories concerning the things of God count for nothing. Even the correctness of what we say is useless without the spirit of revelation. In God's plan we become partakers and participators in our Lord Jesus Christ, and it is concerning our participation in Him that we now direct our earnest attention.

We often speak of the apostle John as the beloved disciple, and the word of God indicates that he was, indeed, the disciple whom Jesus loved, but dare we suggest that Jesus held some special favoritism toward John? I do not think so. The real reason that Jesus loved John so much was that John loved Jesus so much. "I love them that love Me; and those that seek Me early shall find Me" is still the word of the Lord. Prov. 8:17. And Jesus Himself, speaking of this very thing, said, "If a man love Me, he will keep My words, and My Father will love him; and We will come unto him and make Our abode with him." John 14:23.

The history of the world since the fall of man has been one of continual crises. They were crises insofar as finite man was concerned, but to God they were events predestined and foreknown of Him from the foundation of the world. Just as surely as times of crisis arose, God's chosen men and God's chosen people arose with them. God always has a people for His name who enjoy a special relationship and a distinguishing identification with Himself. If you will examine the heroes of faith one by one, you will learn that in all times of apostasy and falling away the heavenly Father never left Himself for a moment "without a witness" in the earth, and each witness in his turn left his attestation and his mark in the exact way God intended. It will do no one any good to try to leave his mark upon history or to make a great name for himself. The race is not to the swift or the battle to the strong. God raises up whomsoever He will. He uses worms to thrash mountains, acorns to make mighty oak trees, and drops of water to wear away the hardest rock. At this moment He is watching each man on the chess board of His creation move into his appointed place in the divine scheme of things even as the words you are now reading fall into their place in the paragraph.

Nothing useless is or low; Each thing in its place is best. And what seems but idle show. Strengthens and supports the rest.

Enoch had a special relationship with God. Though the Bible records only a sentence or two concerning him, those words of inspiration give testimony to a relationship and identification with the Eternal that is so sublime that children of God in every age would do well to follow in his steps. "Enoch walked with God" is the testimony of the Lord; and, because he did, it is written, "He was not, for God took him." Gen. 5:24. So intimate was his participation in the Lord, so complete his sharing in God's eternal life that death could not seize upon him as it did upon others; so through the gates of life God took him to be forever with the Lord.

Enoch walked with God. It was no easier to walk with God in his day than it is now. No doubt Enoch, as Elijah, was "subject to like passions as we are." Undoubtedly the nominally religious throng of his day crowded its way to the public gatherings, joined in the chantings and the hymns, listened to the sermons, contributed their pennies, partook of the forms and ceremonies, and returned home to dinner and their schemes for a bountiful life in the flesh tomorrow; but Enoch walked with God. Special days of the week, special occasions, new moons or Sabbaths made no difference to him, for he was walking in the timeless realm with the eternal God. The darkness of the hour in which he lived had no withering or blighting influence upon his relationship with the Lord. Nothing could let or hinder his identification with the Eternal and nothing could for an hour halt his participation in the bread of life or that water of life, which is Christ Himself.

Enoch, the inspired record declares, was the seventh from Adam. Clear as the ringing of a vesper bell do these words of inspiration fall on our ear, for we, significantly, are now approaching the seventh dispensation from Adam. I am convinced beyond doubt that the sun has set on the sixth age and dawn with rosy steps advancing in the eastern clime heralds the glorious morning of the seventh age. The seventh generation is rising; the seventh day is about to begin, and we, like Enoch, are the seventh from Adam. In all quarters of the earth a peculiar people is coming into being, a people far removed from the religious systems of the day. Sects, denominations and creeds may belong to others, but not to them. Because they "walk with God", the blinding, enslaving systems of religion are no longer part of them, for Christ is their life. Christ is their breath, their bread and their water. Christ is their way, their truth, and their life. In Him they live and move and have their being and by Him they come to the Father. To them He is the beginning of all things and the end of all things. To them He has become the Alpha and the Omega. He has become their head and they have become His body. They are learning the intrinsic secret of these majestic words: "Thou in Me and I in Thee, that they may become perfect in one." By their baptism into one Spirit they have learned that there is no schism in the body of Christ, but that all schism and division is outside His body. To them there is but one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one Spirit, one God, the Father of all. They are as Enoch was, the seventh from Adam, blessed be the name of the Lord. From one to six is man's day, but the seventh belongs to the Lord. They walk with God because they have partaken of Him. They are participators in Christ and are identified only with Him. Their walk with God is in preparation for the hour when all shall know Him from the least to the greatest. These things shall be! A loftier race

Than e'er the world hath known shall rise, The flame of freedom in their souls, And light of knowledge in their eyes. Nation with nation, land with land, Unarmed shall live as comrades free.
In every heart and brain shall throb
The pulse of one fraternity.
There shall be no more sin, no shame,
And wrath and wrong shall fettered lie;
For men shall be at one with God in bonds of love and charity.

The world before the flood had much in common with our world today. Then as now men were multiplying rapidly on the face of the earth. The sons of God with reckless and imprudent abandon were marrying the daughters of men and from their corrupt and sordid union monstrous giants, hateful and cruel, came forth as men of renown. They were "marrying and giving in marriage" just as we see it today. The biblical phrase, marrying and giving in marriage, does not imply the simple marriage union. These perverted people, the sons of Belial, were practicing every wickedness prevalent in the world today. They were marrying, divorcing, re-marrying, and swapping wives and husbands. They worshipped the god of sex in all its perverted forms, Men, leaving the natural use of the woman, burned in their lusts one toward another, and the women did change the natural use into that which is against nature. So filthy in our day also has the worship of the god of sex become that even the carnally minded feel revulsion at the mention of the word. The world then even as now was filled with endless "forms of godliness", but they denied the power of it; for then as now they "loved pleasure" far more than they loved God. With concise and all inclusive clarity the divine record states: "The earth also was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence. And God looked upon the earth, and, behold, it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth." "And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually." See Gen. 6. Would it be possible for any man to paint a more accurate picture of the world in our day? Is not this exactly as Paul by inspiration described the latter days in 2 Tim. 3:1-6? Oh, that we might remember the Master's words: "As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the day of the coming of the Son of man."

Dissolute, immoral, and corrupt as the world had become, God had reserved Himself one man who was just and perfect in his generation of whom it is written: "Noah walked with God." Gen. 6:9. Shall we who were chosen of God to live in the closing hours of this age, an hour of which the days of Noah were but a type, imagine for even a moment that the Spirit of God has failed to reserve a people who "walk with Him"? Such a thing could never be. It would be unlike God in all He is and does. Even the ages themselves record that the Lord never leaves Himself without a people for His name. When all the world was given over to idol worship in the days of Abraham, did the Lord leave Himself without a witness? No, He did not; for the Lord had said to Abraham, "Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will shew thee." Gen. 12:1. Ur of the Chaldees, where Abraham dwelt, was down in the land where the tower of Babel was built. In all probability Abraham saw with his eyes the building of the tower and heard with his ears the confusion of tongues that is typical of Babylon unto this day. But far above the din of Babel's voices Abraham, the "friend of God", was hearing the sweet harmony of heaven. 2 Chron. 20:7; James 2:23.

In these the closing days of the age of grace, when the Babylon system has risen to such dizzying heights, embracing in its octopus-like arms with ever increasing firmness all the religious and political systems of earth, the Spirit of God is separating unto Himself a people who walk with Him, a people who are as separated and apart as Daniel or Abraham, a people who are in truth and verity friends of God and brothers of Jesus Christ. Let there be no mistake in the minds of those who read lest Satan should beguile you to believe that there is a place for you, a member of Christ's body, among the religious systems of our day. The Spirit of God is speaking to the friends of God as He did to Abraham, saying, "Get thee out!" "Get thee out of thy country!" Get thee out from among thy kindred!" "Get thee out from thy father's house!" Get thee out of the denominations! Get thee out of the sects! Get thee out of the little groups! Get thee out of the groups with a name! Get thee out of the groups without a name! Come out of her, my people! Come out from among them and be separate and walk with Me to the realm that I will shew thee.

As we walk the paths of meditation to consider the lives of these men who have become a cloud of witnesses, there is one outstanding fact that illumines the heart like a flash of lightning. It is this: Enoch, who walked with God, walked outside the groups and systems of his day. Noah, who alone was just and righteous in his generation, was not involved with any of the systems about him. Abraham, the friend of God, was told to "get out" from among relations, friends, countrymen and country. Jacob was Jacob only when he walked like other men, but when he met with God, his name was changed to Israel, and he was called "a prince with God". It was when he met with God that his flesh shrank and he halted upon his thigh. Then all men everywhere knew Israel by the way he walked. And Moses in like manner fled in terror from Egypt, leaving forever its systems and teachings, that he might know God face to face as no man before had known him. Of David it is written that he was a man "after God's own heart". But so much without the camp and outside the systems did he dwell that in the dispensation of law, when sacrifice and offerings were the order of the day, he lifted his heart to God, saying, "Thou desirest not sacrifice; else would I give it." Psa. 51:16. Should we therefore think it strange that in our day God should call the members of His holy temple to walk with Christ and dwell with Him outside the camp of religious systems? Is it peculiar that to the friends of God it should be said, "Get thee out?" Can we who reverently dote upon the words of Paul fail to hear him say, "Therefore let us go unto Him without the camp, bearing His reproach" (Heb. 13:11), since we have no continuing city here, but journey to one which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God?

There is a beautiful picture in the New Testament, an image to be seen by the spirit much as the trained and talented sculpturer sees the image of a man in the uncarved rock. From the chaos of the uncarved rock of a universe without form and void, without God and without hope, the eternal Architect and Sculpturer has envisioned a perfection that none but Himself could produce. In the uncarved mass of humankind His eye has seen the likeness of untold millions of sons in His image standing upon the elysian fields of redemption to govern the entire universe in righteousness. No more forever will the words "without form and void" be spoken, but to the far flung corners of the universe shall the message be heard: "He created it not in vain." Nor shall it be said again that darkness was upon the face of the deep, for the Lord almighty is the light thereof.

"For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3:16. In that blessed verse the world and the whosoever are in great prominence. Far out on the horizons of humanity God loves the people who know nothing of Him. His salvation encompasses the masses and hordes of human kind who never once knew that God ever had a Son or that He came as the Redeemer of all mankind to purchase and possess in Christ all that was lost in Adam. So great was the redemption of Christ that God does now proclaim from the very gates of Paradise, "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." 1 Cor. 15: 22. Well do we know that the world is full of sinful men, and that evil men and seducers are waxing worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived, but do not write them off forever as Satan's eternal captives, for "they know not what they do". There is a day coming after God has prepared His chosen sons when they who sit in darkness will see a great light, and life will come to men whose abode has been the valley of the shadow of death. So marvelous is God's grace and power that I am sure, had He shined His glory light into the darkened heart of Pharaoh or of Adolph Hitler as He shone it into the darkened heart of Saul of Tarsus, the result would have been the same with them as with him. Hitler was bent on murdering Jews.

In his darkened mind burned the wicked objective called by him the "final solution". He would kill and destroy them all. Was not Saul of Tarsus possessed with the same paranoic dementia against the Christians? Did his mind not burn with the hope of a bloody "final solution"? So then, you see, it is "not of him that willeth or of him that runneth, but of God that showeth mercy."

As the glory of the light of revelation shone into the heart of Isaiah the prophet, from his inspired lips these words of truth poured forth as water from the fountain of life: "Behold, thou shalt call a nation that thou knowest not, and nations that knew not thee shall run into thee because of the Lord thy God, and for the Holy One of Israel; for He hath glorified thee." Isa. 55: 5. "And He shall judge among the people, and rebuke strong nations afar off; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, an their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." Micah 4: 3.

While men grope in darkness and preachers without a breath of inspiration in their barren souls proclaim the eternal loss of ninety-nine percent of all mankind to sin and the devil, God the Father, who saw a world of unborn men die in Adam, proclaimed with rejoicing a world of men made alive in Jesus Christ our Lord. As I have listened to preachers by the score striving desperately and even frantically to get men to repent and be saved, my heart is often filled with sadness because the message they preach is made weak and futile by their failure to grasp the infinite purposes of that omniscient mind who laid His plans in Christ before ever there was a world or a sinner in it. All through the ages with clock-like precision everything is coming to pass as He purposed and in the very hour He purposed it. Many times in my life men and women have asked me this question: "Do you believe hi a second chance?" My answer to them is simply this: "No, I do not believe in a second chance, and neither do I believe in a first chance." The one omniscient mind of the universe leaves none of His eternal purposes to chance. It was not by chance that you heard the truth nor was it chance that you were saved. What seemed chance to you was in reality the invisible working of the purpose of the omniscient and omnipotent God.

There were always those in the life of Jesus who were intimately nearer to Him than that great restless world of unheeding mankind. There was a crowd of about five hundred who followed Him as much and as often as they could. They had come to a closer relationship with Him than the multitudes who found the zenith of their ambition in loaves and fishes. No doubt many like Nicodemus were secret disciples. They followed afar off, yet they believed and knew in their hearts that He was the Christ. Many of these were no doubt among the five hundred brethren to whom He appeared after His resurrection and who stood and watched Him ascend to heaven from the mount of Olives. Of this same number came the one hundred and twenty disciples who tarried in the upper room until the promised Holy Spirit fell upon them on the day of Pentecost, instantly transforming their lives by a baptism of such tremendous power that never again did it appear that flesh was to have any hold upon them.

Besides these there was another group of seventy men appointed and chosen of the Lord, men of whom it is said that their names were written in heaven. Luke 10: 20. It is true that other men, numbered perhaps in thousands, were His disciples, some following near and some afar off, but these men were more than disciples. They had been especially chosen and to them was given the divine commission to carry the kingdom message into all the towns and villages into which Jesus Himself would afterward come. They were to tell the people of the nearness of the kingdom of God. They were to walk as lambs among wolves, carrying neither purse nor script nor shoes, and saluting no man by the way. Into whatsoever house they entered there they were to remain, eating and drinking what things were set before them until their ministry was completed. They were to heal their sick and pronounce peace upon the household in return for the hospitality given them, but whenever a city refused to receive them, the very dust of that town was to be shaken from their feet as a witness against it. Cf. Luke 10: 1-12. And when with rejoicing the seventy returned, saying, "Lord, even the devils are subject to us through Thy name", He said, "Rejoice not that the spirits are subject to you, but that your names are written in heaven." "In that hour Jesus rejoiced in spirit, and said, I thank Thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that Thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto

In all the realm of human frailty and failure there is nothing more evident or more destructive than our tendency to revel and rejoice in the things we have accomplished. "Lord, even the devils are subject to us through Thy name," they proclaimed in their boundless exuberance. No doubt they were thrilled by the size of the audience that had listened to them. Delighted beyond words were they to see the multitudes of people healed and perhaps a little exalted because of their success and their influence upon the people. Words failed to describe their feelings of triumph as demons, crying with loud voices, departed from those tormented by them.

How prone is the natural man to rejoice in the things that are evident to the eye! During the lifetime of many of us have not our hearts been saddened time and again as we have heard the boasting of men concerning their supposed accomplishments, or beheld the high-sounding advertisements that appear in the local newspapers or on the handbills handed to the passerby, or displayed in windows and prominent places! They boast of the crowds, of the converts, and of the healings. They exalt the preacher and display his college degrees, often falsely. I have known preachers who advertise their prowess as swimmers and athletes and display their awards for things they have done. They advertise their careers as criminals, gamblers, singers, and movie stars. When, oh when, will men learn that the "flesh profiteth nothing?" When will they learn as Paul learned, "What things were gain to me, these I counted loss for Christ?" All such gain he considered on the level of common dung.

Full well did Jesus know that success even in the spiritual realm was nothing that should occasion either boastfulness or pride. Perhaps, if other men have reason to glory in what seem to be accomplishments, I, too, would have some reason for boasting. But forty years of experience and silent observation have taught me the fiery lesson that he who foolishly puts his confidence in men or crowds or visible results will be bitterly disappointed. He will learn before long that crowds are fickle and their acclaim as changeable as the wind. Crowds are as fickle today as they were during the earthly ministry of Jesus. They shout their hosannas to the Son of David as they wave their palm branches and spread their garments as a carpet for His feet, jubilantly anticipating an earthly kingdom; but in the hour of His greatest trial they shout, "Crucify Him! Crucify Him! We will not have this man to reign over us." How often I have seen the jubilant multitudes as in one hour of victory they were almost ready to worship a man, but the next week they are spreading evil reports, sowing discord, and rejoicing in the lies, which increased in their absurd intensity as they passed from mouth to mouth. Levi Petrus, of Stockholm, Sweden, once pastor of the largest congregation of Christians on earth, told me that he had been accused of every sin in the book except murder. But that is people! They are the same fickle, vacillating throng in every generation, blessing in triumph and good adventure and cursing in adversity and misadventure.

When Jesus, therefore, heard them rejoicing over the success of their ministry, He told them of a much more wonderful thing. He, too, had seen an event more far-reaching than any of the things in which they rejoiced. "I saw Satan as lightning fall from heaven!" Luke 10:18. "Nevertheless, rejoice not that the demons are subject to you, but rather that your names are written in heaven." It is our relationship with God that must be our fulfilling cause for rejoicing. It is this that our heavenly Father is longing to see. This is perfume in His nostrils. The children of God have walked in blindness as to the true purpose of their lives here on earth. The corrupting tradition of a harlot Church system has taught them to believe that the important thing in this brief life is to be "up and doing for God", wearing their fingers to the bone, becoming nervous wrecks, and wearing themselves out for God. "Wear out, not rust out," they say. The general thought seems to be that the house is on fire - God's house at that - and except we race and tear and scramble and snatch the people from the burning wreckage, everything and everybody will fall into the devil's embrace and hell from beneath will devour it all. As long as we see God's will and purpose to be such a hubbub of frustration and disorder as that, we will never become acquainted with the eternal God of the universe whose knowledge is omniscient, whose will is immutable, whose power is omnipotent, whose wisdom is inscrutable, whose love is fathomless, whose time is eternal, whose kindness has appeared to all men.

As farm boys enjoying the delights of our boundless prairie heritage, we never failed to be intrigued with the ant hills, those tiny insect communities that bulged up and appeared here and there over the countryside. We would gaze with pleasure at these little creatures as they swarmed about intent on their insect tasks, doing things we could not understand, lugging loads three times the size of their tiny bodies, transporting their eggs from one place to another, and doing a hundred other things that only an ant could understand. But, if we tossed a pebble among them, then the orderly peaceful routine of life ended at once. They would race frantically, helter-skelter in all directions and as far as one could see all purpose, order, and plan had vanished from their presence and confusion reigned supreme. Their little insect community became a picture of modern Christendom with all its confusion and turmoil, its rushing hither and yon to make converts, itscompassing land and sea to make proselytes in the vain imagination that anything being done for God is bound to be blessed of Him. But this is a great mistake and a very evil disease that has blinded the minds of men so that they see darkly, not comprehending the eternal purposes of God.

There is a vital lesson important above all else that men should learn as they walk with God. First and foremost they should learn that, when their relationship with God is right, they need to have no worry about their ministry. It will take care of itself. The man who walks with God will be directed by His guiding hand into the very task God has ordained should be accomplished by him. The man in whose heart dwells the spirit of sonship reverently repeats, "Abba, Father", and he, walking in the knowledge and blessing of sonship, walks in the knowledge that God leads His sons. You are not responsible to the people. You are not duty bound to meet their demands. The only responsibility you have and the only responsibility I have is to do the will of our Father which is in heaven. There were many widows in Israel in the days of Elijah, but to none of them was he sent save to a woman of Sarepta. And there were many lepers in Israel in the days of Elisha, but none was healed saving Naaman the Syrian.

Oh, that men would see first and foremost how great is the importance of their personal relationship with the Father through His Son, Jesus Christ. This and this alone is the keynote of true success. "Blessed is everyone..."
that feareth the Lord; that walketh in His ways... Happy shalt thou be, and it shall be well with thee," Psa. 128:1,2. Those who read the word of God should take heed to its precepts also. Did not God promise Abraham that his seed should be as innumerable as the stars of heaven and the sands by the sea for multitude? Did Abraham ever have the joy and satisfaction of seeing that promise fulfilled in his day? No, indeed, he did not. Through the dreary tiresome years of waiting he saw one son of promise and probably his grandson, Jacob. Surely at times his heavy spirit must have wondered if he had somewhere failed his God; but God had not said that he should look at evidences as no doubt, like other men, he was prone to do. When he was ninety-nine years old, the Lord appeared to him and said, "I am the Almighty God (El Shaddai); walk before me, and be thou perfect." Gen. 17:1.

It may come as a great and blessed surprise to learn that it is much easier to please God than to please man. Whoever heard of any one who was able to walk before men and be perfect? Even Jesus Christ was not able to do that. As for me, I never bother trying. But before God we can walk and be perfect. The man who measures himself by himself or compares himself with other people will pass his life in the turmoil of continual disappointment, but the man who walks before God, seeking only to love Him and please the Father, will in turn receive His favor, being a beloved son in whom the Father is well pleased. To love God and obey Him is better than all burnt offerings and sacrifice, 1 Sam. 15:22, because "there is no fear in love, but perfect love casteth out fear." 1 John 4:18. Fear comes when we measure ourselves with men and walk before them. Love comes by walking before God and seeing ourselves in Christ. Rejoice not, therefore, that the devils are subject to you nor be moved by success or failure, be it little or much, but rejoice rather that your name is written in heaven and is familiar to the Father of us all.

There was, however, yet another group, a group of twelve men who were specially ordained to spend their time with the Lord Himself, seeing, hearing, and understanding secret things often hidden from all others. Many were the conversations Jesus had with these men. Many were the instructions and precepts He gave them. Full well the Saviour knew that upon their shoulders would fall the weight of the coming dispensation, for their ministry would form the foundation upon which would rise the superstructure of the true church. Their writings, their acts, and their sayings would be a shining light of inspiration for the whole age of the kingdom of heaven. These apostles were with Him on every special occasion. When important instruction was given, they heard it. When promises were made, they were the ones who heard and believed them. Of them it was written that men took notice of them because they had been with Jesus. Acts 4:13.

I have never been able to give a satisfactory explanation as to why divine wisdom chose one among the twelve whom He knew beforehand to be a traitor. "Have I not chosen you twelve, and one of you is a devil?" He asked. Perhaps in this age we will never fully understand why Judas, the son of the devout Simon, should be a traitor, but one thought is most worthy of our consideration. It is this: A man's relationship to Christ can never be judged by the miracles he performs nor by the apparent devotion of his preaching or teaching. Judas, like Peter or John, was among the miracle workers and rejoiced with the rest for the signs and wonders that had been wrought. Our relationship to Christ can never be judged by the works we do or by the company to which we belong. It reaches far, far beyond that. It is extremely difficult to find men who keep their own interests completely out of the picture and harder still to find men who have no interests of their own. Times without number we make the pitiful discovery that the smooth and oily words of seeming devotion, "should not this ointment have been sold and the proceeds given for the poor", (cf. John 12:5), are in fact the words of a clever thief who slyly slips his sticky fingers into the purse. I have often said it before and will repeat it here. Never trust a man who has big plans for your money. The longer I walk with God the more thoroughly I am convinced that the Lord Himself will provide for every program that is born of Him and He will stand by those who trust in Him. What impertinence it is for men to boast of mountain moving faith while they stand before audiences begging for money to carry out their projects! That is not faith at all. There is neither jot nor tittle of faith in such a program. Such fraudulent knavery is no more faith when found in the pulpit than it is faith when it is found in the ragged mendicant on the street who extends his grimy hand to receive our pittance. The only true difference is that one man is polished while the other is grubby and what the beggar calls "bumming" the other calls "faith".

Never put your confidence in man regardless of who that man may be, no, not even if that man is yourself. The apostle Paul once said that we should not trust in ourselves, but in God that raiseth the dead. I have no good reason to have more confidence in myself than in another. The eleven apostles were shaken by the knowledge that one among them could be a traitor, and each in turn questioned, "Lord, is it I?" Matt. 26:22. Let not your heart be troubled over any of these things. "Ye believe in God; believe also in Me" is the divine exhortation.

Close, indeed, were the twelve to Jesus and great was the trust He bestowed upon them. Yet it is clearly evident that there was a group even among the twelve who abode closer to the heart of Christ than the others. These were Peter, who after the bitter lesson of his denial was renamed Cephas, which means a stone, and the brothers James and John, whom Jesus called Boanerges, which by interpretation means "the sons of thunder." Perhaps we cannot fully explain why this inner circle of three was closer to Him than the others, but, knowing that the Lord looks not on outward appearance but upon the heart, we may be sure it was the man within He loved and not the frailties that appeared on the surface. Why did God say, "Jacob have I loved, but Esau had I hated"? The answer does not lie in the outward appearance, but in the heart. To the outward appearance it would seem that Esau was a more likable man than Jacob. The neighbors did not think of him as a stingy crook, a cheat, or a supplanter as they may have thought of Jacob. The question finds its answer, not in outward appearance, but in the knowledge of where their interests truly lie. To Esau the promises of God, the gifts and the birthright were worth less than a hearty meal of pottage for the physical man, but to Jacob the birthright was the only thing of value. He was willing to risk both life and limb to attain it and this in his human ignorance he did. So, while the other nine disciples vainly struggled with the demon at the foot of the mountain, these three men stood with Jesus in the glory realm. Matt. 17:1-16. When Jesus went to raise the dead girl to life, He took with Him Peter, James, and John. Mark 5:37. Even in the garden of Gethsemane it was Peter and James and John whom He took a little farther than the rest. Matt. 26:37.

We cannot, however, close this thought until we have noted that even among the three there was one still closer than the other two. As John, the disciple whom Jesus loved, laid his head upon Christ's shoulder at supper, Jesus whispered a secret to him that was not heard by anyone else at the table. "He it is to whom I shall give this sop when I have dipped it". John 13:23-26. And when all the disciples forsook Him and fled, the disciple whom Jesus loved was standing in Pilate's hall of judgment with the Christ, who was more than life to him. John 18:15. He was there among the little group who stood at the foot of the cross when Jesus died; and unto John Jesus committed the care of Mary, His now widowed mother, with these words: "Woman, behold thy son!" And to John, "Behold thy mother!" John 19:26, 27.

You may have wondered why John in his epistles declares truths hard to understand. For instance, he says, "If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves and the truth is not in us." 1 John 1:8. Then in vivid contrast he writes, "Whosoever abideth in Him sinneth not." 1 John 3:6. The secret is that John was not writing or speaking from the outer court of Christian experience nor yet from the holy place, but John in experience dwell with Christ in the holy of holies. In one sentence he describes the condition of Christians who dwell in a spiritual outer court where, if we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves; and in the next sentence he describes the blessed state of those who abide in Him and sin not. It is no great wonder that Jesus said of him, "If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?" This was the special word concerning this beloved man who had learned to dwell in God. John 21:22. Need we marvel that it was John who was chosen to behold and relate the intrinsic glories laid down for our learning in the book of Revelation?

It is clearly evident that among the disciples of the Lord there were wheels within wheels and circles within circles that separated those who dwelt in the outer court of experience from those in the holy place, and these in turn from those who dwelt with Him in the holy of holies. The vast multitude followed Him because they saw miracles or because they ate of the loaves and fishes, enjoying the temporary satisfaction of a "mess of pottage" as Esau. From the multitude came forth the five hundred who followed much closer, hearing His words, seeking His works, and believing His promises. From their midst the seventy were sent forth and the twelve who continued with Him; and from the twelve came forth the three and from the three the one. It is your relationship in the love of Christ that makes all the difference. Your participation in Him and your identification with Him is the glory of which Christ spoke when He said, "The glory which Thou gavest Me I have given them." John 17:22. Religious denominations are but chaff that the wind driveth away. Sects and groups are naught but dust and ashes. What things were formerly gain to us now are counted loss for Christ that we might be found in Him.
The fact that men stand in various relationships to God is not only seen by the examples we have given but is a truth clearly taught by the apostles and by the Lord Himself. Paul describes a time when we were "enemies of God", when we were "hateful and hating one another", but exults in the blessed assurance that we were made nigh by the blood of Christ. There was a time when Jesus looked upon His disciples as servants, but saw their relationship advance beyond the somewhat austere relationship of servants to the warmth and comradeship of friends. "Henceforth I call you not servants," He said, "for the servant knoweth not what his Lord doeth; but I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of My Father I have made known unto you." John 15:15. It is blessed to be called a servant of Christ and twice blessed is he who, as Abraham, is called His friend! Yet it is with reverence and holy awe that we read that our Lord after His resurrection no longer referred to His disciples as servants or as friends, but, being raised to life and immortality, He commanded, "Go to My brethren, and say, I ascend to My Father and your Father, to My God and your God." John 20:17. See also Matt. 28:10.

Since, then, His Father is our Father and His God is our God, now are we as brothers to Him and sons of God. To the inspired writers of the New Testament the inspiration was given to emphasize the excellent worth of our sonship in Him. The sonship company has been in the process of gestation during the entire dispensation of grace. Jesus Christ, the head and firstborn, was first to appear and, since that blessed day of manifestation, the other sons of the same body have been in the process of formation. The shoulders, the arms, the belly, the legs, and now finally the beautiful feet ready for the washing are coming forth from the virgin womb. The picture is almost complete and one like unto the Son of man is rising to stand among the candlesticks. His head and His hair are white like wool, His eyes as a flame of fire. His breast is girt about with a golden girdle. His feet are as brass in a white, hot furnace. His voice is as the voice of a multitude, even a multitude of sons. The visage of the glory of His countenance is as the sun shining in his strength, and out of His mouth goes the sharp two-edged sword of truth to smite all nations with conviction and repentance, for the sword is the word of God.

King Solomon, his heart bathed in inspiration, beheld the day when the bride of Christ would be complete. In his prophetic and beautifully poetic pronouncement this scene appears: "There are threescore queens and fourscore concubines, and virgins without number. My dove, my undefiled is but one; she is the only one of her mother, she is the choice one of her that bare her. The daughters saw her, and blessed her; yea, the queens and the concubines, and they praised her." Songs of Sol. 6:8, 9. Here again circles within circles appear — virgins without number, women not married; fourscore concubines, women married, but not wives in the truest sense; sixty queens, all wives of the king; and then the final beloved one. My beloved, My Shulamite, is but one.

O, Thou whom my soul loveth, show me where Thou feedest Thy flock that I may be Thy brother and with Thee a son of God, and Thou mightest be the first-born of many brethren and the oldest in a vast family of sons!

CHAPTER FIVE
FAITH AND PATIENCE

"That ye be not slothful, but followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises." (Heb. 6:12.) Faith and Patience! What wonderful words these are! I wonder how many of God's dear children know that faith and patience walk hand in hand. Has it not been the thought in the minds of most of us that if one has faith he will not need to wait for anything? He will be able to touch some magic stream of blessing that will immediately bring to pass the thing he desired. He will not have to wait or be patient but triumphantly carry away the answer to his prayer. If God answers prayer immediately, then let His name be praised. If on the other hand years should go by and death should come while the promise is still afar off, know this: His promise is still certain and His word is sure.

As you walk through life with God, the passing years change many things. The song writer said, "Change and decay in all around I see." Men change, customs change, ways of doing things change. That which was new yesterday is withered and old today. Boys of yesteryear are the men of today and the ancients of tomorrow.
Moths corrupt the garments and rust eats the things of iron. Thieves break in and steal the priceless gems. Time withers with age even the stoutest things and makes of the mighty Hercules a tottering old man.

The change in all we see is decadent. The strong become weak, the mighty fall, the great things decay and return to dust. That is because the things that are seen are temporal. There are some things, however, which do not change from strong to weak and from beauty to ashes. They grow from weak to strong and from nothingness to omnipotence. These are the things that are not seen. They are the eternal things. God does not change but all that He is and does grows greater. His love does not decrease and become imperfect. It increases until that which was great yesterday is beyond compare tomorrow. His patience and longsuffering do not decrease and finally run out, but they grow greater and shine brighter through thousands of years of trial in bearing the reproaches of the ungodly. The man who sees God as an Almighty being who some day will run out of patience and in raging passion send His wrath upon a disobedient creation does not understand God nor His purpose in permitting a sinful creation to exist. Perhaps we have forgotten that all things were made by Him and for Him, that all things are for His glory and bring glory to Him. God is adding to His power, increasing His love, extending His patience, and perfecting further His longsuffering. Our puny idea of perfection is a cut and dried affair to which nothing can be added. Such a thing is static and dead. God's idea of perfection is manifest in His creation. The baby boy is admired by all as a "perfect child", but the perfect child of today learns to talk a year from now. He grows in wisdom and stature and favor with God and man.

Thus it is that God increases our faith through patience. At first what faith you had was void of patience. It wanted to see creation leap in response to its impatient demands. The sick must be healed right now. The world must be converted right now. We must get rid of carnality and become perfect now, of course; but as years went by and things continued much as they were before we tried to set the world on fire, we began very slowly to see that God is not enthused about impatient faith; we came to see that faith and patience are inseparable and methinks someday we will see that patience is faith. We have heard a great deal about faith, much of it springing from the desire of the carnal mind. Little indeed have we heard of patience without which there can be no real and lasting faith.

I am deeply impressed with the words of Jesus Christ as found in Luke 8:15. The Master was telling them of the sower and the seed and upon explaining the parable to them ended thus: "But that on the good ground are they which in an honest and good heart, having heard the word, keep it, and bring forth fruit with patience." What was it that caused the seed, which fell on stony ground and among the thorns to fail to bring forth a harvest? Was it just a lack of faith? No, I do not think so. There must have been some faith, otherwise they would never have started. They would have been like the seed, which fell by the roadside. It would have been carried away without taking root at all. No, the trouble was not with faith entirely. The difficulty was there was no patience and consequently no endurance.

Harvests do not come without patience and waiting. Vainly we have tried to squeeze God into our mold of haste and hurry. We have cried, wept, and teased like spoiled children in an endeavor to get our way and hurry God in His program. We have demanded of God and tried to command Him. We have quoted scriptures to try to bolster our position but all in vain. To learn faith in patience is much more important than for us to have our own way about things.

In Heb. 10: 35-37 the apostle wrote, "Cast not away therefore your confidence which hath great recompense of reward. For ye have need of patience that after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise. For yet a little while and He that shall come will come and will not tarry."

It is never difficult to find a multitude of folk who will eagerly embrace new revelation and truth. They will carry the palm branches and shout Hosanna in chorus with the multitude. They will thrill to the revelation and proclaim their undying consecration from the house tops. "I'm going through" will be the theme of their song. Enthusiasm knows no bounds as they proclaim the wonders of the message to their friends. One would think surely there never would be a declension in such unflagging devotion. But wait a little while. Let a few days drift into weeks. Let weeks enlarge themselves into months and months embrace years. The glow has gone from their testimony. No more is their voice lifted up on high. The enthusiasm is dissolved. We search for them among the depleted ranks of the faithful and they are not found. They have returned as a dog to his vomit and a sow to her wallowing in the mire. What has happened? Time has leveled them. Their patience has given way to disgust and despair. Because they could not hurry God or speed His promise, they lost all confidence and faith in it and returned again to feed on husks never more to hear His voice or have their eyes enlightened to His unfolding truth.

God is not interested in a vast multitude of people. He knows how impatient we all are. Well does He know that a few months of waiting for the promise will eliminate the vast majority of those who started on the journey, and a few years will wear out the patience of all but a few faithful pilgrims who have cast their anchors within the vail. The joy and anticipation of the prize lends them strength and fortitude. Nightly they pitch their moving tent a day's march nearer home as they rise on the stepping stones of their dead selves to higher things.

There are many wonderful truths to embrace, endless revelation to inspire and thrill the heart of man, but he will never enter into any of it without patience even to wait till the shadows lengthen on life's day. He may as well return to his husks now, for he will never receive the promise. Should the bloom fade from youth and the strength of manhood weaken till tired old hands are lifted upward to His own, yea, should life's silver thread break and love's eternal ray guide him to his everlasting home, still the promise is true for, when God awakens those who sleep in Him, he will walk in life's eternal reality.

The promises of God are vast and varied. Some of them are free and can be attained very easily. That is why so many people receive them. But if we would be sons of God and receive the life that raised Jesus from the dead, if we would learn the authority and government of God in preparation to take the kingdom and reign with Christ, then that is a different thing altogether. We must become followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises of God.

If we are going to be sons of God, it is not enough to have a saved soul. We must have a saved body as well. The final redemption of the body brings us to full sonship. If you read Rom. 8:18-23, you will see how true this is. I would like to quote it here as recorded in Phillip's translation. (Romans 8:18-23) "In my opinion whatever we may have to go through now is less than nothing compared to the magnificent future God has planned for us. The whole creation is on tip-toe to see the wonderful sight of the sons of God coming into their own. The world of creation cannot as yet see reality, not because it chooses to be blind but because God's purpose has been so limited. Yet it has been given hope and the hope is that in the end the whole creation will be rescued from the tyranny of change and decay and have its share in the magnificent liberty that can only belong to the children of God. It is plain for anyone with eyes to see that at the present time all created life groans in a sort of universal travail. And it is plain, too, that we who have a foretaste of the Spirit are in a state of painful tension while we wait for that redemption of our bodies, which will mean that at last we have realized full sonship in Him." Now is that not a wonderful thing? The life we now seek is the redemption of our bodies and that means "full sonship". Let us quote the rest of the passage now and see where patience comes in. "We are saved by hope, but in our moments of impatience let us remember that hope always means waiting for something that we haven't yet got. But if we hope for something we cannot see, then we must settle down and wait for it in patience".

Hope means "waiting for something we have not received." We know for sure that we will receive it, but we have not yet received it. That is why the scripture says, "We are saved by hope." but hope that is seen is not hope, for what a man seeth why doth he yet hope for? But if we hope for that we do not see, then we with patience wait for it. Hope and patience then go hand in hand.

I am writing these things because it is easy for some, if not all of us, to begin to run well but be hindered because we find the promise of God to be much further away than we had thought at first. Consequently patience runs out and men lose heart because the journey is long and the climb is very steep.

I still have vivid recollections of climbing a mountain at Banff, Alberta. The mountain towered seven thousand feet into the sky. A rough foot path zigzagged its way through rocks and streams and trees to its summit. We were all anxious for the climb and set out with eager anticipation. Many others set out ahead of us and were well up the mountain before we started. The first half hour or so of the climb was easy, but as time wore on it became more difficult. The mountain seemed to be steeper. Limbs began to ache and as the air became thinner with height, breathing became more difficult. In all the climb it was never possible to see the summit.
We felt sure that every bend in the path would be the final one. Surely we must be near the top. It could not be much farther now, but we were unpleasantly surprised to find a sign telling us we had now reached the halfway mark. That was discouraging and, being tired, it would have seemed well to return. We did not, however, and plodded on, quenching our thirst at mountain streams, sitting down to rest and enjoy the view from the height we had gained.

It was not long before we began to meet people coming back. We enquired of them about the climb but their answers were all adverse. Had they reached the top? Most of them answered, no. As we came within a thousand feet of the pinnacle, I well remember the path was not well beaten. Not too many feet had walked upon it till at one spot we lost it altogether. Finally we came to journey's end to feast our eyes on scenes far and wide. Mountains, which had seemed huge from the valley below now appeared as little hills. Stretching far and wide in all directions were peaks innumerable, many of which had never felt the tread of human feet. There was one sobering thought, however. Though we had climbed so high and were thrilled with the glory of things about us, we discovered there were mountain peaks all about us much higher than where we now stood. Some were three and four thousand feet above our level. Between us and them lay vast valleys, steep descents and precipitous climbs. There are always peaks beyond our highest attainments. To reach them we must descend in consecration and prayer. Our channels must be unstopped by fasting and weights must be cast off with the sins which easily beset us.

It takes patience to reach the summit. It takes endurance, too. No man having put his hand to the plow and looking back is fit for the kingdom of heaven.

We do not attain sonship by a single bound. Neither do we enter into that life which is the redemption of our bodies in a moment of time. Ye have need of patience. We must through faith and patience inherit the promise. Did you know that God, our heavenly Father, is called "the God of patience?" Rom. 15: 5. Is that not a wonderful thing? But the passage does not end there for it says, "The God of all patience and consolation grant you to be like-minded". May we truly be like Him.

Since God is a God of patience, it is impossible to imagine that He would require something less in those who are becoming His sons. If all those who read these lines and rejoice in these truths would but quietly meditate upon the infinite goodness of God in that He has called us to share with Him His eternal purposes, then we would gladly bow our necks to His yoke and willingly spend a whole life-time if by so doing the patience of God could be wrought in our own souls. But what has become of the patience and faith of the saints? What has happened to the people of God who embrace with assurance the eternal promises of the word of God, only to lose their grip upon those promises and cast them recklessly away because they do not see them immediately fulfilled? Their faith may have been very good to start with, but there was need of patience that after they had patiently endured they might receive the promise.

How often our hearts have thrilled as we have read the wonderful accounts of faith in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews! As we read those thrilling stories, our hearts always leap in anticipation of the possibilities of faith. "Oh," we sigh, "if only we had the faith of Moses, or Abraham, or Elijah, or could we like the three Hebrews walk unscathed in the fiery furnace, or could we like Daniel stand unharmed in the den of lions!" And on and on we go, foolishly imagining in our minds that these people were in some way created different from ourselves, that they were given a kind of head start and were not subject to the handicaps that blight our progress. But this is really not so. These men and women of whom the Spirit speaks in such glowing terms were men and women of like passions as we are. They were not different from you or me. The only difference was that they took the matter of their calling more seriously than most of us do, and much more seriously than the rank and file of people in their own day, who as a majority walked as we walk. If we settle down to patiently follow the promises God has made to His elect and chosen, we, too, will attain the inheritance even as they.

It would seem that one of the most outstanding and shining examples of faith the world has ever known was that patient, slow-going pilgrim, Abraham. He was not a prophet, nor a priest, nor a worker of miracles. He was a cattle man. We would have called him a rancher. When God called him to "come out", he came out, not knowing where to go, but "looking for a city that had foundations whose builder and maker was God." He could not see the city with his natural eyes. He could see it only by faith with the eyes of his spirit. God had promised him that every place whereon the sole of his foot should tread would be his, but it never came to pass during his life time. Surely there must have been moments when he wondered about the promises of God. Had he mistaken the voice of God? Or had he failed along the way somewhere? If these promises were true, why was he destitute of both houses and lands and forever dwelling in tents and among strangers.

Then there was the promise that his seed would be as the stars of the heaven and as the sand of the sea for number. What had become of these promises that at one time had quickened his step and made his heart beat wildly with anticipation? Where was the promise of God? Yea, where was God, who seemed at times to hide His face from him and cause the promise to mock him? He walked through the shadow of temptation just as you or I so often do. He knew what it was to wonder. He knew the disappointment of having days lengthen into years, years into decades, and decades into a century with still no sign of the fulfillment of the promise. He knew what it was to have men jest about his name, Abraham, which meant father of a multitude, but none of these things moved him. They may have discouraged him at times. They may have made him wonder; but there was that ever present urge of faith within that kept him plodding along in the direction God had shown him.

May I share with you now a little revelation about faith that has been a great blessing to me through life. It is based on one verse of scripture - Heb. 1: 13. This is what it says: "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims in the earth." As we read this strange passage of scripture, which seems so contradictory to our past traditions concerning faith, six great elements of faith stand boldly out for all to see, teaching us a lesson, not only of faith, but also of those two great brothers of faith, patience and endurance.

Let us then divide this verse to see these six great elements of faith.

1. These all died in faith.
2. Not having received the promises.
3. But having seen then afar off.
4. And were persuaded of them.
5. And embraced them.
6. And confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims in the earth.

We shall not become involved now in a dissertation on this verse, for the lessons it teaches would fill not only this book but many more besides. But it would be a disrespect to the truths contained herein not to briefly mention the gravity of their meaning.

Firstly: Men of faith do not always live long enough on the earth to see their faith fully realized, for these all died in faith. What a blessing it would be to us all if we could but see that the planting of a seed is just as important an act as garnering the harvest, for, while the harvest is much greater than the seed, yet without the seed that fell into the ground and died there would be no harvest at all, but only barren soil. Why do we not look beyond our frail earthly life with its pitiful failures to see the end of our faith in the ages yet to come? Have you not read the words of the prophet who spoke of Jesus Christ the Saviour who died, despised and rejected of men, filled with sorrow and acquainted with grief, and how God the Father looked into the unborn ages and "saw the travail of His soul and was satisfied"! Isa. 53:11. When therefore we believe the promise of God, we must count the dead as though they lived and believe that God is not the God of dead men but of living men, even as He said: "I am the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob". God is not the God of the dead, but of the living. If the promise of God to a man could be lost just because that man should die before he saw its fulfillment, then God would not be worthy to be called faithful and true. Those who receive and believe the promise of God will never be robbed of its attainment though death should walk the path between the promise and the fulfillment. "These all died in faith."
Secondly: "Not having received the promises." Oh, how often we have cruelly rebuked men for their lack of faith just because they were unable to receive a promise the moment we thought they should! Why have we never learned that God is more interested in purifying and building our confidence and trust in Him through patience and longsuffering than He is in giving us a pittance in answer to our begging? The alms we give to the beggar at the gate may be given without hesitation or consideration, but the provision we make for our children is a matter of life long concern. Can we expect less from our heavenly Father, who knows us not as beggars at the gate but as sons and daughters ordained by Him to share His eternal attributes? While we imagine that true faith will always touch some magic spring of blessing that will immediately give us the promise, the Holy Spirit is teaching us that faith is still faith and always abides the same though all should die, not having received the promise.

Thirdly: "Having seen them afar off." The spiritual eye has a good tendency to be far-sighted. It has that wonderful, strange, divine quality of being able to see things that are afar off and, better still, things that are invisible. Moses endured as seeing Him who is invisible. Heb. 11:27. Abraham looked for a city, which his natural eye could not behold. He knew it was there for he could see it afar off in his spirit. Therefore his whole life was devoted to pressing toward it and it shall be his reward eternally.

It is right here that so many of us fail. We catch a glimpse of the transcending wonder of the promise of God and we set out joyfully to reach the goal. But the hills and valleys that lie before us hide the promise from our eyes. The drifting snows have buried our path and caused our feet to stumble, while the burning desert sands choked us with thirst and prepared our tomb. Earthborn clouds ever rise to hide the promise from our eyes, but it is here as nowhere else that faith walks hand in hand and step in step with patience. While faith has power to believe, patience has power to wait and endure, and we shall through faith and patience inherit the promises.

Have you ever gone through some outstanding experience, which, after it was past, seemed as though it had never really happened? How often we hear folk say, "It just seems like a dream to me," or "I can hardly believe I was ever there," or "I can scarcely believe that it ever happened." We all have experiences like that. Strangely enough we are inclined to be creatures of the present and sometimes of the past, but we are seldom creatures of the future. For this very reason men and women who have seen by faith that which is afar off are inclined to doubt the reality of the promise they saw, as they pass through the wilderness of sin, the fiery furnace, or the lion's den. Those who are far-sighted enough to see that which is afar off will never be darlings of the world, and by the world of religion and tradition they will be regarded as visionaries, mystics, fanatics, and fools. But happy indeed is the man who can see the promise of God though it be very far off.

Fourthly: "They were persuaded of them." It was the apostle Paul who said, "I know whom I have believed and am persuaded ... 2 Tim. 1:12, but it was King Agrippa who uttered that pitiful though memorable phrase, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." It is one thing to see a thing whether it be near or far off, but it is another thing altogether to be fully persuaded about it. It is those who are only half persuaded that return as dogs to their vomit and as sows to their wallowing in the mire. Bunyan saw in his vision that, as Christian and Pliable journeyed toward the Celestial City, both of them fell into the horrible slough of despond. But he also saw that, though they both struggled out of the slime and the filth, Pliable climbed out the same side he fell in - nearest the City of Destruction - while Christian got out on the opposite side of the slough, nearest to the Celestial City. So, you see, it is not our falling into the slough, into the fire, or anything else that counts. The thing that counts is on which side we climb out. All those who see a promise afar off should be firmly persuaded of it before they start the journey, for only God knows the precipitous climbs and the dismal valleys that lie ahead.

Personally, I am very glad that I did not know all the things that lay ahead when I began this journey years ago. God in wonderful grace hid from my eyes the pitfalls and discouragements that were to bedevil the path that He had prepared for my feet. I knew practically nothing then of my own weaknesses and inherent sin. I did not know that of all the antichrists I would meet the greatest and fiercest of them all was within me, even that carnal mind which is an eternal enemy of God. I knew nothing of the half-heartedness of many people, nor that treachery, envy, deceit, and betrayal would be found in the hearts of those who walked in company with me to the house of the Lord. Be all these things as they may, but if we are going to gain the prize and lay hold on the pearl of great price which lies at the journey's end, we are going to have to be fully persuaded of the reality of the prize for which we seek.
Are we fully persuaded that God is calling us to sonship? Are we sufficiently persuaded about Zion to earnestly press toward it? Are we sufficiently persuaded about Babylon, the Mother of harlots, to come out of her and be joined to Christ and to Him alone? Are we fully persuaded about the eternal purpose of God? Persuaded enough, I mean, to abandon all else and cling only to that? Oh, how often we meet men and women on the way back. They become impatient about the road that leads to Zion's hill, so back they go to Babylon's tottering tower. They lose patience and can no longer believe that the vision they saw is sure and the promise immutable. They start thinking and reasoning in the natural and human wisdom tells them to forget the promise of God and return, so back they go. Can we not hear the voice of Jesus saying, "He that putteth his hand to the plow and looketh back is not fit for the kingdom?" And again, "Remember Lot's wife."

No looking back; just forward to glory,

With joyous hope and glad expectant face

To find, when He unfolds life's finished story,

Wealth, wealth unfading and an honored place.

Let us then be fully persuaded concerning these promises of God, and, being persuaded, let us lay aside every weight and run with patience the race that is set before us.

Fifthly: "They embraced them." To embrace is to enfold in the arms, to clasp and to hug. Ah! What a picture that is! What a sermon in that one word! Is this not truly the way that the elect of God must lay hold on the promise they have seen, to embrace it, to enfold it, and to hug it that none of the jolting experiences of life can tear it from them? "Holdfast that which is good," said Paul. 1 Thess. 5:21. "We are made partakers of Christ if we hold fast the confidence firm to the end." Heb. 3:6. Hold fast the confidence! Holdfast the profession of your faith! Holdfast that which thou hast that no man take thy crown!

We may not think these things are important nor that they apply to us, but they do. It was Esau who held his birthright so loosely that he sold it for a mess of pottage and, though he afterward saw his mistake and sought the blessing earnestly with tears, yet he was rejected. This same mistake is repeated in the lives of Christians every living day. Not that they are not saved, but that they hold the promises that lie before them so loosely that they relinquish them for love of some paltry thing that can become their possession here and now. It was Demas who departed from Paul, having loved this present world. So in his love for the visible he lost sight of the invisible, and in his desire for the passing he lost the permanent. Let us be exhorted then to embrace the promises, for that is an element of faith. Let us lay hold of the vision before us and it shall be our joy and crown eternally.

Finally: "They confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims in the earth." If this were always our testimony and our attitude, we could save ourselves whole worlds of trouble. Is it not true that our whole attitude in life portrays that we live our lives as though we were going to remain here forever and live on and on as we are? We are so much like the rich man who said, "I will tear down my barns and build greater and there I will bestow all my goods, and I will say to my soul, "Soul, thou hast much goods laid up in store for many years. Take thine ease; eat, drink, and be merry." But our attitude should not be the attitude of the citizens of this age. Our attitude should be the attitude of pilgrims who are passing through this fleeting age to the realm of their true citizenship. Visitors to foreign lands seldom invest in things they cannot carry with them, but we who have our citizenship in heaven are forever getting our affections bound up with the earth as though we were citizens of it. This ought not to be.

Though we might pass lightly over this final statement of faith, we may be sure that, before we can ever find the faith and patience that will bring us to the promise, we must have this confession within ourselves - that we are strangers and pilgrims in the earth. Though we may give this testimony to those about us, yet the true testimony is given when we speak the truth inwardly in our own heart. Our declarations before men count for little. God requires truth in the inward parts.

"Cast not away therefore your confidence, which hath great recompense of reward. For ye have need of patience that after ye have done the will of God ye might receive the promise." Heb. 10:35-36.
While we journey on this pilgrimage to God's great calling of sonship, there are many questions that must go completely unanswered. We must all learn that the effectiveness of the thing God is doing is not necessarily hindered by our lack of perfect understanding. Our faith and trust in God's purposes shine with increasing brilliance because we trust and believe in that which we do not see. But we do see promise with the eye of the spirit and we do hear it with the ear of faith. We believe, because God has said it, it is so and believing we rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory. Thomas once said, "Except I shall see the prints of the nails in His hands and thrust my hand into His side, I will not believe." But Christ appeared to him and said, "Reach hither thy hand and thrust it into My side, and be not faithless, but believing"; and when his wavering faith was strengthened, the Saviour thus reproved him, "Because thou hast seen, thou hast believed; blessed is he who has not seen and yet has believed."

We are not able to explain, for we do not understand, why the blessed Father has seen such infinite value in the virtue He calls patience, but the value is there and He deems it not wasted time to spend a life-time in its cultivation. We should, therefore, take more earnest heed to it, for there is evidently some wonderful unseen value in patience that brings the believer to a realm of perfection that only God knows and understands. We all have surely read this exhortation: "Let patience have her perfect work that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing." Jas. 1:4. Why not stop reading right here and consider this verse long and earnestly, for it speaks more truth in one brief statement than I can say in many a word. I know of no other spiritual virtue about which such potent words are spoken. The work of patience is perfect and entire. Those who possess it want nothing. It is ordained of God to operate in my life and yours because its work brings the excellence of perfection into our lives. Therefore he says, "Let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect." Paul once said, "Not as though I had attained, either were already perfect..." No doubt his patience was being tried to the very limit, but the very trial he was patiently enduring was that which was hastening his perfection. The Holy Spirit exhorts us all to be "followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises."

We are living in an impatient world. Everywhere people are in a desperate rush. Undue pressure caused by hurry and worry of business is causing hearts to fail on every hand. We live in a horn-tooting, light-crashing, speed-breaking impatient age. Bad as this may be, it is even worse to find that the same restless spirit that is in the world has been carried into the realm of religion as well. Everywhere men are trying to hurry God's program. Hurry! Hurry!! Hurry!!! They hurry because the end is near, hurry because this may be the last opportunity, hurry because communism will engulf the world, hurry because of the population explosion, and hurry because of the threat of nuclear war. But we will find eventually that God cannot be hurried. We will have to learn that, long, long before God made the earth, He foreknew all these circumstances that exist today and ordained them as part of His own will and purpose for the time of the end. All those who are in such a desperate haste will find eventually that their efforts have not altered the course of the world at all. The nations of the earth are as rivers of water and God orders their courses as He wills. They are as dust in the balances that He brushes off at His pleasure. He raises them up and puts them down as He pleases. What help will it be for me to try to extinguish a fire that He has kindled or to relight a fire that He has extinguished? I have but one responsibility in life, and that is to listen to His voice and walk according to His eternal purpose.

When we see the haste and impatience of Christians as they drown their lives in religious activity, we would surely think that God had fallen asleep and needed to be awakened or that things had gotten beyond His control and He needed impatient and desperate men to save Him from being overwhelmed. God has no such need. He is seeking only men who see His purpose and walk in faith and patience toward it. It should be clear for all to see that, if patience works perfection, then impatience is bound to have the opposite effect.

Now notice that tribulation worketh patience, patience worketh experience, experience worketh hope, and hope maketh not ashamed because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost. Rom. 5:3-5. Consider well these successive steps that rise like the rungs of a giant ladder from the desolation of tribulation to the glory of that plane where the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts. Tribulation! Patience! Experience! Hope! Not ashamed! The love of God! Heaven is not reached by a single bound, But we build the ladder by which we rise From the lowly earth to the vaulted skies, And we mount its summit round by round. People bowed down with care and tribulation often write to tell of their sorrow and heartache. My heart goes out to them in sympathy and often we kneel together in prayer and pray for men and women who are feeling the crushing load of trouble and despair. But, though we fervently pray for them, yet so often it is well nigh impossible to ask God to remove their tribulation, for He who sees the steps that lead to perfection and sonship certainly knows that tribulation worketh patience, patience worketh experience, experience worketh hope and hope maketh not ashamed because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts. We dare not and must not hinder God's refining processes, for they are bringing us to perfection and sonship. I asked for life and this is what He gave me; My lot is hard, my tears flow like the rain. I asked for hours gay with sunshine spattered, But lo! my waking hours are filled with pain. How could I know that crushing brings the fragrance Like perfume from some crushed and bleeding rose, That in the process of my better making God used the methods He approved and chose? "Re patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it until he received the early and latter rain. Be ye also patient; Establish your hearts, for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh ... Take, my brethren, the prophets, who have spoken in the name of the Lord, for an example of suffering affliction and of patience. Behold, we count them happy which endure. Ye have heard of the patience of Job and have seen the end of the Lord, that the Lord is very pitiful and of tender mercy." Jas. 5:7, 8, 10, 11.

There are times when despair and hopelessness stalk our pathway like ravening wolves seeking to destroy our hope, but in such times of tribulation we hear the words of promise ringing o'er the tumult of our strife. "Cast not away your confidence which has great recompense of reward, for ye have need of patience that, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promises. For yet a little while and He that shall come will come and will not tarry." Heb. 10: 35-37. And again He says, "That ye be not slothful, but followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises." Heb. 6:12.

Since the world began there has never been a more important hour than the one in which we now live. For six thousand years the whole creation has groaned in travail waiting and waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God. Not only does the creation and every form of created life wait and groan for that glorious hour, but we who are being prepared for sonship also groan and sigh, waiting for that hour of redemption which will mean that at last we have attained full sonship. Everywhere the groaning creation is sending its heart-breaking sighs up to God. Every physical pain is a sigh to God for deliverance. Every drop of blood shed in war is a groan for universal peace and justice. Every typhoon, tornado, or hurricane is nature's cry for deliverance. Every crime committed, every death endured, every starved and famished body, and every broken home is creation's plaintive prayer to the Creator for the manifestation of His sons, for they will deliver the world from the bondage of corruption into the glorious freedom of God's children.

It seems to me that Romans 8:18-28 is the very core and heart of the entire plan and purpose and will of God. Sonship is the theme of that magnificent fiat. The apostle emphatically declares that every created thing is patiently expecting and awaiting the manifestation of the sons of God, for this and this alone is their deliverance. Even the sons of God themselves groan within themselves, longing to come to full sonship, and this also is the prayer of the Holy Spirit who helps our infirmities, enabling us to pray according to the will of God. The suffering of this present age is not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us; neither is it to be compared with the boundless deliverance that will come to all creation through the sons of God. Oh, that God would open the eyes of His people who have believed on His name that they might leave their hopeless paths of tradition and their human ways of looking at things and begin to fall in step with the eternal purpose that is laid out so beautifully before our eyes. Since so much depends on our entering into the glory of that sonship which He first ordained when He said, "Let Us make man in Our image and after Our likeness, and let Us give him dominion ....," we should therefore strip ourselves of every weight to run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith.

It would not be right to finish this article without a few more words of exhortation. We have heard many wonderful things from the heart of God in the past few months. If you will take time to consider the light and understanding God has given you, you will surely agree that the Lord is opening the eyes of His people to turn them from darkness to light. He is giving them understanding in the things that have been hidden from ages and dispensations. The eternal purposes that have been locked up in His mind and kept secret from the foundation of the world are being gradually unfolded before our wondering eyes, for the time is at hand when all men must see how great and wonderful are the mysteries reserved for the end of this age.

While we remain as children, many things are purposely kept secret from us. It has to be that way. We do not tell our little children about our plans and purposes. We do not trust them with responsibility nor laugh at them because of their ignorance. So also it is in our relationship with God. While we are children, God deals with us as with children. He patiently waits as we grow to maturity and expects very little of us except obedience. But the hour of maturity and sonship finally comes — the hour He planned from the beginning of the world. When that long-awaited hour comes, God begins to reveal to His sons the things that concern His purpose for the government of the world and the universe in the fullness of time.

The childish traditions of the church have clouded men's minds with darkness and have hung a vail of blindness over their eyes. The things that are really important we cannot see and the things that are not important are magnified to the heavens. I have actually had men tell me that to put emphasis on sonship is selfishness. Instead of emphasizing sonship, they say, we should be up and doing and trying to bring the world to Christ. I really have no argument with any man about such things, but when I read in Romans 8 that the whole creation — man, animals, birds, fish, vegetable life, and even the elements — is groaning in travail for the hour when they will be delivered from their dreadful night of bondage by the sons of God, then how can I or any man be so ignorant and short-sighted as to condemn those who see the purpose of God in sonship and who press toward it with all their strength? Not only is creation groaning for this most important of all events, but the Spirit also helps our infirmity and gives to us that spirit by which we are able to say, "Abba Father." The spirit that cries, "Abba Father," is indeed the spirit of sonship, for who else can cry "Our Father" but he who is a son of God?

Let us then be careful that we do not become as Israel in the wilderness who, finding the way slow and hard, became discouraged and in their hearts turned back again to Egypt. I am absolutely convinced that no man will ever attain to sonship until his faith and patience and endurance have been tried to the very limit. I feel I have the mind of the Lord when I say that God is going to shake everything in heaven and in earth so that all things that can be shaken will be shaken and will fall out and go back that only the people who cannot be shaken may remain. We may have brought the idea with us from the traditions of the past that God will turn Himself inside out to coax us along to sonship, but I cannot see any scripture anywhere to substantiate such a claim. Every evidence is that "if they had been mindful of that country from whence they came out, they might have had opportunity to return." Heb. 11:15. It is just the same now as it was then. Those who become weary with the journey and the difficulties of the way will be given opportunity to return to their old orders and their old traditions.

I have long been intrigued with the inspired statement of Paul in Rom. 8:29, 30. "Whom He did foreknow, He did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son. Whom He did predestinate them He called, whom He called He justified, and whom He justified He glorified." These are the steps on the stairway to sonship — foreknowledge, predestination, justification, and glorification. But we must give all diligence to make our calling and election sure, for we could turn back at each step. "And giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity. For if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure, for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall; for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the age lasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ." 2 Pet. 1:5-11.

To try to get the world converted in this age is not the most important thing, for God has reserved to Himself a day when all who sit in darkness shall see a great light and all shall know Him from the least to the greatest. He has ordained a day when no man shall say, "Know the Lord," for all shall know Him, but in this age of grace He is calling out a people for His name. Acts 15:14-18. He is completing His body and perfecting His sons in preparation for the government of the world in the ages to come. Let no man deceive you then, for we cannot possibly over-estimate the tremendous importance of reaching forth to maturity and sonship.

Do not worry as to whether or not you seem to be making progress. There is nothing in the world that grows so fast that you can see it grow. Let God be judge of how much or how little you have grown. Your duty and mine is to press relentlessly onward heedless of circumstances or conditions, but pressing patiently toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.
When the path ahead is rough,
And the rocks in ridge and bluff
Bar your progress to the distant peaks sublime;
When your strength and heart are breaking,
Take pride in the fight you're making;
Throw your rope around a higher rock and climb!
"Be ye followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises."

THE ABIDING PRESENCE

"The course of bad men leads through darkness dim; they cannot see what makes them stumble. The course of good men, like a ray of dawn, shines on and on to the full light of day." (Prov. 4:18,19) (Moffatt). The burning truth that lies hidden in these words of inspiration is borne home to our hearts with ever increasing power as we see the lengthening shadows falling about us as sentinels, heralding the end of the age. It is not without purpose that the Holy Spirit has been directing our thoughts and bending our inmost nature toward a deep and abiding relationship with Jesus Christ, our Lord — a kinship in Him none but the elect in any age can know. All about us we see the paths of bad men leading them into ever increasing darkness while on the other hand the path of the just, shining more and more with the revealing light of truth, inspires our hearts to sing that gladsome song, "His lightnings enlighten the world: the earth saw and trembled. The hills melted like wax at the presence of the Lord, at the presence of the Lord of the whole earth." Psa. 97:4,5.

God's purpose in leading men out is that He might lead them in. The God and Father of Abraham led him out of Ur of the Chaldees that he might be led into a land that He would show him. Israel was led out of Egypt that the nation might be led into a land flowing with milk and honey. So now in our day! The God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, who in ages past led them from Babylon and Egypt, is calling to a people enslaved by traditions and bound by sectarian chains of darkness to leave their prison house of confusion to walk in the presence of Jesus Christ, who is the head of the only true church in the universe, the church of the firstborn, the born again, whose names are emblazoned on the pages of the Book of Life — not with the fading ink from the pens of men, but with eternal Spirit of the living God.

During the short span of our sojourn here on earth thoughtful people, knowing that they must soon depart from this valley of the shadow of death, prepare their last will and testament for the benefit of loved ones who will be obliged to carry on after they are gone. Our last will and testament is not of force, however, until our eyes close in the dreamless sleep of death. Paul made reference to this fact when he said, "For where a testament (will) is, there must also of necessity be the death of the testator. For a testament (will) is of force after men are dead: otherwise it is of no strength at all while the testator liveth." Heb. 9:16,17. During those memorable days in which our Lord Jesus Christ walked among men, He left for us a will so forceful, so strong and completely unalterable, that no power in the universe can change, alter, or destroy it. Hear now, ye partakers of His benefit, as He sets forth His eternal will for us in these immutable words of truth: "Father, I will that they also, whom Thou hast given Me, be with Me where I am; that they may behold My glory, which Thou hast given Me: for Thou lovedst Me before the foundation of the world." John 17:24. And again: "Whosoever ye shall ask in My name, that will I do. .. If ye shall ask anything in My name, I will do it." John 14:13,14. "I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you." John 14:18. "If any man love Me, he will keep My words: and My Father will love him, and We will come unto him, and make Our abode with him." John 14:23. But the special promise which most concerns the message of the moment is this: "I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter, that He may abide with you forever; even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive because it seeth Him not, neither knoweth Him: but ye know Him; for He dwelleth with you, and shall be in you." John 14:16,17. In these words our Lord gave us the explicit assurance that He would be present with us and in us all through the troublesome days of our earthly pilgrimage. It was of this abiding presence that David spoke, saying in Psa. 23, "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for Thou art with me."

You have noticed that, when Jesus gave the promise that the Holy Spirit would abide with us forever, with great significance He added, "Whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth Him not." The world as a whole and carnal Christians are usually ready to proclaim that seeing is believing. What they cannot see with
The moment a Christian begins to see the invisible, hear the inaudible, and comprehend the incomprehensible, then his friends and neighbors call him mystical. "Much learning has made thee mad," they say, or sympathetically they think he has gone soft in the head. But, while they amuse themselves with derogation, hoping to belittle and disparage, the truth must ever be confessed that those who share the mysteries of God must of necessity be mystics. "Great is the mystery of godliness," saith the Lord, and to this my searching heart replies, "I shall be satisfied only when I awake in Thy likeness." If this be mysticism, then with all my heart I am a mystic. The Holy Spirit whispers this truth to every believing heart: "The things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal." "Rabbi, Thou art the Son of God: Thou art the King of Israel," cried the fervent Nathaniel as the eyes of his understanding were opened. And Jesus Himself, seeming to be amazed at such divine illumination, responded with this assurance, "Because I said unto thee, I saw thee under the fig tree, believest thou? Thou shall see greater things than these... Verily, verily, I say unto you, Hereafter ye shall see heaven open, and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man." John 1: 49-51.

The burning desire within my heart in this the end of the age is that God's chosen people might with me become aware of the abiding presence of God. Several years ago one of my dearest friends wrote me a letter in which he spoke of the reality of the presence of God. I read his letter with interest, but the force of the truth did not then fully grip me. The letter was laid aside and the truth contained therein was almost forgotten until one early morning I dreamed a dream in which the presence of God descended upon me from heaven, increasing in wonder and power as it drew near. I awoke in ecstasy of spirit, breathing aloud the words, "How wonderful is the presence of God!" From that moment until now the blessed fact of His presence has often filled my meditation, and the truth which I now set before you conies with the earnest hope that all who read may henceforth walk with an ever increasing consciousness of the presence of Him who told us in words that cannot fail, "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the age."

For centuries men have spoken — some reverently, some carelessly — of walking in the presence of God; but it is indisputably true that such great statements of truth lose their sacred meaning by man's constant and often flippant reiteration. Students of theology, poor souls, are usually first and foremost in this transgression. Poring over their musty volumes, they learn the arguments and proofs, which teach that God is almighty, but the almighty God Himself they do not know. They write their learned essays on the love of God, but the God of love is a stranger to their hearts. They themselves become ineffective and often vacillating and hypocritical because they have separated truth from the Person, knowing the law, but not the law giver, reciting the truth, but having no relationship with Him who is the truth. A lifetime of experience has taught me that it is possible for one to know all the arguments and possess all the answers, but still be a stranger to God. I testify to all, however, that, the moment any man begins to know Him, vast changes take place in his understanding, for to know Him is to be like Him. "We, beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into that same image, from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord." 2 Cor. 3:18.

The Holy Spirit, who proceeded forth from the Father, is not an influence, but a divine person, possessing personal names, personal attributes, personal qualities, personal offices, performing personal ministries and personal acts, and referred to by personal pronouns. I shall never be persuaded to descend to that valley of carnality where men delight to reason and debate about trinities and unities, for why should the fellowship of the saints, together with the joy of their friendship, be cruelly destroyed by debating these sacred things before whose mystery wise and holy angels bow their heads in silent awe? The man who seeks to argue about the Godhead has lost his sense of respect for the awful greatness of God. Yet be it known to one and all that He whose presence abides with us throughout all this age of grace is that same Holy Spirit of whom Jesus spoke, saying, "I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter, that He may abide with you forever; even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth Him not, neither knoweth Him: but ye know Him; for He dwelleth with you, and shall be in you. I will not leave you comfortless; I will come to you." John 14:16-18.

With my small and limited ability I cannot make the truth of Christ's abiding presence to be a living, transforming reality to your heart. None but the Spirit of God is capable of this divine and mighty act of illumination. He alone can take the things of God and show them unto you. Nevertheless, I confidently assure you that, the moment the solemnizing fact of Christ's presence grips your heart and fills your mind by the Holy Spirit, the reality of His presence will immediately begin to transform your life. Yea, and I shall further add that the knowledge of His abiding presence will also begin to change and renew your body as well; but of this we shall speak at a later time. The sublime truth of His ever abiding presence through an indisputable promise of God's grace cannot and will not become real to you until you devote yourself to it by prayer, by meditation, by fasting, and by faith above all else. "Lo, I am with you," Jesus said; and, if His word cannot be trusted, our mighty foundations are but quicksand beneath our faltering feet. But He who abides with us forever is He whom "having not seen, we love; in whom, though now we see Him not, yet believing, we rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory." 1 Pet. 1:8.

Again 'tis eventide and we, Oppressed with various ills, draw near; And, though Thy form we cannot see, We feel and know that Thou art near.

"This is He who was with the church in the wilderness, with the angel which spake to him (Moses) in the Mount Sinai, and with our fathers: who received the lively (living) oracles to give unto us." Acts 7:38.

Some glad morning, when the ever, unfolding plan of God is complete, our eyes will behold with endless joy that heaven blest Eden, the garden in which walked Adam, the son of God. Our eyes, long dimmed by the things of earth, have not beheld such glories as were there; our ears have not heard its deep songs of joy, nor have our dreams pictured that land so fair, whose inhabitants knew no sorrow nor crying, no tears nor death nor pain. Wonderful as were its heavenly charms, the glory above all else that made each moment an endless joy was the glory of God's abiding presence. He who knew all things from the beginning to the end was abiding there with them. He in whom all power dwells, whether in heaven or in earth, was holding them by the hand. The omnipresent Lord, who knows neither slumber nor sleep, was abiding there. It could not have been otherwise else God could not be God. "In Thy presence," wrote David, "is fullness of joy; at Thy right hand are pleasures forevermore." In this secret place they dwell beneath the shadow of the Almighty, for the Lord God is a sun and a shield to all who walk uprightly. Then in God's wisdom the dark hour came when the creature was made subject to vanity. Rom. 8:20. Stretching forth his hand in disobedience, he took of the fruit of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil and did eat, "and the eyes of them both were opened, and they knew that they were naked; and they sewed fig leaves together, and made themselves aprons." Gen. 3:7. But they were ashamed to meet God in their fig leaf aprons, and, when in the evening of the day "they heard the voice of the Lord God walking in the garden ... Adam and his wife hid themselves from the presence of the Lord amongst the trees of the garden." Gen. 3:8. Surely none could have been more conscious of God's presence than were Adam and Eve as daily they walked and talked with Him, but now their disobedience had thrust them into a dreadful outer darkness that made them feel naked, ashamed, and frightened at the very thought of God's presence so that they desired only to hide themselves from Him forever.

Here, then, when man in fear and shame hid himself from the presence of God, was the beginning of labor, sorrow, and night. Thus from the glory and light of God's presence all men in Adam were cast; for there is no difference, since all have sinned and come short of the glory of God through man's transgression. Upon our eyes a vail was cast that could not be taken away until that day of triumph in which Jesus Christ, the "second man", 1 Cor. 15:47, rent the vail in two and flung the gates wide open that repentant, forgiven and newborn men might come with boldness into the holiest by the blood of Jesus - by a new and living way which He has consecrated for us through the vail, that is to say, His flesh. Heb. 10:19,10. For this purpose the Spirit of truth was given, that we who have fixed our hopes in Jesus may abide in His presence forever.

Let us consider with care the detriment that fell like a cloud upon the human family when through disobedience and transgression Adam hid himself from the presence of God. We should not be obliged to present lengthy arguments to prove that man without God is hopelessly blind to eternal things, pitifully helpless, and desperately carnal. Once our eyes become closed to the invisible things, then we are blind to the eternal things, for the things, which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal. When our eyes are closed to the invisible, then our vision changes from things above to things beneath. Because we are no longer conscious of the invisible and the eternal, we begin to feast our eyes on the visible and the temporal. Without God men are hopelessly in the flesh. They pass their time in the worthless pursuits of the flesh. Their days are spent in vanity, seeking to gratify the five senses of the physical body, but seldom do they learn that this cannot be done. The eye is never filled with seeing. The lust of the eye for seeing is insatiable. The ear is never filled with hearing, nor is the taste ever satisfied with the rarest of dainties. All our physical appetites, like the grave and the barren womb, never say, "It is enough".

How often, as I have read the books of First and Second Kings, have I been almost sickened by the dreadful display of carnality and wickedness, manifested in the lives of the kings of Judah and Israel! These were men who from their childhood knew the law of God. They knew better than to do as they did, yet their lives were a continual manifestation of the lusts of the flesh and the desires of the corrupt and carnal mind. The further they went in their unholy desire to gratify the lusts of the flesh the more they rejected God, and the further they departed from His presence the lower they sank in their degrading rebellion. Even Solomon himself, because he loved many women, is found in the end to be a tax-raising oppressor, building altars and places of worship to the abominable gods of his heathen wives, and even stooping to worship them himself. 1 Kings 11:6-8, 33.

Man, without God to change his evil nature, can never hope to bring peace or justice in the earth. The tree of the carnal mind bears the evil fruit of adultery, fornication, uncleanness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulation, wrath, strife, sedition, and heresy as naturally as an apple tree bears apples; but the Spirit of the living God, seated in glory upon the throne of the regenerated heart, filling it with the mind of Christ, bears the good fruit of the Spirit — love, joy, peace, longsuffering, goodness, gentleness, meekness, faithfulness, and temperance. Against such there is no law, neither in earth beneath nor in heaven above.

How wonderful are the words of our Saviour, "Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter the kingdom of heaven." Matt. 18:3. What better word could we find than the word converted? He who believes on the Lord Jesus Christ is converted in every sense of that word. All that he ever was is passed away and all that he never was is vital, unfading, and new. "He whom the Son sets free is free indeed," for he has passed from death across to life, from a child of the flesh to a child of the Lord, from the bondage of corruption to the freedom of the Spirit, from dreaded condemnation to acceptance and pardon in His sight. Changes so great as to seem almost incredible transform the life of every believer when Jesus Christ comes into his heart. He who once, because of the filth of his sin, hid himself in shame and fear from the presence of God now returns to bask in the shekinah of God's presence because he has repented of his sin and been cleansed by the blood of the everlasting covenant. "For," said Paul, "if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh, how much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered Himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God?" Heb. 9:13-14. "The blood of Jesus Christ, God's Son, cleanseth us from all sin," 1 John 1:7, and the man who is thus cleansed by faith in Christ is brought back by Him into that glorious presence from which he hid himself in the long ago. Among the sacred scenes of earth none is more wonderful to the regenerated heart than the sight of a sinner coming home to God in repentance. Many times in my life I have watched them come - from tender little boys and girls, sobbing at the feet of Jesus as though they were the greatest of sinners, to men and women hardened and calloused by decades of groveling in the swine pens of iniquity. To the lover of our souls it makes no difference who we are. The same Christ is as real to one as to the other and the same all-powerful blood cleanses from all sin. As the lines of hardness fade away from the sinner's face and the joy of the Lord fills his heart with peace, myriad angels on high fill the
The death we endure outside the presence of God is a dreadful experience. Forth from its unholy shadow every evil and ill of all the ages have proceeded to curse humanity. Every war that has darkened the pages of history has come as a result of man's separation from God's presence - every persecution of righteousness, every hateful demeanor, every torture chamber, every sickness and disease, every hospital and cemetery. The vast, overpowering corruption of the present hour, which sees humanity more sinful and separated from God than at any time since the days of Noah, is the result of man's continual desire to hide himself from God's presence. Because men do not like to retain God in their knowledge, God has given them up to a reprobate mind to do the things which are not convenient, being filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity; whisperers, backbiters, haters of God, despiteful, proud, boasters, inventors of evil things, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, covenant breakers, without natural affection, implacable, unmerciful; who, knowing the judgment of God that they which do such things are worthy of death, not only do the same, but have pleasure in them that do them. See Rom. 1:28-32. The murderous rash of convenience abortions now filling the earth with the blackness of iniquity is no less heinous a crime than the slaughter of the innocents in the days of Herod. The callous insensibility of this inhuman act is a crying evidence that mankind has entered the incredible place of stupefaction described by Paul as “without natural affection.” 2 Tim 3:3. Any reasonable person will concede that an extenuating circumstance may arise which could justify the termination of the pregnancy, but God will hold mankind responsible for the mass murder of the innocents that now every year exceeds by far the number of babies thrown into the river by the wicked Pharaoh or slaughtered by that bloody murderer, king Herod. I am often reminded of the words of one devout Christian woman who, being gravely ill during the months of her confinement, was warned by her doctor that it would not be possible for both her and the unborn baby to survive. To save her own life she was advised to immediately terminate her pregnancy. To this suggestion the brave woman gave this beautiful answer of resignation and consecration: "The Lord knows which life to spare and which to take." The result was that both were spared. How good our heavenly Father is to those who put their trust in Him!

The last stage in the corruption and final destruction of a nation is reached by the acceptance and popularization of the sin of sodomy, that vile affection which Paul describes as changing the natural use to that which is against nature, men with men working that which is unseemly. Rom. 1:26-27. This is the sin, which brought fire and brimstone to consume Sodom and purify the ground on which it stood. This is the abomination that hastened the flood in the days of Noah. Man cannot possibly survive nor can a nation endure once he stoops to this dreadful evil. Because of it God curses the people with a reprobate mind to do all manner of things that are inconvenient. Perhaps I will shock you when I say that the problems facing the world are neither complex nor difficult; neither are they complicated nor hard to solve. The solutions are exceedingly simple; the difficulty is in man's mind. It has become reprobate and confused by his iniquity so that every decision he makes is wrong and everything he does is inconvenient. It is useless to try to correct it now. The abominable confusion must await the termination of man's six days of labor, confusion, and turmoil. Then will follow the reign of Christ and His sons. Then the knowledge of the Lord will fill the earth as the waters cover the sea. Selfishness will be gone forever and iniquity shall be no more. Repentance shall have filled the earth of men with believing faith, and we shall have returned to dwell in the blessedness of God's live-giving presence.

The message of life that even in this evil hour still permeates the believing heart of every saint separated unto God by His Holy Spirit is this: It is possible for saints here and now to live with the constant and continual assurance that the same Lord Who walked with Adam in heaven blessed Eden is now walking with them. As the days have passed, especially in recent months, there has come to me an ever, increasing assurance that I am dwelling and walking in His presence. God is no longer far away; He is here. No longer need saints say, "Who shall ascend into heaven to bring Christ down from above, or who shall descend into the deep to bring up Christ again from the dead? The word (Christ) is nigh there, even in thy mouth and in thy heart." Rom. 10:6-7.

This is not a moment for fine words or eloquent speech. This is an hour for very plain speaking. There is a truth that runs like a golden thread throughout all the pages of Holy Writ from Genesis to Revelation, teaching us that the elect whom God has chosen may even now walk in the light of God's presence. The teaching of this wonderful fact is verified by reality of experience, by many types, and by infallible prophecy. Let all God's people be informed of the truth I now present. Lay hold upon it as you would a precious jewel because its truth uncovers the secret key that will unlock the door to great spiritual experience and understanding. Men and women in ages past attained through faith in their own day blessings promised to men who were to live in ages yet to come. Let us notice a few examples. Enoch walked with God, and he was not, for God took him. Through faith Enoch was translated that he might not see death. Enoch was a man who lived in the dispensation of conscience - five dispensations in the past - yet by faith he was translated and experienced that which is yet future. Abraham lived under the dispensation of promise - three dispensations before Paul preached the message of justification by faith. Yet Abraham, in the far-off day when justification by faith was only a promise, believed God, and it was counted to him for righteousness. Rom. 4:3. Three dispensations before justification by faith was preached, his eye beheld the blessedness and his faith reached forward two thousand years or more to partake of its glory, and Abraham was justified by faith without the works of the law, and that before the law was given. And what shall we say of king David, who lived in the heart of the dispensation of the law when by God's own command sacrifices and offerings for sin were made daily, and the blood of bulls and of goats flowed in an endless crimson stream, heralding a better day when the better blood of Christ, the great anti-type of all sacrifice and offering, would be shed for the remission of the sins of the whole world. David with the eye of the Spirit looked far beyond those animal sacrifices, which could never take away sin, but left with the offerer a heart unchanged. The eye of David, the son of Jesse, looked forward through the corridors of time to the day when the blood of Christ would be shed for the remission of all sin, and Jesus Christ, as God's faithful High Priest, would enter heaven itself to present His own blood as a sin-offering once, forever, and for all, that mankind should through Him be brought back into God's presence. Thus did David under the law turn his face away from the religious ceremonies of his day, and with a heart broken for his sin he prayed, "For Thou desirest not sacrifice; else would I give it; thou delightest not in burnt offering." Psa. 51:16. "Thou desirest truth in the inward parts... Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean: wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow. Make me to hear joy and gladness... Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me." Psa. 51:6-10. Of David it is written that he was a man after God's own heart. Who then dare doubt that he, who lived so long ago, reached beyond the experience of his age to receive the blessing of justification by faith as we do now when we kneel at God's feet to confess our sins and receive Christ our Saviour into our lives?

There is a promised day in a dispensation still future of which it is written, "Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and He will dwell with them, and they shall be His people, and God Himself shall be with them, and be their God." Rev. 21:3. Angelic voices, echoing in heavenly charm and eloquence, could not describe the triumphant day of blessedness and rejoicing in His presence! I suppose then it is not to be wondered at if but few in this hour of gross darkness are able to see that God is calling a people in our day who shall know the divine secret of walking in His presence. Here and now the elect will know the wisdom of His Spirit within. They will be sensitive to the reality of His presence, conscious of His Spirit speaking, His hand guiding, and His power transforming the spirit, the mind, and the body into the image of Him who created them. Men and women, elect and chosen of God, are not walking in the nakedness that Adam knew and that sinners know. The Spirit of God, who had departed from them, has returned to abide, and all who believe shall know that through God's Christ we have been led back into the presence of God. The misunderstanding of God's people concerning God's eternal purpose, and the abominable traditions of the false church system rob us continually of the light of the knowledge of the glory of God that shines forever from the face of Jesus Christ. "Lo, I am with you always" was the word Jesus spoke, and in fulfillment of that promise He said, "I will pray the Father, and He will give you another Comforter, even the Spirit of truth, who will abide with you forever", or for the age, meaning this age in which we live. Though all the world and most of the Christians dwell in outer darkness of unbelief, we who believe and lay hold of the promise shall know the wonder of His presence.

There came a day when the patriarch Isaac called his son Jacob to himself. He had blessed him with the dew of heaven, the fatness of the earth, and plenty of corn and wine, saying, "Let people serve thee, and nations bow down to thee." Gen. 27:28,29. Then he sent him to Padan-aram to the house of Bethuel to take a wife of the daughters of Laban, his uncle. Gen. 28. With the command of his father in his heart and a haunting dread of the wrath of his brother, Esau, in his mind Jacob started the long journey from Beer-sheba to Padan-aram. "And he lighted upon a certain place, and tarried there all night, because the sun was set; and he took of the stones of that place, and put them for his pillows, and lay down in that place to sleep. And he dreamed, and, behold, a ladder was set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: and, behold, the angels of God ascending and descending on it. And, behold, the Lord stood above it, and said, I am the Lord God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac: the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed; and thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth, and thou shalt spread toward the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south; and in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed. And, behold, I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and will bring thee again into this land; for I will not leave thee until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of. And Jacob awaked out of his sleep, and he said, Surely the Lord is in this place; and I knew it not. And he was afraid, and said, How dreadful is this place! This is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven." Gen. 28:11-17.

"Surely God is in this place, and I knew it not!" These were the words of the patriarch Jacob. They are the words of heaven-sent revelation. This sudden, divine understanding that God was present wrought an instant transformation that changed him from one glory to another throughout his long and difficult life. This revealing experience was his first true contact with the God of Abraham. The sobering knowledge that he was standing in the presence of the almighty God filled his heart with dread, for no man can see God and live. It is impossible! Impossible, I say, because the very knowledge that God is present causes the carnal things of our former life to pass away as ice before the glowing sun, and in their place new things are born that cannot pass away, but, reflecting the glory of God, they abide in His presence forevermore. "God is in this place and I knew it not" will be your inspired words, O Christian, as the transforming truth of His presence, like the life-giving rays of the sun, come stealing o'er the meadows of your soul. It is an immeasurable spiritual tragedy just to see how many Christians, bound by the tradition of Babylon, stumble along over the byways of life, forgetting that He is very present who said, "I am with you always, even unto the end of the age." And this God's people continue to do until by some miracle of God's grace their eyes are opened and from their trembling lips the words break forth, "Surely the Lord is here, and I knew it not."

Moses was a man of eighty years when he tended the flock of Jethro in the backside of the desert. Gone from his heart was the zeal and fire of yesteryear that had once inspired him to rashly attempt the liberation of his people. Exod. 2:11-15. He was an outcast now, a name long forgotten both in Israel and in Egypt. He wanted nothing better than to be left in peace to tend his inoffensive sheep, for they, unlike his people Israel, were gentle and docile, peacefully trusting him to lead them by day and protect them by night. No man of account knew where he dwelt. Of that he was glad; and perhaps he wondered in his heart if even God knew where he was. This old man had probably convinced himself that the God of Abraham had no special need of him nor any plan for his life. How good it was going to be to live the rest of his life as a simple shepherd of these woolly sheep, and then at last to be gathered to his people and take his place in the bosom of Abraham!

But then there came a day when, looking up, he saw a bush burning with fire. There was nothing very unusual about that except that he presently became aware that, though the flames continued to burn fiercely, the bush was neither harmed nor consumed. Thinking this to be a most unusual phenomenon, he said to himself, "I will now turn aside, and see this great sight, why the bush is not burnt. And when the Lord saw that he turned aside to see, God called unto him out of the midst of the bush, and said, Moses, Moses. And he said, Here am I. And He said. Draw not nigh hither: put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground. Moreover He said, I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. And Moses hid his face; for he was afraid to look upon God." Exod. 3:3-6.

It is not our purpose here to speak of the call and ministry of this man to whom God spoke face to face, but rather to show that God is present at all times, even when we know it not. We have stated before that names in scripture have a special meaning, usually describing the character of the ministry of those who have them. Thus, when Moses said to the Lord, "Behold, when I come unto the children of Israel, and shall say unto them, The God of your fathers hath sent me unto you; and they shall say to me, What is His name? What shall I say unto them? And God said unto Moses, I AM THAT I AM; and He said, Thus shall thou say unto the children of Israel, I AM hath sent me unto you." Exod. 3:13-14. There is no other name in scripture that more perfectly represents the ever present, the omnipresent God. As to time God is eternal; as to place He is omnipresent. "Whither shall I go from Thy Spirit? or whither shall I flee from Thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, Thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold, Thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; even there shall Thy hand lead me, and Thy right hand shall hold me. If I say, Surely the darkness shall cover me; even the night shall be light about me. Yea, the darkness hideth not from Thee; but the night shineth as the day: the darkness and the light are both alike to Thee." Psa. 139:7-12. Know this, O child of God: these words are spoken unto you, and He who speaks them is present with you to guide your thoughts into all the will of God. In the knowledge of the secret of His presence you will possess an understanding hitherto unknown in your Christian experience. He who is present with you is a very present help in trouble, transforming the night of all trouble and sorrow into a fortress of Christian light and experience.

Time fails us to tell of Daniel, who stood all night in a den of lions purposely famished that they might destroy him, and of the angel of the Lord who, being present with him, closed their mouths and made them as docile as house cats. Nor can we speak in particular of the Hebrew three, who, walking in a furnace of sevenfold heat, found a fourth man present with them, the form of whom was "like unto the Son of God." Nor can we tarry long to speak of Paul, who in the midst of the raging storm at sea stood forth with boldness to proclaim safety and deliverance for all who were on board, saying, "And now I exhort you to be of good cheer: for there shall be no loss of any man's life among you, but of the ship. For there stood by me this night the angel of God, whose I am and whom I serve, saying, Fear not, Paul; thou must be brought before Caesar; and God hath given thee all them that sail with thee." Acts 27:22-24.

In the thirty-third chapter of Exodus the Holy Spirit has related for our learning a very important and dramatic incident. Leading up to this chapter is the record of the giving of the law of God and of the subsequent abomination committed by Israel in the worshipping of the golden calf. These chapters should be reread that we might better understand the truth that follows. Israel had been spared destruction through the intercession of Moses, and now the Lord says to him, "Depart, and go up hence, thou and the people which thou has brought up out of the land of Egypt. ... And I will send an angel before thee; and I will drive out the Canaanites ... for I will not go up in the midst of thee; for thou art a stiff, necked people; lest I consume thee in the way. And when the people heard these evil things, they mourned; and no man did put on him his ornaments." Exod. 33:1-4. "And Moses said unto the Lord, See, Thou sayest unto me, Bring up this people: and Thou hast not let me know whom Thou wilt send with me." Verse 12. "And He said, My presence shall go with thee, and I will give thee rest. And he (Moses) said unto Him, If Thy presence go not with me, carry us not up hence. For wherein shall it be known here that I and Thy people have found grace in Thy sight? Is it not in that Thou goest with us? So shall we be separated, I and Thy people, from all the people that are upon the face of the earth. And the Lord said unto Moses, I will do this thing also that thou hast spoken ..." Verses 14-17.

When believers become conscious of God's abiding presence, they become distinct from all other people on the face of the earth. They also become distinct from all other Christians. Men who live their lives continually conscious of the presence of Christ both abiding with them and dwelling in them are men who always walk softly with God. A fool who holdeth his peace is considered wise; so they who in silence listen to His still small voice come to know Him as the great I AM. The rich man in pride answereth roughly, but the poor useth entreaties. So he who is poor in spirit depends upon Him who is our wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption.

The fourth chapter of Acts tells of the great excitement and wonder caused by the healing of the lame man, and of how in hate and pride the priests and lawgivers, together with rulers and authorities, took counsel against the Lord and against His anointed; but "when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men, they marveled; and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus." Acts 4:13. And may we add the confident assurance that Jesus had been with them! Yea, His presence was continually with them.

In the Authorized Version of the Bible Titus 2:13 is rendered in these words: "Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God, and our Saviour Jesus Christ." But the Emphatic Diaglott, Moffatt, Young and several others render it thus: Waiting for the blessed hope, even the appearing of the glory of our great God and Saviour Jesus Christ. Christ in you is the hope of glory, and while Christians century after century have eagerly scanned the heavens for signs of the appearing of the Lord, they have forgotten to live in the glory of the presence of Christ here and now, I am fully aware that a crowning day is coming when Christ shall ride forth from the heaven, followed by those celestial hosts of which John spoke. Rev. 19:11-16. I have no power or ability to describe events so supernal; I may only bask in their surpassing glory. I am led to believe that those who will share the blessedness of that triumphant advent will be they and they alone who, while walking in the wilderness of this world, lived in ever increasing consciousness of God's presence. These are they who dwell continually in the presence of Him who said, "Lo, I am with you alway." "For what is our hope or joy, or the crown of which we boast? Is it not you yourselves in the presence of our Lord Jesus at His coming?" Thess. 1:19 (Weymouth). Think of the power and majesty of those words that literally say, "Our hope, our crown, and our rejoicing is you in the presence of the Lord Jesus at His coming!"

The presence of the Lord is a secret place. David describes it as the shadow of the Almighty. The cloud overshadowing the camp of Israel throughout their journey in the wilderness, a shade by day and a pillar of fire by night, was none other than the presence of the Almighty. They ate of spiritual meat; they drank of spiritual drink, for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them; and that Rock was Christ. 1 Cor. 10:3-4.

"In Thy presence is fullness of joy," wrote the enraptured psalmist; and how could it be otherwise since the God of Israel is our fortress, our power, and our habitation? As a garment plucked from a perfumed closet bears in its fibers the sweet aroma, so they who dwell in the presence of Christ radiate the glory, the beauty, and the power of His attributes. "All Thy garments smell of myrrh, and aloes, and cassia, out of the ivory palaces, whereby they have made Thee glad," wrote David. The ointment Mary poured with prodigality upon the head of the Saviour filled all the house where He sat with its fragrance, and we would be right in believing that all who came forth from that room carried in their garments the sweetness of that aromatic balm.

To dwell in His presence is to be like Him. To abide in His presence is to be changed into His image. Man can never hope to attain the likeness of the Lord by any outward regulation or command to his carnal mind, such as, touch not, taste not, handle not. It is when saints become conscious of His presence that men say they have been with Jesus. It is not what God commands that changes the heart; it is He Himself. It is not the recitation of God's divine laws that transforms our lives, but our relationship to Him who made them. Our abiding in the presence of Jesus Christ will cure our every ill and transform our spirit, soul, and body into the image of Jesus Christ.

As I was in meditation concerning the truth I have presented here, the following words by Martha Wing Robinson, so full of the breath of the Spirit, reached me through the mail. I think they will make a fitting conclusion to what we have been considering of the presence of God. "You do not realize that you would have broken down under the weight of your cares but for the renewing time with Me. It is not what I say; it is Myself. It is not the hearing Me so much as being in My presence. The strengthening and curative powers of this you cannot know. Such knowledge is beyond human reckoning.

"This would cure the poor world if every day each soul or group of souls waited before Me. Remember that you must never fail to keep this time apart with Me. Gradually you will be transformed, physically, mentally, spiritually, into My likeness, All who see you or contact with you will be by this intercourse with you brought near to Me, and gradually the influence will spread.

"You are making one spot on earth a holy place, and, though you must work and spend yourself ceaselessly because for the present that is your appointed task, yet the greatest work you can do is done in this time apart with Me. Are you understanding that? Do you know that every thought, every activity, every prayer, every longing of the day, is gathered up and offered to Me now? Oh, the joy that I am with you! For this I came to earth, to lead man back to spirit converse with his God." Amen.
There is almost universal conviction today that we are now living in the end of the age. We humans soon learn that, as the evening approaches, shadows begin to lengthen, casting the specter of the coming night across the land. So also the lengthening shadows of this age of grace herald the approach of the black night of tribulation, which will be followed by the kingdom day.

When our Lord Jesus Christ was here, He often marveled at the ignorance and stupidity of the people. He was appalled at the unbelief of His own people, but sometimes marveled at the faith of Roman, Syrophoenician, or Samaritan. He foresaw a day in which strangers would come from the north, the south, the east, and the west to sit down with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob in the kingdom of God, but His own people would be cast out. There is no royal road to the kingdom of God, but only the pathway of faith. No privileged people walk this way, but only obedient sons. There are no special helps for the laggard, no easier paths for those who fear hardship, nor any quicker way for the impatient. He reminds the faint-hearted, "My Son, do not think lightly of the Lord's discipline, and do not faint when He corrects you; for those whom the Lord loves He disciplines, and He scourges every son whom He acknowledges. The sufferings that you are enduring are for your discipline. God is dealing with you as with sons: for what son is there whom his father does not discipline? And if you are left without discipline, of which every true son has had a share, that shows that you are bastards, and not true sons." Heb. 12:5-7. (Weymouth).

There never was a teacher like Jesus. The soldiers said, "Never man spake like this man", and the common people, hearing the authority of His teaching, in wonder remarked, "Lo, He speaketh with authority and not as the scribes." The teachings of Jesus were simple, but always beyond the reach of the wise and prudent of this world. Jesus taught that it would be a very simple thing to recognize the signs that herald the end of the age and foretell the approach of the kingdom of God. Just as simply as a man or a little boy foretells the weather by simple signs, so also shall we be able to foretell the imminence of His coming by the simple but multiplied signs He gave us. When one day the Pharisees with the Sadducees approached Him, desiring that He would give them a sign from heaven, He answered and said unto them, "When it is evening, ye say it will be fair weather, for the sky is red. And in the morning, it will be foul weather today for the sky is red and lowering. O, ye hypocrites, Ye can discern the face of the sky: but can ye not discern the signs of the times?" Matt. 16:2-3. And again, "When ye see a cloud rise out of the west, straightway ye say there cometh a shower, and so it is. And when ye see the south wind blow, ye say there will be heat, and it cometh to pass. Ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky and of the earth; but how is it that ye do not discern this time?" Luke 12:54-56.

Surely these are simple signs that even a child can understand, but it seems that we are all prone to ignore the winds and red skies that proclaim the end of the age. Are we to be numbered among those foolish people who willfully brush aside all evidence, smugly assuring themselves that, "since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the foundation of the world"? As this age speeds to its close, there will be ever increasing and indisputable evidence that the end of this age is upon us and the kingdom of God is at hand.

It is true that no man knoweth the day nor the hour when the Son of man cometh, but it is equally true that "Ye have no need that that day should overtake you as a thief. For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. For when they shall say peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape, but ye, brethren, are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief. Ye are all children of light and children of the day: we are not of night nor of darkness." 1 Thess: 5:2-5. Therefore, as a man who knows a thief is coming sits and watches that he is not taken unawares, so let us watch also that, when He cometh and knocketh, we shall be ready to open immediately to Him.

Every dispensation begins with a promise, but every dispensation has ended in judgment. The dispensation of grace in which we now find ourselves will be no exception to this rule. Without question the judgment, which will bring this age to its climax will gather into its fearful self the calamity and wrath of all ages before it. Eden, the dispensation of innocence, ended with man's being cast out from God's presence. The dispensation of conscience ended with the judgment of the flood. Human government ended with the tower of Babel. Promise ended with the destruction of Egypt and the death of the firstborn. Law ended with the crucifixion of Christ, and the dispensation of grace will end with a tribulation as terrible as the expulsion from Eden, as universal as the flood, as complete as the overthrow of Babel, and as devastating as the destruction of Egypt.

Man is so constituted that he readily becomes accustomed to noise, to traffic, to cold and heat, to physical disabilities, and even to pain. Men who have been long hardened in battle become accustomed to the crash of artillery and the whine of bullets. In like manner the multiplying signs of the end of the age creep upon us unawares and we are inclined to believe that things have always been this way. Our minds have become so accustomed to the lawlessness and violence that daily glare from the headlines of our papers that we frequently turn the page without even reading the story. Thus the earth has become filled with signs that tell us that the end of the age is here, but we have become as insensible as the people of Noah's day, who "knew not until the flood came and took them all away." Indeed, we have become so insensible to the truth that a great part of Christendom is willing to relegate the story of Noah and the flood to the level of Anderson's Fairy Tales. But let us assure our hearts of this: In spite of all science, whether true or false, the word of God has never been proven inaccurate nor untrue. God always makes His statements without explanation because all He declares is truth, even though it may take unbelieving man endless generations to discover that God cannot lie. Therefore, when the Lord declares, "A virgin shall conceive and bear a Son," there is room for neither discussion nor argument about possibilities or impossibilities. The virgin birth of Jesus Christ was not a whit more miraculous than the birth of Adam, or Eve, or you, or me. God is the miraculous author of them all and man knows not how the bones do grow in the womb of her that is with child. While we walk this pilgrim pathway, our only true recommendation before God is faith in the veracity and immutability of the Lord. All such men know that, should heaven and earth pass away, the word of the Lord will endure unto all generations.

For centuries men have believed the promise of Christ, "If I go away, I will come again." Often have we repeated the words of the two men in shining garments, "This same Jesus which was taken up into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen Him go into heaven." Acts 1:10-11. Though we have waited long until hope deferred has made the heart sick, yet the promise is sure. Though it tarry, we will wait for it, for it will surely come.

The ever increasing signs now gathering about us on every hand are evidences given us of God that the long delayed hope of creation is drawing near. Sonship, the hope of the entire creation for which all creatures groan, is soon to be a living reality. The kingdom of God for which Jesus prayed is being prepared in secret to spread its wisdom and knowledge, justice and equity, like a sweet perfume over the entire earth. All who truly hope for sonship and all that it entails will lift up their heads and rejoice that the redness of the sky on this dread evening of the tribulation and heartache is the divine assurance that all will be fair in the kingdom of tomorrow. We should concern ourselves with the gathering signs of the times, not for the sake of being spectacular, but because Jesus Himself said, "When ye see these things begin to come to pass, then lift up your heads and rejoice, for your redemption draweth nigh." It is with this thought in mind that I wish to point out some of the truths that clearly show that the end of the age is come and the true hope of all past ages is about to be realized — the kingdom of God. The Sabbath of rest is at hand.

Of all the scriptures which concern the end of this age the one most frequently quoted is this: "And as it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man." Luke 17:26. It is a sobering thing to know that "all things happened unto them for ensamples to us upon whom the ends of the ages are come." 1 Cor. 10:11. Therefore all the things, which happened in other ages were given not alone for the sake of those who then dwelt upon the earth, but for our instruction and understanding upon whom the ends of the ages have come. This is the most important hour of human history. The perfection and hope of the saints of all ages depends upon those who are coming to perfection and sonship now, for they without us cannot be made perfect. Heb. 11:39, 40. Let us then refrain from esteeming lightly the things that are coming upon the world, for they are/or our instruction, and our sure knowledge of them will help us to follow the steps of Him who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despised the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the majesty on high. "When a cloud rises in the west, ye say there will be a shower, and it cometh to pass." Let us then at the sight of the gathering clouds lift up our heads and rejoice, for our redemption draweth nigh.

In the days of Noah there was a great dearth of spiritual life and spiritual understanding, for the Lord had said to Noah, "Thee have I seen righteous before Me in this generation." Gen. 7:1. Therefore God "spared not the old world, but saved Noah, the eighth person, a preacher of righteousness, bringing in the flood upon the world of the ungodly." 2 Pet. 2:5. Never in any generation has the Lord left Himself without a witness. He has always had an election according to His purpose and according to His grace, and Noah, that one righteous man, that one man was the forerunner and foreshadow of an elect company of sons who will stand as one body in the great tribulation. Though they be many, yet will they be but one, for all are one in Him. For this reason they are called the manchild. As we behold the ever increasing godlessness, apostasy, hate, and rebellion, all of which herald the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord, contrary to all ungodliness and in direct opposition to it will stand God's elect sons who, though despised and hated even unto death, bow not the knee to Nebuchadnezzar's Babylonian image. But they as Noah will hold in their grasp the key to man's redemption, the regeneration and re-constitution of all things. Acts 3:21.

Important and indisputable are the signs in the earth today, for they are the swift heralds of the climax of this age. Yet the most important event transpiring in the earth is the secret, silent formation of the manchild, the sons of God who are to rule the world in the ages to come. As Solomon's temple was built without the sound of a hammer from stones carefully cut and prepared in the quarries before time, so is that great temple of the body of Christ being prepared in the dismal quarries of this dark age. The work is perfect and the moment is at hand when, without noise of hammer or rasping of saw, each select, elect member will be found standing in his proper place in Christ. Thus will the kingdom's temple be complete and the rule of Christ will have begun.

There will not be a great revival before the end of this age as is expected by some. No dispensation has ever ended with a revival and this age of grace will be no exception to the rule. All dispensations, including the kingdom of God, end in judgment, and true faith is found only in the hearts of an insignificant few. "When the Son of man cometh, will He find faith on the earth?" No! Indeed He will not, except in the hearts of those few elect whom He will call together from the distant ends of the earth and heaven. The next great revival will be in that glorious age when "the law will go forth from Zion and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." That will be no local affair, but will cover the world like a mantle until the knowledge of the Lord will fill the earth as the waters cover the sea. Then no man will say, "Know the Lord," for all shall know Him from the least to the greatest.

In Noah's day the flood (tribulation) covered the entire earth. So also shall it be in the day of the coming of the Son of man. Every day we live is bringing us closer to the hour when the nations of the world will be forced from sheer necessity to form a world government under a world dictator. Nations can no longer be independent of each other. They can no longer act alone. What affects one seems to affect them all. Modern means of travel and communication have practically eliminated distance and time. The assassination of President Kennedy was known around the world in minutes, and the murder of Oswald was witnessed as far away as Russia the moment it happened. All these things demand a world government and a world leader. The word of God leaves no doubt that such a government is on the way, when power and authority will be given to "the beast". We are now entering upon the phase where nations, trying momentarily to bury the bloody hatchet, will say peace and safety. The united forces of great Babylon will rise higher and higher to rule over the kings of the earth, but the destruction of this antichrist system will be sure, sudden, universal, and complete.
In the days of Noah the world at large was in complete ignorance of God's plan. This is the story as told by Jesus Christ. Matt. 24:37-39. (Phillip's Translation). "For just as life went on in the days of Noah, so will it be at the coming of the Son of man. In those days before the flood people were eating, drinking, marrying, and being given in marriage until the very day that Noah went into the ark, and knew nothing about the flood until it came and destroyed them all. So will it be in the coming of the Son of man." These words adequately describe the faithless lethargy into which our own age has fallen. All things continue on day after day as they have "since the fathers fell asleep" - marrying, giving in marriage, divorcing, remarrying, rising, going to bed, seeking pleasure, making money, playing religion, living and dying, but knowing nothing and caring less about the tribulation soon to envelop the world. The cares of this world, the deceitfulness of riches, and the lusts of the flesh have drawn a veil over the eyes of the masses of humanity that they cannot see the gathering storm clouds of tribulation, nor hear the distant rumblings that herald the blackest day the world will ever know. "They knew nothing about the flood until it came and took them all away." Millions of Christians of our day have ceased long ago to watch and be ready for the coming of the Son of God. They have become like those who say, "My Lord delayeth His coming", and so they have set their hearts on gaining earthly things, neglecting to pray, neglecting the word of God, neglecting to tithe, and failing to avail themselves of the graces, which God has freely offered to every man. We live in a world abounding with religion, an age packed full of systems professing godliness, but God has departed from them all. Christ is no longer found in the excitement of the multitude, but standing at the heart's door of the individual, saying, "If any man hear My voice and open the door, I will come in to him, and sup with him and he with Me," Rev. 3:20. Thus it is in this the Laodicean age. Christ is found outside the church system, knocking and asking admittance to the believing hearts of individual men and women. To those separated individuals He says, "He that overcometh will sit with Me in My throne, even as I overcame and am set down with My Father in His throne." Rev. 3:21. I know nothing at all of the religion of Noah's day, but without doubt they were a religious people. Humanity has always been religious, but seldom godly. In all probability our present day is the most religious of all ages, but with less power and less true knowledge of God than any age before us. Our age was summed up by Paul in these tragic words: "Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." From such we must steadfastly turn away.

If we read the account of the days of Noah with reverence and meditation, we will need no help nor explanation to see the exact parallel in our day, for "God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually. And it repented the Lord that He had made man on the earth and it grieved him at His heart." Gen. 6:5-6. "The earth also was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence. And God looked upon the earth, and, behold, it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth." Gen. 6:11-12. What a dread but accurate description this is of our modern day! Could we fill volumes with description of our twentieth century decay, we could enlarge very little upon these few divinely inspired words, "the earth was corrupt", "the earth was filled with violence", "all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth", and "the imagination of men's hearts was only evil continually."

The earth was corrupt then, and the earth is corrupt now. Corruption has crept like a sly and stealthy serpent into all walks of life until we find ourselves in the sad position of having to admit that there is scarcely a walk of life that is not infested with corruption. Corruption is found on every level of government, from the highest to the lowest. Corruption has crept into the court of justice so that judgment can often be bought for a fee. The poor can be punished because he is poor and the rich is set free because he is rich. We strain at gnats and swallow camels and rob the hireling of his wages. Faults are built into automobiles and washing machines. The evils of dope and drink are allowed to persist because they are big business. While we collect millions of dollars to fight cancer, cigarette companies go on advertising their cancer producing products, and so on and on the corruption goes.

One would certainly think that religion would be the one realm, which could be pronounced free from corruption, but, so far from this being the truth, "the Father's house has become a house of merchandise and the place of prayer a den of thieves." Religion today has become big business. It is one of the biggest and most lucrative businesses in the whole world. More than one preacher, supposing that gain is godliness, has become a millionaire in the last decade, not because of God-given gifts, but because he was a tremendous promoter. Through clever talk they have tossed the children of God to and fro and carried them about with every wind of doctrine. By the sleight of man and cunning craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive they have beguiled innocent people, pretending that they were great ones with outstanding gifts. Yet for all their pretended revivals there is no spirit of revival in the land, and for all their claims of healing, the sick abound more and more. By craftiness they obtain the names of tens of thousands of people to whom they regularly send their pleas for financial help, with their self-addressed reply envelopes into which the poor and the widows are urged to put their offerings that they might live in wanton luxury upon the earth. Woe to them, for they have gone greedily in the error of Balaam's covetousness. With glib tongues and plausible programs of imagined faith these smooth religious salesmen with feigned sincerity have robbed widow's houses and have covered their crimes with long prayers and eloquent sermons. Well-meaning people are urged to give to further grandiose programs, which are not the plan of God at all, but merely the product of an imaginative, scheming, and avaricious mind. Millions have been squeezed from the poor to build huge temples, world churches, Christian cities, refuges and sanctuaries for the time of tribulation, and to devise schemes to further other human notions which seldom, if ever, materialize. The greed and avarice of this self-styled clerical order is always applied in the name of religion and amounts to nothing but a veritable plunder system. One would certainly be convinced that the avaricious scheming of Protestantism is not one whit behind pagan Rome, who for centuries has collected vast sums for confessions, penance, and indulgences of all kinds.

In the face of such vast corruption as is seen on every hand, the fiery words of St. James ring like a trumpet of doom to our entire generation. "Go to now, ye rich men; weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you. Your riches are corrupted, and your garments are moth-eaten. Your gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days. Behold, the hire of the laborers who have reaped down your fields, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth; and the cries of them, which have reaped are entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth. Ye have lived in pleasure on the earth, and been wanton; ye have nourished your hearts as in the day of slaughter. Ye have condemned and killed the just; and he doth not resist you. Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord." James 5:1-7.

Corruption abounds everywhere, and I do not know how the world could become more corrupt than it already is. Corruption is big business. It abounds in governments, in courts, in ordinary business practices, in sports, in schools, in religion, in morals, and even in homes. Certainly the days of Noah are upon us, for "all flesh has corrupted his way upon the earth."

In Noah's day the earth was filled with violence as it is to-day. We live in an age when violence is international policy. Scarcely a day goes by without violence breaking forth somewhere. We do not need to look to international wars or remote rebellions for violence, for there is violence among street gangs, violence in trade unions, violence on the highways, and violence in sport. There are sluffings, beatings, knifings, shootings, and brawls every day on an almost unbelievable scale. Somewhere in America a murder is committed every few minutes. The seed of violence is continually sown in the minds of young and old by television, radio, theatre, newspapers, and novels. It is a most significant trend and an infallible proof that we are living in the final days of this age.

In the May, 1959, issue of the Calgary Farm and Ranch Review the following article appeared, which for a secular magazine is unusually to the point. "One of man's most tragic weaknesses is his failure to benefit from the lessons of history. Yet those lessons have for centuries been recorded by scholars. Not the least of these was the famous historian, Edward Gibbon, who dedicated many years of his life to future generations by his precise research into the causes and effects of social changes.

In his classic, The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, he cited the five primary causes for the deterioration of that historic society.

1. The rapid increase of divorce and the undermining of the sanctity of the home.
2. The spiraling rise of taxes and extravagant spending.
3. The mounting craze for pleasure and the brutalization of sports.
4. The building of gigantic armaments and the failure to realize that the real enemy lay within the gates of the empire in the moral decay of the people.
5. The decay of religion and the fading of faith into a mere form, leaving the people without any guide.

How does our society compare with that of imperial Rome that once ruled the western world? What about our mounting divorce rate, climbing taxes, and government extravagance? Have the telephone and the automobile brought more home life or have they turned the home into a clearing house for outside activity? Now that T.V. has brought wrestling into the drawing-room and gun-play into the nursery, have we more fair play and athletic skill? What about religion? Is man simply going through the motions, or does he know what the symbolism is about? Or is he instead on the golf course or sleeping off the effects of intertemperance from the night before? In the light of today's conditions the failings of ancient Rome make a rather sobering comparison with our own.

The above quotation shows a keen insight into the true condition of our age. If editors of secular magazines can see the glaring evils of the present hour with such clearness, then surely those who believe God's word must assuredly know that these conditions are forerunners and harbingers of the great tribulation and the end of the age. In the light of such truth we need not be caught sleeping, for those who are looking for Christ should be much more awake than those who care not at all. But it is to their eternal shame that we find millions of Christians sunk so deep in this slough of corruption that they can never see anything clearly. In their mad dash for money they have forgotten all the finer things that life affords. The frantic race to possess and partake of earthly things has dulled all spiritual desire until God's people actually believe that "gain is godliness." Millions of Christians who once fervently loved Christ, crowning Him head of their lives and homes, knowing no joy like the glory of His presence while they patiently waited His coming, now lock Him out of their parlors while they fix their eyes for countless hours on all the filth that corruption affords, sitting like Lot in the very gates of Sodom. Christ has no fellowship with Belial. How then can he who fills his head with the world of Belial dare to hope for the mind of Christ?

Neither I nor any other person on earth knows the exact sequence of events which precede the end of the age and the coming of the Lord; neither does any man know the day nor the hour of His appearing and manifestation, for God has hidden these things from our minds. Nevertheless, the Holy Spirit has caused to be written some very forthright and exact lists of events, which any man can understand if he wishes to heed them. The apostle Paul in his epistle to Timothy left the world a most exact account of the last hours of this age of grace. No more searching blow by blow description could possibly be given than the one he gave when he penned these words: "This know also that in the last days perilous times shall come, for men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent (having no control over appetites and passions), fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady (headstrong), high, minded lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away." 2 Tim. 3:1-5. There is practically nothing one could add to these words by way of comment, but no more exact description of our time could possibly be given than Paul gave in this brief, word by word run-down of the sordid conditions that will bring this age to its close. When men become "lovers of their own selves", then everything else, whether physical, moral, or spiritual, must be adjusted to suit and satisfy self. No fraud is too great to perpetrate, no crime too great to commit, no covenant too sacred to break, no truce so binding that it cannot be ignored, no name too holy to blaspheme, no parent worthy to be obeyed, no gift worthy of heartfelt thanks. Even the loud professions of godliness are for selfish ends, hoping to ease a guilty conscience here or subtly hoping to escape judgment hereafter. These frightful conditions are so prevalent today and have become so familiar and ordinary that they are no longer noticeable among us. Our eyes have become dim from seeing them, our consciences seared by their presence, and our ears deaf to their shouted warning that the end of the age is even at the doors.

If we believe not these things, neither would we believe though one rose from the dead to tell us. Luke 16:31. And though an angel from heaven came to warn this godless generation, it would have no more effect than the warning of the angels had upon the men of Sodom, who persisted in their heady unbelief until fire and brimstone fell upon them and the stinking stench of their unbelief ascended in billowing smoke before the judgment throne of Almighty God. "As it was in the days of Lot: they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they built; but the same day that Lot went out of Sodom, it rained fire and brimstone from heaven and destroyed them all; even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed." Luke 17:28-30. Sodom has always been a symbol of evil and her people the quintessence of evil. Both Sodom, the city, and the Sodomites, the inhabitants, have lent their names to the languages of earth to signify the embodiment of every corrupt and evil thing. How dreadful is the indictment of Christ against our day when He likens it to the days of Sodom! Let all who have begun to flee from the city of destruction remember two things. First, remember Lot, who, though he started bravely for the mountain (Zion), turned aside from the distant peaks sublime and settled for a little earthly habitation, Zoar, requiring no faith, easily attained and soon forgotten.

Some of the greatest truths of the word of God are the ones that lie hidden like pearls of great price, unnoticed by the careless but available to all who will search beneath? Uninviting surface ground. Of the many signs which herald the soon coming of the Lord and the end of the age, the most significant of all is the one which fewest people see. It is the one sign which is hidden almost entirely from the world of professing Christians, for they, being a part of it, are absorbed by it. They sit at its tables and are drunk with its wine. "The priest and the prophet have erred through strong drink; they are swallowed up of wine; they are out of the way through strong drink; they err in vision, they stumble in judgment, for all tables are full of vomit and filthiness, so that there is no place clean." Isa. 28:7-8.

The sign to which I refer is the sudden, unbelievable, mysterious rise of the system known in the scriptures as Mystery Babylon, the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth. That which has become familiarly known as the ecumenical movement is in reality the heading up under one universal head of all religious systems of the earth, especially those who claim the name Christian. The mystery of Babylon will be complete when the harlot mother, who is so well known to us all, is united with all her harlot daughters, which includes the entire denominational system of Protestantism. Then, united in her whoredoms, she will sit on many waters, drunken with the blood of saints and of the martyrs of Jesus. It is she who rides the scarlet-colored beast with seven heads and ten horns (Rev. 17:30) and by the hate and wrath of these ten horns shall she be utterly destroyed in the end. Rev. 17:16-17.

When we wrote the book, Mystery Babylon, in 1962, many people doubted that there would ever be a union of church systems such as we then foretold, but today only those who choose to be blind could possibly doubt it, for its phenomenal rise is evident everywhere. During the last few years the heads of the Romish system, together with the heads of the Protestant systems, have been working overtime to iron out their differences. Many of these "heads" were saying that, though there would be eventual union, it may be many years before it could be achieved. There is, however, another remarkable and sinister development which not even the cleverest leader could have foreseen, for during the past few years the efforts toward union have been snowballing from the opposite end, that is, from among the common people, until now it has gained such momentum that the leaders will be hard pressed to keep ahead of it. Story after story appears in the newspapers heralding the success of Protestant-Catholic rallies. In Vancouver, B.C. a "standing-room only" crowd of some 5000 took part in an interdenominational Roman Catholic-Protestant service. Ministers and priests alike hailed it as the true ecumenical spirit. In Seattle, Wash., a Lutheran church announced a month of meetings at which a Roman Catholic priest was to officiate. Such gatherings are increasing all over America as anyone who has watched the newspapers will have noticed.

There are some misinformed people who think that I am "fighting" against these things. Nothing could be further from fact. Neither Jesus nor the prophets were fighting when they warned the world that these things would surely come at the end of the age. Neither am I fighting when I point out that the things they foretold are happening to us. There is no desire in me to see these things stopped, but rather, seeing them, we lift up our heads and rejoice, for our redemption draweth nigh.

In Christ's parable of the unjust judge (Luke 18:1-8), He asked this question: "When the Son of man cometh, will He find faith on the earth?" The answer is that, when the Son of man cometh, true faith will have departed from the earth and from the church system and from all forms of religion. They will become like the Pharisee who trusted in himself that he was righteous and despised others. Luke 18:9. But there is a company of people now as always whom God calls His elect. In them and in them alone will true faith be found. Their faith will be tried to the bitter limit. Many times their hopes will all but vanish as through weeks and months and years they cry day and night to Him, but they shall neither fail nor be discouraged until He sends forth judgment unto truth, for their ear shall continually hear the clear ringing of His promise, "Shall not God avenge His own elect which cry day and night unto Him, though He bear long with them?" Luke 18:7.
All evidence goes to show that at the end of the age there will be a tremendous trial of faith for all true children of God. Every dispensation has ended with a great trial of faith to the few remaining elect children of God. There is always evidence of plenty of religion but no real faith in it. True faith is always found in those few seemingly peculiar people who stand outside the camp of the religious systems and who have become a sort of laughing stock and a byword because they have been sanctified unto the kingdom of God. Was there faith in the earth in Noah's day? No, indeed, there was not. Yet in the heart of Noah, the elect of God, simple faith abounded in that at God's word he built an ark to the salvation of his house. And was there faith in the days of Moses? Very little, I fear, for only through mighty signs and wonders could he make the people believe that God was visiting them. Where was faith in Jesus' day? Why, it was more to be found in Syrophoenicians, centurions, publicans and harlots than in the hearts of scribe and Pharisee. But now we stand at the close of another dispensation, the dispensation of the grace of God, a dispensation specially given by God for the explicit purpose of gathering out of all nations a people for His name. And can we find faith on the earth? I tell you, no. More religion than at any other time in world history, more programs for the advancement of religion, more schools turning out assembly line preachers, more presses pouring out literature, more voices on radio, more faces on television, more encompassing of land and sea to make proselytes, more advertising, more high pressure campaigns, more building of churches, money flowing like water to advance all causes, but in spite of it all from sea to sea men of all denominations are hailing the ecumenical spirit and joining the crushing throng eager to bow their knees to the Babylonian image. And when at last at the signal of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and all kinds of musical instruments the whole church system falls on its face to worship the Babylonian image, only the elect will be left standing, for they know that their God is able to deliver them both from the burning furnace of tribulation and from the king of Babylon, the final head and anti-christ of the Ecumenical Movement.

Let us not deceive ourselves. Great tribulation is coming. Already people have suffered excommunication because they have refused to join the march of the multitude to unity with Rome. Great deception is coming. We are seeing false signs and false wonders. We will hear of men high in church stations who will perform miracles and imitate the glory of Pentecost as did the magicians who resisted Moses. It would have been hard indeed to tell the difference between the miracles of Moses and the miracles of the magicians who duplicated with their enchantments the things that he did. But all who walk in the Spirit will know the difference. By the Spirit of God alone truth and error are manifest.

Many hundreds of years ago the prophet Isaiah significantly stated, "Behold, they shall surely gather together, but not by me." Isa. 54:15. The truth is that many millions who have refused to recognize the true coming together of the body of Christ to make Him the one Lord and supreme head of their lives will now find themselves coming together to form another body of which He, Christ, is not the head. The words of Jesus Christ come ringing like a trumpet over the centuries: "I have come in My Father's name and ye did not receive Me: If another shall come in his own name him ye shall receive." John 5:43. In this all important hour, when any number of men are seeking followers, refuse to follow them. Learn to follow Christ and be led by His Spirit, for such are the sons of God. While human voices clamor for the attention of your ear, refuse to listen. Learn to know His voice, for "My sheep know My voice and they follow Me, and a stranger will they not follow, for they know not the voice of strangers." Cease to crave the fellowship of people however dear they may be. Crave the fellowship of Christ whose voice is only heard when all other voices are silent.

I cannot believe that the existing church system everywhere visible in the earth is either the true church or the true representation of Christ. Protestantism today is in the same sorry state as Romanism in the days of Martin Luther. The "faithful city has become a harlot." Therefore, if it is not the true church, it is wrong to assemble with it, but right to come out of her that we be not partaker with her plagues.

The church of Laodicea is the representation of the church at the close of the age, a church lukewarm ready to be spued out of God's mouth, a church rich and increased with goods, having need of nothing, but knowing not that it is wretched and miserable and poor and blind and naked. It is a church which has forced Christ outside its precincts so that He stands outside, knocking not at the church door, but at the door of the individual heart of men and women like you and me, and saying, "If any man hear My voice and open the door, I will come in to him and sup with him and he with Me." Rev. 3:20.
CHAPTER TWO
THE LATENESS OF THE HOUR

Because of the lateness of the hour and because of the dreadful calamities which are relentlessly hurling themselves upon the earth and all mankind, I have been filled with a great urge to place before you certain signs which cause me to believe that we are now living in the closing months of this dispensation of the grace of God. Since we are all fallible men and women, it is always possible for us to be wrong or over-zealous about things which vitally concern us and the world in which we live, yet it would be a most remarkable thing indeed if among those who read these lines any will be found who do not have a God-given premonition that the door of God's forbearance and longsuffering is now closing upon this rebellious and untoward generation. The most incredible situations are stalking the whole earth. Crime, violence, destruction, war, earthquakes, famines, pestilences, the collapse of morals, and the impending collapse of the entire financial system are all on hand until every new day brings its new disasters.

Forgive me for the use of personal pronouns and personal opinions. There is no desire in me to set myself up as one knowing more than my brethren, for God has never given me reason to believe that I am anything more than the least among them. I disavow any intention to lead away disciples after myself either in the days that are past or in the days that are present. Within my heart my one longing toward mankind has been to present the truth that men and women would love God and, seeing His goodness and greatness, be transformed into His likeness. My heart's desire has been that, should my tongue be stilled or my pen laid down, mankind would never miss me because they had learned to depend, not on me, but upon the everlasting arms of Him unto whom they had "looked and were lightened, and their faces were not ashamed." Cursed be he that putteth his trust in man, but he that putteth his trust in the Lord shall be as mount Zion, which cannot be removed.

If we reflect upon the things about us, we will be forced to conclude that the world situation with its maze of problems is completely beyond the grasp of mankind. The racing inflation that engulfs the financial world is such a problem that governments are no longer trying to grapple with it, but instead have thrown up their hands in despair and decided just to let it race to its doom. The politicians (for there are no statesmen now) are like engineers who have lost control of a runaway train, which gathers speed at every yard as it descends the mountain. The whistle is screaming, the brakes are burned out, all controls are useless, and they themselves are utterly helpless. To make matters even worse, the runaway train of the world financial system has now gained such unbelievable speed that they dare not try to jump off. They have become like frenzied men who, having seized a tiger by the tail, dare not let go though it is hopeless to hang on.

The whole world situation is so touchy that even a rumor could set forces in motion that could bring absolute ruin on the present doomed order. Only today I read of a Japanese woman in Tokyo who jokingly remarked that a certain bank was going broke. Within hours forty-eight hundred people had rushed to retrieve their savings and had withdrawn five million dollars from the various branches and almost broke the bank. The manager in amazement said, "I still don't know what hit us." I mention this only to show more clearly what a literal volcano the whole world system is sitting upon.

Our Lord Jesus Christ revealed important details concerning the end of the age, some of which are enough to fill any heart with terror, but, bless His dear name, He always added many things that were intended to comfort those who will love Him in these perilous, closing days of time. After telling the people of the dreadful events to come upon the earth in the days in which we are now privileged to live, He brushed aside our anxiety as a mother wipes away the tears of her infant and soothes the childish woes of the little one she loves. "When ye see these things begin to come to pass," He said, "then lift up your heads and rejoice, for your redemption draweth nigh." Jesus was not underestimating the awesomeness of the things that were to come in the end of the age, but well He knew that there would be a people upon the earth in the last days who would live lives so totally detached from the world and its godless system that they would be almost unaffected by the dreadful upheaval that would accompany the end of the age, knowing that the calamities of this present order are the swift heralds that loudly proclaim that glorious age, the kingdom of God.
In the book of the Apocalypse we have a picture given by revelation to the apostle John. In the vision he saw the fall of the world system, that Babylon of confusion of which the scripture speaks. Babylon may be defined as both political and ecclesiastical. It represents both the world system and the church system as they are seen and known in their abominations in our day. The revelation given John concerning them is almost beyond human belief as he describes the fall of Babylon in these awe-inspiring words: "And I heard another voice from heaven, saying, Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues. For her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities. Reward her even as she rewarded you, and double unto her double according to her works: in the cup which she hath filled fill to her double. How much she hath glorified herself and lived deliciously, so much sorrow and torment give her: for she saith in her heart, I sit a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow. Therefore shall her plagues come in one day, death, and mourning, and famine; and she shall be utterly burned with fire: for strong is the Lord who judgeth her. And the kings of the earth, who have committed fornication and lived deliciously with her, shall bewail her, and lament for her, when they shall see the smoke of her burning, standing afar off for the fear of her torment, saying, Alas, alas, that great city Babylon, that mighty city! For in one hour thy judgment is come. And the merchants of the earth shall weep and mourn over her; for no man buyeth their merchandise any more: The merchandise of gold, and silver, and precious stones, and of pearls, and fine linen, and purple, and silk, and scarlet, and all thine wood, and all manner vessels of ivory, and all manner vessels of most precious wood, and of brass, and iron, and marble, and cinnamon, and odors, and ointments, and frankincense, and wine, and oil, and fine flour, and wheat, and beasts, and sheep, and horses, and chariots, and slaves, and souls of men. And the fruits that thy soul lusteth after are departed from thee, and all things, which were dainty and goodly are departed from thee, and thou shalt find them no more at all. And the merchants of these things, which were made rich by her, shall stand afar off for the fear of her torment, weeping and wailing, and saying, Alas, alas that great city, that was clothed in fine linen, and purple, and scarlet, and decked with gold, and precious stones, and pearls! For in one hour so great riches is come to naught. And every shipmaster, and all the company in ships, and sailors, and as many as trade by sea, stood afar off, and cried when they saw the smoke of her burning, saying, What city is like unto this great city! And they cast dust on their heads, and cried, weeping and wailing, saying, Alas, alas that great city, wherein were made rich all that had ships in the sea by reason of her costliness! For in one hour is she made desolate." Rev. 18:4-19.

Having seen the complete and utter destruction of this whole world system, both political and religious, John's eyes are directed to another scene and another company, and these are told to rejoice. As we read his words, we can hear again the faithful words of Jesus, "When ye see these things begin to come to pass, then lift up your heads and rejoice, for your redemption draweth nigh." "Rejoice over her, thou heaven, and ye holy apostles and prophets; for God hath avenged you on her. And a mighty angel took up a stone like a great millstone, and cast it into the sea, saying, Thus with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all. And every shipmaster, and all the company in ships, and sailors, and as many as trade by sea, stood afar off, and cried when they saw the smoke of her burning, saying, Alas, alas that great city, wherein were made rich all that had ships in the sea by reason of her costliness! For in one hour is she made desolate." Rev. 18:20, 19:3.

This great and terrible vision seen by John is a true picture of the end of the age in which we live. It portrays the end of the present world set-up, the collapse of the present system of finance, and thus in consequence the end of commerce and trade as we have known it for six thousand years. If faithfully describes the end of the present religious system, which is now governed by man, and all this great and dreadful fall is the final preparatory step for the coming of the kingdom of God.

The weeping and howling of the merchants and rich men of the earth because of the fall of their system brings to mind the faithful words of the apostle James as he, too, describes the financial collapse of the last days in these significant words: "Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you.
Your riches are corrupted, and your garments are moth-eaten. Your gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days. Behold, the hire of the laborers who have reaped down your fields, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth: and the cries of them which have reaped are entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth. Ye have lived in pleasure on the earth, and been wanton, ye have nourished your hearts, as in a day of slaughter. Ye have condemned and killed the just; and he doth not resist you. Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and latter rain. Be ye also patient; establish your hearts: for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.” James 5: 1-8.

The collapse of the present world order is definitely at hand. It is falling apart on every side and in every nation. The great depression that overwhelmed the whole earth, beginning in 1929 and continuing without let-up through those tragic years known by millions as the dirty thirties, will be merely a shadow compared to the fearful collapse into which we are without doubt now heading. Those of us old enough to remember those trying times, that came as a scourge over all the earth, have some realization of what a world-wide depression can be like. Terrible as were those evil days, there is every reason to believe that they were child's play compared to that tribulation which is now brewing. From the last great depression there was a period of recovery, but there will be no true recovery from that which is to come. The great world antichrist dictator, which is to come before the end of the age, will for a time bring about a spurious and phoney prosperity, but it, too, will collapse at the coming of the Prince of peace.

There was a time in Germany when a whole wheelbarrow full of marks was scarcely sufficient to buy a cup of coffee. There was a time in France when it took thousands of francs to buy a tank of gasoline. There was a time in America when the old continental dollar was so worthless that creditors would hide from their debtors who wished to pay their debts in that worthless currency. All these things were but the beginning of sorrows, but we are soon to see the day when the rich men of the earth will wake up and find their millions utterly worthless. Their gold and silver will be cankered and as useless as the dirt in the street.

Terrible as these things are, there is no need for alarm in the heart of any saint of God — no need of alarm, I say, only true understanding and godly concern. Jesus told us to rejoice when we saw these things coming, not because we were to be flippant and careless and unconcerned, but because we know that the collapse of this present world order is the trumpet call proclaiming the setting up of that wonderful kingdom which shall never be destroyed, a kingdom over which Christ and the Sons of God shall reign, a kingdom promised from the very beginning of time. "I will give unto you a kingdom," Jesus said, and that kingdom shall have fully come when this present confusion is ended. When the sun goes down with a flaming ray and the sky is red, we say it will be fair weather tomorrow. It is the eventide of this present world order. The sky is red as the sun is setting on this evil age, and the very redness of the sky in this awful hour is clearly telling us that the kingdom of God is at hand. The signs of the times are explaining to all who will hear that His coming is near, yea, even at the doors. There will be a rainbow round about the throne very soon to signify that the deluge of man's iniquity is over, the flood is past and the tribulation is gone. We who love God know that these things will surely come to pass and nothing can thwart them and no devil can find power in heaven or earth or under the earth to prevent them.

Again the voice of God is calling over the din of this world's final calamity, "Lift up your heads and rejoice." Again the blessed voice of Jesus is saying to His own, "Let not your hearts be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in Me. In My Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto Myself; that where I am, there ye may be also."

It may be, dear child of God that you will not like what I shall say now. If you disagree, I have no quarrel with you. Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind. For many years I, with millions of others, adhered strongly to what may be called the rapture theory, a doctrine which teaches that all God's people are going to be taken out of this world by a rapture - that is, they are all going to be caught up into heaven and will not be here at all while the great and terrible tribulation period is upon the earth. Now there is no question that there will be a catching up, for the scripture has said, "We shall be caught up to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord." I know all the arguments there are to substantiate this doctrine and for years I faithfully taught them all, but as time has passed, I have become more and more convinced that there is much misunderstanding concerning this rapture theory.

One day, when our Lord was telling His disciples about the end of the age and spoke of the great tribulation that was coming upon the earth, He made these definite statements: "For then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be. And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved: but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened." Matt. 24:21-22. The question I wish to ask is simply this: What are the elect doing in the tribulation? If they were all previously caught up to heaven, as so many affirm that they will be, then why must the days of the tribulation be shortened for the elect's sake? The thing really does not make much sense, does it? We must conclude, then, that there must be a great misunderstanding as to the meaning of this catching up.

The three Hebrew children in the fiery furnace were living types of the elect of God as they will be preserved through the fires of the tribulation. The fire will not hurt them and the Son of God, who was with those blessed three, will be with us also. The elect will be right here in the world, yet they will be caught up to a new realm of spiritual glory and power, a realm where nothing of the earth can really harm them. Daniel was thrown into the den of ravening lions because of his faithfulness to God, but because he lived in a heavenly realm far above all his associates, the roaring lions became as docile as domestic kittens in his presence. It is quite possible that he stroked their manes and listened with pleasure to their mighty purring throughout the night when angels came to shut their mouths, yet these same lions tore his enemies to pieces before they could fall to the bottom of the pit.

The apostle Paul knew the glory of being caught up. He said he was caught up to the third heaven; but remember this: When he was caught up into God's presence, he was actually right here on the earth. He never left the ground for a minute, and thus I think it will be for all God's elect people. They will be in the fire, but never feel it. They will be in the lion's den, but find no hurt. Yea, they will be like Noah, who rode through the great waters of the flood, but came down on the other side to people a glorious new age, which in our case will be the age of the kingdom. The man child of Revelation 12:5 was caught up to the throne of God, but in verse six we see them feeding the woman in the wilderness. I frankly admit that I am by no means sure just what the wisdom of God has planned in this regard. Things concerning the end of the age have always been shrouded in mystery, but it is the blessed prerogative of every saint of God to so live in His presence that, whatsoever wonder He has purposed for His people, they will be found in Him, ready, waiting, and watching for His coming. Therefore, should He call at the cockcrowing, in the morning, at noon, or in the evening, we shall be found ready and waiting to enter with gladness and rejoicing into His wonderful presence with fullness of joy.

This age is not going to end in a world-wide revival as some seem to believe. There will be a remnant saved, but that is all. There will be a mighty turning to God during the great tribulation, but that turning to God will be mainly among Christians whose robes have become soiled with the filth of Babylon's harlotry. These will be purged and made white during the awful fires of the tribulation, which they will not escape but endure. These saints will be the innumerable throng whom John saw standing about the throne and before the Lamb, clothed in white robes and with palms in their hands. And they cried with a loud voice, saying, "Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb ...And one of the elders answered, saying unto me, What are these which are arrayed in white robes? and whence came they? And I said unto him, Sir, thou knowest. And he said to me, These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." Rev. 7:9, 10, 13, 14.

The end of the age and the second coming of Christ are to be preceded by many signs of great importance and significance. A man is a fool indeed if he pays no heed to the wonders, which are sent to warn the people who dwell on the earth that the Lord's coming is at hand. Our Lord once said, "O ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky; but can ye not discern the signs of the times?" Matt. 16:3. Men are very wise in their own generation, but they seem to be awfully dull in any sort of spiritual understanding. It is not hard to understand why men in centuries past did not give heed to the signs about them. That was because the Spirit of God was not bringing these wonders to their attention. It is true we have always had wars and famines, but our Lord made it plain that these signs would greatly increase as we come to the end of the age and to such an extent that there could be no mistaking them. He told us there would be false christs. It has been a shocking wonder to find in our day both men and women openly saying, "I am Christ." One would not expect to find women saying, "I am Christ," but they are doing so. In the face of the warnings of scripture one would not expect any to be deceived by such impostors as these, but it is amazing to find how many become their avid and faithful disciples. The warnings of God mean nothing at all to such people. They just go right on believing as deception dictates.

In my articles concerning the white horse of Revelation six, I have described some of the awful persecution endured by God's people in ages past, but I think there is every reason to believe that a persecution of unheard proportions will come during the tribulation years. Those dreadful fires will be the means by which saints with defiled garments will have them washed clean. Persecution always contains the fearful but wonderful aspect that it separates the wheat from the chaff, divides the sheep from the goats and the false from the true. It separates between the genuine and the pretender so that nothing is left that is unreal or impure.

In the world at this moment we see the abominable spectacle of children being disobedient to their parents. This rebellion has reached the stage where it is no longer mere disobedience but outright hatred, and in millions of cases there is no reason for such a circumstance to exist. It is true that there are parents who are completely unworthy of the name. Rebellion in this instance is bad enough and unnecessary. The thing that staggered the mind, however, is the sight of children who have come from excellent homes, where love and harmony reigned supreme, carrying their senseless rebellion to the point of actual hatred, doing all manner of evil to ruin their own lives in hope of bringing harm and loss to parents who loved them. Jesus foretold the evil day when the household would be divided; and that evil day has come. He spoke of a time in which children would betray their parents and cause them to be put to death. He also spoke of parents who would betray their children, and these things we are now beginning to see. This condition will become much worse as time goes by. When religious persecution becomes such that no man can buy or sell without the mark of the beast, then we will know what it means for children to betray their parents and parents to betray their children unto death.

Our Lord spoke of fearful sights that would come upon the world in the last days - of blood and fire and vapor of smoke. He prophesied of dreadful earthquakes, one of which John saw in his revelation, so terrible and of such vast proportions as the world has never seen. Our Lord told us that famines would stalk the earth, and we are now beginning to see these in all their stark and dreadful reality.

In my opinion the Bible gives abundant proof that the British Commonwealth of Nations and the United States of America are brother nations, direct descendants of Joseph's two sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, respectively. Let us never forget the ancient wonder that in the universal famine that gripped the world when Joseph was in Egypt it was Joseph who possessed the corn to feed the starving world. It is God's grace and kindness that today these two sons of Joseph possess eighty percent of the wealth of the earth and are the biggest suppliers of wheat for the world. The Bible says there will be famines in the last day - famines of such terrible proportions that they will snuff out the lives of one-third of the people. The population planners need no longer worry their unspiritual heads about world-burgeoning population, for before the end of this age two-thirds of it will be wiped out by famine, war, and pestilence, and except those dreadful days are shortened, no flesh shall be saved; but for the elect's sake those days will be shortened.

Our Lord told of plagues and pestilence that would come on the earth and terrible sores that would break out on man and beast. Most of those who read are aware that already new varieties of plague and disease are breaking out faster than medical science can begin to cope with them. It will not be long before we see dreadful plagues on earth so consuming as to swallow up untold millions of earth's inhabitants. The epidemic of Spanish influenza, in which fifty million people died, will seem mild in comparison to the plagues that are coming as the age draws to a close.

Before the children of Israel entered into the Holy Land, Moses, the man who spoke to God face-to-face and mouth-to-mouth, gave them detailed instructions as to what their future would be. Warning them of evils that would overtake them should they turn to other gods and cease from serving the Lord, he said, "Cursed shall thou be in the city, and cursed shall thou be in the field. Cursed shall be thy basket and thy store. Cursed shall be the fruit of the body, and the fruit of thy land, and the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep.
Cursed shall thou be when thou comest in, and cursed shall thou be when thou goest out. The Lord shall send upon thee cursing, vexation, and rebuke, in all that thou sellest thine hand unto for to do, until thou be destroyed, and until thou perish quickly; because of the wickedness of thy doings, whereby thou hast forsaken Me. The Lord will make the pestilence cleave unto thee, until He have consumed thee from off the land, whither thou goest to possess it. The Lord shall smite thee with a consumption, and with a fever, and with an inflammation, and with an extreme burning, and with the sword, and with blasting, and with mildew; and they shall pursue thee until thou perish. And thy heaven that is over thee shall be brass, and the earth that is under thee shall be iron. The Lord shall make the rain of thy land powder and dust: from heaven shall it come down upon thee, until thou be destroyed. The Lord shall cause thee to be smitten before thine enemies: thou shalt go out one way against them, and flee seven ways before them: and shall be removed into all the kingdoms of the earth. And thy carcass shall be meat unto all fowls of the air, and unto the beasts of the earth, and no man shall fray them away. The Lord will smite thee with the botch of Egypt, and with the emerods, and with the scab, and with the itch, whereof thou canst not be healed. The Lord will smile thee with madness, and blindness, and astonishment of heart: and thou shalt grope at noonday, as the blind gropeth in darkness, and thou shalt not prosper in thy ways; and thou shalt be only oppressed and spoiled forevermore, and no man will save thee. Thou shalt beget a wife, and another man shall lie with her: thou shalt build a house, and thou shalt not dwell therein: thou shalt plant a vineyard, and shall not gather the grapes thereof ... Thy sons and thy daughters shall be given unto other people, and thine eyes shall look, and fail with longing for them all the day long: and there shall be no might in thy hand." Please read Deut. 28:15 to the end of the chapter. These are but a few of the curses pronounced upon the children of Israel for their disobedience to God, and have we not in our day disobeyed God? Nations whose very constitutions were laid in God's truth are now turning to every imaginable rebellion against the Lord, who, when we honored Him, made us great in the earth. Filth in literature, in news media, on radio, on television, on public platform in high places and low places, has become a veritable flood. No longer are the minds of young and old fed upon things that belong to faith and soundness, but upon all that is low and degrading, and for all these errors does the Almighty God now bring the world into the judgment of the great and terrible tribulation.

When one reads of the dire calamities that are coming on the world, injurious disasters recorded in the word of God as they were spoken by Jesus, by the apostles, and in the book of Revelation, we are inclined to think of them simply as the irresistible hand of God, coming to judge the people with fearful vengeance. It is true that these impending calamities are the judgment of God, but if we will pause to consider the mailer, we may readily see that each and every dire calamity will come upon mankind through man's own doing. Their own iniquities will correct them, and their own disobedience shall bring judgment upon them. "Thine own wickedness shall correct thee, and thy backslidings shall reprove thee." Jer. 2:19.

One of the rampant scourges blighting the world today is venereal disease. Why has it become such an uncontrollable plague? Simply because man vainly imagines that God and all His ideas are old-fashioned! Like men bereft of their senses they ignorantly proclaim what they imagine to be a new morality. "Laugh at ma, laugh at pa, give them all the ha, ha!" Laugh at God, laugh at the Bible, laugh at all the old values and defame all morals as Victorian prudishness! And what is the unseemly result? Galloping venereal disease now reaching epidemic proportions in all nations of the world, bringing in its train blindness, madness, heart disease, crippled children, broken homes, and aionian destruction. The man or woman who thinks he can defy God and His law is a fool of fools. No one — absolutely no one — can be as great a fool as he who defies God.

Man imagines himself to be clever with all his sprays, food additives, and his wonder drugs, but all these things are bringing the plagues upon us that are solemnly foretold in God's word. There need be no manifestation of the power of God to bring the plagues and famines of Revelation on the earth, for man himself is preparing the ground work for the death and destruction that is now coming apace. Only a few weeks ago a doctor to whom I was speaking helplessly shook his head and said, "They are putting so many things into foods that we just don't know how to cope with it." Elements foreign to the body and detrimental to health are being accumulated in ever increasing amounts in land and air and water, and it will not be long before they bring the dreadful plagues of Revelation upon the whole earth. Even the prophecy of Peter — "the earth shall melt with fervent heat" — could be fulfilled by man's own evil doing, and indeed it may be, should God permit it. Therefore "thine own wickedness shall correct thee, and thy backslidings shall reprove thee." Jer. 2:19.
Some fifty years ago Dr. Benjamin Spock cursed the earth with his teaching of self-expression. Children, according to him, should not be corrected nor given any kind of punishment. The result of this teaching is that the world is seething with every imaginable disorder. Disobedience and confusion is everywhere. Not only does it corrupt and destroy the homes of our country, but because of the selfishness caused by this wickedness the whole earth is in a turmoil of strikes, lockouts, walkouts, slowdowns, and now in ever increasing fury violence is being used to force decisions in favor of the rebellious. The kidnapping of company presidents and high officials is almost a weekly occurrence and, when the police catch up with the criminals, the law refuses to punish them and allows them to go free. And now, after the world is filled with rebellion and disorder, Dr. Spock publicly admits that his doctrine of self-expression was a grievous error and also helplessly admits that it is now too late to do anything about it. Indeed it is too late, because the boys and girls who grew up under that God-defying error are now the leaders of the world. Because they were never disciplined themselves, they have no will or understanding to discipline the wicked or the unlawful. Thus the momentum toward judgment increases as the whole world rushes in darkness toward the final great tribulation when a wicked super-dictator will bring all things under his control so that none can buy or sell without his abominable mark.

In the dark days of the American War of Independence, in the year 1777, George Washington, the father of the American Republic, was given a vision of its future from that time down to the end of this present age, and in my opinion he was finally seeing the beginning of the kingdom age. True prophecy may be judged by whether or not it came to pass. Since, therefore, up to the present all his vision has been fulfilled, I feel no need of hesitation in believing the remainder of it. As the number of people who have read this account is comparatively few, I am taking the liberty to quote it here as it was given, trusting it will help us all to see how close we are to the end of this present age. The following account was given by Anthony Sherman, July 4, 1859, before the Civil War.

"The last time I ever saw Anthony Sherman was on the Fourth of July, 1859, in Independence Square. He was then ninety-nine years old. His dimming eyes rekindled as he gazed upon Independence hall, which he came to visit once more. 'I want to tell you an incident of Washington's life — one which no one alive knows except myself; and, if you live, you will before long see it verified.'"

He said, "From the opening of the Revolution we experienced all phases of fortune, good and ill. The darkest period we ever had, I think, was when Washington, after several reverses, retreated to Valley Forge where he resolved to pass the winter of 1777. Ah! I have often seen the tears coursing down our commander's cheeks as he would be conversing with a confidential officer about the condition of his poor soldiers. You have doubtless heard the story of Washington's going to the thicket to pray. Well, he also used to pray to God in secret for aid and comfort.

"One day — I remember it well — the chilly winds whistled through the leafless trees, though the sky was cloudless and the sun shone brightly. He remained in his quarters nearly all the afternoon, alone. When he came out, I noticed that his face was a shade paler than usual, and there seemed to be something on his mind of more than ordinary importance. Returning just after dusk, he dispatched an orderly to the quarters of the officer I mention, who was presently in attendance. After a preliminary conversation of about half an hour, Washington, gazing upon his companion with that strange look of dignity, which he alone could command, said to the latter:

"I do not know whether it is owing to the anxiety of my mind, or what, but this afternoon, preparing a dispatch, something seemed to disturb me. Looking up, I beheld, standing opposite me, a singularly beautiful being. So astonished was I, for I had given strict orders not to be disturbed, that it was some moments before I found language to inquire the cause of the visit. A second, a third, and even a fourth time did I repeat my question, but received no answer from my mysterious visitor, except a slight raising of the eyes. By this time I felt strange sensations spreading through me, and I would have risen, but the riveted gaze of the being before me rendered volition impossible. I assayed once more to speak, but my tongue had become useless, as though it had become paralyzed. A new influence, mysterious, potent, irresistible, took possession. All I could do was gaze steadily, vacantly at my unknown visitor. Gradually the surrounding atmosphere seemed as though becoming filled with sensations, and grew luminous. Everything about me seemed to rarefy, including the mysterious visitor.

"I began to feel as one dying, or rather to experience the sensations which I have sometimes imagined accompany dissolution. I did not think, I did not reason, I did not move; all were alike impossible. I was only conscious of gazing fixedly, vacantly at my companion.

"Presently I heard a voice saying, 'Son of the Republic, look and learn,' while at the same time my visitor extended an arm eastwardly. I now beheld a heavy vapor at some distance rising fold upon fold. This gradually dissipated and I looked out upon a strange scene. Before me lay spread out in one vast plain all the countries of the world — Europe, Asia, Africa, and America. I saw rolling and tossing between Europe and America the billows of the Atlantic, and between Asia and America lay the Pacific.

"'Son of the Republic,' said the same mysterious voice as before, 'look and learn!' At that moment I beheld a dark, shadowy being as an angel standing, or rather floating, in mid-air between Europe and America. Dipping water out of the ocean in the hollow of his hand, he cast some on Europe. Immediately a cloud raised from these countries and joined in mid-ocean. For awhile it remained stationary and then moved slowly westward until it enveloped America in its murky folds. Sharp flashes of lightning gleamed through it at intervals, and I heard smothered groans and cries of the American people. A second time the angel dipped water from the ocean and sprinkled it out as before. The dark cloud was then drawn back to the ocean, in whose billows it sank from view.

"A third time I heard the mysterious voice saying, 'Son of the Republic, look and learn,' and I cast my eyes upon America and beheld villages and towns and cities springing up one after another until the whole land from the Atlantic to the Pacific was dotted with them. Again I heard the mysterious voice say, 'Son of the Republic, the end of the century cometh; look and learn.'

"And this time the dark, shadowy angel turned his face southward, and from Africa I saw an ill-omened specter approach our land. It flitted slowly over every town and city of the latter. The inhabitants presently set themselves in battle against each other. As I continued looking, I saw a bright angel on whose brow rested a crown of light, on which was traced the word 'Union,' bearing the American flag, which he placed between the divided nation, and said, 'Remember, ye are brethren.' Instantly the inhabitants, casting down their weapons, became friends once more, and united under the National Standard.

"Again I heard the mysterious voice saying, 'Son of the Republic, look and learn.' At this the dark, shadowy angel placed a trumpet to his lips and blew three distinct blasts; and taking water from the ocean, he sprinkled it on Europe, Asia and Africa. Then my eyes beheld a fearful scene. From each of these countries arose thick black clouds that were soon joined into one. And throughout this mass there gleamed a dark red light by which I was seeing hordes of armed men who, moving with the cloud, marched by land and sailed by sea to America, which country was enveloped in the volume of cloud. And I dimly saw these vast armies devastate the whole country and burn villages, towns and cities that I beheld springing up.

"As my ears listened to the thundering of the cannon, slashing of swords and the shouts and cries of millions in mortal combat, I again heard the mysterious voice saying, 'Son of the Republic, look and learn.' When the voice had ceased, the dark angel placed his trumpet once more to his mouth, and blew a long and fearful blast. Instantly a light as of a thousand suns shone down from above me, and pierced and broke into fragments the dark cloud which enveloped America. At the same moment the angel upon whose head shone the word 'Union' and who bore our national flag in one hand and a sword in the other, descended from the heavens, attended by legions of white spirits. These immediately joined the inhabitants of America, whom I perceived were well-nigh overcome but who, immediately taking courage again, closed up their broken ranks and renewed the battle. Again, amid the fearful noise of the conflict, I heard the mysterious voice saying, 'Son of the Republic, look and learn.' As the voice ceased, the shadowy angel for the last time dipped water from the ocean and sprinkled it upon America. Instantly the dark cloud rolled back, together with the armies it had brought, leaving the inhabitants of the land victorious.
"Then once more I beheld the villages, towns and cities springing up where I had seen them before, while the bright angel, planting the azure standard he had brought in the midst of them, cried with a loud voice: 'While the stars remain and the heavens send down dew upon the earth, so long shall the Union last. And taking from his brow the crown on which blazoned the word 'Union', he placed it upon the standard while the people, kneeling down, said, 'Amen.'

"The scene instantly began to fade and dissolve, and I at last saw nothing but the rising, curling vapor I at first beheld. This also disappeared, and I found myself once more gazing upon the mysterious visitor who, in the same voice I had heard before, said, 'Son of the Republic, what you have seen is thus interpreted. Three great perils will come upon the Republic. The most fearful is the third, passing which the whole world united shall not prevail against her. Let every child of the Republic learn to live for his God, his land and Union.' With these words the vision vanished, and I started from my seat and felt that I had seen a vision wherein had been shown me the birth, the progress and the destiny of the United States."

"Such, my friends," said the venerable narrator, "were the words I heard from Washington's own lips, and America will do well to profit by them."

It would be presumptuous to add anything to this vision or seek to explain the wrath it foretells, so soon to come upon this part of the world. Nationally we have forsaken the God in whose hand our breath is to live instead after the baseness of the god of this age.

It must have been difficult for Nahum in his day to describe the modern automobile, but describe it he did in the second chapter of the book that bears his name. It must have been hard for Ezekiel to describe our modern air warfare, but he did so very successfully in Ezekiel 38:9. "Thou shalt ascend and come like a storm; thou shalt be like a cloud to cover the land, thou, and all thy bands, and many people with thee." No doubt George Washington was somewhat bewildered, especially by the last part of his vision, but it appears very clear that what he saw was the awfulness of modern warfare, the coming of the Lord and the subsequent setting up of the kingdom age, all of which without doubt are now very near at hand.

In these troublous times let us lay aside every weight and the abounding sin that does so easily beset us as our hearts continually cry, "Even so, Lord Jesus, come quickly."

CHAPTER THREE BE YE LIKE MEN WHO WAIT FOR THEIR LORD

Christ is coming and coming very soon. There can be no doubt about that. To Israel, more than three millenniums ago, the hope of their coming Messiah was the burning prayer and fervent desire of the elect. Enoch, the seventh from Adam, looking with prophetic vision far beyond the first advent of Christ, lifted up his voice to prophesy, saying, "Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousands of His saints, to execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against Him." Isaiah wrote of the coming of the Lord, telling of His advent as a suffering Messiah who would be despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, a man from whom we hid our faces, and a redeemer lightly esteemed by those He came to save. God's people Israel were baffled and confused in mind, because they had learned to look only for a Messiah who would come to deliver them from their enemies and from the hand of all who oppressed them. The scriptures plainly taught that a deliverer would come out of Zion. Of this they were confident and assured, but their unregenerate hearts did not know that the first work of the great Redeemer would be to deliver them from the curse of their sins and transform their wicked hearts by the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Ghost, which salvation could only be accomplished by the shedding of His righteous blood and the renewing of the Holy Ghost within them.

What value would it have been had the Redeemer come only to deliver them from the power and authority of Rome if there was to be no change in their wicked and rebellious hearts? God's word is full of accounts of His mighty acts of deliverance on their behalf, but no sooner were they delivered from their enemies than they utterly corrupted themselves and forsook the Lord. God's word records how they had corrupted themselves and defied the authority of Moses, saying, "You take too much upon yourselves," and "We will not have this..."
man to rule over us." This same Moses had warned them before his death that after his departure they would utterly corrupt themselves. Deut. 31:29. The mighty Joshua had scarcely begun his victorious conquest of the Promised Land when the people fled before their enemies at Ai simply because one of their number had sinned in that he had taken the forbidden thing, hiding a wedge of gold and a Babylonish garment in his tent. Joshua 7.

Furthermore, after the death of Joshua they again corrupted themselves and, leaving the worship of the one true God, who had always delivered them from their enemies and who had made them a peculiar people unto Himself, they went a-whoring after Baal to worship him and to make images to that hateful thing in orchards and groves and in the high places. No sooner had they done so than the hand of the Lord God of heaven was against them to deliver them into the hand of their enemies, who enslaved and devastated them. Then in their misery and oppression they cried unto the Lord and He in grace and mercy raised up deliverers such as Barak, Deborah, Gideon, Samuel, and Samson. Yet for all this they corrupted themselves again and again, going after strange gods, marrying heathen wives, and building altars to Baal, Moloch, and Ashtaroth, who could neither see nor hear nor walk.

The book of Judges is a wonderful book. Over and over again it records the loving kindness and tender mercy of God on the one hand and the incredible corruption of the human heart on the other. I must confess that time after time I have closed the book with a feeling of despair bordering on disgust as I have read how the Lord mightily delivered only to be repaid by the same ever-repeated story, "And the children of Israel did evil in the sight of the Lord;" and the Lord delivered them into the hand of the Philistines, or the Ammonites, or the Moabites. (See the book of Judges.)

The corruption of the human heart is beyond belief and it would have been completely useless had the Lord sent His Son to be the deliverer of His people Israel while leaving their wicked hearts unchanged and their carnal natures not destroyed. What good would it be to have a perfect law beautifully written and wonderfully engraven on a table of stone within one's house while the heart of man is deceitful and corrupt and his mind more nearly the mind of a devil than the mind of God? If ever the world is to be ruled in righteousness, then righteousness must first be established within the heart of man and the law of God removed from the cold tablets of stone to be written on the warm tables of the heart.

There must be a new birth, even a birth from above. The wickedness of man demands it. There must be a conversion wherein evil men who once were afar off from God are made nigh by the blood of Christ. The very well-spring of that conversion must be a birth from above by which a new heart and a new spirit are placed within the believer. Therefore Jesus, when He appeared on the world scene, came preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and the first word of that gospel is this: "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand," Matt. 4:17, for godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of, but the sorrow of the world worketh death. 2 Cor. 7:10.

The whole problem with Israel as a nation in Old Testament times was that they were unconverted. While they willingly made covenants with God and swore allegiance and obedience to Him, their hearts were not changed. There was no birth from above. All the while they were forcing themselves to do God's bidding, their unregenerate hearts were wandering after Baal or Ashtaroth or Mammon, because these gods catered to their flesh and to every abomination that is common to the human heart. They did not serve the Lord because their hearts were not attuned to a life of holiness, which begins when Jesus comes into the heart. The same condition still exists all about us in the realm of the unregenerate and unconverted people who go to what they call "church." With their lips they serve the Lord, but their hearts are far from Him. They sing, "Holy, holy, holy," while their hearts dream of business and pleasure and oft times unholy things. The first essential step in the life of any man is briefly stated in these words: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved."

There can be much hypocrisy in singing. As one has well stated, we sing, "Sweet hour of prayer," and content ourselves with five or ten minutes. We sing, "O for a thousand tongues to sing my Saviour's praise," and don't use the one we have. We sing, "There shall be showers of blessing," but don't come in when it is raining. We sing, "Blest be the tie that binds," and let the least little offense sever us. We sing, "Serve the Lord with gladness," and complain about every little thing we do. We sing, "I love to tell the story," but never mention it to our friends. We sing, "Cast your burden on the Lord," and worry ourselves into a nervous breakdown. We sing, "O day of rest and gladness," and wear ourselves out traveling for pleasure. We sing, "Throw out the life line," but content ourselves by throwing out the fishing line.

I do not mean to be sarcastic or derisive, but the sooner we learn that the human heart is utterly corrupt the sooner we will come to the fountain of His blood for cleansing that there through the grace of Christ we might be soundly converted and our spirits born anew from above. It is a wonderful blessing to be raised in a Christian home, but even there the hidden danger sometimes lurks that children may grow up, hearing wonderful truth from childhood yet never themselves having the blessed personal experience of sins forgiven or a personal knowledge of regeneration. What good would it have been had the Saviour come to Israel to deliver them from their Roman oppressors if He had left their hearts unchanged? They would no sooner have been delivered from their enemies than they would have turned back to heathen gods and to the lusts of their own flesh as they did in the days of Samuel and the judges. Is not this what the unregenerate are doing now? Do they not worship Mammon, the god of riches? Are they not lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God? Do men not worship the god of self and the god of sport and the god of lust and sex? No wonder the Lord said, "Ye draw nigh to Me with your lips, but your heart is far from Me." How well did James proclaim, "Draw nigh to God and He will draw nigh to you. Cleanse your hands, ye sinners, and purify your hearts, ye double-minded."

The first and most essential thing is this: Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ that you may be saved, for what shall it profit if you gain the whole world and lose your own soul? There is no price that man can give in exchange for his soul. What America and England and all these nations must do is repent of their sins that they might be saved. Then would the Lord deliver them from all that oppress them? When Great Britain served God and honored Him in all his doings, the sun never set upon her Empire. When America honored the Lord in her Congress and in her schools, she was in truth the land of the free and the home of the brave. But now God is dishonored. His laws are broken down. Punishment of crime is delayed, then forgotten altogether. Homosexuals are interviewed on TV as acceptable people. Nations from the far east are permitted to bring in their heathen gods and to build temples to these shameful idols, religions that have brought only poverty and misery to all who follow them. They are allowed to build temples to their sightless, speechless, grotesque gods while their priests are permitted to teach our children to turn away from the living Christ unto gods that are dead and have never lived. Cursed be their idols, for they speak not, neither do they hear.

All these things demonstrate as nothing else can how desperately the human heart needs regeneration by the washing of the blood of Christ and the renewing of the Holy Ghost, which God has freely given to all who believe. Without the power of regeneration, that renewing Spirit of Christ, we can never hope for anything more than continual backsliding and falling away from God. No matter how well we have been brought up, we must have a personal experience of the new birth. We must be saved from our sins. "They shall call His name Jesus, for He shall save His people from their sins."

The coming of the Lord draweth nigh; there can be no possible doubt about that. We only weary our souls by continually repeating the many signs of His coming - signs of which Jesus said, "When these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh." Luke 21:28. The whole world is now a fermenting mass of corruption. Few people are worthy of any confidence or trust. Politicians make solemn promises, but make little or no effort to keep them. The leaders of the church system cannot be trusted. Their programs, supposedly for the good of mankind, are very often cleverly devised schemes for personal gain. We are living in an hour when parents betray their children and children rise up against their parents. We can scarcely expect, therefore, to find faith and trust in anyone.

In the midst of all the violence and war, the cheating and lying, drugs and sex, the filth of homosexuals and lesbians, and the prevalence of every imaginable false cult and religion, there still remains a people in the earth who are undefiled before God. They are a people who have repented of sin and every work of the flesh. They have burned their idols of wood and stone and gold. The symbols of the world and all that is in it - the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, and the pride of life - they have put away, with all malice and greed. They are done with the goddess of illicit sex, the god of Mammon, the craze of sport. With Christ, their victorious head, they have died to the desires of the flesh and of the mind. No longer do they crave to be possessors of earthly treasure. They are a people who have fixed their hopes in Christ the Lord. They have come to Him through the open gate of repentance and their godly sorrow has worked repentance unto salvation that needs not to be repented of. The sorrow of the world that works nought but death is far from them. Their ransomed hearts cry not for the trinkets and tinsel of the world, but their prayer ascends to God day and night, "Even so, Lord Jesus, come quickly." They are like men and women who "wait for their Lord, when He will return from the wedding; that when He cometh and knocketh, they may open unto Him immediately. Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord when He cometh shall find watching: verily I say unto you that He shall gird Himself, and make them sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them." Luke 12: 36,37.

From time immemorial the Lord has reserved a people for Himself. He always has a people for His name. These people are never more than a little flock. At no time can they be numbered in millions. In the days of Enoch there was scarcely any who walked with God. In the days of Noah he alone was found righteous in his generation. In the days of Abraham all Babylon was gone after their idols, and when Elijah was witnessing before the idolatrous house of Israel, he was told of seven thousand others who had not bowed the knee to the image of Baal, a small number indeed when compared to the multitudes of that nation. Though Jesus preached to multitudes and countless thousands were blessed by His ministry, it was to a very small number He spoke the words, "Fear not, little flock; it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." Even so it is today. The Lord has a people still. One may as well try to stop the sun from shining by day or the moon by night as to extinguish the light of this handful of elect people in whose hearts the Lord dwells.

Have you ever read the words of David when he spoke of that great day of blessedness to come, even the kingdom of Christ? He said, "There shall be a handful of corn in the earth upon the top of the mountains; the fruit thereof shall shake like Lebanon; and they of the city shall flourish like grass." Psa. 72:16. That handful of corn on the top of the mountains is God's elect people. Then "His name shall endure forever; and His name shall be continued as long as the sun: and men shall be blessed in Him; all nations shall call Him blessed. Blessed be the Lord God, the God of Israel, who doeth wondrous things." Verses 17-18.

Everyone of us at some time has waited patiently or impatiently for the arrival of someone we knew was coming. How vivid in my recollection are the numberless times in our pioneer prairie home when we would watch and wait and listen for the sound of the wagon wheels that told us someone was coming home. Only those pioneers who in bygone years moved out into the great prairie vastness can appreciate the conditions as they were then when hardy settlers pushed one hundred miles or more beyond the end of the railroad. There were no roads then - only wagon trails across the vast prairie landscape. There were no automobiles to bridge the endless expanse of miles. Lowing oxen at a snail’s pace turned the furrows one by one and he who had a team of horses possessed the utmost speed. There were no radios, no telephones, nor any modern convenience. They were difficult days, but good days. Wonderful beyond words! I am forever thankful that I was raised among them. Then neighbors were neighbors and friends were friends, more so when one was in need than at any other time. There were no doctors within miles; neither was there much sickness that a good dose of Watkin’s liniment would not cure. In all those pioneer years I never met nor heard tell of an insecure child, a divorce, or a broken home.

Often times it was necessary for some member of the family to take the team and wagon, or in the winter the bobsleigh, and go to the village for groceries and mail. How often have I gone to the door and listened for the sound of the wagon wheels coming in the distance or the sound of the sleigh bells in the frosty air! There was no way to know just when they would arrive, but they would never get closer than a mile or so before I could hear them coming. Then the lantern was lit, the teakettle put over the fire, and all was ready to receive the weary traveler home. Thus Jesus said that we who live in these last days should be like men that wait for their Lord. Let your loins be girded and your lights burning. Luke 12:35.

In the long dark night that has enshrouded the earth since our Lord went away, the elect have been God's lights in the world. "Ye are the light of the world," said Jesus. "A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid." Matt. 5:14. It is a wondrous thing that Jesus, who Himself is the light of the world, should deem it good during His absence to place His elect as lights of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid. It is no small wonder that He instructed His people, saying, "Keep your lamps burning." Anyone who had had anything to do with a kerosene lamp will surely remember that two things were necessary, and that continually, if there was to be any light at all. First the lamp must be filled with oil, and, secondly, the wick must be trimmed as often as necessary. If there is no oil, the lamp will go out. If the lamp is not trimmed, it will smoke and give a very inferior light. The oil here represents the Holy Spirit in our lives and the wick represents ourselves. We can never have light without the Spirit and the Spirit cannot shine unless we are trimmed. All is darkness without Him. Even the attempt to preach the word of God is darkness and death when the Spirit is not present. "It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing. The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." John 6:63. These are the faithful words of our Lord Jesus Christ as He stood teaching the people. We cannot give forth light without the presence of the Spirit within; neither can we receive light unless the Spirit of God reveals it unto us. "For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him? Even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God." But we have received, not the spirit of the world, but that Spirit which is of God that we may know the things that are freely given us of God. When the trumpet of the Lord shall sound and Jesus Christ returns with the voice of the archangel and the trumpet of God, it is the Spirit who will make alive our mortal bodies. Just as steel responds to the pull of a magnet, so the elect will respond to the pull of the Spirit when the dead are raised incorruptible and we are all changed into His likeness. I am among those foolish people who believe that the body that was sown (buried) in corruption is also the body that will be raised in glory, and I think I see at least one scripture to indicate that even in the dead bodies of the elect and believing saints there may yet remain some trace of the Spirit of God.

Long centuries ago Elijah threw his mantle around the shoulder of Elisha and immediately the Spirit came upon this plowman who was to be anointed in Elijah's room. And, when Elisha made request of Elijah, his request was that he might have a double portion of the same blessed Spirit that was on Elijah. The request was granted and Elisha did receive a double portion of Elijah's Spirit. After performing double the number of miracles and signs and wonders that Elijah had done, Elisha died and was buried. On a certain day, when war raged in Israel and the warriors were burying a dead soldier, they saw the enemy coming. With haste they cast the dead man into Elisha's tomb, whereupon the dead body, falling upon the bones of Elisha, came forth from the grave alive. It is the Spirit that quickeneth. The flesh profiteth nothing. Therefore even those dead that sleep in Jesus will respond to the Spirit of the Lord when He descends from heaven and will come forth, not in corruption, but in incorruption; not in mortality, but in immortality. God's people are not immortal at the present time, but they will without a doubt put on immortality at the coming of the Lord. They are not incorruptible at the present time, but when the trumpet sounds, the dead shall be raised incorruptible.

The Spirit today is teaching us how great is the necessity of passing our lives here in constant communion with the Holy Spirit. Many who once were baptized with the Spirit are now walking in emptiness. How often I shake my head in utter sadness when someone writes me a long letter, telling of the waywardness and wickedness of some backslidden relative only to hurriedly add, "Of course, they are Spirit-filled." How can you believe such utter nonsense as that? The Spirit of God does not dwell in reprobate people. There was a time when the Spirit of God came upon King Saul and God gave him another heart, 1 Sam. 10:5-9, but because he later walked in envy and strife, the Spirit of the Lord departed from him and an evil spirit began to trouble him. When homosexuals and lesbians sing, "We're filled with the Spirit, there isn't a doubt," they speak the truth, but the spirit with which they are filled is not the Spirit of God, but the spirit of the devil and of antichrist. Every homosexual in the world should read the first chapter of Romans. Then he would know he has been abandoned by God and is now possessed of an evil spirit. No homosexual is saved. How then can he have the Spirit of the Lord?

So we must keep ourselves filled with the Spirit if we are to shine as lights in the world. Phil. 2:5. God Himself is the Father of lights. With Him there is no shadow of turning. Not only is there no shadow of turning, but with Him there is no shadow. The light that shines from His glorious self shines brightly from within, leaving no place dark or any gloomy shadows of doubt anywhere. His light fills the whole house, bringing springtime and morning and warmth of the whole being of man, "and now no condemnation abides to turn away my soul from His salvation. He's in my heart to stay." It is not a difficult thing to remain filled with the Spirit. It is simply a matter of walking in light and the Holy Spirit is light. It is not difficult to be led by the Spirit. All it requires is a complete surrender to Him and a lifetime of walking softly before Him. It is not necessary to be always "putting out the fleece" that we might know the mind of God. The leading of the Spirit of God encompasses our entire pilgrimage. Our Father in heaven has many ways by which His unseen hand leads us into His will. Dark calamities that come like evil specters into our lives are very often the hand of the Spirit, irresistibly pushing us... in the direction He wants us to go and working together for good to them that love God. The awful calamity that overtook Joseph when he was sold into Egypt by his brethren was later known by him to have been the hand of God, sending him to be a mighty deliverer to his people. The calamities, which overtook Paul when he was cast into prison and securely shut up so that he could no longer travel or preach among the churches, have proved to be of greatest blessing to the church of later years. It was through Paul's imprisonments that we have been given the finest of his epistles. And so it happens to us all. God is standing in the shadows, keeping watch amid the dark travail of our souls. He is with us in the den, shutting the mouths of lions, and in the fiery furnace He is loosing our bands. If men would but believe that God is with them in their trouble, they would find that through the turmoil He was leading His people to His desired haven, to blessing and deliverance.

When I speak thus of tribulation, I am referring to men and women who have committed their lives to God and are trusting Him. I am not speaking of those ungodly persons who through their own wickedness add sin-to-sin, trouble to trouble, and sorrow to sorrow. The way of the transgressor is hard and his own wickedness will correct him, but those who put their trust in the Lord may walk assured that He will be with them in trouble. He will strengthen and uphold them with the right hand of His own righteousness. His righteousness is Christ; therefore it is by His hand that you will be upheld.

We mentioned above how Jesus Christ instructed us to keep our lamps burning, and saw how light requires the oil of the Holy Spirit. We are further told that our lamps must be kept trimmed. Now trimming concerns not the oil, but the wick, and I would certainly think that the wick has something in common with ourselves rather than the Spirit. Be there ever so much oil in the vessel, if the wick be untrimmed, there will be a smoky light that grows increasingly dimmer the longer it remains untrimmed. Therefore, it is our God-given duty to trim off all these: anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of our mouths. We must lie not one to another, seeing we have put off the old man with his deeds. A thorough searching of the New Testament, together with the Proverbs and Psalms, will do wonders in showing a Christian how to trim his lamp so that his light may shine brightly in the world. I am convinced that there is much more to being a Christian than giving one's testimony, good as that may be. Those who are born of God and walking with Him are soon recognized by the world. It is not long before worldly men behold their chaste conversation, which is coupled with the fear of God. "Let love be without dissimulation. Abhor that which is evil; cleave to that which is good. Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love; in honor preferring one another; not slothful in business; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord." Rom. 12:9-11. A slothful man is brother to a great waster. Let thine eyes look right on, and let thine eyelids look straight before thee, lest thou be turned aside to follow in the way of the foolish.

Above all we must deliver ourselves from the Babylon system. "Come out from among them and be ye separate saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." 2 Cor. 6:17,18. We are living in the day when the cry, "Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird," Rev. 18:2, is a reality. There was a day when Babylon was riding high, as indeed she seems to be now, but her end is at hand, and nothing can help her. All the frantic moves toward church union and renewal are building her up for a great fall. The Ecumenical Movement, the Charismatic Movement, the moves of the World Council of Churches toward Rome, the Jesus Freaks, the hobnobbing of the church system with heathen religions and Judaism, and the devilish trend toward the ordaining of homosexuals and lesbians to the ministry is proof of her terrible fall. The whole thing is a seething mass of corruption, a boiling pot of iniquity, upon which the wrath of God shall presently be poured out. Therefore, thus saith the Lord, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partakers of her sins," for strong is the Lord that judgeth her.

The Lord God of heaven is calling loud and clear today to all His elect people, requiring that they leave religious Babylon and walk with Him. But I will add yet another fact. In my opinion even now the Lord is beginning to call His people to abandon Babylon's temporal and political system. Not only is the church system falling. The governments of the world system are falling one by one. They are literally disintegrating before our very eyes. Make no mistake about that. The clay feet of Daniel's image are eroding away in the floods and tempests of this present hour. The mighty British Commonwealth, once representing almost a billion people, has fallen into irretrievable decay. Our brother nation, the United States of America, is collapsing beneath her own enormous weight as fraud, deceit, love of pleasure, love of wealth and luxury, greed and debauchery erode her very foundation and make null and void the beauty of her God-given constitution.
It may be said with certainty that, when the patriarch Jacob called his sons to his bedside, saying "Gather yourselves together, that I may tell you that which shall befall you in the last days," Gen. 49:1, he was definitely speaking of the days in which we now live, for these are in truth and in fact the last days. All these twelve sons were to become nations, Gen. 17:5, 16:48: 19, and if we read carefully Jacob's prophetic utterance as recorded in Genesis, chapters forty-eight and forty-nine, with a little research we can identify most of the tribes of Israel as they exist as nations in our day. The existence of Ephraim and Manasseh is indisputable. Gen. 48:19. Wonderful as were the prophecies given to these twelve sons, none of them compares to the prophecies given to the two sons of Joseph, whom Jacob adopted as his own. Gen. 48:5,6. So, laying his right hand on the head of Ephraim, he said that his seed would become a multitude of nations. Gen. 48:19. And to Manasseh he said that he would become a great nation. Verse 49. The word multitude here used in the King James version is translated by some as commonwealth, and indeed Paul uses the term commonwealth of Israel in Ephesians 2:12. There is only one Commonwealth of Nations in all the world. Indeed, only one Commonwealth of Nations has ever existed in this world. There have been many empires, but none of them except the British Empire ever became a company of self-governing nations. Furthermore, there is only one company of nations who has a brother nation that can be called a great nation and that great nation is the United States of America or Ephraim's brother Manasseh. Once we understand that the ten supposedly lost tribes of Israel were predestined by God to become the great free nations of the world, then I affirm that three-quarters of the entire Bible takes on new meaning and the hidden mysteries so often spoken by Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and other prophets begin to unravel themselves.

If I believed, as many do, that God was no longer concerned with His people Israel, then I would not take space here to mention them, but Paul removed all doubt from our minds concerning God's love for His holy people when he asked, "Hath God cast away His people?" and then emphatically answered his own question by saying, "God forbid; for I am an Israelite, of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin. God hath not cast away His people whom He foreknew." Rom. 11:1-2. It may come as a surprise to many to learn that the word British comes from two Hebrew words - brith meaning covenant and ish meaning people. Thus the word British means covenant people, or the people with whom God made His covenant.

Now in our times we are seeing the collapse of these two mighty powers. England is broke financially, her empire dissolved, and her leaders completely out of touch with reality. The United States will be five hundred billion dollars in debt this year. They expect unemployment to reach eight or nine million. Scarcity is looming everywhere in the midst of plenty. The greatest depression in the history of the world is in the making and it will grow worse for many months. The sinister feature about all this is that all this distress is being deliberately connived behind the scenes by great financial interests whose purpose is to bring the nation to ruin.

I have stated these things to emphasize the following fact: The downfall of these two mighty Israelitish powers, Great Britain and the United States, is the greatest proof that we are now in the dying moments of this age and the kingdom of God is at hand. When Daniel with great desire sought the Lord for the meaning of his visions, he was told, "But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words, and seal the book, even to the time of the end: many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased. Then I Daniel looked, and, behold, there stood other two, the one on this side of the bank of the river, and the other on that side of the bank of the river. And one said to the man clothed in linen, which was upon the waters of the river, How long shall it be to the end of these wonders? And I heard the man clothed in linen, which was upon the waters of the river, when he held up his right hand and his left hand unto heaven, and sware by Him that liveth forever that it shall be for a time, times, and an half; and when he shall have accomplished to scatter the power of the holy people, all these things shall be finished." What does the Lord mean when He expresses Himself thus - "to scatter the power of the holy people? In my opinion I can see only one true answer to the question, and it is this: The great Israel nations, which in God's sight are the holy people because they are covenant people, will in the last days have all their might and power taken from them and scattered as the dust of the summer threshing floor. The fearful disintegration of the Anglo-Saxon nations will continue to the end of the great tribulation, when Christ shall come with His elect to set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed.

I know that some of these things may seem drastically new, but they really are not new at all. The problem is that our Christian lives have been so humbugged with Romish tradition, to which we adhere with complete...
docility, that God can never show us anything new at all. If I live to be a thousand years old, I shall never forget the admonition of my dear instructor, Elmer Hoff, who said, "The moment you say no, you close the door for God to teach you anything." So let us keep the door of our heart open, and little by little the Spirit will instruct us in the mighty mysteries of the great God of heaven. Be like men that wait for their Lord. Blessed are those servants whom the Lord, when He cometh, shall find watching. Many times in God's word we are instructed to watch. Indeed, the Lord has made us like watchmen upon a wall, but in this case we are not looking for the coming of an enemy, but the coming of Christ, the exalted Head of His own body. It is improbable that Jesus meant we should stand by our window, looking for His coming, but it is our God-given duty to watch for the ever, increasing procession of signs that herald the coming of the Lord. The sign of the scattering of the power of the holy people is a tremendous sign that the end is upon us, and when that scattering is complete, the Lord will undoubtedly come. I may be wrong, but I shall be surprised indeed if we pass this decade before we see the literal coming of the Lord and the end of the age. Should you ask an answer to this hope, I can only reply that there are certain things I am watching, and as they come to pass one by one, there is much greater assurance that the end of the age is not many months away.

It is a singular thing that several times in the word of God the coming of the Lord is likened to the coming of a thief in the night. Peter vividly describes the sudden end of this age in these words: "But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat..." 2 Pet. 3:10. It is much more than a matter of passing interest to know that the very things mentioned in this verse are things which can now be accomplished with hydrogen bombs — the melting elements, the fervent heat, the great noise, and the burning up of the works of man. But all this must come to pass that a kingdom may be set up which will never be destroyed.

In like manner Jesus also described His coming as the coming of a thief when He said, "Watch therefore: for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come. But know this, that if the good-man of the house had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched, and would not have suffered his house to be broken up." Matt. 24:42,43. Paul also likened the coming of the Lord to the coming of a thief. "But of the times and seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you. For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape. But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief." 1 Thess. 5:1-4. Here the Holy Spirit tells us a wonderful thing; first, that the coming of the Lord is to be as unexpected as the coming of a thief. Secondly, he gives us a definite sign for which we should watch, that is, "when they shall say, peace and safety," a thing we hear with ever increasing frequency, then sudden destruction comes upon them as travail upon a woman with child, and they shall not escape. "But ye, brethren, are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief. Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness. Therefore let us not sleep, as do others: but let us watch and be sober." Verses 4-6.

The ever increasing signs are God's messengers to His people, warning them that the greatest events of all history are about to take place - the end of man's six days of labor and misrule, the coming of the King of kings, the resurrection of the dead in Christ, and the setting up of the kingdom that shall never be destroyed. We cannot expect the world to understand these things, for the Spirit has said, "None of the wicked shall understand." Yet amid their darkness and lack of understanding even the world of the unsaved is in fear and trembling, knowing in themselves that some great event of world, shaking proportions is about to take place. "Many shall be purified and made white and tried; but the wicked shall do wickedly: and none of the wicked shall understand; but the wise shall understand." Dan. 12:10. The things which were sealed to Daniel were sealed unto the time of the end, but they are opening their secrets to the wise now in our day, and we clearly see these things are being fulfilled.

When the disciples asked to be told the signs of the end of the age, Jesus left no doubt as to what those signs would be. He told them, "Then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be. And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved: but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened. Then if any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is Christ, or there; believe it not. For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect. Behold, I have told you before.

Wherefore if they shall say unto you, Behold, He is in the desert; go not forth: behold, He is in the secret chambers; believe it not." Matt. 24:21-26.

These are but a few of the many signs the word of God gives us, but I am certain that almost every Christian on earth has become conversant with the many signs spoken of by the Lord and His apostles and prophets that tell us there will be foul weather in the intervening days that precede the kingdom of God. What better exhortation can we have, therefore, than this: Be ye like men that wait for their Lord.

UNTO THEM THAT LOOK

We are drawing very near to the end of the age. The coming of the Lord draweth nigh. It is much nearer than we think and probably much different than we think. In the years that have passed many theories and doctrines have been formed concerning the coming of Christ, most of which, I fear, were the product of the natural mind and had little to do with the actual truth. The further we go with God the more we realize how little truth we have really known, and we realize, too, that the little we have known or thought we knew has hindered us from going on to the fullness and the glory of the coming of the Lord.

When our Lord came to earth some two thousand years ago, the scribes, Pharisees, and doctors of the law had their stereotyped doctrines and theories about the coming Messiah, but, when the King finally came, His coming was so contrary to their set theories that they did not recognize Him at all. The idea of the King of Israel's being born in a manger was nonsense to them. The idea that he was to be lifted up on a cross was an even greater stumbling-stone. They were not in the least prepared to accept or receive any of these things because such things were contrary to all their preconceived ideas. So they gave their word against Him and hung Him on a cross saying, "Let His blood be upon us and upon our children." But the tradition of the church today is even more involved than the traditions of Israel. For centuries Christians have talked of the second coming of Christ. They have filled books with arguments about how and when and for whom He will come, but I fear that, when He does come, many will never know a thing about it, or, if they do, they will reject Him because He will not have come in accordance with their theories.

There are a number of scriptures that I would like to consider with you. If you will let these gracious inspired words speak for themselves, there will be little need of explanation. First of all, however, there are a few things we should try to grasp and a few things we should let go.

No doubt there is a place for sound doctrine, but how good it would be if we could realize that doctrines as we know them are only articles of faith that have been set forth by certain sects for their people to accept and believe. Most of us imbibed the doctrines of the sect among whom we first believed. Doctrine that is set forth in this manner is not true doctrine. It is likely to have a fragment of truth but at best be only in part. It was likely living and real to the man to whom it was first revealed, but his successors merely received it as a tradition and it meant little or nothing to them and changed their lives not a whit. Doctrine that is not progressive in its scope is valueless. When a revelation becomes a tradition, it is practically worthless and serves only as an opiate to deaden the minds of those who accept it.

We are going to have to do more than accept dead doctrines. We are going to have to see the living Christ, for He is the Word of God and the Doctrine of God. It is going to take more than sermons on holiness and sanctification to make us holy and sanctified. We are going to have to see Him and be changed into His image. It is going to take a great deal more than meetings and human fellowship to bring us to a knowledge of God. We shall have to meet Him as Thomas and Paul and John met Him. We must hear His voice speaking to the deep recesses of our hearts. We must speak to Him and hear His answer and His command. Church meetings have been a blessing to us in our spiritual infancy even as the country school house was a blessing in our natural infancy. But church meetings have no ability to produce Christian maturity. Maturity can only come by personal association with Christ Himself. I am willing to stake my life and what feeble ministry I have on this assertion: no man or woman can ever become mature until he has cast off the yokes and bondages of human tradition and religion and has met Christ personally, spoken to Him face to face and heart to heart, and continued to walk in the ever increasing light and glory of what he saw. The Apostle Paul struck the keynote to the whole thing when he said, "When it pleased God who separated me from my mother's womb to reveal His Son in me, immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood."

Once a man has seen Christ, he has no need to confer with men, for man's traditions and ideas will stink in his nostrils and all human suggestions, thoughts, and ideas will be found to be desperately constricted, confined, and short of the mark. As the feeble flickering light of a wax candle fades before the rising of the glorious sun, so all human doctrine and understanding fade into insignificance and nothingness before the glorious rising of the Sun of Righteousness. Just as sure as we live and move, the next great event in the order of things is that those who believe and are faithful are going to know the transcending glory of His appearing and they will see Him in His beauty. That one glimpse will do more for us in a second of time than all the meetings we have attended, all the songs we have sung, and all the doctrines we have listened to in our whole life.

Have you ever wondered what is the difference between a Pharisee who laboriously, fervently, and reverently adhered to the minutest commands of the law and a man like Paul who, though he made no effort to keep the law, had a far higher and richer standard of holiness than the Pharisee? I'll tell you what the difference is: Paul had met Christ personally. His eyes had beheld His wonderful beauty and purity and with that beholding he had been changed into that same image. To walk as Christ walked from thenceforth was not a matter of slavish imitation of a hero or an idol but a matter of being. He walked like Him because he was like Him, for his eyes had beheld Him. Yet the Pharisee, adhering strictly to his tradition, was only a slave to what he believed and at the end of his life was no more like his pattern or his doctrine than he was the day he began.

Has not the above also been the picture of the Christian? Here and there someone has met the Lord and been changed into His image, but the vast majority of so-called "born-again" people spend their lives in the shallows miserably trying to be like Jesus so that they will go to heaven when they die, but with the other side of their nature reaching out to partake of as much of the things of the earth as they feel they dare. No man who has heard the sweet sounds of heaven's music can lend his ear to earth's rasping discords. Much less can those whose eyes have seen the King in His beauty be entertained in their parlors by the adulterous seed of Hollywood. It is not a matter of do's and don'ts. It is a matter of whether or not we have seen Him.

How I wish that for a while at least you could forget your continual groaning and moaning for fellowship with people and for the rest of your life concentrate on finding fellowship with Him. How I wish you could quit groaning for meetings and the wonderful days of the past and meet Christ personally for the first time in your life. You are not going to find Christ in meetings any more. If you are going to look for Him there, you are going to be disappointed, for the times are changing and old things are passing away. A new day and a new era is coming when men shall know God and His mind will dwell in them and they will walk in the light and glory of His will.

There is no greater authority on these things than the word of God itself. Paul the Apostle was ordained of God to bring the Christians the teachings of the church age. He knew how a church meeting should be conducted and it must have been a glorious thing at times to meet together as he taught the people. But it is a source of wonder to see that right in the midst of his instructions about spiritual gifts and all the other wonderful things that were to take place in a public gathering he soared away into the Spirit to tell us of a more excellent way — a glorious way where all the former things would fall into decay, where prophecy would fail, tongues would cease, knowledge would vanish away, and preaching would be no more. Certainly none of these things are necessary in that realm where we meet Him face to face. Surely there is no need of seeing through a glass darkly when we have seen face to face. Surely there is no need of partial knowledge and partial prophecy when we know Him as He knows us.

How sad my heart often gets when I hear someone trying to explain from 1 Cor. 13 how we should show love. With all respect I must say that no one is ever helped by such teachings, for at best it can only make him an imitator and he is no more like Christ by being an imitator of Him than a parrot is like a man because he imitates him. The foundation and root of the whole matter of love is that God is love and that he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God and God in him. There is no love apart from God for God is love, and God has manifested His love toward us in that He gave us His Son that we might have the love of God in us because His Son is in us.
Our great need is not a return of the good old meetings of the past with all their tongues, interpretations, prophecies, hearings and miracles, for you can have all these things, together with much more, and still have absolutely nothing. Our need is to meet with Christ personally and individually and there find all the needs of a groaning creation are met by the fullness that dwells in Him. Love is not a thing. Love is a person, and God is that person.

Let us see now and take note of some of the strange and wonderful promises He left us for the last days. I am fully aware that the church has already explained away many of the wonderful things He left us as a sure inheritance. But these promises of Christ are true and, when they actually take place in those who believe them, their fulfillment is going to bring about the transformation of the ages.

We are not following some cunningly devised fable when we look in faith for Christ to manifest Himself to us personally. He has told us by His word of truth that "unto those who look for Him shall He appear the second time without sin unto salvation". Heb. 9:28. There are many people today talking about a rapture when they believe they will be caught away suddenly into heaven, but there are very, very few people who are looking for Him. If you can rid your mind of the church tradition of rapture for a while, you may be able to see more clearly what the scripture means when it promises that unto them that look for Him shall He appear. We have grown too busy in our numerous activities to be looking for Jesus to appear to us as He did to Mary, Peter, Thomas, and Paul and transform our lives by His glorious presence. But the hour is at hand when Christ will appear to those who are looking for Him and this will surely take place right while the multitude of Christians are busy with the usual forms and ceremonies of church activity. He will have come as a thief in the night and they will be unaware of it.

It would be well worth our time to consider prayerfully just what is actually stated in the promise of Heb. 9:28 which says, "So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto those who look for Him shall He appear the second time without sin unto salvation." I am sure we have never yet grasped the tremendous import and meaning of this promise, but to give ourselves opportunity to comprehend what is meant I should like to quote it from one or two other translations. First from the Amplified version: "And as it is appointed for (all) men once to die and after that the (certain) judgment, even so it is that Christ, having been offered to take upon Himself and bear as a burden the sins of many once and for all, will appear a second time, not carrying any burden of sin nor to deal with sin, but to bring to full salvation those who are (eagerly, constantly, and patiently) waiting for and expecting Him." Heb. 9:27-28.

This is a promise of God and can no more pass away than any other of God's promises. It clearly describes the purpose of the first coming of Christ that is, to bear the sins of the world - but it also describes the purpose of His coming the second time, which is to bring full salvation to those who look for Him. That statement in itself explains Paul's remark in Romans 13:11, "And that, knowing the time, that now it is high time to awaken out of sleep; for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed." The two statements go hand in hand. It is a grave mistake to think that we entered into the fullness of salvation when we believed. Indeed we were believers. Indeed we were saved, but the nearer we get to the second coming of Christ the nearer our salvation comes, for He is going to appear the second time to bring us to the fullness of it.

Weymouth's translation of Heb. 9:28 reads thus: "Christ also, having been once offered in sacrifice in order that He might bear the sins of many, will appear a second time, separated from sin, to those who are eagerly expecting Him to make their salvation complete." And Moffat: "Christ, after being once sacrificed to bear the sins of many, will appear again, not to deal with sin, but for the saving of those who are on the lookout for Him."

The Lord Jesus greatly puzzled His disciples by saying, "A little while and ye shall not see Me, and again a little while and ye shall see Me, because I go to the Father." John 14:16. This statement so puzzled the disciples that they said to each other, "What is this that He saith unto us, a little while and ye shall not see Me; and, again a little while and ye shall see Me; and because I go to the Father? They said therefore, what is this that He saith, a little while? We cannot tell what He saith." That statement has puzzled Christians of all ages. It has caused wonder in us all and because we have not understood it, we have come up with many theories and strange answers. I have sometimes thought that Christ's answer to the question was intentionally ambiguous, but as I read it now it seems to be a clear description of all that has happened to true believers from His first appearing to His second appearing. It portrays a weeping, lamenting, sorrowing, travailing church contrasted by a laughing, rejoicing world, but He tells them, "I will see you again, and your heart shall rejoice and your joy no man taketh from you. In that day ye shall ask Me nothing; verily, verily I say unto you, whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in My name He will give it you."

The traditions of the past have so dimmed our understanding that every truth is side-tracked to be made to conform to the doctrines and teachings of a Babylonish church. Thus it is that when we speak of Christ's appearing unto those who look for Him, our minds fall into the thought of a rapture and once again we begin to look for a moment when the whole Babylonish church is to be caught up to meet the Lord in the air, and the whole world is left to the Antichrist. I cannot accept it. The truth is that the existing church is not looking for the Lord. It is too engrossed in the pleasure of the world and in its numerous activities and programs to want the Lord to come, but Christ will appear to the ones who are looking for Him and hoping that every shadow is His shadow, every knock at the door is His knock, and every footstep is the sound of His feet. Their hearts are crying, "Oh, Lord Jesus, how long?" Their lips are repeating the prayer, "Even so, Lord Jesus, come quickly."

There is a beautiful story in Luke 24 that tells of one of the many appearings of Christ and of the transforming results that followed. The blessed Lord had been crucified and laid away in the tomb. With the death of this great prophet of God who they thought should have redeemed Israel faith and hope had ebbed from their lives as the tides of the sea ebb from the shores leaving unknown rocks and sinking sands. The sun, darkened for three hours at Calvary, had now set beyond their little horizon and with it the last faint rays of hope had faded into darkness. Two disappointed and heartbroken disciples trudged wearily down the road to the little village of Emmaus. They might as well go home, they thought. There was nothing else left to do. As they plodded their weary way homeward, their rough hands of toil brushed away the blinding tears that crowded unbidden o'er their sight. Choking back the sobs of sadness and disappointment, they communed with each other and recounted with brokenhearted bitterness the events of the past few days. As they communed and reasoned, a shadow fell across their path and a stranger drew near who, walking with them, asked the meaning of their sorrow.

"And, behold, two of them went the same day to a village called Emmaus, which was from Jerusalem about threescore furlongs. And they talked together of all these things which had happened. And it came to pass that, while they communed together and reasoned, Jesus Himself drew near and went with them. But their eyes were holden that they should not know Him, and He said unto them, What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another as ye walk and are sad? And one of them, whose name was Cleopas, answering said unto Him, Art thou only a stranger in Jerusalem and hast not known the things that are come to pass there in these days? And He said unto them, What things? And they said unto Him, Concerning Jesus of Nazareth, which was a prophet mighty in deed and word before God and the people, and how the chief priests and our rulers delivered Him to be condemned to death and have crucified Him. But we trusted that it should have been He which should have redeemed Israel. And beside all this, today is the third day since these things were done. Yea, and certain women of our company made us astonished which were early at the sepulcher; and when they found not His body, they came saying they had also seen a vision of angels which said that He was alive. And certain of them that were with us went to the sepulcher and found it even as the women had said; but they saw Him not.

Then He said unto them, O fools and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken. Ought not Christ to have suffered these things and to enter into His glory? And beginning at Moses and all the prophets, He expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning Himself. And they drew nigh unto the village whither they went; and He made as though He would have gone further, but they constrained Him saying, Abide with us; for it is toward evening and the day is far spent. And He went in to tarry with them. And it came to pass, as He sat at meat with them, He took bread, and blessed it, and brake it, and gave to them. And their eyes were opened and they knew Him and He vanished out of their sight. And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us while He talked with us by the way, and while He opened to us the scriptures; and they rose up the same hour and returned to Jerusalem and found the eleven gathered and them that were with them, saying, The Lord is risen and hath appeared to Simon, and they told what things were done in the way and how He was made known by the breaking of bread."

My heart leaps within me for joy as I contemplate this wonderful story and anticipate the glad hour when He shall appear in some like manner to you and to me and to all others who love His appearing. I do not know the day nor the hour of His appearing, but I do know that, when our eyes behold Him, our tears of sorrow will turn to pearls of praise, our broken chords will vibrate once more, and in a moment of time we shall be like Him for we shall see Him as He is. From the distant mountain peaks of faith comes an echo clear as vespers ringing. It is the voice of Job sounding from out the centuries past. "I know that my Redeemer liveth and He shall stand in the latter days upon the earth, and if after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God, whom I shall see for myself and mine eyes shall behold and not another." This is the kind of appearing that is going to make the difference and change our lives and make us new creatures. And when it happens, it will do more for us in the twinkling of an eye than all the sermons, teachings, and doctrines have ever done in a lifetime. Furthermore, those unto whom the Lord has thus appeared will be able to accomplish more for the earth in a moment of time than in a whole lifetime spent in the shallows of our present state.

I have often thought of the wonderful words "no man can see God and live." Oh how often we have quoted that wonderful passage as proof that we may not hope to see His face. Will you allow me to reverently say something else? Though it is true that no man can see God and live, it is equally true that no man can see God and die. Men do not die in God's presence, neither do they live as they used to live, but they are transformed. Hallelujah! They are changed; they are transfigured; they come into that same image of Him who created them. In whatever measure God reveals Himself to man, to that same measure they are changed and nothing can avoid that conclusion. There is no possibility of any man's ever being the same again or living as they used to live once he has personally met the Lord and his eyes have beheld Him, the King in His beauty. "As for me," said David, "I will behold Thy face in righteousness. I shall be satisfied, when I wake, with thy likeness." My own heart answers Amen. That is when I, too, shall be fully satisfied.

There are few recorded instances of Christ's appearing more enlightening than the account of Christ's personal revealing of Himself to Thomas. It is a sobering thing to know that a man could be with Jesus for three years and yet never really see Him. But truly a man could be with Jesus three thousand years and never see Him until it pleased God to open his eyes and understanding. Thomas was naturally slow to believe. By his very nature he was inclined to be a doubter. In any case the stories about the resurrection of Jesus sounded like idle tales in his ears. It may have been as a result of this doubt that he was absent when Christ appeared to the other ten, for "Thomas called Didymus was not with them when Jesus came." Was he not the man who had said, "Lord, we know not where thou goest and how can we know the way?" And was it not he who at Lazarus' death had said, "Let us go that we may die with Him," and was he not now saying, "Except I shall see in His hands the print of the nails and put my finger into the print of the nails and thrust my hand into His side, I will not believe." But he did not know what a transformation would take place in his life when his eyes would see the resurrected Christ. How he longed to see the Lord, but, like many of us doubters now, he was almost beyond hope that he would see Him again. He did not know that one glimpse of the Son of God would pierce the gloomy mists of doubt and throw a rainbow of hope about his shoulders. "Reach hither thy finger," said Jesus, "and behold my hands, and reach hither thy hand and thrust it into my side, and be not faithless but believing." And Thomas answered and said unto Him, "My Lord and my God!" Gone were the gloomy doubts. Gone were the mists of fear and unbelief. Thomas had seen the risen Lord. He is transformed by the presence divine. Church history records that, after seeing Christ, none of the disciples ever exceeded Thomas for his fervent faith and labor of love until the day he gladly laid down his life for Him.

Saul of Tarsus was a hard-headed bigot if one ever lived. It is difficult for a man who has been strictly trained in tradition from childhood to have any inclination to change. We cannot help but admire the man and his background as it is recorded in sacred writ. Few men have ever been able to boast of a better record after the natural than Saul and well he was aware of it. Circumcised the eighth day, of the stock of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, an Hebrew of the Hebrews; as touching the law a Pharisee; concerning zeal, persecuting the church; touching the righteousness of the law, blameless. Phil. 3 5-6. He had been taught by the great teacher Gamaliel, and had risen above many who were his equals. His zeal for God and the law stopped at nothing less than a determined effort to stamp out Christianity at all cost and by any method. With this thought in mind he was on his way to Damascus to bind and chain the Christians and bring them to Jerusalem when Jesus Christ met him and revealed Himself to Him.
As he rode along the road to Damascus, his mind was filled with hate both against Christ and against Christians. His heart rejoiced at the thought of the persecution and slaughter he was about to bring upon them. Yet his heart was not all bad, for he was doing it ignorantly in unbelief and he thought he did God a service. Suddenly a light above the brightness of the sun shone upon him and he, falling to the earth, heard a voice speaking to him. "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me?" "Who art thou, Lord?" he asked, and the Lord replied, "I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest. It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks." And he trembling and astonished said, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" And He said, "Arise and go into the city and it shall be told thee what thou must do."

Years later when Paul was writing to the Galatians, he said, "When it pleased God, who separated me from my mother's womb, to reveal His Son in me, immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood." Flesh and blood and sermons of men can never do for anyone what Jesus can do. A whole volume could not rightly give account of the works and the glorious life of this man after Jesus revealed Himself to him. But Paul increased the more in strength and confounded the Jews, which dwelt at Damascus, proving that this is the very Christ. Acts 9:22. No life has meant more to the world than Paul's after he saw the Lord. He must have realized how much he owed to the revelation of Christ in his life when he said of Jesus, "He was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve, after that He was seen of above five hundred brethren at once... after that He was seen of James; then of all the apostles, and last of all He was seen of me also as one born out of due time. But by the grace of God I am what I am, and His grace which was bestowed upon me was not in vain; but I labored more abundantly than they all, and yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me." 1 Cor. 15:5-10.

The greatest need of Christians today is to meet with Jesus. One moment of such an open revelation of Him will bring about a transformation such as nothing else could bring. Whether the Lord appeared in the New Testament or the Old, the result was always the same. It brought complete transformation to the one who met Him. What a message is brought to our hearts by Job when he said, "I have heard of Thee with the hearing of the ear." Even this did indescribable good to his soul, for no man was more righteous than Job. But when the next phase of his experience came, he exclaimed in awe, "But now mine eye seeth Thee," and he was a completely transformed man. The glory of God's presence had made him look desperately unclean until now he cried in penitence, "Wherefore I do abhor myself and repent in dust and ashes."

Many times, no doubt, you get desperately restless because of the apparent inactivity that besets you. I certainly do, but in waiting on God He has spoken to my heart and made it crystal clear that until my mind is completely free from every last vestige of Babylon's harlotish system, I shall not see His blessed face. Nothing is more real to my spirit than the truth that by God's grace we must come out of her. There is no use in coming out of one phase in Babylon and then starting up the same old thing over again in another place with a little different setup, for that really only amounts to the birth of one more harlot in the same great mysterious system of Babylon. There is something deep within me that tells me that the kingdom of heaven is not going to be launched from the same old launching pad we have used for the past two thousand years. It is going to be as different from the systems of the existing church as the ministry of John the Baptist was different from the forms and ritualistic ceremonies of the Pharisees. People will think us fools and fanatics to hold to such notions, but this is the way it will be. I have no hesitation in saying that I do not believe in the church's frantic programs for the conversion of the heathen and of the world. It never has worked, it is not working now, and it never will work. What the church now does and what Jesus and the apostles did are not the same thing at all. They went in the power of God. Today they depend on organization and money. I do not believe that the church system is right in proclaiming that, if the heathen are not reached now, they will be lost forever. Such human teaching makes God's wisdom foolishness, His omnipotence, impotence, omniscience thoughtlessness, His love hate, His purpose aimlessness, and His glory shame. It makes the devil to be stronger than God, and makes an all-wise, almighty God depend on the impotence of men. The Bible contains marvelous promises for the heathen and when He is ready to reveal Himself to them, they will come. The church like the Pharisees compassed land and sea to make a proselyte and often they are worse than before.

If we really searched the scripture to find out what God is doing in this age, we would soon find out that we are not in the midst of some frantic scramble to drag as many unwilling victims as possible from an inferno that somehow got out of God's control, but rather we are in a perfectly ordered plan in which God is calling out a people and preparing out of them a people for the government of the kingdom and of the ages to come, and in the dispensation of the fullness of times - the dispensation following the kingdom - God's grace will be extended to every creature. Can any sensible man deny that this is what Paul taught in Eph. 1:9-11: "Having made known unto us the mystery of His will, according to His good pleasure which He hath purposed in Himself; that in the dispensation of the fullness of times, He might gather together in one all things in Christ both which are in heaven and which are in earth; even in Him. In whom we have obtained an inheritance, being predestinated according to the purpose of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will." That is minutely the plan of God. The churches' gruesome doctrines of rue and torment in a blazing hell for sinners who have never heard that God had a Son would seem to me to charge the blessed Lord with crimes more heartless and inconsistent than those of Adolph Eichmann.

The desperate crying need of the true Zion is to be completely delivered from the daughter of Babylon. Our true condition is perfectly described in the words of the prophet Zechariah. Zech. 2:7. "Deliver thyself, O Zion, that dwellest with the daughter of Babylon." The true church, the elect of God, has dwelt so long with Babylon that we imagine she is our true mother. Like ducklings hatched by a chicken we accept her as our mother though all our ways are contrary to her. Babylon has invaded the minds of people until they are at a loss to think without her. But the Lord has begun to purge away the filth of the daughter of Zion by the spirit of judgment and the spirit of burning. Isa. 4:3-6. It must be of this that Zechariah spoke when he said, "And He showed me Joshua the high priest standing before the angel of the Lord, and Satan was standing at his right hand to resist him. And the Lord said unto Satan, The Lord rebuke thee. Is not this a brand plucked out of the fire? Now Joshua was clothed with filthy garments and stood before the angel, and he answered and spoke unto those that stood before him, saying. Take away the filthy garments from him; and unto him he said, Behold, I have caused thine iniquity to pass from thee and I will clothe thee with a change of raiment." Zech. 3:1-4.

In connection with the above it is clearly seen that nothing will deliver us from the filth of Babylon like meeting the Lord face to face. Was that not Paul's experience when he met Christ? He took all his past goodness, all his ancient tradition, all his natural descent, all his righteousness after the law, and threw it on the dung pile and reckoned that everything that had been a gain to him in the past was now nothing but a loss. Phil. 3:4-9. It will be exactly the same with you and me. All this Babylonish tradition with all its commendable works, its righteousness, and its program will be found to be like salt that has lost its savor - fit only for the dung pile. This Joshua who stood before the Lord clothed in filthy garments is you and me dressed in the garments of Babylon (the great church system). But notice, please, that this Joshua met with the Angel of the Lord (which is Christ). He stood before Him and new garments were put on him. A fair miter was placed on Joshua's head (this is the mind of Christ), and he was commanded to walk in the ways of the Lord. This is the will of God. Ah, what a difference it makes to meet with Jesus. How soon the filth of the carnal mind begins to disappear with all its human ways of looking at things, and that glorious fair miter, the mind of Christ, begins to change our lives with their carnal outlook, causing us to walk in the will of God and become men to be wondered at. Verse 8. It makes us branches of the glorious vine, and bids us call every man our neighbor under the vine (Christ) and under the fig tree (God's chosen Israel). Please read verses 8-10.

There is never time nor space to consider these blessed truths as we should consider them. We will have to omit from our study many of the personal appearances of the Lord as recorded in the scripture and consider them in our closets of prayer before the Lord. The appearances of Christ to individuals and companies of individuals were so frequent throughout the New Testament that I would say we had every right to look for and long for that transforming experience ourselves. What a tragic loss there would have been to the story of the resurrection if Jesus had not appeared to a weeping woman who stood numb with grief, peering into an empty sepulcher for the body of her blessed Lord. Hearing footsteps behind her, she turned and saw Jesus standing, and knew Him not. "Why weepest thou?" He asked. "Whom seekest thou?" And she, supposing Him to have been the gardener, answered amid her sobs, "Sir, if thou hast borne Him hence, tell me where thou hast laid Him and I will take Him away." Jesus said unto her, "Mary!!" It was the voice she knew and loved so well. There was no mistaking it. That was the voice, which had commanded seven devils to leave her body. She had heard that voice call men from out the tomb and still angry storms by a word. Yes, she knew it well. "Rabboni!!" she exclaimed with enraptured awe, and fell at His feet. But He bade her not to touch Him, saying, "Go to my brethren and tell them I ascend unto My Father and your Father and to My God and your God." John 20:11-18.

"I am the resurrection!" Angels smiled
That day in spring they rolled the stone away
While humans wept. They could not yet believe
That conquered death could never hold its prey,
But in that grave life stepped from out a shroud.
Life fears no shrouds nor death's vales dark and wild:
The everlasting arms are lifting Him As tenderly as mother lifts her child.

C. S. Price.

What assurance would have been lacking had He not appeared personally to the disciples as with locked doors they sat huddled in fear of the Jews, mourning and weeping over what seemed to be the greatest loss the world had ever sustained. But see how hope banishes fear as light banishes darkness when He stood in their midst, saying, "Peace be unto you," and showing them His hands and His side. Perhaps one of the greatest understatements of all time is contained in the words, "Then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord." John 20:19-23.

What a change took place in Thomas as he cried, "My Lord and my God!" at the appearing of Christ, and in Peter as he girt his fisher's cloak about him and cast himself into the sea to hurry to Him! John 21:2-4. What indescribable joy must have filled the two Marys as Jesus met them saying, "All Hail," and they held Him by the feet and worshipped Him! Matt. 28:8,9. See also Acts 1:3-11 and Cor. 15:7. If Jesus had not appeared personally to Paul, do you think we would have the undying truth today that we read in all his epistles? Had He not appeared to John on the Isle of Patmos, would we have had the glorious truth of the Revelation? Would John himself have known that fellowship with the Father and with His Son Jesus Christ, which he wrote about afterward in his epistle, saying, "That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you that ye may have fellowship with us; and truly our fellowship is with the Father and with His Son Jesus Christ." 1 John 1:3-4.

I may be wrong in what I am going to say, but I think there is excellent reason to believe that every writer of the New Testament had met Christ personally and individually. I am not referring merely to His life on earth, but I mean that at some time after the resurrection Jesus had appeared to them and, because He had thus appeared, their lives had been so changed, their minds so transformed that they simply were not the same men and women they were before He met them. God forbid that I should seem mysterious in my talk, but there must come a day when His promises will find their fulfillment. It is not a catching away into the sky that we need. It is a revelation of Jesus Christ to our individual hearts. Then will our eyes and our understandings be opened and our innermost beings transformed. We need that which will make Christ to be far more than a historical character. We need to meet Him and see Him as the Son of the living God.

The glorious appearing of Christ is called That Blessed Hope. Let other men spend their time in arguing the how, why, when, and wherefore but let it be that you and I, who realize that the world's greatest need is men who have met with Jesus, have heard His voice, have seen His face, and have felt His transforming power, begin our earnest watching that we may be found ready and waiting when He appears. Christ will appear to those who look for Him. He is coming for those who are watching. What I say unto one I say unto all. Watch!! He will not intrude into the picture show to reveal Himself to you. He will not even interrupt our T.V. or earthly amusement. Neither will He interfere with those who are engrossed in worldly plans. If we are going to see Him when He comes, we are going to need to be watching and listening for Him.

How well I remember my old boyhood home out on the boundless Canadian prairies. Our farmstead was twelve miles from the nearest town and in the pioneer days our only means of travel was by team and wagon. I do not think there is any place on earth that can be so completely silent as the vast prairies at night time. Their wonderful solitude causes one to stand in His presence. One of the most wonderful experiences of my life has been to stand alone in that immense vastness and listen intently to try to catch some faint sound of movement or life of some kind. With not even a breath of air moving there was no sound at all, and whenever there was a sound it could be heard for miles. How often, when father or brothers had gone away to the village in the morning and were returning late at night, we would stand outdoors and listen for the sound of wagon wheels in the distance. Returning at intervals, we would listen again and again until at last we could hear the sound we were waiting for. Then we would light the dim old kerosene lantern and be waiting on the doorstep to welcome them home. I shall never forget those good and wonderful days. But tonight I am not listening and waiting for the sound of a wagon rumbling over the plains. I am standing at the door waiting, looking, longing for Jesus to come; and He is sending His message before Him, "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh."

There is a great and damning fault among Christians that seems to be past explanation. It is a fault that has developed and grown more grotesque as the years have come and gone. Men and women have come to desire and covet spiritual things, not for the glory of God and the honor of His eternal purpose, but that they themselves might become great men in the earth. Many a man has spent long periods in fasting that he might attain a great spiritual gift, yet all the time he is supposedly seeking the gift, his talk shows that his mind is full of hope that he will become a great and powerful minister to whom people will look with awe and pride. This is wrong seeking and a very great evil. Many a man has sought after the gift of healing - not because he was burdened for the sick, but because the gift would bring him honor among the people. He expected it would bring him crowds and fame and money. Oh, let men search their hearts before they ask of God lest they ask amiss to consume it upon their own lusts. James 4:3. The result of such asking is spiritual death. It is of the carnal mind and hateful in God's sight. The carnal mind is always desirous of spiritual gifts. It likes to appear honored of God and accepted. That is why there are so many false prophets, false teachers, false healers, and false miracle workers in the world. Men who love people to think they are the great power of God will, for all their apparent wonders, hear God tell them on that day, "I never knew you." We have an example of this kind of man in Acts 8:9-10: "But there was a certain man called Simon, which beforetime used sorceries and bewitched the people of Samaria, giving out that himself was some great one, to whom the people gave heed from the least to the greatest, saying, This man is the great power of God." There are such men in our day who have similarly bewitched the people. They clamor for spectacular gifts that they might have a spectacular following. This is not the way a man should seek a gift.

I greatly fear that many people will desire to see the face of Christ in the same inquisitive manner - not because they love Him or long to be like Him, but only to see what God would look like. Their interest is more on the level of a crowd rushing to see the President or the Queen or of nosey little children crowding around to catch a glimpse of the victim of a tragic accident. In Exodus 19:12,21 we have a perfect example of this very thing. At the time of the law God commanded Moses in these words: "Thou shall set bounds unto the people round about saying, Take heed unto yourselves that ye go not into the mount or touch the border of it: - and the Lord said unto Moses, Go down; charge the people lest they break through unto the Lord to gaze, and many of them perish." Imagine that! Lest they break through to gaze! It was only their curiosity they wanted to satisfy. They were inquisitive, prying, peeping Toms. Their only interest in God was to gape and stare.

I am not exaggerating when I say that the average Christian has a similar attitude toward God and miracles. It is better not to approach to God at all than to approach with the attitude of a sight-seer.

David said, "My soul waiteth for the Lord more than they that watch for the morning: I say more than they that watch for the morning." Psa. 130:6. This is the desire men should have when they seek the face of Christ. Men and women who with burning love and desire stand weeping for His presence will see Him when He comes and be found ready and waiting to be changed by the glory of His presence into that same image. Their longing prayer shall be, "Tell me, O Thou whom my soul loveth, where Thou fedest, where Thou makest They flocks to rest at noon." Songs 1:7. "By might on my bed I sought Him whom my soul loveth, but I found Him not. I will arise now, and go about the city in the streets, and in the broad ways I will seek Him whom my soul loveth: I sought Him, but found Him not. The watchmen that went about the city found me; To whom I said, Saw ye Him whom my soul loveth? It was but a little that I passed from them, but I found Him whom my soul loveth." Songs 3:1-5.

"Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth and hath long patience for it until he receive the early and latter rain. Be ye also patient.
Stablish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." James 5:7-8. "We know that when He shall appear we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth Himself even as He is pure.” 1 John 3:2-3. And they shall see His face and His name shall be in their foreheads. He which testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly. Amen. Even so come, Lord Jesus.

LOOK TO YOURSELVES

In the life of each one of God's people there should frequently come a time of soul searching and stock taking. It is not enough to hold beliefs about sonship and the kingdom of God and all such blessed truths, for there are many who cry, "Lord, Lord," who are unfit for the kingdom of God. There are, I fear, almost endless thousands who prophesy and do wonderful works who are not known to God at all. The fact that a man may pray for the sick and see some healed does not mean that he is a manifested son of God; neither does it mean that he has any special standing with God at all. We were warned long ago by the apostles and by the Lord Himself that the church system would have its store of those who would bewitch the people with miracles. In my opinion it is high time that God's people opened their minds to the indisputable fact that both the Antichrist and all his ilk will be such masters of deception that they will completely deceive their own selves and, if it were possible, even the very elect also, for Paul forewarned God's people of his whom coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish, because they received not the love of the truth that they might be saved. 2 Thess. 2:9-10. It is of terrifying significance that the apostle follows this statement with this warning: "For this cause God shall send them strong delusion that they should believe a lie, that they all might be condemned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness." Verses 11-12. To whom did the Spirit of God give such dreadful warning but to those who "received not the love of the truth", verse 10, or in plainer words, to those who did not love the truth?

As the years have passed by, experience has taught me that it is absolutely necessary for every Christian to spend time by himself alone with God, away from the assembling of the multitude, away from the voice of preachers, away from the opinions of people, away from books, away from programs, and away from teaching, that he might come unto the backside of the desert where no one can speak but God, where the Holy Spirit can point out the inconsistencies of his life. I do not speak of the inconsistencies of others, but of the inconsistencies of his own life.

One dreadful indictment against God's people in our day is that they have become "yes men" and head nodders, going along with silly programs of silly people who are great organizers and builders but who speak and act from the fertility of their own minds rather than from acquaintance with the eternal purposes of the Most High. The apostle Paul likened himself to a trained boxer who made every blow count. "I therefore so run," he said, "not as uncertainly. So fight I, not as one that beateth the air." 1 Cor. 9:26. Too much of our running today is with uncertainty. Every man is running, running, and doing, doing, but few know where the goal is. Everybody is fighting and doing battle, but for the most part they are beating the air. Let us assure our hearts of this one cardinal and fundamental truth: "Every plant which My heavenly Father hath not planted will be rooted up." Matt. 15:13. And we might further add that every race that is run with uncertainty, together with all the fighting that is merely beating the air, will be of profit to no one and will receive condemnation rather than reward. Too many of God's people are like the two drunk men who rowed all night to get to the other side of the lake only to find in the morning, when they were sober, that they were still anchored to the wharf. Whether we appreciate the allusion or not, the solemn truth remains that many great works are being done through the ingenuity of men rather than the direction of the Holy Spirit, and we labor in vain.

We cannot declare too emphatically that the most important thing in the life of any child of God is to know God's will, and you will not know God's will until you have delivered yourself from the confused voices of the multitude around you. You will not discover God's will by enquiring of people that your heart may be assured by their opinions. They simply do not know the will of God for you. You cannot order your life by a prophecy or supposed prophecy that was given concerning you. Far too many people are saying, "Thus saith the Lord," when the Lord has not spoken. I sometimes receive letters that are full of prophecy concerning myself. Occasionally one will witness to my spirit and be a comfort to me, but I never allow my life to be directed by them, for we must first prove all things and holdfast to that which is good. Paul taught that we should not despise prophesyings but that we should prove them and judge for ourselves whether or not to be influenced by them. This he practiced in his own life when the prophets said that he should not go up to Jerusalem. Acts 21:4-13. Though by obeying them he might have spared himself much suffering, he also knew for himself what the mind of the Lord was for him, for God had taught him by the Spirit that bonds and afflictions were his lot no matter where he would be.

A burning love for God is the first and foremost essential in knowing God's will. It is she who with love and devotion takes time to bathe the feet of the Lord with her tears and anoint them with the precious ointment of consecration who discovers the blessedness of walking in the will of God rather than she who is constantly cumbered with much serving. The woman who washed His feet with tears and dried them with the hair of her head was too obsessed with her devotion to God to trouble about the dissenting of scribes and Pharisees or to be concerned with that greedy covetous one who would sell the ointment with feigned generosity toward the poor rather than lavish it upon the head of the Eternal One. It is when we pour out our love at the feet of Christ, talking little and listening much that we come to the knowledge of His will.

If I may now testify from lifelong experience, I will tell you a wonderful secret concerning God's will. In all my life I have never known God to divulge the fullness of His mind and will at any one time about any one thing. But I have discovered that, as I walked with Him, loving Him and desiring to be directed by Him, He has led me one step at a time, one day at a time, revealing one thing at a time. Among the many closed doors in the wall He would open one and bid me enter. He has led me by misfortune, by enemies, by storms, by traitors, by false brethren, by flat tires, by inspiration, by open doors and closed doors, and by simply doing the thing at hand that needed to be done. God has not directed my life by great bursts of heavenly revelation but by circumstances that were often most mystifying at the time. When those who were my enemies rose up against me, blocking my path and plotting my ruin, I found this to be God's certain way of changing my direction and ushering my life forth on a course of blessing I had not dreamed of nor planned. The surest leading Joseph ever had in his whole life was when his wicked brothers plotted his ruin and sold him into Egypt as a slave. In later years he knew it was God, not his brothers, who had sent him to Egypt. What better thing could have happened to Moses than the disaster of having to flee to the backside of the desert? Even the wrathful act from which he fled was the hidden but guiding hand of God. The shipwreck of Paul on the Island of Melita was just as much the leading of the Lord as was the vision in which a man prayed him saying, "Come over into Macedonia and help us," for through his shipwreck many heathen were saved and a church was established on the Island of Melita.

Never give yourself to the spectacular at any time and least of all where the direction of the Lord is concerned. Learn that calamity and difficulty are all part of your training just as are success and prosperity. Whom the Lord loveth He correcteth, and scourgeth every son whom He receiveth, for all things are working together for good to them that love the Lord and to them who are the called according to His purpose. "For I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." Rom. 8:38-39.

The hour in which we now live is a time fraught with much danger for every child of God, and, though I am loath to declare it, it is undoubtedly true that those who most desire to attain the greater promises of God are the ones who are the most beset with every peril of the way, for they like lonely pioneers are pressing into the unknown, and, unless they keep their eyes fixed on God and on Him alone, they will travel many a side road or find themselves going in circles even as they forever do in that wilderness whence we came out.

Though we may be alert for danger from without, the greatest danger always lies within ourselves. In these last days above all others men have become filled with self-confidence and puffed up with a sense of their own ability. There is nothing more dangerous than this. Both our ability and our wisdom are but foolishness in the sight of God, and should we consciously or unconsciously set our hearts upon them, we find ourselves leaning on our own resources, devoid of the Spirit of God and abandoned to our own devices. Now when a man begins to lean on his own devices and depend upon his own ability, his works are no longer known of the Lord and he has come to the place where the Lord must say of him, "I know you not." How well did Paul learn that we should never trust ourselves when he said, "We had the sentence of death in ourselves that we should not trust in ourselves, but in God who raiseth the dead: Who delivered us from so great a death, and doth deliver: in whom we trust that He will yet deliver us.” 2 Cor. 1:9-10. Our safety is secure when we pass the death sentence on self and trust in God who raises the dead.

These are perilous times because men have become lovers of themselves rather than lovers of God. Indeed, many Christians and a multitude of preachers use God and His work for a pretence and a false front behind which they may hide, but take the mask away and you will see self sitting on the throne, covetous self, soliciting money for the work of God when in reality it is self that wants it; deceptive self, proclaiming the building up of the kingdom of God when in reality he is building up his own kingdom; false self, proclaiming the mighty works of God when in reality it is naught but the sleight of men (hand) and the cunning craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive. How thoroughly did Paul foresee the end of the age when he wrote to Timothy? “This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high, minded lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God, having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; from such turn away.” 2 Tim. 3:1-5. These are not conditions existing in the world alone. These are conditions that run rampant throughout the entire church system, which is no longer the true church, but Mystery Babylon.

These are perilous times because so many of God's people do not understand the message of the hour, a message peculiar to us now, designed of God for this hour and none other. Day after day I am confronted by the indisputable fact that God's people do not understand the message of Babylon. There are, indeed, a few who do understand, but for the most part there is little understanding in them, for many have become like men possessed of evil habits who, though they see their wrong and try to reform, yet again and again fall back into the same pit whence they were digged. If God reveals to you the confusion, disorder, and abomination of the professing church with its multiplied systems of religion, whose God is not the Lord, but the system and the program, so that you come out from among them and deliver yourself from them, what have you gained by your deliverance from denominationalism if you immediately join yourself to some other system that dares to call itself undenominational? Do you not know that its purposes are just the same as the purposes of the larger group? God does not call men out of one Babylon into another, but He is calling you out of Babylon unto Himself.

Christians today are forever chorusing the words, "We need each other", but they seem to have forgotten that there is One they need ten thousand fold more than they need each other, and that is they need God. The words of Jesus to the church at Ephesus were, "I have somewhat against thee because thou hast left thy first love." Rev. 2:4. These solemn words are as true in this last hour as they were when spoken to the church at Ephesus long ago. Our Lord did not tell them that they had lost their first love, but that they had left their first love. The first love that any Christian has is for his matchless Lord and Redeemer. Christ is all and in all to him. Christ is all that matters. The rich, the poor, the destitute, the sick, and the dying are content to rest in His marvellous love and in the strength of His everlasting arms. The new-born Christian rejoices in the love of God and in the eternal hope of being with Him forever.

In our first love we were not concerned about doctrines and denominations. The dogmas and theories of men were forgotten in the joy of our new found love. We were unaware that all about us rages a brutal and merciless struggle in which men who long ago had left their first love now compassed land and sea to make proselytes for their own petty cause. In our first love we did not know that preachers and people who had once basked in the sunlight of God's love were now engaged in titanic struggles against each other, as though the pet dogma they preached was important. But it is not important. There is nothing in heaven or earth as important as loving God. If any man thinketh he knoweth aught, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know, but if any man love God, the same is known of Him. To love God is better than sacrifice. To love God is better than any offering. To love God is better than doctrine. To love God is far beyond the sickly thing that men today insist on calling fellowship. We were not saved and rejoicing in Jesus Christ, our first love, for long before the wicked harlot system began to entice us away from our devotion to God, holding before us a set of doctrines and a set of rules, preaching that this doctrine was right and that doctrine was wrong until we began to find ourselves engaged in vain and fruitless j anglings with men who had once loved God above all else, vainly proclaiming ourselves victors on the field of controversy, and all this in the name of God and in the defense of Him who needs no defense from anyone.

How often our hearts have rejoiced as we have seen sinners saved at a common altar! With tears streaming down their faces they rejoiced in their new, found love of God and, clasping each other in the embrace of brothers, they gave glory to Him whose blood had made them one. But how our hearts have been sickened when during the next week or two foolish and unscrupulous men were teaching these happy converts something else besides loving Christ. While one was being taught to be baptized in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, the other was being taught to be baptized in the name of Jesus. While one was learning that God is a trinity, the other was learning that there is no God except Jesus, and while one was learning the doctrine of Calvin, the other was learning the doctrine of the Armenians, so that, when they next met, instead of embracing as brothers in Christ, they drew their swords, sharpened keen by the stone of human reason, to pierce each other through the heart and remain spiritual enemies as long as life should last. They had left their first love and embraced a second love that would keep them at war and be a wall of partition between them as long as they would both live.

No, my friend! If you have recently heard the voice of God calling you out of the disorder and confusion of Babylon, there is something you need infinitely more than fellowship with man. You need to return to your first love and learn to have fellowship with God. You need a sort of spiritual honeymoon when you can leave houses and lands, mothers and fathers, sisters and brothers that you may be alone with your Lord and become acquainted with Him. The reason you are so anxious to get to meeting is because they have through years of habit become uppermost in your mind. Apart from them you cannot conceive of God; neither can you conceive of finding God apart from them. You have become like the woman of Samaria who, in spite of her lack of spiritual life, was full of argument and ready to start a debate with the Lord Himself when she said, "Our fathers worshipped in this mountain, but you say that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship." You see how she associated God and worship with places and things? And that is the confused spirit of Babylon from start to finish. People who have walked in its deceptive ways cannot conceive of finding God or worshipping Him anywhere except in a building and among a crowd. They have never learned that the heart of the multitude is usually far from God. Our Lord Jesus Christ would have no part with her argument, but told her the truth that I, too, would tell you now. "Woman," he said, "believe Me, the hour is coming, and now is, when neither in this mountain nor in Jerusalem shall men worship the Father, but the true worshippers shall worship in spirit and in truth, for the Father seeketh such to worship Him." Cf. John 4:21-23.

What does that immortal saying mean to you as a worshipper of God? Worship in spirit and in truth cannot be found in the rituals and ceremonies of Babylon, but in the adoring contemplation of a heart rejoicing in the love of God. The system we call the church and which I call Babylon is becoming more confused by the hour as she seeks in her confusion and frustration to make herself pleasing to all men. I have on my desk a clipping from the newspaper, dated Jan. 6, 1967, with the heading, "Atheism under study." Quote: "Vatican City: The Vatican secretary for non-believers will establish a center for the study of Atheism in Rome in co-operation with the eternal city's religious colleges and seminaries, it was announced Thursday." End of quote. Is it any wonder that the glory of God has departed from this system of confusion? Is it any wonder that, having departed, the Lord is now calling His faithful people to depart also? And have they so little understanding that, having departed, they will again wander back into some religious shed that is in reality the same thing in different attire? Let us come out and let us come out unto God, returning once and for all to our first love.

The word of God has warned us that strong delusion would be rampant in the earth in the last days and that it would be the result of men's having no love for the truth. Truth in the final analysis is the Lord Himself, for He said, "I am the way, the truth, and the life." Delusion stalks like an evil specter in the world, in the church system, in the courts, in the government, in society, in universities and schools, and in any place you look. That which is evil is accepted as good and that which is good is rejected as evil. Darkness is heralded as light and light is shunned as darkness. The bitter things are devoured as sweet, the sweet things are despised as bitter. The things that God in His wisdom had declared to be immoral man now exalts as the new morality. Paul taught us to be aware of the oppositions of science, falsely so called, yet this same science, which is forever changing its theories, is exalted as truth while the word of God is relegated to the realm of myths and fables. Does it not appear that even the laws of the land are weighted in favor of the criminal rather than the innocent, the burglar instead of the burglarized?
The delusion that is in the world is also rampant in the religious systems of the day. The fact actually is that delusion has its beginning in religion rather than in the world, for delusion begins when God's people leave their first love and begin to build around themselves. Love for power creeps into the hearts of the ministering class unawares. They begin to leave the simplicity of the gospel and the exaltation of Jesus Christ. They make things complicated with program and doctrine so that the hearts of men are centered on them instead of on the Lord Himself. Instead of teaching the eternal purposes of an almighty and immutable God that can neither be frustrated nor annulled, they make God out to be the victim of evil circumstances brought about by that arch fiend, the devil. The people are indoctrinated to believe that, unless they throw all their weight of influence, labor, and finance behind the preacher's man-made scheme, God will certainly come off the loser and the devil the victor. Thus the hearts and minds of men are turned from the simplicity of Christ to the complications of men.

The more the government of man comes in, the more the government of God is crowded out, until the gifts of God wane and the ingenuity and cleverness of man takes their place. The more men are educated and learned in the various arts of public ministry, the less they depend upon the Spirit of God until the prophet no longer speaks by the Lord but from the storehouse of his books and carnal understandings. Thus the appeal ceases to be made to the spirit of man, which is one essence with the Spirit of God, and is made to the intellect of the natural mind, which is an enemy of God. For the natural mind is an enemy of God. It is not subject to the law of God, nor can it possibly be.

Once this appeal is made to the natural mind, the church is no longer the home of the meek and lowly followers of Christ, but the abode of those who say, "I am rich and increased in goods, and have need of nothing." But they do not know that in spiritual things they are wretched and miserable, poor and blind and naked. Thus it comes to pass that the church, which once shone with the glory of the sun of righteousness, now stripped of her glory, sits in the miserable rags of her prostitution. The purity and holiness, the righteousness and truth that made her the light of the whole earth have been snuffed out and she has become smoke in the nostrils of all mankind, parading her selfishness, pride, intolerance, and worldliness.

It is so easy for the self life to begin to work in God's people. The danger is ever present of beginning in the Spirit and ending in the flesh. The more machinery and program we gather about us the more danger there is of drifting into the use of manpower instead of walking in the Spirit and working by the inspiration and power of the Holy Ghost. We add program to program and machinery to machinery, not by the leading of the Lord, but by our own initiative. Then, when we find there is no spiritual power to drive our machinery, we resort, as Samson did, to the arm of flesh, which can prove itself so simple and so refined that we deceive ourselves into believing that the flesh we use is in truth the Spirit of God. This is a most dangerous thing. The great danger of these human programs is this: Once they are begun, necessity demands that they must be kept going.
Otherwise there will be much loss. More often than not many people have been involved financially and, should the program halt, there would be financial loss. Therefore necessity demands that it must be kept going at all costs. As the Spirit of the Lord withdraws from it, the ingenuity and cleverness of man takes over more and more until all that is left is a great organized effort, a big noise, a sensational work with the outward appearance of a work of God, yet motivated by the power of man and self.

My heart greatly fears such involvement, for personal experience has taught me the grief of being saddled with things in which God has no interest. Even now it is a grief to my spirit to see men, who but a few years ago were rejoicing in their freedom from the confusion of Babylon, now greatly encumbered with their own program and the machinery to run it, as link by link they fashion a chain of bondage that will bind them like slaves to a work from which God has departed, and which must be henceforth carried on by their own steam.

Let us therefore lay aside every weight and the sin, which doth so easily beset us and let us run with patience the race that is set before us. There are many things, which, though they are not sins, are weights that hinder us in the race that is set before us.

Men who carry weights in races may be counted to be losers before they ever start, for men who run in races strip themselves that they might obtain a corruptible crown, but we run that we might attain an incorruptible crown. Let us therefore run that we may attain. If we are to attain the spiritual heights to which God has called us, there must first be a clean break with the world and the flesh and the devil and all his works. The importance of this cannot be over-estimated. There must be only one love in your life and that love must be centered in the realm beyond the veil of the flesh where God dwells in all His purity and holiness. Set your affections on things above and not on things on the earth, for you have died, and your life is hid with Christ in God. Then, when He shall appear, you also will appear with Him in glory.

There must be no mingling of seed, no mixing of good and evil. Fellowship with infidels of whatsoever sort they be must be as out of bounds as fellowship with Belial. You have no doubt noticed how in the Old Testament types God instructed that they were not to plow with an ox and an ass in the same yoke, for the ox is a clean animal while the ass is unclean. They were not to mix wool with linen, and they were not to mingle the seed of the field. All these things were done to demonstrate to us that God's people are not to be a people of mixtures, mangling the clean with the unclean, the things that are of the earth with the things that are from above, the flesh and the Spirit, the corruptible and the incorruptible. We are to be God's people even as Paul taught us;
"Come ye out from among them and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing." And again, "Be ye not unequally yoked together with believers." Yet again, "What fellowship hath Christ with Belial, or what communion hath he that believeth with an infidel?" If God has taught us that we must not sit with the drunkards in the tavern or visit the houses of harlots, then what business could we possibly have is such places of shame? And if God has taught us that the existing church system is Babylon and confusion, then what business have we frequenting those places, since God has commanded us, saying, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her sins"

The very spirit of the age in which we now live is to mix everything and everybody together so that all appear to come out of one mold. It is the working of the spirit of Babylon, which never can be anything but confusion.
Man is doing his best to mingle the seed of God with the seed of Satan. He is endeavoring to mingle the church with the world and religion with politics. Nothing would be more pleasing to the spirit of this evil age than to be able to say, "There is no difference between the children of the world and the children of God".
Indeed, a Lutheran minister recently declared, "There is no difference between the church and the world. They are two parts of the same thing." How different is this teaching from the words of the Bible, which says, "Ye are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." Again, "If My kingdom were of this world, then would My servants fight." And again, "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them."
And yet again, "All that is in the world is the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life. These are not of the Father, but of the world, and the world passeth away and the lusts thereof, but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever."

There were many who came to Jesus for instruction while He dwelt on earth, but there were three in particular who came, each with a different need of heart, and each in turn received his needed exhortation; and the exhortation they receive should be given much consideration by us all.

First, there was the scribe who said, "Master, I will follow Thee whithersoever Thou goest," to whom Jesus replied, "The foxes have holes and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of man hath not where to lay His head." Matt. 8:19-20. One should never come to Christ saying, "I will follow Thee," without having first counted the cost, for the cost will be revealed in many unexpected ways and perhaps in many unpleasant ways as well.
Those who follow God will never be the darlings of the world, and neither will they be the darlings of the church; and, if you ever become either the darling of the world or the darling of the church, then you are not truly following God. Make no mistake about that. The men who today are almost worshipped by their followers are not following God. They are displacing God. Whenever you find people who are all taken up and absorbed with a man, referring to him and speaking of him continually, exalting him as some great one, then beware, for that man has succeeded in exalting himself more than he has exalted the Lord. True men of God have never been exalted by their contemporaries, but have endured the tribulation of which Stephen spoke when he said, "Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted? And they have slain them which shewed before of the coming of the Just One: of whom ye have been now the betrayers and murderers." Act. 7:52.

It is easy to sing, "I'll go with Him through the garden," without being mindful that the garden through which He passed was not a garden of roses, of singing birds and budding fruits, but lonely, dreadful Gethsemane, the one and only pathway in this present world that leads to the center of God's will. It is easy to sing with the multitude, "A tent or a cottage, why should I care," while you are living in the lap of luxury, but that song may have a melancholy tune in that day you find yourself in a hut where your best furniture is an apple box and your mattress a pallet of straw. It is easy to vow, "Lord, I will follow Thee whithersoever Thou goest," without considering that, though foxes have holes and little birds have nests, the Son of man, whom you would follow, hath nowhere to rest His head.

Then to another man Jesus said, "Follow Me." He replied, "Let me first go and bury my father" Jesus said, "Let the dead bury their dead, but go thou and preach the kingdom of God." To another who said, "Let me first go bid them farewell which are at my house," He said, "No man, having put his hand to the plow and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God." Luke 9:59-61.

Centuries ago three heart-broken widows, Naomi, Orpah, and Ruth, stood on a dusty road in the ancient land of Moab. Naomi was returning to the land of Judah and her two daughters-in-law had decided to go with her. But as they walked, Naomi with weeping said unto her two daughters-in-law, "Go, return each to her mother's house; the Lord deal kindly with you, as ye have dealt with the dead, and with me. The Lord grant you that ye may find rest, each of you in the house of her husband. Then she kissed them; and they lifted up their voice and wept. And they said unto her, Surely we will return with thee unto thy people. And Naomi said, Turn again, my daughters; why will ye go with me? Are there yet any more sons in my womb, that they may be your husbands? Turn again, my daughters, go your way; for I am too old to have an husband. If I should say, I have hope, if I should have an husband also to night, and should also bear sons; would ye tarry for them till they were grown? Would ye stay for them from having husbands? Nay, my daughters; for it grieveth me much for your sakes that the hand of the Lord has gone out against me. And they lifted up their voice, and wept again; and Orpah kissed her mother-in-law; but Ruth clave unto her. And she said, Behold, thy sister-in-law is gone back unto her people and unto her gods; return thou after thy sister-in-law. And Ruth said, Entreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee: for whither thou goest, I will go, and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God; Where thou diest, I will die, and there will I be buried. The Lord do so to me, and more also, if ought but death part thee and me." Ruth 1:8-17.

We shall not try to explain the truths of a story that need so little explanation, but here we have two young women counting the cost, and, after counting the cost, one decides to go back to her own country. The other decides to leave everything that was ever dear to follow God into a land wherein she would be a stranger. If such decisions are firmly made in God, they pay dividends in the end such as eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither hath entered the heart of man. You have probably noticed, I am sure, that among the four women mentioned as progenitors of our Lord is the name of Ruth the Moabitess. Matt. 1:5.

"Let the dead bury their dead that may be a saying not easily understood in our day, but it simply means that there are plenty of unregenerate people living in the world to take care of the dead things that belong to this present age without our needing to distract our attention from the Lord to attend to them. We should be too intent upon the prize that is set before us to waste our time looking back to see how well we have done. I don't think the Lord is very interested about what kind of furrow we plowed away back there, nor in how many times we have fallen and risen again. He is concerned that we keep our eyes forever forward, leaving the past in God's hands. Therefore "let thine eyes look right on and let thine eyelids look straight before thee." Prov. 4:25.

Then there was the rich young ruler whose love Jesus tested by saying, "If thou wilt be perfect, sell that thou hast and give to the poor, and come, take up thy cross and follow Me." And he went away sorrowful, for he had great possessions. Jesus, seeing him go sadly away, said to those about Him, "A rich man shall hardly enter into the kingdom of heaven, and again I say unto you, It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God." Matt 19:23-24. God has no objection to a man's having great riches, but whether he loves his riches more than he loves God is manifest by what he does with them, and he may rest assured that before his life is over God will prove to His own satisfaction whether of the twain he loves the most, his riches or the kingdom of God. It has been proven long ago that it is not rich men who freely give of their abundance into the treasury of the Lord, but the poor, who of their penury cast in their all. "He gives not best who gives the most; but he gives most who gives the best. If I cannot give bountifully, yet will I give freely, and what I want in my hand I will supply by my heart." (Warwick)

We are without doubt living in the closing hours of this dispensation.
The sun is setting now and bands of light,
Like rosy fingers, steal across the skies.
Down in the sheltered vale the deep'ning night
Like a dark mantle o'er the tired earth lies.

Deep shadows creep along the country lanes,
And birds are winging homeward to their nests.
Bright little lights wink out from window panes
And bid the weary toiler home to rest.

The hour has come for God's sons to be gathered unto their Father. We must now learn what the true church is. The true church consists of those blessed ones who have heard His voice and followed Him. They are not members of the professing church with all its warings and strife nor are they members of any faction of it, but they have heard God's voice saying, "I have called them. Behold, thou art Mine. Because thou hast loved Me, I have loved thee and put My Spirit within thee. Thou art members of My body, of My flesh, and of My bones. Thou art my sons and members in particular of the Christ company, for through the love of God your Father and the grace of Jesus Christ, God's Son, thou hast become members of a vast family of sons, members in particular of that one body of sons, of which body Jesus Christ is the eternal head and elder brother.

"It is through Him and through the shedding of His blood that thou hast thy redemption; therefore thou art His and His alone. Thou art a thing apart from all people but His people, chosen in Him before the foundation of the ages. Thou dost not belong to the world or to any of the systems of it. Thou hast no part in the ten thousand voices of Babylon, for I have called thee from among her citizens to be a peculiar treasure unto Me.

"I will now breathe upon thee and thy flesh shall wither, even as the flesh of Jacob withered in the presence of the angel of the Lord. Gen. 32:25. And thou shalt rise to walk in newness of life that all men may know that thou art My sons, a peculiar treasure unto Me. The fuller's soap shall be applied, even the power of the blood of Christ and of the Holy Spirit, until all thy spots and wrinkles shall disappear, and thou shalt be clean, even whiter than snow. For as Christ is spotless, so shalt thou be spotless to be presented holy in His presence with neither spot nor blemish upon thee.

"Furthermore, in this final hour thou shalt be refined as gold and silver are refined that all dross may be taken from thee. Think it not strange, therefore, concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you, for this is the refining and the perfection of the soul. Rejoice and be exceeding glad, taking joyfully the spoiling of all earthly goods that heavenly good may abound and be thine eternal riches. Thy gold shall be like unto transparent glass where neither evil nor dross can hide, but only the purity of God's eternal light. Thou shalt be both pliable and yielding unto Me. Give no more your hearts to this world nor to any of the things which are in it, for the riches of the world serve only to turn the heart away from God whom thou shalt love with a love above all loves, a love compared to which all other loves are but hate, for only in loving the Lord thy Father with all thine heart, with all thy soul, and with all thy mind canst thou reach that maturity of loving thy neighbor as thyself. Then will I anoint the Christ within thee with the holy anointing oil of My Spirit, and thy perfume shall flow among all the nations of the earth in a blessed reign of righteousness that shall fill the earth with the knowledge of the Lord as the waters fill the seas."

God in this hour is doing a great thing in the earth, making the ears of all who hear to tingle. Silently as the daybreak comes back when night is done and the crimson streak on ocean's cheek grows into the great sun, so without noise or fanfare He is laying His hand upon His chosen ones, ordained in Him before the foundation of the ages. He is bringing them first into unity with His own Spirit, making them one with Him, for God does certainly know that only in unity with His Spirit can the unity of the brethren be found. This is His church and the redemption of a groaning creation.

THE TIME OF THE INTERIM

Seven men stood talking together. They were Simon Peter, Thomas, Nathaniel, James and John, and two other disciples of the Lord. John 21:2. Their reason for being together is very evident. Not only were they friends of long standing, but they were all disciples of the Lord. The earth-shaking events of the past days had knit their lives into closer union, as tragedies always tend to do. The topic of their conversation is not difficult to guess, nor is it difficult to imagine the consternation that now filled them with uncertainty and dread. What man does not feel a measure of uncertainty when he faces the unknown, knowing that no other has walked this way before?

These men had seen things that no man before them had ever seen. Their ears had caught the sweet sound of a message so transcendingly glorious that even the soldiers exclaimed, "No man ever spake like this man!" He told them of the glory of an age to come, an age in which they with Him would sit upon twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of the children of Israel. He had spoken of a kingdom wherein all was blessedness, all was right, and all was righteous. They had been with Him on the mountain of beatitudes and their ears had heard with joy His manifold blessings pronounced upon those who had the spirit of the kingdom of God in their hearts. Blessed are the poor in spirit; blessed they that mourn; blessed the meek, for they shall inherit the earth. Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled. Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy. Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God. Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God. Blessed are they that are persecuted for righteousness' sake, and blessed are His own when men shall revile them and say all manner of evil against them falsely for His sake.

Never could man devise such a kingdom as this. All other kingdoms from the foundation of the world have been ruled and governed by man's stupidity, never prospering for long because of the deep corruption of the human heart, fashioned as they were in the mold of man's fallen nature. Jesus told them of a kingdom that would be the direct antithesis of all former kingdoms, a kingdom in which the love of God would both rule and be shed abroad in every heart.

"Upon the mountain Jesus sat; the hillside by the beach
Grass-carpeted cathedral where He could speak, and teach
Those flaming, burning words of truth that priest and demagogue
Would never tolerate at all in church or synagogue.
"His own cathedral He had built; had built it by His word,
And 'neath its vaulted panoply the glory of the Lord
Would pale the light of noonday sun; for what He said that day Would blaze and shine eternally, when worlds had burned away.

"Back to their tasks the crowd had gone, and He was left alone
Save for a little company that He could call His own.
What use was there for restless crowds - the worldly, giddy throng Might listen to the music, but never hear the song.

"Blessed are ye," the tones rang out, repeated o'er and o'er!
Galilee pressed with watery hands the keyboard of the shore;
And from her heaving bosom rose the music of her waves,
For heaven was calling earth to tell that only Jesus saves.

"For can the sermon on the mount be lived by human life?
Can sinful man ascend so high above his sin and strife?
Is there the possibility that he can strive and strain
Through a thousand consecrations that life to attain?

"Forgive us, Lord, is such we think, for this is not the way.
Oh, give us ears to really hear what Thou didst say that day!
We want life. Oh, vision blessed, from us, Lord, never part,
For we can only live it when Thou livest in our heart."

Charles S. Price.
This poor, bleeding world speaks of love while hate is deep-seated in the heart. They seek for lasting peace, but the Prince of peace they turn away from their doors. No nation can have good laws without giving honor to Him from whom all law comes, even Him who on Mt. Sinai proclaimed a law so good, so pure and holy, that no people on earth, no, not even the godless nations, have ever been able to pick a flaw in it. Some immoral and deluded folk have called it outmoded, but they quickly find disobedience to its precepts brings nations to ruin, as we now see on every hand.

Jesus had not only told them of a kingdom to come in which He would reign supreme, King of kings, and they, His devoted consorts, would reign with Him, but He had warned them that He must first suffer many things, be rejected by His people, and be put to death - all of which seemed to be incompatible with and contradictory to the things He was teaching. As though He would amaze them more, He had spoken of His rising from the dead and of an unspeakable hour yet to come in which all mankind would hear the trumpet call of the voice of God's Son and would come forth from their graves, some to aionian life and others to aionian destruction. It seems all clear to us now, but to them it was not clear. Their minds were confused with the very weight of the truth so fervently spoken to them and their understanding became incapable of grasping the awesome and wonderful message He proclaimed.

Like so many Christians of our day, these men rejoiced in the things they heard, but their hearts could not comprehend nor were they able to understand the vital truth and reality of the message. They "listened to the music, but never heard the song." How often through the years I have encountered this lack of comprehension among the people of the Lord! They have eyes, but they do not see. They examine the outer shell, but never taste the kernel within. They say they understand, but their spirit has not grasped the truth. Someone will ask, "How do you know they do not see or understand?" The answer is so simple. Truth transforms the receiver and flows from him so that deep calls unto deep. During the past years scores of people have told me that they have seen the truth regarding Babylon and that the entire, existing church system is indeed Mystery Babylon. You will have to write a very large book, my brother or sister, if you are going to convince me that you have seen the truth about Babylon while you still remain within her prison walls. I know you have not seen it. When men say they have seen this pertinent truth, yet they still remain faithful to the system either in its organized or unorganized state, they are deceived. They have seen nothing. Many thousands are now professing to preach what they proudly call the sonship message. Ah, my brother, talk is cheap indeed. It is not he who proclaims the theory of sonship who is God's son, but he who has the Spirit of His Son.

The minds of these seven men who stood and spoke together were confused indeed. The spirit within had not grasped the truth of death and resurrection. They had actually seen Him die and now, wonder of wonders, they had actually seen Him alive, a fact assured by many infallible proofs. If anyone on earth should have believed the message of the resurrection, it should have been Mary of Bethany and Mary Magdalene, yet these two faithful women, who during His life doted on His every word, had come early to the sepulcher, not to see Him alive, but, laden with sweet spices, to embalm His dead body and wrap it in endless yards of cloth that death might hold Him captive forever. But, when they came, they found the tomb no longer closed and sealed, but open wide; yet their sorrowing hearts could not believe that He was risen. He was not in the tomb and for this they wept bitterly. Surely someone must have stolen Him away, or perhaps the gardener had removed Him. Then He spoke, saying, "Woman, why weepest thou? Whom seekest thou?" yet she knew not that it was He until He spoke her name, as so oft before He had done, and then she knew. Oh what rapture ravished her despairing soul as the unbearable burden of grief, doubt, fear, misunderstanding, and disappointment fell like lead at her feet! Her tears of sorrow became glistening diamonds of happiness and joy as His wonderful voice called out her name. "Rabboni!" she cried in ecstasy as she fell to worship at His feet. It was only a word that He spoke, but it was enough to drive away the distress of a lifetime and fill her being with joy for eternity.

And so it will be with you, my precious brother or sister. One word, falling like a gem from His lips in love and pardon, will change your whole life and everything in it. That is the way it was with Thomas when Jesus appeared to him. He never could believe a thing until it was proved to him. Therefore, when he heard that the Lord was risen from the dead and had been seen by many of His brethren, he said with the heaviness that doubt always brings, "Except I see the print of the nails in His hands and thrust my hand into His side, I will not believe." Eight days later the Lord appeared to His disciples again and this time Thomas was present. "Reach hither thy hand," He challenged, "and thrust it into My side, and be not faithless, but believing." And Thomas, hearing and understanding the full force of the resurrection by the Spirit, cried out in wonder and amazement, "My Lord and my God!"

"He speaks and the sound of His voice
Is so sweet the birds hush their singing;
And the melody that He gave to me
Within my heart is ringing."

"Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me," spoke the risen Christ to a desperate man warring against the overwhelming convictions within his heart and kicking against the goadings of the Holy Spirit in His soul. Saul, hearing a voice but seeing no man, cried out from the depths of his anguished spirit, "Who art Thou, Lord!" for beyond doubt he knew it was the voice of the Lord. "I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest," was the instant reply. "It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks," and Saul in astonishment cried aloud, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" Then said Jesus, "Go into the village and it shall be told thee what thou must do." And when Ananias was come to him, he laid his hands upon him and the Spirit of the Lord entered into him as the blinding scales that had bound his spirit in outer darkness all the days of his life fell from his eyes and he rejoiced in Jesus Christ the Lord.

"Jesus is all this poor world needs today.
Blindly they strive, for sin darkens their way.
Oh, to draw back the grim curtains of night!
One glimpse of Jesus and all will be bright.
All that I need is in Jesus,
He satisfies; joy He supplies;
Life would be worthless without Him;
All things in Jesus I find."

And now his ransomed soul was singing a theme that never left his heart through all the days of his sojourn on earth:

"Forbid it, Lord, that I should boast
Save in the cross of Christ, my Lord.
All the vain things that charm me most,
I sacrifice them to His blood."

Let me interject a foundational truth at this point. It is a truth seldom, if ever, heard among the people of God. The preachers and evangelists studiously avoid it, but it is fundamental to all our understanding of the work of God in this present age. It is a truth given by no less an authority than God's only begotten Son. The following two scriptures vividly point out God's method of choosing those who are elected to be saved in this age: First, "No man can come to Me except the Father which hath sent Me draw him..." John 6:44. The second is this: "All that the Father giveth Me shall come to Me; and him that cometh to Me I will in no wise cast out." John 6:37. Christians blindly strive under the mistaken idea that, if they will only meet certain conditions, God will reply by bringing every man into the fold of Christ in this present age. My friend, this is a very great error. It is about as far from the truth as anything could possibly be. God does not intend to bring all men into the fold now. If that were His intention, He could do it with but one word of His omnipotence. When God's eternal voice speaks, saying, "Let there be light," then light immediately floods the universe as it did in the beginning. There is no need for a candle nor the light of the sun, for the Lord God giveth them light. That light could not be matched by ten thousand suns, for the light that shone out of darkness in the beginning is the same light that lightens every man that comes into the world. It is the light that shines into benighted souls, bringing the life of the ages to men who are sleeping in earth. "Samuel! Samuel!" called the Lord, and a sleeping boy sprang from his bed to reply. "Mary," was the only word Jesus spoke, and a weeping woman fell at His feet in utter joy. "Saul! Saul!" Jesus called to a disconsolate and determined persecutor, and he quickly replied, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" And so it will be when He calls to you, your child, your husband, or your wife with His still small voice speaking to the inner ear. Whether it be John, George, Henry, Joan, Phyllis, or Louise, all will fall at His feet in penitence and brokenness the moment He speaks, crying, "Here am I, Lord! What wilt Thou have me to do?"
It is useless to try to gather all the world into the kingdom in this dispensation, for that is not God's purpose in this age. No man comes except the Father draw him. Those who insist on bringing all the world in now are trying to do in this age of grace the work that God Himself has said should be done in the dispensation of the fullness of times. In the dispensation of the fullness of times, his immutable word has declared, He will gather all things into Christ, both which are in heaven and in earth, even in Him. Eph. 1:10. "All that the Father hath given Me shall come to Me," said Jesus, and you may be sure that this is the truth. At the end of this age there will not be one soul missing of all that number who were predestined to come to Him, and, when the kingdom age has run its course, there will not be one missing of all who are appointed to come to Him in that blessed age. So also we may declare for that wonderful age of the ages, the dispensation of the fullness of times, for God's word has faithfully declared that in that blessed age of all ages every missing sheep will be accounted for as God gathers together in one the all things into Christ.

Let us not vainly bash our heads against the wall in frantic attempts to accomplish things that are outside God's intention; for this age. Let us not try to bring the millennial kingdom in during the age of grace. It just cannot be done. Oceans of tears cannot change God's appointed purpose. Neither let us try to do in that glorious age to come what God has reserved for the fullness of times. All the good resolves, the labor, and the tears will never change that which God has appointed to be.

My heart earnestly cries that the day may speedily come when God's beloved people will know the peace of walking in harmony with the purpose of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will. No praise is ever brought to God by our endeavoring to do things He does not want done. The world: will not know until the light of eternity what harm and distress the preachers have done who have taught the people that, unless they get saved now, they are doomed to unremitting and eternal fire. They have not helped by saying that, should we fail to hear preach hell fire, men will live ungodly lives. Has this preaching kept the world from ungodliness? Is it not more wicked now than at any time since Noah? Could things sink much lower than they are in spite of all the threats of hell and rule and torment? What the world needs is not vain threats of punishment, but an understanding of what the will of the Lord is. This knowing the purpose of God is the greatest need among Christians today. I do not say you should not pray for the ungodly, but I do say that, if you are walking in the Spirit and being led by the Spirit, then your prayers will be directed by the Lord in whatsoever direction He pleases, and there will not be so many wasted prayers and useless efforts. Then prayer will be answered and His name glorified. Millions now are praying for another revival in this age like those that have gone before, but there will be no revival any more in this age. The next revival will come in the heat of the great tribulation when many saints with soiled garments wash them white and make them clean in the blood of the Lamb.

I suppose I will make some enemies, but I must tell you this truth nonetheless. I do not believe that the things we are seeing now are true moves of the Spirit of God. We hear it said on every hand that God is pouring out His Spirit on all flesh. My brother, if this were so and if this were the truth, then the world would not be sinking deeper into sin every minute of the day. All revivals of the past had the effect of lifting the people and the nations, but the charismatic movement, the Jesus people and the Jesus freaks, are sour substitutes and confused counterfeit of the real thing. There is no conviction of sin, no crying for mercy, no true repentance, no coming out and being separate, no refusal to touch the unclean thing, but the whole thing marches on, drunk with the blood of true saints and with the martyrs of Jesus. There is only one message for the saints who still remain in the church system, which is Babylon. It is the message I have ceaselessly uttered: "Come out from among them and be ye separate," saith the Lord, "and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." 2 Cor. 6:17-18.

Why should anyone silence or soft-pedal the truth just because he is afraid of the results or why should one think that by preaching a lie we might accomplish in this age what God has reserved for the ages to come? We have noticed how Jesus, when asked to explain His reason for speaking in parables, plainly stated, "Because it is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given." Matt. 13:11.

How foolish of us that we have failed to hear Him say that His parables were spoken that seeing they might see and not perceive, and hearing they might hear, but not understand*. Matt. 13:34, 14. Would anyone but the Son of God have uttered a statement like that? And yet He did it, and it was all truth. Well did the Saviour know that another day is coming when the eyes of the blind shall be opened and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Isa. 35:5.
So these seven men stood together talking about all the things that had recently taken place. Many and varied were their thoughts and opinions concerning these momentous happenings that had given rise to the doubts and dreads that flooded across their minds, filling their souls with gloom. Was it true that every hope and aspiration planted in their fertile hearts had come to an end like a dream in the night? Had this man, Jesus, with all His wisdom, His power, assurance, and miracles really passed from them like a whiff of sweet perfume? Would He appear to them again or was this to be the end? Were they to be like so many others zealous, but thoroughly deceived?

Mankind, it seems, needs a lifetime just to learn that God is never in a hurry; neither is He ever slack or tardy in His appointed times. Oh, how often men go astray when they fail to wait until the Spirit makes His next move - a move that is always different from the one that preceded it. The Bible is replete with illustrations of this human failure to await the times and seasons of the Lord, at the same time clearly showing the difficulties that arise when we grow impatient with God. We may not understand God's reason for keeping Moses forty days in the mountain while the children of Israel impatiently awaited his return, but there was a reason, and the failure of the people and the failure of Aaron to wait on the Lord brought wrath from the Lord on the whole camp of Israel and much hardship and judgment, too. It will be well for us to take notice that their failure to await God's time gave them the unpleasant task of having to wait all over again for another forty days.

We are not told why Elijah, who demonstrated such faith and power before the prophets of Baal, had to flee away to Horeb. Perhaps he did not have to flee at all, but, as with most of us, his human inclinations led him to believe that there must never be an interval between one great event and another. Why should Christians impatiently believe that there must never be a waiting period when no voice from heaven is heard and no sign is given that God is in their midst? God's people should never put their faith in signs and manifestations. They should never depend on blessing, but on the faithfulness of God, who does all things in their appointed time. Healings, baptisms, speaking with tongues and all such signs and wonders have their place, but rest assured that, if you build your faith on them and come to depend on them, you will find yourself as deserted and comfortless as a crow in the ocean. Any man or woman whose spiritual experience depends upon what they see or what they feel will always be living that see-saw kind of experience that has them shouting the victory on the mountain tops one day and moping in the valley of despair the next. The saint who really trusts in God maintains confident assurance in his heart, teaching him that the immutable Lord will do exactly what he has purposed to do, and, furthermore, that he will do it in His own time and in His own way. Nothing can let or hinder Him and no power in the universe can accelerate the divine time-table, no, not even by one hour.

It is both heartening and assuring to read such scriptures as these: "When the fullness of time was come, God sent forth His Son..." Gal. 4:4. The faithful saints in Israel had longed for the coming Messiah. Through lengthening ages they patiently waited, but it was not until the clock struck the appointed hour that the long-promised Son appeared among them, and even then it was not to reign, but to die. It was some thirty years later that our Lord Jesus Christ lifted up His eyes to heaven and said, "Father, the hour is come." What hour was this of which He spoke? Why, my impatient brother, it was the hour that in wisdom God had set before the world began. That momentous hour had been set even before time began, and human kind had waited for its coming for at least four thousand years. But with the certainty of a sunrise at the exact time appointed the hour came and the Lamb, slain from the foundation of the world, appeared to be slain in actuality just as God had decreed.

You have read how the Lord said to Abraham, "At the time appointed I will return unto thee according to the time of life and Sarah shall have a son." The Lord did not hasten His purpose because Abraham and Sarah were growing old. Is anything too hard for the Lord? Only Abraham and Sarah could see any difficulty to the fulfilling of God's purpose. They alone seemed to think the Lord had forgotten His promise, and so they tried to improvise some scheme of their own that might bring the promise to pass. Let me assure you, my brethren, that God is not slack concerning His promise as some men count slackness. Therefore let us learn that, if the Lord shows no interest in the accomplishment of anything, then it is much better to leave that thing undone. But be assured of this: When the time comes for God's purpose to be fulfilled, He will raise up His elect... servants to do it. Furthermore, He will have that one groomed, prepared, well-trained and ready to accomplish the task His wisdom has decreed should be done.

Why do so many people imagine that unless they do the task it will never be done? Have you ever found the Lord lacking a man when He had a job to be done? Never in the history of the world has such a thing been known. He has His Noah ready, and His ark, too, when it comes flood time. He has His Abraham ready, sealed and trained in obedience, when He is ready to raise up a new nation for His name. He had His Joseph locked up in jail all ready and waiting to become the second ruler in Egypt and with wisdom to begin storing up grain in Egypt against the famine that was coming on the world. He had His Moses, a forgotten man, in the backside of the desert, prepared in meekness and wisdom for the great task of leading a nation out of slavery. Back among the sheep on the hillsides of Judah He prepared a stripling to take the throne of Israel at the appointed time.
We could continue speaking of the prophets and of John the Baptist, of Saul of Tarsus and of Martin Luther, and so many thousands of others through the years who appeared in God's time to serve their generation and fall asleep. No, my brother, God is never a moment behind time and He is never slack concerning His promises. Just now, in this self-same hour in which we live, our God is preparing a people for His name. Let the world rush on in its ignorance and pride and let the preachers preach how they please. Let Babylon swagger and stagger as she drinks herself drunken with the blood of the saints, but, all the while mankind is flirting with her and her harlot daughters, God is preparing a people for His name. They will not seem to be in the forefront where the world will see them. Their names do not appear in the glaring headlines of the press.
Their voices are not heard on the radio nor are their faces seen on television; but, as a chick is prepared in the egg shell and as a baby is prepared in the darkness of the womb, so God is preparing His elect that at the time appointed He will manifest them to an astonished world. In the dark and hidden places our Father is preparing His sons, and, while He does it, the world looks on uncomprehending of the glory of the thing it sees.

It does not enter their heads that grace and mercy await the chosen of the Lord, and protection, His holy ones.
The virtuous man who dies condemns the godless who survive, and youth's untimely end the protracted age of the wicked.
These people see the wise man's ending without understanding what the Lord has in store for him or why he has taken him to safety;
they look on and sneer,
but the Lord will laugh at them.
Soon they will be corpses without honor, objects of scorn among the dead forever.
The Lord will dash them down headlong, dumb.
He will tear them from their foundations.
They will be utterly laid waste, anguish will be theirs, and their memory shall perish.
They will come trembling to the reckoning of their sins, and their crimes, confronting them, will accuse them.
Then the virtuous man stands up boldly to face those who have oppressed him, those who thought so little of his sufferings.
And they, at the sight of him, will shake with coward's fear, amazed he should be saved so unexpectedly.
Stricken with remorse, each will say to the other,
say with a groan and in distress of spirit:
"This is the man we used to laugh at once,
a butt for our sarcasm, fools that we were!
His life we regarded as madness, his ending as without honor.
How has he come to be counted as one of the sons of God?
How does he come to be assigned a place among the saints?
Clearly we have strayed from the way of truth;
the light of justice has not shone for us, the sun never rose upon us. We have left no path or lawlessness or ruin unexplored, we have crossed deserts where there was no track, but the way of the Lord is one we have never known. Arrogance, what advantage has this brought us? Wealth and boasting, what have these conferred on us? All those things have passed like a shadow, passed like fleeting rumor. Like a ship that cuts through heaving waves - leaving no trace to show where it has passed, no wake from its keel in the waves. Or like a bird flying through the air - leaving no proof of its passing; it whips the light air with the stroke of its pinions, tears it apart in its whirring rush, drives its way onward with sweeping wing, and afterwards no sign is seen of its passage. Or like an arrow shot at a mark, the pierced air closing so quickly on itself, there is no knowledge which way the arrow has passed. So with us: scarcely born, we have ceased to be; of virtue not a trace have we to show, we have spent ourselves on wickedness instead."

But the virtuous live forever, their recompense lies with the Lord, the Most High takes care of them. So they shall receive the royal crown of splendor, the diadem of beauty from the hand of the Lord; for He will shelter them with His right hand and shield them with His arm. For armor He will take His jealous love, He will arm creation to punish His enemies; He will put on justice as a breastplate, and for helmet wear His undissembling judgment; He will take up invincible holiness for shield, He will forge a biting sword of His stern wrath, and the universe will march Him to fight the reckless.

THE BOOK OF WISDOM.

The elect of the Lord are now in a time of patient waiting as they are being prepared for the hour when man in God's image shall reign as the wisdom of God decreed in the beginning of the ages. This is not a time for God's elect to get excited about the worsening condition of the world, nor is it wisdom to try to turn the tide of events in the world. No man who ever lived has been able to do this. Even Jesus Himself made no such effort. Well He knew that to everything under the sun there is a season and a time. He told us with great conviction, "The Son can do nothing of Himself, but what He seeth the Father do." John 5:19.

How long our seven friends stood talking I do not know, but we may be sure they had plenty to talk about, and talk they did until one of their number, a man named Simon Peter, decided it was time to make a move. "I go fishing," he said, and his friends all agreed that they would go with him. You may not agree with me, but in my opinion it was not a bad idea at all. Their Lord was taken from their head. He had been crucified and, though they knew for certain that He was risen from the dead, he had given them no instruction whatsoever to indicate what their next move should be. When a child of God has no instruction from the Lord or any leading of His Spirit, then it is well to do whatever may be conveniently done. Thus these men decided to spend this interim hour in that old occupation they knew so well fishing.
There are many things to admire about what they did. They had no instruction from their Lord, so they attempted nothing of His work without His direction. They called no meetings, preached no sermons, held no prayer meetings. They had wives and families to support during this time of interim. What better thing, therefore, could they have done than to spend their time in honest enterprise until some new direction was given them from above? Perhaps someone will insist that these men should have spent their time waiting on the Lord. Well, in my opinion that is just what they were doing, and, when the appointed time came and the Lord appeared to give them instruction, He found them as detached from their occupation as they had been in the beginning.

We are in an interim period now just as they were in an interim period then. They stood at the end of the dispensation of law and the beginning of the age of grace. We stand between the end of the dispensation of grace and the beginning of the dispensation of the kingdom of God. I am not suggesting that we all go fishing or even that every man return to his secular work, but be it known to every saint that things are rapidly changing and all the glorified hosts of the universe are preparing themselves as heralds of the morning. The kingdom age, the greatest age that has ever been, is now at hand - the age when God's Son will reign on David's throne and all God's chosen sons will reign with Him.

From north and south the people meet
To lay their trophies at His feet,
While western empires own their Lord
And savage tribes attend His word.

This is not a time to go rushing out to convert the world. This is the time of the sun rising. The crimson streak on ocean's cheek will soon grow into the great sun, yea, the Sun, the Sun of righteousness with healing in His wings. The acceptable year of the Lord is at hand. Two thousand years ago He began to preach the gospel to the poor. He told of a day when all the broken hearts would be mended by the miraculous power of His life. He told of a day when captives would be set free forever, whether they were captives of men or captives of their own sins. He preached that the blind would recover their sight and the bruised would be set at liberty. All these things He demonstrated daily during the three and one-half years of His earthly ministry as He delivered men from evils, healed their diseases, opened their eyes and their ears, touched the maimed so that their limbs grew back on and raised the dead to life again. These things He did were merely demonstrations and samples of the fullness that shall bless mankind, yea, all creation, too, in that acceptable year of the Lord.

Long ago He preached the acceptable year of the Lord, but the dead He raised to life were doomed to die again. It is wholly possible that many who were healed of their diseases fell sick again and passed away, and so it may have been with them all, but it will not be thus in that blessed age which prophets and sages called the acceptable year of the Lord. Isa. 61:1-2. In that glad day there will be no sickness. It will be abolished from the face of the earth. There will be no more blind, for blindness will be dethroned, not by the skill and genius of men, but by the decree of the King of kings and Lord of lords. There will be no lame men in that day nor will any be deaf and dumb. All such things will be disannulled. In that day there will be no more violence and no more war. These, too, will be effaced from His kingdom - abolished, dethroned, disannulled, forever effaced and forever obliterated that the glory of His kingdom should be without alloy and nothing should hurt or destroy in all His holy mountain.

Those seven men were standing in the interim between the dark and the daylight as we are in the interim now. I know not when our Lord shall come, at morn or noonday fair, but in my heart I know that we are as near to the Omega now as Adam was near to the Alpha in the beginning. It is true we do not know the day or the hour when the Son of man shall come, but it is also true that "ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief. Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day; we are not of the night or of the darkness. Therefore let us not sleep, as do others; but let us watch and be sober. For they that sleep, sleep in the night; and they that be drunken are drunken in the night. But let us, who are of the day, be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love; and for an helmet, the hope of salvation." I Thess. 5:4-8.

The world is in travail. Make no mistake about that. Everywhere we hear men speak of peace and safety, but, even while they proclaim it, travail has seized upon them as upon a woman with child. A woman with child cannot hope to escape her hour of travail. Neither can the world escape its travail, for a manchild is being born.
Again I say we are in the interim. All things as we have known them are doomed to pass away that the things which we have known only in the Spirit may encompass the world in its glad tomorrow. You have probably noticed that all dispensations ended in travail and upheaval. Innocence ended with man's expulsion from the beautiful Eden of God. Conscience ended with the flood that engulfed the whole world in its watery grave. Human government ended with the destruction of the machinations of Babel and the confusion of tongues. The age of promise ended with the children of Israel in captivity in Egypt. The dispensation of the law came to is close amid the rending rocks and darkening skies that dreadful, predestined day at Calvary, when the Son of God offered His body, soul, and spirit for the reconciliation of the world and all that is therein. The dispensation of grace, that is now ending, will find its culmination in the greatest upheaval of all time - a time of trouble such as has never been before and never will be again, a tribulation so great that except those days should be shortened no flesh could possibly be saved, a day of tribulation so great that every being on earth will be held by the power of its grip. But it, too, will pass. It is only a moment and the Lord will appear with ten thousands of His saints to set up His kingdom and proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord. Then

Doth his successive journeys run;
His kingdom stretch from shore to shore
Till moons shall wax and wane no more.

Long centuries ago in Seir the cry went ringing forth: "Watchman, what of the night? Watchman, what of the night?" And the answer came quick and clear and strange, "The morning cometh, and also the night." Isa. 21:11-12. A strange reply, indeed, but oh how fitting and true it is of our day! It is not a contradiction as it may seem to be. The morning and the night are both coming, and they will arrive together. Whether it will be morning or night to you depends on what ground you stand upon. If we stand in Him with our ransomed hearts embracing the glory of His appearing, clearly loving His purpose, the glory of His aionian morning will wrap its kindly mantle round our shoulders, but if we stand with the unbelieving, fixing our hopes upon the weakness and unprofitableness of the flesh, then all before us will be night; and so it shall be that that which is sunset for one will be the glory of the sunrise for another, for the morning cometh and also the night. We are waiting for the final crash and we will not have long to wait. The collapse of all things belonging to man's vain kingdom is at hand, but the flashing of lightning and the roaring of thunder, which will bring the age to a close are also the eternal heralds of the acceptable day of the Lord.

Oh what bursting there must have been in the heart of Mary as the sublime words of the Magnificat flowed like a waterfall from the inner recesses of her ransomed heart! "My soul doth magnify the Lord," she exulted, "and my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour." Luke 1:46-47. The glory that filled her soul that day was born of the knowledge that the Christ-child was forming within. The glory that fills our ransomed souls today is born of the knowledge that the hour of His manifestation is at hand - the hour when the government shall be upon His shoulder to order and establish the kingdom with judgment and justice, even from this time forth unto the age of the ages.

"I go a-fishing," said Peter, as he stood in the interim, and they all replied, "We also go with thee." They went forth and entered into a ship immediately; and that night they caught nothing. "But when the morning was now come, Jesus stood on the shore: but the disciples knew not that it was Jesus. Then Jesus said unto them, Children, have ye any meat? They answered Him, No. And He said unto them, Cast the net on the right side of the ship, and ye shall find. They cast therefore, and now they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fishes. Therefore that disciple whom Jesus loved saith unto Peter, It is the Lord. Now when Simon Peter heard that it was the Lord, he girt his fisher's coat unto him, (for he was naked,) and did cast himself into the sea. And the other disciples came in a little ship; (for they were not far from land, but as it were two hundred cubits,) dragging the net with fishes. As soon as they were come to land, they saw a fire of coals there, and fish laid thereon, and bread. Jesus saith unto them, Bring of the fish, which ye have now caught. Simon Peter went up, and drew the net to land full of great fishes, a hundred and fifty and three: and for all there were so many, yet was not the net broken.

"Jesus saith unto them, Come and dine. And none of the disciples durst ask Him, Who art Thou? knowing that it was the Lord. Jesus then cometh, and taketh bread, and giveth them, and fish likewise. This is now the third time that Jesus shewed Himself to His disciples, after that He was risen from the dead. So when they had dined, Jesus saith to Simon Peter, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou Me more than these? He saith unto Him, Yea, Lord; Thou knowest that I love Thee. He saith unto him, Feed my lambs. He saith to him again the second time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou Me? He saith unto Him, Yea, Lord, Thou knowest that I love Thee. He saith unto him, Feed My sheep. He saith unto him the third time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou Me? Peter was grieved because He said unto him the third time, Lovest thou Me? And he said unto Him, Lord, Thou knowest all things; Thou knowest that I love Thee. Jesus saith unto Him, Feed My sheep. Verily, verily, I say unto thee, When thou wast young, thou girdest thyself, and walkedest whither thou wouldest: but when thou shall be old, thou shalt stretch forth thy hands, and another shall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldest not. This spake He, signifying by what death he should glorify God." John 21:3-19.

The story is told of a wayfaring man who in his journeyings came upon a most beautiful estate. As with delight he viewed its well kept magnificence, he enquired of the chief steward who the owner might be. "He is away on a journey," was the reply, "and we do not know when he will return." "How long has he been gone?" the traveler questioned. "Fifteen years," was the steward's reply. "Fifteen years!" cried the wayfarer. "Why, you keep this place as though you expected him tomorrow!" "Ah, no!" replied the steward, "we keep it as though we expected him to return today."

It is the time of the interim. It is the beautiful time of waiting and watching for His coming. It is the time to listen for the glad heralds of the morning. It is the blessed time of the interim.
It may be morn; it may be night or noon.
We know He's coming soon!

CHAPTER SEVEN
WAITING FOR THE BLESSED HOPE

"Man that is born of woman is of few days and full of trouble." Because of the fewness of our days we are continually beset with the tendency to HURRY. Modern man seems to hate the thought of WAITING. He wants everything right now. We secretly imagine that, if we do not hurry, our lives will pass by without the realization of our dreams and ambitions. Thus man, who loves riches, hastens to be rich and sinneth. He who desires fame hastens to seek it. "Work for the night is coming" seems to be the theme of every man. Even the Christian is by no means free from this tormenting demon of haste, for he, too, proclaims his ambition for his life, hoping to see it accomplished before God calls him.

Now we would not say it is wrong to have an ambition and I would be the last man on earth to condone the idler who finds his greatest pleasure in avoiding or delaying every task as long as possible, for Bible history certainly substantiates the belief that all the men God ever called were men of devotion to duty. There is not a slacker among them. Neither laggards in love nor dastards in war were chosen by Him. Many whom He called were sweating under the burden of their toil when the Spirit of God first touched them and, bidding farewell to their herds of cattle, their flocks of sheep, their fishing nets, their yokes of oxen, their custom's offices, their merchandising and their tent making, they followed wholeheartedly and with a good will in the path of His choosing.

Even so today men and women of all walks of life are counting all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus their Lord. They are reckoning the things, which are not as though they were. They are counting the things, which are invisible as though they were clearly seen. Like Abraham they are looking for a city, which hath foundations whose builder and maker is God, and, in searching for the glory of that invisible city, their eyes look past and beyond every visible city of earth. The eye, which is capable of seeing the invisible is a wonderful eye indeed. It is the eye of faith with the pupil of hope, for what a man seeth why doth he yet hope for? Hope is the very instigator of faith. Hope springs from obedience; indeed, it inspires obedience. It erases embarrassment and shame from the faces of all who rejoice in it, for hope maketh not ashamed because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost. Hope deferred maketh the heart sick, but when the desire cometh it is a tree of life.

Faith and hope are twin sisters. In all my life I have never known any person to have faith until they first of all had hope. Such a thing is impossible. For thirty and eight years the impotent man lay by the pool of Bethesda waiting for the moving of the waters. John 5. For thirty and eight years he had hoped against hope that some day he would be the first to step into the water to receive healing from its troubled wave and, thence rejoicing and praising God, he would walk away from the pool a healthy man. But bitter frustrating disappointment held him in its vice-like grip, for always after the troubling of the water, even while he desperately struggled to get in, someone else less needy than he stepped in before him and once again his hopes of healing were dashed to the ground. Then one day Jesus came walking through the mists of his despair speaking the soul-thrilling words. "Wilt thou be made whole?" Faith immediately leaped from the very bosom of hope to put her hand in the hand of God. Life flowed from Christ like a river into a broken body and from the heart of faith and hope came love. Thus they abide forever - faith, hope, and love - but the greatest of these is love. 1 Cor. 13:13.

It is God who raiseth the dead and calleth those things which be not as though they were, Rom. 4:17, honoring even the hopeless who against hope believe in hope according to that which He hath spoken. Rom. 4:18. We all admire the faith of Abraham, and well we might, for he is the very father of the faithful. Abraham was not a man of many works but a man who believed God. It was in hope that he believed. Even when there was no cause to hope and every visible thing was against hope, yet against hope he believed in hope that he might become the father of many nations and heir of the promises of God. Rom. 4:18.

It was for the joy that was set before Him that Jesus endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the majesty on high. And it is for the hope that is set before us that we are today following Christ, which hope we have as an anchor for the soul both sure and stedfast and which entereth into that within the veil. Heb. 6:19. It is with such assurance of hope stedfast to the end that His sons follow Him through valleys where the shadows of death fall about them, through deserts where no water is, through fiery furnaces and lions' dens, through lonesome days and heartless misunderstanding, through reproach and unbelief and all the varied circumstances which only the wisdom of God can devise to make them strong in faith, giving glory to God.

The prize of sonship in God is a prize beyond the scope of human imagination. To be a son of God and a joint heir with Jesus Christ that "as He is so are we in this world" is a hope which defies all possibility of description. Even faith falters before the wonder of its possibility and only hope smiles up through her tears of joy to whisper it shall be so. Never belittle a man who says, "I hope so", for such a man is embracing that which hope alone can embrace, and all who scoff at hope are scoffing at that which abides forever. "Hope thou in God," said David, "for I shall yet praise Him who is the health of my countenance and my God." Psa. 42:5.

When the apostle John spoke of sonship, he spoke of that which is the love of God and the hope of all mankind, the love of God in granting sonship to man and the hope in man that he might become a son of God. "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God. Therefore the world knoweth us not because it knew Him not. Beloved, now are we the sons (children) of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, (mature sons), but we know that, when He shall appear, we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself even as He is pure. 1 John 3:1-3. The hope that burns like a fire within the breasts of God's elect sons is the inspiration that inspires them to purify their lives that they might be pure even as He is pure. Hope delivers men from despair, filling their hearts with courage to find a way where no way is and to embrace victory where there is naught but defeat. It makes toil-weary men cry, "Why art thou cast down, O my soul, and why art thou disquieted within me? Hope thou in God; for I shall yet praise him who is the health of my countenance and my God." Psa. 42:11.

It is when hope flies out the windows of your soul that ravaging despair walks in the door. When hope has fled, men walk with downcast countenance, making their way back to their fishing nets, returning to old traditions and abandoning themselves to despair. Listen to the words of the two heartbroken disciples as they plod their weary way to the town of Emmaus. "We trusted that it had been He who would have redeemed Israel." Luke 24:21. But things had not gone as they had hoped and because of this they were in the grip of despair. That is why love is a little greater than hope, for, while hope sometimes falters, droops, and faints, love never faileth.

When the apostle Paul was voyaging to Rome, the ship encountered the fierce storm Euroclydon. Acts 27:14-20. The hardy sailors toiled tirelessly to save the ship, throwing the cargo into the sea and casting out the tackling, but when neither sun nor stars appeared and no small tempest lay upon them, all hope that they should be saved was taken away. But there was one man aboard who had not lost hope. He was still praying, still fasting, still hoping, still trusting and believing. When all others sat in despair, Paul stood forth in the midst and said, "Sirs, ye should have hearkened unto me and not have loosed from Crete and to have gained this harm and loss, and now I exhort you be of good cheer, for there shall be no loss of any man's life among you, but of the ship. For there stood by me this night the angel of God (Jesus Christ) whose I am and whom I serve."

A far greater storm than Euroclydon is settling down upon the world. A more tempestuous gale by far is about to blow upon us. Even now there must be many faithful Christians who wonder if the tempest that howls about them will be too great for their frail bark. You will wonder if perchance you have taken the wrong ship or if perhaps you should have stayed in the safety of the old harbors of Babylon. The things you hoped would happen have not happened, but hope on! The light that once seemed so close at hand that but a few short steps would bring you to it now has retreated to another horizon and seems as far away as ever. But hope thou in God, for you shall yet praise Him.

The great discoverer, Christopher Columbus, in his hope of discovering a north-west passage to India taught the world lessons in hope and patient endurance that have never been surpassed. Through uncharted seas he sailed, consoling and encouraging the hearts of his near mutinous men who longed to turn back and abandon the hope that lay before them. Of his epic voyage into the unknown the poet wrote:

Behind him lay the gray Azores,
   Behind, the gates of Hercules,
Before him not the ghost of shores,
   Before him only shoreless seas.
The good mate said, "Now must we pray,
   For lo! the very stars are gone;
Brave Admiral, speak, what shall I say?"
   "Why, say, 'Sail on! sail on! and on!'"

"My men grow mutinous day by day,
   My men grow ghastly wan, and weak."
The stout mate thought of home; a spray
   Of salt wave washed his swarthy cheek.
"What shall I say, brave Admiral, say,
   If we sight naught but seas at dawn?"
"Why, you may say, at break of day,
   'Sail on! sail on! and on!'"
They sailed and sailed as winds might blow
   Until at last the blanched mate said:
"Why, now not even God would know
   Should I and all my men fall dead.
These very winds forget their way,
   For God from these dread seas is gone.
Now speak, brave Admiral, speak and say-
   He said, "Sail on! sail on! and on!"

They sailed. They sailed. Then spake the mate:
"This mad sea shows his teeth tonight; He curls his lip, he lies in wait
   With lifted teeth as if to bite; Brave Admiral, say but one good word, What shall we do when hope is gone?" The words leaped like a leaping sword,
   "Sail on! sail on! sail on! and on!"

Then, pale and worn, he kept his deck,
   And peered through darkness.
   Ah, that night Of all dark nights!
```
And then, a speck,
"A light! A light! A light! A light!"
It grew, a starlit flag unfurled!
It grew to be Time's burst of dawn.
He gained a world; he gave that world
Its grandest lesson: "On! sail on!"

The most necessary thing in all the Christian walk is to have that blessed hope ever firmly before us. Such alone are capable of laying hold of the promises of God, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith, who for the joy set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is now set down at the right hand of the majesty on high. If you are going to turn back, by all means turn back now, for the hour of trial is at hand that will try every man that dwelleth upon the earth.

A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver; as an earring of gold and an ornament of fine gold so is a wise reprover upon an obedient ear. Prov. 25:11,12. There are times in the life of every man when a word of encouragement is needed along the way. We all need exhortation here and there, for the journey may become long and the burden great until we know not which way to turn. For this very reason the good Lord has filled the Bible with exhortations to faithfulness. Examples have been left us by other men and women who with like passions as our own sailed through stormy seas, enduring cruel mockings and scourgings, yea moreover, bonds and imprisonments. They were stoned and sawn asunder, tempted and slain with the sword. They wandered in sheepskins and goatskins, being destitute, afflicted, and tormented. The world was not worthy of them. Yet by their faith they subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens. Women received their dead raised to life again, and others were tortured, not accepting deliverance, that they might obtain a better resurrection. And for all this faith, hope, and endurance they all died without seeing the realization of their hope. But hope is hope and faith is faith and the word of God is the word of God, both sure and stedfast. Such realities as these can never be cancelled by death, for God counts the things that be not as though they were in preparation for the day when He will waken the dead from their temporary sleeping that they with us together may in resurrection partake of all His promises. See Heb. 11:32-40.

Now after the apostle had thus exhorted the people to stedfastness of faith by calling to their minds the great cloud of witnesses who have gone before and who all endured such suffering and tribulation, he exhorted them further by saying, "Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith, who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God. For consider Him who endured such contradiction of sinners against Himself lest ye be weary and faint in your minds."

It is so easy to become weary and faint. Time after time hopes are deferred and our hearts are made sick. Oh, how often we could say with the two disciples who journeyed that night to Emmaus, "We had trusted that it should have been He who would have redeemed Israel." Like Elijah we see cloud in the sky that promises rain, but instead of its increasing to a mighty storm as it did in his day, it withers away like a mist before the rising sun. We see world events shaping up that seem to herald the soon coming of Christ and the glory of His kingdom, but they too pass by without event. We hear of great religious moves and upon investigation discover that they are clouds without water. We hear reports of men with great gifts only to find that they are clouds and wind without rain, for that is the judgment of God against all who boast of false gifts. Prov. 25:14. We walk in sweet counsel with men, as David did with Ahithophel, only to see them become enemies and return to the husks of swine, or, having loved this present world, like Demas they wave good-bye and depart for the easier and well-trodden paths. Then, too, it is not at all uncommon to become weary with one's self and the often weaknesses and infirmities of our own nature. Anxiously we glance about us for signs of developing sonship only to behold how unChristlike we really are. Without are fightings; within are fears. We look for the ruddy tints of health only to behold a haggard face and forms that droop and faint in the long walk of faith.
Thus we commune with our own hearts, wondering at the pitiful emptiness that so often engulfs us, until we hear the voice of the Lord ringing through the corridors of our soul, refreshing as a cool breeze in time of harvest. "Hast thou not known, has thou not heard that the everlasting God, the Lord, the creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not neither is weary? There is no searching of His understanding. He giveth power to the faint; and to them that have no might He increaseth strength. Even the youths shall faint and be weary and the young men shall utterly fail, but they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength. They shall mount up with wings as eagles (sons of God). They shall run and not be weary; they shall walk and not faint." Isa. 40:28-31.

I am convinced that every Bible writer knew far more about spiritual fainting spells than he knew about being carried heavenward on billowy clouds of glory and blessing. Those warriors of the cross knew the meaning of the words, "Take up thy cross and follow Me." They knew only too well that all who would follow Him must be ready to forsake mothers and fathers and children and every manner of friendship for the sake of the burning light that shone within them. They knew that the path of sonship might lead through poverty. They were not ignorant of the fact that their greatest enemy would prove to be, not other people, but their own flesh, and for that very reason they would be called upon to hate their own lives (after the flesh) also. They knew and you know and I know that any man who loves his father or mother, his son or his daughter more than Christ is not worthy of Christ. Yes, and you must love Him more than your own life besides, for your life is no longer your own. Ye are bought with a price. Let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season ye shall reap if ye faint not. Gal. 6:9.

How often, when I have thought of the above text, I have wanted to reverse its words and say, "We shall faint if we reap not," for that is often the reason so many people fall out by the wayside. But I think there is a whole world of truth bound up in the inspired words, "one sows, another reaps, but God gives the increase."

Now our Lord Jesus Christ, who Himself was a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, gave us a wonderful remedy to save us from fainting. "Men ought always to pray," He said, "and not to faint." Prayer is the greatest antidote against weakness of heart and faintness of spirit that was ever put in man's possession. What a regrettable thing it is that Christians in the blindness and confusion of all ages have thought to use prayer as a means of either begging or forcing God to do the things they wanted Him to do. How often I have heard men pray, beg, plead, and demand of God, insisting upon what they foolishly thought were "throne rights", as they tried to press home their requests. But just as often I have seen them go away empty, only to return again to repeat the silly process. This is not prayer. It never was prayer and it never will be prayer. So often we have heard it said that, "prayer is the utterance of the soul's sincere desire." Though these words have been quoted almost as a text of scripture, yet it is not the whole truth, for man, being what he is, may have many, many sincere desires in his heart, yet every one of them may be contrary to the will of God. As long as Christians are dominated by the carnal mind, their prayers will be based upon the longings of their own hearts rather than on the will of God. Prayer is not much speaking. Prayer is not frequent repetition. Prayer was not given that men might impose upon God the childish desires of their own will. If the years as a Christian have taught me anything regarding prayer, it is this: The greatest element in prayer is the silent waiting of a surrendered will that asks from the hidden depths of the spirit, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" "Be still and know that I am God."

How happy is the man who knows that God is God, supreme, immutable, omniscient, omnipotent, and divine, holding in His mighty head all the plans and purposes of endless ages, bringing to pass each edict ordained in His infinite mind before ever a creature was, raising up kings and putting them down, exalting nations and discarding them at will, creating darkness wherein men stumble and the light that drives darkness away, ordaining His elect from before the foundation of the world, calling them to justification and glory according to His purpose, raising up vessels of dishonor to serve their ignoble purpose in this age and to be visited with grace after many days. Eph. 2:7. Oh, how great Thou art! And what strength they sustain who kneel before Thee to hear Thee unfold Thy glorious plan! Happy is the man who has found in prayer this source of strength and life.

What a universe of difference there is between the man who thus searches out God's mind and will and him who comes with rapid speech to recite a thousand impetuous demands which are neither heard of God nor remembered by him who prayed them. Such an intercessor is scarcely better than he who without thought or heart searching intones his prayer with melancholy voice from a prayer book.

"Therefore, seeing we have received this ministry, we faint not, knowing that He which raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise up us also by Jesus and shall present us with you. For all things are for your sakes that the abundant grace might through the thanksgiving of many redound to the glory of God. For which cause we faint not, but though the outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day. For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen, for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal." 2 Cor. 4:1, 14-18.

In the book of Judges, chapter 8, there is a record that should encourage every fainting soul. All day long Gideon with his three hundred men had pursued the hosts of the Midianites, and "Gideon came to Jordan and passed over, he and the three hundred men that were with him, faint yet pursuing." Faint yet pursuing! What a heartening message that really is! For years perhaps you, like Paul, have pressed toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ. For months you have fought a good fight and strained every nerve like a mighty athlete to win a prize. You have suffered many a defeat. You have stumbled and fallen by the wayside times without number. You have seen the most stalwart men halt their step and return to the weak and beggarly elements of the flesh. You have marveled at the slowness of your pace and the oft recurring signs of your own carnality. Prophecy has failed; tongues have ceased; knowledge has vanished away. Well, let everything in the world fail. Though you are very faint, keep pursuing, for God, who cannot lie, has said, "In due season ye shall reap if ye faint not."

When the path before is rough,
And the rocks in ridge and bluff
Bar your progress to the distant peaks sublime,
When your strength and heart are breaking,
Take pride in the fight you're making.
Throw your rope around the high rock and climb.

Watching and waiting go hand in hand. Oft repeated and fervent are the exhortations of scripture to watch and be watchful. When Jesus spoke of the coming of the Lord, He said, "If the good man of the house had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched and not have suffered his house to be broken up; therefore, be ye also ready for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh." Matt. 24:43. The world today abounds with signs loudly proclaiming that the end of the age is upon us and the coming of the Lord is near. It is our duty to watch every sign even as he that reapeth watches the weather and the sky, heeding both winds and clouds, often listening to the weather reports that he might know what manner of weather is coming. "Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour when the Son of man cometh." Remember these exhortations to watchfulness. "Tarry ye here and watch with Me." "Could ye not watch with Me one hour?" "Watch and pray lest ye enter into temptation." "For the Son of man is as a man making a journey, who left his house and gave authority to his servants and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch. Take heed; watch and pray; for ye know not when the time is. Watch ye therefore, for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cockcrowing, or in the morning, lest coming he find you sleeping. And what I say unto one I say to all. Watch." Mark 13:33-37.

Paul the apostle continued these exhortations to watchfulness, saying in 1 Cor. 16:13, "Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit ye like men, be strong." And again, "But of the times and the seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you. For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. For when they shall say, peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape. But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief. Ye are all the children of light and of the day; we are not of the night or of darkness. Therefore let us not sleep as do others; but let us watch and be sober." 1 Thess. 5:1-6. In like manner also Peter, being mindful of the fearful destruction that came upon the careless and sordid generation which was disobedient when the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah while the ark was in preparation, wherein few, that is eight souls were saved by water, said, "The end of all things is at hand; be ye therefore sober and watch unto prayer." 1 Pet. 4:7. "Be watchful and strengthen the things which remain, for blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garment, that he may have right to the tree of life." Rev. 16:15. A watchman is simply one who watches, and I am inclined to think that the work of a watchman, though of vital importance whether in peace or war, must be one of the most tedious tasks ever given to man. Weary nights and days are spent in lonesomeness, oftentimes in the cold, many times in danger from enemies of varied sorts. Yet to fall asleep when watching to be or careless or remiss for but a moment may mean disaster to a whole nation.

There is an impressive little story in 1 Kings 20:35-43 which should inspire us all to watchfulness. King Ahab had allowed Ben-Hadad to escape out of his hand and, in order that he might condemn himself with his own words, one of the prophets feigned this simple monologue: "As the king passed by, he cried unto the king: and he said, Thy servant went out into the midst of the battle, and, behold, a man turned aside and brought a man unto me, and said, Keep this man: if by any means he be missing, then shall thy life be for his life, or else thou shall pay a talent of silver. And as thy servant was busy here and there, he was gone. And the king of Israel said into him, So shall thy judgment be; thyself hast decided it. And he (the prophet) hasted, and took the ashes away from his face; and the king of Israel discerned him that he was of the prophets. And he said unto him, Thus saith the Lord, Because thou hast let go out of thy hand a man whom I appointed to utter destruction, therefore thy life shall go for his life, and thy people for his people. And the king of Israel went to his house heavy and displeased." Now the words that stand out so clearly in this parable are these: "While I was busy here and there, he was gone." People are so inclined to forsake watchfulness while they attend to the fleeting tasks of this present life. They allow some love for the passing to make them forget the permanent.
They allow their minds to be taken up with play so that, instead of watching unto prayer and developing their spiritual nature, giving earnest heed to the precious hope of sonship in Christ, they spend their spare time grasping for the bursting bubbles of this present life, never realizing that what we are tomorrow today we are becoming. Thus, while we are busy here and there, the very thing that is most important escapes us.

It is not only those who are absorbed with earthly toil or earthly play who let the valued prize escape them, but thousands of Christians today are so busy here and there with every manner of religious work that all spiritual growth has come to a standstill. Do you keep forever on the run for church and society until all your spare time is taken up with this confusing maze of activity so common among Christians in our day? If so, you are not growing in the wisdom and knowledge of Christ and, if we may use the parable in this way, while you are busy here and there, you will wake up to find that He is gone, and you are drowned in your activity. God does not want your work. He wants you.

The true watchman, keeping his lonely vigil, is not to be meddling in affairs for his own amusement even though the hours are long and idle. His duty it is to say, "My Lord, I stand continually upon the watchtower in the daytime and I am set in my ward whole nights," Isa. 21:8-12, that when one calleth to him, "Watchman, what of the night? Watchman, what of the night?" he with knowledge and understanding may reply, "The morning cometh and also the night." For of a truth we are coming to a period of time when both the morning and the night shall come at once, morning to the watchers and night to the sleepers. What I say unto one I say unto all. Watch!

Now watching always implies waiting. Whether you are watching for a king or a thief, whether you are expecting good or evil, there is always the time of waiting. The word of the Lord to the prophet Habakkuk places watching and waiting side by side. "I will stand upon my watch and set me upon the tower and will watch to see what he will say unto me and what I shall answer when I am reproved. And the Lord answered me and said, Write the vision and make it plain upon the tables that he may run that readeth it. For the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end it will speak and not lie; Though it tarry, wait for it, because it will surely come; it will not tarry." Hab. 2:1-3.

Though the word of God is sure and stedfast and can never fail, standing sure even though the heavens and earth pass away, yet, because His promises are almost always long delayed and we are inherently impatient, we are prone to grow weary of our waiting and begin to say, "Where is the promise of His coming? For since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation." 2 Tim. 3:4.
Undoubtedly it is true that all things do continue very much as they have done since the foundation of the world. There is no doubting that fact.
Mankind is more absorbed than ever with the things of earth. He is bound and determined to make the world a better place to live in, forgetting all about God, who alone can make life worth living, whether in riches or in poverty. So concerned have we become with trying to better this life that we have forgotten that better part which God has reserved for those who look for that blessed hope and wait for His Son from heaven.

History is not lacking in evidence that men have almost always continued the heedless profligacy of former generations right up to the very moment when disaster fell upon them. In Noah's day they continued their reprobate living to the very day the flood came and took them all away, marrying and giving in marriage, divorcing and remarrying, exulting in violence and wickedness until every imagination of their hearts was evil continually. Naught did they heed that mighty preacher of righteousness who in spite of his years of toil and faithfulness had no converts outside his own household. Then, in the midst of all their riotous living, the flood came even as God had said.

Things continued on as usual in the city of Sodom to the hour and minute of its desolation. God, they thought, saw none of their vileness and, if He saw, surely He cared not a straw. Their filthy conversation vexed the soul of righteous Lot who dwelt among them. What thought had they for God? What care had they for any warning of impending destruction? Even the close relations of Lot - his daughters and his sons-in-law - scoffed at his warnings, for he seemed to them as one that mocked. Gen. 19:14. But by the time the sun was risen upon Zoar the next morning, God rained fire and brimstone upon Sodom and Gomorrah and overthrew those cities and all the plain. Verses 23-24.

Did not judgment suddenly come upon Egypt in the days of Moses? And on Babylon likewise in the night Belshazzar was slain? And was not Pompeii suddenly destroyed by the eruption of Mt. Vesuvius, the excavated ruins of which today bear witness of its sin?

Let us not then grow weary with waiting, for "the thing is true, though the time appointed is long." Dan. 10:1.
Let us rather do as Daniel did and receive from God the understanding of it.

"Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his lord hath made ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season? Blessed is that servant, whom his lord when he cometh shall find so doing. Verily I say unto you, that he shall make him ruler over all his goods. But and if that evil servant shall say in his heart, my lord delayeth his coming, and shall begin to smite his fellow servants and to eat and drink with the drunken; the lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of." Matt.
24:45-50.

It is doubtful if any man fully understands the parable of the ten virgins, but though we may be somewhat in the dark as to the exact meaning of the parable as a whole, the lessons it teaches need not be missed by anyone.
The ten were virgins, waiting for the bridegroom. The bridegroom tarried; they all slumbered. Suddenly, at darkest night, at midnight, the cry went out! "Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet Him." The hasty trimming of their lamps, the disappointing discovery by some that their oil had dwindled and their lights were almost gone out, their hasty departure to buy oil, the arrival of the bridegroom and his departure while the foolish virgins were absent, their consequent exclusion from the feast and their loss for the age to come — whatever else this parable may teach, only the most unthinking man could fail to see from these points the great need and vital necessity of preparedness.

Waiting is a wearisome task. The minutes seem like hours, the hours like days. Have you ever waited for the midnight train only to find it was an hour late? That hour is longer than any other as sleep and restlessness overtake you. The coming of the Lord seems to be always delayed - not because He postpones it as some think, but because we set our hopes and fix our hearts on some specific reason only to find we are wrong and must still abide His time. It is here that we are inclined to slumber and grow careless in our watching and impatient in our waiting. It is then we fall asleep or become busy here and there only to find Him coming at an hour when we are unaware.

The Lord made a promise to Abraham that Sarah his wife would bear him a son and that his seed would be as the stars of heaven and the sands of the sea for multitude. We have read how the years dragged by in the life of this man of faith until he was well stricken in years and his wife far past the age of childbearing. Already they had resorted to means of their own design in a human endeavor to promote the promise of God, for Abraham, at the bidding of his wife Sarah, had taken Hagar the Egyptian that through her might come the promised seed and God's covenant be fulfilled. In the course of time Ishmael was born and Abraham evidently believed that God had accepted his artificial method of fulfilling His promise. But when Abraham was one hundred years old and his wife ninety, to his amazement and apparent chagrin the Lord returned to speak to him again and to renew the promise that Sarah would have a son. Sarah, upon hearing the voice of the angel, laughed at the thought that a woman of her years should bear a son. But the angel, rebuking her for her laughter, assured her that about a year from then she would indeed bear the promised son. There is a sort of pitiful weariness in the words of Abraham: "Oh, that Ishmael might live before Thee!" He had grown weary in his faith and hoped that the promise of God had been fulfilled in Ishmael and that he would need to trust no more. Please read Gen. 17:1-19. 18:1-15.

I cannot fully explain just why the Lord appears to delay His promises. The real truth of the matter is that He never does delay His promise. It only seems that way. Man, short-lived as he is, naturally thinks that God's promises must immediately be fulfilled, forgetting that God has His own appointed time for the accomplishment of all His will. In the omniscient mind of the Lord the day and the hour has been set for the fulfillment of His every purpose. Paul said, "In the fullness of time God brought forth His Son." He did not bring Him forth one day ahead of His plan, nor did He bring Him forth one day late. Jesus Christ was born on the day appointed of God before the world began. When Jesus faced the cross, He lifted His voice to His Father in heaven and said, "Father, the hour has come". That mighty hour of His death had been planned before ever there was a world or an age. One hour earlier would not have done; one hour later could not suffice. There is neither haste nor delay with Him. God runs the whole universe so perfectly on time that every watch in the world is set by its rotation. When Jesus spoke of His second coming, He said that no man knew the day nor the hour of His coming, but the Father only. God does not delay any of His promises. Long ago He ordained the exact day and the exact hour for the revelation of His Son. When the scripture says, "God waited in the days of Noah", we must not think that He waited beyond the time appointed. He waited only until the appointed hour, and then the flood came. It is wrong to imagine that God is now delaying the end of the age or the coming of the Lord because of the unbelief of the world. God will not delay one second beyond the time appointed. He is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance, but He will not wait nor tarry one moment beyond that time appointed by His omniscient mind before the ages began. No! The Lord is not delaying His coming. The time is long, Dan. 10:1, evidently much longer than anyone has expected, but He will surely come and will not tarry. See Job 7:1, Dan. 8:19, 11:27, Acts 17:26.

"Let patience have her perfect work that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing." God has never changed the methods by which He brings into our lives the qualities and virtues He desires. Evidently He has some special design in mind for patience, for of all the many virtues of His Spirit He strives most earnestly to produce patience in the experience of His people. In seeking for spiritual perfection, we have likely forgotten long ago to pay any particular attention to patience. We have likely forgotten, if we ever knew, that, when patience has been permitted to have her perfect work within us, we ourselves become perfect and entire, wanting nothing. This is a wonderful hope indeed, and should cause us much meditation and searching of heart. The moment we understand that all God's apparent delays are permitted to bring about the state of perfection that He deems perfect, then we can with joy and gladness settle down to long, long periods of patient waiting, possessing our souls in patience and love.

There is not too much value in praying for patience unless, of course, you are willing to take God's mysterious way of producing it. Our heavenly Father will not hand patience to you on a golden platter just because you prayed for it. He has His own way of bringing patience into your soul. This is His way: "Tribulation worketh patience, patience experience, experience hope, and hope maketh not ashamed because the love of God is shed abroad in your heart by the Holy Spirit." If you request patience from God, sooner or later you will be partaker of tribulation of one sort or another. It is unavoidable, for this is God's wise dealing and His divine method of producing patience acceptable to Him.

As you read the word of God, you will notice that patience has a special relationship to the coming of the Lord. A goodly number of times the two are mentioned together. James, for instance, says, "Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it until he receive the early and latter rain. Be ye also patient, establish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh."

Jas. 5:7-8. Then again there is that most beautiful scripture written by Paul which seems to stop one dead in his tracks while he meditates on its glory and possibility: "And the Lord direct your hearts into the love of God and into the patient waiting for Christ." 2 Thess. 3:5.

From these scriptures it will be clearly seen that patience is a virtue much desired of God. He Himself is the God of all patience and His design is that we, too, should be likeminded. See Rom. 15:5. Is it any wonder then that in the infinite process of our becoming like Him He should strive endlessly and with all patience to reproduce all His attributes in the nature of His sons? Would to God in this important hour that all His people would joyfully yield themselves to His will even as clay yields itself in the hands of the potter. Instead of running pell-mell seeking every spectacular thing that clamors for our attention, let us diligently add to our faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and love, for these are the attributes of the divine nature. 2 Pet. 1:4-8. We must through patience and hope receive God's promises; therefore, with patience possess ye your souls. Though the great Abraham believed God, it was not until he had patiently endured that he received the promises. Let us not expect then that our Lord will treat us with less devotion, for we are all the children of Abraham and heirs according to the promise.
PREFACE:

The title of this book, Seed for the Sower and Bread for the Eater, is borrowed from Isaiah 55:10. In its six chapters I have made no attempt to develop one particular theme, but rather to plant kernels of truth which, united, will become one loaf.

In the great body of Christ the many members, differing markedly from each other, nevertheless form but one body, Rom. 12:4,5, and that one body the fullness of Christ. Thus we, being many greatly differing members and ministries, become one bread (loaf). 1 Cor. 10:17.

No truth is in itself a separate entity, but all truths are integral parts of one glorious whole, emanating from and vanishing into Him who fills the universe with Himself. As in the days of the Caesars all roads led to Rome, so all truth both flows from and leads to our wondrous Lord and Christ and through Him to our gracious heavenly Father.

May these somewhat diverse chapters lead us only to Him, who is the source of all truth.

The Author.

DIVINE REVELATION

As this age of grace moves towards it inevitable close and the kingdom of God draws near, the diverging paths of the carnal mind and the spiritual mind become ever more distant the one from the other. As the tides of the old age ebb away and the selling surges of the new age roll in from the ocean of God, the natural mind becomes less and less capable of comprehending any of the things of the Spirit. Centuries ago the apostle Paul wrote: "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." 1 Cor. 2:14. Whenever, therefore, natural men with natural minds endeavor to investigate the things of God, we should know at once that all such investigations are doomed to end in error, false conclusions and utter failure.

We live in an hour when the natural man with his human mind vainly imagines he can understand anything and everything. He supposes that a mind capable of trips into the stratosphere and journeys to the planets is capable also of comprehending the things of God. Be assured, however, that just as blind men are completely incapable of seeing the marvels of the natural creation all about them, so the natural man, however learned he may be, is completely incapable of comprehending the depths of the things of God. A deaf man may sit and watch the great symphony, but not one sound of the music thrills his ear. Indeed, the motions of the conductor and the obedience of the players may seem meaningless, boresome, amusing, or even stupid to him. But, should his ears be opened what a change there would be! Oh that men would cease from their striving to understand spiritual things with natural minds!
Of our natural understanding it was written: "Eye hath not seen, nor ear hard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him. But God hath revealed them unto us by His Spirit; for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God." 1 Cor. 2:9-10. Who is it that knows the things of man save the spirit of man? And who is it that knows the things of God save the Spirit of God?

Our Lord Jesus Christ taught Nicodemus that two distinct rearms exist all about us, one belonging to and confined by the flesh and the other belonging to the boundless realm of the spirit. The realm of the flesh is the earthly realm. It is of the earth earthly. It is the realm of the physical incapable of anything beyond the sphere of the five senses. Those who dwell in the realm of the five senses are never able to partake of anything but death. Their eyes are not filled with seeing. Their ears are never filled with hearing. The sweet perfumes of earth must be smelled and re-smelled. Our taste, like the fire, is never satisfied. Every device in our day and every permissiveness is used to cater to the sense of feeling, yet it is never full, but always empty. Because all these things belong to the realm of the flesh and consequently to the realm of death, they are born only to die. The natural realm is hermetically sealed off from the spiritual and can never by its striving reach the spiritual realm. It must be lifted from above, born from above. Just as it is impossible for a stone by infinite striving to become a plant, or for a plant by taking thought to become flesh and blood, so it is impossible for the natural man by any means of his own to enter the realm of the spirit. How vain are the hours of "taking thought"! How useless is penance or self-righteousness! Vain are all works and righteousnesses because man, born of woman, is hermetically sealed in the realm of the flesh and no striving of any sort can make him a citizen of the heavenly realm.

Jesus, who knew this truth better than any of us, directed the mind of the inquiring Nicodemus to the eternal fact that two distinct realms exist, the one of the flesh and natural, the other of the spirit and the kingdom of God. Nicodemus recognized that Jesus was a great teacher, but his poor natural mind was incapable of rising any higher than to marvel at the miracles he saw performed on every hand. There are multiplied thousands of Christians just like that. They can recognize that some supernatural thing has occurred, but the mysteries of the kingdom are completely hidden to them. To explain to them the deep things of God is a waste of time, because their ears are incapable of hearing spiritual things. They have eyes, indeed, and good eyes at that, but they are not open to the realm of the spirit. They cannot understand the heavenly because they are living in the natural realm far below the realm of God.

It was not enough that Nicodemus could recognize a miracle when he saw it. Our Lord has ambitions for His beloved higher far than that. Therefore Jesus told him the secret that would open his spiritual eyes and his spiritual understanding to see and comprehend the things that belonged to the kingdom of God. "Ye must be born again," He told him. We must be born from above. Our spirits must receive light and life and understanding from God. Then and only then will we be able to see the kingdom of God. I am afraid many, if not all, of us hold twisted and oblique ideas concerning the new birth. We have lowered it to the realm of an evangelistic process, accomplished at a time when people walk to an altar and confess their sins to God. It is more than that, much more, and at the risk of much misunderstanding I would be inclined to say that we are born again and again to realm after realm in God as we are changed from glory to glory and as we proceed from light to light throughout our Christian lives. Paul, who was caught up into the third heaven, never attempted to tell us about it, because he knew it was beyond our realm.

Some years ago I was traveling in the state of Georgia. Some well-meaning Christians had erected a sign by the highway, which read: "Except a man be born again, he cannot go to heaven." Well, what they said is almost certainly the universal opinion among Christians, but, really now, it is not what Jesus said, is it? He said, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." He did not mention heaven. One of the sorrows of my life has been the pitiful discovery that very few Christians every go beyond the ABC's of the things of God, and what has been more startling still is the discovery that tens of thousands who have once received the baptism of the Holy Spirit are as blind as they can be to the great eternal purposes of God. To multitudes of Christians the cross is only historic. Their Christ has become a little church Christ, all wrapped up in the swaddling clothes of creeds, ethics, doctrines, and systems. The purpose of God to them consists of trying to save as many as possible from a raging inferno which somehow got out of God's control and into which all will fall who have not seen things their narrow way. What they need is a birth from above that will unfold to their hearts the limitless lengths, the boundless breadths, the deepest depths, and the heavenly heights of the wisdom, the love, and the knowledge abounding in the purpose of the Lord.

The great audience at Athens listened patiently to Paul's sermon about the unknown God, Acts 17:22-34, but the moment he mentioned the resurrection, they mocked. The natural mind cannot understand the words of Jesus, "Except ye eat My flesh and drink My blood, ye have no life in you." The unregenerate preacher flounders through his human interpretation, but only the spirit that is born from above can fathom its depths. The Christians of our day have their heads stuffed with church tradition. Tradition has become a false bible to millions who hold it in such reverence that even scripture itself is made to conform to their tradition. They willingly wrest the Bible into any shape to make it conform to their creeds and substantiate their doctrines. Like the Pharisees of old they make the word of God of none effect by their traditions.

If I say that Sunday Schools are nowhere found in scripture and that such a procedure was unknown in Bible times, I will make enemies for myself at once. Christians by the countless thousands will spring to the defense of this unscriptural tradition. Yet you can search both New Testament and Old Testament and you will never find a hint of one anywhere. Should I say that Bible Schools were never known in New Testament times nor ordained of God in Old Testament times, some will surely say I am mad. But can you point to one man any dispensation who ever entered God's ministry from such an unscriptural source? True ministries are made when men hear from God as did Gideon, Moses, or a hundred others. They were never made by studying homiletics, or the doctrines of the denomination, or the arts of the precentor. No man can speak with greater authority on this than I, for as Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, so am I learned, and that by experience, in all the ramifications of Babylon. There is scarcely a dungeon in its prison house where I was not incarcerated. If you want to know the depths of Satan, you will find it in the Babylon system. Nothing can be more blinding to the sight, nothing more dulling to the ears, nothing more numbing to the senses than the sectarian systems of Babylon with all her human tradition. This "foolish woman is clamorous. She is simple and knoweth nothing. She sitteth at the door of her house, on a seat in the high places of the city to call passengers who go right on their ways. Whoso is simple let him turn in hither; and, as for him that wanteth understanding, she saith to him, Stolen waters are sweet, and bread eaten in secret is pleasant. But he knoweth not that the dead are there; and that her guests are in the depths of hell." Prov. 9: 13-18.

From which seminary did Abraham graduate? Where did Enoch learn the truth, "Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousands of His saints?" Who taught Moses that "in the beginning God created the heaven and the earth?" Did not the Egyptians, in whose wisdom he was learned, teach him that the earth was flat and stood upon four pillars, and that man came from a grub that wallowed in the delta of the Nile? What college taught Daniel the course of the ages? How did he know that in our day "many would run to and fro and knowledge would increase?" What school of the prophets taught Isaiah to say, "Behold, a virgin shall conceive and bear a Son, and ye shall call His name Immanuel?" Is it not true that the astonishing thing about the twelve apostles was that they were ignorant and unlearned men? Yet the thing that staggered the minds of the learned and the ignorant alike, forcing them to listen to and take note of them, was that they had been with Jesus. If there is one exception to this rule, it must have been the learned apostle Paul, who was a Pharisee of the strictest sect, brought up at the feet of the educator Gamaliel. As far as the Jew's religion was concerned, he had it all - circumcised the eighth day, of the stock of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, an Hebrew of the Hebrews, touching the law, a Pharisee, concerning zeal, persecuting the church, and touching the righteousness of the law, blameless. Phil. 3:5,6. But see what he did with all this theology when the revelation of Christ shone into his soul, when God drew back the curtain of the flesh and broke down the barriers of tradition that he might see beyond the teachings of carnal men with carnal minds to be born anew into a higher realm where the invisible things of Him are clearly seen.

It was after this that he wrote, "But when it pleased God, who separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by His grace, to reveal His Son in me... immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood." Gal. 1: 15-16. It was after God's Son was revealed to him that he said of all his previous learning and all his exactness under the law, "What things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ; yea, doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ, and be found in Him, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith: that I may know Him, and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings being made conformable unto His death; if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead." Phil 3:7-11.

When Paul received his revelation, he called his former tradition "the Jew's religion," Gal. 1:14, and that is just what it was. So also it is true that church tradition is only a religion. It is not Christianity.

Is it not true that Martin Luther, learned in all the ritual and ceremony of Rome, abandoned it all and cast it away as filthy rags when the Holy Spirit shone the heavenly light upon these sacred words: "The just shall live by faith." Being thus born of the Spirit, he saw beyond the monotonous drone of ritual and ceremony into the glorious freedom of God's sons. Limitless realms, hitherto invisible, were opened wide to his spiritual eyes.

His spirit that had known naught but the wearisome drudgery and bondage of sectarian tradition, which never in a thousand worlds could offer peace, now beheld with open vision the glories of the kingdom of God, limitless as space and boundless as the trackless universe. Emerson wrote these beautiful words so profoundly true to those who walk in the light and revelation of our blessed Lord: "Our eyes are holden that we cannot see the things that stare us in the face until the hour arrives when the mind is ripened. Then we behold them, and the time when we saw them not is like a dream." That, my friends, is really what revelation is. It is when Jesus Christ, the Son of God, takes the things of God and shows them unto us.

The harlot systems who eat their own bread and wear their own apparel, yet insist upon being called by Christ's name to take away their reproach, talk in circles all around truth, but never understand it. They speak of the new birth, but never enter its precincts. They theorize about the baptism of the Holy Spirit, but never receive the Spirit. They talk of the blood, but never feel its cleansing power. They preach the kingdom of God, but its king they do not know. They talk of sonship, but the Spirit of God's Son is not in them. Christ, who formed the universe and by whom all things consist, is reduced by them to a little church Christ, a sort of a doll in a manger, who Himself would fade away and be forgotten if we did not do our best to keep His tradition alive. Christ to them has become historic. How weary I am of that thing!

Every year I grow more weary of Christmas, of Good Fridays and Easters. I know Christ was born in a manger. My soul blesses the message of Calvary and the limitless lengths and depths, breadths and heights of God's wisdom and love vouchsafed for us there! My soul thrills that He rose again! But, oh, how much people miss when they dwell in history! Wonderful was the birth in the stable at Bethlehem, but more wonderful by far the day when Christ was born into the heart of this sinful man. Marvelous is the story of Calvary, but more marvelous still to know that, when He died, I died with Him. When He lay in the grave, I lay in the grave with Him. When He rose from the dead, I rose from the dead in Him. When He ascended to heaven, I ascended to heaven in Him. When He was seated at God's right hand, I sat in heavenly places in Him. When He comes again, I will come both in Him and with Him, and when He reigns, I will reign with Him. Marvelous beyond compare is the grace of God that says to you and to me, "Now ye are the body of Christ and members in particular." What, brother Paul? What was that you said? That I am a member of Christ even as my hand is a member of my body, or my eye or ear or nose is a member of my body? Yes, that is what he said. And Jesus above all others knew that we, His heaven-born sons, are the completeness of Him who everywhere fills the universe with Himself. It was Jesus Himself who prayed to His Father, "That they all may be one; as Thou, Father, art in Me, and I in Thee, that they may be one in Us." John 17:21.

For centuries the nominal church has read the sublime words of our Lord, "In My Father's house are many mansions", without the spirit of revelation ever making known to their hearts that the many-mansioned house which God is building is indeed the mystical body of Jesus Christ, the fullness and completeness of Christ. "Ye are God's building," said Paul. "Ye are God's husbandry." "You are therefore no longer mere foreigners or persons excluded from civil rights. On the contrary, you share citizenship with the saints and are members of His family. You are a building which has been reared on the foundation of the apostles and prophets, the cornerstone being Jesus Christ Himself, in union with whom the whole fabric, truly bonded together, is rising so as to form a holy sanctuary in the Lord: in whom you also are being built up together to become a fixed abode for God through the Spirit." Eph. 2:19-21 (Weymouth).

Listen to the prayer of the apostle Paul as he prayed that the Spirit of wisdom and revelation would fill the minds of the saints of God. Well he knew the dullness of the human heart and well he understood that without the spirit of revelation no man could even begin to see the limitless glory and wonder of God's purpose for the saints, the elect of God and members of Christ's body. This is his prayer: "I always beseech the God of our Lord Jesus Christ - the Father most glorious - to give you a spirit of wisdom and of insight into mysteries through knowledge of Him, the eyes of your heart being enlightened so that you may know what is the hope which His call to you inspires, what the wealth of the glory of His inheritance in the saints, and what the transcendent greatness of His power in us believers as seen in the working of His infinite might when He displayed it in Christ by raising Him from the dead, and seating Him at His own right hand in the heavenly realms, high above all other government and authority and power and dominion, and every title of sovereignty used either in this age or in the age to come. God has put all things under His feet, and has appointed Him universal and supreme head of the church, which is His body, the completeness of Him who everywhere fills the universe with Himself." Eph. 1:17-23. (Weymouth). Is that not a staggering, awe-inspiring marvel of spiritual revelation? Not only that we are "complete in Him", but that we are the "completeness of Him" who everywhere fills the universe with Himself! It is when by the spirit of revelation we grasp these inscrutable wonders that we are changed by His Spirit from glory to glory, and we are born anew to walk the elysian fields of revelation and understanding in the precious knowledge of our wonderful Lord.

"Whom do men say that I am?" Jesus asked His disciples, and the reply He got was typical of the understanding of the natural mind, for it can never rise higher than the realm upon which it now is. Naught but the revealing light of revelation can draw back the curtain and let the wonder of truth shine through. Many were the opinions of natural men with natural minds, but all of them were wrong, because the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; neither can he know them, for they are spiritually discerned. "Some say you are Elijah," they replied. "Others that you are John the Baptist. Others again say you are Jeremias, or one of the prophets risen again." "But whom do you say that I am?" the Lord enquired. And Peter with a confidence born of the glory light of revelation replied, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Then said Jesus, as if to add another blessedness to His beatitudes, "Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona, for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but My Father which is in heaven." Then our Lord open the gates of revelation to Peter concerning himself, saying, "And I say unto thee that thou art Peter, and upon this rock will I build my church." Matt 16:13-18.

There has always been something wrong with the way men have interpreted that verse of scripture. Peter is not and never was the foundation of the church, "for other foundation can no man lay than that which is laid, which is Jesus Christ." 1 Cor. 3:11. No man can see that foundation except by revelation from on high; neither can he build upon it nor discern that, which is being built. Because there is no spirit of revelation among Christians, they have in the blindness of their minds looked upon the denominational system and called it the church, and, worse still, they have broken even that wretched thing into a thousand pieces and called them the churches. Test it for yourself, my friend. You will not talk to any professing Christian very long before he will ask, "To what church do you belong?" And, when you give your answer and name your denomination, you identify yourself, not as a member of the mystical body of Christ, the habitation of God through the Spirit, but as a member of "that shameful thing", Jer. 11:13, the Babylon system of harlot sects, who eat their own bread and wear their own apparel, but call themselves Christian to take away their reproach. My answer to those who would enquire of me as to which church I belong is simply this: "I did not know there was more than one church." It is said that when St. Lucien was asked by his persecutors, "Of what country art thou?" he replied, "I am a Christian." "Of what family?" "I am a Christian." "What is your occupation?" "I am a Christian." To Lucien Christ was all, whether of citizenship, occupation, or family; and this, my friend, will be true of you when you see the truth as God reveals it.

Christ, then, is a revelation, and without a birth from above no man can see Him as He is. The body of Christ is also a revelation from above without which no man can perceive that we are the completeness of Him who everywhere fills the universe with Himself. The church, the ecclesia of God, is a revelation from above without which the church will be to you nothing more than a conglomeration of man-made organizations, sects, and denominations. But, when God by the Spirit reveals His church to you, your eyes will behold a mystical temple rising from the lowly earth to the vaulted heavens, built of stones, indeed, but every one a living stone fashioned without hands to form a living habitation for God through the Spirit. How unutterably small do these organizations of man appear in the light of such heavenly glory! They are chaff that the wind will drive away. Do not boast to me, much less to God, that your organization is growing faster than all the others, as though God cared for that, for what will it profit to grow to the skies only to be cast down and driven away as chaff in the wind of His anger?

People are always referring to the divisions in the church. You are wrong and misinformed, my friend. There are no divisions in the church and there never have been any; and, lest anyone think their eyes deceived them, I shall repeat it. There are no divisions in the church and there never have been any. "But," you object, "look at them all about you! There are almost a thousand denominations." No, my friend, you are looking at the wrong thing. Those denominations are not the church; they are Babylon. Their speech and language is as confused as were the people at Babel. When the angel revealed Babylon to John, he saw on the woman's forehead these words: MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT, MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH. Rev. 17:5. Babylon, too, is a mystery, a very great mystery. I am inclined to think that one of the greatest mysteries about her is her ability to deceive all nations, Rev. 18:23, and make the millions of earth believe that she who is robed in purple and scarlet, she who is drunken with the blood of saints and the martyrs of Jesus, she who has a whore's forehead, is in truth the bride of Christ, the chosen of God. This is without doubt a great mystery. It is a mystery that has deceived us all at one time or another, Mystery Babylon the great, the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth, posing as the spotless bride of Christ.

There is another mystery, a sacred mystery. It is the mystery of the body of Christ, which for centuries slowly but surely has been rising in the Spirit, founded upon the Rock of Ages. God with infinite care and patience has been choosing its members one by one, putting His Spirit within them, assigning their places to them. By spiritual joints and bands and that which every joint supplieth He has been forming them into one body of sons and, when all is complete and He draws back the shrouds, all creation will behold the wonderful sight of the sons of God, the mystical body in the image of Jesus Christ. Even now all creation stands on tiptoe, waiting to behold the wonderful glory of the sons of God, of whom Jesus is the firstborn. Then shall the triumphant shout fill the heavens and echo among the everlasting hills, "Behold, I and the sons which God has given Me!"

Sonship, too, is a revelation. I do not belittle or depreciate the value of spiritual gifts, but it is pitiful to find little groups of people everywhere wasting their time playing with spiritual gifts. They seem to vainly imagine that spiritual gifts qualify them for sonship. To every man who believes on Christ the door is open that he might become a fully matured son of God. The scripture has said, "As many as received Him to them gave He power to become sons of God; even to them that believe on His name: Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." John 1:12. Sonship does not consist of mighty works or the operation of great gifts. You can have them all and still be nothing. Paul told us this when he said, "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not love, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not love, it profiteth me nothing" 1 Cor. 13:1-3. If God has granted you a spiritual gift, you may bless Him for that, but never allow yourself to think for even a moment that great meetings, many conversions, miracles, healings, or supernatural displays of any kind whatsoever are evidence of sonship, because they certainly are not. There is not one iota of evidence in all Holy Scripture that would lead us to believe these are any sign of sonship. Surely the words of Jesus in Matt. 7:22 should lay that thought in the tomb forever. "Many will say to Me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in Thy name? and in Thy name have cast out devils? and in Thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from Me, ye that work iniquity."

There is a spirit that goes with sonship. It is the spirit of His Son. Paul calls it the spirit of adoption (sonship). Words fail to unfold its mystery because it is divine. It is beyond human explanation and can be understood only by those whose hearts throb in unison with Jesus Christ, God's first-begotten Son. No teaching can disclose the sacred blessedness of that man whose heart can say, "God is my Father and I am His son!"

"Abba Father," the spirit of sonship cries!
Tis deep calling unto deep.
Far, far beyond the scope of natural man lies
The sons' great eternal realm.
Naught but the spirit of sonship
Can take the veil away.
Naught but deep calling unto deep
Will bring in God's new day.
Night and day must the cry go forth
From deep down within,
Cleansing, purifying, changing,
Till I am fashioned just like Him.
Then in all His glorious fullness I shall come.
Deep will call to deep,
"Abba Father, I am Thy son!
FATHER! I am Thy Son!"

Mrs. Frances Quantz.

There is no possible way of measuring the vastness of God's plan or of understanding all that His infinite purposes embrace, but the honest searcher must soon conclude that no purpose is dearer to the heart of God than sonship. In sonship lies the hope of all creation. This is the hope of the Creator and this is the hope of creation as well. Built into the innermost being of all created things, whether animate or inanimate, there is a secret knowledge that some day, sometime, somewhere, all will be restored when the sons of God, all in the likeness of their elder brother, deliver creation from its thralldom and decay into the glorious freedom of the sons of God.

Does it not reveal what lay in the heart of God that He should say, "Let Us make man in Our image and after Our likeness," and, having so said, He brought forth a Son of God? Luke 3:38. You may not believe it now, but if like the blind man you will pray, "Lord, that I might receive my sight," then God will open your understanding and touch your brow with the finger of revelation. Then will the eyes of your understanding be enlightened and you will know that all God purposed in the beginning will be accomplished just as He planned. Your eyes will see that the fall of man was not a tragedy; neither was it a victory for the devil nor a momentary triumph on his part. The fall of man and the closing of the gates of Eden were all part of an eternal purpose, which to this hour only the Father fully understands. Trials would be of no value at all if we understood them at their beginning. It is of faith that it might be by grace. Rom. 4:16. Testing would not be testing if we knew the outcome from the start. There would be no room for trust or faith if we knew the end from the beginning. Happy is the man who can walk the weary path of fiery trial with faith in his heart that, when the trial is over, he will be more in the likeness of God's Son than at the beginning. Blessed is the man who endures temptation, knowing that it is of the Lord, assured in himself that the trial of his faith worketh patience and patience, having her perfect work, makes him both perfect and entire, wanting nothing. Jas. 1:4.

How miserable is the Christian who gropes along through life devoid of understanding, blaming the devil for every trial, temptation, and affliction. In sickness he blames the devil. In loss he blames the devil. When temptation and trial come, he blames the devil. Wake up, O man! Look beyond the shadows and you will see the Lord. The eyes of your understanding will be opened to see that for sons of God great tribulation is a must, that patience must have her perfect work, that we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God. How harmful are those sermons by which men are taught that God is always in the sunshine, the affluence, the merry, and the bright! Nonsense, man! God has always perfected men through much affliction. The moment you understand this, you will say with Paul, "Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me. Therefore I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christ's sake: for when I am weak, then am I strong." 2 Cor. 12:9-10. We do well to sing, "So I'll cherish the old rugged cross," but we do wrong to flinch the moment it is placed upon our shoulders, blaming the devil for it and trying our best to get rid of it. The fault with multitudes of God's people is that to them the cross has become historic; it is never experimental. It is to be shunned rather than cherished and embraced, yet by its power still the world is crucified unto me and I unto the world.

What does it mean to you, my brother, when you hear God say, "Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth and scourgeth every son whom He receiveth"? Is chastening from such a hand of love to be attributed to the devil, or is it rather the kindly hand of the Father bringing a son to perfection? Of Jesus our Lord it is written, "Though
He were a Son, yet learned He obedience by the things which He suffered: and being made perfect, He became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey Him." Heb. 5:8-9. "It became Him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons to glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings." Heb. 2:10. Therefore, "consider Him that endured such contradiction of sinners against Himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds. Ye have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sin." Heb. 12:3-4. "Ye have forgotten the exhortation which speaketh unto you as unto children (sons), My son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of Him." Heb. 12:5.

Instead of blaming Satan for your affictions and trials, your temptations and reverses, look through the storm and you will see the hand of God. Look to Him for wisdom, and of His great understanding He will teach you. When you lay your head on a pillow of stone in the night of your despondency, your dream will disclose God at the top of the ladder and you will awake in the morning with these words on your lips: "Surely God is in this place and I knew it not."

It will be a glad day for you when your prayers cease to be demands, when you stop telling God what He must do for you, for your children, for your relations, for the heathen, the church, and a thousand other paltry human desires. It will be a great day, I say, when your voice falls silent to these vain requests and instead from the depths of your spirit you whisper, "Speak, Lord, for Thy servant heareth. Lord, open mine eyes that I may behold Thy eternal purpose and my place in Thy plan. Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" Much of the praying done by Christians is utterly useless. Has God become senile that you must remind Him? Is He deaf that He cannot hear? Has He forgotten that which was committed to Him? What makes you think that you and your children and your relations must at all cost be spared from any cross or suffering? Better far it would be to earnestly enquire of His wisdom that you might understand the mysterious way His wonders are performed. Could Jacob have saved his son Joseph from slavery in Egypt, he would certainly have done so, but what harm and eternal loss there would have been. "All these things are against me," cried the despondent old man, but he knew not that God was in the whole scheme nor that behind all lay the mystery of His eternal purpose.

In the depths of my heart I believe that the long, long night of waiting is almost at an end. God's family of sons, chosen in Christ before the foundation of the ages, has almost filled up its sum. The feet members of the body of Christ are being shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace. The gospel of peace is for the kingdom age. It will be the kingdom gospel. The sons of God will proclaim it. So bright will be the light of their shining that all men shall know God from the least to the greatest. The kingdom will be the age of the bridegroom, the dispensation when Jesus will be the head and the sons His many-membered body. This will not be the body of the bride, but the body of the bridegroom, Christ Jesus with His many brethren. Rom. 8:29. For one thousand years shall they reign with Him in His throne, bringing deliverance and universal peace to all creation.

In those blessed days shall the bride, our lovely Eve, be brought to the glory of her female perfection and it shall come to pass in the end of those days of blessed millennial glory that the heavens will open and from its glory will descend the holy city, the new Jerusalem, the bride of Christ, prepared and adorned for her husband, the many-membered body of Christ. Upon her lovely head shall rest the glory of God, and her light shall be like unto a stone most precious, even like a jasper stone clear as crystal. Here at the end of the kingdom age the marriage of the Lamb takes place, for man has returned to God, male and female, in one "image of God". Then shall the new temple appear, for the Lord God almighty and the Lamb are the temple thereof. Rev. 21:22. The marriage of the Lamb of God to His bride will signal the beginning of the age of the ages, the dispensation of the fullness of times when God shall gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven and which are in earth, even in Him. Eph. 1:10. There shall be no more male or female, but "man in God's image" as it was in the beginning. There will be no more Adam and Eve, but they two shall be perfect one, though a multitude that no man can number. Man in God's image, the child of omnipotence, a pure virgin, after the form of the Eternal, a fountain of meekness and love flowing as living water from the heart of the Eternal, filled with chastity, modesty, purity, and wisdom — man at last and forever in the image of God.

When our Lord Jesus Christ unfolded the truth concerning the bread of life as related in the sixth chapter of John's gospel, He found the people willing to follow Him to a certain point, but, when He told them that He, the Son of God, was the bread of God that came down from heaven, immediately they were greatly offended. And when He said, "Except ye eat My flesh and drink My blood ye have no life in you," many of His disciples said, "This is a hard saying; who can hear it?" Jesus, seeing their offence and understanding the dullness of the natural mind, left us this truth: "It is the spirit that quickeneth (makes alive); the flesh profiteth nothing; the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." Verse 63. But from that time many of His disciples went back, and walked no more with Him.

Natural men with natural minds can never see nor comprehend the realm that lies just above them. But I am sure that, if any man will bow his heart in humility before God, confessing the limitations of his natural mind and the blindness of his heart, if he will ask the Lord to open his eyes and give him understanding, then, before many days have gone by, a spiritual light will flood his mind with the truth he needed to know. Then he will see what he had not seen and he will know the Spirit has taught him that which man could not teach. Christian people have put far, far too much faith in men, far too much confidence in preachers and teachers. They seem to have forgotten the admonition of John who warned the people against the seducers of every age. "These things," said he, "have I written unto you concerning them that seduce you. But the anointing which ye have received of Him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you: but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it (the anointing) hath taught you, ye shall abide in Him." I Jno. 2:26,27. The anointing is the Holy Spirit, who proceeds from the Father. This is the Spirit of Christ, who filled the waiting souls at Pentecost and has come to abide in the hearts of all who believe. It is the work of the Holy Spirit in this age to lead us into all truth. You have surely noticed that John wrote, "The anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth." Not only does the anointing teach us truth, but the anointing is truth. Our minds may be confused with all manner of nonsense and misconceptions from men who claim to be teachers, but when the Spirit teaches us, the Spirit is truth. The truth is teaching us the truth.

So important was it that we should receive the Spirit and honor Him as our instructor that Jesus left us this parting message: "I will pray the Father and He shall give you another comforter, that He may abide with you forever; even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth Him not, neither knoweth Him: But ye know Him; for He dwelleth with you, and shall be in you ... At that day ye shall know that I am in My Father, and ye in Me, and I in you." John 14:16-17,20. The method of instruction used by the indwelling Holy Spirit has been clearly laid down by Jesus Christ Himself. "I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now. Howbeit, when He, the Spirit of truth, is come, He will guide you into all truth: for He shall not speak of Himself; but whatsoever He shall hear, that shall He speak: and He will show you things to come. He shall glorify Me: for He shall receive of mine, and shall show it unto you." John 16:12-14.

The Holy Spirit never speaks of Himself, but He always glorified Christ. What He hears of the Father (verse 13) He shows to us. And if we will live in contact and harmony with Him, He will instruct us concerning things to come. Whenever, therefore, we see a man rising up into prominence and receiving the ovations of the people, we may readily know that, regardless of what he has to say, Christ is not being glorified, for in whomsoever the Holy Spirit is Lord, Christ is lifted up and glorified in the hearts of the people so that He alone is seen, and seen as God's only begotten Son.

"All things that the Father hath are mine; therefore said I, that He (the Spirit) shall take of mine and shall show it unto you." Verse 15. This is the spirit of revelation. It is the Holy Spirit of God, the blessed Paraclete, the Comforter, the Advocate, who dwells in us. Nothing is unknown to Him, for He is omniscient. To those who seek His wisdom He takes the things of God and shows them unto them. During my life many precious people have asked me questions I could not answer, but there is nothing that He does not know nor anything He cannot teach. He even extends His blessing to the world at large, for when He has come, "He will reprove the world of sin and of righteousness and of judgment: of sin because they believe not on Me, of righteousness, because I go to My Father, and of judgment because the prince of this world is judged." John 16:8-11.

In the last days knowledge shall increase. Dan. 12:4. In the past ten years we have seen all the accumulated knowledge since Adam doubled, and in the next five years it will probably double again. But not in the world alone shall knowledge increase, for there is a company of people rising in the likeness of Christ.

They are entering beyond the veil of the flesh into a realm where man with his complicated rockets and computers cannot enter. It is the realm where God dwells in the Spirit, a realm closed to natural minds as surely as the animal world is closed to the mineral world. It is in this realm that His Spirit calls us to dwell. Here we must live and move and have our being.
Long ago in Israel the Syrian armies had surrounded the little town of Dothan. In their hands were orders to capture Elisha the prophet of God who had consistently revealed Syria's plans to the king of Israel. When the servant of the prophet saw the city surrounded by chariots and horsemen, he cried to Elisha, saying, "Alas, my master, what shall we do?" And Elisha prayed and said, "Lord, I pray Thee, open his eyes that he may see. And the Lord opened the eyes of the young man; and he saw, and behold, the mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha." Kings 6.

The continual burden of my heart, dear reader, is this: Cease from thy dependence upon the wisdom of man. Say to thy Father in heaven, "Open my eyes, and anoint my understanding that I may behold Thy glory, for by beholding I shall be changed into Thy likeness."

CHAPTER TWO
YE SEE YOUR CALLING

Our spiritual progress is often painfully slow. What Christian has not longed for greater spiritual growth, divine maturity, and vibrant life in Jesus Christ? There is not a healthy Christian anywhere who does not long to be delivered from this present evil world and from the lusts that bar our progress to the fullness of life and the foul disease which still sickens the body, turning strength into weakness, vitality into apathy, and vigor into exhaustion and the rottenness of our bones!

When men and women are sick in body or in mind, there must be some simple underlying cause for their illness, and, if that cause can be discovered and the misadventure corrected, health and life will flow into the body as waters flow when an obstruction is removed. Sit for an hour with your right leg crossed over your left knee and your foot will possibly go to sleep. You need not call the doctor to cure the trouble. All you do is uncross your legs and the restricted blood, freely flowing through the veins, will immediately restore it to life. Tie a tourniquet around your wrist and your hand will go numb; remove it, and life is restored. Leave it there too long, and the hand will die. Remove the cause of sickness and the body is well. Treat the symptoms and the malady remains. Countless thousands are at this minute facing a painful death from lung cancer because they insist on filling their lungs with tobacco smoke. They need neither medicine nor operation; all they need to do is discard the unholy cause of their illness. Long centuries ago the glorious Lord gave His people Israel a set of physical health rules, and with them He also gave a set of spiritual laws, telling them plainly that, if they observed those things, they would endure none of the diseases of the Egyptians. Deut. 7:15. So true and faithful was His word that King David, exulting later in the wonder of God's faithfulness, said, "He brought them forth also with silver and gold: and there was not one feeble person among their tribes." Psa. 105:37. When our minds grasp the significant fact that two million, five hundred thousand men, women and children wandered in that burning wilderness for forty years without a doctor, a hospital, an ambulance, a stretcher, a pharmacy, an aspirin, or even a crutch, then we can better understand how meaningful is obedience and faithfulness to God's command, and how necessary it is to discover the root of all our trouble and remove it out of the way as a man would dig up and remove from his pathway a stumbling stone that often had hurt his feet and distressed him by many a fall.

It is not our purpose here to deal with physical diseases or divine healing. Neither do I wish to speak of the many evils that continually beset Christian men and women, but if by God's grace He will open our eyes that we may see the path of life while our spiritual minds grasp His eternal purpose, then all spiritual apathy will vanish away, and our growth in Christ, our progress in wisdom and understanding, will be multiplied exceedingly, and, beholding Him, we shall be changed into His likeness.

There is nothing worse in life than aimlessness, nothing so dreary as purposelessness. Many years ago, during the great depression, a brother wrote me a letter. Speaking of the difficulties that beset him, half in jest but with evident sincerity he made this unforgettable statement: "I saw wood to eat, and I eat to saw wood - each that I might do the other!" Would you not think that a man would soon lose his ambition if he knew his whole life was condemned to such a mundane existence as that? Purposelessness will soon destroy a man and reduce him to something less than a cog in a wheel, as it has been so wisely written: "Where there is no vision the people perish."
And now I will venture to say that stagnation and death have overtaken millions of Christians because, whether they realize it or not, their very existence as children of God has become purposeless to them. It is certainly true that the preachers continually buoy them up by placing before their flagging minds the hope of a blissful heaven and, failing that, the torment of a blistering hell, but what purpose would there be in these if the heaven they preach is naught but a resting place and the hell they declare is but a place of torment? To me it is no great wonder that Christians themselves become apathetic and the world is full of backsliders and unbelievers. I speak with great respect and godly fear when I say that we must rid ourselves of all these childish dreams that portray the redeemed in heaven with nothing to do forever but laze about in a palace and shout hallelujah while unbelievers in hell have nothing to do but blaspheme and suffer torment eternally. The God I know to be infinite in wisdom, full of compassion, tempered with loving kindness and tender mercy, and above all else abounding in purpose, is only dishonored and slighted by such childish doctrines as these. "He will not always chide; neither will He keep His anger forever."

Lest there be many who would imagine me to be cynical, we will leave the negative way of looking at things while together we go to explore the ineffable glory of the distant hills. "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help," sang the sweet minstrel of Israel, and it is only when we lift our eyes to those mighty mountain peaks of God's intention and purpose that our souls are thrilled with their unimaginable prospect, our spirits lay hold of the eternal promises and joyfully we strip off every weight that with patience, endurance, and faithfulness we may run the race that is set before us. Jesus Christ, the oldest and tallest brother in our family, is the author and finisher of that faith which turns our eyes to the "Mt. Everest" of our hope, toward which we run with patience, walk with faith, and, having done all His will, at times we simply stand, our loins girt about with truth, our lights burning, and our eyes beholding the beckoning peaks afar.

My fellow pilgrim, have you ever paused long enough from your activity to become gripped by the force and eternal significance of these four words: We are God's workmanship? Why don't you take off the rest of the hour, or perhaps the rest of the day, just to let the Holy Spirit fill your mind with the abounding significance and the everlasting importance of those four words? God's people read the Bible with less concern than they show when reading Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs.

They recite its supernal promises as flippantly as they would recite 'Mary had a Little Lamb', and so by memory devoid of thought or meditation we rhyme off such profound truth as this: "We are God's workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God has before ordained that we should walk in them." I make the following statement without fear, for I know I speak the truth. Grasp it, then, with all your soul and spirit and with the power of your godly mind, for to see the truth of my statement is to lay hold on eternal purpose and even life itself. God's most important work in the earth today is you. The important thing is not others, as the preachers are forever crying. The important thing in this age is the calling and perfection of you and me and all the elect who are to form His spiritual body. This is the work of God! We are God's workmanship, and during this age that master craftsman, the Almighty Lord Himself, full of wisdom and abounding in counsel and might, never lifts His eyes from His precious masterpiece to attend to anything else until that work is complete.

Listen now with infinite care to the plan He divulges to the faithful and believing soul. Give sincere and reverent audience to His words as the Holy Spirit unfolds for our learning just what the master workman is doing and why He is performing the task with such infinite care. Though all the prophets from the beginning of the world have spoken of the 'restitution of all things', Acts 3:21, there are special concentrations of the truth of restoration in various places of God's holy word. Without doubt Paul's epistle to the Ephesians is one of the most outstanding sources of revelation on this so great a truth. In it the apostle diligently applies his great knowledge and spiritual understanding of the mystery of God's will, Eph 1:9, first by showing us what the divine will is - "that in the dispensation of the fullness of times He might gather together in one all things in Christ", Eph. 1:10, and, secondly, by teaching us that, in order to carry out that irreversible intention, He has raised us up together and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus that in the ages to come He might show the exceeding riches of His grace in His kindness toward us through Christ Jesus. Eph 2:6-7. It is for this reason and for the accomplishing of this all encompassing restoration that God in His great wisdom is now raising up an elect and chosen people in the very image of Jesus Christ, that in the ages to come they might show the whole universe of God's creation the "exceeding riches of His grace." It is because of this universal intention that the almighty Lord is now in this age concentrating His infinite wisdom on the task of preparing chosen sons to carry out His purpose, and that we are called "God's workmanship."
With this knowledge in mind it is not difficult to see Paul's spiritual reasoning as he traces the progress of the elect from the time when they were dead in sins and full of the world's base cravings to repentance and faith and life in Christ until, seated with Him in glory and perfection, they shall demonstrate to both principalities and powers in the ages to come the exceeding riches of His grace. Thus the apostle declares: "To you also, who were dead through your offences and sins, which were once habitual to you while you walked in the ways of this world and obeyed the prince of the powers of the air, the spirits that are now at work in the hearts of the disobedient - to you God has given life. Among them we, too, once all passed our lives, governed by the inclinations of our lower nature, indulging the cravings of that nature, and were in our original state deserving of anger like all others. But God, being rich in mercy, because of the intense love which He bestowed on us, caused us, dead though we were through our offences, to live with Christ - it is by grace that you have been saved - raised up with Him from the dead, and enthroned us with Him in the heavenly realms as being in Christ Jesus, in order that, by His goodness to us in Christ Jesus, He might display in the ages to come the transcendent riches of His grace. It is by grace that you have been saved through faith; and that (faith) not of yourselves. It is God's gift, and not on the ground of merit - so that it may be impossible for any one to boast. For we are God's own handiwork, created in Christ Jesus for good works which He has predestined us to practice." Eph. 2:1-10. Weymouth's Translation.

The moment the Holy Spirit reveals to our hearts the infinite wisdom of God's eternal purpose and intention, then everything everywhere begins to fall into place and order from the fall of men and angels in the beginning to the restitution of all things in the end. "But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the firstfruits of them that slept. For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order: Christ the firstfruits; afterward they that are Christ's at His coming. Then cometh the end (of the resurrection) when He shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when He shall have put down all rule and all authority and power. For He must reign, till He hath put all enemies under His feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death. ... And when all things shall be subdued unto Him, then shall the Son also Himself be subject unto Him (the Father) that put all things under Him, that God may be all in all" 1 Cor. 15: 20-26, 28.

Such truth as this requires deep spiritual thought and meditation. Do not read it lightly and go away to forget it or you will be like a man beholding his image in a mirror, who goes away and forgets what manner of man he was! Let these truths sink down deep into your heart with much prayer, searching, and meditation, for it is no light thing that the God of all wisdom and understanding should have chosen you before the foundation of the world and sent His Son to redeem you that you might be raised from the mire of sin to sit with Him in His glorious throne, that in the ages to come the universe itself, together with myriads both of angels and of men, might see displayed in you the unsearchable riches of God's grace. That this is the teaching of Eph. 1:7-11 and 2:5-10 who on earth would dare deny?

Long ages ago the holy prophets, who every one spoke of the times of the restitution of all things and the grace that should come unto us, enquired and searched diligently "what, or what manner of time the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow. Unto whom it was revealed, that not unto themselves, but unto us they did minister the things, which are now reported unto you by them that have preached the gospel unto you with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven; which things the angels desire to look into." 1 Pet. 1:10-12. "Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall: For so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Wherefore I will not be negligent to put you always in remembrance of these things, though ye know them, and be established in the present truth." 2 Pet. 1:10-12.

"Ye see your calling, brethren," and, seeing it, we count all things but loss for the excellency of that knowledge. Once the vision of His intention dawns before our wondering eyes, all else becomes mere chaff that the wind drives away. Earth's possessions become a burden, money naught but a very temporary means of exchange, fame a thing to be scorned, praise a thing to pass unnoticed, pleasure a joy found only in doing God's will, and suffering naught but a means of grace. "Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord." 2 Cor.
7:1. It is my earnest prayer to the Father of all light that he will open "the eyes of your understanding, that you may know what is the hope of His calling, and what the riches of the glory of His inheritance in the saints, and what is the exceeding greatness of His power to us-ward who believe (toward us believers)." Eph. 1:18-19. It is no light thing, my brethren, that heaven's high and exalted throne should decree that man was to be made in God's image and be given dominion over beasts and fish and birds. By a declaration so seemingly small the Lord is proclaiming that man, when perfectly in God's image, will be given dominion over things in heaven, things in earth, and things under the earth, as Paul so wonderfully taught concerning God's first exalted and perfect Son: "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a name which is above every name: that at (in) the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth." Phil. 2:9-10. And, having uttered such incomparable truth, he made fervent plea to us that we, as redeemed men coming into "that same image," should work out our own salvation with fear and trembling, for he said, "It is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of His good pleasure," and that we should do all things without murmurings and disputings, that we may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God without rebuke in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom we shine as lights in the world. See Phil. 2:12-15.

A very wholesome fear possesses my heart, continually urging me to warn God's children that few - oh so pitifully few - Christians ever show that they are taking God's calling seriously or ever render anything more devout to Him than mere acquiescence and lip service. "For their sakes I sanctify Myself, that they might be sanctified through the truth" said Jesus. It is the truth that sanctifies and sets men apart unto God and it is the truth, coming from the heart and hand of the sanctified Christ, that sets men free from the absorbing, encroaching, time-consuming bondages of this deceptive age of make believe and unreality. My brethren, are you indulging in the ruinous error of making much of this present evil world? Are your labors spent in hope of laying up treasure on earth? Have you not heard that here moth and rust corrupt, and thieves - even thieves built into our financial system in the form of taxes and inflation - break through daily to steal? Do you set your heart on things! Things to see, things to taste and touch, things to feel? Do you know that all things are changing and passing away, as the poet wrote in plaintive words:

> Change and decay in all around I see!
> O Thou, who changeth not, abide with me.

It is perfectly true that that which changes and never remains the same is unreal rather than real, for today it is one thing and tomorrow it is something else, always fading, always degenerating, always passing away, and never remaining the same. Though we know all these things and nod our amens to what is said, still Christians, like their brethren in the world, are always busy here and there, doing this and that, paying court to all that belongs to the realm of the visible, never stopping to consider that only the things that are not seen are eternal.

Do not embrace the deception that you must be up and doing for God. That is a great deception. It is not found in the word of God, but is foisted upon gullible people by ambitious preachers, seeking to build up a kingdom for themselves. Only this week I was shocked into indignant speechlessness to hear of a preacher in Texas who had exhorted his radio audience, because of the shortness of the time and the urgency of his message, to give all that they possessed (to him, of course), even if it took the baby's milk. As a result of his covetous deception one brother had given $49,000, leaving himself and his family penniless. How great will be the judgment of such vile deceivers, and I shall not hesitate to say that the ministry of the Babylon system is full of these experts in cunning craftiness and sleight of men, who devour widow's houses and for a pretense make long prayers for the sick, or the unsaved, or anything else that will bring them an extra dollar. Cursed be their deception, for it is very great. Their sins have reached unto heaven and fearful will be their destruction from the presence of the Lord.

The false alarm has gone out over the world, and it always sounds so right, crying, "Others! Others! Others!" But many are going to say at last, "They made me the keeper of the vineyards; but mine own vineyard have I not kept." Songs of Solomon 1:6. "The pastors have become brutish, and have not sought the Lord: therefore they shall not prosper, and all their flocks shall be scattered." Jer. 10:21. "Many pastors have destroyed My vineyard, they have trodden My portion under foot, they have made My pleasant portion a desolate wilderness.
They have made it desolate, and being desolate it mourneth unto Me; the whole land is made desolate, because no man layeth it to heart." Jer. 12:10,11. Our best possible preparation to be a blessing to others is to make sure we have first kept our own vineyard and lived in personal communion with the Holy Spirit, experiencing in ourselves the things we teach. Does not the scripture plainly tell us that the husbandman that laboreth must first be partaker of the fruit? 2 Tim. 2:6,7.

'Thus saith the Lord, Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, neither let the mighty man glory in his might; let not the rich man glory in his riches: But let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth Me, that I am the Lord who exerciseth loving kindness, judgment, and righteousness in the earth: for in these things do I delight, saith the Lord." Jer. 9:23-24.

There is a truth stated by the apostle Paul in 1 Cor. 1:26 that should hold us well nigh spellbound when we grasp its meaning. The statement is very simple and, like so many great truths, it is easily passed by, going completely unnoticed. But you, O people of God, partakers of His high and holy calling and sharers together with Him of the sonship for which creation groans, should give continual meditation and consideration to these inspired words. Paul, having stated that Christ is both the wisdom and power of God, and that the foolishness of God is wiser than men and the weakness of God stronger than men, said, "Ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called." It is these words - "Ye see your calling, brethren" - that we wish to earnestly consider.

I am sure I speak the truth when I say that every man who sees and knows his calling by the Holy Spirit will bend every effort to conform to and prepare himself for that calling for which he was created and which was given him before the world began. He will willingly lend his ear to instruction and bend his heart to keen and earnest devotion that when at last his ministry is entrusted to him he will be both worthy and full of the wisdom and understanding of his heavenly calling. We may be well assured that our heavenly Father, infinite in wisdom and omnipotent in power, will fill the lives of the faithful who share His calling with every kind of instruction to prepare them for the kingdom call, which now we do but dimly see.

"Ye see your calling, brethren," and all who see it will embrace the cross of correction, of chastisement and suffering. They will with joy lay aside every hindering weight. They will strip for the struggle that they might run with patience and endurance the race that is set before them, not running merely, but running as he who expects to receive the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. "Know ye not that they that run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize"? So run, that ye may obtain. And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. Now they do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we an incorruptible. I therefore so run, not as uncertainly: so fight I, not as one that beateth the air, but I keep my body under, and bring it into subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway." 1 Cor. 9:24-27.

I am prone to believe that the greatest wisdom a child of God can possess is displayed in his eager submission to the instruction, the correction, and the disciplinary chastening of the Lord, "in all things approving ourselves as the ministers of God, in much patience, in afflictions, in necessities, in distresses, in stripes, in imprisonments, in tumults, in labors, in watchings, in fastings, by pureness, by knowledge, by longsuffering, by kindness, by the Holy Ghost, by love unfeigned, by the word of truth, by the power of God, by the armor of righteousness on the right hand and on the left, by honor and dishonor, by evil report and good report: as deceivers, and yet true; as unknown, and yet well known; as dying, and, behold, we live; as chastened, and not killed; as sorrowful, yet always rejoicing; as poor, yet making many rich; as having nothing, yet possessing all things." 2 Cor. 6:4-10. He, who in all these things can see his calling and live assured that each victory, each rebuke, every correction and chastening, every sorrow and joy are things devised by eternal wisdom working together for good to them that love God and are called according to His purpose, serves Christ, is acceptable with God and approved of men. Rom. 14:18.

"Ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty (after the flesh), not many noble (after the flesh) are called." Since this is undoubtedly true, we need not look to great men of this age and wise men after the corrupt wisdom of this age to be the ones who will share the government of the age to come. It remains, then, for us to see that "God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise (that is, God has chosen the things which the world calls foolish to confound the wise), and God hath chosen the weak things of the world (that is, the things that the world deems weak) to confound the things that are mighty; and the base things of the world, and the things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and the things which are not to bring to nought the things that are: that no flesh should glory in His presence." 1 Cor. 1:27-29.

Since, then, God has rejected the wisdom and power and honor of this world and its system and has chosen instead a people that the wisdom of the world considers foolish, dishonorable, stupid and weak, we should easily see that divine wisdom has chosen us, who for His name are so despised, that no flesh should glory in His presence. It is unto those who glory not in the wisdom and power of the world, but who glory in the wisdom and power of God and stand in Jesus Christ our Lord, that of God are made wisdom and righteousness, sanctification and redemption, according as it is written: He that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord. 1 Cor. 1:30-31.

The only thing we know for certain is Jesus Christ and Him crucified, buried, risen from the dead, ascended to heaven, and seated at the right hand of the Father that henceforth all principality and power, might and dominion, both in this age and in the ages to come are made subject to Him and are under the might of His control. Our wisdom is in seeing Him "as He is," 1 John 2: 2, not merely as He was. We may know nothing else either of manner of life, laws, ordinances, or doctrines, but to see Him as He is, is to see the wisdom and power of God, for the scripture is abundantly clear and the Holy Spirit witnesses with unspeakable clearness that what He is all other sons by God's infinite grace are now becoming. He is the firstborn from among the dead ones; a vast body of sons will be raised because he was raised. He was crucified; they were crucified in Him. He was buried; they were buried in Him. He was raised; they were raised in Him. He ascended to God's right hand; they are ascended in Him. He was seated to reign; they are seated in Him. Even in this present age the apostle John waxes so bold that he says, "As He is, so are we in this present world."

My brother, my sister, you may be so unlearned that you cannot recite the alphabet, so unwise that you could not make one right decision, so weak that all men would oppress you, and so dishonored that none would associate with you, but if your spirit has beheld these things which eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, then you have attained a wisdom which this world knoweth not. If you have seen yourself crucified in Christ, buried, risen, and ascended in Him, then you are seeing that which angels, who excel in wisdom and strength, have desired to look into; for you have seen yourself in Him, who of God is made unto us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption.

Far above the noise and strife of these six turbulent days of man's labor, mismanagement, inequity and evil government the coming King sits enthroned, awaiting the fullness of man's day as David, the anointed but not crowned, patiently awaited the day when God would remove Saul from Israel's throne and give the kingdom to him. With the coming of that wonderful day will come the completeness of the body of Christ, which is the fullness of Christ, one and all in the image and likeness of that first Son, who through the furnace of affliction was made perfect by the things He suffered. The first man Adam was made a living soul. The last Adam was made a life-giving Spirit. Behold him as among the saints He stands, proclaiming with triumphant voice as the sound of many waters, "I am Alpha and Omega, the first and the last... I am He that liveth and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death." Rev. 1:11,18. The first man is of the earth earthy; the second man is the Lord from heaven. Oh, how good it would be, my brethren, if our hearts could grasp the infinite truth that we, too, who came into this world as a "living soul" have now by partaking of Christ's life become a life-giving spirit, and we who once were of the earth earthy have in Him become "a lord from heaven". How unsearchable are Thy judgments, O Lord, and Thy ways past finding out; for from Thee everything comes, by Thee everything exists, and in Thee everything ends. Glory be to Thy exalted name forever and evermore!

"I am the vine; ye are the branches" were the living words that fell as the dew from heaven from the sanctified lips of God's Christ. As the branch grows out of the vine, so in like manner do we grow out of the vine, which He is. The vine bears the branches. The branches bear the fruit. But, as branches can bear fruit only as they remain integral parts of the vine, so also do we bear fruit only as we abide in Him. "Abide in Me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in Me. I am the vine; ye are the branches: he that abideth in Me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit: for without Me ye can do nothing." John 15:4-5.
My brethren, there must come a time when we as Christians release forever our hold on the world and its foolish deceptive toys. There must come a moment when God the Father and the glory of His high calling in Christ overwhelms our spirit, our soul, and even our body with such celestial desire that with gladness of heart and rejoicing of spirit we joyfully lay aside every weight and every besetting sin to run with patience the race that is set before us, always looking only to Jesus, the Prince captain, the apostle and author of our faith. There must come a time when the Christ mind within us resolves that for the joy that is set before us we will embrace and endure the agonies of any cross. We will despise unashamed any shame that is placed upon us. There must come a time when we gladly forget the things that are behind, and, looking forward with unclouded vision to the glories that lie before us, we press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

Let us commune together of things that will greatly help our walk in God, for the Spirit of God teaches me that God's people will not - yea, cannot - forget the things which are behind until the glory of the things which lie before has laid hold upon them, captivating their hearts, enthralling their vision, and quickening their steps as they urgently press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus our Lord. He who wears a thin and ragged coat will wrap it close about him and keep it as a precious thing, though in it his body shivers with cold, until a new and better garment is offered to him. Then, despising the old, he will cast it from him to embrace with joy the new. God's people do not - yea, cannot - release their hold on the fleeting things of this present evil age, persuade them as we will, until their vision has caught a true glimpse of the eternal. "For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ."

People, having heard the truth, readily say "A men", but they have, I fear, accepted the message only with their heads. They have not seen it in their spirits. They read of Babylon and all her abominations and with startled breath, they cry, "How awful" But they continue right on to abide in the system, mingling themselves with the sons of the sorceress, the seed of the adulterer and the whore. See Isa. 57:3-4. The call of the Spirit, "Come out of her, My people" has fallen indeed upon their ears, but never has it echoed as the voice of God through the wide corridors of their spirits. Often they read of sonship, but see it only as some grand thing to be attained rather than an immortal life springing from the incorruptible Christ seed to be nurtured and nourished as the precious life of the Son of God, swallowing up death with life and corruption with incorruption.

What do you think, my brother, was in the mind of Paul when he said, "What things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ. Yea, doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things..." See Phil. 3:7-9. Was he not telling us that to gain those things which men of this world can gain is to suffer spiritual loss? Was he not also teaching that in comparison with the excellency of the knowledge of Jesus Christ our Lord everything he had thought good and commendable was in reality comparable only to dung? Foremost among the things he counted as dung were his own religious attainments, his circumcision (in the flesh), his tribal ancestry, his Israelitish descent, his blamelessness as a keeper of the law, and his zeal in persecuting what he thought was false.

What then shall we say of other attainments? Who can doubt that in this day of luxury, ease, and affluence God's children are priding themselves in attainments more corrupt than these - pride, fullness of bread, and abundance of idleness. Exod. 16:49. As long as the earth abides, there will be those Christians who, like Esau, are intent on gaining a mess of this world's pottage, but on the other hand there will be those blessed ones who consign all earthly treasure to the trash heap, if by any means they may attain the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

In our times of meditation we have probably thought deeply of the words of Paul in Romans 8:29-30. "For whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son... Whom He did predestinate, them He also called and whom he called, them He also justified; and whom he justified, them He also glorified." There is no more straightforward statement in scripture than the one quoted above. It details each progressive step from God's foreknowledge in the beginning to our glorification in the end. Glory is not heaven. Glorification is the coming of man into the image of Jesus Christ our Lord, who Himself was the image of the Father. Most of the talk we hear about man's free will is absurd and utter nonsense. It is the product of the shallow, earthbound thinking of earth's theologians, who with their natural way of looking at things imagine that the will of the almighty and immutable Lord can be frustrated by the childish whims and fancies of the creature He Himself made. Christians speak of man's free will in tones of reverent veneration as though it were a thing so sacred that even God Himself would tremble to touch it or interfere with it in any way. There is no greater fallacy among men than this, and I can find no scripture that teaches it. The scripture denies such a doctrine by such direct statements as these: "It is not of him that willeth nor him that runneth, but of God that showeth mercy ... Therefore hath He mercy on whom He will and whom He will He hardeneth." Rom. 9:16,18. Paul, speaking of the fall of creation by the wisdom God had given to him, wrote to say, "The creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him who hath subjected the same in hope." Rom. 8:20. Even our own predestination is according to the counsel of His own will, that we should be to the praise of His glory who were the first to put our trust in Christ. Eph. 1:11. God's "intention" is never thwarted, even though He raised up men like Pharaoh to resist His will.

Though the scripture asks the question, "Who can resist His will," and the answer is obviously, "No one," there is an abundance of evidence to show that men and women, when called by God, have a responsibility committed to them that will decide their spiritual progress. Can you not hear Paul saying to the Galatian Christians, "Ye did run well; who did hinder you?" And Jude, writing to encourage God's people to be steadfast in their faith, spoke of the Israelites who wavered and rebelled in the wilderness, saying, "I will therefore put you in remembrance, though ye once knew this, how that the Lord, having saved the people out of the land of Egypt, afterward destroyed them that believed not." Jude 5. This same Jude also spoke of ungodly men who had crept in and turned the grace of God into lascivious-ness, adding with great significance that these very deceivers, who were endeavoring to ruin the Christian faith, were "before of old ordained to this condemnation." Jude 4. When once a soul has turned to God, the Lord gives him the opportunity to make his calling and election sure, and tells him with no uncertainty to work out his own salvation with fear and trembling, for it is God that worketh in him to will and to do His good pleasure.

I suppose it would be quite possible to give a thousand principles and directives by which we could instruct Christians in the ways of God and show them how to grow up into maturity, all of which would be wonderful instruction and extremely necessary to spiritual growth. It is easy enough to say, "Add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity." 2 Pet. 1:5-7. It is very blessed to be able to add the precious promise that goes with this good instruction, "If ye do these things, ye shall never fall, for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." Verse 11. Yet, for some reason that is very hard to explain, perhaps ninety-five out of one hundred Christians are quite apathetic toward all these promises. Some do not even know they are there and few have given them serious thought or meditation. There is a definite reason for their apathy and neglect. The secret will be partially found in the words that follow.

The reason so few people fervently follow the one true God, our Father, but are playing about with "gods many and lords many," loving money and the things that money can buy, setting their hearts upon possession of things, loving the world and pampering the flesh, which is nothing but the physical body, letting it rule their spiritual lives and give direction to all their activities, then consoling themselves with their church activity and resting assured that, when this life is over, they will all go to heaven and do nothing but shout and play a harp forever — the reason, I say, is simply this: They have been so banded by the childish instruction and skim milk diet of the church system that their spiritual eyes have never once beheld the great mind and heart of God. Have you ever noticed how some of the prophets and apostles put great emphasis on beholding1! Listen to David, that man after God's own heart, as he tells of the chiefest desire of his life. "One thing have I desired of the Lord, that will I seek after; that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the Lord, and to enquire in His temple." Psa. 27:4.

No sooner do we speak of "beholding the Lord" than God's dear children begin to think of dreams and visions. Personally I can think of nothing more wonderful than to have my spiritual eyes opened that I might see even the shadow of His passing. The glory of the vision Isaiah described in the sixth chapter of his prophecy is beyond human imagination and was undoubtedly the most transforming experience of his life. We do not have time nor ability here to describe the vision that transformed the life of Job when he "saw the Lord" or to tell of Moses who spoke face to face with God and beheld His glory, nor do I know what the vision of the fullness of Christ must have meant to the beloved John as he stood in God's presence on lonely Patmos, and fell as one dead before the glory of what he saw. Such things are too wonderful for me, though I know the hour is coming when all who have walked by faith will behold at last things more glorious far than these.

Though my eyes have not seen these sacred glories by a vision in the day or in the night, I now attest that the eyes of my understanding have at times been transfixed as they have caught faint glimpses of the wonderful glory of His unfolding purpose that flows like rivers of revelation from His infinite mind. The desire of David's heart was to behold the beauty of the Lord and to enquire in His temple, which desire he likened to a famished hart, panting for a water brook. Here lies one of heaven's hidden secrets — to enquire in His temple. In this day of grace you are the temple and Christ, the wisdom of God, dwells in you. With grace He imparts His mind to those who are willing to cast away their own frail wisdom and the ragged garments of their own understanding. "Hast thou not known? hast thou not heard, that the everlasting God, the Lord, the Creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, neither is weary? There is no searching of His understanding. He giveth power to the faint; and to them that have no might He increaseth strength." Isa. 40:28-29. God will unfold the magnificent wonders of His ineffable mind to those who diligently enquire. Yea, by the purifying wind of His Holy Spirit He will sweep away as clouds of useless dust those heaps of human tradition, piled layer upon layer by scribes and Pharisees, priests and popes, bishops and canons, yet clinging still as grime to us all, bunding our eyes and numbing our minds to the eternal purpose of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will.

Our eyes will behold the Lord, and, beholding Him, we will be transformed when first we see that above all things, before all things, and responsible for all things is God - immortal, invisible, eternal, omniscient, omnipresent, immutable and omnipotent, full of all grace, abounding in loving kindness and tender mercy. How wonderfully do the words of Paul glitter with inspiration as he concludes his thrilling instruction in Romans, chapters 9, 10, 11! His glad heart bursting with the knowledge of God's immutable purpose, he cries, "How inexhaustible God's resources, wisdom, and knowledge are! How unfathomable His decisions are, and how untraceable His ways! Who has ever known the Lord's thoughts or advised Him? Or who has advanced anything to Him, for which he will have to be repaid? For from Him everything comes; through Him everything exists; and in Him everything ends] Glory to Him forever! Amen." Rom. 11:33-36. (Goodspeed)

On the night in which our Lord Jesus was betrayed He spent many hours instructing His disciples in the ways of God. He told them that he was the door to the sheepfold, and also the shepherd that enters the door. He told them of a corn of wheat that would fall into the ground and die and, dying, would bring forth a vast harvest in its likeness. He washed their feet and in washing them declared them to be partakers of Himself. He gave them the cup of life; for the life is in His blood and His was the blood that speaketh better things than the blood of Abel. He had told them of the Father's house, which we ourselves are becoming, and of the Holy Spirit who would fill the house and abide in it forever to make it one body with Himself. "I am the vine and ye are the branches." He had told them, "and the branch cannot bear fruit except it abide in the vine." After instructing them in these and many other things, He lifted up His eyes to heaven in a prayer of benediction upon all He had said, and, being carried away in the Spirit, He spoke to God of other things still far beyond the understanding of their finite minds. "Sanctify them through Thy truth," He prayed, "that they all may be one; as Thou, Father, art in Me, and I in Thee, that they also may be one in Us: that the world may believe that Thou hast sent Me ... Father, I will that they also, whom Thou hast given Me, be with Me where I am: that they may behold My glory, which Thou hast given Me: for Thou lovedst Me before the foundation of the world." John 17:17,21,24.

"That they may behold My glory," He prayed. Brother and sister of mine, if we behold Him as the creator and see Him as the author and finisher of all infinite purpose, we are beholding His glory in a way that tradition-ridden men can never know. If we behold Him as the Alpha and the Omega, the first and the last, the one from whom everything comes, by whom everything exists, and in whom everything ends, we are beholding truth (and He is truth) which the blind guides of Babylon's realm have never seen, and, seeing it, we are transformed by a wonderful renewing of our mind. Millions of Christians are willing to accept the truth of Paul's words, "from Him everything comes," but they would rather die than believe that "in Him everything ends." To this I can only say that, if that which had its beginning in God is at last to find its end in hell, then I fear I know not the ways of Him from whom everything comes, by whom everything exists, and in whom everything ends.
The simple beholding of truth works a mighty transformation in any man. Beholding Him who is truth, we are changed - not once, not twice, but continually - from glory to glory, for "we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord." 2 Cor. 3:18.

In the beginning of these pages we set out to declare that God's great work in the earth for this age is you. God did not intend that all the world should be converted in this age. If that were His purpose, He would accomplish it overnight, for He turns men's hearts as He turns the water courses and the winds. His purpose in this age is to call out a people for His name, an elect people who know God and see their calling. His purpose in this age is not to heal all the sick, the lame, the maimed and the blind. If that were His purpose, He would send forth His word and heal them. It is not a lack in our faith that keeps the Gentile or the Jew from believing now. The great lack is in our understanding of God's program. Neither is it a lack of faith that fails to heal the sick. The lack is in our understanding of the program of the Lord. Millions are dying of dread diseases, not because God denies them healing, but because of the way they abuse their bodies. We have only to consider the junk foods people eat to understand why so many are sick. How can mankind pour down gallons of pop and beer and all manner of hard drink, meanwhile filling the temple of his body with poisonous smoke and his stomach with every devitalized food that lies handy and expensive on the shelves of the supermarkets and expect to have good health? If we are looking for a miracle, then I would think the plain fact that such abusers of themselves are still breathing and not in the grave is as great a miracle as one could imagine. Christians as well as unregenerate men will need to bitterly repent of their evil ways before the Lord will do anything for them either in body or soul. "The curse causeless shall not come," the scripture declares, Prov. 26:2, and many a man would find relief from his illness if he took time to search out the cause. Only yesterday I met an acquaintance on the street. After greeting me cheerfully, she placed her hand over her mouth to suppress her coughing. "I see you have caught a cold," I said with an air of sympathy. "Perhaps a little," she said, "but it is mostly smoker's cough." Then, I said, "you should quit smoking." "Yes," she replied, "but I have no will power." The conversation ended there, but it illustrates the truth His Spirit speaks: The curse causeless shall not come. The lady did not need healing; she needed to quit smoking.

Be that as it may, let us behold God's purpose for this hour. Let our hearts be filled with this message: Our all-wise Father is calling out a people for His name. No one in heaven or in earth can defer His intention; neither can they hasten it, limit or change it. Rejoice, then, with heavenly joy that God has chosen you in this age. Rejoice that your name is written in the Lamb's book of life for this age. It was not written there for the age of law nor for the age of innocence or conscience, but you were chosen to be perfected in this age of grace. It is because you were predestined that you were called. It is because you were called that you were justified; and it is because you were justified that you are now on the path that leads the faithful to glorification. Your name was not put in the book of life because you were better or greater than someone else, but because God chose you and ordained you that He might commit unto you the word of reconciliation for the age to come when all men, through the ministry of God's sons, shall be brought to the fullness of the knowledge of God. There was nothing in us that we deserved to be chosen. The God of Jerusalem said to her, "Thy birth and thy nativity is in the land of Canaan; thy father was an Amorite, and thy mother an Hittite. And as for thy nativity, in the day thou was born thy navel was not cut, neither wast thou washed in water to supple thee; thou wast not salted at all nor swaddled at all. None eye pitied thee, to do any of these unto thee..." Ezek. 16:3-5. We were chosen rather for weakness than for strength and for our foolishness rather than our wisdom, for God has chosen the weak things to confound the mighty and the foolish things to confound the wise, and the things which are not to bring to naught the things that are that no flesh should glory in His presence.

Thus ye see your calling, brethren, and how the wisdom of God has chosen the foolish, for they, knowing the baseness of their own foolishness, cast it aside that the mind of Christ might fully dwell in them. We see our weakness, brethren, and, seeing it, we lay aside our paltry strength to partake of Him who said, "It is not by might, nor by power, but by My Spirit." And we, seeing our own blindness, no longer say, "We see." Sin lies continually at the door of the carnally minded because they are forever saying, "We see," but forgiveness and vision is for him who only sees by the Spirit of God.

There was a day in the long ago when God's chosen people Israel stood before Mt. Sinai. The cloud and fire of His divine presence covered the mountain and the voice of God called to Moses to come up into the mount.
There in the presence of God the law was given, which Paul in 2 Cor. 3:6-7 speaks of as the ministration of death. "The letter killeth," he tells us, "but the Spirit giveth life." When we quote this we should always ask, "What is it that the letter kills?" The answer is very simply this: The letter does not kill the Spirit or the man. The letter, or the law, kills only those things that are supposed to die. It kills man's sin. It denounces his carnality. It judges the wickedness of his evil heart and thus, being our stern pedagogue, it brings us unto Christ.

Have you ever wondered why it was that the face of Moses shone after he had received this law that kills? Well, there is a wonderful glory in death to self and death to sin and the carnal mind. That glory will soon fade if the Spirit does not come with it to give us the life of God. God forbid that I should glory save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world. That is death, indeed, and that is glory! There is a wonderful glory in the cross because there was done that which the law declared should be done. There in Christ the world was crucified. There in Christ I was crucified. There in Christ the Spirit was purchased and shed forth to give God's life to us and start us on that journey to incorruption, immortality, and aionian life. How can the lips of mortal man proclaim the glory which God has prepared for them who are called according to His purpose? It may not be until that day when we, the sons of God, stand with our elder brother on Zion's lofty mountain that we can fully realize the wonderful glory of our calling and how profitable it has been to "make our calling and election sure." "as the dew of Hermon, Zion, Deut. 4:38, and as the dew that descended on the mountains of Zion; for there the Lord commended the blessing, even life forever-more." Psa. 133:3.

"And I looked, and lo, a Lamb stood on the mount Sion, and with Him an hundred forty and four thousand, having His Father's name written in their foreheads. And I heard a voice from heaven as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of a great thunder: and I heard the voice of harpers harping with their harps. And they sung as it were a new song before the throne, and before the four beasts, and the elders: and no man could learn that song but the hundred and forty and four thousand, which were redeemed from the earth. These are they, which were not defiled with women (that is, sects and denominations): for they are virgins. These are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth. These were redeemed from among men, being the firstfruits unto God and to the Lamb. And in their mouth was found no guile: for they are without fault before the throne of God." Rev. 14:1-5.

CHAPTERS THREE

In the previous chapter we wrote concerning the high and holy calling of God wherewith the Lord has called us to glory and virtue in preparation for our reigning with Christ. We showed by the use of many scriptures that God's greatest work in the earth during this entire age of grace concerns those elect believers who are being changed into His likeness in preparation for the high calling and ministry in the kingdom of God to come. I started to say that God's principal work in the earth today is you, and that is the truth. Satan, by using the tradition of the elders, has turned the vision of God's children away from the truth of their high calling, leading them to embrace endless and meaningless fables that have little or nothing to do with God's true and merciful purpose. Everywhere and on every hand Christians have become obsessed with the crude notion that God's purpose for this age is to evangelize the whole world and snatch as many sinners as possible from the flames of an eternal hell. This grotesque absurdity has become part and parcel of the unspiritual thinking of the vast majority of Christians. It is a false notion, a spurious doctrine that makes omnipotence weakness, omniscience ignorance, immutability changefulness, and mercy merciless and cruel. Furthermore it makes purpose purposeless, order disorder, and foreknowledge chaos and confusion.

The plan and order of God for this age was stated by the apostle James with clearness, brevity and eloquence when he, speaking to the apostles and brethren at Jerusalem with the anointing of the Spirit upon him, uttered this remarkable statement: "Simon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles (nations) to take out of them a people for His name. And to this agree the words of the prophets; as it is written, after this (that is, after He has taken out a people for His name) I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up; that the residue of men might seek after the Lord and all the Gentiles, upon whom My name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things. Known unto God are all His works from the beginning of the world (ages)." Acts 15:14-18.
Once God's plan for this age, outlined above by the inspired lips of the apostle James, has gripped your heart and laid hold of your understanding, then you will clearly see that everything - yes, absolutely everything in this entire age - is working out just exactly as the omniscient God intended that it should. God is taking out a people. He is not calling all people now. He is taking out a people for His name. Jesus is the Christ. To be in Christ means that we have taken His name. To be in Christ is to be a son of God, born of incorruptible seed as Jesus is a Son of God. To be in Christ is to be a member of the body of Christ. To be a member of the body of Christ is to be a king, a priest, a royal generation, an holy people. To be a sharer of His glorious name is to be prepared by God for the kingdom age in which those chosen ones shall show forth the praises of Him who has called them out of darkness into His marvelous light. Being thus called to bear His name is to be prepared to reign with Him in the kingdom age, in which age the Lord will begin to gather the residue of mankind and eventually all the Gentiles whosoever and wheresoever they may be. That is the true purpose of the resurrection and judgment of all who died in unbelief. Once you see the clearness of this plan, confusion drops away like a millstone into the depths of the sea and the order of the very creation of God begins to take its place.

Perhaps we should turn from our thoughts of the calling of God long enough to say that there are a few things that must be understood before any man can find order or reason in the Bible. First, we must accept the fact of God's foreknowledge, that God, omniscient (all-wise) in wisdom and knowledge and almighty in power to carry out every decree, both knew all things and planned all things and all people long, long before ever the ages began. Secondly, in consideration of His foreknowledge, we must accept the truth that whom He did foreknow He did predestinate, and whom He did predestinate, them (and them alone) He also called; and whom He called He justified; and whom He justified, them He glorified (that is, He brought them into the image of Christ). See Rom. 8:28,30. The church system today, including the more evangelical movements, give only fainthearted lip service to these cardinal truths, but in heart they neither believe nor accept them. According to their doctrine God is calling everybody now, and their acceptance or rejection of His call is made to depend upon the invented lie of man's free will. This is not truth, and the plan and purpose of God will always be a confusion to all who embrace such falsehood and accept it as truth. We ought rather to believe what James said in the statement we have already quoted, which concerns God's unalterable program both for this age and the ages to follow.

There is also a definite statement made by the apostle Peter that is immeasurably important if we are to understand God's great plan for the ages. That statement concerns the restitution of all things, which God has spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began. Acts 3:21. The reason God's children make such frantic, though futile, efforts to compass land and sea to get everybody converted in this age is because they cannot see that God is first calling out a people for His name that through them in the kingdom age and in the dispensation of the fullness of times He will gather all things into Christ. Be it known that in this age God's special purpose and program is to take out a people for His name - that is, a people to bear the name of Christ, the in-Christed - that in ages yet to come (and there are several of them) these elect saints shall rule the world and gather all things in earth and heaven into our wonderful Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. See Eph. 1:10.

Only a few weeks ago a man wrote me a letter in which he bitterly denounced the teaching of the "reconciliation of all things." He said it was "Satanic" and refused to have this paper sent to him any more. When people call these doctrines Satanic, they unwittingly blaspheme the Holy Spirit, for it was He and none other who inspired Paul to write these words: "And, having made peace through the blood of His cross, by Him to reconcile all things unto Himself, by Him, I say, whether they be things in earth or things in heaven." Col. 1:20. It was the Holy Spirit who said that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them, and has committed unto us the word of reconciliation. 2 Cor. 5:19. So I say again that until we are able to embrace God's immutable intention of reconciling all things unto Himself, we will never be able to clearly see God's plan for this present age nor for other ages yet to come.

To return to our original thought I shall again repeat that God's great purpose in this present age concerns your high calling in Christ. In this present age you who have believed on His name are the apple of His eye. You are His pride and joy. You are His unfolding of the infinite mystery of the ages. Over you He watches day and night, baptizing you into all manner of trial, tribulation and suffering that the trial of your faith, being more precious than gold that perishes, might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Him whom, having not seen, ye love; in whom, though now ye see Him not, yet believing ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory, receiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls; which salvation is so precious and its end so great that even angels have enquired into it, and prophets, who by the Holy Ghost prophesied of the grace that should come unto you, have diligently searched what manner of time the Spirit which was in them did signify when He testified beforehand of the sufferings of Christ and the glory that should follow. Unto whom it was revealed that, not unto themselves, but unto us they did minister the things which are now reported unto you by them that have preached the gospel unto you with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven, which things the angels desire to look into. Wherefore gird up the loins of your minds, be sober and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ. See 1 Pet. 1:10-13.

The fact that we are God's workmanship leaves no room in us for a dilatory, don't care spirit. The elect of God are always conscious of their heavenly calling. They are the ones above all others who see their calling, and, because they do, they seek no more the things that belong to this earthly realm; they seek instead the things which are above. A Christian who by the Holy Spirit sees His calling is certain to be a person who is filled with a tremendous desire to co-operate with God in all His dealings. The man who yields himself, not to love the flesh, but to love God is one in whom the work of the Holy Spirit goes on apace, but the man who is forever resisting God's bidding and spurning His correction, twisting and squirming like a bad little boy in a barber chair, will find himself often suffering the chastening rod, and hot indeed will be the fires in his tribulation.

In the hour in which we live thousands of God's people are coming to a true realization that we are now living in the closing days of this age of grace. There can be no doubt about it. Read any Bible passage concerning the end of the age and you will be convinced that we are now seeing the things spoken of both by the prophets of the Old Testament and by the apostles of the New Testament, but above all by the Lord Jesus Christ Himself. A very casual reading of 2 Timothy 3:1-9 should convince even the rankest unbeliever that the words of Paul are accurate, exact, and completely descriptive of the hour in which we live. There is not one prediction spoken in these nine verses concerning the last days that would in any way seem to be latent or lacking in the wild, reckless, violent, permissive age in which we now live.

I need not spend hours trying to convince my reader of the fact that we are now in the end of the age. Even the world of the ungodly knows that the sands in the hourglass of the age are fast running out and our days are numbered indeed. I have thought much on these matters, and in meditation about them there has come into my innermost being a great longing to help all God's dear children come to a sober and spiritual evaluation of all things which concern their high calling in Christ. It is not my purpose to be harsh or critical but to persuade all men to turn their backs on the world and all its religious systems that they might walk in the way of righteousness. It becomes necessary at times to strongly rebuke the evils of our day, for, if we refuse to rebuke them, God's people are never awakened nor made aware of the snares that tighten about their necks. People have written to tell me that only a few years ago they thought I was much too harsh and critical concerning the Babylon system, which we call the church, but as time has passed by and they have become better acquainted with her unending evils that reach to heaven, they have come to the conclusion that I was not nearly hard enough. It is only as we walk in the light of His truth that the darkness becomes more abhorrent and the light that streams from the everlasting hills of God becomes ever more blessed, filling our hearts with the sunshine of His love and revelation and our innermost beings with the vitality of the Lord.

As these things have filled my heart and mind, I have wondered betimes how much longer the blessed Lord would give us time to hear these precious truths. We are the children of the light; let us therefore walk in the light as He is in the light that we may have fellowship with one another and that the blood of Jesus Christ might cleanse us from all our sins. God's dear people in this hour are as sheep without a shepherd. They wander about looking for pasture, for drink, and for rest while the hirelings fleece them but feed them not. We will find truth only in Christ, my friend. Nowhere else can it be found, for He is truth. Time and again I have stated in these pages that there will be no more revivals in this age. The "times of refreshing" we have known in the past will be no more. The next great revival will be at the beginning of the kingdom age when Israel—all twelve tribes of them—will be awakened from their long sleep and their partial darkness. Oh, what a revival will come in that day when they shall say, "What are these wounds in Thine hands?" And He shall say, "These are they with which I was wounded in the house of My friends." Then shall they mourn as for their first born, (for He is the first born of all creation). Then shall the sons of God reign in glory with Christ in His kingdom, while Israel, the repudiated wife, prepares herself to become the bride. "And I will pour upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the spirit of grace and supplications: and they shall look upon Me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for Him, as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for Him, as one that is in bitterness for his firstborn." Zech. 12:10. "And one shall say unto him, What are these wounds in Thine hands? Then He shall answer, Those with which I was wounded in the house of My friends. Awake, O sword, against My shepherd, and against the man that is My fellow, saith the Lord of hosts: smite the shepherd, and the sheep will be scattered: and I will turn mine hand upon the little ones. And it shall come to pass, that in all the land, saith the Lord, two parts shall be cut off and die; but the third shall be left therein. And I will bring the third part through the fire, and will refine them as silver is refined, and will try them as gold is tried: they shall call on My name, and I will hear them: I will say, It is My people: and they shall say, The Lord is my God." Zech. 13:6-9.

I do not profess to understand all these things. We all see through a glass darkly and our present understanding is very limited, for we know nothing yet as we ought to know. Nevertheless, do not be deceived by the wishful thinking and vain talk of men who seek to persuade you that this age of grace will end with a mighty world-wide revival. Every preceding age from Eden till now has ended in gross darkness and this age will be no exception. "When the Son of man cometh, will He find faith on the earth?" To this I reply that faith will be found only in the hearts of the very elect, who patiently wait and with longsuffering endure the faithlessness and perverseness of this untoward generation. The noisy, clamorous movements in progress at the present time are the product of man's clever organization. It is not the Spirit moving upon the face of the deep. When time are the product of man's clever organization. It is not the Spirit moving upon the face of the deep. When the year is over, there will be greater darkness than ever. There is always enough apparent success in the ecumenical movement, the Charismatic movement, the Jesus movement, and Key 73 all come under the same heading. We are now seeing in them, not the coming together of the body of Christ, but the gathering together of the tares to be burned.

As Jesus was ministering to the multitudes, He gave them a parable concerning the wheat and the tares, saying, "The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man which sowed good seed in his field: But while men slept, his enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat and went his way. But when the blade was sprung up, and brought forth fruit, then appeared the tares also. So the servants of the householder came and said unto him, Sir, didst not thou sow good seed in thy field? From whence then hath it tares? He said unto them, An enemy hath done this. The servants said unto him, Wilt thou then that we go and gather them up? But he said, Nay; lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them. Let both grow together until the harvest: and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them; but gather the wheat into my barn." Matt. 13:24-30. In this year 1973 — known to millions as Key 73 — we are seeing the unusual phenomenon of one hundred and forty denominations with as many different creeds — Catholic and Protestant — gathering together to present "the claims of Christ" to every individual in North America, but, sad to say, very few of these people are aught but strangers to Christ and His grace. This is the work of man and not the moving of the Holy Ghost. It is the gathering of the tares.

At the time of this gathering of the tares another great work is in progress. It is the gathering of the wheat into God's storehouse. Matt. 13:30. Though tares resemble wheat in appearance, there is a vast difference in their value. Wheat is the very staff of life, but tares sicken the stomach, causing sluggishness and making the headache. They are not fit for food and should be avoided. Oh, that in this hour of separating the grain from the chaff, the sheep from the goats, the wheat from the tares, and the gold from the dross, God's people would go unto Him without the camp and forget their idle dreaming of a return to former days and of great revival!

For many years now I have been warning God's elect that the ending of this age will witness an abominable union of all sects and denominations, Protestant and Catholic, together with a number of the pagan religions thrown in to fill the golden cup of iniquity to the brim. Side by side with this confusion will be some sort of world... government so that Mystery Babylon the great will include both a world government and a world church. Thus does this debauched whore sit, filled with the names of blasphemy (more than one hundred and forty of them), arrayed in purple and scarlet, and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls, having in her hand a golden cup full of abominations and the filthiness of her fornication and on her head a name written, Mystery, Babylon the great, the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth. Rev. 17. Drunken with the blood of the saints and of the martyrs of Jesus, she boasts within her evil heart, "I sit as a queen and am no widow, and shall never see sorrow." Rev. 18:7.

It gives me great pain to write words of condemnation and I find no joy in disclosing evil, but will you not awaken to see the abominable trend of this hour? Those who have read my writings through the years must surely remember that I have not ceased to warn of the coming union of Rome and her harlot daughters and of the whole world system as well, but to be warned does little to lessen the shock when the spoken truth matures in reality before our eyes. Did you see the front page picture of Golda Meir of Israel shaking hands with the Pope? And the picture of Billy Graham receiving a vestment at the hands of Cardinal Spellman? And now Kathryn Kuhlman, the idol of so many people, is also seen visiting the Pope, shaking his hands and receiving his blessing. In the last years the President of the United States, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the head of the Greek Orthodox Church, the Queen of England, together with high officials from the Communist countries as well as India and Japan have all been trekking to Rome to pay their homage to him who "as God sits in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God." I shall say no more here except to warn that the end is near.
The message for us to hear is "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her sins and that ye receive not of her plagues, for her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities."

Would God that I had the voice of a trumpet that I could sound from the highest mountain peak the message that we are now in the end of the age! Jesus is coming to set up His long awaited kingdom. The time for the resurrection of the "in Christ" is now at hand. The graves will be opened for all those who have been found in Christ, and they with their Elder Brother will stand on Mount Zion to receive their crowns of glory. The following quotation from 2 Esdras 2:38-48 is clear of this hour. "Arise and stand, behold the number of those that be sealed in the feast of the Lord; which are departed from the shadow of the world, and have received glorious garments of the Lord. Take thy number, O Zion, and shut up those of thine that are clothed in white, which have fulfilled the law of the Lord. The number of thy children, whom thou longest for, is fulfilled: Beseech the power of the Lord that thy people, which have been called from the beginning, may be hallowed. I Esdras saw upon the mount Zion a great people, whom I could not number, and they all praised the Lord with songs. And in the midst of them there was a young man of high stature, taller than all the rest, and upon every one of their heads he set crowns, and was more exalted; which I marveled at greatly. So I asked the angel, and said, Sir, what are these? He answered and said unto me, These be they that have put off the mortal clothing, and put on the immortal, and have confessed the name of God: now are they crowned and received palms. Then said I unto the angel, What young person is it that crowneth them, and giveth them palms in their hands? So he answered and said unto me, It is the Son of God, whom they have confessed in the world. Then began I answered and said unto me, It is the Son of God, whom they have confessed in the world. Then began I greatly to commend them that stood so stiffly for the name of the Lord. Then the angel said unto me, Go thy way, and tell my people what manner of things, and how great wonders of the Lord thy God, thou hast seen."
Apocrypha. Compare also Revelation 14:1-5. Saints who see their calling — their high and holy calling in Christ — find neither room nor time to live slip-shod, careless lives. Rather they, seeing their calling, give all diligence to make their calling and election sure by unending devotion in prayer and fasting. Searching the word and digesting it as the enlightening rays of the Holy Spirit fall upon them, they add to their faith with godly diligence every spiritual grace. To faith they add God's virtue; to virtue, knowledge from on high; to knowledge, temperance — that primary and all essential Christian grace; to patience, godliness; to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, love — not the wretched, abhorrent thing the world calls love, but that love which is of God, the fruit of the Holy Spirit dwelling in the bloodwashed heart. Love is of God, little children, and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God and God in him.

As the wicked Belshazzar, king of Babylon, commanded that the stolen vessels of the Lord should be brought into his ungodly orgy of feasting and drunkenness, so the Babylon of this world system and the Babylon which is the church system has stretched forth an unsanctified hand to filch every sacred truth and sacrament and make them the plaything of their wicked and gross misconduct. No word has been more abused than the word love. It is the theme of every raucous racket that men today call song. That which God abhors as lust the system proclaims as love. What God names adultery and fornication the winebibbers of Belshazzar's feast call free love. Even the vileness of sodomy and lesbianism is honored with the name love. Ah, wicked and perverse generation, for the idleness of thy words God shall bring thee into judgment and thou shalt have thy part in the second death as the word of God has declared, until thou learn that love is of God, and until sin and evil have departed from thee through the bitterness and thoroughness of thy repentance!

Do not be one with those idle talkers who are always saying, "We must show more love." This is desecrating the love of God by bringing it down to the realm of a mere human trait. Love is not human. Love is of God. Love is a fruit of the Holy Spirit. Love does not come into the believer's heart by his trying to imitate Jesus. Love is a fruit of the Holy Spirit and comes to fill the Christian's heart when he walks in the Spirit. "I am the vine; ye are the branches," said Jesus Christ the Lord. "The branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye (bear fruit), except ye abide in Me... He that abideth in Me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit." John 15:4-5. The order is simply this: the vine bears the branch, the branch bears the fruit, and the fruit is formed by the life of God flowing up from the very roots of the vine. A man who tries to "show love" can be likened to a man who hangs artificial grapes on the branches just for show. Such presumption makes a pretty show, but both are equally false. It is natural for a grape vine to bear grapes. It cannot bear anything else. It is natural for an apple tree to bear apples. That is the very nature of the tree. It is divine nature for the Holy Spirit to bear His varied fruits. That is the essential life of that Holy One who proceeds forth from the Father. He it was who came into our hearts when we believed. It was He who overshadowed us when the incorruptible seed that liveth and abideth forever was placed within the womb of our spirit, and, as we walk in Him and He in us we have OUT fruit unto holiness. We have our holy fruit, and the end of this, Aionian life.

If we walk in the flesh, following the dictates of the physical body, we will find ourselves delighting in the works of the flesh. The flesh does not produce fruit; it produces works. Thus we are told that "the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these: adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envying, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." Gal. 5:19-21. The world walks in the flesh and in the flesh alone, continually craving full satisfaction for the five senses of the body. Because of this craving for fleshly satisfaction ever increasing corruption is manifest continually.

"But," says Paul - and but is always a big word when used in holy scripture - "the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith (faithfulness), meekness, temperance: against such there is no law." Gal. 5:22-23. Against such there is no law, neither in heaven, nor in hell, nor even among the godless nations of the earth. Love is the fulfilling of the law because love is the intrinsic nature of God and the law of God is the expression of that nature. This nine-fold fruit of the Spirit is divided into three sets of three. Love, joy, and peace are the personal heritage of every believer. His spirit sings of the love of God. The love of God is often the theme of his conversation. He feels the love of God, for love is of God, and he that dwells in God dwells also in love. God loves the saint and the saint loves God. In finding joy, he has found that which no worldly giving has ever given. He who is filled with God's Spirit experiences joy, not only when all is well, but also when enduring the cross. He is like his Lord, who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross and despised its shame. The Spirit-filled saint knows peace such as the world cannot give nor take away. "My peace I leave with you; My peace I give unto you," said Jesus. "Let not your heart be troubled; neither let it be afraid." That is God's peace. The world proclaims peace when no peace exists either in their hearts or in the world. The sages tell us that peace is the absence of war, and many other such clever and eloquent things they say, none of which even remotely describe His peace that flows like a river amid the wilderness of this warring world. The calm assurance that let Jesus sleep when the violent storm was swamping the boat, the godly confidence that gave the rest of a dreamless sleep to Peter as he lay between two soldiers, awaiting death on the morrow, is the peace that Jesus gives. Love, joy, and peace - the fruit for our personal blessedness, growing richly on the branches of the true and living vine!

I shall not take time to describe at any length the fruit of longsuffering, goodness, and gentleness, but these three are the fruits of the Holy Spirit being manifest through us toward mankind. Meditate upon these three and you will become aware that all these did our God manifest toward us when we were far away from His fold. It was His longsuffering, goodness, and gentleness that led us to the foot of His cross. In like manner the Holy Spirit, dwelling within, displays through us to all creation that blessed fruit of longsuffering, goodness, and gentleness. The knowledge of God's eternal purpose is spiritual food for longsuffering, goodness, and gentleness, for we, seeing the plan of God even in the present blindness and unbelief all about us, suffer long with much gentleness and goodness, knowing the glorious end the Lord has in view. The final three - faith (faithfulness), meekness, and temperance - are manifestations of the Spirit through the believer toward his heavenly Father. The faith we have is not in ourselves; neither is it in our fellow man. Faith must always be anchored in God. Hast thou faith? Have it to thyself before God, for "without faith it is impossible to please Him. He that cometh to God must believe that He is, and that He is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him." Heb. 11:6. Meekness, too, is a fruit unto God. Those who walk in meekness before God will manifest meekness before men. Meekness knows no rebellion against God, though he who possesses it may, like Moses, call down fire from heaven on the enemies of the Lord or bring the plagues of Egypt upon a rebellious Pharaoh. "In all thy ways acknowledge Him" is the true spirit of meekness. Temperance is a fruit before God. He that striveth for the mastery is temperate before all things. They do it to obtain a corruptible crown, but we an incorruptible (crown).

As time passes by and we come nearer and nearer to the end of this, the sixth and final day of man's labor, an ever increasing number of people are filled with a God-given longing to depart from the forms and ceremonies of religion that they might come to know the Lord and to be like Him. From time immemorial the saints have lifted plaintive voices to sing with irrepressible desire:

There's a longing in my heart for Jesus!
There's a longing in my heart to see His face!
I am weary, 0 so weary, of traveling here below!
There's a longing in my heart for Him.

Many have tried to be like Him by imitating Him, but imitation will never do. Parrots and monkeys take delight in imitation and learn the talk and actions of men, but their imitation never makes them one bit more human. Neither does our imitation of Christ in any way change our hearts or make us more like Him. There are far too many people who feign Christ-likeness, but in the end they deceive themselves more than other people. Nevertheless, there is a way, ordained by God, by which men who were born in sin may attain the image and likeness of the Lord.

Before we attempt a brief discussion of that subject, let us call to remembrance that we are born of incorruptible seed. The Christ seed has been placed within our hearts and we are begotten of God. From that Christ seed within Christ is being formed and we are coming to the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ. Nothing can be more certain than that Christ in us is the hope of glory. I have often stated that the glory of God is the image of Christ. Thus slowly and steadily, as time passes by, the Christ image is forming in us until at last it shall be said by all the in-Christed, "Nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ, liveth in me." Nothing can stop this sonship progress, but there are many things that can impede it and there are, thanks be to God, many ways by which that wonderful progress may be helped toward its fullness.

David, the king of Israel, was much more than a king. He had a God-given gift of music and song, and, like our Lord Jesus Christ, he was also a true prophet. Acts 2:29-30. Many and varied were the difficult experiences of his life and, though it seemed that some of them would crush his very soul, each and every one of them worked steadily for his eternal good just as our tribulations, our pitfalls, our weaknesses, and our fiery trials are also working together for our good. We will all discover at last that our inherent weaknesses made us draw our strength from the living Christ. Every day we live we are learning that the natural man has no power or strength to resist evil. Man himself is inherently evil, born in sin and shapen in iniquity. Because of this inborn weakness he learns through many trials never to trust in himself or to lean upon the failing arm of flesh, but to find his overcoming power in the omnipotent Spirit. Our constant failures and our proneness to yield to the ever present overpowering lusts of the flesh should be incentive enough to cast off the tattered garments of our self-righteousness and self-confidence that we may make the Lord our strength, our righteousness, our shield, and the lifting up of our heads. Every man on the face of the earth has his little day of trusting in his own righteousness and in the paltry strength of his own arm, but, before many months have passed, we discover to our sorrow that we are men and not God, and our horses are flesh and not Spirit. Isa. 31:3. He that helpeth shall fail and he that is helped will fall down. Only Christ, dwelling within, can make us stand. He is our victory. Our help cometh from the Lord.

Few men who have ever lived became more aware of their fatal weaknesses than did David, king of Israel, the man after God's own heart. "Behold, I was shapen in iniquity; and in sin did my mother conceive me," he mourned. "Have mercy upon me, O God, according to Thy loving kindness: according unto the multitude of Thy tender mercies blot out my transgressions. Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin. For I acknowledge my transgressions: my sin is ever before me. Against Thee, Thee only, have I sinned, and done this evil in Thy sight: that Thou mightest be justified when Thou speakest, and be clear when Thou judgest... . Behold, Thou desirest truth in the inward parts: and in the hidden part Thou shall make me to know wisdom." From Psalm 51. David found great strength and transforming power in " beholding the Lord." "One thing have I desired of the Lord, that will I seek after; that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the Lord, and to enquire in His temple." Psa. 27:4. When he prayed that he might be delivered from men of the world and from those who have their portion in this life, he said, "As for me, I will behold Thy face in righteousness: I shall be satisfied when I awake with Thy likeness." Psa. 17:14-15.

It is not until we grasp the significance of this worshipful act of beholding as taught to us in the New Testament that we as the maturing sons of God begin to understand its infinite importance. Paul, writing to the Corinthians, unveiled a vast mine of hidden wealth when he uttered this simple but mightily revealing statement: "But we all, with open face (unveiled face) beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord." 2 Cor. 3:18. In this sublime passage the apostle is showing us in the clearest possible fashion how true and faithful children of God are changed into the exact image of that first perfected Son, the Lord Jesus Christ. "No man can see God and live," the scripture proclaims (Exod. 33:20), and I think all who read these lines must assuredly know that the opposite is also true. No man can see God and die. Did you ever read of any man who saw God and died? It is true that some of them, as John and Daniel, fell at His feet as dead, but He picked them up and stood them on their feet again. The truth the Lord would have us see is that, when we behold Him, everything dies that should be dead and all that should live lives with the life of God. No man or woman on the face of the earth who has caught even the faintest glimpse of the glory of the Lord has ever been the same again. There has been awakened in his heart a God-likeness and a new, unfading glory so that the more he beholds that glory the more he is changed.

The disconsolate Job, sitting in pain amid the ashes of his desolation without a ray of hope anywhere near at hand, was beholding the Lord as His great purpose was being unfolded before him. In those moments of his grievous mortification he saw his Lord with an eye that was not physical. His spirit searched far beyond his painful afflictions and the blinding fears of his bereavement. It climbed to mountain peaks far above the unkind and disrespectful derision of his friends, and in the very presence of death itself forth from his troubled spirit there came one of the most significant sentences ever to cross the lips of man. "I know that my redeemer liveth and that He shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God: whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another." Job 19:25-26. This saintly man knew something of the infinite value of beholding the Lord, and well he knew that all who would behold Him and not another would be changed into His likeness.

It is only human for us to grow visionary when we hear such things as these. We begin to wonder when we, too, will receive a vision of the Lord that will have the wonder working effect on us that it had on Isaiah, on Daniel, or on Ezekiel or John when they saw the Lord. The truth is, my brethren that we will probably go through life without any such vision as was given to them. Many, indeed, have seen His face and heard His literal voice, but as for me, my Lord has always kept my physical eyes veiled to all such supernal experiences, though I, like so many others, have longed with a great longing to see His face and be changed by that vision from glory to glory. Always remember, saint of God, that whatsoever the Lord chooses to do in all His wise dealings with you is by all means the best and most blessed thing for your development and growth in His likeness.

Wonderful as it would have been to sit with Elisha at the gates of Dothan and listen with delight as the man of God prayed, "Lord, open his eyes," and to have felt the divine hand remove the mortal scales of darkness, revealing the hills and the mountains full of the hosts of the Lord, I think it is even more wonderful to listen to Paul as he prays for the saints; "That the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give unto you the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Him: (now notice this) the eyes of your understanding being enlightened; that ye may know what is the hope of His calling, and what the riches of the glory of His inheritance in the saints." Eph. 1:17.

There are other eyes, my brother, my sister, besides those two, which are in our heads. There are spiritual eyes, which Paul here speaks of as the eyes of your understanding. In my opinion it is far more essential that the eyes of our understanding be enlightened that we may see what is the hope of God's calling, and behold the glory of His inheritance in the saints and the exceeding greatness of His power toward us believers - this, I say, is more important than that our natural eyes should see the mountains filled with the chariots of the Lord.

Do you know what it is that has dragged the church system into this awful maelstrom of confusion? Do you know what it is that has brought the appalling darkness that now covers the earth and this gross darkness that covers the people? Do you know what it is that has made the gospel so insipid that sinners spurn it? It is simply this: The eyes of God's people and the men who pretend to be ministers of the Lord are fast closed. They do not know the plan of the Lord nor have they heard of the riches of God's inheritance in the saints. They do not know that God has already reconciled all things to Himself through Jesus Christ His Son; neither do they know that when the body of sons is complete there will be a restitution of all things. They do not know that man is being prepared to restore and rule the whole universe, as the Almighty decreed in the beginning. Having the understanding darkened (Eph. 4:18), they have become alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them because of the blindness of their hearts. God's people need to be renewed in the spirit of their minds. They need to look to God that the eyes of their understanding should be enlightened that they might behold the beauty of the Lord and the glory and power of His magnificent purpose, which has been working and progressing unerringly since time began.

I am not anxious that men and women might have wonderful visions and dreams on their beds, but I am filled with hope that they might lay aside every weight and the paltry sins that easily beset the soul to run the race with patience and to lay hold on the prize that is set before us. This is beholding the Lord. For the most part God's dear people are much too busy with the passing trinkets of time to behold the beauty of the Lord. They spend too little time doing the things that make for revelation, spiritual understanding, and sonship. They are so busy running to meetings, listening to sermons, joining in projects, getting involved, serving lunch, watching T.V., and making money. All such things make popular religion very pleasing and satisfying to the flesh, vainly puffing up the natural mind; but, if you want to behold the Lord, hear His voice and receive His understanding, you will have to pray while others sleep, read the truth while others read trash, find fellowship with God while others find fellowship with one another, and be in watchings oft while others watch T.V. If you want to remain a spiritual infant, the best way to do it is to get involved with programs and meetings of the church system, and I will guarantee that forty years from now you will still be the same hustle-bustle Christian that you always were with no new light and no new understanding of God's purpose and no real sign of spiritual growth.

Behold God in righteousness. Behold Him in redemption. Behold Him in reconciliation. Behold Him in the restitution of all things. Behold the richness and glory of His inheritance in the saints. Behold Him as through the true church He displays to principalities and powers the immutable aspects of His wisdom. Behold Him as in the ages to come He gathers all things in heaven and in earth into Christ. Behold the blood of Christ that speaketh - yea, speaketh better things than the blood of Abel, crying, not from the ground for vengeance as Abel's blood, but speaking from heaven itself in pardon, cleansing, forgiveness, justification, and glorification. Behold the Spirit, who proceedeth from the Father in heaven, implanting the Christ seed, transforming the believer, empowering the saint, enlightening the eyes, leading the way in righteousness, baptizing into the body of Christ, hastening our growth until we come to the fullness of the stature of Jesus Christ, that wonderful first Son, our oldest and tallest brother. Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world.

We are possibly all acquainted with the English word metamorphosis, which means a passing from one form or shape to another; transformation with or without change of nature, etc. Now this English word metamorphosis is derived from the Greek word metamorphoo. It is used only four times in the entire New Testament, being translated by three different English words: transfigured, Matt. 17:2; Mark 9:2; transformed, Rom. 12:2; and changed, 2 Cor. 3:18. Perhaps the best known example of a metamorphosis is that of the worm that enters its cocoon and goes into a state of death-like sleep, in which it passes through the various stages of change and transformation, emerging at last transformed into a beautiful butterfly.

Transfiguration is the final glory stage in the Christian's change and transformation. It is the redemption of the soul and the body, both being transformed into the image of Christ. Jesus is God's first perfected Son. He is our ensample and forerunner in everything. What He has become, through grace we are becoming. Our blessed Lord clearly showed us that this change, this transformation, and this transfiguration would be complete at the resurrection. It will be our excellent glory throughout the entire kingdom age. For this reason He said to His disciples, "There be some standing here which shall not taste of death till they see the Son of man coming in His kingdom." Thus, after six days had been accomplished, He took them up Mt. Zion, which is Mt. Hermon, and was transfigured before them; and His face did shine as the sun and His garments were white as the light, and in that wonderful glory of transfiguration they heard the voice of the Father proclaiming, "This is transfiguration, and this, O beloved, is the glory to which God is leading all His beloved sons!

Do you not see, then, that it is a most remarkable thing that Paul, writing to the Romans (Chapter 12, verse 2), used this same word metamorphoo when he said, "Be not conformed to this world: but be transformed by the renewing of your mind, ..."? Do you realize that the apostle is telling us that the renewed mind, which is the mind of Christ living and dwelling in us, is one of the great steps that bring us to transfiguration and change? Transfiguration and transformation are not merely robes that will be cast about the shoulders of every dilatory, worldly church-goer. They are not so much a blessing bestowed as they are a blessing attained. That is why Paul said, "If by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead." Phil. 3:11.

Now, in conclusion, we see this word metamorphoo used once more as Paul exhorts the saints to behold the Lord. Here the word metamorphoo is translated changed. Paul writes, "Now the Lord is that Spirit: and where the Spirit of the Lord is there is liberty. But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed (transformed, transfigured) into that same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord." 2 Cor. 3:17-18. I say again as I have said many times before that the glory of God is the image of Christ, and Paul here tells us clearly that our beholding Him causes that blessed metamorphosis to begin, yea, not only to begin, but to continue from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord.

Ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called; but God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the mighty, and the things which are not to bring to naught the things that are, that no man should glory in His presence. But we shall not glory in our flesh, nor in our attainments, nor in our might, but we shall glory in the Lord, and, beholding His face in righteousness, we shall be changed, transformed, and transfigured into that same image, even as by the Spirit of the Lord. To this you are called, my brethren.

Ye see your calling, brethren, how our Lord Jesus Christ has called you out of darkness into His marvelous light to be sharers together with His celestial likeness, to be transformed into His image, to be partakers of His body, of His Spirit, of His flesh and of His bones; to share with Him His glorious throne and to sit with Him to judge and reconcile the universe in the age of the ages, which is to come.

O Lord God almighty, holy and true, in hope of the prize that Thou hast set before us, we gladly relinquish our hold and loosen our grip on the paltry things of time and sense, that we may strip for the race and, casting aside every weight, lay hold on the prize that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith. In Jesus' Name, Amen.

CHAPTER FOUR
THE TRUE LIGHT

Man will never be able to advance very far in God until he becomes aware that within himself and all about him there are two definite and distinct realms. There is a natural realm and there is a spirit realm. There is a natural man and there is a spirit man. The first (man) is of the earth earthy; the second is the Lord from heaven. A marvelous world of progressive truth, hidden to most yet in full view of all, speaks forth eternal wisdom in the words of 1 Cor. 15:45-50. "The first man Adam was made a living soul; the last Adam was made a quickening spirit. Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual. The first man is of the earth, earthy: the second man is the Lord from heaven. As is the earthy, such are they also that are earthy: and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly. And as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly. Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption." Two definite realms, two distinct kingdoms, dwell within and round about every man and every woman on the face of the earth. There is a natural realm that belongs to the natural man and there is a spirit realm that belongs to the spiritual man. There is a natural body and there is a spiritual body; there is a natural man and there is a spiritual man. See 1 Cor. 14:39-50.

There may be those who will doubt when I say that the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ to this earth was not only a real coming and a perfect manifestation of the Son of God, but it was a symbolic coming as well. Not only did Jesus Christ come to the world, but His whole existence here among men was a sign of things to come. This was clearly indicated when the aged Simeon, holding the infant Jesus in his arms, blessed Mary and Joseph, saying, "Behold, this child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel; and for a sign which shall be spoken against." Luke 2:34. Jesus Christ was a sign son heralding the coming of an entirely new race of man, a new creation born from above, who would no longer walk after the dictates of the natural man as did the first Adam, but after the dictates of the spirit man as did Jesus.

Jesus Christ and Adam are contrasting types. The first Adam is of the earth earthy; the last Adam is the Lord from heaven. The first Adam was made a living soul; the last Adam is a life giving spirit. It is our lot to bear the image of the earthy Adam and then to bear the image of the heavenly Adam. "As we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly." 1 Cor. 15:48, 49.

Alas to us all that church tradition has made us believe that to bear the image of the last Adam, Christ, we must wait until some far off day after we have departed out of this life. But this was not the dismal hope in the spiritual minds of the men who, by the Holy Ghost, wrote the pages of the Bible. They well knew that grace and power would be given that men might walk here and now even as He walked, forsaking the natural realm and becoming foreigners and strangers to it while they lived their lives in the glory light of the spirit realm. Even here our Lord Jesus Christ was a definite sign of things to come. The life that He lived in the flesh was not the life of an earth-bound natural man, daily fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind. His life was the manifestation, not of the outward man, but of the inner man - not of the body, but of the spirit. "My Father worketh hitherto and I work," He said, and "I do always those things that please the Father." The natural man cannot please God because the natural man has always proved to be an enemy of God. It is only when the natural man is on the cross and the heavenly man reigns supreme that he is capable of bringing forth fruit unto righteousness.

"It is the spirit that quickeneth," said Jesus. "The flesh profiteth nothing. The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life." "Never man spake like this man," declared the soldiers who were sent to arrest Him, and their words were truth and soberness. His words were not the words of earth's wisdom, gathered up from man's tradition and his human way of looking at things. His words flowed forth from the world of the spirit, the realm where all is clear to its citizens and no ignorance can exist, the sphere where all is light and darkness cannot hide. While the first Adam with all his progeny was completely of the earth, Christ, the last Adam, was the Lord from heaven. Thus these two belong to realms removed by infinity from each other.

In the world that exists all about us good things and evil things are manifested side by side. On a certain street may live a Jezebel, a Haman, or a Judas while in the same block may dwell an Elisha, a Daniel, or a Deborah. Tares flourish in fields of wheat while disease and insanity dwell with health and soberness. All about us one may see godliness and ungodliness, truth and lies, war and peace, justice and injustice, chastity and debauchery. Whence do all these things come? They are naught but an outward manifestation of the things that abide in the hearts of men. If we turn our eyes from that which is without to look upon that which is within, we will see that good and evil abide in our own heart, the evil being the manifestation of the nature of the first Adam which is of the earth, earthy in all his ways, and the good being the manifestation of the spirit which is renewed in the image of Christ, the last Adam, who is the Lord from heaven.
The Christian has not been born of the Spirit very long before he becomes aware that two natures are at work within him, one manifesting the works and the fallen nature of the first Adam and the other manifesting the work and nature of Jesus Christ. The Apostle Paul himself experienced the desolating power of this twin nature when he said, "I find then a law, that, when I would do good, evil is present with me. For I delight in the law of God after the inward man; but I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members." Rom. 7:21-23.

The inner man is the human spirit, reborn and indwelt by the Spirit of Jesus Christ. The middle man is the soul, the very seat of the carnal mind and the Adamic nature. These natures are always at war with each other, because the reborn spirit seeks only to do the will of God while the carnal mind desires only to satisfy the cravings of the fleshly body, the outer man, in which it lives. The carnal mind, i.e., the fleshly mind, is the slave of the physical body and because of this it seeks to bring pleasure to the body by lavishing upon its five physical senses all the enjoyment it can. It employs every ancient device and invents many new ones besides to delight the nostrils with fragrance, the palate with flavor, the eyes with ravishing scenes, the ears with delightful sounds, exalting the goddess of sex upon the throne of this age for the sake of physical sensation and feeling. The spirit on the other hand belongs to another realm. At the moment of our conversion it was born from above and renewed in the image of God who created it. All its love and ambition is in the heavenly realm and all its delights are the things in which God Himself delights. It rejoices not in iniquity but rejoices in truth. It abounds in hope and faith. It brings forth fruit unto eternal life. It is the nature of an apple tree to bear apples, and it is the nature of the reborn spirit to bear the fruit of the Spirit, which is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faithfulness, meekness, and temperance. A spiritual man never tries to show love or joy or gentleness or temperance any more than an apple tree tries to grow apples. The fruit is borne, not by effort, but because of the nature of the tree. An evil tree brings forth evil fruit because it is evil, and a good tree brings forth good fruit because it is good. By their fruits ye shall know them. The man who says, "We must try to show love" is yet without understanding as to the source of love. The love that such a man tries to show is as artificial as would be the act of tying apples on a briar. Love is a fruit that grows on the vine of the spirit and cannot grow anywhere else.

All who read these lines have probably also read the words of Paul: "If you live after the flesh, you will die," but have you ever wondered why it is that all who live after the flesh must die? You will answer, "It is because the flesh is sin," but that is not the answer, for the flesh is not sin but simply flesh. The true answer lies in the indisputable fact that there is no life whatever in the flesh; therefore those who live after it and for it must eventually die. It is the spirit that quickeneth (makes alive). The flesh profiteth nothing. Therefore the man or the woman who fritters away his whole life intent upon giving pleasure to the natural man continually, delighting the physical senses of hearing, seeing, smelling, tasting, and feeling, will find in the end that, not only has he deprived himself of spiritual life, but even his physical life is fading from him as well. The thing that could have been a blessing to him has become an offence instead because he rejoiced in the body, which has no life rather than the Spirit, which makes alive. Thus abides the eternal truth, "If ye live after the flesh you will die; but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live." On the other hand the man who lives after the Spirit, rejoicing always in God's will and caring not a straw for natural things, soon finds that he is partaking of life, because just as it is true that the flesh profiteth nothing, so also is it true that the Spirit giveth life. The flesh cannot give life because there is no life in it. So contrariwise the Spirit cannot give death, because there is no death in it. Thus they who live after the flesh must surely die, and they who live after the Spirit are quickened unto life eternal.

Sooner or later all who name the name of Christ must discover that their greatest hindrance to spiritual progress lies not in others but in themselves. It is not enemies without that hinder our progress with Christ and stunt our spiritual growth. We must learn that the true enemy lies within the walls of our own being. The old Adam nature is not in harmony with our renewed spirit, which has partaken of the nature of Christ, the last Adam. Their interests lay poles apart and, as heaven is higher than the earth, so are their affections and loves divided. The evil of the Cain nature still hates the righteousness of Abel. The Ishmael of the flesh still hates the Isaac of promise, and Esau, the man of the earth, longs to kill Jacob because of the spiritual birthright. As Christ has no fellowship with Belial nor he that believeth with an infidel, neither can there be rest in our own being as long as such an evil as the natural man is allowed, not only to exist, but to flourish. But thanks be to God who hath said,
"If ye through the Spirit do mortify (put to death) the deeds of the body, ye shall live." Rom. 8:13.

There is a word of warning that should be interjected here. It is a great pity to discover that, the moment one speaks of putting to death the works of the flesh, people immediately bring themselves into some useless bondage. They begin making rules and regulations to govern the fleshly nature. They won't do this and refuse to do that. They won't eat this and won't drink that. They insist on reading so many chapters of the Bible each day. They covenant to spend so many hours each day in prayer. They must not laugh, but be sober and super-religious. I tell you from God that none of these things are of any value in combating the flesh or putting its works to death. Have you not noticed that Paul said, "If ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live?" The only way to crucify the flesh and put to death the deeds of the body is to start living in the glory and wonder of the Spirit, recognizing that centuries ago our old self was crucified with Christ. Once a man partakes of the quickening life of the Spirit, what further desire has he for flesh that worketh only death? Why, the very act of partaking of the Spirit is in itself death to the flesh. Once a man has tasted the fruit of the Spirit, what further place is left in his life for the death dealing fruit of corruption? Thus the tasting of the Spirit is in itself the crucifixion of the flesh. The moment one feels the boundless glory of immortality, will he not abhor mortality? Will not he who is made partaker of incorruption hastily cast away corruption as an unclean and hateful thing? Do you not see, then, that to lay hold on that which is spirit is the all important thing, because he who lays hold of the Spirit, being unmindful of the flesh, flees far away from its corruption and death to lay hold on the transcending glory of the hope that lies before him. It is a great pity that for centuries men have been taught to mortify the flesh by human efforts and by their morbid forms of religion, crying touch not, taste not, handle not, when they should have been taught to lay hold on life, and in laying hold on life, death and corruption would have fled from them and they would have been lifted far above its miry clay.

You have possibly wondered why it is that in spite of all the healing meetings and the anointing with oil to heal the sick only a small minority ever are blessed with physical healing, and sickness and disease increase every day. You wonder where the trouble lies. You condemn your lack of faith or the unbelief of the people or coddle some other such excuse. The trouble does not lie in any of these things. The trouble is that men try to cast off death instead of putting on life. They are like Paul who sought the Lord thrice that the thorn in the flesh would depart from him. It is not the departure of the disease you want. It is the partaking of life. Long ago a woman came to Jesus harassed with a grievous issue of blood that had plagued her for twelve years. She had spent all her money and had suffered many things at the hands of many physicians in a vain effort to get rid of her disease, but after all her efforts she was nothing better but rather grew worse. One glad day, as the restless crowd thronged about our Lord, a faith came into the heart of this little woman telling her that, if she would but touch His garment, she would be whole, and pressing up through the stubborn crowd, she reached out her hand to touch life itself and life, surging into her broken body, destroyed the power of death and she knew that she was whole.

It is of no value for the sick to battle with their sickness. They cannot cure it nor drive it away. Their only hope is to lay hold on life, for the entrance of life breaks the power of death and delivers the prisoner from his chains. Death can no more abide in the presence of life than darkness can abide in the presence of light. For a man to try to crucify the flesh by rules and regulations, laws and ordinances, is as useless as drawing the window blinds to keep the darkness out. It is the Spirit that quickeneth and giveth life. Therefore, concentrate on the Spirit and make no provision for the flesh that you should obey any of its desires.

It is of utmost importance that we begin to see all things as God sees them. The sooner we forsake the natural and flee away to the realm of the Spirit, the better off we are going to be. If we insist upon delighting ourselves in the natural realm, we can never receive nor understand the things of the Spirit of God. It is when we delight ourselves in the Lord that He gives us the desires of our heart. "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, for they are spiritually discerned." Higher learning and college education do not and cannot bring an understanding of the things of God to our hearts because the two belong to different realms. They are citizens of two different worlds - worlds in which that which is wisdom with God is foolishness with man and that which is wisdom with man is foolishness with God. The scripture uses great plainness of speech when it says, "The wisdom of this world is foolishness with God," and its words are just as plain when it declares, "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of..."
God, for they are foolishness unto him." 1 Cor. 2:14. See also 1 Cor. 18-25. Let no man deceive himself, thinking himself to be some exception to the rule. There are no exceptions to this rule.

Since, then, these things cannot be spoken against, we may assure our hearts that it is God's good pleasure to reveal the hidden things that belong to His realm to those seeking hearts who realize the blindness of the natural mind and come to Him for wisdom, light, and understanding.

Centuries ago the apostle John wrote the words, "The darkness is passing away and the true light is already shining." John 2:8. (Weymouth). The darkness of the carnal mind is an appalling darkness. Refine it how you will, it cannot possibly see the things of God. The natural mind may adopt the theories of truth from hearsay. It may imitate all the motions of religion, perform endless religious rites, and abound in forms and ceremonies. It may diligently keep days and new moons and Sabbaths, refrain from eating certain foods, and maintain a regular encyclopedia of do's and don'ts, of things one must not touch, must not eat, and must not do. It may also keep an equally large list of things one must do. Yet all these things, done in the darkness of the natural mind are naught but the religion of the flesh and are of no help whatsoever in drawing us closer to God. They are as useless in gaining favor with God as the offering of Cain or the repentance of Esau.

The true light begins to shine in the heart when the revelation of God bypasses our human understanding to shine with eternal light, absorbing the clutter of religious ideas gathered up from a lifelong tradition, and to illumine the spirit with the very thought and purpose of God. It reaches beyond the tedious lessons diligently taught by masters and professors in Bible colleges, universities, and schools of higher learning. It reaches beyond the dismal and wearisome affirmations of priest and preacher with all their human wisdom, instruction and tradition, bringing to the human heart the knowledge of the Lord. The light, filled with spiritual truth, shining from the very presence of God, enlightens the human spirit and fills it with light and understanding that none of the princes of this world can know or see.

How often has my spirit rejoiced as I have contemplated the story of revelation so clearly demonstrated in the conversation between Jesus and His disciples as recorded in Matt. 16:13-17. "When Jesus came into the coasts of Caesarea Philippi, He asked His disciples, saying, Whom do men say that I the Son of man am? And they said, Some say That thou art John the Baptist: some, Elias; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets." Do you see how fruitless and painfully blind and without spiritual understanding is the natural reasoning? The natural mind could present many reasons for imagining that this Jesus was none other than John the Baptist. Others had equal arguments that He was Elijah, perhaps because of His miracles and the supernatural element that surrounded His very existence. Still others had good arguments to substantiate their claims that this man of sorrows and acquainted with grief was none other than the weeping Jeremiah. But they were all wrong, for there was not an ounce of revelation in any of them, but only human reasoning. No ray of true light had shone from above into their spirits. Well do their vain arguments resemble the hodgepodge of church doctrines fought and warred over by the princes of the various religious denominations of the day! Every one is convinced in his own mind that he has all the arguments to substantiate his case and all the answers to the questions of his opponents, none knowing that the true light comes not by human learning, but by the clear shining light of God revealing the truth to the human spirit. With this in mind let us then read the remaining verses of the passage: "He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am? And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but My Father which is in heaven."

That is what revelation really is. It is when the Holy Spirit takes the things of God and shows them unto us, for Jesus said, "When He, the Spirit of truth, is come, He will guide you into all truth: for He shall not speak of Himself; but whatsoever He shall hear, that shall He speak: and He will show you things to come. He shall glorify Me: for He shall receive of Mine, and shall show it unto you." John 16:13-14.

It may be difficult for some to understand what I will now say, but it is undeniably true. Though you should hear the words of truth spoken by Elijah, Peter, or an angel of God, you will not understand it nor will it transform your life except the Holy Spirit take the truth and reveal it unto your heart. You may listen to the anointed preaching of the apostle Paul or hear the words of grace such as no man ever spoke from the lips of Jesus Christ Himself, yet you will neither see nor understand unless the Holy Spirit takes the truth and floods your spirit with light and understanding. "For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." 2 Cor. 4:6. The fact that, when Jesus or Paul preached the truth, some believed while others cursed and cast stones proves as nothing else can that the natural mind is completely blind to spiritual truth and must remain that way until the revelation of the Son of man, as the lightning shining from the east even unto the west, floods the darkened mind with the understanding of the Lord.

Few facts of history are more familiar to the Christian than the story of the life and conversion of Saul of Tarsus. He was a man of much learning (Acts 26-24) brought up at the feet of Gamaliel, one of the ablest instructors of the day (Acts 22:3), diligent in the Jews' religion and learned in it above many who were his equals, concerning the law blameless, full of religious zeal, abounding in argument and ready with proofs, hating Christ and every sermon that concerned Him, persecuting unto the death all who were in His way. Yet one day the light of revelation shone as lightning into the darkness of his spirit, revealing that Jesus was indeed the Christ. Falling down upon the ground in astonishment, he cried, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" What transforming glory was it that changed the hated Jesus of Nazareth to "Lord"? It was the true light shining into his heart, revealing in a split second what all the toilsome years of study had failed to reveal. With what joy did Paul write many years later, saying, "When it pleased God, who separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by His grace, to reveal His Son in me, that I might preach Him among the heathen; immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood: Neither went I up to Jerusalem to them which were apostles before me. ..." Gal. 1:15-17. Oh, what a change is made in our lives when the darkness begins to pass away and the true light begins to shine.

It is by no means infrequent that well-meaning people write to me greatly offended because of some truth I have written. Some are so enraged that they tell me things about myself that I never knew before. Others exhort me and beg me to repent of my evil teaching, refusing to listen to anything further that I may say. When God has revealed a transforming secret to your heart, brethren with whom you have had sweet communion for many years will cast you as profane from their midst and refuse to associate with you any more. We should not wonder at this phenomenon, neither should we be resentful or angry, for revelation positively cannot be comprehended by the natural mind. It is just as impossible for the natural mind to comprehend spiritual truth as it is for a blind man to see the flowers in the garden or the birds in the trees. When we see a blind man on the street, we do not condemn him because of his physical disability, but instead we offer him our arm to lead him safely through the intersection. He cannot see for the simple reason that he is blind and none but God can open his eyes. Why then should we feel either impatience or anger at the spiritual blindness of men since their blindness is even more acute and their darkness more intense? Can any but God open their eyes or cause the scales to fall from them as they fell from Saul of Tarsus? Acts 9:18. Dare we, then, blame these blind men for their blindness since God has seen fit to "give them the spirit of slumber, eyes that they should not see, and ears that they should not hear, unto this day," and has said, "Let their eyes be darkened that they may not see, and bow down their back always (for an age)" Rom. 11:8 and 10.

Does not the scripture say of Israel, "Blindness in part has happened unto Israel, until the fullness of the Gentiles be come in?" Rom. 11:25. Is this blindness of their own doing or is it part of the purpose of God? If it is part of God's eternal purpose, then no amount of preaching, work, or expense will remove the veil from their eyes. But the same God who declared that blindness in part had happened to them also emphatically stated that they will all be saved, saying, "And so all Israel shall be saved: as it is written, There shall come out of Zion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob." Rom. 11:26. It was God who said, "Let their eyes be darkened that they may not see, and bow down their back always (for an age)," and it is God who will heal them of their blindness when the appointed time shall come. For He has said, "Have they stumbled that they should fall? God forbid, but rather through their fall salvation is come to the Gentiles, ..." Rom. 11:11. To declare further the mystery of His purpose He asks this surprising question: "Now if the fall of them be the riches of the world, and the diminishing of them the riches of the Gentiles, how much more their fullness?" See verse 12. We shall hasten now to say that the hour of their fullness is very, very near at hand.

Many of God's people have made the mistake of seeking for revelation, hoping that God would reveal some new and startling thing to them that they might thrill their audiences with their preaching. This is wrong and will bring nothing but deception and false imaginations and human notions to puff them up in pride. The true light that shines is not a light from without but a light from within. It is Jesus Christ Himself as the bright shining of a lamp giving light to all the house. The more we love Him the more He opens His heart to us. The more we listen to His voice the more we will hear Him speaking words such as no man ever spake, instructing our hearts in purposes that have lain hidden from the foundation of the ages.

Once two bewildered and heart-broken believers communed in sadness on the lonely road that leads from Jerusalem to Emmaus. Their steps were heavy with their grief. The more they talked of the events that had transpired the deeper their sorrow grew. The more they puzzled for the answer to their problem the deeper the mystery became—till one drew near from the deepening shadows to walk as a comforting spirit by their side. "What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk, and are sad?" He asked.

And one of them, whose name was Cleopas, answering said unto Him, Art Thou only a stranger in Jerusalem, and hast not known the things which are come to pass there in these days? And He said unto them, What things? And they said unto Him, Concerning Jesus of Nazareth, which was a prophet mighty in deed and word before God and all the people: And how the chief priests and our rulers delivered Him to be condemned to death, and have crucified Him. But we trusted that it had been He, which should have redeemed Israel: and beside all this, today is the third day since these things were done. Yea, and certain women also of our company made us astonished, which were early at the sepulcher; and when they found not His body, they came, saying that they had also seen a vision of angels, which said that He was alive. And certain of them which were with us went to the sepulcher, and found it even so as the women had said; but Him they found not.” Luke 24:17-24.

What a dilemma these dear people were in! They had built their hopes to the skies and in one dread day all their dreams lay in ashes at their feet. Wrong ideas and many fallen hopes fill our lives because we build castles in the flickering light of the candle of human understanding instead of the revealing rays of the true light which He is. But, when our hopes have fled away and our ambitions lie in ashes at our feet, then we will find that it was Jesus Christ we really wanted after all. It is when the things that charm us crumble in dust that our love returns to Him and He once more stands by our side to speak the words of truth and revelation to our heart. When His revealing voice sounds in our ear, the traditions of men, like outcast devils, flee away to hide in the nether darkness from which they came. It is when we are at the end of our own understanding that Jesus speaks. He does not reveal His purposes to the ambitious priests and preachers of our day. They are usually far too full of their own purposes and their ambitions for the conversion of the world and the building up of their puny kingdoms. Well did the prophet speak of them, saying, "They are all gone astray; they have turned every one to his own way. Their mouth is an open sepulcher; with their tongues they have used deceit." But broken hearts with earthly hopes and ambitions gone are ready to listen to the wisdom of Him who caused light to shine out of darkness and the visible realms to be formed from things invisible.

"O fools," He said, "and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken: Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into His glory? And beginning at Moses and all the prophets, He expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning Himself." Luke 24:25, 26. This must have been the most revealing sermon ever preached and the most wonderful revelation of truth ever given to mankind. Who but Christ Himself could begin with Moses and all the prophets and expound unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning Himself? Is it any wonder that their hearts burned within them as He spoke with them in the way. Need our own hearts be surprised that at the blessing and breaking of the bread their eyes were opened and they knew Him? A greater and more perfect revelation of Jesus Christ will lie at the end of our every enlightenment. For three years they had walked with Jesus of Nazareth, but now He is risen from the dead to stand on the resurrection side of the tomb. Only those who, in the blazing light of revelation, stand with Him there can ever know that He is alive and has become the head of a new creation of deathless men who live for evermore.

"And they rose up the same hour, and returned to Jerusalem, and found the eleven gathered together, and them that were with them, saying, The Lord is risen indeed..." Luke 24:33-34. If we by the Spirit of God can draw near to each other for a few moments, we will talk of things of eternal importance. We will see how important it is that we should have the spirit of revelation in all things.
See now the truth of the statement, "the body without the spirit is dead." It is undeniably true that there is a body lying in yonder coffin, but because it has no spirit in it and the soul, too, has departed from it, it is therefore dead. It is dead to itself and it is dead to all who stand about it. It is even thus with truth. Truth may be there for all to see, but without the spirit of revelation it is dead to us and we are dead to it. Even the body of Christ was dead until the Spirit raised Him from the dead. And it is overwhelmingly evident that the truths He spoke were often no more than idle tales to those who heard them. Jesus, while walking with His disciples, spoke of His death and resurrection, but they understood not what He said. After His resurrection He showed them His hands and His side, yet they believed not for joy and wondered. Luke 24:41. "And He said unto them, These are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms concerning Me. Then opened He their understanding, that they might understand the scriptures." Luke 24:44-45.

We may know a truth as an historical fact and yet not know it as a spiritual reality. The cross of Jesus Christ is a fact of history, written not only in the Bible but in profane history as well. It can no more be denied than the history of Julius Caesar or the account of his assassination, and to many millions it is of no more purpose or significance. It is the spirit of revelation that makes us know that the cross bore God's Son upon it and that the blood that flowed from His wounds was better blood than the blood of Abel. It is revelation that assures our hearts that through the shedding of His blood a fountain was opened for all sin and all uncleanness. It is revelation that tells us that "God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through Him might be saved." By it our joyful hearts declare that through the disobedience of one many were made sinners, but through the obedience of one many are made righteous. Countless millions who believe the resurrection as an historical fact carry a crucifix about their necks because they have never seen by the Spirit that He is not dead, but alive—not on the cross, but at God's right hand. Oh, what a breathtaking shock it must have been to the disciples when Jesus opened their understanding to the truth of the resurrection! The shameful death of their Master, which was to them an immeasurable tragedy, was now salvation, not only of themselves but of all the world besides. The resurrection, which until this blessed moment was but an idle and impossible tale, was now a living reality. How well did the apostle Paul explain the wonders of our faith when he said, "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Heb. 11:1.

With deep sorrow of heart I continually behold the spectacle of men and women emphatically declaring that the entire church system in this the end of the age is the mystery Babylon clearly spoken of throughout the Bible and described in the book of Revelation as the great harlot. But do these people who declare these things come out of her as the scripture bids them do? No, indeed, they seldom do. Instead they continue to throw their lot in with her abominations, refusing to walk in the simplicity of the way of Jesus Christ. And why do they remain within the fold of that harlot system? It is because of one thing and one thing only: They know with their minds that she is mystery Babylon, but the solemn and staggering truth of it has not been revealed to them by the Spirit. They have seen it with the natural mind but not with the spirit. Two millions watched Christ die as "sitting down they watched Him there." Matt. 27:36. But the knowledge that God's Son was dying for them all had never dawned upon them, and only the merest few knew the eternal fact.

The hour is at hand when great Mystery Babylon will have come to the fullness of her drunken, swaggering reign. Apostasy is rampant in the land. Protestantism and Catholicism with all their divisions and heresies are even now one in spirit. Apostasy is rampant in those backslidden sects who call themselves orthodox. A dreadful, blinding, delusive spirit fills the land with false prophecy, false teaching, false miracles, and worthless conversions. Well did Isaiah speak of this generation when he said, "... The priest and the prophet have erred through strong drink, they are swallowed up of wine, they are out of the way through strong drink. They err in vision, and they stumble in judgment. For all tables are full of vomit and filthiness, so that there is no place clean." Isa. 28:7-8. And well did the apostle Peter write their epigraph. "The dog is turned to his own vomit again, and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire." 2 Pet. 2:22.

May God grant each one the spirit of revelation and understanding that we may come out of her now to lay hold on the hope that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith.
From earth's teeming millions of all ages there is a people rising in the image of Christ. They are neither Greek nor Jew, circumcision nor uncircumcision, Barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free, but to them Christ is all and in all. As the elect of God, holy and beloved, they are putting on bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, and longsuffering. As God forgave them, so they extend forgiveness to all men, for the love of God in their hearts is the golden chain that links all their virtues. They do not overlook sin nor excuse those who despise God, but by the wisdom God has given them they are certain that all things are working together for the good of those who truly love God and have been called by Him according to His infinite purpose. The knowledge of God's eternal purpose explains all things to their hearts whether they be things good or things evil. It teaches them that their bitterest and most obstinate enemies as well as their devoted friends have been raised up by God for the purpose of refining them that they might be perfected and God's name might be known in all the earth.

There is a nation rising in the earth who is seeking only the things which are above where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Their loving affections have been transferred from the perishing things of a dying world to the imperishable things of an eternal realm. As Christ died on the cross of Calvary and rose again the third day to a life incorruptible and immortal, so they each day reckon themselves dead indeed unto this age and all the sin in it that when Christ who is their life shall appear, they may also appear glorified with Him. Though they live on the earth, yet they have become dead to worldly contacts. They have nothing to do with dirty mindedness or immorality, uncontrolled passion or evil desire. They do not lust after other people's possessions or goods, knowing that covetousness is as serious as the sin of idolatry, and because of such sins the wrath of God falls upon the children of disobedience. Let us never forget that we once had our part in evil when we lived in the old life before we were saved, even as Peter exhorted the people, saying, "For the time past of our life may suffice to have wrought the will of the Gentiles, when we walked in lasciviousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquetings and abominable idolatries," and "that we should no longer live the rest of our time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the lust of God."

"Where your treasure is there will your heart be also." Therefore set your affections on things above, and not on things of earth; for ye are dead to the earth and your true life is in Christ. Therefore put off anger, wrath, malice, lying, blasphemy, and filthy communications and put on the new garment of a life from heaven, of mercy, kindness, humility of mind, longsuffering, forbearance, and peace, for all these linked together by the bond of God's love make you perfect in Him. God's divine power in Christ has given us all things that pertain to a life of godliness. Through the knowledge of Christ God has called us to a life of glory and virtue, for it is through Him that God has made His greatest and most precious promises available to us, making it possible for us to share God's nature here and now and also to escape the corruption and degeneration that lust has produced in all the world.

There is a people rising from the dust of the earth to sit together with Christ in heavenly places. Though they live on the earth and dwell among men, they are strangers and foreigners in the earth, for their true citizenship is in heaven. Here they have no continuing city but they seek one to come whose builder and maker is God. Because they are strangers in the earth, they never feel at home in it. Their speech does not agree with the accent of those who are of the earth earthly. Because they are foreigners, they are pilgrims. Therefore they pause not to build mansions here, but daily pitch their moving tent toward that better country.

Our Lord Jesus Christ said. "For I say unto you that this that is written must yet be accomplished in Me... for things concerning Me have an end." Luke 22:27. That is, all the things written must find their fulfillment in Him. He is before all things and by Him all things consist. All things were made by Him and without Him was not anything made that was made. In Him all the fullness of God dwells embodied. "Of Him and through Him and to Him are all things." Every purpose of God the Father finds its full expression in Christ, the Son of God, and also at last in that blessed company of elect, who with Christ and through Him attain the ineffable wonder of sonship as members of the household of God that Christ may be the eldest in a vast family of brothers.

The things concerning Me have an end! No word was ever freighted with greater truth than this, for nothing in God can ever be attained apart from Him. "It pleased the Father that in Him should all fullness dwell, because by the blood of His cross He has reconciled all things to Himself, whether they be things in earth or things in heaven." Should it then be thought strange that God should decree that all things thus reconciled by Him should also find all else in Him who has thus reconciled them? So great is God's joy in His Son, Jesus Christ, that He has purposed in His heart to prepare a whole body or race of sons in the exact image and likeness of His only begotten Son, who is Himself the express image of God, and the first born of every creature. In that momentous hour of the eternal fiat," Let Us make man in Our image and after Our likeness," God Himself was proclaiming His irrevocable purpose to include all of Adam's race in the image of His Son, for I am persuaded that neither death nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is manifest to the world in Jesus Christ our Lord. "For God has made all men prisoners of disobedience that He might have mercy upon them all. How inexhaustible God's resources, wisdom, and knowledge are! How unfathomable His decisions; how untraceable His ways! Who has ever known the Lord's thoughts or advised Him, or who has advanced anything to Him for which he will have to be repaid? For from Him everything comes; through Him everything exists; and in Him everything ends! Glory to Him forever! Amen." Rom. 11:32-36. (Good-speed).

It is by the moving of the Holy Spirit that we are brought into the image of Jesus Christ. As there is no other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved, so also there is no other power that can bring us into sonship and the image of Christ except the power of that blessed Holy Spirit who proceedeth forth from the Father and the Son. John 15:26. It was the Holy Spirit who moved upon the face of the waters in the beginning bringing order out of earth's chaos and light out of darkness four days before the sun was set in the heaven. Gen. 1:14-19. It was the Holy Spirit who overshadowed the virgin Mary to form the blessed Son of God in her womb, and it was the Holy Spirit who came forth from heaven at Pentecost at the behest of Christ to begin the formation of that elect company who should at last bear His image and His likeness and be called the family of God. All that God decrees He decrees by His Son, and all that God performs He performs by His Holy Spirit. He sendeth forth His Spirit and they are created. He reneweth the face of the earth. Psa. 104:30. "The wind (the Spirit) bloweth where it h'steth and thou hearest the sound thereof but canst not tell whence it cometh nor whither it goeth; so is everyone that is born of the Spirit." John 3:8. "Day and night Thy hand (Spirit) was heavy upon me," said David. Psa. 32:4. The Holy Spirit is the hand of God, bringing order out of chaos and life out of death. It is He who convicts the ungodly of sin and righteousness and judgment (John 16:8-11); of sin because they believed not on Christ, of righteousness because Christ has gone to the Father, death being unable to hold Him, for no cause of death was in Him, and of judgment because even the prince of this world is judged.

It is a source of heaviness to me that so few people have any knowledge at all concerning that blessed personality, the Holy Spirit. Through ignorance men rob Him of personality and describe Him as an influence or some mystical power that they are to grasp and use. But the Holy Spirit is not an influence or an impersonal thing. The Holy Spirit is a personality as distinct as God the Father or God the Son, and yet with them as truly one God as our spirit and soul and body are one man. Eight times over in John 16:13-14 the personal pronoun He is repeated with reference to the Holy Spirit who was sent by Jesus Christ to form the church. "Howbeit, when He the Spirit of truth is come, He will guide you into all truth; for He shall not speak of Himself; but whatsoever He shall hear that shall He speak; and He will show you things to come. He shall glorify Me, for He shall receive of Mine and shall show it unto you." No man has seen God at any time, and no man with an ounce of respect or reverence would ever profess to understand God, but, if we see in the blessed Holy Spirit nothing more than a mysterious power that we can get hold of and use, we will derive nothing from Him at all. But, if we reverence Him as a divine Person, full of wisdom and understanding, counsel and might, the Spirit of God, the Spirit of holiness, the Spirit of truth that has actually come to dwell in us forever to transform us into the very image of Christ, then our life will be lived on an entirely different basis, being molded and fashioned by God that worketh in us both to will and to do His good pleasure. Even now, while we live and breathe, the elect of God, the first fruit whom He has chosen, experience within themselves the reality of this truth: "I will dwell in them and walk in them, and I shall be their God, and they shall be My people." 2 Cor. 6:16.

Personally I always refuse to participate in the janglings of self-styled theologians, for they know neither what they say nor whereof they affirm. A theological argument is like a dog fight in a flower bed; the only thing that is settled is the flowers. I do not need a professional theologian to explain to me that I am spirit, soul, and body in one man, for that is beyond man's ability to explain. Neither do I need a Doctor of Divinity (pardon the expression) to explain to me how God is Father, Son, and Holy Spirit in one God. It is beyond you and beyond me; so let us believe it and refuse to pry into it.
Every man who is coming into the blessed sonship, which God has ordained has received the Spirit of sonship which Paul calls the Spirit of adoption. By that Spirit we recognize God to be our Father. As smoke rises spontaneously from burning incense, so without external stimulus from hearts filled with the Spirit of sonship the cry ascends, Abba Father, (our Father), and we with unveiled face, beholding as in a mirror the glory of the Lord, are changed into that same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord. 2 Cor. 3:18. Thus it is the Spirit of the Lord that changes men from one glory to another until at last the ultimate goal is attained, even the glory of the image of Christ.

At this very moment the people of God are in various stages of glory, for there are celestial bodies and bodies terrestrial, and the glory of the terrestrial is one (one glory) and the glory of the celestial is another (another glory). 1 Cor. 15:40. Then there is one glory of the sun, another glory of the moon, and another of the stars; and even among the stars one differeth from another in glory. 1 Cor. 15:41. So also are God's people now passing from one stage of God's glory to another if they are permitting the Holy Spirit to work within them, for we all with open face, beholding as in a glass (mirror) the glory of the Lord, are changed into that same image from glory to glory even as by the Spirit of the Lord. 2 Cor. 3:18.

It would be impossible to over-estimate the enormous importance of the work of the Holy Spirit within us, for it is He and He alone who is overshadowing us that Christ might be fully formed in us and we may grow from little children whose sins are forgiven for His name's sake to young men who are strong, having overcome the wicked one and in whom the word of God forever abides, 1 John 2:12,13, yes, that we may be changed from the glory of the stars to the glory of the moon to the glory of the sun.

The importance of the Holy Spirit's moving within us is magnified by the awesome fact that we know not what we should pray for as we ought. Rom. 8:26. Oh, how often people pray and pray for this and that! They pray because they were asked to pray. They pray that God will grant them their personal desires and ambitions. They pray for the removal of a trial or some thorn in the flesh. They pray all around the earth for everybody and everything they can think about, but perhaps not one sentence of their multiplied prayers came from the burden and longing of the Holy Ghost within them. Because we know not what we should pray for as we ought, we should recognize without delay how desperately we need the help and inspiration of the Holy Spirit who stands ready to help our infirmity and make intercession for us with groanings that cannot be uttered. "And He that searcheth the hearts (God the Father) knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit, because He maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God." See Rom. 8:26,27.

It is a good thing to have set times of communion with God when we can make ourselves available to God. Nevertheless, long experience has taught me that all those who earnestly long to yield themselves to the Holy Spirit must of necessity make themselves available at all times, for the Holy Spirit is like the wind that bloweth where it listeth. We cannot tell where it comes from or where it is going. Neither can we tell when it is coming nor when it is going. The Holy Spirit will just as likely call us to intercession in the middle of the night as in the middle of the day, and those people who will obey His loving urge on all occasions will find themselves being changed from one glory to another, even as by the Spirit of the Lord. Indeed, we may not know what the burden of the Spirit is as He groans within us, but He that searcheth the hearts understands every longing and interprets every groan and sigh of intercession according to the will of God. "For whom He did foreknow He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son that He might be the firstborn among many brethren." See then how Paul places sonship and spiritual travail together. Rom. 8:26-30.

All things that happened to Israel happened to them for examples to us upon whom the end of the ages are come. 1 Cor. 10:11. If we would observe with greater attention, we would also see that every detail of the life of Jesus Christ was an example to us and a direct teaching of things to come. Thousands today are talking about sonship; yet how pitifully few have even a remote idea of how sonship is to be attained. Anxious people point to this renowned healer or that outstanding person as an example of sonship, but fame and notability have nothing whatever to do with sonship. Miracles, signs, wonders, prophecies, tongues or faith are not signs of sonship nor even evidence of God's good pleasure, for one may have all these things and yet be as sounding brass or tinkling cymbal or, worse still, be unknown to God and cast out. Matt. 7:22-23. Never put your confidence in any of these things. Sonship is not a reward for services rendered. Sonship is a relationship with God the Father.
Two thousand years ago an archangel from heaven came to a lowly virgin woman with a proclamation from God. The wondrous fiat he bore was that the Christ child should be formed within her. She was amazed at the announcement and doubted how such a thing could be because she was an unmarried woman. Therefore she asked the very logical question, "How shall these things be seeing I know not a man?" Luke 1:34. What better question could this troubled woman ask than the question, "How shall these things be?" And is not this the question that we have asked a thousand times twice told? How shall I attain sonship? How shall I come into that glorious manifestation of the sons of God? Yes, indeed, we have asked the question, repeating it many times, but the answer is the same to us as it was to Mary, "The Holy Ghost shall come upon you and the power of the Highest shall overshadow you, and that holy thing that shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." Luke 1:35.

The angel announced a natural birth to Mary, but he is announcing a spiritual birth to us. All natural things are exactly opposite to spiritual things; therefore, the physical Christ-child that was formed in her was to be separated from her, but the Christ that is formed in us by the Spirit of God abides with us forever until we say in truth, "I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless, I live; yet not I, but Christ, liveth in me." He will never be separated from us, but abide within us forever. It was this very truth that thrilled the soul of Job as amid his grief he murmured, "I know that my Redeemer liveth and He shall stand at the latter days upon the earth, and, if after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." Job 19:25. Yea, and we will sing with Mary, "My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour; For He hath regarded the low estate of His handmaiden; For, behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed. For He that is mighty hath done to me great things; and holy is His Name. And His mercy is upon them that fear Him from generation to generation. He hath put down the mighty from their seats, and exalted them of low degree. He hath filled the hungry with good things; and the rich He hath sent empty away. He hath holpen His servant Israel in remembrance of His mercy. As He spake to our fathers, to Abraham, and to his seed forever." Luke 1:46-55.

Oh, that men and women who long after spiritual reality and truth would turn their ears away from the high sounding rubbish preached by the mouthy puppeteers of our land! Oh, that they would cease from following after men to enquire of them and imbibe their vain philosophy! Oh, that they would call a halt to running hither and thither seeking after the spectacular, and in place of all such vanity behold the glory of the Lord as His Spirit moves upon them like a gentle whispering wind that they might be changed into that same image from glory to glory even as by the Spirit of the Lord. What place do silly modern trappings have in our transformation into that same image of Christ? Do melodious quartettes with well, trained voices, robed choirs, and jazzy instrumentals cause men to behold God's transforming glory that they may be changed by His Spirit into the perfect image of Christ? Do you think that the resplendent glory that shone like a sun from the face of Moses when he returned from the mount was the result of a jitterbugging hand-clapping meeting where pseudo saints strummed their guitars and sang "My, didn't it rain" or "Joshua fit the battle of Jericho?" No! My God, no! He stood in God's presence where if so much as a beast had touched the mountain it would have been slain; and so terrible was the sight that even Moses said, "I do exceedingly fear and quake." I have no hesitation in saying that, should the glory of the Lord appear today, these childish entertainers who earn their living by amusing gullible Christians with their antics would not know which way to look, for they know nothing of God's glory, but are deceivers of themselves and of the people as well.

The hour has come; yea, the hour is past for us to cease our running after the harlot daughters of great Mystery Babylon. Shall the sons of God today behold the fair beauty of the daughters of men as they did in Noah's day? Shall we in our day repeat their wicked error? In those terrible days before the flood the sons of God made marriage with the daughters of men and the result of that adulterous union was that there were wicked giants in the earth, men of renown. Gen. 6. With that union wickedness knew no bounds in the earth. This dreadful truth has struck me like a thunderbolt, for I perceive that the same terrible circumstance is happening all around us. Men who are called and chosen of God are every day making their adulterous marriage with the harlots of Babylon. The result of this union is that there are giants in the earth today, men of renown, evangelists and preachers of international fame, who use their abilities to gain converts, and after they have gained them, they send them back to the "church of their choice" that they also may squander their living and waste their gifts in the service of a harlot system that awaits the fearful judgment of God. As it was in the days of Noah, so should it be in the days of the Son of man. There were giants, men of renown, then, and there are giants in the earth now, men of renown whose names have become household words internationally.
I have no confidence in anything that pretends to be a spiritual move, which leaves its converts in a harlot system already under the curse of God, waiting His fearful and instantaneous judgment. "These are spots in your feasts of charity, feeding themselves without fear. Clouds they are without water, carried about by (doctrinal) winds; trees whose fruit withereth, twice dead, plucked up by the roots, raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame; wandering stars, for whom is reserved the blackness of darkness forever."
Enoch, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these saying, "The Lord cometh with ten thousands of His saints to execute judgment upon all and to convince all who are ungodly of their ungodly deeds which they have

If we will turn our hearts away from the religious vanity, the churchianity, and the fraud that everywhere besets us, and turn our eyes upon Christ Jesus, we will find that He is all in all. God's people are guilty of a great error in that they have sought so many things. They have sought salvation, truth, righteousness, wisdom, sanctification, spiritual gifts, healing power, sonship, and a host of other things but oh, what a universe of truth is bound up in this simple statement, "He that spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him freely give us all things?" Rom. 8:32. See what a tremendous weight of truth is sheltered here, teaching us that God gives all things with His Son Jesus Christ, and apart from Him He gives nothing.
This does not mean that God gives us Christ as a Saviour, and that afterward we are to commence seeking truth and wisdom and righteousness, for Christ Himself is truth and there is no truth apart from Him. To know Him is to know truth, walk in truth, speak in truth, be filled with truth, and at last to be truth itself.

Furthermore to know Him who is truth empowers one to immediately recognize all that is error. The more we come to know Christ, the more we come to recognize the flagrant error of so much that is taught in the name of truth. If the doctrines that men try so hard to prove run contrary to the very nature of Christ, then know that all that is contrary to His gracious Spirit is error. For years without number the evangelicals in their missionary fervor have taught that all heathen men will be condemned forever to groan in eternal flames in unremitting torment because they did not accept Christ, their ignorance of His existence being no excuse whatever. I have no hesitation whatsoever in calling this a lie, because everything about it is contrary to the very nature of the blessed Christ I know. It is contrary to His love, contrary to His kindness and mercy, contrary to His foreknowledge, contrary to immutable wisdom, and contrary to His great and all inclusive redemption, of which it is stated that as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.

It is not our purpose here to settle doctrinal errors or to refute the traditions of men, but rather to show that all who truly know Christ become acquainted with His ways. Thus they know instinctively whether or not the things they hear concerning Him are born of truth or born of error. David in his Psalms said, "He made known His ways unto Moses; His acts unto the children of Israel." There is a great difference between the children of Israel, who as bystanders saw the acts of God, and Moses, who knew

God's ways simply because he knew God. I have heard people talk and talk like gleeful children returning from a circus about the little things they have seen God do in their midst, but all their glowing talk was a heaviness and a grief to my spirit, because all they knew concerned the acts of God which they had seen, but God Himself they did not know.

Christ, then, is truth, and to know Christ is to know truth. We do not find truth by thumbing through the manifold opinions of men, picking out a morsel here and a nugget there. We come to know truth by knowing Him.
Centuries ago our Lord Jesus stood before Pontius Pilate. Pilate asked, "Art Thou a king, then?" To this Jesus replied, "Thou sayest that I am a king." To be crowned as a king was not the purpose of Christ's first coming. It was the Jews who had accused Him of wanting to be a king." Therefore He replied, "Thou sayest that I am a king." After saying this, He told Pilate what His true purpose of coming into the world really was, saying, "To this end was I born, and for this purpose came I into the world, that I might bear witness unto the truth. Every one that is of the truth heareth My voice." John 18:37. To this statement Pilate asked, "What is truth?" And if he had waited for a reply, he would not have heard a long dissertation on a multiplicity of doctrines, but the same simple statement that thrilled the enquiring Thomas, "I am the way, the truth, and the life." John 14:6.
How well did David say, "Thou wilt show me the path of life; in Thy presence is fullness of joy and at Thy right hand are pleasures for ever more." Psa. 16:11.

In our associations with Christian people we find many who would give almost anything if they could attain to a great gift of power but it is seldom that men covet wisdom. Yet "wisdom is the principal thing." Wisdom is better than rubies and more to be desired than fine gold. Fools despise wisdom and instruction but the Lord layeth up sound wisdom for the upright. Therefore let wisdom enter into thine heart. Happy is the man that findeth it, for he shall receive favor of the Lord. If we make wisdom our sister, understanding will be our kinswoman. If we exalt her (wisdom), she will promote us, and if we embrace her, she will bring us honor. Wisdom is a crown of glory to our head and an ornament of grace about our neck, but the fear of the Lord is the very foundation of wisdom.

God has made Christ to be our wisdom. 1 Cor. 1:30. In Him are all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge. Col. 2:3. Because they are hidden in Him, then it is impossible to find them anywhere else except in Him. The natural man never understands the things of the Spirit of God. They appear foolishness to him, for he does not dwell hi Christ, but in the world. There is one wisdom from beneath and another wisdom from above. The first is of the earth earthy; the second is of the Lord from heaven. They are as opposite as day and night. In fact, they are the day and the night.

The apostle Paul had learned a wonderful thing when he came to the Corinthians, saying, "When I came to you, I came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom declaring unto you the testimony of God, for I determined to know nothing among you save Jesus Christ and Him crucified; and my speech was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the spirit and power." He knew, too, that Jesus Christ was God's wisdom.

Oh, to know that God gives nothing apart from Jesus Christ! He does not give us wisdom. He gives us Christ and in Him are hidden all the treasures of wisdom. How eloquent then were the words of Paul: "Let this mind dwell in you which was also in Christ Jesus," for the mind that dwelt in Christ Jesus was the Father's mind, the mind that holds within its omniscient greatness every secret of the universe whether terrestrial, sidereal, or celestial, secrets which He Himself had made and hidden within the greatness of His own mind to be shared by those who let His mind dwell in them. How inexhaustible God's resources of wisdom and knowledge are! How unfathomable His decisions, how untraceable His ways!

Should all the things of wisdom be written that should be written, they would fill not only the pages of this tiny book but the world and the universe as well. The day utters God's wisdom; the night showeth His understanding. When unlearned and ignorant men have been with Jesus, all men take note of them. Neither can they resist the wisdom and understanding with which they speak, for the Lord has made Him to be the wisdom of God, and all who dwell in Him dwell in wisdom. Without question a man could study all his life concerning the wisdom of God and, though he might marvel at it, yet he could not possess it, for wisdom is not a thing to be learned, but wisdom is a living person, and that person is Jesus Christ the Lord.

God's righteousness is neither a moral standard nor a code of ethics. God's righteousness is Jesus Christ. Apart from Him all our righteousnesses are filthy rags and putrefying sores. To come to the heavenly Father saying, "Lord, I thank Thee that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even this publican," is to come trusting in our own righteousness, and to go away unjustified. But to come to God as a sinner, believing only in the righteousness of Christ, which He freely offered to all the world through the shedding of His blood, is to find cleansing from every sin and righteousness in His sight. Christ is God's righteousness, and He is our righteousness, and all who believe in Him are justified.

The righteousness that comes to men through Jesus Christ is based not on achieving, but on believing, for the righteousness of God without the law is manifested, being witnessed by the law and the prophets, even the righteousness of God which comes by faith in Jesus Christ unto all them that believe. No difference is made among men, for all have sinned and come short of the glory of God; but we are justified freely by God's grace through the great redemption God has provided in Christ Jesus whom God has made a propitiation (that is, one who completely satisfies the law-giver) through faith in His blood to declare His righteousness for the remission of sins, that God might be a just God and the justifier of all who believe in Jesus Christ. Compare Rom. 3:21-28.

There is no righteousness anywhere available outside of Jesus Christ, whom God hath made our righteousness. God looked for judgment but behold, oppression. He looked for righteousness but, behold, a cry, Isa. 5:7, (the cry of the oppressed). Christ is made unto us righteousness, 1 Cor. 1:30, and we are made the righteousness of God in Him. 1 Cor. 5:21. With the heart man believeth unto righteousness, Rom. 10:10, and with the mouth confession is made that it has been found in Christ. Thus we are found in Him, not having our own righteousness, but the righteousness of God, which comes by faith in Jesus Christ. See Phil. 3:8, 9.

In considering a subject so vast as this we must freely admit that one could go on and on forever, never finding a suitable place to stop. Scripture can be added to scripture, type-to-type, and prophecy to prophecy to demonstrate times without number that Jesus Christ is all in all. What an eternity it would take to exhaust this one truth: God hath made Him to be wisdom and righteousness, sanctification and redemption! Hundreds of men have spent their whole lifetime studying the lowly spider, of which there are now fifty thousand known species with more being added every year. Others spend their whole life probing the mysteries of the human brain, but find its mystery far beyond the reach of man. If earthly things are so far beyond our wisdom and ability to comprehend, how can we ever expect to fathom the wisdom of God, His righteousness, the power of His sanctification, or the marvels of His redemption? No wonder Jesus said, "If I have told you earthly things and ye believe not, how shall ye believe if I tell you of heavenly things?"

All the truths of the resurrection can be learned by diligent study but there is one truth that cannot be learned by study, and that is that Jesus Christ Himself is the resurrection and apart from Him there is no resurrection. In vital union with Him there is not only resurrection, but also a complete absence of death, for He is both resurrection and life. We delight to hear the story of Martha and Mary at the tomb of Lazarus, and of Jesus who dried away their falling tears as He transformed their theories of a far-off resurrection day to a living reality that they might see that the resurrection was not a doctrine, but a person, not the almost hopeless waiting for an event too distant for reality, but the wonderful nearness of a Christ in whom there was no death, but only life eternal. Well had Martha said, "Lord, if Thou hadst been here, my brother had not died." How could he have died in the presence of eternal life? And furthermore, how could he remain dead in the literal presence of the resurrection?

Many years ago the renowned D. L. Moody was called upon to preach his first funeral sermon. Not knowing what to say at a funeral, he searched his mind in vain for a suitable topic. At last he thought of a seemingly good idea. He would look through the gospels for one of Jesus’ own funeral sermons. To his amazement he made the marvelous discovery that Jesus never preached a funeral sermon, but broke up every funeral He attended by raising the dead to life again.

"I am the resurrection"; thus He spoke
In lovely Bethany one cloudy day
To weeping sisters; yet those living words Healed not their wounds, nor dried their tears away.
Naught did they see but death; the chasm wide
Was deep and dark and cold. They did not know Eternal life was standing by their side.

"I am the resurrection". Yet they wept,
Though Life Eternal looked into their eyes;
For resurrection came to visit earth
When Jesus left His home beyond the skies.
So Life walked down that day with human feet
To where death trembled in the graves dark gloom;
Life challenged death; he dropped the keys and fled
And with Christ's life a man came from the tomb.
"I am the resurrection"; angels smiled
That day in spring they rolled the stone away;
While humans wept, they could not yet believe
That conquered death could never hold his prey.
But in that grave Life stepped from out a shroud.
Life fears no shrouds, nor death's vale dark and wild;
The everlasting arms were lifting Him
As tenderly as Mother lifts her child.

"I am the resurrection;" Jesus walked Beneath the trees that He Himself had made;
And watched a broken hearted woman weep
Outside a tomb where all her hopes were laid.
If He could bring a dead man back to life,
If by His word death vanished from the tomb,
Could He not bring back hopes that now are dead
And resurrect lost joys from nights dark gloom?

"I am the resurrection;" Jesus spoke;
One word fell from the lips of endless Life;
One word; a name; but that was word enough
To banish all the darkness, fear and strife.
Raised from the dead were Mary's hopes and joys,
Gone were her sorrows; gone her doubts and fears;
She understood then what we now should know
Eternal Life is walking through the years.

"He is the resurrection"; and today
We walk the road with Him in life anew;
The resurrection life He gave to them
Is life that He now wants to give to you.
He is that Life; He gives it freely when We bid Him enter never more to part.
You find it not beyond the starry skies.
You have it when you have Him in your heart.

Chas. S. Price

Oh, that God's people would learn that it is in vital union with Him that we have all things, for He is all, and all things are ours in Him and in Him alone!

Saints of all ages have earnestly looked for "that blessed hope," the appearing of the great God and Saviour, Jesus Christ. But as they have looked for His appearing, they have done with it as with all other things. They have changed that blessed hope into a doctrine to be quarreled about rather than to see and feel and know His coming here and now. There is a coming of the Lord when every eye shall see Him, when even those who hate Him will see Him in the clouds of heaven, when even the beast from the pit will vainly try to make war against Him. This will be a wonderful hour, and my own heart longs for that glorious day far more than anything I can possibly imagine, but there is something transpiring now in our midst. There is a secret coming that can be known, but never explained. So essential is it that all who partake of it will not only see Him when He comes in glory, but they will be with Him when He comes.

We have read the story of the seventh chapter of John of how the brethren of the Lord advised Jesus to show Himself openly and manifest His works to the world, for, said they, "There is no person that doeth anything in secret and he himself seeketh to be known openly. If Thou do these things, show Thyself to the world." John 7:4. Indeed, from an earthly standpoint they were right, but with Him it is different, for He seeks not to be known openly to the world and to the gazing eyes of unbelieving men, but secretly unto those who know Him.
and love Him above all else and long for His presence. Therefore it is written that, when His brethren were gone up to the feast, then He also went up to the feast, not openly, but as it were in secret. Verse 10. And while all the people milled about, saying, "Where is He," He was right there walking about among them, known not to the arguing crowd but only to that little company whom He could call His own.

There is a secret coming that is taking place now as a few chosen people recognize the presence of the Saviour. "Lo, I am with you always," He still says today, and "If any man love me, he will keep My words: and My Father will love Him, and We will come unto him and make Our abode with him." John 14:23.

As a boy I was raised on a farm, an experience that has been a lifelong blessing to me. There were no idlers around our house. From the rising of the sun to the going down thereof there was always plenty of work to do, but by some stroke of magic we always managed to crowd in an abundance of fun. We had no fancy swimming pools with trained life-guards, just the good old swimming hole with frogs and ducks and garter snakes to enjoy the fun with us. We had no elegant ice arenas, just the frozen lake from which we often shoveled two feet of snow before we could skate; but oh, what fun we had! No one, thank God, had ever thought of such a time wasting brainwasher as a television.

We were hard bitten individualists pushing back the vast frontiers of our wild west, always thinking for ourselves. As little boys we made games of the work we saw the men do. When the giant threshing machines came around in the fall, we played threshing machines. We concocted our engines and separators. We imitated the shouting of the men, the hissing of the steam, the fire in the boilers, the turning of belts and the whir of pulleys, and the clanking of the giant steel monsters as they waddled about. We even changed our names to names that seemed more suitable for thresher men, such as Bill and Jack, Ray or Chet. But for all our threshing and all our noise not one kernel of grain ever trickled from our toy machines.

The people of God have become like this. They are interested in sound effects and fanfare more than in reality.
They are more concerned about the noise that follows the train than about the train itself. They are far more concerned about the signs following the believer than about the believer that the signs follow. They are more interested in the conglomeration they call doctrine than that they are in Jesus Christ who is the truth. They are more interested in redemption than in the Redeemer, more enthused about the work they are doing/or Christ than they are about Christ Himself, more worried about the tradition of assembling together than whether or not He is in the midst of them, coveting earnestly the best gifts but giving neither thought nor heed to the more excellent way.

We have come to a tremendous hour in this, the end of the age. We have come to a time when all the sons of God are going to have to differentiate between the false and the true. We are at the place where we must cast aside the ragged garments of our traditions which we have worn as truth and embrace Christ, who is Himself the truth. We are going to have to cease running here and there to find some man who can show us the way, and embrace Him who said, "I am the way." Our endless search for life must end in the abundant realization that Christ Himself is life everlasting. Seek no longer to justify yourself either in the sight of God or of man, for by Him we are justified from all things from which we could not be justified by the Law of Moses. Cease in God's name from searching for shepherds and pastors to lead you, and learn the reality of truth in these words,
"I am the good Shepherd; the good shepherd giveth His life for the sheep," John 10:39. Learn that He is not only the Shepherd, but also the door to the sheepfold, John 10:2, by which the shepherd enters that He might call all His sheep by name and go before them that they should know no other voice but His. John 10:3-6.

Apart from Him there is no resurrection, for He is the resurrection, and all who know His voice here and now will know it then and come forth in that wonderful day when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God and shall come forth. Does your heart cry aloud for sanctification? There is no sanctification apart from Him.
Does your soul yearn for righteousness, wisdom and redemption? They cannot be attained apart from vital union with Christ, for God has made Him to be wisdom and righteousness, sanctification and redemption. Oh, that men would cease their lifelong search for all these things and seek only union with Christ who is the wisdom of God and the power of God. To seek the blessings of God apart from Him is to search for water in a burning wilderness where no water is, but all is yours in Him; whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life or death, or things present, or things to come; all are yours; and ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's. 1 Cor. 21-23.
Woe to us, for in our day every concerted effort is being made to occupy the minds of the people of God so that they never concentrate on Christ or come to any real knowledge of Him. Professing Christendom, including the people who profess to be born again, have their lives so crammed and cluttered with the manifold programs of the church system that they will finally awake to the fearful knowledge that they do not know Him.
They have spent their lives keeping the vineyards of others. But their own vineyards have they not kept. Song of S. 1:6. So busy are they with the demands of the harlot daughters of Babylon that they have forgotten the proverb, "By means of a whorish woman a man is brought to a piece of bread." Prov. 6:26.

Let us cease from the vanity of longstanding tradition and learn the truth of this text: "To us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things and we in Him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by Him." Cor. 8:6. "He that spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things." Rom. 8:32.

"Tell me, O Thou whom my soul loveth, where Thou feedest, where Thou makest Thy flock to rest at noon; for why should I be as one that turneth aside by the flocks of Thy companions?" Song of Sol. 1:7.

As in water face answereth to face and as deep calleth unto deep, so those who seek the Lord find Christ, and in Him all things.

LOVEST THOU ME?

In the hearts of many thousands today God has created a deep and holy longing for true sonship. Few, if any, fully understand the moving of the Holy Spirit within them; neither do they always know the meaning of the prayer within their breast. The eighth chapter of Romans appears to be the very heart and centre of all sonship teaching. It is here that Paul plainly states, "For we know not what we should pray for as we ought: but the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings that cannot be uttered. And He that searcheth the hearts
(God) knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit (the Holy Spirit), for He maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God." Rom. 8:26-27. The remaining verses unfold God's marvelous plan to bring man to sonship, a purpose ordained before the ages began. Whom He did foreknow He did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the firstborn among many brethren. Sonship is the hope of all creation, and sonship is the hope and plan of God. "Let us make man in Our image and after Our likeness" was the immutable purpose of God in the beginning and, because all God's purposes are immutable, there never can be variableness nor shadow of turning. The universe is soon to see a whole race of sons in the very image of Christ. This is the new creation, and this is the fulfillment of the scripture "Behold, I and the children which God has given Me." Heb. 2:13.

There is a great difference between the realm of the sons of men and the realm of the sons of God. Were it not for the grace of God in Christ Jesus, the gulf between the two realms would be impassable. "But you know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ that, though He was rich, yet for our sakes He became poor, that we through His poverty might be rich." 2 Cor. 8:9. He who was the Son of God became the Son of man that we who were but sons of men might become sons of God. There is nothing, absolutely nothing, that we can do to attain the sonship which God offers, but that glory can be attained by letting Jesus Christ live and abide within. The hope of glory is Christ in you, and Christ in you is the hope of glory. Christ is the redeemer, and sonship is the ultimate in the plan of redemption.

Jesus Christ Himself is the first and foremost step toward sonship. Would God that men and women would cease their search for spectacular things and seek only to know Christ and love Him for what He is and who He is. If a man seeks wealth, he gets what wealth can do. If he seeks fame, he gains but a fading leaf. He may attain spiritual gifts but find himself devoid of love. He may prophesy, speak in all manner of tongues, and perform all manner of miracles, yet still have nothing. He may fill a life with blazing zeal only to hear the final words, "I never knew you. Depart from Me." But he who makes Christ his constant quest shall abide in Him and bring forth much fruit. Christ is the Alpha and the Omega. "From Him everything comes, by Him everything exists, and in Him everything ends." Rom. 11:36 (Goodspeed).
It is to our eternal shame that Jesus Christ has become a back number in all church circles today. The works that men strive to do in the name of Christ have pushed Him right out the door and usurped His throne. While men have preached salvation, they have forgotten to love the Saviour. While thousands have sought healing, they have forgotten the Healer. They have fervently sought spiritual gifts, but the Giver they do not know. They have sought blessings but have forgotten the Blesser. They have run after miracles but left the Miracle Worker behind. They have sought loaves and fishes, but not the Lord who gave them. Oh, how soon men forget the fountain of life and, instead of pointing all men to Him, they try to fill their little buckets with its life-giving water and run off to start something of their own. For three days Jesus had healed the sick in the wilderness, and, when the fasting people almost fainted for bread, He fed five thousand men besides women and children with the loaves and fishes that a little boy gave from his lunch basket. The next day they sought earnestly for Christ, and, when they had found Him, He said to them, "Ye sought me not because of the miracle, but because ye ate of the loaves and were filled." How unutterably sad is such a picture, yet we must admit that this is a true portrait of ourselves who have for years sought all manner of things from God's hand, but God we have not sought and Christ we have not known.

I do not believe it is right to seek for things apart from Christ. Why have people become possessed with such a mania to seek for things? The choicest gifts of God are snatched at by the careless, the uninitiated, the unprepared, and the unbelieving as though they were items of merchandise on a bargain counter. People are forever laying claims to sonship, gifts, miracles, dreams, visions, new names, and many other such things, but they seek not to know Him. They have never walked with Him through Gethsemane and have no desire to do so. Love for crowds and applause of men has forbidden many to stand with Christ in the lonely rejection of Pilate's hall, and their love of the things that belong to this age has arrested them lest they should follow Him all the way to Calvary's hill of sorrow to be crucified unto the world and see the world crucified unto them.

The things which I write are not written to condemn, but these things are written for the sake of those whose hearts are set on paying the price of full sonship, which price is so great that only the poor in spirit will be able to pay it. We are standing now at the very doors of the kingdom of God. The dawning light of a new age is brightening the eastern sky. The mournful notes of the night are giving way to the joyful songs of the morning. The breezes are laden with sweet perfume from the realm of life. The weeping that has endured for the night is being hushed, for joy is coming with the morning. The year of great decision has come. The day has come to cease from the nonsense of playing church. The hour has come when Jesus Christ must become all in all. We must stop seeking things and start loving Him. Surely the very heart of Christ is continually saddened by man's quest for the loaves and fishes he hopes to get from God, for, while men diligently seek for all these things, they love not the Lord nor are they acquainted with His ways. Everywhere today Christians seek the blessing of the kingdom, but they have not sought the kingdom. Few have had a great coronation day when Jesus Christ, the King of kings, was enthroned in the kingdom of their hearts. They call Him King, but heed not His scepter. They call Him Lord, but listen not to His will or command.

Many centuries ago a scribe came to Jesus with the question, "Which is the first commandment of all?" Jesus answered him, "The first of all the commandments is, Hear, O Israel; the Lord our God is one Lord; and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength: This is the first commandment. And the second is like, namely this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these. And the scribe said, Well, Master, Thou hast said the truth: for there is one God; and there is none other but He: and to love Him with all the heart, and with all the understanding, and with all the soul, and with all the strength, and to love his neighbor as himself, is more than all whole burnt-offerings and sacrifices. And when Jesus saw that he had answered discreetly, He said unto him, Thou art not far from the kingdom of God." Mark 12:28-34.

The law of love is the greatest of all laws, and we need have no hesitation in saying that, if Israel had been able to keep the first commandment, there would have been absolutely no need for the other nine; for what man on earth who loves God with all his heart and soul and strength and mind would ever steal, covet, kill, commit adultery, bear false witness, fail to honor his father and mother, or disrespect the day the Lord made holy? Upon this first commandment hangs all the law and all the prophets, and all the will of God is fulfilled in it. Is it any wonder, then, that the blessed Master, upon hearing the discreet answer of the scribe, said, "Thou art..."
not far from the kingdom of God." True love for God is both the fulfillment of the law and the guarantee of the kingdom.

The Lord has the most wonderful way of driving truth home to our hearts! We are told of another man who came running to Jesus under similar circumstances, but with a very different heart. This young man was very anxious to attain to life and spiritual blessing. He was like millions of Christians in our day who are zealous for all manner of spiritual things. They would gladly run from coast to coast to be in a healing meeting. No journey would be too great to hear something new. They will even spend hours in prayer in the hope that they might receive a gift from God or that they might accomplish something for God. But there is one thing sadly lacking, and it is the thing they lack that keeps them ever on the run, seeking this and that to try to fill the aching void which Christ alone can fill.

So this young man came running to Jesus and, kneeling before Him in great earnestness, he asked, "Good Master, what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life? And Jesus said unto him, Why callest thou Me good? There is none good but one, that is, God. Thou knowest the commandments, Do not commit adultery, do not kill, do not steal, do not bear false witness, defraud not, honor thy father and mother. And he answered and said unto Him, One thing thou lackest: go thy way, sell whatever thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come, take up thy cross, and follow Me. And he was sad at that saying and went away grieved, for he had great possessions. And Jesus looked round about, and saith unto His disciples, How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God." Mark 10:17-23. Here was a splendid young man, diligent in all the things of God, but he did not love God as much as he loved things. He was rich in money and possessions, and these, being uppermost in his life, had pushed God off the throne of his heart and sent him sadly away. Having fallen short of the love of God, he fell short of all the commandments, and he fell short of the kingdom as well.

The church system is full of rich people. Many of them have little money, but they possess the kind of riches peculiar to the Laodicean church. They have their church, their friends, their doctrines, their programs. They don't want to be disturbed; they want to go along just as they are. One of the most deceptive terms ever coined was the expression full gospel. For years I applied that appellation to myself, knowing not that I, like millions more, was miserable and wretched, poor, blind, and naked, and needed to buy of Him. As long as we feel we have the full gospel, our eyes are fast closed to the ever, widening wonders of eternal truth and revelation.

Jesus knew this young man just as He knows all men. He had seen how diligent he was in every form of religion. To all outward appearance there was nothing lacking in his life of devotion to God, yet he well knew there was a desperate lack, for Matthew records his words, "What lack I yet?" Matt. 19:20. Well also did Jesus know that it was not God, but earthly possessions, which occupied the throne of the young man's heart. Our blessed Lord always knows and He has the simplest ways of testing the truth of our professions. So He said, "If thou wilt be perfect, sell what thou hast and give to the poor, and come, take up thy cross and follow Me." This is the way divine wisdom demonstrates where the true affection of the heart really dwells. It is easy for man to proclaim how dearly he loves God, but the test of his love comes when God offers him a cross, and thus are the secrets of his heart made manifest. The cross means death. It means following Christ to the ultimate of His divine will and pleasure.

It is easy to sing, "Where He leads me I will follow." Millions have sung those wonderful words even while they steadfastly refused the call of the Holy Spirit as He sought to lead them to Christ, and they have gone sadly away to walk in the old ways again. Do not think for a moment that, because you can raise your hand and sing, "Where He leads me I will follow," your consecration is complete. The proof of your love will be found when the Spirit speaks to your heart, asking you to follow Him into some unknown. Will your voice still sing, "Lead on, Thou Captain of my soul", or will it with this young man suddenly fall silent? Many times I receive letters from earnest people who rejoice in the revelation of the hour. They have seen the deplorable condition of the Babylonish church system; they know the Spirit of God is calling them on to sonship; they know God is calling them to leave their old haunts and follow Him into the unknown. They even testify that God has spoken to them to leave the Babylonish church system and follow Him to Zion, but they sadly say they are unable to do it because they have friends and relations back there. Others are afraid to do it because they would be lonesome and they would have no church home, and so, like the rich young man of our story, they trade the hope of the glory of the kingdom of God for a few visible things that they can possess now but lose later. This young man was not an irreligious sinner who was rejecting Christ and salvation. He was about as full gospel as he could be, but, when it came to taking the cross that is offered to every man, he could not do it. Jesus shook His head sadly, and, looking upon His disciples, said, "A rich man shall hardly enter the kingdom of heaven. It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God." Matt. 19:23-24.

The real lack in the life of this young man was the love of God. When we love God, time and place, people and things no longer own us. God has become the center of our universe.

He has become the King on our throne: the hub of our wheel is His throne. He is OUT father, our mother, our sister and brother. He is OUT friend, for in Him we live and move and have our being. To love God is better, better far, than all whole burnt offerings and sacrifices. The love of God is greater far than any cross, stronger than any den of lions, more powerful than a fiery furnace, more able than friend or foe, glorying in its cross, stronger than death, triumphing in the resurrection.

We have been very extravagant in our labor and work for God, but have we been extravagant in our love for Him? Have you ever heard people try to make a bargain with God? Have you ever tried to make a bargain yourself? "Lord," they often say, "if You will heal me, I will serve You. If You will deliver me from death. I will live for You." Thousands of men, crouching in fox holes on a field of battle, have promised God that they would serve Him if they came out alive, but, when they were delivered, they forgot their promise. The truth is that the Lord knew all the time it was fear, not love, that motivated them, but His great love delivered anyway. Let us consider our experience well, for it may even now be fear, not love that causes us to be a Christian at all. The godly Job had the right attitude when he said, "Though He slay me, yet will I trust Him." It is not our promises that God wants. It is not our bargains nor deals, for He does not heed them. They have their source in the carnal mind. He is calling to all men, "Son, give Me thine heart." Prov. 23:26. Well does His omniscient mind know that "where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." When things of earth are held as treasures, the heart abides with them; the mind dwells upon them. They drag the affections away from Christ, usurping His throne and setting themselves up as king in Christ's stead.

It was a wonderful profession that dear Peter made the night Jesus was betrayed. "Why cannot I follow Thee now?" he asked. "I will lay down my life for Thy sake." John 13:37. But what good was the profession, even though he was honest, when Jesus knew that before the morning light he would deny Him three times? It is not the labor of our hands that Jesus wants. It is not the fervent profession of our lips nor our earnest supplication in prayer. His call comes echoing like a trumpet o'er the mountains of time, "Son, give Me thine heart."

Some weeks had gone by since the night that Jesus was betrayed - that night in which He had said, "Thou canst not follow Me now, but thou shalt follow Me afterward." Peter had denied his Lord and like a terrible dream of the night the memory of it haunted his soul. St. Luke records that, when Peter denied for the third time, Jesus turned and looked on him, and Peter, remembering His words, went out and wept bitterly. Luke 22:61,62. As his body shook with sobs and his rough hands brushed blinding tears from his eyes, he understood for the first time why the Master had said, "Thou canst not follow Me now."

How often during life have we all been brought face to face with some reality that has proved our elaborate profession to be a lie! Our proud boasts of trusting God have vanished in the face of illness, our fidelity has been shaken by the ravages of temptation, and our professions of love have drooped and fainted before the reality of the cross we were called upon to bear. The look, which Jesus gave to Peter that night, was full of meaning, pregnant with the goodness of God. It was a look of understanding, a look of kindness, a look of reproof, a look of forgiveness, and above all a look of love for a man who had grossly overestimated his devotion to Christ. To him the sun had set on his horizon forever, and naught but the yawning gulf of despair was before him. But with what love on the morrow did angels say, "Go, tell His disciples and Peter that He goeth before you into Galilee." Mark 16:7

O, love that will not let me go,
I rest my weary soul in Thee;
Much as God loves His children, none can deceive Him with a glib profession. Great as was His love for Peter, still He knew that even now he was not ready and able to follow all the way. Even the glory of the resurrection did not fully erase the weakness that was there. Our Lord had unmistakably risen from the dead. He had shown Himself to all His disciples and performed many signs before them to prove beyond a doubt that He was risen. The apostle left this faithful testimony: "And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of His disciples which are not written in this book: But these are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through His name." John 20:30-31. It was after all the infallible glory of the resurrection that Peter said, "I go a-fishing." John 21:3. Perhaps no one knows just what motivated this decision. Was it fear or unbelief or just plain frustration? I know not, but at any rate he went fishing along with the other disciples who were with Him, and, as may be expected, they caught nothing. The lake that so often had yielded its bounty to them in years past now seems to be completely empty. Their labor was in vain, for they had gone without the Lord. It takes more than zeal to bear us over the desolating ravages of broken hopes and bitter disappointments. How true it is that "hope deferred maketh the heart sick." Prov. 13:12. But all who will be sons of God must learn by experience that, when faith falters, hope fades, and zeal dies, love abides. It never fails. It is stronger than death. It bridges the oceans of separation, plucks the prisoner from his dungeon, strengthens the feeble knees and the hands that hang down. It will not quench the smoking flax nor break the bruised reed till it sends forth judgment unto truth.

Well did Jesus know that His ministry to Peter could not be complete until He knew that his love for Him was greater than his love for any other thing. The story that follows that unprofitable night of fishing is worthy to be written on the very gates of Paradise. "When the morning was now come, Jesus stood on the shore, (bless His name!) but the disciples knew not that it was Jesus. Then Jesus said unto them, Children, have ye any meat? They answered Him, No; And He said unto them, Cast the net on the right side of the ship and ye shall find. They cast therefore and now they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fishes. Therefore that disciple whom Jesus loved said unto Peter, It is the Lord. Now when Simon Peter heard that it was the Lord, he girt his fisher's coat unto him, (for he was naked) and did cast himself into the sea ...And as soon as they were come to land, they saw a fire of coals there, and fish laid thereon, and bread ...So when they had dined, Jesus saith to Simon Peter. Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou Me more than these (the fish and the occupation of fishing)? He saith unto Him, Yea, Lord; Thou knowest that I love Thee. He saith unto him, Feed My lambs. He saith unto Simon Peter, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou Me? He saith unto Him, Yea, Lord; Thou knowest that I love Thee. He saith unto him, Feed My sheep. He saith unto him the third time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou Me? Peter was grieved that He said unto him the third time, Lovest thou Me. (Undoubtedly the bitter memory of his thrice repeated denial filled him with grief.) And he saith unto Him, Lord, Thou knowest all things, thou knowest that I love Thee." Then said Jesus, Verily, verily I say unto thee, when thou wast young, thou girdest thyself and walked whither thou wouldst; but when thou shalt be old, thou shalt stretch forth thy hands, and another shall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldst not. This spake He signifying by what death he should glorify God. And when He had spoken this He saith unto him, Follow Me." John 21. Only a little while ago He had said, "Thou canst not follow Me now." But now that steadfast love has filled his heart, he hears the loving command, "Follow Me." And well did he follow Him until that day when they carried him forth and spread forth his hands upon a cross, "Even as our Lord Jesus had showed him."

The world would have lost a priceless treasure had Jesus gone back to heaven before He extracted from Peter the extravagant profession that God knew all things, knew that he loved Jesus, and loved Him above and beyond all other things, in (he universe. It is not enough to love Christ "more than these." It is not enough to love Him more than certain pleasures or more than certain things or certain people. God is not sufficed until we love Him with all our spirit, soul, body, and strength. When such love as this exists in the human heart, it is because God dwells in us; and because God dwells in us, His love dwells in us. Then from the eternal fountain within the love of God flows forth to all creatures and all things. There is no love apart from God, for God is love. If we love one another, it is because God dwelleth in us and His love is perfected in us. 1 John 4:12. Oh, how often we have all been exhorted to show love or to try to show love to our brethren! You cannot manifest what you do not possess and it is only hypocrisy to try. What men need is not a feigned and hypocritical outward show of love, but the indwelling Christ, for God Himself is love and all things are the objects of His love. Love can no more come from an empty heart than water can come from an empty cistern. Either it is there or it is not there. Love cannot be manufactured at will. Of all the detestable things in the world there is nothing so obnoxious and hateful as fond words that cover up a deceitful heart, a "God bless you" that comes from a heart that inwardly curses you, or a smile that covers the fangs of a wolf. "As he thinketh in his heart, so is he; Eat and drink, saith he to thee; but his heart is not with thee; the morsel which thou has eaten shalt thou vomit up and lose thy sweet words." Prov. 23:7-8.

Love is not a thing you try to manifest. Love is a person that dwells within. Love is not a transient thing that comes and goes like anger or fear. Love abides. There is a universe of difference between liking and loving. Love has nothing whatever to do with infatuation or sentimentality. Love is a thing apart that cannot be separated from its source, and that source is God. He that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him. 1 John 4:16.

Our Lord taught us to "love your enemies, do good to those who hate you, and pray for those who despitefully use you and persecute you." Christians of all ages have made the great mistake of trying to love their enemies when their love for God was far, far from perfect. We cannot love our enemies before we love God. Our profession of fidelity to Christ may be as bold as that of Peter, but our denial of Christ may be swifter still when the test comes. The ten words, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do", can only come from a heart made beautiful by the fragrant life of the indwelling Christ. We will learn to love our enemies only when the years have taught us that it was the blindness of their hate that made us flee away to the center of God's will. Understanding will teach us that, had it not been for their rejection of us, we, as they, would have missed the purpose of God for our life.

It was a contrary wind that shipwrecked Paul on the little island of Melita, Acts 27:4, but it was that same wind that blew his ship into the harbor of God's perfect will. It was a contrary wind that enraged the sea in the days of Jonah, but it forced him back to Nineveh where one hundred twenty thousand souls were saved in forty days. It was the contrary wind of hate that sold poor Joseph into the slavery and affliction of Egypt, but many years later from an understanding heart he was able to say to his trembling brethren, "Fear not; you meant it for evil, but God meant it for good." Gen. 50:19-21.

How often the expression "but God" is used in scripture! Paul says we were by nature the children of wrath, but God, who is rich in mercy with His great love wherewith He loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ. Eph. 2:4-5. "Scarcely for a righteous man would one die; yet peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die, but God commandeth His love toward us in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us." Rom. 5:7-8. "I have planted, Apollos watered, but God giveth the increase." Joseph had also learned the but God secret. The passing years had helped to erase the bitterness of ignorance from his heart till now he was able to see the purpose of God shining through the dark clouds of his tribulation. He was able to look far beyond the blind hate of his brethren, far beyond the despair of that terrible day when they rejected him and sold him as a slave into Egypt, an act that naught but hate and envy could devise. But now, beyond it all he could see the supreme wisdom of the eternal purpose that had kept his feet through the thorny paths of adversity, bringing him to such exalted glory. Now he understood the meaning of the contrary winds, which at first had blighted his every hope, but at last had placed him on Egypt's throne to be a deliverer to all who trusted in him. It was in this exalted position of wisdom and understanding that he was able to say amid his happy tears, "Fear not; for am I in the place of God? But, as for you, ye thought evil against me; but God meant it unto good to bring to pass, as it is this day, to save much people alive. Now therefore, fear ye not." Gen. 50:19-21.

Do not try to feign love for your enemies. You will begin to love them when the Spirit of the Lord dwelling in your heart has given you understanding. No man will ever truly love God until, through the understanding God has given him, he clearly sees that God has a purpose for all things that have ever befallen mankind. As long as you say with Jacob, "All these things are against me," Gen. 42:36, you can never love. But, when you can say with the understanding of Paul, "All things work together for good", Rom. 8:28, then you will know what the love of God really is. Every man or woman who would truly love God and come to the maturity of sonship must sooner or later know the heartache of being rejected by those he loves and trusts. If we follow Christ, there will always come a time when against our own will we will find ourselves walking alone. But lift up your drooping head and look, for the light that shines before you is forming a rainbow through your tears. When at last the purpose of God unfolds before your wondering eyes, you will praise Him for the fiery trials of the way that tempered your metal and made you fit for His kingdom.

One ship drives east
And another drives west
By the self-same wind that blows.
Its the set of the sail
And not the gale
That determines the way it goes.
Like the winds of the sea
Are the winds of fate
As we voyage along through life.
Tis the set of the soul
That decides the goal,
And not the calm or the strife.

Love is not a matter of trying to forgive and forget or to pretend that no wrong ever existed; neither is it a matter of ignoring the fact that a wrong was ever done, for eventually God will judge all wrong-doers. It is folly to imagine that we can immediately be reconciled to those who have hated us, even though from an understanding heart we can pray with Stephen, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge", or though we can pray with Jesus, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." Yet God is just, and those who have whipped and scourged us must come to true repentance or they themselves will be scourged. If we think we can be truly reconciled to our enemies before both we and they have seen things as God sees them, then we will be bitterly disappointed. Until that good hour came when Joseph's brethren stood trembling before him, hating themselves for their wicked act inspired of their own envy, there could be no true reconciliation. But the moment they saw the panorama of their evil against the wisdom of God, their hearts broke in repentance, and for the first time the love of Joseph, pent-up for years, was able to flood forth upon them.

Wrongs are never cancelled without repentance, but when our spirit sees the value of God's chastening rod, our understanding heart will secretly thank Him for those who so relentlessly wielded the scourge. When Joseph saw the purpose of God, he could thank God that his wicked brethren were used of Him to bring him to the desired haven of God's will. I am sure Jonah must have thanked God for both the storm of the sea and the hell of the whale's belly. It is when we see His purpose that we love them that hate us and pray for them that despitefully use us and persecute us.

In the town of Bethany six days before the Passover a story unfolded that has shed the fragrance of its perfume through the dismal valleys of the ages. Wherever the Gospel has been preached, the lovely story has been told of the night that Jesus sat at supper and Lazarus, who was raised from the dead, sat with Him. While lovely Martha fulfilled her ministry of serving, Mary came with an alabaster box, a whole pound of ointment of spikenard, costing three hundred pence. (A whole year's wages. Cf. Matt. 20:2.) Love, like grief, is always simple, never ceremonious; therefore, because her love was real, she unceremoniously broke the box and, weeping, bathed His feet with her tears and wiped them with the beautiful hair of her head, for a woman's hair is her glory. Then with an extravagance that love alone could devise she abundantly anointed His feet and His head with the precious ointment until the whole house was filled with its fragrance. This was love — simple, pure, unadulterated love for her Lord - poured out affectionately, extravagantly, and unstintingly lavished upon Him. This is the kind of love Jesus sought but could not obtain from the rich young ruler. This is the love He sought from Simon Peter when He thrice repeated the question, "Simon, son of Jonas, loveth thou Me?" This is the love He seeks from us.

Now whenever anyone is found who unstintingly pours out his love to Christ, there are always those wise "do-gooders" about who support their own shameful lack of love for Him by belittling his devotion. With pharisical disdain they explain how the sacrifice might have been put to better use. It might have been given to the poor, or it might have been given to the missionaries that souls might have been saved. Little do these people know the true value of the love of Christ, for it is when He is lifted up that men are drawn to Him. When His love is manifested in our hearts, sinners are affected by the glory of His love shining through us. Publicans and harlots, thieves and rogues are touched by the light of His love in us. Then they with true repentance seek Christ through their tears until His love shines from their hearts as well.

We do not need more preachers and more missionaries. We do not need more money or better organization. We need more lovers. It was Judas Iscariot, the betrayer of the Lord, who advanced the plausible idea, "This ointment should have been sold and the money given to the poor." It certainly sounds like a good idea, a plausible thought indeed. Perhaps for a moment it shamed the heart of this precious woman, who seemed to be so thoughtless of the poor. Then Jesus spoke. He held no sympathy for the high sounding nonsense, which Judas proposed. He never looks on outward appearance, but He sees the true devotion of the heart. Judas cared not for the poor and neither did he care for Jesus, but Mary loved Christ, and through Him she loved all mankind. "Let her alone," said Jesus, "Against the day of My burial hath she done this. The poor ye have with you always, but Me ye have not always."

We are living in an age when Christians are full of good works, but too often are destitute of love for Christ. The world has never known such fervent religious activity. People are exhorted to do many strange things to supposedly promote the cause of Christ. Thousands of people have mortgaged their homes to finance the construction of elaborate temples and tabernacles. Money left by thrifty and devoted husbands to care for their widows in their old age has been inveigled from them to further the grandiose schemes of some conniving preacher. The promise to return the money on demand is freely given, but soon forgotten or ignored and the widow left destitute. Widows have written me to tell me that they have been the innocent victim of this conniving treachery. Jesus did not say in vain, "They rob widow's houses and for a pretence make long prayers; therefore they shall receive greater damnation." Widows have always been an easy target for these unscrupulous religious vultures who have forgotten that it is the duty of the church to care for widows - not for widows to care for the church.

It would be impossible to enumerate the multiplied thousands of ambitious schemes foisted upon a gullible people with the hope of extracting more money and devotion from them. The ointment is always being sold to give to the poor, the missionaries, the building fund, the Sunday School, the organ fund, to build a world church or a wilderness refuge against the day of tribulation. But few there are indeed who break the box and extravagantly pour the precious ointment of love upon the head of Christ. Yet this alone will cause the fragrance of His love and light to reach the darkened world.

Love for Christ must be the motivating force of our lives. If we pray because we love to be in His presence, that is good. If we pray because we hope to extract something from Him - a gift, a healing, a blessing, or some other thing, we are wrong and have made ourselves naught but beggars waiting for a hand-out, upon receiving which we go away destitute of love or relationship to Him who gave it. We can receive gifts all our life without either loving or knowing the giver, and children who are given most usually love the least. But he who seeks God's face and yearns to know Him separate and apart from all things, all people, and all activity will in return find that God Himself has become all things to him. He has become wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, redemption - yes, redemption for spirit, soul, and body as well.

If Christ is in the boat, it matters not whether the sea is wild or calm. If one whose form is as the Son of God walks hi the furnace of fire, it matters not a whit that they have heated the furnace seven times hotter. If Christ is in the den of lions, the mighty monarchs of the jungle are but purring kittens. It was far better for Peter, fast locked in jail, to fall asleep in Christ's love than to spend the night trying to pick the lock. It is not more fervent activity that we need, for even a Judas can advocate that, but where are those lovers who, breaking the ointment of their devotion, pour it on Christ's head while through their tears of joy they sing,

More love to Thee, O Christ, more love to Thee;
Hear Thou the prayer I make on bended knee;
This is my earnest plea; more love, O Christ, to Thee.
Once earthly joy I craved, sought peace and rest;
Now Thee alone I seek, give what is best.
This all my prayer shall be; more love, O Christ, to Thee.
There is purpose in all things in the world and in the universe - a purpose in man, a purpose in the fall of man, a purpose in the redemption of man, a purpose in temptation, tribulation, grief, pain, and death. There is purpose in light and darkness, in heat and cold, a purpose in joy and sadness, in unity and division. There is divine, omniscient, immutable purpose in every act of God. No man can love God or anybody or anything simply because he is told to love. It cannot be done. When human beings love each other, there is always an underlying reason. It may be beauty, character, or virtue, but there is always a reason. So also true love for God has its birth in understanding. You cannot truly love God because of hope of heaven or fear of hell. True love lives in the simple trust that He doeth all things well. In our affliction He is afflicted. In our joy He is made happy, and all of these, whether joy or affliction, are working for our eternal good, being ordained in love before the world was. "Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore, get wisdom and with all thy getting get understanding. Loving and abiding go hand in hand. It is always easy to abide with those we love, but most distressing to abide with those we love not. With God abiding is not abiding with, but abiding in, God abiding in us and we abiding in God. Therefore John said by the Spirit, "Let that therefore abide in you which ye have heard from the beginning (Christ). If that therefore which ye have heard from the beginning remain in you, ye shall continue in the Son and in the Father." 1 John 2:24. "And now, little children, abide in Him: that, when He shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before Him at His coming." Vs. 28.

Now since the world and all the world system are enemies of God, we can clearly see that it is impossible to love God and love the world at the same time, for, if any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. Let no man think, therefore, that he can truly love God, yet sit for hours before his television, feasting his eyes and distorting his mind with all manner of corruption, violence, sex, intrigue, suggestion, and advertisement where the low and corrupt are exalted, and the exalted, the pure, the honorable are made low. This is completely impossible. Well, too, do we know that none among us would invite Jesus Christ to sit with us to see it, for it is part of the world, and if any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. Well did Jesus say, "No man can serve two masters, for either he will love the one and hate the other, or he will cling to the one and despise the other." To cling to the world you must despise the commandment of God, and to cling to God you must despise the world. Many "rich young men" today are missing the kingdom because they love this one-eyed monster more than they love the cross of Christ.

Do you not think it is most significant that John, the apostle of love, should say in the very midst of his teaching, "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him, for all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away and the lust thereof, but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." 1 John 2:15-17. These things test our love and devotion to Christ.

Let us go still further, for the world system includes a multitude of religious systems. If we will but superficially examine the existing church system, we will see that it belongs not to God, but to the world system. It uses all the schemes of the world for advancement, it makes gain godliness, it compasses land and sea to make proselytes, and its ministers are educated of men. In the days of Jeremiah, when Israel was doomed to captivity in Babylon, religion was filthy and corrupt. Jeremiah said, "For both the prophet and the priest are profane (worldly). Yea, in My house have I found their wickedness, saith the Lord. Wherefore their way shall be unto thee as slippery ways in darkness." Jer. 23:11-12. Then he continues in a message to our modern day, saying, "In the latter days ye shall consider it perfectly. I have not sent these prophets, yet they ran; I have not spoken, yet they prophesied. (A perfect picture of the modern clergy.) Yet if they had stood in My counsel and had caused My people to hear My words, they should have turned them from their evil way and from the evil of their doings." Verses 21-22. See Jer. 23:1-4. The mighty Isaiah describes our day as the day when the Lord would turn the earth upside down. In that day, he said, it shall be "as with the people, so with the priest." Isa. 24:2. That simple statement described our day exactly, for what the people want, the priest gives them; what the servant wants is what the master must give. What the maid wants is what the mistress gives. In this way Isaiah shows that the religious system and the world system work the same way exactly. "As with the people, so with the priest; as with the servant, so with the master; as with the maid, so with the mistress; as with the buyer, so with the seller; as with the taker of usury, so with the giver of usury." It is small wonder then that God has ordained to call His people, His true people, His true sons, His true church, out of Babylon - out of the Babel of religion, for that is the world, and out of the world itself, for that is an enemy of God.
There is only one sure place; it is in Him. There is only one to love; it is He. God is calling His sons to "come out". Not to come out of one system and into another! Not to leave one organization and enter another, but to leave them all and abide in Him. As Abraham left Ur of the Chaldees to follow God to the city, which had foundations, and as Israel left Egypt to dwell beneath the cloud of His glory, so in these last days He is calling a people who will abide in His love, abide in Him and He in them.

I have found this mighty secret, that true unity with the brethren is only attained by those who have found unity with God because they love Him, for "everyone that loveth Him that begat (God) loveth him that is begotten of Him." The church in two thousand years has not found unity among its people, but when this secret is learned, unity of spirit rolls like a tide on the ocean of God's love. When you abide in God's love and God's love abides in you, all the world of friend and foe is loved in Him.

In conclusion let our hearts thrill to the marvelous wonders vouchsafed to us all in the words of 1 John 2:15, Phillips' translation: "Never give your hearts to this world or to any of the things in it. A man cannot love the Father and love the world at the same time, for the whole world system, based as it is on men's primitive desires, their greedy ambitions, and the glamour of all they think splendid, is not derived from the Father at all, but from the world itself. The world and all its passionate desires will one day disappear, but the man who is following God's will is part of the permanent and cannot die.

CARRIED AWAY

In these troublous times in which we live a great deal is heard about revelation. People inclined to the spectacular adopt the ever, present hearsay and, their ardent wishes being father to their thoughts, they imagine God has revealed something to them; then, grasping upon some likely scripture that seems to support their fanciful notion, they proclaim it far and wide as a truth from God and a divine revelation. It is not our concern even in the least to either confirm or condemn any of these things except to say that it is well nigh impossible for God to reveal anything to any man while that man is happily absorbed in things just as they are. The all wise Lord does not give revelation to men to better enable them to build up their own work or to establish their little kingdom, but He gives His divine revelation and understanding to those who long to be free from the tyranny and oppression of both people and things that imprison men in the jail of human tradition, binding them in chains of darkness to the incessant treadmill of the religious systems of earth. He gives His revelation to those who long to break the power of their inherited evil will that they might enter into the immutable will of God to become one heart and one soul with the purpose of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will. He gives His revelation to those who seek the heart of Jesus Christ as the very center of all truth, knowing that truth is not cold calculation but a living person, for He alone is truth. In the knowledge of this holy fact they willingly cast aside the prattle of scribe and Pharisee together with the endless dissertations and sermons of men, refusing to be spoiled through philosophy and vain deceit after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ, for they know that in Him, and in Him alone, the fullness of the Godhead dwells embodied.

Before God enlightens the understanding of any man, he will always find himself fed up, sick to death, and disconsolate with things as they are in his realm of unending tradition. Go as far back into history as we wish and we will always discover that, before men were carried away into the great and high mountain of revelation, they had to be separated from the fading, dying, and wearsome systems of their day that their wondering eyes might behold the glory of an age yet unborn and believe with all assurance things which men now consider unlawful to be uttered.

The last book in the Bible is not the Revelation of St. John the Divine, but the Revelation of Jesus Christ. Verse 1. Wonderful, indeed, were the Old Testament prophecies of the coming Messiah. Incomparable was the revelation of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, who was made flesh and dwelt among us as portrayed by the Gospels. Unlawful to be uttered was the marvelous story of the formation of a vast family of sons in His very image as taught by the apostle Paul, but far beyond all imagination of understanding is the revelation of Jesus Christ as it was shown to the apostle John in the book of Revelation, for there we see the consummation of the eternal purpose that from the beginning of the ages was hid in God.
So it was that John was carried away that he might embrace the things of a coming age and behold the Christ in a fullness never before known. If any man on earth ever knew Jesus Christ, it was certainly John, the beloved disciple. He had followed Him into the mount of transfiguration and had heard Him whisper that which was denied all others. He had stood alone with Jesus in Pilate's hall and near the cross with those few weeping women who loved their Lord. Was he not among the first to visit the tomb and the first to believe that the resurrection had taken place? John 20:8. Was it not John who first recognized Him after their fruitless night of fishing? John 21:7. Had he not seen Him ascend to heaven? Yes, he knew Him as perhaps none other ever knew Him, but he knew only in part, and the little He knew would seem like nothing at all compared to the magnificent splendor that was yet to be revealed, a splendor so effulgent that he would fall as one dead before its glorious light of completeness. Rev. 1:17.

How unworthy we are to speak or write of such transcending glory! Is it any wonder that even such an one as John must be carried away by the Spirit before his eye was permitted to behold it? So away from his church work he was taken, away from the hustle and bustle, away from activity, away from the ever present pressing needs of people, away from all assembling, from preaching and healing, away from good men and carnal men, away from conference and argument, away, away, away to lonely Patmos where the senseless crowd could be forgotten and the petty demands of mortals be unheard, where things before deemed important become but a fading leaf in the light of reality-But physical isolation on Patmos was not enough. To be forcefully carried there in body would not do. That was but a beginning, albeit a necessary beginning. It was as John fasted and prayed, loving Jesus Christ and looking into His very heart for truth, that he found his spirit strangely soaring into celestial realms. Stilled was the sweet murmur of the waves on the shore, hushed the sound of screeching gulls. Earth receded; heaven matured and opened to him. "And I heard behind me a great voice as of a trumpet saying, I am Alpha and Omega, the first and the last." Rev. 1:10-11. Here in the light of God's presence, separated from all that bound him, he saw Christ in a fullness never before imagined.

With each succeeding revelation of truth there comes the necessity to be carried away in the Spirit further and further into those open heavens where things that remain hidden and obscure are made plainly visible. When the time had come for John to see the truth of Babylon, he was carried away in the Spirit to a wilderness. Rev. 17:1-3. There he saw the apostate church, not as the bride of Christ as Christians vainly imagine, but as a defiled and wanton harlot, full of adulteries and everything that belongs to the world system, drunken with the blood of saints and martyrs of Jesus, decked in gold and silver and costly array, and carried by the beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit.

It is a never, ending source of wonder to me to find how very, very few people have really been able to see what spiritual Babylon is. No amount of explanation will open their eyes to it. They will freely admit that all organized religion belongs to the harlot system, but on every occasion they excuse their own situation and the group to which they belong. They cannot see because they have not been carried away by the Spirit of revelation. Well did the prophet Isaiah declare, "The heart of this people is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes have they closed; lest they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them." Acts. 28:27. Nothing but the Spirit of revelation from God can show this truth to men. That is why so few are able to see it, and that is why they fail to flee from it.

Still later, when the time had come for the Spirit of God to reveal to John the wonderful truth of the bride of Christ, one of the seven angels came to him, saying, "Come hither, and I will show thee the bride, the Lamb's wife, and he carried me away in the Spirit to a great and high mountain, and showed me that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God." Rev. 21:2, 9-10.

The revelation of Jesus Christ grows apace, and, as God is eternal, so the great unfolding of His eternal power and purpose will go on and on forever and ever, for ages and dispensations, for God is eternally progressive. The last book of the Bible is a grand series of revelation, each fitting like the parts of a puzzle into one great masterpiece, each blending as the sound of sweet voices into the harmony of a mighty choir. The eternal mysteries hidden from ages and dispensations in the mind of God are freed from their shrouds. The veils are lifted and taken away. Since this strange book is one great revelation given in many parts, it is only normal that, with the unfolding of each new part, there should be a catching away in the Spirit, for mortal men in mortal flesh do not with mortal eyes behold the things that belong to immortal realms because a darkling veil hangs over their eyes, hiding all things that belong to a spiritual world. Heaven is closed to the natural man. Though its glories are everywhere about him, he cannot see them, for he is a natural man. He is like the frightened servant of Elisha who stood trembling in fear of the armed hosts at the gate, while Elisha sat calm in the presence of the hosts of the Lord that filled the mountains about him. 2 Kings 6:13-17.

To behold the things that belong to a spiritual world we must be carried away by the Spirit into the realms of God, for it is beyond the veil that the glory lies, and it is there that He dwells in the light that no man approacheth. 1 Tim. 6:16. The ministry of Jesus Christ was different from the ministry of any other man, for He was the Son of God. All who will ever come to sonship will attain that goal only through Him. While other men minister with the heavens closed, Jesus ministered with the heavens open. From the moment John the Baptist immersed the Lamb of God in the Jordan, the heavens opened to Him, Matt. 3:16, and during all His earthly ministry they never once closed again until that awful moment that darkness covered the earth at high noon, and with a dreadful cry of abandonment that reached the four corners of the universe He cried, "My God, My God, why hast Thou forsaken Me?" Everything Jesus did He did under the open heavens. Though those about Him knew it not, He stood continually in the heavenly realm, seeing God, hearing His voice and receiving His commands, surrounded by angels great in power and might, and ministered to by multitudes of heavenly hosts. So great was His realization of the open heaven all about Him that on one occasion He admitted He was in heaven, saying, "No man hath ascended to heaven but He that came down from heaven, even the Son of Man, who is in heaven." John 3:13. When He healed the sick, He did it under open heavens. When He fed the multitudes, there was no veil that hid Him from God's presence. When He stood at the tomb of Lazarus, He knew that God was there, for the heavens were open and no dark mist hid God's face from Him.

Is it any wonder that such a life and ministry was crowned by unending success? How could desolating failures dog the footsteps of One who did all things with the light of the eternal shining upon Him through an open heaven? Only sons of God are privileged to minister under open heavens and sonship can only be attained through complete union with Jesus Christ. It cannot come by any effort of man however great that effort may be. Apparent success in ministry has nothing to do with sonship. Crowds of listeners, faith that will remove mountains, and a world filled with good works have nothing to do with our attaining sonship. Sonship is only for those who find complete unity with Him. We are far more likely to find it in the lowly than in the mighty, more likely to find it in the lonesomeness of a cottage than in the glamour of a pulpit. We may find it among those who hunger and thirst for righteousness, but never among the satisfied, fat, and flourishing members of this harlot church system whether they are glamorizing a golden pulpit or warming a wooden pew. For while they speak great swelling words of vanity, they do but allure through their wantonness those who had escaped from all who live in error. Sitting on many waters, they commit fornication with the kings of the earth, making the people drunk with the intoxicating wine of their fornication.

How my heart doth loathe this harlot system, which with her bewitching eyes deceives the hearts of men! Her house is the way to hell, going down to the chambers of death. She has cast down many wounded and strong men are slain by her. Let not thine heart decline to her ways. Go not astray in her paths. She will persuade you with her much fair speech and cause you to yield to her flattering lips until you follow her as an ox to the slaughter or a fool to the correction of the stocks. Hearken diligently then, and attend not the words of her mouth.

Full well did Jesus speak forth the words of truth and soberness when He said, "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted. Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth. Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled. Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy. Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God. Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God. Blessed are they which UK persecuted for righteousness sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are ye when men shall revile you and persecute you and say all manner of evil against you falsely for My sake. Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven."

It is not enough to see as men see. It is not enough to understand as men understand, for the natural mind never can receive the things of the Spirit of God, neither can it know them, for they are all spiritually discerned. Those blessed ones who long to walk far above the natural realm and enter into the realms of God's understanding must expect that they will first be carried away by the Spirit into those wonderful regions of God. Their souls, their spirits, and even their bodies will become dissatisfied with the sensuous traditions and vain janglings of religious men. In their spirits they will long for celestial places, the realm of heaven open, and God who sees the longing heart will carry them away to the green pastures of heavenly truth.

As long as a man is satisfied with the primitive things of this earthly religious realm and the glamour of all he thinks splendid, he will never be carried away into the magnificent glory of spiritual understanding. He is of the earth earthy, having no desire for anything beyond the scope of his natural mind and the primitive things it can comprehend. There must come a healthy discontent with the primitive traditions that have held men captive throughout the church age, for the church system is now as full of tradition as was Israel in the age of the law. To those who tenaciously adhered to the letter of the law Jesus said, "Ye make the truth of God of no effect by your tradition." Tradition! Tradition! Tradition! Never ending tradition! Sunday schools have become such a tradition that they are accepted as a Bible institution and a commandment of the Lord, but they are only a human tradition and are not once mentioned or hinted at in scripture. Bible schools have become such a tradition that one would be led to believe they, too, are a scriptural institution, but they are not. They are a man-made institution that has filled the world with professional preachers who are nothing more than Bible-thumping copy-cats, clouds without water, carried about of the wind, trees whose fruit is withered, without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots. These are murmurers and complainers walking after their own lusts. Their mouth speaketh great swelling words of vanity, having men's persons in admiration because of advantage. Jude 16. How can any man deny that denominationalism and sectarianism have become a tradition among the people until today it would appear that only a handful of the earth's inhabitants know that God dwelleth not in these temples made with human hands. God did not build these denominations. He does not own them and He has turned away His face from beholding them. They have become the habitation of devils and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird. "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues, for her sins have reached to heaven and God has remembered her iniquities." Rev. 18:5.

The age of human reason is about to collapse. The day of the rule of men is almost over. The rickety tower of man's building, which he hopes will reach to heaven is leaning precariously on its crumbling foundation and its exalted works are tumbling around his head. The world with all its confusion and turmoil is being prepared for the rule of Jesus Christ. Amid the din of war, the confusion of nations, the violence and corruption that abounds to the four corners of the earth, there is a people being groomed to take the kingdom. They are being raised out of the darkness and night of a purely natural realm. They are being carried away of the Spirit into celestial realms that they might know the things that are coming on the world and be prepared of God to rule and reign in the glory and wisdom of their heavenly Father.

Let those who are being thus led of God think it not strange that they are misunderstood by the world and the worldly church around them, for they who walk in the night are clothed upon with darkness, but they who are of the day walk in the light and there is no darkness in them. A man cannot love God and love the world at the same time, for the whole world system is based on the things that men see and feel, taste, touch and smell, and those who are of the world love what is their own. But the celestial realm is filled with that which the eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither has entered into the heart of man. These two kingdoms - natural and spiritual - are farther apart than the poles. They are the antithesis of each other. One is flesh; the other is spirit. One is darkness; the other is light. One is of this world; the other is not of this world. "If ye were of the world, the world would love his own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." John 15:19.

Thus it was that John was separated more and more from even the very best of people, for, though we may not realize it, even the best of people lie bound in the chains of tradition or are content to spend their lives paddling in water ankle deep. They have never learned that just beyond the roaring breakers lie the fathomless depths of an ocean deep, mighty, and untamed by human power or wisdom. Thus it was that John was by his oppressors carried away, yea, carried away bodily and by force to the lonesomeness of the Isle of Patmos. We may at times well thank God for our oppressors who, for reasons which they think valid and sincere, drive us into separation from themselves and banish us from their presence, for it is in the alone-ness of our wilderness experience that we count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Jesus Christ our Lord.
know of no man who has reached great heights with God amid the noise and excitement of many people. Meetings and public gatherings have certainly had their place in the past, but

Heights by great men reached and kept
Were not attained by sudden flight;
But they, while their companions slept,
Were toiling upward in the night.

No man should underestimate the vast importance of separation from people whether it be forced or voluntary. It was beside the burning bush in the wilderness of Horeb that God revealed to Moses a purpose that will never die. In a dank prison cell in a foreign land He gave to Joseph the interpretation of a dream that amazed the whole world and brought a deliverance beyond the imagination of any human mind. Was it not in the captivity of Babylon that Daniel wrote his prophecy a prophecy more up to date than tomorrow's newspaper? Was not John the Baptist in a wilderness until the day of his showing to Israel? Yet of men born of women there has none arisen greater than he. Thus John, the apostle of love, the man who perhaps knew Jesus Christ more perfectly than all others, was carried away bodily and forcefully to the lonely isle into complete isolation and separation from men and their childish opinions. Words fail to tell of the vast importance of such an experience with God. We may never be carried to a deserted isle. We may never be in prison in Egypt, or be forced to flee to a desert as Moses did; but as sure as God is in His heaven every man who ever beholds the surpassing glory of His presence must first have his life crushed out of him by trial and tribulation. He will know the bitterness of being alone. He will know the heartache of being deserted. He will know the frustration that comes from that demon of misunderstanding. He will feel the pains of lies and misrepresentation, and endure with closed lips the taunts and jibes of those whom he loved most as they in gleeful hope declare the judgment of God upon him. "He saved others; let him save himself," they will cast in his teeth. Vinegar mingled with gall will be his drink as they part his garments among them and cast lots for his vesture. "My God! My God! Why hast Thou forsaken me" will be his bitter cry as darkness floods the earth and sky. But fear not! The sun will shine again more brightly than before, for each fiery trial ushers him to higher ground and to a clearer atmosphere where the sun of God's love and wisdom shineth ever brighter.

144,000 separate stories could not embrace the wilderness journeys of all the sons of God, but be it known to all that sooner or later those who shall be accounted worthy to attain His glory will feel the pain of forced separation. Fear none of these things as they come upon you, but hide yourself in Him for a little moment until the indignation be over past. The hour is coming when you shall say hi triumph, "These light afflictions which were but for a moment have worked for me a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

When beneath some heavy cross you fault
And say, "I cannot bear this heavy load alone,"
You say the truth. Christ made it purposely
So heavy that you must return to Him.
The bitter grief, which no one understands Conveys a secret message from the King,
Entreat ing you to come to Him again.
The Man of sorrows understands it well;
In all points tempted, He can feel with you.
You cannot come too often or too near.
The Son of God is infinite in grace;
His presence satisfies the longing soul;
And those who walk with Him from day to day
Can never have a solitary way.

Oh that men would quit their whining and pining for past days, for friends they loved and cherished in their yesteryears, stop trying to correct the misunderstandings which have been circulated to give them pain, and, instead, start looking upward through their tears, for they will see a rainbow round God's throne. Look for the hand that guides you through pathless seas and trackless air, for then the revelation of God will begin to unfold and His purpose be accomplished.
There is a power whose care
Teaches Thy way along the pathless coast,
The desert, and the illimitable air,
Lone wandering, but not lost.
He, who from zone to zone
Guides through the boundless coast
Thy certain flight,
In the long way that I must walk alone
Will guide my steps aright.

The physical separation of the apostle John from all he loved and held dear was naught but a necessary preparation for the glories into which he was now to be carried in the Spirit. Since God does not reveal Himself except to those who are separated from the throng, how essential then was this preparation in the life of the great apostle, for now, carried by the Spirit into the realms of God, his wondering eyes were to behold a vision of Christ such as no man at any time had even remotely known. "I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day and heard behind me a great voice as of a trumpet, saying, 'I am Alpha and Omega, the First and the Last... and I turned to see the voice that spoke to me, and, being turned, I saw seven golden candlesticks; and in the midst of the candlesticks one like unto the Son of man, clothed with a garment down to the foot, and girt about the paps with a golden girdle. His head and his hairs were white like wool, as white as snow; and his eyes were as a flame of fire; and his feet like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace; and his voice as the sound of many waters... Out of his mouth went a sharp two-edged sword: and his countenance was as the sun shineth in his strength." Rev. 1:10-18.

This is the revelation of Christ as He will appear at the end of the age. It is not the revelation of Jesus of Nazareth as He appeared two thousand years ago, despised and rejected, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief from whom we hid our faces; not the lowly Jesus who was born in a manger in Bethlehem and rode upon a colt, the foal of an ass, into Jerusalem where He was crucified, but the exalted Christ, Jesus Christ the Head with all His body of sons who have come into that same image throughout the church age. It is the fulfillment of the scripture, "Here am I and the children which God has given me." Heb. 2:13.

Though we cannot now turn aside to behold at length the glory of the fullness of Christ as John beheld Him here, yet be it known to all that it was toward this mighty fullness of Christ that God, the Father, had been building through every age and dispensation. Jesus knew this truth full well when He said, "Henceforth ye shall see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power and coming in the clouds of heaven." Oh that those who read would learn that the completeness of God's Christ is not seen in Jesus of Nazareth alone, but in Jesus of Nazareth, the Head and firstborn Son of God, together with that vast family who through the wisdom of eternal God come to sonship during this age of grace, for they are the body of Christ, the fullness of Him who filleth all in all, the breast, the arms, the hands, the thighs, the legs, and the blessed feet of Christ, who shall bear upon the mountains of Zion the glad tidings of the gospel of peace even as it is written, "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace..." Rom. 10:15. (Also Isa. 52:7.) They shall not hear the gospel of ages past, but the gospel of the kingdom of God, which is the gospel of everlasting peace. It is the truth of all previous ages contained in one gospel, the gospel of peace.

When Jesus washed the disciples' feet, He said, "What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter," for Peter had said "Thou shalt never wash my feet." "If I wash thee not, thou hast no part in Me," said Jesus, for full well the Son of God knew that He was preparing this man a place in His own body, the Father's house of many mansions. Likewise He is preparing a place in His body (His body of many sons) for you and me and for all others who through His blood and the fierce furnaces of affliction grow up into Him who is the head and firstborn of many brethren. Rom. 8:29.

John was beholding the completeness of Christ at the end of this age. He was seeing the fulfillment of God's purpose up to the end of this age of grace, Christ with His body of sons so complete in unity that they appear but one man, one son, one body. The voice like a single trumpet was in reality the voice of many waters, and waters, as we know, are people and tongues and nations. The head and hairs were white as wool, as white as snow. The eyes were as a flame of fire, the feet like fine brass as if they burned in a furnace of fire. The breast was girt about with a golden girdle, and a garment that made all to be one covered the whole body. Full well did John say that this was one like the Son of man, for, as we have already said, this was not Jesus of Nazareth, the lonely Son of Bethlehem, Judaea, and Calvary, but the complete body of the Christ, Jesus the head joined to those sons who comprise the breast, the arms, the hands, the thighs and legs and feet. This was also Paul's vision when he dipped his pen in inspiration and wrote, "Whom He did foreknow He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the firstborn among many brethren." Rom. 8:29. "For it became Him for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons to glory, to make the captain of their salvation (Jesus) perfect through sufferings. For both He that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified are all of one, (or all have one Father); for which cause He (Jesus) is not ashamed to call them brethren, saying, I will declare Thy name unto My brethren; in the midst of the church will I sing praise unto Thee. And again, I will put my trust in Him. And again, Behold I and the children (sons) which God hath given Me." Heb. 2:10-13.

This is the vision John was carried away to see - carried away in the Spirit beyond the corroding influences of the flesh, beyond the corrupting influences of people, beyond the blinding blight of Christians who see nothing beyond the end of their noses and whose ears are sensitive only to the noise some clatter of the world around them. There are clearer skies than those that fill with mist and cloud above us, a purer atmosphere than this earthly smog we breathe, for there are skies where God's love beams upon us, and air of the Spirit that doth from death relieve. Oh Lord, open our eyes that we may behold wonderful things out of Thy law!

It must have been a wonderful experience for those who stood with John the Baptist long years ago to hear his inspired voice with trumpet tones proclaiming, "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world." But I am utterly bewildered to know with what triumphant proclamation God will introduce to the world this one whose head and hairs are white as snow, whose breast is girt with a golden girdle, whose feet are like burning brass, and whose trumpet voice, like the sweet harmony of many waters, shall echo o'er all the mountains of Zion the glad, glad tidings of the gospel of peace.

Beloved reader, it is to these blessed realms that your spirit should be carried away. Our dear brother Paul once said, "Be not carried away with divers and strange doctrines, for it is a good thing that the heart be established with grace." It is so very easy in this age of abounding iniquity to be carried away captive by it, but let us rather beware lest we be led away by the error of the wicked one and so fall from our own steadfastness. 2 Pet. 3:17. The world is full of error. The cup of iniquity is so full that it is running over. The sins of the world are too many and too awful to bear contemplation, for so depraved have become the deeds of men that it is a shame to speak of the things which are done of them in secret. Eph. 5:12. Therefore have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them.

Paul by inspiration once wrote to the Galatians, "Ye did run well; who did hinder you?" It is so easy to let something small hinder us from running with patience the race that is set before us. It is so natural to grow weary in well-doing and faint by the way. It is so simple to turn our eyes from yonder guiding light to hearken for a moment to the enchanting sounds of earth, leaving our vessel to be dashed upon the rocks about us. One of the easiest things in all the world is to let down, slow up, and take it easy. It is so easy to let down on our life of prayer and communion with God. I am frankly amazed to find only a miserable handful of people who are concerned enough about themselves and the spiritual welfare of their families to halt the day's activities for a time of reading the Bible and united prayer at the throne of grace. Yet it is here above all places that lifelong communion with God is established. It is here that true priesthood begins. If we have become too busy to attend to this most important office of our priesthood, then we are too busy. We are placing first things last and last things first. Activity, work, and business are often thieves and robbers that steal from our spiritual life the most blessed promises of sonship, for all that come before Him are thieves and robbers. No amount of work, no peevishness on the part of children, no fear of friends or relations should be allowed to rob our home and our family of that communion with God which has no substitute anywhere.

It has been my long-standing belief that children should take part in family worship from the very moment they are old enough to lisp a prayer. The moment they are able to falteringly read a verse of scripture, they should take their part in family reading. Children who grow up in this atmosphere will find themselves being kept by the power of God, even when they don't want to be kept. They will not fall readily into the ways of the world, for wisdom will teach them and understanding will keep them. The greatest heritage a father and mother can leave to their children is not dollars and cents, but an example of sincere godliness. This is infinitely more valuable to them than a college education or a university degree, for without godliness true greatness can never be attained. The fear of the Lord is always the beginning of wisdom.

There will be little value in drawing beautiful word pictures of the effulgent glories of God's plan if, neglecting all, we slip into eternal desolation, for it is better never to have known the way of righteousness than after knowing it to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto us. Of all such it is written, "The dog has turned to his vomit again and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire." There is no book in the Bible that soars to greater heights of revelation than does the book of Hebrews, yet with what diligence does the writer continually exhort us with such urgent phrases as these: "Let us therefore fear lest, a promise being left us of entering into His rest, any of you should seem to come short of it. Let us labor therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief. Let us holdfast to our profession. Let us come boldly to the throne of grace that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need."

The writer of the book of Hebrews was infinitely concerned for the welfare of those to whom he wrote, for they had reached great heights of understanding and had gone much further than many others in that they had left the mere principles of the doctrine of Christ such as repentance from dead works, faith toward God, the doctrines of baptisms and the laying on of hands, and all the other teachings that belong only to the infancy of Christian experience. These people had tasted by experience the glory of the kingdom age and the good word of God and the power of coming ages, yet he knew that even such as these were still able to fall away and miss the goal of sonship which the priesthood of Melchisedec signifies. Heb. 6:1-12. See also Heb. 7.

God's divine power has given unto us "all things that pertain to life and godliness through the knowledge of Him who has called us to glory and virtue; whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption which is in the world through lust. And beside all this, giving all diligence, let us add to our faith, virtue; and to virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness; and to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity. For if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ... Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure; for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall, for so an entrance shall be ministered to you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ... Yea, I think it meet, as long as I am in this tabernacle, to stir you up by putting you in

The systems of men are collapsing all around us. Countless thousands who once loved only Christ are being carried away to join hands and hearts with the lecherous harlot of Babylon, which every day spreads her damning influence farther abroad. Bewitching mankind with her eyes and with sweet voice as the mythical sirens, she lures humanity to the rocks of destruction. But while the world and the vast multitude of the professing church is being carried away by the ignorance and superstition of this age of reason, see to it that you be not carried away with them, but rather that you be carried away by the Spirit of God into these high and holy places of revelation and experience where humble men are changed by His Spirit from glory to glory until they come into that same image and that same body of Jesus Christ.

Never permit yourself to be carried into modernistic deadness, nor yet into fantastic and spurious revelation that is not revelation at all, but just high-sounding nonsense that gives pre-eminence to human beings and draws no one closer to Christ. I do not want any experience that I can attain apart from Him; neither do I want any teaching disallowed by His word.

Paul told us that in the last days perilous times would come, and, indeed, they are very perilous; therefore, seek not your wisdom from either men or women, but from Christ alone. Seek not to be led by men, but by Christ who is the good shepherd. If you learn to know His voice and follow Him, you will never go astray, but, if you follow men or sects, you will certainly be led into error. "My sheep hear my voice and I know them and they follow Me; and I give unto them eternal life and they shall never perish; neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand. My Father that gave them Me is greater than all; and no man is able to pluck them out of My Father's Let us not then be carried away into divers and strange doctrines, but carried away to those high mountains of truth and revelation where we are changed into that same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord.

ESCHATOLOGY THE FIRST ADVENT OF CHRIST

Eschatology is the branch of theology dealing with "last things." The word is taken from the Greek eschatos (last) plus ology. Thus the truth embraced in eschatology concerns the final things of the ages. Though few theologians (if there be such people) of the older order would agree with me, eschatology in my opinion should include not only the second advent of Christ, but His first advent as well, since the two advents are really one. It includes the truth concerning the wheat and the tares, the second coming of Christ, the resurrection of the just, the judgment seat of Christ, the judgment of the nations, the millennial kingdom, the New Jerusalem, the resurrection of the unjust, the white throne judgment, the dispensation of the fullness of times, and the new heaven and the new earth.

From the inspired writing of the book of Hebrews we have this remarkable statement concerning the coming of Christ, showing the purpose of His first appearing and also the purpose of His second appearing: "But now once in the end of the world hath He appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself... and unto them that look for Him shall He appear the second time without sin unto salvation." Heb. 9:26, 28.

No man will ever be able to properly understand the Bible until he is able to see its message as one grand whole. All the things that have ever happened throughout the pages of Holy Scripture must be seen as integral parts of each other. Those who search for truth must be able to stand in the spirit with the Father before the foundation of the ages to behold through His all-seeing eyes the progress of His eternal purposes from the beginning of the creation to the culmination of the majestic plan. When the devout student does this, he will not be looking at a host of hit and miss tactics as the blundering experiments of a frustrated God, nor will he see a whole series of trials and errors, failures and successes, but his wondering eyes will behold one great and glorious purpose, conceived in the heart of God before the ages began, unfolding as a flower irresistibly, irretrievably, and unswerving as each successive age and dispensation reveals its own aionian purpose.

I take strong and uncompromising exception to the unwise teaching of so many would-be theologians who see in Eden a failure, a breach and a rift in God's intention. That the plan of an all-wise, almighty God could be thwarted by the efforts of some lesser creature who is neither all-wise nor all-powerful is unthinkable. This serpent creature was not almighty, but merely a tool in the hand of God without which eternal purposes could not be accomplished. Further, these theologians go on to show that, innocence having been proved a failure, the Lord placed man under conscience. This also proved to be a failure, so man was next placed under human government. This plan failed also. Next God chose Abraham and his seed to be the people of God, placing them under a perfect law, but this also failed, the upshot of this experiment being that God discarded both the law and His people and brought in a new idea through the dispensation of grace. Not many of these theologians have been hardy enough to suggest that grace also failed, yet, if their line of reasoning is correct, surely grace must have failed also, because the evidence of an unconverted, unregenerated world is everywhere about us. Christians lustily sing, "Jesus never fails", during the song service, then listen to the preacher describe a long list of failures during the sermon. Surely this is a contradiction. As long as we hold to this hit and miss type of understanding, we will never grasp the truth of scripture nor the eternal purposes of the Most High.

It is true that Jesus never fails. The omniscient Lord did not fail in the Eden experience. He accomplished exactly what He had determined before the world began. The creation was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him who subjected the same in hope. Rom. 8:20. The subjecting of the creation to vanity, futility and sin was a necessary and integral part in the long process of producing sons in the image and likeness of God, for it is written, "The earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God." The result of the fall in Eden was never destined to be the eternal desolation of ninety-nine percent of God's glorious creation. The result of the fall in Eden will consummate in the manifestation of the sons of God.

God's plans by wisdom are arranged
And fixed by firm decrees.
Nor can His purposes be changed
The creature's will to please.

Before God made man and placed him in the garden, He made this solemn proclamation. "Let us make man in our image and after our likeness and let us give him dominion." The Psalms of David and the teachings of Paul prove beyond doubt that that dominion was to extend to and include everything under the earth, in the earth, and in the great expanses of the heavens. Heb. 2:5-10. Furthermore, our Lord Jesus Christ during His life on earth both said and proved that all power in heaven and in earth was given unto Him. He was the first, the Captain (Heb. 2:10), of the manifested sons of God for whom all creation waits, but He is not the last. He, bless His wonderful name, is but the firstborn of many brethren. Rom. 8:29. He is the corn of wheat that fell into the ground to die that His life, set free from the kernel, might be manifested in the full corn of the ear, the much fruit of the many sons of God who were to follow.

The path to sonship lies directly through the fall, through the bitterness of temptation, the awesome knowledge of good and evil, the dread loneliness of Gethsemane and the agonies of Calvary. What son is he who receiveth not chastisement? If we endure chastening, God dealeth with us as with sons, for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not? But if we be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are we bastards, and not sons. Furthermore we have had fathers of our flesh, which corrected us, and we gave them reverence: Shall we not much rather be in subjection to the Father of spirits and live? For they verily for a few days chastened us after their own pleasure; but He for our profit, that we might be partakers of His holiness. Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous. Nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them that are exercised thereby. Heb. 12:7-11.

How could we, brethren, come into the chastening that produces sonship had there been no fall, no temptation, no devil, or no tribulation? Without these withering blasts the hope of sonship would not have been a possibility at all. But some man will say, "Why did not God devise some other way to make sons without the agony of tribulation?" Nay but, O man, who art thou that repliest against God? Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it, "Why hast Thou made me thus?" Hath not the potter power over the clay to make one vessel unto honor and another to dishonor? Let us stop our carnal reasoning and yield ourselves unto God and watch with grace and patience as His merciful purpose unfolds. Metals are refined and tempered only by fire and only by fire is the metal of sonship made perfect in His sight.

It is not true that God failed in Eden, failed under conscience, failed under human government, promise, law and grace. The truth is that each and every new dispensation brought with it a new horizon of truth on the pathway to sonship. In my booklet, Six Waterpots of Stone, I have endeavored to show how the combined truth of each new age becomes the living wine of the kingdom of God, which will be the next age in God's order. The eternal truths instituted and high-lighted in each successive dispensation run in parallel lines throughout the word of God, each contributing to and complementing the other as they progress in magnitude and glory while the ages advance. Could any man believe that the plan of redemption was a hasty idea conceived in the mind of God to offset the results of a disastrous fall in Eden, since the scripture clearly states that Jesus was the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world? Why in God's plan was He slain before the foundation of the world, before Eden, and before the transgression? Surely it could not have been in case man should sin! No! That slaying embraced the knowledge of the whole infinite design, which included both sin and redemption from it. Purpose, purpose, purpose flows forever like a mighty, infinite river throughout the inspired pages of the word of God, coming to rest at last in the boundless ocean of fulfillment, which can be nothing less than the Almighty Himself.

Men talk and speak with joy of the coming kingdom of God, yet to most of us the kingdom of God was never dreamed of until the days when John the Baptist came preaching, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." But look a little closer and you will see that the seeds of the kingdom of God were being sown long before Bethlehem, Calvary or Pentecost. That kingdom began in embryo in the days of Abraham and developed into a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people. When Peter uttered these words to the strangers scattered throughout Pontus, Galatia, Asia and Bythinia, the kingdom was growing and coming to maturity in that it was beginning to take its rightful place in the hearts of believing men and women, thus fulfilling the words of Jesus, "The kingdom of God is within you." This, like all else, is part of the ever progressing plan, for how could the kingdom of God be manifest in the earth among the nations of mankind until its laws, its mercy and its grace first filled the hearts and dwelt in the minds of those blessed sons who will soon administer its gracious precepts?

It was not until after the glory of the resurrection that the disciples came to Jesus to enquire, "Wilt Thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel?" Would you not say that their use of the word restore shows that the kingdom was long ago planted in Israel? Is it not true that they were the only people on the face of the earth who had ever enjoyed the blessing of the theocracy? Had they not functioned for years as a holy nation, a peculiar people under God's laws, God's prophets, and God's judges? It was only after they demanded a king that the Lord said to Samuel, "They have not rejected you; they have rejected Me." The blessing of that kingdom was taken from them when they placed a man as king and rejected God. When the apostles enquired, "Wilt Thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel," Jesus did not say, "No, I will not!" Neither did He hint that it was not His purpose to do so, but He said simply, "It is not for you to know the times or the seasons which God has put in His own power, but you shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you."

Again I aver that whatsoever line of Bible truth one may choose to follow he will discover its scarlet thread running from Genesis to Revelation. Justification by faith did not begin with the apostle Paul, as we are so prone to think. It began with Abel in Eden and was manifest in Abraham, who was justified by faith without the deeds of the law. It was taught by the prophet Habakkuk, who declared, "The just shall live by faith." Heb. 2:4. Indeed, the book of Hebrews, chapter eleven, names a "cloud of witnesses", both men and women, who lived and died by faith long before Paul taught the blessedness of that truth through which all mankind will find grace and mercy.

It comes as a shocking revelation to find in our day certain men and women who deny the apostolic authority of Paul, saying that his writings should never have been in the Bible. This kind of ignorance comes from lack of understanding, for surely such people do not know that Paul's main theme, justification by faith, was taught in the Old Testament in every sacrifice that was ever offered. Was not David justified by faith when, looking with longing beyond the experience of his day, he cried, "Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me?" Psa. 51:10. And again, "Thou desirdest not sacrifice, else would I give it: Thou delightest not in burnt offerings. The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit: a broken heart and a contrite spirit, O God, Thou wilt not despise." Psa. 51:17. Let us then never give place to the evil of trying to destroy the works of Paul lest we be quickly destroyed instead.

We could not have received Jesus Christ as our Messiah had it not been that the coming of the Just One was spoken of by the prophets in many scriptures and foreshadowed in literally hundreds, if not thousands, of different manners - by types, allegories, antitypes, allusions, metaphors, predictions and patterns. Thus, when Jesus came, all who would, could see that this was He that should come. In His meeting with the two brokenhearted disciples at Emmaus, He chided them for their lack of faith and slowness to believe in these words: "O fools and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken, ought not Christ to have suffered and entered into His glory? And, beginning at Moses and all the prophets, He expounded unto them in all the scriptures, the things concerning Himself." In like manner also Jesus, speaking to the unbelieving Pharisees, said, "Search the scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and these are they which testify of Me." The only scripture the Pharisees had was the Old Testament scripture, and "These," said Jesus, "testify of Me."

I exhort every child of God to earnestly search the scripture and as you do, you will see every thread of truth, every unfolding doctrine, and every immutable purpose running from Alpha to Omega like mighty rivers of life flowing at last into the eternal ocean of God Himself. As for me, I reject the spotty, hit and miss preaching of doctrines which seem to be so detached from the great stream of eternal truth and betimes I wonder how some Christians can remain alive at all when the sermons they hear are so detached from the purpose of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His will.

Let us now explore with reverence the purpose of Christ in His first coming, when at the end of the age of law He appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself. The coming of Christ, first to Bethlehem and Calvary and again to appear a second time at the end of this age of grace, does not comprise two comings, but two parts of one coming. It is like unto the resurrection of the dead, which, though occurring in three parts, is but one resurrection.

"Behold My servant, whom I uphold; Mine elect, in whom My soul delighteth; I have put My spirit upon Him: He shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles. He shall not cry, nor lift up, nor cause His voice to be heard in the street. A bruised reed shall He not break, and the smoking flax shall He not quench: He shall bring forth judgment unto truth. He shall not fail nor be discouraged, till He have set judgment in the earth: and the isles shall wait for His law." Isa. 42:1-4. "He shall grow up before Him as a tender plant, and as a root out of a dry ground: He hath no form nor comeliness; and when we shall see Him, there is no beauty that we should desire Him. He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief: and we hid as it were our faces from Him; He was despised, and we esteemed Him not. Surely He hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows: yet we did esteem Him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. But He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon Him; and with His stripes we are healed." Isa. 53:2-5.

This was he of whom the eunuch read as he journeyed in his chariot from Jerusalem to Ethiopia, but reading he could not understand. Therefore the angel of the Lord spoke to Philip, saying, "Arise, and go toward the south unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza, which is desert. And he arose and went: and, behold, a man of Ethiopia, an eunuch of great authority under Candace, queen of the Ethiopians, who had the charge of all her treasure, and had come to Jerusalem for to worship, was returning, and sitting in his chariot read Esaias the prophet. Then the Spirit said unto Philip, Go near, and join thyself to this chariot. And Philip ran thither to him, and heard him read the prophet Esaias, and said, Understandest thou what thou readest? And he said, How can I, except some man should guide me? And he desired Philip that he would come up and sit with him. The place of the scripture which he read was this, He was led as a sheep to the slaughter; and like a lamb dumb before his shearer, so opened He not his mouth: In His humiliation His judgment was taken away: and who shall declare His generation? For His life is taken from the earth. And the eunuch answered Philip, and said, I pray thee, of whom speaketh the prophet this? of himself, or of some other man? Then Philip opened his mouth, and began at the same scripture, and preached unto him Jesus." Acts 8:26-35.

It is very evident that the Old Testament saints were unable to comprehend the distinction between the first coming of Christ, at which time He would put away sin by sacrificing Himself, and His second coming at a later date, when He would appear, not to deal with sin, but to make our salvation complete. This He will accomplish by the resurrection of the dead, at which time the Lord shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trumpet of God and the dead shall be raised incorruptible and we shall be changed.

At His second appearing our corruptible bodies shall put on incorruption and these mortal bodies shall put on immortality and we shall be changed, or transformed. It is here at the second coming of the Lord that our redemption is complete and we stand perfect in Christ in spirit, soul and body. This is certainly the meaning of 1 Cor. 15:51-53.

The Old Testament saints were taken quite unawares at the first coming of Christ. That the Messiah was coming they did not doubt, but that His coming was to be in two distinct phases with two distinct purposes in view they were totally ignorant. Their whole expectation was the appearing of a mighty conquering monarch who would restore the kingdom to Israel, but they did not expect a man of sorrows who was to be crucified to put away sin and deal with it effectually forever. They expected the glory of the kingdom, but did not know that its glory must be preceded by the suffering of the cross, and in this way they are like unto some of us who hope to reign in glory with Christ, but refuse to take up our cross and follow Him through the crucifying tribulation of this life. The writer to the Hebrews has graphically stated, "Nor yet that He should offer Himself often as the high priest entereth into the holy place every year with blood of others; for then, must He often have suffered since the foundation of the world: but now once in the end of the world hath He appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself... And unto them that look for Him shall He appear a second time without sin unto salvation," or not to deal with sin, but to make our salvation complete. Heb. 9:25-28.

It is very clear then that the purpose of each phase of Christ's coming is very different. His first coming was to deal with the sin question and to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself. So great and complete was His sacrifice for sin and so thoroughly did Christ deal with the entire sin question, putting it away forever, that Paul, bursting forth in a paean of praise and glory, proclaimed the glad message to all creation, "All things are of God, who hath reconciled us to Himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation, to wit, that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation." 2 Cor. 5:18-19. And as though that marvelous message were not sufficiently complete, he enlarged the truth further in these forceful words: "Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us; we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God. For He hath made Him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him." Verses 20 and 21.

In the light of so great a salvation and so divine a reconciliation as this, was it any great wonder that the purpose of His first coming should not be to set up His royal throne and reign, but rather to suffer and give His life a ransom for many? For if through the disobedience of one many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous; and who dare to say that the many who were made righteous in the second case are not as numerous as the many who were made sinners in the first place! In proof of this Paul five times over in the fifth chapter of Romans shows that the blessed sacrifice of Christ is much more extensive in its glorious results than was the destruction wrought by the sin of Adam. "Much more then, being now justified by His blood, we shall be saved from wrath through Him. For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of His Son, much more, being reconciled, shall we be saved by His life." Rom. 5:9-10. Can we imagine such truth? If enemies were reconciled by the death of His Son, would it not follow naturally then that we who have been reconciled shall be saved by His life?

A precious lesson, which every saint should learn is this: Jesus did not die that I might live, as we have so often heard. The truth is Jesus died that He might give His life to me. We have no life to live in the first place. The unregenerate man is doubly dead, twice dead plucked up by the roots. He is dead spiritually and dead physically. That existence which men call life is not life at all but death. "I am come that they might have life," said Jesus, and His only method of giving His life to you and me was by His own death. It is clearly stated that except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit. Thus it comes to pass that any man who is in Christ has become a new creation. The life Jesus released in His death will be raised incorruptible and we shall all be changed, for this corruptible must put on incorruptibility and this mortal must put on immortality, and then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, "Death is swallowed up in victory." As Adam was alive in the beginning in body, soul and spirit, so in the end shall all be made alive to stand in Christ complete in His life and resurrection. "I am the resurrection and the life," Jesus... said. "Whosoever believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live, and whosoever liveth and believeth in Me shall never die." John 11:25-26. Believest thou this?

Every believer, yea, every man, should learn the truth that death is not the grave. Death is that condition in which everyone outside of Christ exists. The whole journey from the cradle to the grave is death - not spiritually only, but spiritually and physically as well. The whole existence of unregenerate men whether in the cemetery or in the halls of pleasure is the realm of death. In confirmation of this the scripture has graphically stated, "She that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth." 1 Tim. 5:16. Death is the whole realm of the unregenerate man. Whether he is walking about in strength or lying still in the tomb makes not one whit of difference to his condition. He is dead. For this reason Jesus said to the young man who would return to bury his father, "Let the dead bury their dead, but follow thou Me." Matt. 8:22. The people who were burying the man that lay in the coffin were just as dead as the corpse they were burying. Once we comprehend this indisputable and very necessary fact of our existence, we can understand why it was that Jesus died, not that I might live, but that He might give His life to me. "I am the way, the truth, and the life," Jesus said. There is therefore no way but Him. There is no truth outside of Him. There is no life anywhere in the universe but in Him. "In Him was life, and the life was the light of men," and the light shineth in darkness and the darkness cannot overcome it. No amount of darkness can overcome even the smallest light. Darkness, being merely the absence of light, is therefore of itself nothing. Oh how great is the salvation of the Lord and how wonderfully does His light shine and His life possess all those who believe and put their trust in Him!

It may seem strange to us who live in this present age to learn that the Old Testament saints could not understand the scriptures, which clearly spoke of the suffering, the crucifixion, and the death of Christ. They were completely absorbed with those many other prophecies that spoke of His glory and His kingdom. How clearly Peter points up their blindness to the truth of His first appearing to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself in that notable statement regarding our salvation when he says, "Of which salvation the prophets have inquired and searched diligently, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you: searching what, or what manner of time the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow. Unto whom it was revealed, that not unto themselves, but unto us they did minister the things which are now reported unto you by them that have preached the gospel unto you with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven..." 1 Pet. 1:10-12. So we may say with assurance that, though the anointed Old Testament prophets frequently prophesied of the sufferings of the Messiah and the glory that was to follow, they could not understand what they were saying, and when they earnestly sought God as to the meaning of their predictions, the Holy Spirit revealed to them that it was not given to them to understand, because they were not ministering to themselves, but to us who would live at a later time.

Surely it must have seemed like an enormous contradiction to the prophet Isaiah to hear his own voice proclaiming, "Of the increase of His government there shall be no end, upon the throne of David and upon his kingdom, to order and establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even forever," Isa. 9:7, and then to hear the Spirit saying, "He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon Him, and by His stripes we are healed." Isa. 53:5. I doubt not that at times some were tempted to think such prophecy was blatant contradiction and that the prophets themselves were speaking, not from God, but from the confusion of their own minds. Yet, when they earnestly inquired the reason for such words, the Spirit in grace revealed to them that it was not given to them to understand, because they were not ministering to themselves, but to us who would live in another age when all they had said would come true.

The disciples of Jesus, even after His resurrection, showed plainly that they were still very concerned about the restoration of the kingdom to Israel. For this reason they enquired of the risen Christ, "Wilt Thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel?" This, of course, was a logical question, but it proved that even they did not understand that, before the kingdom could be restored, they themselves and millions like them would have to be born again and transformed by the power of God and made sons of God in the image of Christ. They must become possessors of the mind that was in Christ, be raised from the dead in glorification and made immortal. Had those disciples been given the kingdom in their present state, they would have made a shambles of it just as their forefathers had done. Well did Jesus know that, before His kingdom could come and prosper, the rulers of the kingdom must first be prepared. "A body hast Thou prepared Me," Heb. 10:5, and that body is the Christ body. It is the sons of God, tens of thousands of them, first born of a woman travelling in the wilderness of this world, then reborn by the miracle of the new birth. Before they reign, they must first be made perfect through suffering. They must have no mind of their own that the mind of Christ might dwell in them. They must have become possessors of His life, His mind and His Spirit. They must become one brotherhood, being baptized into one body by one Spirit. By this intimate union with Him they shall become the fullness of God's Christ. Their united voices must be as the sound of one waterfall, their eyes as a flame of fire and their feet, not iron mingled with miry clay, but as burnished brass burning in a furnace of fire. The hair of their heads must be white as wool with age and experience and on their heads the incorruptible crowns of hope, of joy, of rejoicing, of life and of glory. From their sanctified lips shall glisten the sharp two-edged sword, which is the word of God. Thus shall be the preparation and presentation of those blessed sons of God, who with Christ shall reign and prosper in a kingdom that is to embrace the whole world. "Upon the throne of David to order and establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even forever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this." But those saints did not see these things, and I know in my heart that many who name the name of Christ in our day have not understood these things either.

Oh that men would learn that this age of grace was never given for the conversion of the world! If so, the world would have been converted. This age of grace is for the calling out of a people who will rule with Christ in a literal reign over the entire earth for a thousand years, during which time the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea. Thus did that mighty teacher, the apostle James, interpret the word? Speaking of the Gentiles, he said, "And to this agree the words of the prophets; as it is written, After this I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and will set it up: that the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles, upon whom My name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things. Known unto God are all His works from the foundation of the world." Acts 15:15-18.

My heart is mightily moved by the awesome, universal and all-embracing scope of the sacrifice of Christ. "Once in the end of the age," saith God, "He appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself." The finite mind of puny man cannot even remotely grasp the whole damaging realm of sin nor can man understand why sin came into God's universe, nor are we permitted to know just when it came or exactly how it came. Nevertheless, sin did come and there can be no disputing that fact. The heart of any faithful believer must certainly accept the fact that God, who is both almighty and all-wise, would never allow anything to enter into His creation unless some beneficial purpose was clearly understood in His infinite wisdom. Let us rest fully assured of God's wisdom that even in this hour of restricted understanding we might both possess and manifest perfect faith and confidence in Him who ruleth over all and worketh all things after the counsel of His blessed will. It is a mystery beyond my understanding to know how men and women can claim to believe that God is almighty, omniscient, immutable, omnipresent, loving and changeless and even proclaim these truths, yet in the next breath deny them all by announcing that the entrance of sin into the universe was an accident that God had not foreseen nor anticipated.

Consider again these awesome words: "Now once in the end of the age hath He (Christ) appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself." Whatsoever sin is, from whithersoever it came, or whatsoever its results have been in all heaven and earth, Jesus Christ our Lord appeared in the end of an age to put away sin. He did not come to shove it off into some dark corner of the universe where it would go unnoticed for a time. He came to put it away. He came to wash it away and purge away its stain, to destroy its power, to annul its results, to rescue from its thrones, to vanquish its thralldom, to heal its scars, to cleanse its iniquity, and to abolish it from all God's universe. He came to put it away. The vast sphere of the mighty working of Christ's sacrifice and complete redemption, the realm in which He put away sin, is clearly stated to be the realm of earth and the realm of heaven. Wherever sin has blighted God's creation, He has put it away. "And, having made peace through the blood of His cross, by Him to reconcile all things unto Himself; by Him, I say, whether they be things in earth or things in heaven." Col. 1:20. The scope of Christ's redemption and reconciliation in these realms is clearly stated to include all things (verse 20), and these all things are the same all things He is said to have created in verse 16.

Man cannot be held responsible for God's decisions, nor is God in the least degree bound by the paltry chains of man's humanistic theology. Let man in the vanity of his mind proclaim his doctrine of eternal destruction and desolation if he will, but let those who however remotely grasp the omnipotence and wisdom of God rejoice with joy unspeakable that He who is immutable wisdom, almighty power and undying love has proclaimed that Christ has appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself and in so doing has reconciled all things to God. Staggering as is the knowledge that Christ has reconciled all things on earth and in heaven unto Himself, our minds are completely boggled and overwhelmed as we listen to the apostle's inspired description of the inhabitants of heaven and earth. Certainly it must be that, if God has reconciled all things in heaven and earth to Himself, He must be speaking in particular of the inhabitants of those realms. Jesus Christ was the Creator not only of heaven and earth but of all creatures therein. "For by Him were all things created that are in heaven, that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by Him and for Him." Col. 1:16. All these He has reconciled by the blood of His cross, that at (in) the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven and things in earth and things under the earth, Phil 2:9-10, that every tongue might be heard confessing that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father. "And you, who were sometimes alienated and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now hath He reconciled in the body of His flesh through death, to present you holy, and unblameable and unreproveable in His sight." Col. 1:21-22. Thus are included thrones and dominions, principalities and powers, and men who were enemies and alienated in their minds by wicked works.

Never in all the inspired writings of holy writ has the thought even once been presented that God was an enemy of mankind or that He needed in any way to be reconciled to man. The reverse is always the truth. It is man who is at enmity with God and it is man who must be reconciled to God. Christ did not come to reconcile God to man as the theologians would have us believe. Ah, no! A thousand times no! He came to reconcile man to God. It was God the Father who gave His Son to be our reconciliation. "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." In the face of such mighty words of redemption and reconciliation as these, I know not what could possibly be left outside the universal scope of Christ's redemption. How great Thou art, O Lord, and how perfect in all Thy understanding! How complete the redemption Thy grace has wrought when once in the end of the age Christ appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself! We may not behold all the fullness of Thy great redemption while evil men and seducers wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived, but the mortal blow to sin was struck and Thou didst strike it well when in the end of an age Thou didst appear to sacrifice Thyself and finish a work that would vanquish sin forever. And Thou, in striking down sin and putting it away, hast struck down that brazen thing standing between Thyself and the reconciliation of the universe which Thy hands had made. Our ransomed ears await the paeans of celestial praise when every creature in heaven and in earth and in the sea will be heard singing that anthem sublime, "Blessing and honor and glory and power be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne and unto the Lamb forever and ever."

Man of sorrows! What a name For the Son of God who came Ruined sinners to reclaim!
Hallelujah! What a Saviour!

Bearing shame and scoffing rude,
In my place condemned He stood;
Sealed my pardon with His blood.
Hallelujah! What a Saviour!

Lifted up was He to die.
It is finished was His cry;
Now in heaven exalted high!
Hallelujah! What a Saviour!

CHAPTER TWO
THE WHEAT AND THE TARES

In every age since the sons of Adam have been upon the earth, the children of faith have lived side by side with the children of unbelief. Search as far back in Bible history as is possible and you will find the wheat and weeds of faith and non-faith growing in the same field together. You will see Cain dwelling with Abel, Ishmael with Isaac, Jacob with Esau, Joseph with the Egyptians, and Daniel with the Babylonians. You will find the seven thousand Israelites who would not bow the knee to Baal dwelling in the midst of a nation of Baal worshippers who honor Baal as God.

"The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man which sowed good seed in his field, but while men slept his enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat and went his way. But when the blade was sprung up, and brought forth fruit, then appeared the tares also. So the servants of the householder came and said unto him, Sir, didst thou not sow good seed in thy field? From whence then hath it tares? He said unto them, An enemy hath done this. The servants said unto him, Wilt thou that we go and gather them up? But he said, Nay; lest while ye gather up the tares ye root up also the wheat with them. Let both grow together until the harvest: and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them: but gather the wheat into my barn." Matt. 13:24-30.

Thus by our Lord's own word it is certain that both the wheat of the kingdom and the tares of the wicked one must grow side by side and God Almighty has ordained that it should be so. It is a solemnizing revelation just to understand that, should the tares be uprooted from our midst in this hour, their uprooting could mean our own uprooting and destruction. "Why does not God destroy the devil and uproot the ungodly and the sinner?" Demands the man who is lacking in understanding, but little does he realize that it is the presence of these very noxious weeds that inspires him to cling fast to the saving, redeeming hand of Him before whose purity even holy angels cover their faces and their feet.

When Jesus was alone and the crowd had gone away, His enquiring disciples came to ask Him to explain the parable of the tares, for surely they too must have wondered why a wise Lord would permit evil to flourish side by side with good. This was the answer Jesus gave them: "He that soweth the good seed is the Son of man; the field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom; but the tares are the children of the wicked one. The enemy that sowed them is the devil, the harvest is the end of the world (age); the reapers are the angels. As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire, so shall it be in the end of this world (age). The Son of man shall send forth His angels, and they shall gather out of His kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity; and shall cast them into a furnace of fire: there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth. Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. Who hath ears to hear, let him hear." Matt. 13:36-43.

Thus throughout this entire age we have been seeing the children of the wicked one and the children of God, the children of unbelief and the children of faith dwelling side by side like wheat and weeds in a field, and thus it will be to the end of this age, at which time God will begin to separate them one from the other, gathering the tares together in bundles that they might have their fearful part in the purifying brimstone of the lake of fire.

For many years the author visualized a day of judgment in which the Lord would suddenly send His angels to separate the good from the bad, the wheat from the tares, and the sheep from the goats, and I suppose there is nothing seriously wrong with that thought. It may indeed be quite accurate, but, as time has passed, it has become increasingly clear that what some expected God would do in one particular twenty-four day He has now begun to do, as He said, in this the end of the age.

It is very important to understand that an angel as spoken of in scripture is often a messenger and may not always be one of those bright shining ones who stand in the presence of the Lord of Sabaoth. There are other messengers who come as angels of light, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ. And no marvel (or, marvel not at this); for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light. Therefore it is no great thing if his ministers also be transformed as the ministers of righteousness; whose end shall be according to their works." 2 Cor. 11:13-15.

Did not our Lord Jesus Christ forewarn us that in the last days there would be an increasing number of false prophets, false teachers and false christs. His exact words were these: "Many shall come in My name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many." Matt. 24:5. And have we forgotten that Paul warned us all that even in his day the strange, mysterious working which he called the mystery of iniquity was at work (2 Thess. 2:7), and that it would continue with ever increasing power and deception right up until the hour when "he who now letteth" is taken out of the way. After the elect, who now hinder the working of Satan, are removed from the church... system, then he whose coming is after the working of Satan will be revealed with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish, because they received not the love of the truth that they might be saved. 2 Thess. 2:7,9-10.

There is a move going on in the earth, which has the appearance of a revival, but is not a revival. It is a great deception that is intended to deceive if possible the very elect and it is accomplishing its purpose. Within its ranks are many evangelists and preachers of Protestantism, together with bishops, prelates, canons and cardinals of both Protestantism and Rome. These men fawn upon and blandish each other, exchanging gifts and vestments and other honors, and, because their names are widely known among men, they deceive their followers, believing that gain in wealth and numbers is godliness. Therefore precious precept and fundamental truth may be sacrificed for the sake of a carnal unity. Their unity may be the unity of men, but it is not of God. If the great city-wide revival campaigns being conducted across the land were real revivals from heaven, then godlessness would be on the decline in our nation as has been the case in every revival throughout history, but instead evil men and seducers, both inside the religious world and outside the religious world, are waxing worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived. Both religion and revival have become such big business and so lucrative in reward that the church system has become honey-combed with men and women who know not the Lord Jesus Christ, who are not acquainted with His truth and have no call from God to preach His word, yet because they can strum a guitar, sing in a quartette and wiggle their hips while they shout into microphones, transforming the beautiful hymns of Zion that were written in the shadow of the cross into what they dare to describe as hard rock, then they are looked upon as angels and messengers of God. I believe many of them are Satan's messengers, transformed into angels of light, and they are sent to divide the wheat from the tares, the sheep from the goats, and the wheat from the chaff. Let there be no doubt in the mind of any man. These false ministries, often coming from the night clubs of Las Vegas or Hollywood and from other similar walks of life, could well be the angels of whom Jesus spoke, saying, "In the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares and bind them in bundles to burn them, but gather ye the wheat into my barn."

What better method could God employ to separate sheep from goats than that which He is now employing - a method by which that which is false follows that which is false and that which is true follows that which is true? What better method could God employ to separate sheep from goats than that which He is now employing - a method by which that which is false follows that which is false and that which is true follows that which is true? The goats follow after the goats and the sheep follow after the sheep. The wheat is gathered into the bins of the Lord and the tares are gathered into bundles to the burning.

I am intrigued by the word bundles as it is used here by our Lord. In this present hour an almost insane desire grips the minds of the multitude, causing them to believe that they must by all means become members of some sect or group of people, some bundle or bunch whether large or small. Whether denominational or undenominational makes little difference to them just so long as they are joined to something visible. Whether there is unity of spirit or bonds of peace is immaterial to them, but to belong to some group, some sect, some crowd, some bundle is all important in their minds. Whether the preacher feeds them strong corn or husks matters little. The main thing is to belong. To most Christians belonging seems to be their security. These groups I believe are the bundles that are being formed. They are the bundles of tares being prepared for the trysting hour at the judgment seat of Christ when the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is. The gold, silver and precious stones will be purified and made better by the fire, but the wood, the hay and the stubble will be consumed. I beseech you therefore, brethren that you seek to know, not the earthly union that comes from belonging to groups, but the heavenly union that comes by belonging to Christ. It is our relationship to Him that will be an anchor steadfast and sure, holding our souls to the solid rock in the hour of trial. The anchor that is cast in Him will keep the soul steadfast and immovable when the billows roll. When the tides of time and tribulation have swept away the foundations of sinking sand and the fires divine have consumed the wood, the hay and the stubble and the bundles of tares, it will be our relationship to Him and to Him alone that will anchor us to the rock that cannot be moved. He who puts his confidence in men and is joined to them will in the end receive what men can do, but he who puts his confidence in Christ and is joined in one Spirit to Him will in the end receive what God can do. It is beyond my understanding to find why Christians who testify that they have listened to the same old sermons year after year, never being pointed to higher ground, still, for all that, insist on being part of that old bundle even though their conscience tells them that in the end it will be burned.

My beloved brethren, we are living in the end of the age. This is the hour when God is sending His heralds to bring a message from heaven. They are crying as the word of God said they would, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her sins." The Almighty will judge the Babylonish whore, burning up her works with unquenchable fire and bringing her into the dust of desolation. I well know how Christians hide behind Heb. 10:25 - "Not forsaking the assembling of yourselves together, as the manner of some is, but exhorting one another: and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching." But have you forgotten the command, "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." 2 Cor.6:17-18. Have you failed to read that message and realize its importance in this hour when the wheat and tares are being separated? It is only when we have first forsaken our relationship with the bundles, the bunches, the sects and the organizations that we enter into mature sonship, and it is only after we enter into this spiritual maturity that we are able to assemble in the unity of the Spirit and the bonds of God's peace. In all other assembling we come together, not for the better, but for the worse.

"Where two or three are gathered together in My name, there am I in the midst of them." Such gatherings may be quite unannounced and informal. They may even appear to be accidental and unintended. Such assemblings may occur in a bus, a train, or in the air. They may occur in a shopping mall when saints of like precious faith chat together of heavenly things, or it may be when one saint visits in the home of another. I assure you that those blessed ones who live in the realm of the Spirit will discover the words of Jesus are completely true, "Out of their bellies will flow rivers of living water." There is no more lovely story of an assembling ever related than that recorded in the Gospel of Luke, when three days after the death of our Lord two heart-broken disciples plodded wearily down the road from Jerusalem to Emmaus. As they talked together of the dreadful things that had happened at Jerusalem, and commoned and reasoned together, Jesus Himself drew near and went with them. "But their eyes were holden that they should not know Him. And He said unto them, What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk, and are sad? And one of them, whose name was Cleopas, answering said unto Him, Art Thou only a stranger in Jerusalem, and hast not known the things that are come to pass there in these days? And He said unto them, What things? And they said unto Him, Concerning Jesus of Nazareth, which was a prophet mighty in deed and word before God and all the people: And how the chief priests and our rulers delivered Him to be condemned to death, and have crucified Him. But we trusted that it had been He, which should have redeemed Israel: and beside all this, today is the third day since these things were done. Yea, and certain women also of our company made us astonished, which were early at the sepulcher: And when they found not His body, they came, saying that they had also seen a vision of angels which said that He was alive. And certain of them that were with us went to the sepulcher, and found it even so as the women had said: but Him they saw not. Then He said unto them, O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophet s have spoken: Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into His glory? And beginning at Moses and the prophets, He expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning Himself. And they drew nigh unto the village whither they went: and He made as though He would have gone further. But they constrained Him, saying, Abide with us: for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent. And He went in to tarry with them. And it came to pass, as He sat at meat with them, He took bread, and blessed it, and brake, and gave to them. And their eyes were opened, and they knew Him; and He vanished out of their sight. And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us, while He talked with us by the way, and while He opened to us the scriptures? And they rose up that same hour and returned to Jerusalem, and found the eleven gathered together, and them that were with them, saying, The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared unto Simon. And they told them what things were done by the way, and He opened the scriptures to them, though they knew Him not, their hearts burned within them. Oh, what a sermon He must have preached as He unfolded all the things concerning Himself, beginning with Moses and carrying the blessed theme through all the prophets right down to His own death and resurrection! Never was such a message given or such a sermon preached! This, dear friend, is true assembling, and surely it was a perfect type of what may be when two or three on occasion are assembled to talk of the things of God, and to their utmost joy they find Jesus Christ the Lord is wonderfully in their midst to teach them the blessed things of God and instruct them in all the ways that they should go. As time and years have added their weight of experience to my life, I have become increasingly convinced that regular church meetings keep God's people in spiritual infancy and dependency. Nothing is more conducive to the making of a one, man ministry and the people themselves become little more than listeners and pew warmers, contributing wholeheartedly to the luke-warmness of the Laodicean condition that is everywhere present through the nominal Christian world.

Concerning the parable of the wheat and the tares, several outstanding remarks demand our special attention, though great importance should be attached to each point Christ emphasized in this notable discourse. According to Matt. 13:36, it was after Jesus had sent the multitude away that the disciples came to Him, requesting Him to declare the parable unto them. Apparently the lesson had been given to all the multitude who listened to Jesus teach, but the real declaration of its meaning and significance in this age came only when the multitude had gone away. May the reader take special notice of this fact, because there are not many good listeners in the world. The average person hears the word, but like a man beholding his natural face in a glass, they go away and forget what manner of men they were. So many hearers hear the word of God, but pay no attention to the truth it brings. Thus, when the word of God is fulfilled before their eyes, they remember not that the things they are seeing are the fulfillment of that which the Lord has spoken. If we paid attention to what was said, we would be neither amazed nor so concerned when the thing He has spoken is fulfilled in our midst. It was to the hearers the Lord spoke when He said, "When ye see these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh." Luke 21:28.

On that great day when Saul of Tarsus was converted to Christ, a great light from heaven shone down upon him. From out the glory of that light Jesus spoke to him, saying, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me?" And Saul, terrified and amazed at the thing, cried out with trembling heart, "Who art Thou, Lord?" The Lord replied, "I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest." When Saul (Paul) related this heavenly experience years later, he interjected this pertinent bit of information: "And they that were with me saw indeed the light, and were afraid; but they heard not the voice of Him that spake to me." Acts 22:9. There is a great deal of difference between "hearing the voice that spake to me" and merely seeing a light and noting the strange manifestations that were present. I fear that on most occasions, while one or two actually hear what the Lord says, the majority are either frightened by or delighted with the outward signs and manifestations they are seeing and hearing. On more occasions than one our Lord withheld important information until the crowd had gone home, reserving the truth for the elect.

On this occasion also Jesus knew that the multitudes would never grasp the hidden truth of what He was saying. Indeed, He plainly stated that the very parables He uttered were given that "seeing they might see and not perceive, and hearing they might hear and not understand." Therefore the explanation was kept for that little flock who could not only hear the music and see the miracles, but would listen to the words of life as well.

I cannot understand why preachers take such great delight in crowds. Of all that is fickle in the whole wide world, there is nothing so fickle as crowds. Seldom are they ever right in their decisions and their thoughts are as changeable as the winds that blow. The same crowd that shouts "Hosanna!" today roars "Crucify Him!" tomorrow. A man will learn as his years mature that in this present life true friends are very few. If you have one friend of the David and Jonathan variety, you have done well, but you may never count on more than half a dozen or so. Even our blessed Lord found human faithfulness disappointing and unreliable when His soul longed for a friend more than anything else in this life to watch with Him in that dread hour of blood and tears that marked His awful Gethsemane.
After the noisy crowd had disappeared and Jesus had gone into the house, the disciples requested an explanation of this important parable and these are the points He emphasized. 1, He that sows the good seed is the Son of man. All good seed is sown by Christ and will bring forth good fruit. Christ sows good seed and none other. Have neither doubt nor fear about that. There is nothing bad or unreliable about the gospel or any of its results. All who receive the ingrafted word will bring forth a harvest in like kind as the seed that was sown. 2. The field in which the seed is sown is the world. The whole world is Christ's field. It belongs to Him because He purchased it. It was because God the Father loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believed in Christ His Son would not perish, but have everlasting life. 3. The good seed that was sown is the children of the kingdom. Not mere professors, but Israelites indeed, men born of the Spirit, washed in the cleansing blood of Christ, sanctified by the Holy Ghost, set apart as clean vessels and tried with fire for the Master's use. These saints walk in obedience only to Christ. They have cast off the works of the flesh. They have put on Christ. They have put off the natural mind and the mind that was in Christ Jesus dwells in them. They are not fornicators, adulterers or unclean. They are not smokers or drunkards or gluttons, for all such lust proceeds from the filthiness of the flesh and displays gross uncleanness of heart and a faulty consecration toward God. "Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate (having woman-like qualities unbefitting a man), nor abusers of themselves with mankind (sodomites, lesbians and the like), nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God." 1 Cor. 6:9-10. This is a very straightforward list of requirements and it proceeds from the lips of God and the mind of Holy Spirit. All such things as these, once entertained in any life, must be bitterly repented of and forsaken completely. The cleansing power of the blood of Christ must be sought to purify the heart and the Holy Spirit must be received that grace and power may be given to live as sons of God in the midst of this crooked, perverse, and adulterous world. "Mortify therefore your members which are upon the earth: fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence (illicit sexual desire and lust), and covetousness, which is idolatry." Col. 3:5. It is because of these very things that the wrath of God falls upon the disobedient. Verse 6. But now that you are saved and have given your hearts to God, put off all these evil things: anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth. Lie not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds; and have put on the new man (Christ), which is renewed in knowledge after the image of Him that created Him. Col. 3:8-10.

Having put off all those wicked things that belong to the world of the unregenerate and the unsaved, begin then to put on the things that belong to the regenerate, the born again, the Christian, the saint, the children of God's holy kingdom. "Put on therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, longsuffering, forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a quarrel against any: even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye. And above all these things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness. And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful. Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord." Col. 3:12-16. Wives must be submissive to their husbands, husbands must love their wives and children must obey their parents in all things. Fathers must not provoke their children to anger. Servants must obey their masters. Servants should not be strikers. WHATSOEVER ye do, do it heartily as unto the Lord. See verses 18-22. Such are the instructions concerning the kingdom of God and such is the character and Christian experience of that good seed of the kingdom of God.

The greatest sermon ever preached was preached on a mountain to twelve disciples. Matt. 5:1. That sermon concerned the kingdom of God. It was a sermon ministered to vividly portray the spiritual character of these blessed people who are the seed of the kingdom. The blessing of Christ is upon the seed of His kingdom. He did not bless the proud of heart, but the poor in spirit. He did not bless those who fill their lives with merriment and laughter, but those who mourn, being touched by the weakness and infirmity of human kind. He did not bless the hot-headed, nor the infuriated retaliator, but men of a meek and quiet spirit; nor did He bless the self-satisfied, but those who hunger and thirst after His righteousness. There was no blessing upon those who demanded the "pound of flesh", but upon the peacemakers; neither was there a blessing for the persecutors of righteousness, but a blessing upon those who are persecuted for righteousness sake. No blessing fell upon the pompous puppets of the devil who love to make war, but His blessings were abundant for the makers of peace. Let us learn these things and learn them well. Unrighteous men and women will have no part in the kingdom of God and His Christ, but those blessed ones, made righteous through Christ, they and they alone are the good seed of the kingdom.

The prayer we love to speak of as the Lord's prayer reveals from its throbbing heart the very life and character of those happy saints who shall inherit the kingdom of God and reign with the Lord Jesus Christ in an age designed for setting things right. That beautiful prayer displays the attitude of a true Son of God toward his heavenly Father. It manifests the true spirit of sonship, crying, "Abba, Father. Our Father which art in heaven." It breathes in worshipful adoration, "Hallowed be Thy name." True sons of God are filled with reverence and fervent devotion toward God, their Father, for they have learned the greatness of His glory and the wonders of His abounding love and grace, and not toward them only, but to those who are near and those who are afar off and all the creation of God. When I hear men speak lightly or flippantly of God, I know they have not seen Him with their eyes nor comprehended Him in their hearts. When I see them take the sacred songs, which once were written in the shadow of the cross, and debase them to the world's version of "hard rock", then I know that they have not seen God. They know not His holiness, His purity, nor His awesome power, and there is no fear of God before their eyes. When men and angels see God, they fall before the majesty of His glory as John and Daniel fell, for it is written, "No man can see God and live;" and I affirm it is also true that no man can see God and die. "Thy kingdom come" is the hourly supplication of every true son of the kingdom. "Thy will be done in earth" is their prayer. First and foremost is their longing, "Thy will be done in this earth which I myself am." Then shall it be done in this earth where we now dwell. "Give us this day our daily bread," prayed Jesus, while the beloved Paul instructed the saints in the magnificent words of truth, "Having food and raiment, let us be content." "And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil; for Thine is the kingdom, the power and the glory forever (or unto the ages of the ages.)"

The good seed is the children of the kingdom, but the tares are the children of the wicked one. Such teaching as this is never popular in any age, no, not even with Christians. We are living in that trying hour when the harvest fields are full of wheat and tares. Sheep and goats roam together in the same pastures. Children of light are expected to walk in the same sordid ecumenical union with the children of darkness, but God is calling His elect to come out from among them, and come out they must if they would reign with Christ in His kingdom. The hour when angels will gather out of His kingdom all things that offend is now at hand. Many will weep and gnash their teeth when their earthly, minded folly is manifest. Put away therefore every corrupting thing of this modern age of abounding iniquity lest they display your shame and become your destruction.

Please notice now that the tares, the children of the wicked one, were sown among the wheat by the devil. When the servants came and asked, "Didst not thou sow good seed in thy field? Whence then hath it tares?" Christ replied, "An enemy hath done this." Christ sows only good seed, but later in the night Satan sows evil seed and that evil seed is the children of the wicked one. Note further that the devil sowed this evil while men slept. How many times in God's word we are exhorted to watchfulness I do not know, but the exhortations are many. "Watch and be sober," said Paul. 1 Thess. 5:6. The word sober here indicates the need for a total abstinence from the unnecessary affairs of this present life, lest we become overcharged and drunken with them. They that are drunken are drunken in the night, and it is then that the tares are sown. "Watch and pray," was the exhortation of Jesus, "lest ye fall into temptation." Temptation is on every hand and the man who does not continually resort to private prayer will certainly be caught up in some temptation, which will render his life ineffective. The cares of this world, the deceitfulness of riches and the lust of other things, entering in, choke the word and it becomes unfruitful. Paul said that he was in watchings often. So what we say unto one we say unto all - watch.

The devil, manifesting himself as a roaring lion, walketh about seeking whom he may devour, persecuting the saints, casting them into prisons, burning them at the stake, torturing them to destroy their hope in Christ, hailing them before authorities and condemning them to death. These are his tactics as a roaring lion. Fearful as are these repressive tactics they have never been nearly as successful as his deceptions. When Satan's purpose is better suited, he manifests himself as an angel of light. Under this guise he stands in the pulpit to preach the gospel. Only too well does he know how easily Christians are deceived by false apostles, false teachers, and deceitful workers. How quickly they fall for the ecumenical spirit and how easily they are duped by the charisma that "unique personal power conceived of as belonging to those exceptional individuals capable of securing the allegiance of large numbers of people." It matters not what farcical doctrine is presented, nor how grotesque, fanciful, or exaggerated. There will always be a following of sick sheep who fail to keep their vision fixed on Christ.

Let us never be unmindful of how the faithful apostle Paul warned us without ceasing that in the end of the age that Antichrist spirit would be manifest, even him whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish, because they received not the love of the truth that they might be saved. 2 Thess. 2:9-10. These spirits of deception are in the world and in the pulpits and many are being deceived as Satan's angels transform themselves into angels of light.

Let us consider further that it was while men slept that the enemy sowed the tares. Along with the luke-warmness of this Laodicean age there has come a sleepiness of heart and mind that brings with it that torpid abandonment so common to somnolent, sluggish men. There is no searching of the word, no hours of prayer, no fasting, no watching for the fowler's snare, but instead a dull, languid drowsiness that clothes a man in spiritual rags. It was in this heavy-eyed inertia that the ten virgins found themselves when the bridegroom came. "They all slumbered and slept," and five of the indolent slumberers had let their lamps burn low and failed to replenish their oil. Oil is a symbol of the Holy Spirit, and we are commanded to be "filled with the Spirit." God has provided many means of grace by which we may remain filled with the Spirit, but if these means are not used, we will find our Spirit-filled lives being replaced by the cares of the world and the desires of the flesh, the deceitfulness of riches and the lusts of other things that enter in, so that a total apathy toward God and the things of God develops and is manifested until it often seems the average Christian couldn't care less about the kingdom of God, the coming of the Lord, or His eternal and merciful purposes. Try if you will to enter into a spiritual conversation with them and you will discover that the subject is changed at the earliest possible convenience to be replaced by worldly chit-chat. It is while men thus sleep that the tares are sown and the wheat is crowded out and becomes unfruitful.

In this parable the diligent servants were ready and anxious to root up the tares immediately, but it is not really possible for servants to hastily decide which are tares and which is wheat. The harvest will come at its appointed time at the end of the age. Then the tares will be gathered in bundles to be judged and the wheat will be gathered into the barn.

God's people should be very happy when they are able to live quiet and peaceable lives and to serve the Lord in tranquility without fear of being molested by rulers or governments. I for one am extremely thankful that I have been able to pass my life in a land where great freedom is given for the faith. The opposition to our faith has not come so much from the rulers of the secular system as from the rulers of that system which we call the church. We have not been called upon to resist to the shedding of our blood. While our hearts thank God for the freedom to worship Him without interference from without, even in this liberty there lurks an ever, present danger. Sad it is to relate, yet it is unquestionably true, that easy times and fullness of bread bring with them a spiritual apathy, which is very difficult to understand. Having no opposition to their faith, men become careless and inattentive toward eternal things. Then, while they sleep, the devil scatters his tares and they choke out all spiritual life.

During the first century of the Christian era, church history records, one twentieth of the entire Roman Empire was converted to Christ. This mighty turning to God was accomplished under almost continual persecution. Ten fierce persecutions of the church were carried out by pagan Roman emperors as in vain they tried to decimate and abolish Christianity from the earth. These ten dreadful persecutions seem to indicate the fulfillment of the prophetic ten days of tribulation announced to the church at Smyrna. Rev. 2:8-11. During these fierce persecutions in which uncounted thousands died for their faith in Christ, the church increased in numbers to such an extent that Constantine, 306-375 A.D., made Christianity the state religion of Rome. The question as to whether Constantine was really a Christian has ever been a vexing point, and many different motives have been advanced for his adoption of Christianity. For his own sake it is to be hoped that he was a Christian, but for the sake of the church it is to be hoped that he was not. He was a pitiless, jealous ruler, a murderer of his... father-in-law, his brother-in-law, his sister, wife, son, and nephew. He made munificent grants to the churches, handed over heathen temples for their use, and even exercised the authority of the law in the propagation of the Christian religion. To his administration of state and civil affairs were added the control and management of the church, and the strange sight of a Roman governor presiding over church councils and taking part in debates was seen. Instead of rebuking his meddling in church affairs, the church welcomed him and, like Israel of old in choosing a king to be like the nations around, the church had embraced the protection of a semi-heathen state and suffered its greatest possible degradation in the patronage of a worldly potentate. Thus ended the Smyrna period of church history and, having settled under the security of the Roman state, Christianity drifted off into the dark ages that lay ahead. Beware when all men speak well of you. It is a sure sign that things are not as they should be.

The tares have been growing among the wheat ever since Pentecost, yes, and beyond that. "Even now are there many antichrists," wrote John in A.D. 90, John 2:18, and from that far off day until the present the devil has not ceased to sow his evil tares wherever Christians sleep and fail to watch and pray.

We are living in an hour when both the wheat and the tares are ripening together for the harvest. It would be impossible either to trace or name all the innovations the devil has sown in the fields of the Lord. The very things that are supposed to be good are often evil, turning men's hearts from the truth as it is in Christ Jesus into meaningless fables. Centuries ago Paul warned that the day of the Lord would not come except there were a falling away and the man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition.

In spite of all the talk of revival in our day, of Ecumenical Movements, Charismatic Movements, Jesus Movements, Youth Movements, city-wide campaigns and all the other ists and isms, the truth is there is a falling away of such magnitude as perhaps has never been known. Evil men and seducers are waxing worse and worse, both in the world and in the church system, until one sent to pluck up tares would not be able to tell whether he were destroying tares or wheat.

The calling of the elect out of the Babylon church system must precede the revelation of "that wicked one", who is Antichrist. That, I believe, is what Paul was teaching when he said, "He that now letteth will let until he is taken out of the way, and then shall that wicked be revealed." 2 Thess 2:7-12. That wicked, whether he be an individual or an antichrist system, does not appear to be either pagan or heathen, for it is written, "He as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God." Verse 4. Furthermore signs and wonders follow his ministry. Even him whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth that they might be saved." The calling of the elect out of Babylon must precede the revelation of antichrist; therefore the present coming out is of infinite importance.

Jesus clearly told us that the wheat and the tares would grow in the fields together until the end of the age, but in the time of the harvest, when these are ripe, the Lord will send His angels to separate them, the wheat to the garner and the tares into bundles for the burning. Before our eyes we now see this division, taking place. Evil men and seducers by their evil seduction are gathering tares after their own kind, but those who are following Christ are being gathered into His garner. They have come out of the systems of men. Christ is their Lord, their life and their light.

Since 1960 the message "Come out from among them and be ye separate" has been constantly on my heart. The message does not tell us to come out of one system into another, but bids us come out unto Christ, and stay out. Make Him your head. Go unto Him without the camp. Take your questions to Him. Receive from Him the answers of wisdom and peace. Do not be led by prophecy except as confirmation, but be led by the Holy Spirit, for as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God. It is a simple matter to be led by the Holy Spirit. It is never a difficult or complicated process. "Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in Him, and He shall bring it to pass." Learn to have no mind of your own when seeking His mind. It is when we have a strong mind of our own, full of personal ambitions and earthly desires that we are led astray. We become like the man who prayed that God would give him the wife of His choice, but hastily added, "Please make it Mary." That is not the way to seek the guidance from the Lord. He who seeks to know God's mind must first seek to have no mind of his own, and, having committed himself to God, the doors of fate will open and close as the Father wills. We must never be impatient about God's will, lest we be like Moses, who set out to deliver his people forty years before God's time.

In writing of the tares that fill our fields, I have neglected to speak of the wheat. Suffice it to say that ever since Pentecost the Holy Spirit has been bringing to perfection the true church. The sons of God have been maturing and coming to perfection. They could not have reached perfection had not the tares been growing beside them as thorns in their flesh and thorns in their eyes. It is the time of harvest. The hour of their gathering is at hand. The coming of the Lord draweth nigh. With His appearing will come the manifested kingdom of God to spread itself like a mantle over the entire earth. From it the tares will be removed. Of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon His kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even forever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this.

THE SECOND ADVENT OF CHRIST

The end of the age is upon us without a doubt. The coming of the Lord draweth nigh. That our Lord Jesus Christ has promised to return to the earth is a Bible fact far removed from the realm of doubt. To a world of unbelieving men nothing is certain, but to the believing all that God has spoken is certain and sure. The vision may tarry long, yet we wait patiently for it, for it will surely come. As to the pure all things are pure, so to the faithful all that God has spoken is sure. As to the unholy and profane nothing is pure, so to the faithless and unbelieving nothing is certain and nothing is sure. Faith and trust are beautiful sisters, walking hand in hand among the children of men. They are gifts come down from the Father of lights, with whom there is no variableness, neither shadow of turning, to strengthen every feeble heart and revive the oft times flagging confidence of men, inspiring them afresh to lay hold on the immutable promises of God. Faith and trust, like showers of latter rain falling upon the mown grass which we are, revive our spirits and fill us with joy and anticipation and the fragrance of our hope that Jesus will come a second time to restore all things and set all things right.

From reading God's holy word we are brought to the realization that all God's purposes, ordained by wisdom in ages past, depend for their fulfillment upon the comings of Christ. We have already noted that Christ in His first coming appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself, but unto them that look for Him shall He appear the second time, not to deal with sin, but to bring in full salvation. Heb. 9:28.

Every student of the Holy Scriptures should strive to see God's eternal plans and purposes as one continuous whole. The divine Architect planned the universal structure in its minutest detail from Alpha to Omega. As the twenty-six letters of the English alphabet make one complete alphabet, each letter dependent upon the other to form the one hundred fifty thousand words of the English language, so every act of God throughout the Bible is a link in the inspired chain of events, forming one complete whole and one divinely inspired purpose. If we were to accept the hit and miss unrelated notions of the theologians, all we would have is a crazy patchwork quilt or a temple without a design, having a thousand porches added on at random as necessity arose. This absurd lack of design and purpose is evident in almost all the preaching of our day. The last great warning given in the Bible is that men should neither add to nor take away from the things that are written, for if they do, they will remove an important letter from the alphabet, a corner stone from the foundation, or a prominent room from the Father's house.

Learn, then, to see the Bible as the inspired blueprint of the all-wise architect of the universe. Learn to see that all things were devised by the infinite wisdom of His mind, whether our tiny minds can grasp them or not, the fall as well as the redemption, the curse as well as the blessing. "He that planted the ear, shall He not hear? He that formed the eye, shall He not see? He that chastiseth the heathen, shall He not correct? Psa. 94:9-10. Ah, it is true that He who is the Alpha and the Omega is also every other letter besides.

Until we discover that our God is a God of infinite purpose, we will be quite incapable of loving Him as we should; but when we know "His plans by wisdom are arranged and fixed by firm decree," then and then only do we really begin to love Him. There is purpose in creation, purpose in the fall, purpose in redemption, purpose in trial and temptation, purpose in the Lord's first coming, purpose in the church age, purpose in tribulation, purpose in the kingdom, and purpose in the final increase of His government over all the universe. And, while I greatly rejoice in all these wonders, I shall not forget that there was purpose in my own creation as there was in the creation of the least or the greatest of all earth's numberless inhabitants. Even the day of my birth was designed and decided in the counsels of the Most High. Millennia before I saw the light of day, the hour was set for my arrival. The place and circumstances of my birth were decided as is also the place and time of my death, because there is a time to be born and a time to die. Eccles. 3:1. When we thus see God in the heavenly light of His eternal wisdom, our hearts abound in ever increasing love for Him from whom all things come and to whom all things return.

The second coming of the Lord, therefore, can never be some after-thought in the mind of God, but a purpose undertaken by Him before the ages in their succession began to unfold their infinite design. The superstructure of the building rests upon this mighty pillar of purpose. The Christ, who is to appear a second time, is the stone, which the builders rejected, but who is in truth the headstone of the corner. Without His return the building can have no capstone, the body can have no head, and all that has ever been carried out in ages past would stand as desolate as a temple which the builders could not finish.

Paul was once faced by certain people who said there would be no resurrection of the dead, but he, knowing that the resurrection was one of the mightiest pillars in all God's plan, showed what havoc would be wrought in God's economy should there be no resurrection of the dead. "Now," said he, "if Christ be preached that He rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead? But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen: and if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain. Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God; because we have testified of God that He raised up Christ: whom He raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not." I Cor. 15:12-15. Then he further states (verse 17) that if Christ is not raised, then you are in your sins and all who have died in Christ are perished. So we plainly see how drastic and terrible would be the result of removing the truth of the resurrection from God's purpose, or any other of the mighty pillars which He has established from the beginning.

In the light of these things we must conclude that, should there be no second coming of Christ, all our faith would dissolve into vanity. Even the work of Calvary would be completely ineffective should there be no second appearing of Christ. Though His first coming was to deal with sin and put it away, upon His second coming awaits the bringing in of the fullness of salvation which through His travail and bloody sweat He purchased for us.

No promise ever written or spoken could be more straightforward or easily understood than the simple forthright declaration of Jesus found in John 14:2-3. "I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto Myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." There are more references to the second coming of Christ in the New Testament than there are chapters in the book, yet it must be accepted that, should there be none other promise than this, these words alone would constitute perfect assurance that our Lord has promised to return to the earth a second time. In the statement, "I will come again," the use of the word again distinguishes His second coming from His first coming. It is the same as saying, "I will come a second time." It is as definite as the statement in Heb. 9:28: "Unto them that look for Him shall He appear a second time..." The first coming of Christ was strictly to deal with the sin question. He came to put away sin, to cleanse it from the hearts of men, to abolish it from all His universe. The blood of Jesus Christ, His Son, cleanseth from all sin. He came to purge the conscience from every dead work. He came to cleanse that temple which we are. He came to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself. He came to abolish it, not only from the world, but from the universe as well that eventually there should be no place in heaven or earth where sin or iniquity existed. We in the present hour do not fully grasp the universal results of this so great redemption because the time has not yet come to see its fullness. "We do not as yet see all things put under Him," Paul said, "but we see Jesus," who for a little while was made lower than the angels, now crowned with glory and honor that He by the grace of God might taste death for every man, and He who tasted death for every man shall at last see every man crowned with glory and honor.

All we need see in this present hour is Jesus, the manifested Son, the One who has conquered sin, now crowned with glory and honor. And, seeing this first Son thus crowned and honored, we are assured with assurance that only God can give that every man for whom He tasted death will also at last be delivered from the thraldom of sin into the glorious liberty of God's son.
In Weymouth's translation of Heb. 9:28 we have these enlightening words: "... Christ also, having been once offered in sacrifice in order that He might bear the sins of many, will appear a second time, separated from sin, to those who are eagerly expecting Him, to make their salvation complete." There is coming a day and that right soon when our salvation will be complete. At the present moment we enjoy only the earnest of our salvation. We are begotten of God, but not born. Our spirits are alive because of Christ's righteousness, but our bodies are still dead because of sin. But we know that, when our salvation is complete, the same Spirit that raised up Jesus from the dead and that quickened our spirits when we believed will also quicken our mortal bodies to make them immortal by His Spirit that now dwelleth in us.

Paul showed us with great clearness that full sonship depends upon, first, the renewing of the spirit and, secondly, upon the redemption of the body. Now adoption in scripture occurs when God the Father publicly recognizes us as His own sons. Adoption is God's public recognition and acknowledgment that we are His sons. The example of this was given at Jesus' baptism when the voice of the Father in voice of thunder clearly acknowledged His sonship in these words: "This is My beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." Matt. 3:17. The adoption of sons has nothing in common with the generally accepted meaning of the word, that is, "to take into one's family or as one's child by legal adoption." We are not adopted sons in that sense. We are begotten. 1 Pet. 1:3. We are born again. But the rite of adoption will be fulfilled when our heavenly Father publicly proclaims that we are His sons just as He proclaimed Jesus as His Son when He arose from the watery grave of Jordan in symbol of resurrection. Our sonship will be complete and we will be recognized publicly as God's sons at our resurrection. At the present time we groan with the rest of creation while we await our adoption. "For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now. And not only they, but ourselves also, which have the first fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of the body..." Rom. 8:22,23. So we must understand that the fullness of our redemption is not complete until the physical body as well as the spirit has been born again and thus has fully tasted of redemption. That fullness of our redemption comes at the resurrection of the just, when the Lord shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trumpet of God, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible and we shall be changed. "For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality... Then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written. Death is swallowed up in victory." See Cor. 15:51-54 and 1 Thess. 4:16.

From this we clearly see how Christ at His second coming makes our salvation complete. The work He accomplished at Calvary by His death and resurrection, now comes to its completion by the physical resurrection of all believers who lived and died in Christ. Let us not deceive ourselves, however, for even this wonder is incomplete. Only the "dead in Christ "rise first, but other billions shall yet arise at a later time. By far the greatest part is still to come. When Christ rose triumphantly from the dead, He was but the firstfruits of the billions who slept. The resurrection of the just, though counted in millions, will still be no more than a kind of firstfruits. Nevertheless, the sons of God will now be complete and ready to be manifested. It is for their manifestation that all the creation in heaven and earth have groaned for six thousand years or more. Rom. 8:22-23. But now at the resurrection of the just at the second coming of Christ the inChristed ones are perfect and entire, wanting nothing, complete in Him and ready to perform those greater works which Jesus our Lord vaguely spoke in the long ago.

The long, long tarrying of the Son of God has not been in vain. From the words that fell from the lips of Jesus just before His crucifixion we have this beautiful gem of promise: "In My Father's house are many mansions... I go to prepare a place for you." John 14:2. Now, my dearly beloved friends, let us be very clear about this. When Jesus spoke of "My Father's house", He was speaking of the Father's house and not your house. I hope God will grant you wisdom to understand that He was not speaking of some beautiful palace on high where we are going to live throughout eternity and twiddle our thumbs and play a harp. My Father's house is the body of Christ, and "ye are the body of Christ and members in particular." Our membership in the Christ body is the place Christ is preparing for us now while He is away. Furthermore the body of Christ is the habitation of God. Eph. 2:19-22. The body of Christ is God's house. Every room, or mansion, in that house is a living person, a living stone (1 Pet. 2:5), in which God dwells personally. This is the temple, which is rising upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets of which Jesus Christ Himself is the chief cornerstone, or the headstone. It is a living temple in which every stone is a living stone, saved, baptized with the Spirit, filled with the mind of Christ and the wisdom of God. This is "My Father's House", the temple of His body.
See how wonderfully Paul describes this house of God in His message to the Ephesians. "Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God; and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief cornerstone; in whom the whole building fitly framed together groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord: in whom ye also are built together for an habitation of God through the Spirit." Eph. 2:19-22. Weymouth's translation of this passage is filled with the glory of its meaning and should be carefully considered. This is what it says. "You are a building which has been reared on the foundation of the apostles and prophets, the cornerstone being Christ Jesus Himself, in union with whom the whole fabric, truly bonded together, is rising so as to form a holy sanctuary in the Lord; in whom you also are being built up together to become a fixed abode for God through the Spirit." This is the Father's house. This is the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens, the temple of the Lord, the body of Christ.

It was to prepare this holy temple, this body of Christ, this habitation for God that Jesus went away. For all the centuries since Pentecost He has been calling the elect to their place in this house not made with hands. He went not only to prepare the temple, but to prepare your place in it, for "ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular." From our place in this temple, as Christ has placed us, we will minister throughout eternity in the restoration and habilitation of the entire universe. The government of Christ in ages to come will not be confined to the earth alone, but will include within itself every star and planet in all the universe until nothing has been left outside the completeness of the universal authority. "Praise Him, sun and moon," cried the psalmist. "Praise Him, all ye stars of light. Praise Him, ye heavens of heavens, and ye waters that be above the heavens. Let them praise the name of the Lord: for He commanded and they were created." Psa. 148:3-5.

During the long, long night of darkness since Christ left this world to return to His Father, the temple of the Lord has been slowly but certainly rising. The apostles laid the foundation, which is not themselves but Christ, 1 Cor. 3:10, and upon the sure foundation they laid other men have been building, some with works of gold, silver and precious stones and others with works of wood, hay and stubble. The gold, silver and precious stones will survive the fires of the judgment seat of Christ. The wood, the hay and the stubble will be burned up. Nevertheless, the temple is rising and has been rising since the Holy Spirit fell on the waiting host on the day of Pentecost. The temple is now almost complete. The required number of sons of God have been readied, fitted and prepared for the body of Christ. This mysterious living temple, the like of which was never imagined and of which the wilderness tabernacle and the temple of Solomon were but frail, dull patterns, is now complete. It now awaits only the capstone from heaven, the head Son of all the sons, the Lord Jesus Christ. The cornerstone here really means the capstone or the headstone. This innumerable multitude of sons of God, all in one Holy Spirit, all in the image of Jesus, all members of one body, will be "My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Many sons, yet one body. A vast multitude, yet one family, God's family, all partakers of one Spirit, God's Spirit. All partakers of one mind, the mind of Christ. This is the body of Christ! This is the temple of the Lord! Through this living temple, in which Christ has prepared us a place, first the world and then the universe will be governed in righteousness. Through the ministry of the these sons the bride of Christ will be formed and through the bride, the New Jerusalem, will come the final restitution of all things, spoken of by all the prophets since the world began.

Can you not see how gloriously the plan unfolds? That Jesus should first come to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself, that He should then return to the Father and send forth the Holy Spirit to call out a people for His name? That as they were called, chastened and prepared in the fierce, burning fires of affliction and tribulation, they being thus refined should then be placed by Christ in that rising temple, which God was preparing for His own habitation?. What son is he whom the Father chasteneth not? For if we receive chastening, God dealeth with us as sons: but if we receive not chastening, then are we bastards and not sons. And though no chastening for the present is joyous, but grievous, afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto those who are exercised thereby.

"I go to prepare a place for you," said Jesus; and that is what He is doing now. I cannot possibly overestimate the intrinsic value and importance of our place in Christ, that is, in the Christ body. It is from this holy habitation that the heralds go forth to restore the whole universe unto Him. God hath reconciled all things unto Himself and has committed unto us the word of reconciliation, "My peace I give unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." Christ came at first to put away sin and even now the great reconciliation is reaching out to every man in his own order. Never will it cease until it has embraced all things as the scripture declares: "That in the dispensation of the fullness of times He might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in Him." Eph. 1:10. Never will it cease until every creature in heaven and in earth and in the sea is heard saying, "Glory and honor and blessing unto Him that sitteth upon the throne and unto the Lamb forever and ever." Rev. 5:13. This is the mystery of His will, which He is making known to us, even the purpose which He purposed in Himself before the ages began.

There is no reason to believe that either the prophets or the apostles had any idea as to the length of time the Lord would remain in the heavens before His work of calling out a people for His name would be complete. Undoubtedly Jesus did not intend them to know. When they enquired concerning Israel and the kingdom, Jesus plainly told them, "It is not for you to know the times or seasons, which God has put in His own power," and on another occasion they were told that no man would know the day or the hour of His coming. At that time Jesus Himself did not know. Matt. 24:36.

The work of the preparation of the true church, which is the mystical body of Christ, is a great work of incomprehensible importance. What unimaginable loss would have befallen the world if Jesus Christ had not come to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself! But can the mind possibly grasp the importance of the work now in progress? Do we any more than remotely understand how Christ Jesus is at this moment completing and bringing to perfection that whole mystical body of sons who are called to be members of God's Christ, yea, who are the fullness of Christ? These are they for whom the whole creation groans and travails, for even inanimate things seem to know that their thraldom of decay will be lifted only when God's sons are complete and fully manifested. Then will universal travail cease. There will be no more death, no more pain, no more tears, neither sorrow nor sighing, for the former things will have passed away forever.

How blessed it must have been to walk with Jesus in the long ago, to watch as the fever was calmed, to rejoice as the blind came seeing, the deaf hearing, the lame walking, and the dead raised up again! "Never man spake like this man," said the soldiers. Glorious as all this was, can we even begin to compare it with the restoration, which will begin when a vast number of sons of God, innumerable as the stars, begin their work of reconciliation? No, we cannot! Yet Jesus said, "Greater works than these shall ye do," and greater works they will do in His name that will result in the reconciliation of all things.

It is distressing to hear God's people talk about the church and the body of Christ and yet for all their talk actually present no reason for the formation of either. They preach about the sons of God and sonship, but see no great purpose in their manifestation. They speak of the bride, but understand not who she is, the New Jerusalem, the heavenly capitol city, from which proceeds the government of the universe. Preachers cannot grasp the eternal purposes of God. Be it far better that they hold their peace and preach nothing at all.

The great universal program, now well advanced in progress, will continue without hindrance to its fullness. This plan, encompassing several ages, was outlined by the apostle James when he addressed the apostles and elders at Jerusalem. The conciseness of his words could not have been inspired by any other than the Holy Spirit. This is what he said: "Men and brethren, hearken unto me: Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for His name. And to this agree the words of the prophets; as it is written, After this I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up: that the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles, upon whom My name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things. Known unto God are all His works from the beginning of the world." Acts 15:14-18.

This, then, is the promise of Jesus. "I go to prepare a place for you; and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again to receive you unto Myself, that where I am there ye may be also." Jesus Christ is as much a part of that spiritual body as we are and we who are in Christ are as much a part of that spiritual body as He is. Perfection and manifestation come only at the resurrection when all who died in faith, not having received the promise of God, will be raised together in glory that they without us should not be made perfect. During this long, long night of waiting God's elect are being carefully prepared to reign. He is choosing them with infinite care before they are placed as sons and thus take their place in the Father's house as temples and living stones built up into a spiritual house. They that are with Him have three outstanding qualifications. They are called and chosen and faithful.
The eyes of many saints have grown dim with watching in this long, long night through which we wait for the coming of the Lord. Be not amazed at this. Our God has not forgotten the promise. A certain period of time has been allotted for the completion of the work of this age of grace. Harvest cannot come until harvest time. This is as certain in the spiritual realm as in the natural realm. Should wheat be harvested before its time, there will probably be nothing but green straw. Should you try to harvest only a few days before the harvest time, you will get only shriveled kernels. Number one wheat is threshed when the time for maturing has been fulfilled. Thus it is also with the pure wheat of the kingdom. So also it is with a natural birth. There is a time to be born. Neither premature nor connotative births are either proper or safe. Birth should take place at the proper time.

"The Lord is not slack concerning His promise, as some men count slackness; but is longsuffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance." 2 Pet. 3:9. During this age it is certain that there must be a given number of elect who are to come in to the Father's house before the books are closed and the age ends. When this is accomplished — and it will be accomplished right on time — then the Lord will come and He will come at the time appointed, not one hour earlier or later than was planned in the beginning. Of the first coming of Christ it is written, "In the fullness of time God sent forth His Son." Of the crucifixion it is written, "Father, the hour is come." Of the departing of Jesus from the world it is written, "When Jesus knew that His hour was come that He should depart out of this world unto the Father, having loved His own which were in the world, He loved them unto the end." John 13:1. So we may clearly see that all things in the plan of God are closely timed. There are no delays and nothing is premature. Even Peter, speaking of his death, said, "Shortly I must put off this tabernacle," and Paul, writing in similar vein, declared, "The time of my departing is at hand."

It is blessed to notice that the promise of Christ's second coming is beautifully bound up in the heart of the promise of His first coming. In the angelic message to Mary concerning the birth of Christ, only one sentence concerned His first coming. "Thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call His name Jesus." Luke 1:31. All the rest of the marvelous statement concerns the events that will follow His second coming. "He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give unto Him the throne of His father David: And He shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of His kingdom there shall be no end." Luke 1:32,33. Though the coming of the Lord is in two distinct parts, it is really one coming, first to put away sin, then during His long absence to gather the elect of the body of Christ, then to return and take the throne of David - or, as James said, "To build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down." Then He will reign over the house of Jacob, which means the tribes of Israel, during the kingdom age while the bride is preparing that the eventual restitution may follow in its train.

The incredible, unspeakable harmony of all these wonders overwhelms my spirit. It is as though heaven's symphony were playing its most glorious oratorio, its harmonious tones sweeping the shadowy valleys and the charming voices of its singers with their gladsome song leaping from hill to hill, echoing and re-echoing from mountain top to mountain top, even unto the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills. The harmony of all God's purposes catch the breath away. It staggers the understanding and captivates the imagination. It causes the devout man to stand in admiration before its greatness, bewildered by its wonder, amazed at its perfection and awed by its irresistible, unchanging progress through eternity.

The Lord Jesus came to earth at Bethlehem as the prophets had foretold. As a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief He had lived among men. In preaching the gospel to the poor, healing the broken hearted, preaching deliverance to the captives and recovery of sight to the blind, setting at liberty the bruised and bringing the message of the acceptable year of the Lord, He had fulfilled all that was spoken of His ministry among men. According to the word of the prophets He had laid down His life, making His grave with the wicked and with the rich in His death, because He had done no violence, neither was deceit found in His mouth. To the amazement of even His most devout followers He was found after three days to have arisen from death to become the firstfruits of them that slept, because the prophet David had said, "Thou shalt not leave My soul in hell; neither shall Thou suffer Thine holy one to see corruption."

Up from the grave He arose
With a mighty triumph o'er His foes;
He arose a victor from the dark domain,
And He lives forever with His saints to reign.
He arose! He arose!
Hallelujah! Christ arose!

Is this not the very heart of the Gospel—that Christ died for our sins according to the scripture, that He was buried and that He rose from the dead the third day according to the scriptures? See 1 Cor. 15:1-6. And after His rising from the dead He was seen of Peter and all the apostles, and finally of above five hundred brethren at one time. Last of all He was seen by Paul, who said he was the least of all the apostles and not worthy to be called an apostle. I Cor. 15:5-11. Then after forty days it came time for Him to be taken up into heaven, so He led them outside Jerusalem as far as to Bethany and He lifted up His hands and blessed them, "And it came to pass, while He blessed them, He was parted from them, and carried up into heaven." Luke 24:50-51. But Luke, writing to Theophilus, took up the story from that moment on, relating to us not only the incidents recorded in his gospel, but also a very blessed and remarkable incident that happened at that time. Thus the record continues: "And when He had spoken these things, while they beheld, He was taken up; and a cloud received Him out of their sight. And while they looked steadfastly toward heaven as He went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel; which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen Him go into heaven." Ah, what a blessed promise that was on the very day of His departure from them! In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established. It is the promise of the Lord, the hope of the church, the desire of the groaning creation, and it will be fulfilled very soon.

The Old Testament writers made many clear references to the second coming of the Lord. Not that they understood their own prophecies! There is little evidence that they did, but, speaking by the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, they made unmistakable references to the second coming of the Lord, references that could not in any way be interpreted to refer to His first advent. The Bible does not contain the book of Enoch, but the inspired writing of Jude refers to the prophecy of Enoch, who lived under the dispensation of conscience. He gave this prophecy: "Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousands of His saints, to execute judgment upon all and to convince all that are ungodly among them of their ungodly deeds..." Jude 14-15. Moses, too, who lived under the law, gave unmistakable witness to the second coming of Christ when he blessed the tribes of Israel, and he said, "The Lord came from Sinai, and rose up from Seir unto them; He shined forth from mount Paran, and He came with ten thousands of saints: from His right hand went a fiery law for them." Deut. 33:2. It is nothing short of an inspirational marvel just to see how the Lord puts so many details into one verse even though they may be separated by centuries or millenniums. But with God no time exists and all His acts are part of one complete whole.

The prophets also spoke often of the second coming of the Lord. The real fact is that the prophets understood very little of the first coming of the Lord. They were looking forward to the day when the King would reign and prosper upon the throne of David to order and establish the kingdom, which belongs to the second coming of Christ, but their minds were confused by their own prophecies when they spoke of the virgin birth and the suffering and rejection of Christ. Peter tells us how they enquired and searched diligently for understanding when they spoke of the sufferings of Christ and the glory that should follow. 1. Pet. 14:10-11. Furthermore it seems that the Spirit of the Lord did not show them the answer, but told them only that they were not ministering to themselves, but to us who would live at a later date. Verse 12. "The Redeemer shall come to Zion," Isaiah said, and Jeremiah, too, was speaking of the second coming when he said, "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth." Jer. 23:5. Zechariah, too, clearly spoke of the coming of the Lord when he said, "And His feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east, and the mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof toward the west, and there shall be a very great valley." Zech. 14:4 He then continues through the remainder of the chapter to describe the setting up of the kingdom of God on earth.

We may therefore be certain that the promise of the second coming is as old as the teaching of the Bible. With our God prophecy is as certain as history. It is history prewritten. The coming of the historic Christ to Bethlehem and Calvary is not more certain than the coming of the prophetic Christ to the Mount of Olives and to Zion. Both are as certain as God is faithful. Neither time nor changes nor circumstances can in any way let or hinder that glorious appearing of our great God and Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ.

In like manner the New Testament abounds in promises of the return of the Lord. Paul knew that there would be a great day of resurrection for the saints and he knew, too, that it would occur when the Lord descended from heaven with a great shout of triumph, the voice of the archangel and the trumpet of God, and then the dead in Christ would arise from their graves to stand together for a moment with the living in Christ. Then they all together would be caught up to meet the Lord in the air. 1 Thess. 4:13-18. This great hope was to be a source of comfort to the saints of all ages. In the present distress it is filled with lasting hope and abounding assurance to many who are weary of this age and all its sin and ungodliness and are looking for the Lord to cut it short in His righteousness. Unto them that look for Him shall He appear the second time without sin unto salvation.

ESCHATOLOGY.

The voice of my beloved!
Behold He cometh
Leaping upon the mountains,
Skipping upon the hills.
My beloved is like a roe or a young hart:
Behold, he standeth behind our wall,
He looketh forth at the windows,
Shewing himself at the lattice.
My beloved spake, and said unto me,
Rise up, my love, my fair one, and come away.
For, lo, the winter is past,
And the rain is over and gone;
The flowers appear on the earth;
The time of the singing of birds is come,
And the voice of the turtle is heard in our land;
The/ig tree putteth forth her green figs,
And the vines with the tender grape give a good smell.
Arise, my love, my fair one, and come away!

CHAPTER FOUR
HE JUDGMENT SEAT OF CHRIST

"Known unto God are all His works from the foundation of the world." All people should have the knowledge that all things are naked and open before the eyes of Him who sees and knows all things. Nothing is beyond His understanding. Nothing happens without His foreknowledge, and all things that do occur come to pass because in the scheme of things all is working according to the counsel of His will. Well may every saint find confidence in the knowledge that with God nothing comes by chance. The steps of a man are ordered by the Lord. Psa. 37:23. (The word "good" is in italics.) "As the bird by wandering, as the swallow by flying, so the curse causeless shall not come." Prov. 26:2. Both the curse and the blessing come from God, and when our minds are enlarged enough to understand His ways, we are able to see in every curse a blessing, in every judgment a cleansing, and in every tribulation, no matter how severe, a highway leading to the ocean of His peace. When we look beyond the blighting turmoil and confusion of the hour, joyfully seeing the end from the beginning, our hearts glory in the truth of these words of inspiration: "For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal." 2 Cor. 4:17-18.

It is never easy, as we flounder through our slough of despond, to grasp the truth that all our dismal, cheerless afflictions are working for us, and not against us. It is never easy to see how the very affliction we endure is actually preparing an eternal weight of glory for us. Our eternal benefit from the severest trials that mar our pathway will be greater if we can walk through our fiery furnaces and sit in our den of lions with the blessed knowledge in our hearts that all things are working together for good to them that love God.

Known unto God are all His works from the foundation of the world, but I must admit with some chagrin that my own understanding of His mighty work and eternal purpose is painfully limited. Eternity itself will not be too long for me to give thanks to Him for the gracious goodness He showed when He revealed that He did indeed have an eternal purpose for all mankind, a purpose first made manifest when He said, "Let us make man (Adam) in our image and after our likeness, and let us give him dominion..." From the greatness of this original purpose the Omniscient has never deviated nor turned aside for even a moment. Through centuries and millenniums of time, through sunshine and shadow, through mists and storms, through war and peace, through turmoil and calm, His all-seeing eye and His almighty power have directed the course of human affairs. Through the dreary valley of the shadow of death, through clouds of outer darkness, through quagmires of carnality and the oppression of the devil He leads His beloved people into the glorious liberty of the sons of God.

In the end we will discover to our utter astonishment that every trial was a necessity in the process of our better making, that every temptation was essential to abolish evil without and within and to produce the Christ-life in His saints. "The trial of our faith worketh patience," therefore every trial becomes necessary that patience may have her perfect work. Every fire rids the gold of its corruption, tempers our metal, and makes us vessels fit for God to dwell in, for every affliction is working for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory.

It is only right that our study of Eschatology should embrace the judgments of God, for the judgments of God are certainly among the last things. But, while the judgments themselves are among the last things, we must point out that all humanity is preparing itself for judgment in each lifetime, dispensation and age.

It is no particular delight to me to find myself so often at variance with the established traditions of the present or of the past, but surely in our day there is a great dearth of understanding concerning the judgments of the Lord. In all my life I have not yet heard a sermon preached touching the judgment seat of Christ, except the one I preached myself, and that, I fear, was a feeble effort. Though mention has often been made of the judgment of the nations, for the most part we have been left in darkness as to its true purpose and nature. The same obscurity of understanding applies to the judgment of the great white throne, for though it is often mentioned, it is, unfortunately, used as a scare tactic while little information is ever given concerning its purpose. This is also the case where the judgment of God's covenant people Israel is concerned. Their judgment is seldom mentioned, and when have we ever heard an exposition on the subject?

I pray that all who read these lines may be given wisdom to see that there is a season, a time and a purpose to everything under the sun. Solomon proclaimed this truth in Ecclesiastes, chapter three, when he wrote: "To everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven." In verse 17 he says there is a time and a purpose in judgment. "God shall judge the righteous and the wicked: for there is a time there for every purpose and every work." There is a world of hidden truth in that verse if we will meditate upon it and prayerfully search it out.

"Whoso keepeth the commandment shall feel no evil thing; and a wise man's heart discerneth both time and judgment. Because to every purpose there is the tune and judgment, therefore the misery of man is great upon him." Eccles. 8:5-6. "To every purpose there is time," said Solomon. Perhaps if we put the indefinite article before the word time, we will understand it better. We would then read, "To every purpose there is a time." The Lord gives a special dispensation of time to fulfill certain purposes and establish definite parts of His plan. This wisdom He carries out in a plan for every age and in His plan for every individual life. Just as nations are tested and tried, so also every individual in a nation is tried. Our wise heavenly Father has decreed that no man will go through life without being tried in the most beneficial way that divine wisdom can devise. On the surface this may not seem evident, but that is the way it is. Even heathen nations and unregenerate men have a purpose in the world, and, because of this, the apostle Peter, writing to the elect saints, made mention of "your brethren that are in the world" and spoke particularly of the suffering and temptation they endure. 1 Pet. 5:9.

It is certain that all things must come into judgment. Nothing anywhere is of any value until it is judged by the Lord, and, having been thus judged, sins can be repented of, errors and mistakes can be remedied, and all can be cleansed and forgiven. For my part I am confident that all God's judgments are remedial rather than punitive. The general teaching for many centuries has been the reverse — that all God's judgments are punitive and not remedial, but if the searcher for truth will look deeply into the subject, there is abundant evidence that our Father in heaven intends to correct the evils through judgment and bring about deliverance, cleansing and restitution to the groaning creation. The man or woman who flees to the cross in repentance, there to claim the cleansing of the blood of Christ, is then and there both forgiven and made a partaker of Christ's righteousness. This man by his repentance has judged himself and, having found himself to be lost and undone before God, clothed only in the filthy garments of his own self-righteousness, he abandons his sin by repentance to become a partaker of a righteousness much higher than his own. So it comes to pass that this man goes forth from his judgment freely justified in the sight of God, "for," saith the Holy Scriptures, "if we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged." 1 Cor. 11:31. This verse explains the meaning of the difficult passage in 1 Tim. 5:24. "Some men's sins are open beforehand, going before to judgment; and some (sins) they follow after."

I do not believe we will be able to understand the judgments of God or enter into the spirit of them unless and until we have a proper understanding of their God-given purpose. If we are going to adhere to the usual trend of thought which portrays our omniscient God as an offended, pouting demagogue or an eccentric potentate spoiling for the blood of his victims and only happy when there is some fault to find and condemn, we will miss the whole point of judgment and fall into the pit of misunderstanding and error. "Shall not the judge of all the earth do right?" was Abraham's plea as he interceded for the city of Sodom, Gen. 18, but the city fell under judgment because there was no righteousness in it and no willingness to repent. Yet Jesus, speaking of the willful rebellion of His day, clearly said, "If the mighty works, which have been done in thee, had been done in Sodom, it would have remained until this day." Matt. 11:13. Not only does the Judge of all the earth do right, but He is longsuffering and kind, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance. On the other hand I dare not minimize the awfulness or the severity of His judgments, for the word of God has said with great plainness, "It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God." Heb. 10:31. Toward those who are disobedient, rebellious and unbelieving His love will be shown in severest punishment. "The Lord shall send the rod of thy strength out of Zion: rule thou in the midst of thine enemies. Thy people shall be willing in the day of the manifestation of God's power..." Psa. 110:2,3. This verse clearly indicates that the stubborn will of every enemy will be made willing in the day of the manifestation of God's power.

All responsible creatures whether great or small will come under the judgment of God. Christians will be judged at the judgment seat of Christ. Israel, God's chosen people, will be judged for her stewardship. All nations will be gathered to judgment at the coming of the Lord. Babylon, the mother of harlots, will be judged. Angels will be judged. The devil, the beast and the false prophet will be judged, and the unbelieving dead will be judged at the white throne.

In the midst of all the certainty of judgment one truth shines as the sun above them all. That truth was uttered by our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ, when He said: "Now is the judgment of this world: now shall the prince of this world be cast out. And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto Me." John 12:31-32. That was the greatest judgment of all time, and all who believe in the work He accomplished that day at Calvary will never come into condemnation, but they have passed from the realm of condemnation and death into the realm of justification and life. When Jesus Christ was lifted up on the cross of Calvary, God was giving His righteous Son that all who would put their faith in His life blood would never come into condemnation, but would immediately pass from the realm of death into the realm of life. God the Father did not give His Son to be crucified because He demanded the blood of a victim to assuage His wrath, as certainly is the general teaching of Protestant and Catholic alike. The truth is that He gave up His Son to death because only by the shedding of His blood, in which flowed eternal life, could the life of God be given to you and me and released to all the world. The life is in the blood the scriptures plainly teach. Gen. 9:4; Lev. 17:14. My natural life is in my natural blood, but in the blood of the Son of God was life eternal, because He was born of the Holy Spirit. Even Jesus was not able to give us eternal life while as yet His blood was restricted to the veins of His own body. That is why in apparent distress He once said, "I have a baptism to be baptized with; and how am I straitened until it be accomplished." His baptism was the baptism of death, and until His blood, through death, was shed and the eternal life within Him was liberated and shed abroad, no man on earth could partake of eternal life. But when at His death upon the cross of Calvary His precious blood was shed, blood better than the blood of Abel, then the eternal life that was in His blood became available to all who would believe, and men and women, receiving through faith the spirit of life from above, were regenerated for the first time in history as He breathed on them and said, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost (John 20:22) and remission of sins (John 20:23)." The Holy Spirit is life, my brethren. Yea, He is eternal life. The Holy Spirit is the Spirit of the Son of God. The Spirit is the life of the Son of God, and he who hath the Son hath life, but he that hath not the Son hath not life, but the wrath of God abideth on him. So God is proved to be both just and the justifier of him that believeth in Jesus. Rom. 3:26. And we who believe are justified freely by His grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus. Rom. 3:24.

Now according to the apostle Paul, God hath set forth Him (Jesus Christ) to be a propitiation through faith in His blood, to declare His righteousness for the remissions of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God. Rom. 3:25. In this verse we are told of one who had faith in the blood of Christ and it is extremely important that we see who it was who had such abounding faith in His blood. Was it man who had this faith or was it God? It is true that man must have faith in Christ to be saved, but in this twenty-fifth verse Paul was not speaking of man's faith in Christ. He was speaking of God's faith in the precious blood of His Son. If you will read the verse again, you will perceive that it was God the Father who had such super abounding faith in the life blood of His Son that He was able to confidently declare His righteousness to be sufficient to remit all the sins of the past right from the garden of Eden onward to the end, so that it becomes perfectly true that as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.

Furthermore, this verse teaches that Jesus is the propitiation. Now to propitiate means to dispose to kindness. Did God then give Jesus Christ to propitiate Himself? No, He certainly did not, though that notion is the commonly accepted teaching throughout all the church system. But it is wrong. It is thoroughly wrong. God gave Jesus Christ to propitiate man and dispose man to repentance and kindness and love toward God. The whole crude idea that God must be reconciled to the sinner and to the world is completely false. It is erroneous and detrimental teaching. God never needed to be reconciled to the world. It is the sinner who needs to be reconciled to God and it is to the sinner that Jesus comes as God's mediator and propitiator to dispose the sinner to kindness and love toward God and to reconcile the world unto Himself.

I deplore the hateful teaching that makes our great loving God to appear like some pouting deity, petulantly glowering at a fallen world and only propitiated and His wrath appeased by the blood of His victims, and, failing that, to be satisfied only by the murder of His own Son as a substitute. This is not the true picture in any sense of the word. The true picture is that "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life. For God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through Him might be saved." John 3:16-17. Thus the shedding of the precious life blood of Jesus Christ was not that the wrath of God might be appeased, but that through the shedding of His better blood the eternal life that was in that blood might be released and shed abroad, that all who would believe might freely partake of eternal life, even the life that was forfeited when Adam transgressed and died. Adam could have partaken of the tree of life freely (Gen. 2:16) had he been disposed to do so. But now through Jesus Christ we are justified freely by His grace. Rom 3:24. With Him God freely gives us all things. Rom. 8:32. He gives of the fountain of life freely, Rev. 21:6, and whosoever will let him partake of the water of life freely. Rev. 22:17.

Marvelous grace of our loving Lord,
Freely bestowed on all who believe!
Yonder on Calvary's mount outpoured,
Will you this moment His grace receive?

The judgment of Jesus Christ on the cross was the greatest judgment of all time. In Christ all the world was judged and by Him all the world is saved, for God sent not His Son to condemn the world, but that the world through Him might be saved.

Many years ago, when I was still a denominational minister, I was one day considering the sacrifice of Jesus Christ for the world. As I meditated about it, I wondered greatly how it could possibly be that through the death of one lonely man far off in a distant and tiny country all the billions of mankind could have been saved. As I thought thereon and considered the multiplied billions of lost humanity, how lost and woefully sinful they are, it seemed increasingly impossible that such a remote event as the death of Jesus Christ, the lonely man of Galilee, could have been sufficient to redeem mankind and give life to them all. It seemed too big a thing to be true, bordering on the impossible, and I fear a little unbelief began to trouble my soul. Then the Spirit spoke to my heart and this is the question He asked: "How did all these billions of people become sinners?" "Through the sin of one man," I replied. Then in the words of scripture He spoke again: "As by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous." Rom. 5:19. "Well now," I exclaimed with joy, "that is the most reasonable thing I have every heard." Oh, how great is God's wisdom and how marvelous is His grace, and all His ways past finding out! For from Him everything comes, by Him everything exists, and in Him everything ends. To Him be glory forever and ever! Amen!

"Now is the judgment of this world," said Jesus. "Now shall the prince of the world be cast out. And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto Me." John 12:31-32. The judgment of the world in Christ is the greatest judgment of all time, and as the ages unfold the result will be exactly as Jesus stated when He said, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto Me," for "as in Adam all die, so in Christ shall all be made alive." 1 Cor. 15:22.

"For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad." 2 Cor. 5:10. "For we must all of us appear before Christ's judgment-seat in our true light, in order that each may receive an award for his actions in this life, in accordance with what he has done, whether it be good or bad." Weymouth. The judgment seat of Christ is the judgment of Christians, men and women who in life had put their faith in the great redemptive work of Jesus Christ. Sin is not the question in this judgment, for sin was purged when we believed. All believers will be judged for their works during life whether those works have been good or ill. The judgment shall declare of what sort our work has been, for we shall see all our works tried by fire.

Jesus Christ is the only foundation of the true church. The true church is that mystical body which is rising on that foundation of Christ to form an holy temple, a "fixed abode" for God, which in ages to come will be the habitation of God through the Spirit. Jesus Christ and faith in Him was the foundation Paul laid, and this was the foundation of the apostles and prophets, for "other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." 1 Cor. 3:11. The prophets prophesied of Him who was to come and the apostles established beyond doubt that the Jesus who came was the Christ of whom the prophets spoke. "Of whom speaketh the prophet this?" enquired the Ethiopian eunuch. "Of himself, or of some other man?" And Philip opened his mouth and began at the same scripture, and preached unto him Jesus. Acts 8:34,35. "The stone which the builders refused is become the headstone of the corner," said the prophet, Psa. 118:22, and Peter, taking up the theme, made the prophecy apply to Jesus Christ when he said, "This is the stone which was set at nought of you builders, which is become the head of the corner." Acts 4:11. The importance of this foundation stone becomes immense when we grasp the truth that this same stone, Christ Jesus the Lord, is the foundation of the temple of His body, which is to be. Upon this foundation we build and do our works whether they be good or unprofitable, and it is for those works that we are to be judged when we appear at the tribunal of Christ. Let us then give special care to what the apostle taught concerning the foundation and the things we build thereon. With these thoughts in mind let us further consider the words of 1 Corinthians 3:11-17. "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ. Now if any man build upon this foundation gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble; every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is. If any man's work abides which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward. If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss: but he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire. Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy: for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are." Such are our instructions concerning the judgment seat of Christ and our works, which shall be judged at that day in a judgment at which only Christians shall appear, converted men and women who have been begotten of God and who are truly the Lord's children. The question here is not sin. The question is the works we have done or have neglected to do. See how clearly the apostle stated the facts of the case. "Every man's work shall be made manifest; for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire', and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is." 1 Cor. 3:13.

In the plan of God fire has a very outstanding place. Even in the natural world fire is the greatest known purifier. Disease and filth may resist water and any type of disinfectant or fuller's soap, but nothing can withstand fire. The garment in Israel wherein was the plague of leprosy was to be burned with fire, Lev. 13:52, because that was the only sure way to destroy the disease, and the house wherein was the plague of leprosy was to be pulled down and carried away to an unclean place outside the city, which I would presume was the Gehenna of...
"For the Lord thy God is a consuming fire..." Deut. 4:24. "Did ever people hear the voice of God speaking out of the midst of the fire, as thou hast heard, and live? ...Out of heaven He made thee to hear His voice, that He might instruct thee: and upon earth He showed thee His great fire, and thou hearest His words out of the midst of the fire." Deut. 33:36. Ezekiel saw the Lord as a fire enfolding itself. Ezek. 1:4. John in his Patmos vision, beholding the Lord Jesus Christ, saw His head and His hair white like wool and His eyes aflame of fire. Rev. 1:14. When the Lord Jesus Christ is revealed from heaven with His mighty angels, He will come "in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with everlasting (aionian) destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of His power." 1 Thess. 1:7-9. When John the Baptist spoke of the coming outpouring of the Holy Spirit, he likened the Spirit to a fanned fire, saying, "I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance: but He that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear: He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost, and with fire: whose fan is in His hand, and He will thoroughly purge His floor, and gather His wheat into the garner; but He will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire." Matt. 3:11-12. When God appeared to Israel in Sinai, the sight of the Lord was like a devouring fire. Exod. 24:17. When the Holy Spirit fell upon the waiting host at Pentecost, He appeared unto them in cloven tongues like as of fire, which sat upon each of them. Acts 2:4. The number of places throughout the Holy Scripture in which fire is mentioned in connection with the Lord is far too numerous to try to record here, but any student, following the truth through for his own satisfaction, will readily see that fire is a symbol of God.

It is also important that we make a difference between natural fire, with which we are all so well acquainted, and the fire of God, which is spiritual and descends from heaven. The fire that burned in the bush of the wilderness in Moses' day was not the same kind of fire that now destroys our forests or burns in our hearths, and the fire that fell upon the altar of God in the wilderness was not the same fire that was offered by Nadab and Abihu. Lev. 10:1-2. Neither is the fire that fell at Pentecost to be confused with the bonfire the barbarians made when Paul was shipwrecked on the Island of Melita. As far as I am able to understand, the fire of Pentecost and the lake of fire are identical in substance. Both are related to God, the only difference being in their purpose and work, the lake of fire to consume all dross and corruption and the fire of Pentecost to sanctify, fill, and empower that which is already pure.

There is an illuminating passage in Numbers 31:23 that appears to me to be a type of the judgment we are considering. "Everything that may abide the fire, ye shall make it go through the fire, and it shall be clean: nevertheless it shall be purified with the water of separation: and all that abideth not the fire ye shall make go through the water." In verse 22 we are told what things were to be committed to the fire for purification. The gold, the silver, the brass, the iron, the tin, and the lead - all these things were to be purified by fire when they were brought back by the soldiers from battle, but those materials which could not endure fire were to be cleansed with water.

When Paul spoke of the coming judgment seat of Christ, he mentioned six things, all of which are symbolic and have spiritual meaning. "If any man build upon this foundation gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble; every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; for the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is." 1 Cor. 3:12-13. The foundation is Christ. Those on this foundation are present not to be judged for sin. Their salvation is not in question. They are there to have their works judged. It is their rewards that are in question, for we are rewarded according to our works whether they be good or bad. The test will be whether or not our works stand up in the fire of God, which on that day will be applied to them. Gold, silver and precious stones are never hurt by fire, but wood, hay and stubble are readily consumed and destroyed by it. No wonder the apostle gives this earnest, if not impassioned, exhortation: "Let every man take heed how he buildeth thereon." Verse. 10.

Without doubt on that great day, when works are tried and rewards are given, many people are going to find both their labors and their conduct swept away in consuming fire. They will find that, though they are saved, they have not built well. Surely the principles of the parable of the talents, though they concern a different judgment, may be equally well applied here. Jesus said, "The kingdom of heaven is as a man traveling into a far country, who called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods. And unto one he gave five talents, to another two, and to another one; to every man according to his several ability; and straightway took his journey. Then he that had received the five talents went and traded with the same, and made them other five talents. And likewise he that had received two, he also gained other two. But he that had received one went and digged in the earth, and hid his lord's money. After a long time the lord of those servants cometh, and reckoneth with them. And so he that had received five talents came and brought other five talents, saying, Lord, thou deliverezst unto me five talents: behold, I have gained beside them five talents more. His lord said unto him, Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord. He also that had received two talents came and said, Lord, thou deliverezst unto me two talents: behold, I have gained two other talents beside them. His lord said unto him, Well done, thou good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord. Then he which had received one talent came and said, Lord, I knew that thou art a hard man, reaping where thou has not sown, and gathering where thou hast not strawed: and I was afraid, and went and hid thy talent in the earth: lo, here thou hast that is thine. His lord answered and said unto him, Thou wicked and slothful servant, thou knewest that I reap where I sowed not, and gather where I have not strawed: thou oughtest therefore to have put my money to the exchangers, and then at my coming I should have received mine own with usury. Take therefore the talent from him; and give it unto him, which hath ten talents. For unto every one that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance: but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath. And cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." Matt. 25:15-30.

We are not saved by works. We are rewarded for works, but our works are certainly going to be judged of what sort they are. Many unprofitable and useless works are being built upon this foundation. They never will become part of the true building which is the body of Christ, but Christians spend their whole time at them just the same. These works, being unprofitable, useless and bad, will be burned up and destroyed. "Wherefore we labor, that, whether present or absent, we may be accepted of Him. For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad." 2 Cor. 5:9-10.

Now with reference to the terms gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble, let us take some thought as to the meaning of these symbols, for this is certainly symbolic language. From observation of the scripture gold becomes a definite type of God and the things of God. Just as we have seen fire to be symbolic of God, so also gold in scripture is symbolic of God or deity. We may not consider more than two or three evidences here, but gold, being the most precious metal mentioned in scripture, is used for purposes where we would expect to find types and shadows that speak of the Lord. For instance, the golden candlestick, which stood in the holy place of the tabernacle in the wilderness, was in every sense a type of Jesus Christ. The candlestick was solid gold, weighing roughly one hundred fifty pounds. It was a thing of glory and beauty with seven branches proceeding from it and seven lamps burning with fire continually representing the seven Spirits of God. Rev. 1:4. The oil it burned was symbolic of the Holy Spirit and the fire that made the light was not natural fire, but that spiritual fire which had descended from heaven when first the tabernacle was set up. Compare Lev. 9:23-24 with 6:12-13.

Then, too, the Ark of the Covenant, which is a most beautiful type of Christ and His body, was made of wood overlaid with gold. Likewise each of the forty-eight boards of the tabernacle were wood overlaid with gold. Wood in scripture is typical of humanity. Thus wood overlaid with gold is seen to be symbolic of Jesus Christ in His humanity and deity. He who is our ark of the covenant is both God and man in one Christ. Jesus is both Son of God and Son of man. The scripture proclaims Him to be the Son of God, having been born of a virgin by the power of the Holy Spirit. But the same scriptures also show Him to be a man, born of a woman, an Israelite in whom was no guile.

Silver in scripture is symbolic of redemption. This is made evident because all the silver used in the wilderness tabernacle was taken from the redemption offerings of the children of Israel. Exod. 30:11:16. Compare Exod. 26:19-25. Thus, wherever we find silver in the tabernacle, we find truth concerning redemption. All the sockets upon which the beautiful tabernacle stood were sockets of silver. This, too, is where we stand, that is, upon Christ's redemption. "Christ has redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us: for it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree." Gal. 3:13.

Wood in scripture is a type of humanity. Wherever we find the thought of humanity, as we have seen in the boards of the tabernacle, we find wood to be the symbol. Stubble in scripture seems to represent the flesh.
Obadiah likens the house of Esau to stubble, and Esau was a man of the flesh, a man of the field, a man of the hunt, more concerned with his stomach than with his birthright. He is not a man of the Spirit. Thus it is said, "Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated." Stubble is all that is left after the grain is harvested. The flame devours the stubble. Joel 2:5. The prophet Isaiah likens astrologers, stargazers and monthly prognosticators to stubble, saying, "Let now the astrologers, the stargazers, the monthly prognosticators, stand up, and save thee from these things that shall come upon thee. Behold, they shall be as stubble; the fire shall burn them; they shall not deliver themselves from the power of the flame..." Isa. 47:13-14. It is rather a singular thing to find that in our day so many thousands of God's people are turning from the truth of the prophecies and the certainties of scripture in a vain endeavor to understand their future by astrology and stargazing. The scripture likens all such to stubble, for it is of man rather than of God. As for the hay, the word is so seldom used in scripture that no definite type can be established for it, but I think all will concede that, whatsoever else it may represent; it certainly speaks of those dead works that will be burned up when the fire of God is applied to them.

If gold is a symbol of God and silver is a symbol of redemption, it is certain that precious stones speak of the sanctified believers who are members in particular of the body of Christ. That Christ is a precious stone and that believers of His body are likewise precious stones is very evident from Peter's beautiful statement, "To whom coming, as unto a living stone, disallowed indeed of men, but chosen of God, and precious, ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ. Wherefore also it is contained in the scripture, Behold, I lay in Sion a chief corner stone, elect, precious: and he that believeth on Him shall not be confounded." 1 Pet. 2:4-6.

Every person who is saved is building upon the foundation that is Christ Jesus. We are either building the good of gold, silver or precious stones or the bad and unprofitable things of wood, hay and stubble that is the human and the carnal. If the works that I do are gold, then surely it must mean that my life is totally involved with God. Am I led by the Spirit of God? Or do I follow my own inclinations? There is a vast difference. The heart of man, even Christian man, can be desperately wicked in this regard. It is not difficult to find men who glibly make great claims of being led by the Spirit of God, but many, alas, are involved in building their own kingdom, though they imagine they are building for God. These people still remain in the Babylon system, working over time to build it up. God has not made me a ruler or a judge of my neighbor's motives, but we do not need to look far to conclude that much of the work done in God's name is in reality the wood of humanity, the stubble of carnality, and the deadness and spiritual dearth of the hay. All work, whether good or bad, will be exposed to the testing fire of God. If it is gold, silver, or precious stones, it will stand the test. If it is only the wood of humanity or the stubble of carnality, it will be burned up and destroyed.

If any man's work can abide the fiery testing of the Spirit and the word of God, then that man will receive a reward for the profitable work he has done. But, if any man's work abide not the fire, but rather is consumed by it, then that man will suffer dreadful loss. He will suffer the loss of all his labor during his lifetime. He will see it all go up in smoke and himself saved, but empty-handed. It will be a disappointing and fearful loss. I have heard some Christians make the idle remark, "Just so long as I am saved, that is all I care." Well, that is not my feeling in the matter. I shall greatly rejoice if on that trysting day I find that I "have not run in vain, neither labored in vain," and I am sure that, if we have faithfully followed the leading of God's Spirit, there need be no fear of loss.

There is a wonderful truth in the words of Jesus, "He that loveth father or mother more than Me is not worthy of Me: and he that loveth son or daughter more than Me is not worthy of Me. And he that taketh not his cross, and followeth after Me, is not worthy of Me. He that findeth his life shall lose it: and he that loseth his life for My sake shall find it. He that receiveth you receiveth Me, and he that receiveth Me receiveth Him that sent Me. He that receiveth a prophet in the name of a prophet shall receive a prophet's reward; and he that receiveth a righteous man in the name of a righteous man shall receive a righteous man's reward. And whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward." Matt. 10:37-42. We should surely be able to see from this that it is the perfect attitude of the heart that really counts in the sight of God and not the mighty and spectacular deed, which we have done. To give a cup of cold water to a disciple who is serving Christ is to receive a share in that disciple's reward. The little woman who of her penury cast into the treasury all her living, though it was only two pence, had in God's sight given more than all those wealthy ones who still had much left over after they had given of their abundance. If she had received bank interest on her penny from that day until now, the aggregate of her wealth would amount to more than sixty figures. The happy boy who so generously handed over his little lunch of two small fish and some buns shared equally with Christ in the feeding of the five thousand and will receive a just reward at His hand. And poor old Simon, who helped Jesus carry His cross to Calvary, will share in the rewards of the blessed One he helped.

Dearly beloved brethren, I honestly believe that a man can know his own heart. Some say he cannot, but I am sure he can. A man can know whether or not his motives are pure or impure. Do you not think that Hophni and Phineas, who were priests in Israel, knew they were doing wrong when they were making themselves fat by demanding the best of the sacrifices for themselves? Did they not know they were doing wrong by lying with the women who came to offer sacrifices to the Lord? They did wrong, even though they were the priests. Do you not think that Peninnah knew she was doing wrong when she tormented Hannah because that dear saint had no children? 1 Sam. 1:2,6. Of course she did. Did not Eli know that he did wrong in not removing his evil sons from the priesthood instead of honoring them above God? 1 Sam. 2:29. Yes, of course they knew they did wrong. They were building on the foundation, but they were building with wood, hay and stubble and, even worse, they were sinning as well.

Christians can know their own hearts and there is plenty of instruction in God's word that will help us to know our hearts and our motives. Does a man not know when he is angry? Of course he does. Does he not know when he is happy? Or when he is sad? Can we not then know jealousy, or covetousness, or pride, or envy, or lust when it dwells within us? Of course we can. Therefore the Lord exhorts his people to "put off all these; anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth. Lie not one to another, seeing ye have put off the old man with his deeds; and have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of Him that created him." Col. 3:8-10. Further more, in the previous verses, 5 and 6, the apostle exhorts us to "mortify — that is, put to death — your members which are upon the earth; fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence (lustful, carnal and sensual desires), and covetousness, which is idolatry, for which things' sake the wrath of God cometh on the children of disobedience."

Having put off these evil and bad things, which will cause Christians to lose their reward, we may now with joy turn to the more beautiful side of the picture. "Put on therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, meekness, longsuffering."

The word of God abounds in instruction that will bring sanctification and holiness to our lives if we will give heed to what it says, but so seldom are God's instructions taught or practiced that one would forget they are indeed the instructions of the Lord.

Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands.
Husbands, love your wives and be not bitter against them.
Children, obey your parents.
Fathers, provoke not your children to wrath.
Servants, obey your masters.

Masters, give to your servants that which is just and equal.
Continue in prayer and watch with thanksgiving.
Walk in wisdom toward them that are without.
Let your speech be always with grace.
Be vigilant, sober, of good behavior, hospitable, apt to teach. Not a brawler, not covetous. Having food and raiment, let us be content. The love of money is the root of all evil. They that are rich fall into a snare and many foolish and hurtful lusts. But thou, O man of God, flee these things and follow righteousness, godliness, faith, love, meekness, and patience. Lay hold on eternal life. Hold fast the form of sound words.

All such things are gold, silver and precious stones and for faithfulness in them we will receive a reward. All that is opposite to these is wood, hay and stubble. It will be consumed in the flame and fire of God. They who have lived in the realm of wood, hay and stubble will lose their reward and, though they themselves will be saved, they, having suffered the vengeance of eternal fire, will suffer the loss of all things.

My heart's desire and prayer to God is that many might be turned from the Babylon system of confusion, that mankind is now content to call the church, with all its dearth of truth and its vain repetition of sermons, songs and prayers that we through communion with Christ might learn how to behave ourselves in the true house of God (which is His mystical body), the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth.

Therefore, "giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity. For if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall: for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." 2 Pet. 1:5-11.

If we live in that kind of communion with Christ, we will stand at the judgment seat of Christ with the assurance Paul had when he said, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love His appearing." 2 Tim. 4:78. What more is required of man than to love God and do righteousness?

CHAPTER FIVE
THE JUDGMENT OF THE NATIONS

When we began this study of Eschatology, it was not our intention to make an exhaustive examination in an endeavor to prove every point to the satisfaction of the natural mind. Much study is always a weariness to the flesh and, however intensive our search may be, we must never forget that "it is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing; the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." John 6:63. It is therefore of greater value that we should embrace the spirit of the message rather than convince ourselves of certain facts which we consider to be indisputable. It is better far that saints should joyfully embrace the hope of Christ's second coming rather than that they should pore over exhaustive studies concerning the details of that coming while they themselves experience nothing but apathy toward that which is our blessed hope.

It is very possible that Christians may find themselves like unto the Pharisees of old, who, though they knew much about the coming of the Christ, had no more spiritual understanding than to crucify Him when He came. When Herod enquired of the learned doctors where Christ should be born, without the slightest hesitation they replied, "In Bethlehem of Judea," and immediately fortified their claim by quoting scripture to prove their statement. Matt. 2:3,4. This was all very good, for it is certainly right that we should know the scripture, but, though they knew the letter of the scripture so well, they were devoid of the spirit of His coming and, because the Messiah for whom they looked did not come in exactly the manner they had wrongly concluded He should, they rejected Him completely with hostile insolence and murder in their hearts.

Better be it by far that God's people should have the blessed hope of His appearing burning within their hearts and be found earnestly longing and patiently waiting for Him even though in some details they be misinformed. In my mind today I have some very steadfast thoughts as to the manner of His coming, yet deep in my spirit and with all reverence and love I can truthfully say that I care not how He comes, whether it be on the clouds of heaven, or in a flash of lightning or whether He comes walking or riding upon an ass. None of these things can mean much to the man or woman who longs for His presence above all else. Their cry is not, "Lord, come riding upon the clouds of heaven," but their earnest hope and heartfelt desire is expressed in these words of yearning, "Even so, Lord Jesus, come quickly." Do you suppose that mothers and fathers care about the vehicle by which their boys return from the wars? Whether they come on trains or buses or ships or planes, whether they come walking or riding in ox-carts is of minor concern to them. Their only desire is that they come and the sooner the better. Let those who will argue the details, but let the saints cry, "Why tarry the wheels of His chariot!"

In these studies, therefore, which should have taken many more pages to complete, I have tried to inspire the believing heart with expectation, hope, and assurance of these blessed things to come rather than to dwell too long on cold facts that so often prove to be devoid of the Spirit. I have hoped to present the judgment seat of Christ in such a way that believers would lay hold on the hope before them rather than stand trembling in fear.
So also with that magnificent hope of the kingdom of God when Jesus Christ shall reign upon the throne of David in Jerusalem. We hope to inspire every believing heart to lay hold on the blessedness of its certainty.
First let the kingdom of God be set up in your own heart. There within you let Christ reign supreme. Then you will be able, when the time is ripe, to administer the affairs of His kingdom when it unfolds in all its glory to bring all the world into one blessed government of world-wide peace.

It is impossible for any man to successfully preach the message. "Ye must be born again," before that man has himself experienced the new birth. If we attempt to preach an experience we have not been made partaker of, we dismally fail in our endeavor, for, though our words may be correct, we cannot enlighten our hearers, simply because we have not experienced the truth we seek to convey. I once heard a man speak on the baptism of the Spirit, but, because he had not received the experience, it was not difficult to perceive that he was instructing the people concerning a subject of which he knew nothing. One man with an experience is better far than ten thousand men with an argument. For this reason burdened sinners will seek the advice or some little known saint who lives in a back alley, yet knows Christ, rather than men of letters and learning who know much and have experienced nothing. Long, long ago John Wesley cried, "First believe," and to that my heart responds with a glad amen. Believe first and then will all things be added unto you. If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His.

From this then we learn a great lesson concerning the kingdom of God. Since the beginning the kingdom of God had been placed among men on different occasions, but each time it had sputtered out as a lamp out of oil because the people to whom it came did not have the King dwelling in their hearts. Moses showed how Israel lacked this heart experience when he said, "Ye have seen all that the Lord did before your eyes in the land of Egypt unto Pharaoh, and unto all his servants, and unto all his land; the great temptations which thine eyes have seen, the signs and those great miracles: yet the Lord hath not given you a heart to perceive, and eyes to see, and ears to hear, unto this day." Deut. 29:2-4. What, my brethren, do you think of that? These people had seen all the signs and wonders done in Egypt, their eyes had beheld the marvels of the wilderness journey for forty years, and yet for all their seeing they had not perceived a thing, because the Lord had not given them a heart to perceive. How dreadful a state of heart is this that men can see and hear and not perceive! How distressing a thing it was that Jesus could cure lepers, make the blind to see, stop the violent shaking of palsied men, yea, and raise the dead to life again, yet for all this highly religious men, the most learned in all the land, could in utter spiritual blindness gather together in envy to plot His death and destroy Him from the face of the earth! Is it not evident that there is often a great gulf between seeing and perceiving? Can we not grasp the truth that between the understanding of the natural mind and the understanding of the Spirit there is an impassable chasm?

Thus, because the kingdom of Christ is from above and not from beneath, it became necessary that men should possess more than a head knowledge of it. Their vital need was to experience the kingdom of God in their hearts. Such experience as this can only come by the new birth. Therefore Jesus said, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." Of a truth I tell you that no man will ever reign in that kingdom who has not first known the blessedness of having God's kingdom planted in his heart by the power of the new birth. By the new birth the kingdom of God is placed within us. The King reigns on the throne of our hearts. He rules there. He leads, He guides, He directs. He puts His mind within that the saints may possess the mind that was in Christ Jesus, which is the Father's mind. As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God. This is the true embryo of the kingdom of God. It must have dominion within the hearts of its citizens before they can establish it in the earth upon which we dwell. Let us then who have begun in the Spirit never try to be made perfect by the flesh, but let us continue to grow up into Christ, who is the head, from whom the whole body, knit together by joints and bands, growth to an holy temple in the Lord, in whom we also are builded together to become a habitation for God in the Spirit.

The Christ body, the sons of God, are themselves the eternal habitation of God. They are God's building. They are God's house. They are the house not made with hands. They are "My Father's house" of many mansions. Each believer is a mansion of God to dwell in, a living stone, chosen of God and precious. The body of Christ is the temple of the Lord. That living, holy temple is the throne room of Christ from which the world will be governed in the coming kingdom age. Just as the temple of Solomon was once situated in old Jerusalem, so in the dispensation of the fullness of times the temple not made with hands will be situated in the New Jerusalem, that living city, the walls, the foundations, and the gates of which are the redeemed of the Lord. It is all too wonderful for imagination, and yet so gloriously true!

"When the Son of man shall come in His glory, and all the holy angels with Him, then shall He sit upon the throne of His glory: and before Him shall be gathered all nations: and He shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats: and He shall set the sheep on His right hand, but the goats on the left. Then shall the King say unto them on His right hand, Come, ye blessed of My Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world: For I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave Me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took Me in: naked, and ye clothed Me: I was sick, and ye visited Me: I was in prison, and ye came unto Me. Then shall the righteous answer Him, saying, Lord, when saw we Thee an hungered, and fed Thee or thirsty, and gave Thee drink? When saw we Thee a stranger, and took Thee in? or naked, and clothed Thee? Or when saw we Thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee? And the king shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these My brethren, ye have done it unto Me.

"Then shall He say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from Me, ye cursed, into everlasting (aionian) fire, prepared for the devil and his angels: for I was an hungered, and ye gave Me no meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave Me no drink: I was a stranger, and ye took Me not in: naked, and ye clothed Me not: sick, and in prison, and ye visited Me not. Then shall they also answer Him, saying, Lord, when saw we Thee an hungered, or athirst, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did not minister unto Thee? Then shall He answer them, saying, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to Me. And these shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous unto life eternal." Matt. 25:31-46.

The time of the judgment of the nations is definitely stated to be "when the Son of man comes in His glory, and all the holy angels with Him." Matt. 25:31. And the time of the coming of the Son of man is definitely stated to be "immediately after the tribulation of those days." This fact is stated in these words: "For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall the coming of the Son of man be ... Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken: and then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. And he shall send His angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together His elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." Matt. 24:27-31.

We shall make no endeavor here to settle any old scores about the exact order of things as they will transpire on that glorious day, but I would remind all who read that the book of Revelation has given us a detailed account of the sounding of the seven trumpets of God. Then we are told that, when the seventh trumpet begins to sound, the mystery of God is finished. Rev. 10:7. It is further definitely stated that, when the seventh angel sounds his trumpet, the mighty fiat will go forth, "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of His Christ: and he shall reign forever and forever." Rev. 11:15. Paul also, in his epistle to the Corinthians, made it very clear that at the sounding of the last trumpet, which is undoubtedly the seventh, the saints will be raised from the dead incorruptible. You will notice also that Paul refers to this mighty resurrection of the saints as a mystery. It is undoubtedly the mystery referred to in Rev. 10:7. "Behold, I shew you a mystery: We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality." 1 Cor. 15:51-53.

It is completely possible and entirely probable that these dead in Christ (1 Thess. 4:16-17) who are to rise first will walk on earth among the living in Christ for a few days before the actual catching up to meet the Lord, just as the saints did at the resurrection of Jesus. This at least appears to be what Paul was telling us when he said, "If we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we, which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord (which coming is immediately after the tribulation) shall not prevent (precede) them which are asleep. For the Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words." 1 Thess. 4:14-18.

I do not believe we can be wrong in stating that the resurrection of the just, that is, the dead in Christ, takes place just as it is stated here - at the sounding of the last trumpet. Nor do I think we can be wrong in saying that this sounding of the last trumpet will be just as stated - when the Son of man comes in His glory. Matt. 24:27-31. Neither do I think we can be wrong in affirming that this coming of the Son of man and the sounding of the seventh and last trumpet is immediately after the tribulation and not before the tribulation, as has been generally accepted by so many for so long a time.

The fact is clearly stated here that, when the resurrected saints are caught up to meet the Lord in the air, they are caught up to meet the Lord. It does not appear that they are caught up to be taken away into heaven, but that they go out to meet the Lord in the air and, having thus met Him, they return with Him in glory. The saints will go out to meet Him just as we might go out to meet an approaching friend, intending to escort him back to our home with joy. We have one such friendly gesture recorded in Acts 28:15. When Paul and his party were on their way to Rome, the brethren in Rome, hearing of their coming, came to meet them as far as Appii forum and the three taverns, whom when Paul saw, he thanked God and took courage. That on a far grander scale is just what happens when the Son of man comes in His glory. The trumpet sounds and the in-Christed of all ages rise to meet the Lord to triumphantly return in glory with Him to the judgment of the nations.

Because the nations of the world will be judged according to how they have treated Christ's brethren, I wish to make the point very clear that it is the in Christ people who are the Lord's brethren. This fact is clearly stated in scripture. First we read in Romans 8:29, "For whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He (Jesus) might be the firstborn among many brethren." Again Psa. 22:22 is also very clear on this point, saying, "I will declare Thy name unto My brethren: in the midst of the congregation will I praise Thee." And again, "I will declare Thy name unto My brethren, in the midst of the church will I sing praises to Thee." Heb. 2:12. Jesus Himself left us with positively no doubt as to who His brethren are when He said, "Go to My brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto My Father, and your Father; and to My God, and your God." John 20:17. Jesus, who is the eldest Son in a vast family of sons, became the captain of their salvation. Therefore it is said, "It became Him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons (brethren) unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through suffering."

It is necessary that we see clearly who the Lord's brethren are because the judgment of the nations, which takes place when the Son of man comes in His glory, concerns this one thing alone. "Inasmuch as ye have done it to one of the least of these My brethren, ye have done it unto Me," in verse, "Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these My brethren, ye did it not unto Me." It is upon this basis and this alone that the nations of the world will be judged and will either enter the kingdom of God or be cut off from its glory as the Jews have been cut off throughout the entire church age. The Emphatic Diaglott renders Matt. 25:46 thus: "And these shall go forth to aionian cutting off, but the righteous to aionian life." This I believe to be the correct rendering of the passage. The righteous enter into the aionian life of the kingdom age, but the unrighteous are cut off from it, many by outright death as we shall see and others to aionian correction.
It is doubtful if any judgment could be decided wholly on a national basis. Nations are made up of individuals. Some are excellent people, even though unregenerate, and some are extremely wicked. Nationally Communist Russia is anti-God and anti-Christ in all she is and does and yet for all that millions of her people are saints, serving God under the most extenuating circumstances. This same fact is true of many nations throughout the course of time.

From what we have considered above concerning the Lord’s brethren, it should become very evident that it is not the Jews who are in question here. There is no reason to call the Jews the Lord’s brethren in this passage. Almost without exception those who attempt to explain the judgment of the nations state immediately that the nations will be judged according to what they have done to the Jews. But the Jews are not Christ's brethren. Whatever evidence have we to say that they are? This is just one more of the many errors of the church system that comes from tradition. We have not surely forgotten the occasion when certain people said to Jesus, "Thy mother and Thy brethren stand without, desiring to speak to Thee." Surely Christ's mother and brethren were true Jews if anybody ever was, but Jesus took the occasion to demonstrate forever who His true brethren really are. Therefore He replied, "Who is My mother? and who are My brethren? And He stretched forth His hand toward his disciples, and said, Behold My mother and My brethren! For whosoever shall do the will of My Father which is in heaven, the same is My brother, and sister, and mother." Matt. 12:47-50. There is no possible way that any sane person can make the statement, "Whosoever shall do the will of My Father," apply to the Jews as a nation, so I think we can safely dismiss the idea as idle tradition. While we are always condemned for saying so, it is undeniable truth that the Jews have been the enemies of Christ throughout the entire age. No fruit has grown upon their national fig tree during this entire age of grace. The brethren referred to here are the true believers, the true church, the company of the in-Christed, the truly saved. In great hate and wicked rejection the Jewish nation demanded that the blood of Christ be upon them and upon their children (Matt. 27:25) and thus nationally they have been "cut off throughout this entire age. Even to this day they still bear the dreadful burden of the curse they called down upon themselves when Christ came to His own, but His own received Him not.

The brethren of the Lord are the believers, the blood-washed saints, and the true church of Jesus Christ. Volumes have been written about the terrible sufferings of the Jews during the past two thousand years but, while we sympathize with them and do not justify their tormentors, they did not suffer for righteousness sake. Christians and the world at large are inclined to forget the terrible persecutions against the true church of Jesus Christ throughout the last two thousand years, during which time almost countless millions of martyrs were persecuted unto death for their faith in Jesus Christ, by sword, by torture, by the rack, by imprisonment in dungeons, by inquisition, by the iron maiden, by the fires of the stake and every other fiendish torment that the devilish minds of Christ-hating men could devise against them.

The ten dreadful persecutions perpetrated against the saints by the pagan Roman Empire destroyed millions of Christians, the Lord's brethren. Church history records that in Alexandria alone as many as eighty martyrs a day were slaughtered for their faith in Christ, but the persecution of the saints under such monsters as Nero, Hadrian and Diocletian were not more severe than the abominations committed by the Roman church system in Spain, in France and even in England. From twenty to one hundred thousand Waldensians were slaughtered in France by decree of the Pope in the year 1209 and endless other thousands all through the dark ages. Even in our days the dreadful aggregate of Christians persecuted to death under the Communist regimes has by some estimates now reached the appalling total of fifty million. The persecutions in Spain, Italy and France and to a lesser degree in England were carried out with the consent and the help of the governments then in power, as is also now the case in the U.S.S.R.

When, therefore, the day comes for the nations to be judged, the fearful determining question will be, "What have you done with My brethren?" What the nations and systems have done to Christ's brethren and this vital question alone will decide whether these nations enter with joy into the kingdom of God or whether they must suffer the correction of aionian cutting off.

If the reader will study an up to date map of the world, he will soon see that outside of the Anglo-Saxon world there is very little freedom of religion left anywhere. Great areas of Asia are under Communism, while India grovels in darkness that can be felt and will probably very soon fall under the Communist heel. The dark continent of Africa is already under tyrants except in those diminishing areas where Christ is still honored as Lord. If heathen, outside influences have their way, these islands of faith will soon disappear and with them the last vestiges of Christianity in that land. The world scene grows increasingly dark as the enemies of Christ and His brethren, the true church, increase their malevolent, anti-Christian hold, but the day of their judgment is near at hand, and, sooner far than evil seducers and God-hating, rebellious nations realize, the King will appear in His glory and all the holy angels with Him to take His seat upon the throne of His glory to judge the nations. On that day their joy and crown or their dreadful disaster and loss will depend on what they have done with Christ's brethren, the true saints. Some will go away into aionian cutting off, but the righteous into aionian life.

"And O what a weeping and wailing
As the lost were told of their fate!
They cried to the rocks and the mountains;
They prayed, but their prayer was too late."

The details of such a momentous judgment as this must ever remain in the hands of a completely just and righteous God, full of mercy, wisdom and grace. If we poor, puny men with our finite minds try to decide the details which only the Infinite knows, we will succeed only in sinking ourselves more deeply into the quagmire of uncertainty and misunderstanding. Suffice it here to say that nations who have never known the true God or heard that in love He gave His Son for their sins will be judged according to what they have and not according to what they have not. He who knew his Lord's will and did things worthy of stripes will be judged with much greater exactness and severity than he who knew not his Lord's will and did things worthy o stripes. Luke 12:47, 48.

Following this all important judgment of the living nation; of the earth, the long-awaited kingdom age will begin. The importance of this judgment of the nations comes into clearer focus when we learn that it is the nations who will be left on earth after this judgment who will inherit and inhabit the kingdom of God for its entire duration of one thousand years Rev. 20:4,6. These who have treated Christ's brethren with kindness and mercy will enjoy the blessedness of that wonderful age in which Christ will be King and the saints, His brethren of all ages, will reign in the glory of their resurrection with Him. Who could possibly be more surprised than these nations, who, though unconverted, have blessed the children of God, when they hear the King say, "Come ye blessed of My Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world: for I was an hungered, and ye gave Me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave Me drink: For inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these My brethren ye did it unto Me." And these shall go away into aionian life.

One of the most revealing passages concerning the coming of the Lord, the judgment of the nations and the setting up of the millennial kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ is found in the last two chapters of the prophecy of Zechariah. Here we find a vivid picture of the momentous events, which take place at the coming of the Lord. The invasion of the land of Israel by the forces of Antichrist and the capture of two-thirds of the city of Jerusalem is set out in Zech. 13:8. The refining of the remaining one third is shown in verse 9. In these chapters a vivid and terrifying picture is drawn of all nations gathering against Jerusalem to battle. Chapter 14:2. Then in verse 4 as in Matt. 25:31,32 we see the coming of the Lord to the Mount of Olives and the great and terrible earthquake foretold in Rev. 16:18. Again in verses 6 and 7 we have a prophetic account of the day of darkness foretold by Jesus Christ when He said, "The sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light."

The careful observer may be aware that the terrible calamities and earthquakes with all their fearful destruction will actually have a part in preparing the earth for the marvelous productivity of the kingdom age. Verses 4, 8, 10, and 11. Thus in these calamities that befall the earth the words of Isaiah the prophet find their blessed fulfillment. "Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low: and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain: and the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." Isa. 40:4-5.

In Zech. 14:9 we learn that the Lord Jesus Christ becomes King over all the earth. With this wonderful coronation and enthronement comes the final glorious answer to the prayer that has burst from saintly lips times without number since Jesus taught us to pray, "Thy kingdom come; Thy will be done in earth as it is done in heaven."

In Zech. 14:12 a vivid description is given detailing the manner by which wicked nations will be cut off from the earth to live no more until the thousand years are finished. Rev. 20:5. "Their flesh shall consume away while they stand upon their feet, and their eyes shall consume away in their holes, and their tongue shall consume away in their mouth." And a great tumult from the Lord shall be among them and they shall lay hold on each other and kill each other. Verse 13. Thus their aionian cutting off will come. In Verse 16 we are given a clear picture of the nations who will actually enter the kingdom age. Thus the prophet continues: "Everyone that is left of all the nations which came against Jerusalem shall even go up from year to year to worship the King, the Lord of hosts, and to keep the feast of tabernacles." These, we have a right to assume, will be the nations to whom Jesus will say, "Come, ye blessed of My Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you." In Rev. 12:5 we read of the manchild, who is Christ and His brethren, who will rule with a rod of iron, and in Zech. 14:17-19 we are given a vivid portrait of the manner in which Christ and the saints will carry out that iron rule. "And it shall be, that whoso will not come up of all the families of the earth unto Jerusalem to worship the King, the Lord of hosts, even upon them shall be no rain. And if the family of Egypt go not up, and come not, that have no rain; there shall be the plague, wherewith the Lord will smite the heathen that come not up to keep the feast of tabernacles. This shall be the punishment of Egypt and the punishment of all nations that come not up to keep the feast of tabernacles." Finally, in verses 20 and 21 we have a remarkable display of the holiness and righteousness of the kingdom reign when all will be holiness unto the Lord and there will be no more Canaanite in the house of the Lord forever.

Thus in the following dramatic utterance the prophet Zechariah vividly describes the coming of the Lord, the judgment of the nations and the beginning of the kingdom age: "Behold, the day of the Lord cometh, and thy spoil shall be divided in the midst of thee. For I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle; and the city shall be taken, and the houses rifled, and the women ravished; and half of the city shall go forth into captivity, and the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city. Then shall the Lord go forth, and fight against those nations, as when He fought in the day of battle. And His feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east, and the mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west, and there shall be a very great valley: and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north, and half of it toward the south. And ye shall flee to the valley of the mountains; for the valley of the mountains shall reach unto Azal: yea, ye shall flee, like as ye fled from before the earthquake in the days of Uzziah king of Judah; and the Lord my God shall come, and all the saints with Thee. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the light shall not be clear, nor dark: but it shall be one day which shall be known to the Lord, not day, nor night: but it shall come to pass, that at evening time it shall be light.

"And it shall be in that day, that living waters shall go out from Jerusalem; half of them toward the former sea, and half of them toward the hinder sea: in summer and in winter it shall be. And the Lord shall be king over all the earth: in that day shall there be one Lord, and His name one. All the land shall be turned as a plain from Geba to Rimmon south of Jerusalem: and it shall be lifted up, and inhabited in her place, from Benjamin's gate unto the place of the first gate unto the corner gate, and from the tower of Hananeel unto the king's winepresses. And men shall dwell in it, and there shall be no more utter destruction; but Jerusalem shall be safely inhabited. And this shall be the plague wherewith the Lord shall smite all the people that have fought against Jerusalem: Their flesh shall consume away while they stand upon their feet, and their eyes shall consume away in their holes, and their tongue shall consume away in their mouth. And it shall come to pass in that day, that a great tumult from the Lord shall be among them; and they shall lay hold every one upon the hand of his neighbor, and his hand shall rise up against the hand of his neighbor, and Judah also shall fight at Jerusalem; and the wealth of all the heathen round about shall be gathered together, gold, and silver, and apparel, in great abundance. And so shall be the plague of the horse, of the mule, of the camel, and of the ass, and of all the beasts that shall be in these tents, as this plague.

"And it shall come to pass, that every one that is left of all the nations which came against Jerusalem shall even go up from year to year to worship the King, the Lord of hosts, and to keep the feast of tabernacles. And it shall be, that whoso will not come up of all the families of the earth unto Jerusalem to worship the King, the Lord of hosts, even upon them shall be no rain. And if the family of Egypt go not up, and come not, that have no rain;
there shall be the plague, wherewith the Lord will smite the heathen that come not up to keep the feast of tabernacles. This shall be the punishment of Egypt, and the punishment of all nations that come not up to keep the feast of tabernacles. In that day shall there be upon the bells of the horses, Holiness unto the Lord; and the pots in the Lord's house shall be like the bowls before the altar. Yea, every pot in Jerusalem and in Judah shall be holiness unto the Lord of hosts: and all they that sacrifice shall come and take of them, and see therein: and in that day there shall be no more Canaanite in the house of the Lord." Zech. 14.

So shall be the momentous events accompanying the second coming of our Lord Jesus Christ when He comes in His glory and all the holy angels with Him. The trumpet will sound, the righteous of all ages will rise from their graves incorruptible and all living believers will be changed. They will put on incorruption. This is the first resurrection. Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection. On such the second death hath no power. At the mighty blast of the trumpet of God the elect are gathered from the four winds from one end of heaven to the other. They will ascend to meet the Lord and return triumphantly with the heavenly armies. Rev. 19:11-16.

The nations of the ungodly already have been gathered against Jerusalem to battle and will be there for the beginning of the judgment of the nations we have been considering. That some will be destroyed is taught in Zech. 14:16 and Matt. 25:41-46. That others will be left to inherit the kingdom is as clearly taught in Zech. 14:12 and Matt. 25:34-40.

The writer is well aware that it is impossible to cover every aspect of a subject so infinitely vast as this, and I frankly confess that I could not do so even if I would. There are a few things, however, which may be added here to help us come to a better understanding of the last events of the ages. The final events of the ages are fulfillment of the purpose, which began in embryo in the Garden of Eden. As we approach the end of this age, it is only normal that the Spirit of the Lord would graciously reveal many things, which have been hidden from devout and earnest saints who lived in earlier times. There should never be any aspersions cast on their wisdom or integrity because of that, for the Lord reveals truth only in its proper time. The apostle Peter described the growth that is to be expected in our understanding as we draw near to so great salvation. "Of which salvation the prophets have inquired and searched diligently, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you: searching what, or what manner of time the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow. Unto whom it was revealed, that not unto themselves, but unto us they did minister the things, which are now reported unto you by them that have preached the gospel unto you..." 1 Pet. 1:10-12. Thus we may also expect that in our day the Spirit will reveal all truth particularly applicable to the day in which we live, which truth is "present truth."

The present interpretation of scripture, which shows conclusively that there will be more than one judgment, was not always understood. For centuries the general teaching was that there was only one judgment, which would include in itself all the righteous and all the wicked of all ages and dispensations. Furthermore, it was generally believed that there would be only one great resurrection, commonly known as the general resurrection, in which all mankind, both good and wicked, would be raised from the dead for judgment. This general resurrection and general judgment would be at the end of the world and after it the righteous would enter eternal bliss and the wicked would be damned to eternal torment. The failure to understand that the judgment of the nations taught in Matt. 25 and the judgment of the great white throne disclosed in Rev. 20:11-15 are at least one thousand years apart, has caused endless difficulty in interpreting the scripture. This certainly is one instance where "rightly dividing the word of truth" pays tremendous dividends in understanding.

In a previous chapter we considered the judgment seat of Christ. At this judgment only believers were present. They are not to be judged for sin or anything to do with sin. The sin question was for them forever settled when they first believed on Jesus Christ their Lord. Their judgment is for rewards. As the scripture states, if any man's work abide, he shall receive a reward. The conception is of a dais upon which the rewarder sits to award the prizes and to whom the victors come to receive their awards much as the prizes are given in ancient and modern games. This judgment for rewards is at the time of the coming of the Lord, which appears certain from Rev. 22:12: "Behold, I come quickly; and My reward is with Me to give to every man according as his work shall be."
The next great assize is the judgment of the nations, which we have considered in some detail in this chapter. The time of this judgment is stated as being when the Son of man shall come in His glory. Matt. 25:31-32. The people to be judged are the nations then living on the earth. These unregenerate men and women are not being judged for their faith in Christ or even for their acceptance or rejection of Him. Their judgment concerns their attitude toward Christ's brethren. We have already made it clear that Christ's brethren are those who do the will of God and not the Jews, as is generally believed. Those people and nations who have shown favor to Christ's brethren, even though they had not themselves come to a knowledge of His grace, will be addressed by the words, "Come, ye blessed of My Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you." If on the other hand they have persecuted the saints, as so many nations have done, they will hear the dreadful words, "Depart from Me into aionian destruction (or cutting off)." Some of these will immediately perish in the manner Zechariah has described, but others will have opportunity to enter the kingdom to undergo correction, not as people blessed as the others, but as people under a curse similar to the curse the Jew has endured in this age, though possibly more severe.

With the judgment of the nations the new age, the kingdom age, which will last one thousand years, begins. Rev. 20:1-6. Old conditions will have passed away and the world will continue, not under the rule of carnal man, but under celestial rule with Christ as Lord and King. War will be abolished and universal peace will be established and God's will will be done in all the earth. All things that offend will have been gathered out of the kingdom and cast into the fire. The whiskey traffic will end. The filthy movies will be no more. Tobacco will not be grown for its present use. Red light districts and gambling halls will vanish from the earth. War will be gone. Frost, hail, drought, disease and injustice will be no more. The wild nature will leave the animals, and nothing shall hurt nor destroy in all God's holy mountain (the mountain refers to the government), for the knowledge of the Lord will fill the earth as the waters cover the sea. Satan himself will be bound for the entire thousand years and will no more tempt the inhabitants of the earth until the thousand years are finished.

At the end of the thousand years he is loosed for a little season and will once again go forth to deceive the nations. Because millions will not have accepted Christ even in this glorious millennial age, Satan, being loosed a little season at the end of the kingdom age, will find a following as numberless as the sands of the sea, ready to make one last brief effort to overthrow the King of kings. Rev. 20:7-9. Then will follow the resurrection of all the unrighteous dead of all ages since man has inhabited the earth. These will stand before the great white throne judgment. Their judgment will depend upon whether or not their names are in the book of life, and whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast in the lake of fire, which is the second death. After this judgment a new age begins, which scripture names the dispensation of the fullness of times. In this final age all things in heaven and earth will be gathered into Christ. These things we will discuss in the final chapter.

In so great a subject as this wherein so much is involved over so great a period of time, it is difficult to know which part of it should be discussed first lest we lose the proper sequence of events. The devout reader in his studies must certainly have been made aware that a mighty, divine plan, stretching from eternity to eternity, has been unfolding before our eyes, a plan through which all mankind, every man in his own order, is coming to know God and be gathered into Christ. Terrible as these great judgments are and fearful as will be the wailing and gnashing of teeth for those who have rebelled against the love of God, it is certain that through the fires of judgment God will reveal Himself to all mankind just as the scripture has stated, "For when Thy judgments are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness. Let favor be shewed to the wicked, yet he will not learn righteousness: in the land of uprightness will he deal unjustly, and will not behold the majesty of the Lord." Isa. 26:9-10.

The greatness of God's plan unfolding before our eyes like a mighty scroll will end at last with that triumphant scene so dramatically described by John wherein "every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever." Rev. 5:13.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD

The purpose of God may be likened to a thousand rivers, all flowing majestically into one vast ocean, and surely that ocean must be the kingdom of God. The apostle Paul, summing up the many things that bring completion to God's plan for these ages, made this all-embracing statement: "Then cometh the end, when He (Christ) shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when He shall have put down all rule and all authority and power For He (Christ) must reign, till He hath put all enemies under His feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death, for He (God) hath put all things under His (Christ's) feet. But when He saith all things are put under Him (Christ), it is manifest that He is excepted (God), which did put all things under Him (Christ). And when all things are subdued unto Him, then shall the Son also Himself be subject unto Him (the Father) that did put all things under Him that God may be all in all." 1 Cor. 15:24-28. Weymouth translates this scripture thus: "After that comes the end, when He is to surrender the kingship to God the Father, when He has abolished all other government and all other authority and power. For He must be King until He has put all enemies under His feet. The last enemy that is to be abolished is death; for God has put all things under His feet. And when He says, 'All things are put under,' obviously this does not include Him who has put them all under Him. But when all things have been put under Him, then the Son Himself will also come under Him, in order that God may be all in all."

It is impossible to speak with too much fervor or to be too abundant in our praise of the excellent glories that will be in that millennial reign of Christ, which is even now at our doors. Then He shall reign with the manifested sons of God to bring about an entire dispensation of peace and equity in which man shall learn war no more and nothing shall hurt or destroy in all God's holy mountain. That wondrous age, described by prophets and apostles who in the Spirit were carried beyond the darkness of this present age into realms celestial, supercedes all the dreams and visions of mankind. Dreams cannot picture a world so fair; sorrow and death may not enter there. There warriors beat their swords into plowshares. No longer will they train in the arts of bloodshed. There they will learn war no more nor ever again in anger lift up a sword. There wolves lie down with lambs and lions eat straw like oxen, and nothing shall hurt or destroy in all God's holy mountain, for the knowledge of the Lord shall fill the earth as the waters now cover the seas.

That glorious kingdom of Christ will be as literal as any kingdom that has ever been on earth, as literal as the kingdoms of David and Solomon, but it will exceed those kingdoms in justice and glory as the glory of the day exceeds the night. The kingdom of God will be as high above the empires of men as heaven is high above the earth. None of the curses of human government will be there to mar that age, and no blessing will be missing.

It would be a most beautiful thing if all the saints of the Lord could have an open vision that would enable them to understand how all those rivers of purpose we spoke of above are harmoniously flowing toward one divine and eternal fulfillment. The problem seems to be that men get hung up on one theme. One sees God's plan of redemption running like a river through the pages of holy writ, but so often he sees nothing more. Another man sees God's purpose for Israel and he tends to spend his life harping on that one theme and that alone. Still another lays hold on the truths of the law and there at Sinai he spends his life, never getting beyond the outward demands of the Law of Moses. Yet another lays hold on prophecy, spending his life trying to unravel its mysteries. Another sees the great truth of the restitution of all things and spends his life hoping to prove this very important theme. But unless we are able to see that all these blessed streams of truth are part of one river, flowing harmoniously into one immense purpose, then surely we have failed to see any purpose at all. We become blind leaders of the blind, staggering toward the ditch of ignorance and misunderstanding.

The more we study the Bible and the more we see its themes unfold, the more we will discover that its many truths are in fact but one truth. They are like the countless threads of a garment that, though they be so many, they fashion but one garment. They are like the stitches of a seamless robe that dare not be divided lest the whole garment disintegrate.

I shall not hesitate to explain to you, my brethren that our omniscient and omnipotent Father has but one eternal purpose. That one purpose is to establish and extend the glory of His heavenly kingdom into the farthest reaches of His universe where God Himself shall be all and in all. In the end (if such a term may be used) His kingdom will have extended itself both over the earth upon which we dwell and over every planet and galaxy in every other universe in all the endless celestial sphere.

Well do I remember listening with awe and wonder as a learned astronomer lectured on the wonders of our own galaxy. He pointed out with eloquence that there were something like two hundred fifty million stars in our own galaxy and then with a breathtaking touch of inspiration he said, "And there are enough galaxies in the universe to give one galaxy to every man and woman who has ever been born. Such all-embracing majesty is far too vast for my frail understanding and what can I do but sigh with David, "When I consider Thy heavens, the work of Thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which Thou hast ordained; what is man, that Thou art mindful of him? and the son of man that Thou visitest him?" The answer to that intriguing question never did find a complete answer until the inspired Paul unfolded its hidden mystery for us in the following words: "Unto the angels hath He not put into subjection the world to come, whereof we speak. But one in a certain place testified, saying, What is man, that Thou art mindful of Him (meaning, what hast Thou in mind for man)? or the son of man, that Thou visitest him? Thou madest him a little lower than the angels; Thou crownedst him with glory and honor, and didst set him over the works of Thy hands: Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet. For in that He put all in subjection under him, He left nothing that is not put under him. But now we see not yet all things put under him (man). But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor; that He by the grace of God should taste death for every man." Heb. 2:5-9.

This, I aver, is God's plan for the government of the universe when the time is ripe for it. Man in Christ, man in God's image, is God's government in the kingdom of God. Was not this magnificent purpose burning in the heart of the Most High when on a creative day He proclaimed the mysterious fiat, "Let Us make man in Our image and after Our likeness and let Us give him dominion?" Then in shadowy symbols He painted a picture of a universe ruled by man in God's image, saying, "Let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth." Gen. 1:26, In this shadowy type we behold a vivid portrait of the purpose of God for man, that when man comes fully into God's image, he shall be, first, the ruler of things beneath; next, the things upon the earth, and lastly, the things of the heavens also. One may not fully embrace so great a truth from so small and insignificant a type, but it was upon this very Edenic type that the prophet David enlarged when by the Spirit he said, "When I consider Thy heavens, the work of Thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which Thou hast ordained; what is man that Thou art mindful of him? or the son of man that Thou visitest him? For Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honor. Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of Thy hands; Thou hast put all things under his feet: all sheep and oxen, yea, and the beasts of the field; the fowl of the air, and the fish of the sea, and whatsoever passeth through the paths of the seas. O Lord our Lord, how excellent is Thy name in all the earth." Psa. 8:3-9. As I have stated above, it was the writer to the Hebrews who finally enlarged this parable of man's God-given dominion that we might see that the worlds to come were not to be governed by angels, but by man who had come into the glorious image of Jesus Christ, who is Himself the express image of the Father.

When the saints who read these things consider the infinite expanse of God's purpose and the exceeding glory He is laying up in store for those who love Him, how readily do we strip for the race that lies before us, looking unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith. Jesus also, in like manner beholding the joy that was set before Him, endured the cross, despised the shame, and is now at this very moment seated at the right hand of the majesty on high. Already He has taken His place on the throne, where He awaits with joy the preparation of all His younger brothers, who also are sons of God. These, too, have seen the joy set before them, and they, like Him, are running this difficult race with infinite patience and awesome endurance. They would be forced from their arduous course in a moment were it not that they, seeing the prize that is set before them, seek their strength from God and, having received His strength, harder press toward that mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Run the race with patience, my brother, my sister. The prize before us is the glory and honor that He has store laid up for those who love Him, how readily do we strip for the race that lies before us, looking unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith. Jesus also, in like manner beholding the joy that was set before Him, endured the cross, despised the shame, and is now at this very moment seated at the right hand of the majesty on high. Already He has taken His place on the throne, where He awaits with joy the preparation of all His younger brothers, who also are sons of God. These, too, have seen the joy set before them, and they, like Him, are running this difficult race with infinite patience and awesome endurance. They would be forced from their arduous course in a moment were it not that they, seeing the prize that is set before them, seek their strength from God and, having received His strength, harder press toward that mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Run the race with patience, my brother, my sister. The prize before us is the image of God, and to all who come into that same image the crown will be given, even the crown of Him who reigns over the things beneath, the things upon, and the things above.

O how I wonder at the folks who care not a straw for such an inheritance as this? How I marvel that they can carelessly say, "Just so long as I am saved, that is all I care." Well, brother, if you want all your works to be burned up in the fires of the judgment seat of Christ, then that is your pitiful decision, but, as for me, I shall seek ever increasing grace that I may have an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.

God is unchanging, but that does not mean that He is static. Though He is immutable, He is eternally progressive. The acorn contains within its tiny self all the elements of the giant oak that centuries from now will tower upon the spot where it fell into the ground. The infinitesimal protoplasm planted in the womb contains all the elements of the strong man who will one day walk abroad and govern the earth. Thus our heavenly Father plants the seed of the kingdom in the hearts of feeble men, for "the kingdom of God is within you." From its small beginning of dominion over birds and beasts and fishes it develops and grows until the man in God's image is given dominion over all things everywhere, whether it be beneath the earth, upon it, or in the multiplied billions of worlds in the celestial spheres. He plants the kingdom of God in the human heart, the earth which we are, while we pray in blessed hope, "Thy will be done in this earth which I am. Set up Thy throne, O God, in me and reign supreme in the kingdom of my heart. Rule my flesh. Rule my spirit. Rule my mind. Conquer me and the enemies within me, the world, the flesh, and the devil, the carnal mind and the corruption of the old man. Rule here within me and grant me the mind that was in Christ Jesus. Let His mind be my mind that I may be a son of God. Let His attitudes be my attitudes, His power my power, His grace my grace, His kingdom my kingdom. Thy will be done in me." "Let me not leave thee, nor return from following after thee, for whither thou goest, I will go. Where thou lodgest, I will lodge. Thy people shall be my people and thy God my God. Where thou diest, I will die, and there will I be buried. The Lord do so to me and more also if aught but death part thee and me."

This is the attitude of true sons of God, my beloved. Nothing less than this will ever suffice. I am appalled at the pride and arrogance that presumes to sonship, imagining that God will walk with proud and scornful men. I am amazed to find thousands of Christians who still imagine they can remain an integral part of the Babylon church system and still attain to sonship in Him. Have you ever heard the Holy Spirit's call to sonship? Then listen while He speaks to you. "Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." 2 Cor. 6:17-18.

It was not I who made that demand. These piercing words of truth are not a concoction of my imagination. These are words of truth and soberness, spoken by the Holy Spirit to men and women who long to be sons and daughters of God Almighty. Men will never attain to sonship while they remain a slave within that system which in arrogance and pride calls itself the church, when it is not the church at all, but a blinding, restricting confusion that holds men's spirits in such bondage to traditions that they can never see the glory of God nor His purpose for their lives. It is only after their feet are shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace and their loins girt about with the robe of Christ's righteousness that they rise up to follow Him that their chains fall off. Then the prison doors open on their rusty hinges and they behold a world of freedom and revelation beyond the confining walls of denominationalism and human tradition. Within those towering walls and massive gates of the law sit, poring over the letter of the word, but never beholding the spirit of truth. Unto them our Lord speaks today as He spoke in the long ago, "Woe unto you, lawyers! for ye have taken away the key of knowledge: ye entered not in yourselves, and them that were entering in ye hindered." "Entering in" is the key of knowledge, and if we take that key away, we lose all hope of further progress with God.

Many years ago as a young man of twenty-one I joined an evangelical denomination and became one of its ministers. A few years later they ordained me. How well I remember that I was given a questionnaire to fill out and sign. One of the questions asked read like this: "If at some future time you see some light not accepted by this denomination, are you willing to quietly withdraw?" To this I willingly gave my consent, because, thought I, such wonderful people as these would never reject light, but would willingly embrace it that they might progress with God. But after some years went by, I was to learn the sad lesson that such was not the case. The key of knowledge had long ago been laid aside and when light dawned and greater understanding came, it was not only promptly rejected, but evil spoken of as well without even an investigation. With earnestness I speak the truth, my brother. It is not enough that we hear the truth. It is not even enough to investigate the truth. There must be a willingness to search and let the light of Christ shine into the heart. There must be a readiness to humble ourselves in the sight of the Lord. You see, brother and sister, when a new dimension of light is given, it always demands an adjustment of everything we once knew. The man who all his life has thundered the law from Sinai's mount will have to somewhat lower his tune after he has stood with Christ at Calvary, for there he finds God removing His law from tablets of stone to write them upon fleshly tables of the hearts of new born men, who no longer keep the law because they cringe in fear, but because the law of God has become their nature, being written in their hearts. No longer do they try to love God contrary to nature, but now, because they possess the nature of God, love flows like a river from the heart.
The man who has depended upon his wisdom must, if he would attain to the wisdom of God, admit that he knows nothing. The man who is a power among men must become helpless and weak if he is going to be filled with the power of the Holy Ghost. Did not Paul teach us all these things when he said, "Though I might also have confidence in the flesh. If any other man thinketh that he hath whereof he might trust in the flesh, I more: circumcised the eighth day, of the stock of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, an Hebrew of the Hebrews; as touching the law, a Pharisee; concerning zeal, persecuting the church; touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless. But (but, but) what things were gain for me, those I counted loss for Christ. Yea, doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ, and be found in Him, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith: that I may know Him, and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings, being made conformable unto His death; if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead." Phil. 3:4-10. Then in verses 13 and 14 he says, "Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things that are behind, and reaching forth unto those things that are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

We cannot progress with God without increasing truth and we cannot see the ever progressing, ever growing truth without the spirit of revelation. The Lord will not give us great light while we remain within the walls of denominationalism because their doctors and lawyers will crush the egg, destroying the life within before ever it is hatched. You may dispute my point if you wish, my brother, but right at this very moment even a blind man can see that, instead of the denominations pressing on from light to light, they are taking massive strides back into the darkness and bondage of Rome. Into the pit from whence they were once digged, they are now falling again.

The mail has just arrived and among the many letters that have come one dear brother from San Diego writes these words of wisdom, which I take the liberty to quote to you now. "You may learn the whole Bible by heart and speak to any point in divinity according to text or letter and yet know nothing of God or of spiritual life. If you be always handling the letter of the word, always licking the letter, always chewing upon that great thing you have, no marvel you are such starvelings. The letter is the husk; the word, the spirit, is the kernel. The letter is the earthen jar; the spirit is the manna. The letter is the shadow; the spirit is the substance. The letter is the sheath; the spirit is the two-edged sword. The letter is the hard, encasing bone; the spirit is the inward marrow that nourishes the soul. If you once know the truth experimentally after the Spirit, you will no longer make such a stir about forms and externals as if that were the great and only reformation. The true cause of spiritual dryness is that men strive and contend so much for the letter and the external part of God's worship that they neglect the inward and internal altogether." That is an exposition of truth. Everywhere we see billions being spent on outward show, fine buildings, comfortable pews, lettered and famous preachers, programs and schemes of every imaginable description. It is not difficult therefore to understand why the spirits of so many Christians are as wizened as prunes and as dry as toothpicks. All this outward show is but a sepulcher void of spirit and full of dead men's bones.

In the nineteenth chapter of Luke, verse eleven, Jesus sought to correct an erroneous view of His kingdom. Many of them apparently thought that the kingdom of God would immediately appear. To correct this wrong understanding He spoke a parable, the meaning of which would be readily understood by any Israelite. He spoke of a certain nobleman who journeyed into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom and then return. Before he departed, he called his ten servants and delivered unto them ten pounds, and said, "Occupy till I come." But his citizens hated him, and sent messengers after him, saying, "We will not have this man to rule over us."

It should not be difficult to understand that the ten servants referred to here are the ten tribes of the house of Israel, who had long ago thoroughly rebelled against the Lord. They had refused to have the Lord reign over them and under the wicked king, Jereboam, had worshipped idols and served other gods. I do not propose to explore this subject now except to make clear that the idea of a great kingdom in which God Himself should reign as King was not a thought that began with the preaching of John the Baptist and Jesus. The kingdom does not suddenly appear. The seeds of God's kingdom were planted ages ago.
I now venture to propose that the very first mention of the creation of man in the image of God is the Lord's declaration of a kingdom in which man in God's image would rule the world. The heavenly decree, "Let Us make man in Our image and after Our likeness and let Us give him dominion," is without doubt the first proclamation of the kingdom of God.

There are four prerequisites to the establishment of a kingdom. First there must be a land. Secondly, there must be citizens. Thirdly, there must be a king and, fourth, there must be laws to govern the kingdom. In Eden the land is a garden, the citizens were Adam and Eve, the King was the Lord, and the law was, "Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat: but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shall surely die." Gen. 1:17-18. From this minute, almost infinitesimal, beginning we should be able to see that God's intention to establish a kingdom was uppermost in His thought. Wonderful as was this garden kingdom, it could not continue for long because man could not be trusted to reign until he had first been proved through temptation and thus come to fully know good and evil experimentally. Our God will never give the reins of His kingdom to untried and imperfect people. When at last the kingdom of God appears on earth in all its magnificent glory, it will be given into the hands of the sons of God, saints who have risen all the way up through the ranks of trial and temptation to the "in Christ" realm of perfection. Jesus Christ Himself will be the head Son, the eldest of the family of brothers, the beginning and first born from the dead. He has already been made perfect through suffering and, by the time the Lord is ready to establish His heavenly kingdom on earth, all the other sons of God, intrinsic members of His mystical body, will likewise have been perfected through suffering. The innocence of Adam and Eve was not sufficient to assure eternal righteousness, for in a moment of trial they fell and the kingdom fell with them.

We cannot over-emphasize the importance of trial, tribulation, and affliction or the value of our perfection and spiritual growth that accrues through grief and suffering. "He who hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin." It will be the sinless people and they alone who reign with Christ in His kingdom. To place a man in authority who had not been tested under the most tortuous conditions is to make a fatal mistake and it is a mistake our God will never make. He who is to rule must first learn to be ruled. Have you ever noticed how well, meaning politicians, full of excellent intentions for the welfare of the nation, become corrupt during their term of office? Very few indeed ever escape that corruption. They fall prey to bribes, do tricky things, tell lies and corrupt themselves in many ways and then try to justify themselves by pretending they acted in the best interests of the people. A man who is not sinless and in whom the carnal nature has not been fully crucified and eradicated would soon ruin the kingdom of God if he were in authority.

The dreadful story of God's rejection was told in Eden just as it was told in the parable of the ten servants. The inhabitants of Eden rejected their King, disobeyed His laws, and through their deeds proclaimed, "We will not have this man to rule over us.

The next appearance of the kingdom of God was at Sinai, Four hundred and thirty years before Sinai the Lord had called Abraham from Ur of the Chaldees to make of him a great nation. From Abraham the twelve tribes of Israel descended and now, after much suffering and many trials in Egypt, they stood at Mt. Sinai to again be offered a kingdom in which God would reign. Here, as in Eden, the essential elements of the kingdom appear, the king, the people, the Promised Land, and the laws of God to govern them. When the fiery law of God was given to them at Sinai, Exod. 20, they proclaimed their willingness to walk in obedience, but, even while Moses tarried in the mount, they made a golden calf and worshipped it. Thus in spite of their good intentions they still were carnal, unregenerate men, certain to follow their own lusts, break God's law, and reject Him from being king. Israel at that moment became the world's first and only theocracy, the first great nation to ever have God as their king. For forty years the Lord led them, fought their battles, provided them daily with angels' food, which they ate in the form of manna. Though some three million of them wandered in the wilderness for forty years, there was not a feeble person in all their tribes. Psa. 105:37. No sickness, no madness, no doctors, no hospitals, no pharmacies, no crutches and no ambulances were ever known among them. One thing was lacking and only one, and that was a spiritual entity. Because their hearts were unregenerate and unconverted, they were always prone to lust after evil things and reject the Lord their God. They still went astray continually and in their hearts turned back into Egypt. Even so God remained their king and the theocracy prevailed until the days of Samuel the prophet.
"And it came to pass, when Samuel was old, that he made his sons judges over Israel. And his sons walked not in his ways, but turned aside after lucre, and took bribes, and perverted judgment. Then the elders of Israel gathered themselves together, and came to Samuel unto Ramah, and said unto him, Behold, thou art old, and thy sons walk not in thy ways: now make us a king to judge us like all the nations. But the thing displeased Samuel, when they said, “Give us a king to judge us. And Samuel prayed unto the Lord. And the Lord said unto Samuel, Hearken unto the voice of the people in all that they say unto thee; for they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected Me, that I should not reign over them.” 1 Sam. 8:1,3-7.

So here we have it again! God, their King, is rejected and in His stead an earthly monarch chosen so that they would no longer be a theocracy with God as their king, but an earthly monarchy like all the heathen nations around about them. It is interesting, but pitifully sad, to notice that, when Israel demanded a king, Samuel thought they were rejecting him. The people thought they were rejecting Samuel's two dissolute sons, but God alone knew what the truth really was. He knew they were rejecting Him. Therefore He said to Samuel, "They have not rejected thee, but they have rejected Me, that I should not reign over them." How deceitful is the heart of man! It is deceitful and desperately wicked, and who can know it? What plausible arguments carnal men produce as excuses for rejecting God's ways and what dire results are certain to follow!

Now notice a most remarkable thing. If you can believe it, you will understand the basic cause of all the distress and turmoil that have followed the Israel nations from the day they rejected the kingdom of God until the tumultuous days in which we live. Though the Israel nations have been peculiarly blessed because of the covenant made to Abraham and his seed and they are beloved for their fathers' sake, yet endless woes and tribulation have beset us in the past and will continue to beset us until the day when the kingdom of God appears on earth, Jesus Christ then being Lord of all and all the world under His control. "I saw in the night visions, and, behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought Him near before Him. And there was given Him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve Him: His dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and His kingdom that which shall not be destroyed." Dan. 7:13,14.

After Israel had rejected God as their king, as told in 1 Sam. 8, Samuel was instructed by the Lord to call the people together and show them the manner of the king that should reign over them (1 Sam. 8:10) and thus the manner of the kingdom (1 Sam. 10:25) that would endure from that time on till man's rule would be no more. Let us make no mistake here. These words of Samuel, which we shall now read, comprise a great prophetic utterance, informing the Israel people of the woes they would suffer from that time forward through the ages until that great day of Christ's coming when He shall be crowned King of kings and Lord of Lords and He shall reign upon the throne of His glory over all the earth.

"And Samuel told all the words of the Lord unto the people that asked of him a king. And he said, This will be the manner of the king that shall reign over you: He will take your sons, and appoint them for himself, for his chariots, and to be his horsemen; and some shall run before his chariots. And he will appoint him captains over thousands and captains over fifties; and will set them to ear his ground, and to reap his harvest, and to make his instruments of war, and instruments of his chariots. And he will take your daughters, and to be cooks, and to be bakers. And he will take your fields, and your vineyards, and your olive yards, even the best of them, and give them to his servants. And he will take the tenth of your seed, and of your vineyards, and give to his officers and to his servants. And he will take your menservants, and your maidservants, and your goodliest young men, and your asses, and put them to his work. He will take the tenth of your sheep: and ye shall be his servants. And ye shall cry out in that day because of your king which ye shall have chosen you; and the Lord will not hear you in that day. Nevertheless, the people refused to obey the voice of Samuel; and they said, "Nay; but we will have a king to rule over us." 1 Sam. 8:10-19.

He will take! He will take! He will take! Six times in that brief passage is that obnoxious phrase used. He will take your sons, take your daughters, take your fields, take your seed, take your vineyards, take your menservants, take your maidservants, take your goodliest young men, take your asses, take your sheep and take your servants. Is not this the greedy, devilish attitude of every government on earth today? We are always searching to find the source of the woes in which we find ourselves embroiled, but if we really want to know the source of our trouble, we will find it in these godless governments we have chosen to reign over us and order our lives. Every government on earth is looking for new ways to "take" by means of taxation, much of which is squandered by fools, wasted on luxury, and given in bribes to pervert justice.

This is the manner of the king that rules over us and this is the manner of the kingdom of heaven at the present time. It is a kingdom in which man rules, a kingdom in which the wheat is well nigh choked to death by the tares and thorns that are everywhere. This manner of kingdom will continue to persist regardless of any government or political party that may arise, and it will continue right down to the very day that the kingdoms of this world become the kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ. Then shall He reign upon the throne of David and of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end.

When Jesus Christ commenced His ministry, He began with the words, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Here we have the actual appearance in person of the heavenly king. It was well known to Him that the glorious kingdom reign would not begin at that time. He had not come then to reign, but to give His life a ransom for many. The Jews had long hoped that, when the Messiah came according to the prophecies of scripture, He would come to destroy all their enemies and restore the kingdom of Israel. But, because He came as a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief and came not to be ministered unto, but to minister and to give His life a ransom for many, they could not see how He could possibly be the promised Messiah and, because their hearts were still hard and unregenerate, they promptly rejected Him. Thus the scripture laments, "He came unto His own, and His own received Him not; but as many as received Him to them gave He power to become the sons of God."

You will notice two very distinct scriptures, which prove conclusively that the kingdom of heaven had long ago been the possession of the children of Israel, as I have already demonstrated, though of course it was only in embryo form and by no means complete. Nevertheless, it was among them as we shall see. Jesus spoke a parable concerning a certain householder who had let his vineyard out to husbandmen who in their wicked attempts to possess the vineyard for themselves killed his servants who were sent to them and finally killed his son. Matt. 21:33-41. Then He said, "Did ye never read in the scriptures, The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner: this is the Lord's doing, and it is marvelous in our eyes? Therefore I say unto you, the kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." Verses 42, 43. I think we must agree that, if the kingdom was now being taken away from them, then it is certain that up until then they must have in some small manner possessed it.

Again, after the resurrection of Jesus from the dead, His disciples enquired of Him, "Wilt Thou at this time restore the kingdom of Israel?" Acts 1:6. The word restore recognizes the fact that the kingdom had once been in their possession. These words were spoken to the Jews, who were of the house of Judah. Centuries before this the ten tribes of the house of Israel had rejected their king, but the kingdom of the throne of David had remained with the house of Judah. Long centuries before Christ the Lord had given the house of Israel a bill of divorcement and she was put away as an adulterous wife. Hosea 2:1,2. But the house of Judah never has been divorced or put away. But now Judah also rejected her Messiah King. It was now their turn to cry out in the words of the parable, "We will not have this man to rule over us." Luke 19:14. And so it was that when Pilate asked, "Shall I crucify your king?" they roared out their rebellious reply, "We have no king but Caesar." Thus, they, too, rejected the King, and the kingdom of God, insignificant as it then was, was taken away from them to be given to a nation who would bring forth the fruits of it. Matt. 21:43.

I dare not attempt any detail here, but suffice it to say that that other nation was undoubtedly the repentant house of Israel, for, though they had long ago rejected God, now there was to be at least a partial restoration among them as Simeon clearly indicated in his wonderful prophecy of Luke 2:25-35. He prophesied that Jesus would be "a light to lighten the Gentiles and the glory of Thy people Israel." Verse 32. In the parable of the prodigal son it should be evident to any earnest reader that the oldest son, who remained with his father, represents the house of Judah, but the prodigal son, who strayed away and wasted his living with harlots, is the house of Israel. But it was the prodigal son in his extremity who repented and returned to his father; whereupon the father made a great feast, put the best robe on him, a ring on his hand and shoes on his feet, and said, "This my son was dead and is alive. He was lost and is found." And they began to make merry. This signifies the repentance of the house of Israel, and I think we may say with some assurance that ever since Pentecost God has been choosing sons from among this people who for two thousand years have honored Christ as the Son of God, glorifying His name as such.
With the coming of Jesus Christ, the King and Messiah, a massive, progressive step was taken toward the formation and development of the kingdom of God. For four thousand years there had been some small semblance of the kingdom of God in the earth, but because the hearts of the people were unregenerate and of the earth earthy, they continually rejected the Lord as their King and time and again willfully and arrogantly refused to submit themselves to his reign. When He gave them laws, though they promised to obey, they broke them, and like an adulterous wife they always sought other lovers and opened their feet to every passer by. Ezek 16:25. Hosea 2:5. It is impossible that the kingdom of God should ever be established in such soil as this.

Centuries before the coming of Jesus, the prophet Jeremiah had spoken the word of the Lord to Israel and Judah, because the Lord knew from the beginning that the basic problem with all mankind lay in their desperately wicked, deceitful and unregenerate hearts. Jer. 17:9. Therefore the prophet Jeremiah, looking forward to the coming of Jesus Christ and the new covenant, or the new testament as we know it, prophesied, saying, "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah: not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the days that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which My covenant they brake, although I was an husband unto them, saith the Lord; But this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel:

Jer. 31:31-33. This wonderful prophecy, which foretold the complete change that would take place in man's nature by God's grace, began to be fulfilled when repentant sinners were born again after the Holy Spirit was outpoured upon the waiting hosts at Pentecost. This was the beginning of the new covenant experience spoken of by Jeremiah the prophet. It entailed a complete change from outward endeavor to inward experience. Henceforth the Lord would transform the inner man, placing the kingdom of God within his heart and mind and shedding upon men the very spirit of the kingdom so that God's laws and God's will would be planted in the believer's heart and God's kingdom would become his inner nature. The will of God would be done in the earth, which the believer is, flowing forth as living water from his transformed heart.

Nicodemus came to Jesus, evidently intending to ask Him some question concerning the kingdom of God, but Jesus, who needed not that any man should ask Him, John 16:30, forestalled his query and, before he could ask, gave him the answer he so desperately needed. "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." John 3:3. My friends, Jesus was not telling Nicodemus the way to get to heaven, as the preachers are always declaring. He was telling him of the one and only way by which it would be possible for any man to see the kingdom of God. The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; neither can he know them, for they are spiritually discerned. How then would it be possible for a natural man to ever be able to see, comprehend or understand such a spiritual matter as the kingdom of God? The natural man is by nature contrary to God in all that he is and does. This fact man had demonstrated and proved for thousands of years. The ages had proved that it is impossible for the natural man to see or grasp spiritual entities, but the new birth transforms the natural man into a spiritual man. It changes the sinner into a saint. It takes away the stony heart out of his flesh and gives him an heart of flesh. "You hath He made alive," said Paul, "who were dead in trespasses and sins". We are told that the dead know not anything. How then could a man, dead in trespasses and sins, ever be able to see, understand or comprehend the kingdom of God, since it can only be understood in the Spirit? It is impossible. Therefore Jesus forcefully told this man who was dead in trespasses and sins, "Except a man be born again, he cannot, cannot, cannot see the kingdom of God."

Now he that hath the Son hath life. Therefore, if Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin, but the spirit is life (or alive) because of righteousness. The new birth is a new covenant experience. It is the fulfillment of the prophecy of Jeremiah, "I will put My law in their inward parts and write it in their hearts." Jer. 31:33. After the resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ the world entered into an entirely new age, a new dimension of the kingdom of God, an age which Paul calls "the dispensation of the grace of God." Eph. 3:2. No longer was the law of God to remain written on cold tables of stone, but henceforth it would be written in the fleshly tables of men's hearts. When the Spirit was outpoured, men began to be born of the Spirit. They began to be saved! They became washed in the life-giving blood of Jesus Christ. Their sins and iniquities were washed away. Their hearts were made clean. They were baptized with the Holy Ghost and fire. They began to be sanctified and made pure and holy vessels inside and out. They began to receive the mind of Christ and they became a new creation in Christ Jesus. And they began to experience the heavenly wonder of the kingdom of God dwelling within their hearts. His divine power gave unto them all things that pertained to life and godliness through the knowledge of Him that had called them to glory and virtue. "Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust." Then they began to add to their faith virtue, and to virtue knowledge, and to knowledge temperance, and to temperance patience, and to patience godliness, and to godliness brotherly kindness, and to brotherly kindness charity. Compare 2 Pet. 1:3-7. Now that these God given virtues are all necessary attributes of the kingdom of God Peter leaves absolutely no doubt, for he says, "If these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. ... Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure; for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall: for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." 2 Pet. 1:8-11.

Thus now with all conviction and solemnity I tell you that the kingdom of God is not merely among us as it was with Israel of old, but the kingdom of God is within the saints who are the spiritual inhabitants of the kingdom that is now taking place in the hearts of twice born men. Christ is not yet ruling upon His throne over all nations of the world. That is yet to come, but He is ruling now in the sons whom He is preparing to reign with Him when in the very near future He appears gloriously in the clouds of heaven to put down all human rule and authority and power and to visibly be seated upon His resplendent throne. So saith the prophet: "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." Dan. 2:44.

One day the disciples came to Jesus, saying, "Lord, teach us to pray, as John also taught his disciples." Now I think you will agree that we do all need to learn how to pray; and, if we were frank enough to admit it, we would confess that most of our prayers go unanswered simply because we do not know how to pray. If we would learn that the central theme of all God's purpose is the kingdom of God, then we would strive to make our lives revolve around that eternal purpose. Why is God saving men and baptizing them with the Spirit? Is it not to bring them to sonship and thus prepare them for the kingdom of God where they shall reign with Jesus Christ our Lord? Why is the Lord urging the saints on to mature sonship? Is it not that as manifested sons of God they shall take the kingdom and reign with Christ over the earth? My brother, my sister, all God's purposes for the past, the present and the future revolve around that mighty day of His glorious kingdom. Christians get so selfish, silly and inconsiderate in prayer, forgetting the true purposes of God. They pray for this and beg for that without a thought in their empty heads as to what the true will of God really is. Christians who are suffering seldom give a passing thought to their sonship or maturity. It seldom enters their minds to consider that he who has suffered in the flesh has ceased from sin. Their main ambition is usually manifest in a mighty scramble to get well at all costs and thus be delivered from any thorn in their flesh that might increase their grace.

So, when the disciples asked Jesus to teach them to pray, this is the sample prayer He gave them. "Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed by Thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: For Thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, forever. Amen." Matt. 6:9-13. The first request in that prayer concerns the kingdom of God and so also does the second: "Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven." At the present time the will of God is being done only in the earth, which we ourselves are. The kingdom of God is now "within you." The Lord is now preparing His elect sons for the wonderful day when they shall take the kingdom and reign. The day will come when the will of God will be done, not only in the hearts of the saints, but also in the whole earth in which we dwell. Then all nations and all peoples will diligently serve and obey Him in a most glorious reign of righteousness and peace.

Daniel the prophet had a mighty vision of the coming kingdom of God, which will, when all things are ready, fill all the earth with its radiant glory. We must take time here to record some of the wonderful descriptions of the kingdom, given by inspired men, that our hearts may be assured that no power in earth or hell will ever be able to resist or hinder the coming of that marvelous reign which the Lord God almighty has been preparing from earliest Eden until this very day. The kingdom is nearer than we think. It is as near as the second coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and that, I believe, is even at the doors. Daniel, caught away into the Spirit, wrote these inspired words: "I beheld till the thrones were cast down (that is, the thrones and governments of the world), and the Ancient of days did sit, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of His head like the pure wool: His throne was like the fiery flame, and His wheels as burning fire. A fiery stream issued and came forth from before Him: thousand thousands ministered unto Him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before Him: the judgment was set, and the books were opened." Dan. 7:9-10.

This is without doubt a description of the Lord's throne in glory and of the unspeakable majesty of Him that sitteth upon it. How similar to this is John's description of the fullness of Christ in Revelation, chapter one! There John saw the exalted Christ in the midst of the candlesticks, clothed with a garment down to the foot and girt about the breast with a golden girdle. "His head and His hairs were white like wool, as white as snow; and His eyes were as a flame of fire; and His feet like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace; and His voice as the sound of many waters. Rev. 1:13-15.

All the glory of earthly thrones will fade into darkness, insignificance and nothingness when He appears upon the throne of His glory. All the mighty monarchs of the ages will appear trashy, feeble and insipid, yea, imperfect, irresolute and impure. There will be no need for bloody battles for supremacy, for in the light of His majesty and illustrious glory all earthly kingdoms, governments and realms will fade away into insignificance to melt as snow and ice before the radiant power of the sun. And the whole universe will echo and re-echo with the proclamation of the eternal fiat, "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of His Christ; and He shall reign forever and ever (unto the age of the ages)."

The word of God is by no means lacking in its vivid descriptions of the Lord's coming to set up His throne and reign over the whole earth in a kingdom of magnificent splendor, majesty, justice and equity such as could only endure under the direct rule of Christ Himself. John, who above all men was privileged to see in minute detail the events of the last days of this age, actually saw the unspeakable wonder of the coming of the Lord with all His saints, accompanied by the armies of heaven to take possession of the kingdoms of this world and "put down all rule and authority and power," 1 Cor. 15:24, "for He must reign until He hath put all enemies under His feet." Verse 25.

No words of poet or philosopher could possibly describe the awesome eminence of His coming. Much less then may I, who am so limited in understanding and power of expression. What better, then, can we do than to let the prophetic spirit ravish our hearts in the very words by which scripture itself describes that wondrously awesome event? "And I saw heaven opened, and behold a white horse; and He that sat upon him was called Faithful and True, and in righteousness He doth judge and make war. His eyes are as aflame of fire, and on His head are many crowns; and He had a name written, that no man knew, but He Himself. And He was clothed in a vesture dipped in blood: and His name is called The Word of God. And the armies, which were in heaven, followed Him upon white horses, clothed in fine linen, white and clean. And out of His mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it He should smite the nations: and He shall rule them with a rod of iron: and He treadeth the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God. And He hath on His vesture and on His thigh a name written, KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS. And I saw an angel standing in the sun: and he cried with a loud voice, saying to all the fowls that fly in the midst of heaven, Come and gather yourselves together unto the supper of the great God; that ye may eat the flesh of kings, and the flesh of captains, and the flesh of mighty men, and the flesh of horses, and of them that sit on them, and the flesh of all men, both free and bond, both small and great. And I saw the beast, and the kings of the earth, and their armies, gathered together to make war against Him that sat on the horse, and against His army. And the beast was taken, and with him the false prophet that wrought miracles before him with which he deceived them that had received the mark of the beast, and them that worshipped his image. These both were cast into a lake of fire burning with brimstone. And the remnant were slain with the sword of Him that sat upon the horse, which sword proceeded out of His mouth: and all the fowls were filled with their flesh." Rev. 19:11-21.

What we have just read is a description of the coming of the Lord that will herald the final overthrow of all the blighting powers of human government and rule. He that sat upon the horse was not wielding a sword of steel, dripping with the blood of His enemies, but His sword is that same weapon He always uses, the sword of the
And there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse (Jesse was David's father), and a Branch shall grow out of his roots (Ye are the branches).

The glory, the majesty and wonder of His coming is described as the lightning that comes out of the east and shineth even unto the west. I am by no means sure that the lightning here refers to a flash of lightning, because such lightning does not always shine from the east to the west, but it may refer rather to the rising sun that always rises in the east and shines unto the west. I may be in error in my suggestion, but His coming will not be a sudden and momentary flash of light. It will be the rising of the sun of righteousness with healing in his wings, to shed the rays of light over all the world in His supernal reign of peace and righteousness forever. Those who believe it to be a flash of lightning hold a most beautiful and expressive thought, but be assured of this: when He comes He will come to rid the world of outer darkness in which mankind has groped for so long and fill it instead with the light that is brighter by far than the shining of ten thousand suns.

"Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low: and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain: and the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." Isa. 40:4-5. "And there shall come forth a rod (Christ) out of the stem of Jesse (Jesse was David's father), and a Branch shall grow out of his roots (Ye are the branches). And the Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon Him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord; and shall make Him of quick understanding in the fear of the Lord: and He shall not judge after the sight of His eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of His ears: but with righteousness shall He judge the poor, and reprove with equity the meek of the earth: and He shall smite the earth with the rod of His mouth, and with the breath of His lips shall He slay the wicked. And righteousness shall be the girdle of His loins, and faithfulness the girdle of His reins. The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the falling together, and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed: their young ones shall lie down together, and the lion shall eat straw like an ox. And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all My holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." Isa. 11:1-9.
It is completely impossible to exhaust such a subject as the kingdom of God in these few pages. Indeed it would be impossible to exhaust the subject should we fill the world with our writings. Suffice it now to say that this wondrous reign of righteousness will be the kingdom of God on earth. This is the kingdom foreseen by the holy prophets as they were mightily inspired by the Spirit of God. This is the kingdom for which Jesus taught His disciples to pray, saying, "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth as it is done in heaven." This is the kingdom in which those sons of God will reign for whose manifestation the whole creation groaned and travailed from the day of the transgression until now.

This glorious kingdom of righteousness, like all other ages and dispensations before it, has its own particular purpose to fulfill in the greater plan of God. Just as the ages of promise and law produced chosen people through whom the Lord has accomplished His pleasure, and as the dispensation of the grace of God has been used to produce sons in God's image, members in particular of the body of Christ, so the great millennial kingdom reign of Christ will have its special purpose, and that purpose will be to prepare that superlative wonder of the ages, the New Jerusalem bride of Christ.

The judgment of the nations will take a thousand years to complete. During that thousand year day of the kingdom age, Christ will divide the nations as the shepherd divides the sheep from the goats, and by the end of that age there will be a separation between the sheep nations and the goat nations, even as is evident at this present time. In the kingdom age the bride must be made ready. As the sons of God are the center of the kingdom in the age to come, so the New Jerusalem bride of Christ will be the center of all things in the dispensation of the fullness of the age of the kingdom which is to follow. Eph. 1:10. In that age God's purpose will be to gather all things into Christ, both which are in heaven and which are in earth, even in Him. To that end the New Jerusalem bride will open wide her twelve gates that the nations may have access to the tree of life from God's throne in the midst of the city, and they shall bring their glory and honor into her.

The kingdom of God, in which Christ shall reign in a perfect rule of righteousness, will be a thousand years in its duration. Six times in succession the thousand-year reign of Christ is referred to in Revelation, chapter twenty. The exact length of time of no other dispensation was ever given, for though dispensations have a beginning, they do not have an end. But the reign of Christ in righteousness, as we have feebly described, will endure in glory and power for one thousand years after His second coming in the clouds of heaven, as it is written, "When the Son of man shall come in His glory, ... then shall He sit upon the throne of His glory." Matt. 25:31.

Thus John relates the truth of the kingdom in these words of inspiration: "And I saw an angel come down from heaven, having the key of the bottomless pit and a great chain in his hand. And he laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent, which is the Devil, and Satan, and bound him a thousand years, and cast him into the bottomless pit, and set a seal upon him, that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years should be fulfilled: and after that he must be loosed a little season. And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them: and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years. But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection. Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with Him a thousand years. And when the thousand years are expired, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison."

I am quite aware that some insist that the Bible reference to a period of one thousand years is merely a figurative term that does not actually mean a period of one thousand years. My opinion is that if a thousand years does not mean a thousand years then the English language loses its meaning. It would be just as correct to say that the age of Adam, which was nine hundred thirty years, does not mean that he lived to that age, but that the term is only figurative. There is no doubt that the one thousand years referred to in Rev. 20 has reference to the actual kingdom. By the time the thousand years are fulfilled, all things will be prepared. The bride will have made herself ready. The dispensation of the fullness of times and the restitution of all things will begin.
As the purpose of the church age was to produce the sons of God, so the purpose of the millennial kingdom will be to perfect the New Jerusalem bride of Christ. Thus the purposes of every age are accomplished in God's own time and manner. Nothing can let or hinder the marvelous working of God's aionian purpose. The glory of that one thousand year reign of righteousnes is now at hand. Our salvation is much nearer than when we believed.

Jesus shall reign where’er the sun
Doth his successive journeys run;
His kingdom stretch from shore to shore
Till moons shall wax and wane no more.
To Him shall endless prayer be made
And endless praises crown His head.
His name, like sweet perfume, shall rise
With every morning sacrifice.

THE GREAT WHITE THRONE AND THE DISPENSATION OF THE FULNESS OF TIMES

"The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom and the knowledge of the Holy is understanding."

In dealing with issues so vast and extensive as those we have considered in these chapters on Eschatology, the significance of this scripture impresses our hearts with overwhelming importance. The fear of the Lord is a heart attitude of deepest reverence and holy respect. If the president of our nation or the king of the realm came into our presence, we would rise to our feet in respect of his office to do him honor, but if Jesus Christ came into our presence, we would kneel before Him to do Him reverence. His name is the greatest authority in all the universe. Before His glory angels mighty in power and strength cover their faces and cherubim glorious in holiness cry, "Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of hosts; the whole earth is full of His glory."

Reverence is the very first element of pure religion; it cannot but be felt by everyone who has right views of divine greatness and holiness as compared to his own smallness and impurity in the sight of God. "Reverence is an ennobling sentiment; it is felt to be degrading only by the vulgar mind which would escape the sense of its own littleness by elevating itself into an antagonist of what is above it. He who has no pleasure in looking up is not fit so much as to look down." (Allstrom). Reverence is a sign of great strength; irreverence is one of the surest signs of weakness. No man will ever rise to a great height who jeers at sacred things. Fools in one breath make a mockery of sin and in so doing they make a mockery of God.

No mortal man can stand in the presence of immortality without feeling a profound sense of reverence. Neither can he who is impotent stand in the presence of omnipotence without being filled with awe. How can he who knows not what an hour will bring forth refrain from praising Him who knows the end from the beginning? "Thou knowest my down-sitting and mine uprising, Thou understandest my thought afar off. Thou compassest my path and my lying down, and art acquainted with all my ways. For there is not a word in my tongue, but, lo, O Lord, Thou knowest it altogether. Thou hast beset me behind and before, and laid Thine hand upon me. Such knowledge is too wonderful for me; it is high, I cannot attain unto it. Whither shall I go from Thy Spirit? or whither shall I flee from Thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, Thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold, Thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; even there shall Thy hand lead me, and Thy right hand shall hold me. If I shall say, Surely the darkness shall cover me; even the night shall be light about me. Yea the darkness hideth not from Thee; but the night shineth as the day: the darkness and the light are both alike to Thee." Psa. 139:2-12.

I know of nothing anywhere that will so thoroughly awaken the fathomless depths of reverence for the Almighty as will a revelation of His infinite purpose for the ages. It is my considered opinion that the cause of the blatant lack of reverence we find in the nominally Christian world today can be laid in its entirety at the feet of the present day Babylonish, harlot church system together with the multitude of hireling ministers who occupy her pulpits. The vast majority of these preachers are nothing more than well, paid hirelings, twice dead in lifeless tradition, ceremony and form. Very few of them were ever called by Christ or separated by His Spirit unto the ministry of the Lord. The result is that they know not whereof they speak nor understand whereof they affirm. In their gross ignorance of God and His attributes they have portrayed before the people a deity who is little more than an idol, a God frustrated by the fall of man, an omnipotence who must resort to hasty means that He might salvage some small part of His creation from the quicksand into which they have fallen, an omniscience outwitted and out-smarted by a devilish creature of very inferior wisdom, who has no strength at all except that which is permitted him, not even to lay a finger upon the flesh of Job without permission from the Lord.

Woe to the priests who say not, "Where is the Lord?" Woe to them that handle the law of God but know not God! Woe to the pastors who have transgressed and the prophets who have prophesied by Baal! Woe to the pastors who have become brutish and have not sought the Lord! Therefore they shall not prosper, and all their flocks shall be scattered. Woe to the pastors who have destroyed God's vineyard, who have trodden down His portion underfoot. Woe to the pastors who have built their own kingdoms, crying, "Give! Give to the work of the Lord," but the kingdom of God has no place in their understanding!

My beloved friends, when we are considering God, we are contemplating Him who is eternal in all He is and does. In Him dwelleth all power, the force and resource of the entire universe. There is nothing too hard for Jesus. There is nothing that He cannot do. All things were made by Him and without Him was nothing made that was made. When we consider Him, we are reflecting upon One, the only One in the universe, in whom dwelleth all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge. There is nothing above or beneath that He does not know. His understanding is unsearchable. From the fragile sparrow that falls to the ground in death to the distant secrets of His limitless universe all is known by Him, for all was designed by Him and for Him.

In pondering Him, we are reflecting upon One who is completely immutable, whose unalterable design is the same today as it was on that wonderful morning when the universe trembled at the declaration of His fiat, "Let Us make man in Our image and after Our likeness, and let Us give him dominion..." From the perfection of that sacred design His omnipotent steadfastness has never wavered, faltered or turned. It is impossible that it should or could. Therefore take courage and perfect faith, O understanding heart, and with assurance know that everything extant in this world of ours is steadfastly moving toward the goal of purpose infinite and divine. Every distress, every discomfort, every trial and temptation, every victory and triumph, the blighting curse of war and the blessing of peace, the beauty of love and the ugliness of hate, the power of temptation and the weakness of the tempted, the indiscretion of sinners and the judiciousness of saints, Satan the destroyer and Christ the Saviour, dispensations of blessing and ages of judgment - all these, together with all else in creation, are working together to fulfill an infinite purpose, the purpose of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will.

In contemplating God, we are thinking of Him, all whose works are done in truth, who in every act of judgment shows love and kindness to His creatures. Full well we know that He who kills will make alive again, and He who wounds will heal. After we have suffered a while, He will establish, strengthen and settle us forever more.

Learn this, O fallen man, and a great secret thou shall surely know! Glorious was Adam our father in Eden's lovely garden, full of light, abounding wisdom, ethereal as a spirit and shining in the image of God, yet one thing was missing from his glory, without which no man could ever wholly be in the image and likeness of God. Adam for all his wisdom did not know good and evil. For that reason he fell prey to the noisome pestilence of his temptation. Because he did not know evil, he did not know good either, for nothing in this world is either big or small, beautiful or ugly, hot or cold, good or evil, except as it stands in contrast to that which is opposite to it. He who lacks the knowledge of both good and evil will fall an easy prey to the devil and this vital knowledge, alas, can only be gained by the experience of both good and evil. Innocence is beautiful indeed, but innocence, knowing nothing of experience, falls an easy prey to every harm and snare of the fowler. Because of this very thing the beloved Paul in wisdom wrote that, "strong meat belongeth to them that are of full age. even those who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil." Heb. 5:14. Thus in making man in the image of God, the first great step must be to bring him to the knowledge of both good and evil. For this reason inspiration has recorded the immortal words, "The creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him who hath subjected the same in hope. For the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God." Rom. 8:19-20.
My heart is filled with the utmost confidence that the long, long millennia of trial and testing for man are all part of God's unswerving intention to fulfill completely that which was His original purpose when He said, "Let Us make man in Our image and after Our likeness." During man's long day of trial every imaginable form of human government has been tested - monarchies, dictatorships, socialism, democracy and as many other as there be - but each one in its turn has by experience proved to be, not only a failure, but a noxious evil besides. These failures are not God's failures. They are man's experience by which he learns the evil and corruption of all inventions of human and carnal minds. Only God can govern in righteousness and truth, and, when at last Jesus shall reign with His saints in the kingdom of God, man will have learned from experience that only the rule of heaven is good.

Even in its fallen state we dwell in a most beautiful place. There is an abundance for all and all could live in harmony and peace and good, but human greed, the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, and the pride of life bring to ruin every man who stands in the place of rulership no matter how good his intentions were when he began. Power corrupts. In my opinion the noble men who formed the American constitution when that nation was born did their best to place the republic under the guidance of God and they came as near to establishing a theocracy as it was possible for man to come. "One nation under God" was their praiseworthy creed. They sought the Lord and honored Him in everything they did. But it was not long before those corrupting influences of the world began to raise their ugly heads as they had in Israel of old to circumvent every good intention and rule the country and the people, not for the Lord nor for the benefit of the masses nor for the glory of God, but for the benefit of the mighty money barons. And now that constitution, so well formed and well intentioned, is passed by and evaded in every place where it might have thwarted human greed and ungodliness.

It is very essential that those who study the word of God should always keep the facts of God's eternal purpose uppermost in their minds. If we fail to remember God's first statement regarding the Adamic race, "Let Us make man in Our image," we will undoubtedly lose our way amid the jungle of sin, disobedience, trial, error, ages, judgments, dispensations, resurrections, deaths and second deaths. But if we steadfastly remember that He who has purposed an eternal purpose will in His own way fulfill it and never be turned aside from it, then we will have assurance that the immutable God, who said, "I am the Lord; I change not," is faithfully carrying out His purpose age by age, dispensation by dispensation, judgment by judgment, trial by trial, proving the sons of God in much patience, in afflictions, in distresses, in stripes, in imprisonments, in tumults, in labors, in watchings, in fastings; by pureness, by knowledge, by longsuffering, by kindness, by the Holy Ghost, by love unfeigned, by the word of truth, by the power of God, by the armor of righteousness on the right hand and on the left, by honor and dishonor, by evil report and good report; as deceivers and yet true, as unknown and yet well known, as dying and, behold, we live, as chastened and not killed, as sorrowful yet always rejoicing, as poor, yet making many rich, as having nothing, yet possessing all things.

So often we hear quoted, "God moves in mysterious ways His wonders to perform." Why, then, do God's people so often fail to see that in the carrying out of His eternal purpose the same God continues to move in ways that to mankind are wholly mysterious? Can we not trust Him to know His own business without forever speculating about what He is doing or trying to hasten His steps? Has not the potter power over the clay to make of the same lump one vessel unto honor and another unto dishonor? And does He not have power to remake the vessel that was marred in His hands? Why do men make such a thing about death or dying? Should it be thought a thing impossible that God should raise the dead?

Having settled in our hearts that all God's purposes are immutable, let us next establish our faith in the indubitable fact that the God of the Bible, the Lord in whom we believe, is omniscient. He is all wise. He is perfect in wisdom, perfect in knowledge and full of understanding. In the end we will see that the whole gamut of His eternal purpose from Eden's lovely garden unto the praiseworthy day when Jesus Christ submits a perfected creation to the Father was all planned, day by day, century by century, and dispensation by dispensation by the infallible mind in which abides all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge from every remote part of His limitless universe, for of Him, and through Him, and to Him were all things in their intricate wonder created and made. He is before all things and by Him all things consist. Be assured therefore and firmly established in this faith that such infinite wisdom as His will carry to completeness every edict He pronounced in the beginning when He said, "Let Us make man in Our image and after Our likeness.'
Thirdly, let us settle in our hearts that this same Lord who is immutable and omniscient is also omnipotent. Almighty power is in His hand. He speaks and worlds float out into their orbits. He commands and they stand still. Mighty nations are but dust upon His balances. He breathes upon them and as the morning mists they vanish away. His supreme power, all power in heaven and earth, which is His and His alone, is not straitened nor obstructed by those paltry enemies, which for a moment appear to us as obstacles in the path of His purpose. The real truth is that He Himself created them to aid and assist in the perfecting and purifying of His gold. He has created the waster to destroy, but the waster cannot destroy His purpose. The waster, who to mankind appears to be such an obstacle to faith and progress, is in fact nothing more than a slave, a tool, by which the Almighty carries out His pre-arranged and mysteriously perfect plan. He raises up the basest of men to correct and chastise His people, and, when these base ones have fulfilled His purpose, they vanish from the earth scene as an incubus of the night just as Nero, Hitler, Stalin and thousands of other diabolical beasts have done. All power is at His command. Everything everywhere proves that by His word were the heavens made and all the hosts of them.

"I am the Lord; I change not" is His statement for our faith. He will not fail nor be discouraged until He has set righteousness hi all the earth and in all the great eternal heavens. I find nothing but pity, oft times bordering on disgust, for those preachers who purport to be the ministers of Christ yet possess no more spiritual understanding than to teach that sin, when it appeared in Eden, destroyed God's wonderful plan. If this be so, then God is not omniscient, God is not omnipresent, God is not omnipotent, and God is not love. You lie, Mr. Preacher, when you make such vain statements as these even though you make them in your ignorance. Did not God take all the responsibility for the fall when inspiration wrote the words, "The creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him who hath subjected the same in hope?" How well I remember listening to a radio preacher as he bemoaned the tragedy of Calvary and the death of the Saviour, who died upon the cross! I can still hear him say, "Calvary needed not to be." "O fools and slow of heart," said Jesus. "Ought not Christ to have suffered and to have entered into His glory?" Of course it needed to be, because it was the Father's good pleasure to give eternal life to the world. In Christ was life and the life was the light of men and that life was His blood. He released His blood, that precious blood wherein abode the life of God. When Jesus shed His better blood, precious blood which was divine, the blood of God wherein was life eternal, He made eternal life available to all His creation, for the life is in the blood, and of His fullness have we all received and grace for grace. "I give unto them eternal life and they shall never perish," He said. This life He gave when it flowed forth to be shed abroad on all who believe.

God makes no mistakes, because He is omniscient. He makes no changes in His program, for He is immutable. He never fails in His purposes, because He is almighty, glorious in power, fearful in praises, doing wonders. Settle, therefore, in your hearts that each age as it passes, each dispensation as it unfolds, reveals some new and important phase of God's eternal plan. He perfects saints in one age, then lays them away in the grave there to wait while He perfects others, all to await a glorious hour when together the perfected "dead in Christ" shall arise in God's image, a temple not made with hands.

Four thousand years passed by before the first manifested Son of God was produced. Jesus Christ is the first Son to appear complete in the image of God. He was made perfect through suffering just as every other son who follows will be. He is the head of all the sons. He is the head of that vast family of sons who, when they are complete, will form the Christ body. When a man is born, the head is born first. Then follows the body and lastly the feet. So it came to pass that in the fullness of time God brought forth His first begotten Son, made of a woman, made under the law. Four thousand years of groaning creation waited for His appearance and then the mighty emancipator came. Glorious was His coming and wonderful His life and ministry, yet He was but the firstborn of many brethren.

During the last two thousand years those many brethren, who would appear in His image at the end of the age, have been coming forth from the Israel woman in the wilderness just as John saw the scene enacted in Rev. 12. The manchild she brought forth over two thousand years of time are the sons of God, the saints in Christ. These are the in-Christed members of His body, of His flesh and of His bones. They are the fullness of God's Christ. This marvelous act of God is the wonder of the ages. Throughout the last two millenniums, the church age, the sons of God have been coming to perfection, growing in wisdom and stature and favor with God. As God's work in them becomes complete, He takes them home. Their bodies lie in graves all over the world, awaiting the sounding of the last trumpet. When that last trumpet sounds, its stirring voice will be heard by the dead in Christ as they lie in the dust just as Lazarus heard the voice of Jesus in the long ago. These in-Christed ones will come forth incorruptible, never to know death any more.

I would like to briefly state here that there is a difference between resurrection and being simply raised from the dead as Lazarus was. Lazarus and Dorcas and the son of the widow of Nain were all raised to resume life in their corruptible bodies just as a man desperately ill is restored to his former strength when he is healed. The resurrection of the dead is a different matter entirely. In resurrection the body that was sown in weakness is raised in power. The body was placed in the grave a natural body, but it is raised a spiritual body. It is buried in corruption; it is raised in glory. People whom Jesus raised from the dead were merely restored to their corruptible life and this natural realm. They all died again later on, but those who are resurrected are raised incorruptible and can never again taste death in any form. "They which are accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage; neither can they die any more: ...' Luke 20:35-36.

The next great event in God's order will be the resurrector of the just. Luke 14:14; 1 Cor. 15:51-53; 1 Thess. 4:14-18; Rev 20:1-7. It will include all the elect of the church age, the people whom Paul speaks of as the dead in Christ. It will also include all other righteous people who have lived and died in previous age; with the exception of those who already arose with Jesus at the time of His resurrection. The inspired writer of the book of Hebrews made this plain when he wrote, "These all died in faith, not having received the promises," Heb11:13. "God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." Heb. 11:40. These righteous of ages past have been waiting and watching for the day of our perfection. As ministering spirits they have been ministering to the heirs of salvation, and when the trumpet of the Lord sounds for the resurrection of the dead, all the righteous of all ages and dispensations will come forth incorruptible.

God's people would be standing on firmer ground if they would speak less of what they call the rapture, a word which is nowhere found in scripture, and speak rather of the resurrection, a term made very familiar, especially in the New Testament. The resurrection of the dead is an established Biblical fact, prophesied by prophets, preached by Jesus Christ, taught by the apostles, and seen in vision by the apostle John.

It is my long considered opinion that God's people should all be meek enough to admit the great possibility of their being wrong or misinformed about many details that concern the exact order of future events. While we may conclude that our deductions are absolutely impregnable, the overlooking of some very small detail may alter the whole of our understanding. The wise man wrote centuries ago, "He that is first in his own cause seemeth just: but his neighbor cometh and searcheth Him." Prov. 18:17. So we may present our seemingly bullet proof theories and feel there is no room left for any other opinion, only to discover that we have overlooked a detail that throws a different light on the whole picture.

That the dead in Christ shall be raised incorruptible there can be no doubt. Paul taught this great truth in these words: "Behold, I shew you a mystery; We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." 1 Cor. 15:51-52. Enlarging further on this resurrection theme, he wrote to the saints at Thessalonica in these enlightening words: "But I would not have you ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others who have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so also them, which sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord that we, which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent (precede) them which are asleep. For the Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words." 1 Thess. 4:13-18.

In interpreting scripture we are so inclined to interpret all things with our human understanding. When the word speaks of the sounding of a trumpet, mankind envisages an instantaneous blast akin to the sound of reveille, but such is not necessarily the case. For instance, in Rev. 10:7 we have this significant statement: "In the days of the voice of the seventh angel, when he shall begin to sound, the mystery of God should be finished..." The words begin to sound speak volumes to me because the complete sounding of that trumpet may involve a time of several years. I am confident, however, that this seventh trumpet is the last trumpet. It is the trumpet that signals the resurrection of the just. 1 Cor. 15:51-52. If the trumpet of 1 Cor. 15:51-52 is the last trumpet, then the trumpet that sounds in Matt. 25:31 at the coming of the Lord in glory after the tribulation of verse 29 must also be the last trumpet, for after the seventh trump there can be no other. Without more complete understanding of the matter, I do not wish to dogmatically speculate as to how long a time may intervene between the resurrection of the just and the appearing of the Lord in glory when He comes to the judgment of the nations. My whole concern is not that we should be informed as to every minute detail of this mystery, but rather that we should be watching and ready when the trumpet sounds for our glorious change. Whatever God has planned for this mighty occasion of the ages is exactly what will be, and, should some things be different from that which our understanding has taught us, all will be well and beautiful, knowing that His plan is by far the more wonderful.

It is a comfort to find that, when the dearly beloved Daniel sought the Lord that he might know the details of things concerning the end, the Lord spoke and said, "Go thy way, Daniel; for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end." Dan. 12:9. In like manner also, when John was about to write the things, which the seven thunders uttered, a voice from heaven forbade him, saying, "Seal up those things which the seven thunders uttered, and write them not." Rev. 10:4. Thus there remains a veil of mystery surrounding the second coming of the Lord that is by no means easy to penetrate just as there was a mystery surrounding His first coming long ago. Our Lord Jesus Christ Himself sustained this element of mystery when He spoke these words: "Watch ye therefore: for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cock crowing, or in the morning: lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping. And what I say unto you I say unto all, Watch." Mark 13:35-37.

We are living in the Laodicean period of the church age. A great sleepiness and an obnoxious smugness has overtaken the people of God. Christians are actually speaking the very words of Rev. 3:17, "We have need of nothing," but they, poor, proud souls, know not that they are wretched and miserable and poor and blind and naked. Therefore the Lord will come in an hour that they look not for Him and in a way they do not expect.

Never in all history have so many signs pointed to the coming of the Lord. These signs will undoubtedly greatly intensify and more and more pressure will beset the saints of God with the advent of the coming of the cashless society. Then a perfect arrangement will exist to enforce the mark of the beast, whatever that mark may be and whatever form it may take. See that your hearts be not troubled because of any of these things. The present is a time when we may look to the Lord in faith for His guidance. It will be much better in that hour to know the mind of the Lord than to institute human plans merely in hope of physical preservation. Perhaps this is the time above all others when the words of Jesus should ring very clearly in our hearts, "Therefore I say unto you, Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment?" Matt. 6:25.

Following the resurrection of the just and the judgment of the nations, a new dispensation will begin to last a thousand years. The throne of David will be established in Jerusalem and upon it Jesus, the son of David, will reign. The in-Christed saints will reign with Him. His blessed kingdom will extend over all the earth and will include in itself all the nations who in time past showed kindness to the brethren of the Lord and all those who are left living of all the nations that came to battle against Jerusalem. Zech. 14:16. This blessed kingdom will last for a period definitely stated to be one thousand years. Rev. 20:1-7. During this reign Satan will be confined and all his activities restrained until the thousand years are finished. Because of this the earth will have complete peace. There will be an absence of war and all the curses that now blight the earth. Many details concerning the kingdom should be added here, but had we much more room to write, we could not possibly convey a more concise understanding than divine inspiration has left us in Rev. 20:1-7. Here six times in quick succession the length of the kingdom is definitely stated to be one thousand years. Though many expositors have tampered with these figures in an endeavor to explain them to mean something they do not say, they remain the same and mean one thousand years in spite of all their tinkering.
In the following words, then, an enlightening record of the kingdom is given with that refreshing brevity of which only the Spirit of God is capable. "And I saw an angel come down from heaven, having the key of the bottomless pit and a great chain in his hand. And he laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent, which is the Devil, and Satan, and bound him a thousand years, and cast him into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and set a seal upon him, that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years should be fulfilled: and after that he must be loosed a little season. And I saw thrones, and they that sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them: and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years. But the rest of the dead (that is, the unbelieving, unconverted dead) lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection. Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with Him a thousand years, And when the thousand years are expired, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison." Rev. 20:1-7.

Reading this passage, we have the definite assurance that, first, the kingdom age will be one thousand years in duration. Secondly, we are assured that the saints will reign with Christ during this blessed age just as Jesus promised in the long ago. Thirdly, we learn that Satan will be bound during the entire period of this reign and the nations will not be deceived by him in all that wonderful age. Fourthly, when the thousand years are finished, Satan will be loosed for a brief period of time that the fidelity of the nations toward Christ and His kingdom may be tested.

Many have wondered about the sentence in verse five, "This is the first resurrection," coming as it does after the statement, "The rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished." The words, this is the first resurrection, belong to the thought of verse six and should read, "This is the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power." Verse five is simply telling us that the unregenerate of past ages will not rise from the dead until after the millennial kingdom is concluded.

Every age and dispensation has its own particular design during which some certain divine intention is carried out and accomplished by the Lord. With God nothing is without a perfect design. Everything is accomplished in its own order. This is the Lord's plan of construction. He does not build a building and afterwards lay the foundation. He lays the foundation and then builds the living temple thereon. He does not produce the body and afterward the head. He produces the head first and afterward the body. He does not make ready the bride and then the sons of God. He brings to perfection the sons of God and then the bride. With Him all is order, all is interdependence, and all is harmony. There is a harmony with the ages that is beyond understanding, and with everything that is done in the ages there is consistency, co-ordination, co-relation and symmetry that beggars description. The universe with all it countless millions of galaxies and its unimaginable myriads of stars and planets is likened in scripture to the sweet humming of a well tuned machine (Job 38:31), so we may expect to find this same sweet compatibility in the working out of the plan of the ages.

From the call of Abraham onward the Lord was concerned with the preparation of a covenant people through whom He would carry out His vast and merciful intentions toward all mankind. By means of this covenant people Christ came. To them pertains the adoption (that is, the sonship), the glory, the covenants, the giving of the law, the service of God, and the promises; whose are the fathers, and as concerning the flesh Christ came. These definite and meaningful statements Paul declared in Rom. 9:1-5. They are real. They are inseparable parts of aionian purpose. No arguments of men no matter how clever can dislodge or destroy them.

At the end of the age of law our Lord Jesus appeared as God's Christ and first manifested Son. He is the head of that great concourse of sons who are being formed in this dispensation of grace and have now reached their numerical fullness. Jesus, the Head, is the firstborn from the dead, the first to partake of the resurrection. By the shedding of His blood He gave life to all the world, for the life is in the blood. Gen. 9:4. Eternal life could not be given to the world until His blood, in which life abode was shed in sacrifice upon the accursed tree. There He bore the fullness and completeness of the curse that came through man's transgression, for it is written, "Cursed is every one that hangeth upon a tree." Gal. 3:13. With the shedding of the blood of Christ the life of God was released and that life was eternal. The work of redemption was complete. Therefore He cried, "It is finished." The Spirit of life eternal was poured forth on the penitent hosts and believing men were born again.
and became at once, not only new creatures but new creations as well. An entirely new creation, a creation never known before, came into existence after the life blood was shed, a creation of twice born men, born again of life eternal. That new creation is called the sons of God. They are the in-Christed, the mystical body of Christ, the Head.

The intention of God during this church age, which began at Pentecost, was not to convert the world as the preachers so fondly imagine. His object was to "take out a people for His name," a people for the Christ body, a company of saints who would be especially prepared to reign with Christ in the millennial kingdom to come. God is not interested in bringing all the world to the knowledge of salvation in this dispensation. His intention is to call out an elect people, a people in Christ. The message of sonship permeates the New Testament, and this work will be complete just before the Lord comes.

As this age of grace was set aside for the preparation of the sons of God, so the kingdom age, which will continue for one thousand years, will have as its purpose the preparation of the bride of Christ. Blessed as that kingdom of Christ will be, it is not in that age that God will gather all things into Christ and restore all things. The millennial kingdom is the age for the preparation of the bride of Christ. As Adam was first formed, then Eve, so Christ the Head and the body were first formed and afterward the bride. In like manner as the sons of God will be seen descending from heaven with Christ at the end of this age of grace, so the bride will be seen descending from God out of heaven in unimaginable glory at the end of the millennial age. Rev. 21:10.

The sons of God are the Temple of the Lord. 1 Cor. 3:16. The bride of Christ is the city of the Lord. Rev. 21:10-11. That city is the Holy City, the New Jerusalem. Every stone of that city is a living stone, a glorified Adamic being. Every jewel, every gate, every wall and every street is a living ransomed soul just as every member of the body of Christ, which is the temple of the Lord, is a living stone, disallowed indeed of men, but chosen of God and precious. We cannot fully explain nor understand such an awesome mystery as this, for great is the mystery of godliness, yet the eye of the devout soul sees the temple as a living thing, composed of living saints. In that temple redeemed men, the sons of God, are the pillars and foundations, and Christ Himself is the chief capstone, from whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth growth unto a holy temple in the Lord, in whom we also are builded to become an habitation of God through the Spirit.

At the end of the kingdom age the apostle John was transported in spirit to a great and high mountain from whence he was permitted to see the perfected bride in all her glory. From his lofty vantage point the eyes of John the beloved were ravished with the inerasable sight of the majesty and infinite splendor of the bride adorned for her husband. Not a temple she, as is the body of Christ; not a city of stone or brick as was old Jerusalem, but a New Jerusalem, a living city, a bride beyond compare, a virgin pure and holy, composed of resurrected and immortal saints. Words utterly fail me to describe the intrinsic wonder of such glistening heavenly glory, for ours are but the words of men, but that holy and beautiful city belongs to the perfected state. Now at last the perfection, the image of God, of which Adam and Eve were but a frail and shadowy type, has come, the many membered bridegroom, the last Adam, with the many membered bride, the Holy City, Adam and Eve, the first and the last, in the image and likeness of God.

"And there came unto me one of the seven angels which had the seven vials full of the seven last plagues, and talked with me, saying, Come hither, and I will shew thee the bride, the Lamb's wife. And he carried me away in the Spirit to a great and high mountain, and showed me that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God, having the glory of God: and her light was like unto a stone most precious, even like a jasper stone, clear as crystal: and had a wall great and high, and had twelve gates, and at the gates twelve angels, and names written thereon, which are the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel: on the east three gates, on the north three gates; on the south three gates and on the west three gates. And the wall of the city had twelve foundations, and hi them the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb. And he that talked with me had a golden reed to measure the city, and the gates thereof, and the wall thereof. And the city lieth foursquare, and the length is as large as the breadth: and he measured the city with the reed, twelve thousand furlongs. The length and the breadth and the height of it are equal... And the building of the wall of it was of jasper: and the city was pure gold, like unto clear glass. And the foundations of the wall of the city were garnished with all manner of precious stones. The first foundation was jasper; the second, sapphire; the third, a chalcedony; the fourth, an emerald; the fifth, sardonyx; the sixth, sardius; the seventh, chrysolyte; the eighth, beryl; the ninth, a topaz; the tenth, a chrysoprasus; the eleventh, a jacinth; the twelfth, an amethyst. And the twelve gates were twelve pearls; every several gate was of one pearl; and the street of the city was pure gold, as it were transparent glass." Rev. 21:9-21.

This living city, which will descend from heaven at the end of the millennial kingdom, will be the new capital of the entire world. The nations of the earth who at the end of the kingdom still remain strangers to God will walk in the light of it and, as they are saved (Rev. 21:24), will bring their glory and honor into it. The tree of life is in the midst of the city and the water of life flows from the throne of God in the midst of it. Rev. 22:1-3. The tree of life will flourish on either side of the river of life and the leaves of the tree are for the healing of the nations.

One would certainly be inclined to think that a reign of such unequaled splendor, equity and justice as the world will see during the millennial reign of Christ would have satisfied the world and its inhabitants completely and never again would rebellion raise its ugly head nor would men seek another way. But those who are inclined to imagine such godly submission have under-estimated both the depravity of unregenerate men and the tenacity of Satan in his animosity toward the rule of Christ.

Because our Lord knows all that is in the heart of man, at the end of the millennial kingdom there will be a period of trial to try the hearts of all who dwell on the earth. Settle it in your heart that untried and unregenerate man will never willingly serve the Lord. No doubt many of those millions who lived through the glory and blessing of the kingdom age come to a personal knowledge of Jesus Christ the Lord. We must never forget that in every age all who are saved must be saved by grace through the life-giving power of His blood. It matters not in which dispensation we live. Only faith in His blood will bring men to the knowledge of sins forgiven, to regeneration and the miracle of the new birth. While vast throngs of the nations that entered the kingdom age will be converted and become true, born again disciples of Christ, the evidence is overwhelmingly clear that there will be a number as the sands of the sea who have neither repented nor believed. It is necessary, therefore, that at the end of the age of blessedness all nations should be tested that their faith or unbelief should be made manifest. They will be given opportunity to prove whether they were serving the Lord from their hearts or submitting unwillingly to His rule.

According to Rev. 20:2-3 Satan will be bound, shut up and chained for the entire duration of the kingdom age. He will be bound a period of one thousand years and cast into the bottomless pit. A seal will be placed upon him that he should deceive the nations no more until the thousand years were fulfilled, and after that he must be loosed a little season. Rev. 20:2-3. After the thousand years are expired, we are told, "Satan shall be loosed out of his prison, and shall go out to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them together to battle: the number of whom is as the sand of the sea. And they went up on the breadth of the earth, and compassed the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city: and fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them. And the devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever." Rev. 20:7-10. Thus the millennial kingdom ends in judgment as all previous ages have done.

We should carefully point out that the end of the kingdom age is not the end of the world nor is it the end of Satan or the false prophet. Neither is it the end of time or ages. The very terms day and night and forever and ever prove beyond question that we are still dealing with the realm of time. The expression forever and ever is misleading and throws us into confusion, for, while on the one hand eternity is indicated, on the other hand time is indicated by the use of the words day and night. In this connection a quotation from The Emphatic Diaglott will give help and enlightenment and show us clearly that the millennial kingdom will be followed by another age in which the residue of all mankind will be gathered into Christ. Eph. 1:10. Here, then, is the rendering of Rev. 20:10 from The Emphatic Diaglott. "And that enemy who deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and sulphur, where both the beast and the false prophet were cast, and they will be tormented day and night for the ages of the ages." There is no way of knowing how long a time this will be, but since it unquestionably deals with day and night and ages, it does therefore belong to time and no endeavor must be made to identify it with eternity.

It would not be unreasonable to believe that this most wonderful of all the ages might be at least as long as all the previous ages combined. We read in Deut. 7:9 and Psa. 105:8 that God will keep the covenants unto a thousand generations. When we realize that from Adam until the present day can scarcely be more than one hundred twenty generations, then there still remains a very long period of time in which God will bring to completeness His merciful purpose for the ages. Unfortunately we have been trained to think that the all things mentioned in any one verse of scripture are sure to be fulfilled simultaneously, but a simple analysis of Dan. 12:2 will show that such is not the case. Here he says, "Many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting (age lasting) life, and some to shame and everlasting (age lasting) contempt." You will see that the comma, which follows everlasting life, when compared with Rev. 20:5, represents a period of one thousand years, for there it is clearly stated that the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. The word of God definitely shows that there is a period of one thousand years between the resurrection of the saints in Christ to aionian life and the resurrection of the unregenerate dead after the kingdom age to aionian shame and contempt.

The rebellion under Satan at the end of the kingdom age is followed by the resurrection, or, more correctly, the rising from the dead, of all people who were not raised in the first resurrection. Of these people it is written, "The rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished." We can only conclude that the vast preponderance of the subjects of this second resurrection were unbelievers of all former ages of time, though mention is made of the Lamb's book of life and some who may have had their names in it. In any case they are raised from the dead for judgment, which judgment shall be according to their works.

It would not be possible to describe more vividly the completeness of this rising from the dead than we see recorded here in God's word. The time of this resurrection is after the thousand-year kingdom has run its course. This is clearly stated in Rev. 20:5: "The rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished." And now, after the thousand years have been finished, there comes a second statement indicating the completeness of this resurrection. "And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell (Hades) delivered up the dead which were in them: and they were judged every man according to his works." Rev. 20:13. The definite statement, "Whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire," suggests that there may be some at this resurrection who, though their names were in the book of life, were not counted worthy to attain to the first resurrection. Those who rise at the first resurrection are the dead in Christ. I have long believed that the term "in Christ" indicates the "high calling of God in Christ Jesus." While some have pressed into it as Paul taught us in Phil. 3:10-13, others neglect to do so and never are to be considered true overcomers, and are not, therefore, included in the blessed first resurrection. In any case Rev. 20:15 indicates that there will be some people at the great white throne judgment who have their names in the book of life, but have missed both the first resurrection and the kingdom of God.

The description of the great white throne is found in Rev. 20:11. One cannot read it without a feeling of utmost wonder, apprehension and amazement as the glory of that throne and the presence of Him who sat upon it is revealed in these awe-inspiring words: "And I saw a great white throne, and Him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away; and there was found no place for them." I tremble to comment at all upon a scene, which is so unspeakable in its magnificence and radiant splendor that even the heavens themselves flee away from the face of Him who sits upon the throne. One comment I will, however, venture in reverential fear. This glorious throne is a white throne. It is a throne of absolute justice and perfect righteousness. Those dead, small and great, who stand to be judged before this throne and Him who sits upon it will be judged in perfect righteousness. Here at the white throne men of all past ages will stand to be judged according to their works. Here they will come face to face with those things done during their lives of whatsoever sort they may be. The evil works and dastardly deeds of tyrants long dead will be justly rewarded as every man is judged according to his works. Here no hellish crime will go unnoticed or unpunished. Likewise deeds of mercy and cups of water given in the name of a disciple of Christ will in no wise lose their reward, even though the merciful neighbor had never known the Saviour or heard mention made of His name.

So many writers and preachers love to grasp upon this momentous passage of scripture in hope of proving the awful hopelessness of those who stand at the judgment of the great white throne. O how they love to magnify the thought of endless fire and brimstone, of death and eternal torment! But let me show you that even in this great and terrible judgment there are marvelous evidences of restitution, reconciliation and forgiveness. This is neither the end of time, the end of purpose, nor the end of opportunity as tradition would have us believe. Instead of this being the end of time and the end of mercy, the fact is that it is the beginning of that wonderful age of all ages, which the apostle Paul in his wisdom speaks of as the "dispensation of the fullness of times." It is of this age that the inspired apostle writes these significant words: "Having made known unto us the mystery of His will, according to His good pleasure which He hath purposed in Himself: that in the dispensation of the fullness of times He might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in Him." Eph. 1:9-10. The full extent of the mystery of Christ's redemption is to be completely made known in the dispensation of the fullness of times. In all previous ages the Lord had gathered elect people from among the masses of earth for very distinctive purposes. Under law He created Israel. Under grace He called the sons of God out of Israel. During the millennial kingdom He prepared the bride, who is Israel. And now at last in the fullness of times comes the mightiest ingathering of all, a restitution that will never end until every knee shall have bowed and every tongue shall have confessed of things in heaven and things on earth and things under the earth that He is Lord to the glory of God the Father. Phil. 2:10-11; Rom. 14:11; Isa. 45:23. This is not popular eschatology, but God's word confirms that it is true.

Now notice the gracious words that proceeded from the great white throne. "And He that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new. And He said unto me, Write: for these words are true and faithful. And He said unto me, It is done. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end. I will give unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely. He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be My son." Rev. 21:5-6. What more gracious words than these could ever have been spoken! While preachers are gleefully damning all these people to hell, God is saying, "I will give unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely, and he that overcometh shall inherit all things!"

But what shall we say of verse eight, which has such an ominous sound and from the terror of which I would not detract, no, not a whit? Here we are told that "the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death." It is impossible for anyone to rightly understand what the second death is until he understands what the first death is. It naturally follows that, if there be that which is called the second death, then there must of necessity be that which is called the first death. The first death is not the grave, as is almost universally believed, but is this entire expanse of our existence from the cradle to the grave, which we are fond of calling life. Paul made the following enlightening statement to men and women who were born again Christians. Writing to the Ephesians, he clearly taught them that they were dead, not only spiritually, but physically and bodily as well. With this thought in mind we read the following from Rom. 8:10. "If Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin; but the Spirit is life (alive) because of righteousness." So, then, the sinner in his sin is dead both physically and spiritually, for that is what the scripture says, but the believer who has believed is now alive in spirit. His body is still dead, for, though his spirit has partaken of the life of Christ, his body has not been made partaker of life. Then the word goes on to show that the day is coming when the body also will partake of life just as the spirit has already done. So Paul continues, "If the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken (make alive) your mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in you." Rom. 8:11. Thus it is very plain from this verse that all of our existence outside of Christ is in the realm of death and God does not consider that existence to be life at all, but only death.

Then again was not Adam distinctly warned, "In the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die?" There can be positively no question that this death actually occurred. Adam died spiritually and physically the moment he sinned. The life of God departed from him. He did not merely "begin to die." He actually died and all his existence from then on was in the realm of death. Adam and Eve were not at first naked in the garden. They were clothed with the life and light of God, but when they transgressed, they were denuded of the life of God that had covered them and now they stood naked, ashamed and uncovered. The life of God had gone from them and all that was left was death. As long as we imagine that we are alive until we go to the cemetery, we will fail to see the true picture. The grave is only the final part of the death experience. Our life in the flesh is in reality naught but death.

David once wrote these instructive words: "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil." The valley of the shadow of death is not entered just before the tomb. The valley of the shadow of death is entered the moment we come forth from the womb, and in its shadow we walk until we experience the resurrection life of Christ, for our spirits when we are born again, and, secondly, for our bodies at the resurrection of the just.
Furthermore, Paul, writing to Timothy, spoke of "she who liveth in pleasure." One would naturally think that those who enjoy pleasure in all its forms would certainly be living if any one was, but Paul taught that such is not the case. Rather the opposite is true. Those who are enjoying pleasure to its utmost are in reality dead, for he said, "She that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth." Jesus added this further convincing fact when he admonished the young man who asked to be allowed to go and bury his father before following Him. To this request Jesus answered, "Let the dead bury their dead, but follow thou Me." What was He telling the young man but that the men who carried the coffin were as dead as the man who lay inside it? And that, my brethren, is the truth.

From these few statements of scripture, and there are more which we could consider, we must conclude that this whole realm which we now call life is in fact and in truth the first death. Through it we walk and groan in our mortality, and while we do so, we are always subject to fiery trials that are given to try us and separate us from our sin and carnality.

Since, then, this realm through which we walk is the realm of the first death, surely it should not be so difficult for us to understand what is meant by the term, the second death. Since this realm, which we call life, is in reality only death, then the second death must be a realm similar to this realm of the first death. We of this first death walk through fiery trials that are to try and purify us. They of the second death will walk through what is described as the lake of fire, and the scripture plainly states that the lake of fire is the second death. For this reason it is definitely stated that the fearful and the unbelieving, the abominable, the murderers and the whoremongers, the sorcerers, idolaters and all liars shall have their part in the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death. Rev. 21:8. Rev. 20:14. Once we see that the lake of fire is the second death, rather than some raging inferno into which God has in frustration and anger cast all people He was powerless to subdue, then things begin to make sense. God will have all men to be saved, and to come to the knowledge of the truth. 1 Tim. 2:4. Who is so foolhardy that he dare say He will not? "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order: Christ the firstfruits; afterwards they that are Christ's at His coming. Then cometh the end..." which must mean the end of making all men alive. 1 Cor. 15:22-23.

For our mutual enlightenment I would like to quote here the unanswerable words of C. H. Pridgeon concerning the lake of fire. I am sure you will grasp the wisdom both of his words and of the lake of fire as well. "The lake of fire and brimstone signifies a fire burning with brimstone; the word brimstone or sulphur defines the character of the fire. The word theion, translated brimstone, is exactly the same word as theion, which means divine. Sulphur was sacred to the deity among the ancient Greeks and was used to fumigate, to purify, and to cleanse and consecrate to the deity; for this purpose they burned it in their incense. The verb derived from theion is theioo, which means to hallow, to make divine, or to dedicate to a god." "Even the English word which the translators have given us denotes a substance which is healing and purifying in its effects. The use of brimstone with fire in the manufacture of certain fabrics is well known as a destroyer of parasites. It is the last thing to be used to denote torture, which is the usual idea read into it. Everything combines, then, to warrant the claim that what the Holy Spirit means by fire and brimstone is divine purification, or a judgment fire which consumes all that is antagonistic to divine law and love. Judgment to the end of purification is exactly the thought we have already found repeatedly in the scriptures."

It is therefore into this second death, this refiner's fire, this lake of fire that consumes the dross, that these fearful and unbelieving are cast. But we may have strong confidence in God's word that it will be just as He has spoken and that in this final dispensation of the fullness of times God will gather together in one all things in Christ.

As I have studied the word of God, many things have become very evident, one of which is that any man at any time under any circumstance who saw the Lord or received a revelation of Him had all resistance broken and no more obstinacy or rebellion left in him. All through the ages it has been the same. The most vicious and derelict characters, coming into contact with Christ as did Saul of Tarsus, immediately fall in repentance before Him, crying, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?"
The final dispensation of the fullness of times has a special, prearranged purpose just as all other ages have had. It will be the most glorious of all times. Throughout that wonderful order when the mystery of God is completed, the government of the world and all things therein will flow like a river from the Holy City, the New Jerusalem that came down from God out of heaven.

This age of grace, through which the world has passed during nineteen hundred years and more, has been a time when saints have walked through incredibly fierce and fiery trials. The apostle Peter, foreseeing the tribulation that would come to God's people in this age of ours, mightily exhorted us in these significant words: "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you: but rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings." James further exhorts us, "My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations; knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience. But let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing." Terrible as the fires have been, it is through them that the blood-washed sons of God have been brought to perfection.

The fiery trials of the kingdom age may be much less severe, though even in that blessed realm of righteousness there is evidence of chastisement and correction, but when its end came, the bride was found to have made herself ready. As the age of grace is for the preparation of the sons of God, so the kingdom age is for the preparation of the bride of Christ. When this is done, then the mystery of God is finished. The last Adam will be complete, male and female as in the beginning, and now the bride, the Holy City, the New Jerusalem, having made herself ready, is seen descending out of the heavenlies down to earth to become the abiding place of God's temple. In all the word of God there is no description of anything that can possibly excel the portrayal and characterization of the Holy City. Not even the glory of the revelation of Christ in Rev. 1 exceeds the wonder of this holy, New Jerusalem bride.

With the coming of the New Jerusalem the work of preparation is finalized and the work of reconciliation of all things in heaven and in earth begins in earnest. The tabernacle of God is with men and He will dwell among them. They shall be His people and He shall be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying; neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things have passed away. In Rev. 21:5,6 we hear the voice of Him who sat upon the great white throne, speaking marvelous words of comfort, "Behold, I make all things new... I will give unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely. He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be My son." These are wonderful words, spoken to the people who have been raised from the dead in the second resurrection. The same promises are open to them in that age of the fullness of times as are open to us now in this age of grace in which we live. But I must say that in that wonderful age the opportunities of availing oneself of the blessing of God are much greater than now. In this age only a very small number of the people of earth have ever heard of God or His blessed Son, but in that day it will be different. The Holy City, the New Jerusalem, will be the capital of all the earth, and her light is likened to a stone most precious. Her twelve gates will be open forever and never close by night, for there is no night there. There the pure river of the water of life, clear as crystal, will flow out of the throne of God in the midst of the city, and in the midst of the street of it and on either side of the river the tree of life flourishes, bearing her twelve manner of fruits, and the leaves of the tree are for the healing of the nations entered into this realm. And there shall be no night there, and no curse there, but they shall see His face and His name shall be in their foreheads.

And in that day there will be a message go out to all nations, a message that never was heard in any other age. It will be this: "The Spirit and bride say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely." In that day when the Lord God sits as a refiner's fire to purge away all the dross and rebellion by the Spirit of judgment and the Spirit of burning, the nations that never knew God and never heard of His name will pass through the gates of the city to drink of the water of life and eat of the tree of life. They will bring their glory and honor into it and the leaves of the tree are for the healing of the nations.

Having mused with awe and delight upon the merciful purposes of an all, wise God, begun in ages past, unfolding in the present, to be carried to their ultimate and glorious intention in dispensations yet unborn, with what more fitting words could we bring to a close our brief study of Eschatology than by quoting that blessed epigram of assurance left by that masterful exponent of God's purpose, who, after continually reminding us that we ourselves were saved by grace, avowed that the same grace would continue to be manifest in all future eons and dispensations? "THAT IN THE AGES TO COME HE MIGHT SHEW THE EXCEEDING RICHES OF HIS GRACE IN HIS KINDNESS TOWARD US THROUGH CHRIST JESUS." Eph. 2:7. Amen.
The Bible, the word of God, definitely speaks of an evil day that will come at the close of this present dispensation. During the centuries that have passed many evil days have come and gone, but the apostle Paul sets this final day of evil apart from all others by the use of the definite article "the," saying in Eph. 6:12, "Wherefore take unto you the whole armor of God that ye may be able to stand in the evil day..."

This is the day that was described by Daniel as a "time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation, even to that time." Dan. 12:1. It is the day which was described by Joel as a day of gloominess, Joel 2:2, and by Zephaniah as "a day of wrath, a day of trouble and distress, a day of wasteness and desolation, a day of darkness and gloominess, a day of clouds and thick darkness, a day of the trumpet (war) and alarm against the fenced cities and against the high towers. And I will bring distress upon men, that they shall walk like blind men, because they have sinned against the Lord: and their blood shall be poured out as dust, and their flesh as the dung. Neither their silver nor their gold shall be able to deliver them in the day of the Lord's wrath; but the whole land shall be devoured by the fire of His jealousy:.." Zeph. 1:15-18.

Our Lord Jesus Christ spoke of this evil day as a time of abounding iniquity, a time when the love of many should wax cold. He likened it unto the wickedness of the days of Noah before the flood. That day was one of the most evil of all days, for in it all distinction between the godly and the ungodly had disappeared. The sons of God had looked upon the daughters of men and had taken them wives of all they chose. The earth became filled with mighty men, men of renown even as it is today. "And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually; and it repented the Lord that He had made man on the earth, and it grieved Him at His heart... The earth also was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence. And God looked upon the earth, and, behold, it was corrupt, for all flesh had corrupted His way upon the earth." See Gen. 6. Jesus described that day as a day of eating and drinking, of marrying and giving in marriage, or, more literally, marrying and divorcing. Luke 17:27. He likened it unto the days of Sodom when men were consumed with eating and drinking, planting and reaping; a day when morals had fled completely, for even the women changed the natural use into that which is against nature, and the men, leaving the natural use of the woman, burned in their lusts toward each other, men with men working that which is unseemly, and receiving in themselves just recompense of their error. Rom. 1:26-27. A description of the awful degradation of these people is given in Gen. 19:4-11. Not even the angels of God were held sacred to these vile wretches, for they endeavored to break down the door of Lot's house that they might know them. The degrading sin of Sodom was that they were homosexuals. It is from the vileness of the sins of Sodom that our modern English word, sodomy, is derived. No informed person needs to be reminded that this sin is rampant in our day. Truly Jesus said, "As it was in the day that Lot went out of Sodom, so should it be in the day of the Son of man."

The evil day is characterized by the mark of the Beast, a day of false christs, false prophets and false teachers, a day of signs and wonders, a day of great love of money, a day of rich men who have heaped vast sums of money together for the last day. It is a day filled with peril, for men shall be lovers of themselves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, having a form of godliness but denying the power thereof. 2 Tim. 3:1-5.

In the final evil day a strange and deceptive lukewarmness will bedevil the entire Christian world. The church system will be rich and increased in goods, having excellent buildings, extensive programs, and wealth galore with spiritual emptiness, darkness, and nakedness. "We are rich and increased with goods," they will say, "and have need of nothing," knowing not that the whole system is wretched and miserable, poor and blind and naked. Rev. 3:17.

It would be easier to write about any one of a score of subjects than to write about the evil day, for this is not the kind of truth that men love to hear. There are too few people who are willing to face truth with boldness and consecration. Christians love to hear of things that never disturb their spirits, for their cancerous traditions are deep-rooted and deadly and they dread to be told that there is a vile disease eating at their very vitals and sapping away their life and vitality. They hate to be told that, unless they are delivered from their blinding traditions, they will perish, for this disturbs and confuses them. Why is it that men dread the surgical blade of truth that pricks and cuts and probes until we are delivered from self, from flesh, from corrupting tradition, from good works and bad works, and from a thousand chains that bind and enslave us? From time immemorial men have loved to hear nice things, things that appeal to their ego, persuading them that they have a good standing with God and that they are far on their road to becoming manifested sons.

We are living in an evil day when men are full of good works. Priding themselves before God that they are up and doing. They are winning souls for Christ; they are healing the sick; they are spending vast sums of money to send out missionaries and blanket the world with literature. They have vast radio hook-ups; they appear on T.V.; they are working their fingers to the bone for others, and so it goes on endlessly. But, my busy friend, have you paused in your haste long enough to hear God's voice? Have you ever waited long enough to hear God say "No"? Have you died to your own will? Is God's will your delight? Or do you say, "I want God's will", and then go right on with your own? Would you be content to see nothing for a century as Abraham, or for eighty years as Moses, or for seventy years as Jeremiah, or for thirty years as John the Baptist, or for three and a half years as Elijah? Or must you go steam ahead in your own self-will, determined to carry the gospel to every creature? "Oh," you My, "we have the commission to go into all the world and preach the gospel!" But you are misinformed! That commission was not given to you. It was given to the twelve apostles and to them alone. Have you not read this? "Then the eleven disciples went away into Galilee, into a mountain where Jesus had appointed them, and when they saw Him they worshipped Him; but some doubted. And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, "All power is given unto Me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." Matt. 28:16-19. Then again the same statement is repeated in the Gospel of Mark 16:14-15. "Afterward He appeared unto the eleven as they sat at meat, and He said unto them, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Seeing then that the Holy Spirit has taken great care on two occasions to tell us that the great commission was given to the eleven disciples, is it not the height of presumption to affirm that that sacred commission was given to every Tom, Dick, and Harry who decided to make preaching a vocation?

There is a widespread tradition among Christians that is freighted with fatal error. How often we have been told that God is looking for volunteers for His service. I wish to inform you that this is one of the biggest lies that ever sprang from the deceptive mind of Satan. God does not want volunteers. God only accepts conscripts. Search the scripture from cover to cover and you will find without one exception that every ministry from Genesis to Revelation was called and chosen of God and conscripted to do God's bidding, and, we may further add, that many of these men were chosen against their own will and in spite of their own protestations and objections. Did Moses volunteer for service? Certainly not! He argued that he was not able to speak, that the people would not listen; but he was conscripted. Did Gideon volunteer for service? No! He was conscripted, too. Can you not hear Jeremiah saying, "Ah, Lord God, I cannot speak, for I am a child." Jer. 1:6. Did any of the apostles volunteer for service? Not one! They were all especially called and conscripted by Jesus Himself. Did Saul of Tarsus volunteer for service when he was on his way to Damascus to persecute the Christians? This was the last thing in his mind; but Jesus said. "He is a chosen vessel unto Me to bear My name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel: for I will show him how great things he must suffer for My name's sake." Acts 9:15-16.
Perhaps the greatest single curse of the centuries has been the presumptuous tradition that men and women should volunteer for the ministry of the Lord. Nothing could be further from the truth, and nothing can be more detrimental to the true work of God than to have the church cluttered up with men and women who have themselves chosen the ministry as a vocation. They are not tried. They are not tested. They have not God's burden on their hearts. They have no real love for the flock; and worst of all they have no commission from God. Therefore they lack His blessing and anointing. Well did the Holy Ghost say by Jeremiah the prophet, "In the latter days ye shall consider it perfectly. I have not sent these prophets, yet they ran: I have not spoken to them, yet they prophesied. But if they had stood in My counsel, and had caused My people to hear My words, then they should have turned them from the evil of their doings." Jer. 23:20-22. If you are thinking of entering the ministry, forget it and just go right on picking cotton, or whatever your hand finds to do, until He comes and conscripts you. It will be this volunteer crowd who will come at the last, saying, "Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in Thy name, and in Thy name cast out devils, and in Thy name done many wonderful works." And it will be to them that the Lord will say, "I never knew you; depart from Me, ye that work iniquity (rebellion)." God does not know nor accept the ministry of anybody except those whom He calls and commissions Himself. It would seem to me that it is not even possible for a man to volunteer for salvation, for, while God has said, "Whosoever will may come," He has also said, "No man can come to Me, except the Father draw him, and I will raise him up at the last day." Not many people come to the Lord for salvation because they want to come. They come because the Holy Spirit moved upon them in their darkness and rebellion, convicting them of sin and righteousness and judgment, filling the soul with repentance and contrition before God. Those who go to the altar because friends or relations went before them will also turn away for similar reasons, for God has not spoken to them. "Whom He did foreknow He did predestinate; whom He did predestinate, them He also called; whom He called, He justified, and whom He justified, He glorified." These are God's elect and nothing can ever be laid to their charge.

Let us now consider some of the things, which pertain to the evil day, for it is of great value to discern the hour in which we live and to recognize all things that are coming upon this age according to the word of God.

For many decades and centuries God's people have been speculating about the strange phenomenon the scripture calls the mark of the beast. If we all knew the truth of the matter, there would be no need to speculate at all, but, as humility and confession of ignorance before God is a precious thing, we should therefore be more ready to admit our lack of understanding than to argue for our beliefs. The Lord never reveals anything to Mr. C. I. Knowitall, nor does He forgive the sins of Madam Righteousness, but "He giveth power to the faint and to those who have no might He increaseth strength. He fainteth not nor is weary, and there is no searching of His understanding. The youths shall faint and be weary and the young men shall utterly fall, but they that wait on the Lord shall renew their strength." Granted the mark of the beast may be a tattoo placed on the forehead or the right hand of all who follow Antichrist, but be assured of this: the mark of the beast will be in the heart and mind long before it is tattooed on any head or any hand.

The Jewish priests carried the names of the tribes of Israel on their heart, and they carried the Ten Commandments in a roll on their forehead. As the truth conveyed here is that Israel was to be in their hearts and the commands of God in their minds, so also it is with the mark of the beast. It will be in the mind and in the heart and life long before it ever appears without. Man is always looking on the outward appearance, but God is looking on the heart. Man sees the sanctimonious outward profession of piety and godliness, but God may see a heart full of the world and the spirit of the age. Man admires the garnished tombstone and the whitened sepulcher, but God sees the dead man's rotting bones. The mark of the beast has been in the world for a long, long time, but it becomes increasingly open and evident with every passing day.

The mark of the beast made its first appearance in the Garden of Eden. Our eyes behold its presence with the understanding of these words: "Now the serpent was more subtle than any beast of the field which the Lord God had made." Gen. 3:1. The picture here goes beyond the serpent. Even the dullest and most unimaginative mind catches the thought that the true character involved here is that old serpent, the devil and Satan, who deceiveth the whole earth. Rev. 12:9. Whatever mouthpiece was used to speak to Eve, Satan himself is the one who beguiled her. The serpent was called a beast and the mind of the serpent is the mind of the beast.

Men have vainly tried to satisfy their minds as to what the sin was that Eve committed when she took of the fruit of the tree and ate and gave of it to her husband. Was it the disobedience of eating something God had forbidden, as appears on the surface of the story? Was it that in eating natural food she descended from the realm of life where God lives by the Spirit to the realm of the flesh where men live by bread alone and die in consequence? Or was it a sin of sex that made them so ashamed that they covered their organs of procreation with fig leaves? Frankly, I do not know, but if such knowledge had been important, the Holy Spirit would have revealed it to us. Man is forever probing after the details that appeal to his carnal mind, but missing the point that really matters.

The thing of greatest importance here is not the act they did, but the awful fact that, before ever the transgression was committed, that old serpent, the devil, had imparted his mind to them. The mark of the beast, (the serpent), was in their hearts, in their minds, and in their foreheads, and what they did afterward was the mark of the beast in their hands. It is not difficult to see that the things, which men are doing today and have done in ages past are but the out-cropping of that which is in their minds, for out of abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. A good man out of the good treasure of the heart bringeth forth good things; and an evil man out of the evil treasure bringeth forth evil things, Matt. 12:34,35. The mark of the beast that appears in the hand is the direct result of the mark of the beast in the forehead. We may then be sure that if ever a mark is to be tattooed on the forehead of those who worship the beast, it will be there only because the spirit of the world, the flesh, and the devil is the spirit that dominated their minds.

The mind of Satan, which is the mind of the Beast, is the mind that inspires the ever, increasing confusion that today is running rampant among all nations. This also is the master-mind that dominates the religious confusion of this dark hour. This is the mind that with subtlety injects the question, "Yea, hath God said ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden," and follow the question with the crafty lie, "Ye shall not surely die." Then, after making God to be a liar, he further awakens their curiosity, their doubt, their apprehension, and their ego by convincing them that God is trying to deprive them of some good thing. "For God doth know," saith he, "that in the day ye eat thereof, your eyes shall be opened and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil." After this smooth-talking and friendly salesman had thus cast the mind of God aside and placed in its stead the beastly mind of the serpent, with craft and satanic wisdom he took them sightseeing that they might see that the tree was indeed good for food and much desired to make one wise. Sure enough God had hidden something from them, even as the serpent had said, so, reaching forth their eager hands, they took and ate, and immediately their eyes were opened to know good and evil. Good they knew, but it had fled from their presence. Evil they knew, but it possessed their very souls.

From that day forward even unto this hour man has borne the imprint of the satanic mind, the mark of the serpent, the mark of the beast. That mark in his mind has been manifested in everything he has set his hand to do. Politically he has filled the world with wars and rumors of wars, greed, hatred, bloodshed, and oppression. Socially he has rocked the world with every imaginable devilish perversion, and religiously he has displaced the mind of Christ with the carnal mind to bring about a form of godliness devoid of power or reality, but filled with a confusion of human ideas that would stagger the imagination.

We need not be surprised that the increase of his power will be such that at the end of the age none will buy or sell without the mark of the beast or the number of his name. Spiritually this is so even now. The scripture says, "Buy the truth and sell it not." But is the gospel I preach acceptable to those whose minds bear the image of the Beast? Will they "buy" a gospel that spells doom to the carnal mind? Certainly not. If you are trading back and forth with the religious systems of this world, it is because you belong to them. You bear their mark and wear their garments. Otherwise there would be no buying or selling, for they would not deal with you.

The time has come when all who would bear the mark of the Lord and the number of His blessed name must come out from among them and be separate, and touch not the unclean thing. There must be no deals with the mind of the Beast, no dickering or bargaining, but a complete separation unto Christ. The hour has come to cease from the vanity of thinking that unity consists in physical gatherings, for true unity belongs to the realm of the Spirit. It leaps the gaps, spans the miles, and bridges the oceans to sit together in heavenly places in the Spirit. If two or three can gather in His name, that is well, but if they are not gathered in His name and according to His will, all they accomplish is to be further imbued with the mind and spirit of this age. People are forever telling me that they must go somewhere to worship. But the words of Jesus ring loud in my ears in these closing days of the age: "The hour cometh when ye shall neither in this mountain nor yet at Jerusalem worship the Father. ...But the hour cometh, and now is, when true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth: for the Father seeketh such to worship Him." John 4:21-23.
God's people do not seem to realize that we are at the end of the age. They still insist on clinging to all the things, which are to be done away even as the Jews clung to the Levitical system that was passing away. Tradition has taught them that they must assemble even though they are aware they are assembling with Babylon. Christians who insist on trading back and forth with the harlot systems of our day are in a sorry state indeed. Would God that He would reveal to each one that only those who bear the mark of the Beast are permitted to trade with his system, and, if we are buying and selling with it, deriving our nourishment from it, it is because we bear its mark.

In the twelfth chapter of Revelation the awesome prophecy is given of two beasts terrible in power and strength that dominate the inhabitants of the earth in the last days. The first beast is the system of Romanism under the domination of the Pope. The second beast is Protestantism under the domination of the World Council of Churches. The first beast has long ruled over the kings of the earth, for, until the time of the great Reformation in the days of Luther, every king in Europe danced to the Pope's tune, and even today the greatest nations on earth send their ambassadors to the Vatican. Romanism is a religious system absorbed in politics and enormously wealthy. It has power over kings, nations, and people. It has made bloody war against true saints for centuries, burning them with fire at the stake, tearing them limb from limb on the rack, and torturing them with unspeakable torments. No wonder John saw the woman drunken with the blood of the saints and the martyrs of Jesus. Rev. 17:6. This is the beast that received the deadly wound by the sword and did live. The sword by which the deadly wound came was the sword of the word of God in the mouths of the reformers. The wound dealt to that system was so deadly that for a time it appeared it would not survive. But the deadly wound was healed and it revived and has now become stronger than ever. Even the most ardent Protestant will admit that all the world is wondering after the beast. Rev. 13:3.

But John saw a second beast rise up out of the earth having two horns like a lamb, but his voice could not be disguised. It was clearly the voice of the dragon. This beast is apostate Protestantism as we now see it. The so-called Protestant system as we know it today has become an instrument of Satan, exercising all the power and authority of the first beast over millions of enslaved worshippers. It is filled with a form of godliness, but completely devoid of true power. Revelation 13:12-14 gives an unmistakable description of the events that are transpiring before our very eyes. The second beast is causing the earth and them that dwell therein to worship the first beast whose deadly wound was healed, saying to them that dwell on the earth that they should make an image to the first beast, which had the wound by the sword and did live. This fact may not appear on the surface nor be evident to a casual onlooker, but this is the true purpose of the ecumenical movement. Let us make no mistake about that. Again and again the Spirit warns that the time has arrived to come out from among them and be separate and touch not the unclean thing. Then will God receive us and be a Father to us and we shall be His sons and daughters. Those who thus come out from among them will find by experience that they are able neither to buy nor to sell, trade nor fellowship with them, but it is the only way to become a true disciple of Christ and the only way to escape the fearful judgment that will fall on all who worship the Beast and bear his mark.

But to leave this subject here without a further investigation would be a fatal mistake. There are certain things said about the second beast that are not said of the first beast. Many Christians sit smugly by, insisting that none of these things have a bearing on their position. Millions of people today steadfastly insist that because they belong to a fundamentalist group or a full gospel group these things do not concern them. Do you think the dragon, that old serpent the devil, has suddenly been bereft of his wisdom to deceive? Just as Satan has prepared a deception for the old lifeless forms of religion, so also he has prepared a deception for the people who loudly acclaim their spiritual experience, who claim not only regeneration, but signs and wonders, gifts and miracles, prophecy and speaking with tongues. All these things are true and scriptural, even as Jesus has said: "And these signs shall follow them that believe. In My name they shall cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents, and if they drink any deadly thing it shall not hurt them." Mark 16:17-18. But an evil thing has come in our day, for instead of signs following them that believe we have an evil generation seeking signs, and no sign from God will be given. Make no mistake about it! A man who seeks signs is on the wrong track.

Listen then to the scripture, for this second beast is to be a wonder worker who will produce great and convincing signs for the benefit of all who are sign minded. "And he doeth great wonders so that he maketh fire
Perhaps you are looking for the setting up of a great golden image, but I doubt that this will ever be. The image of the first beast, which we have described above, is being endued with life. Its voice speaks more loudly now than at any time in all history. If we do not belong to this harlotish religious system that now dominates the lives of dead and living alike, we will find ourselves more and more ostracized, more and more cut off, considered a fanatic, a fool, in error and under the condemnation of the Lord. But this is the patience and faith of the saints.

But to return to the signs and wonders of the second beast who is now turning the hearts of the people toward the first beast that all who dwell on the earth may worship him, whose names were not in the book of life from the foundation of the world. While the cold, dead, lifeless branches of the church system are meeting to discuss unity and are becoming increasingly entangled in the papal net, there is a movement of signs and wonders, prophecy and speaking with tongues, that is appealing to the Fundamentalist and Pentecostal groups that they, too, might be ensnared in the ecumenical net. You will remember that the second beast had two horns that those who are not deceived by the mere hope of church unity may be deceived by the signs and wonders, the miracles and the much publicized glossalalia (speaking with tongues).

It has never been my policy to deride and condemn, but rather to persuade of life and reality, but all who have ears to hear should take heed, for this move has the marks of deception rather than the marks of God. Its horns are the horns of a lamb, but its voice is the voice of a dragon. Did we not say previously that bishops and ministers, priests and cardinals would soon make profession of miraculous gifts, laying claim to the gifts of the Spirit and the ministries of the Holy Ghost? This is now happening before our eyes and increasing everywhere. People have written, describing the wonders of it, but I am totally unimpressed, for all history and all scripture teach us that reality and truth and Christ Himself are all outside the camp of organized religion. Any move that professes to be of God and still remains within the confines of the organized systems is a deception and a lie, for new wine will burst old bottles. It cannot possibly be avoided.

It is a shocking marvel to see how easily Christians are deceived by the outward appearance of a thing. They tell of the wonderful signs, the outstanding gifts, the prophecy and speaking with tongues, the sweet spirit, the weeping, and all such manifestations. But how quickly people forget the warning spoken by Jesus Christ: "For there shall arise false christs and false prophets, and shall show signs and wonders insomuch that, if it were possible, they should deceive the very elect. Behold, I have told you before. Wherefore, if they shall say unto you, behold He is in the desert, go not forth; behold, He is in the secret chamber, believe it not. Matt. 24:24-26. During the last fifteen years the full gospel groups (erroneously so called) have become so miracle-minded that they have laid themselves open to deception. In seeking signs and gifts, miracles and healings, they have forgotten to seek the Lord. From state to state and coast to coast they have run hither and yon to see a miracle worker, a healer, or some great man only to discover a man who is seeking to build up his personal kingdom, buying and selling with the god of this age.

The impressive words of wisdom written by Ray Prinzing of Boise, Idaho, are quoted here for our edification. "We need to keep our eyes open, our hearts right, and our spirits alert, for these are days of separation of the precious from the vile, the real from the unreal, and the truth from the error. They might seem to run ever so parallel, but the sword of the Spirit shall cleave between the two, and we shall be able to see clearly.

"There shall be many who will sit before you, but you need not be disturbed by any, for each one shall be a sign and wonder in himself. They need not give you a sign nor show you a wonder, for they are the wonder, whether they be lying wonders or godly wonders.

"You will also need to look beyond the flow of words to discern what lurks behind the accustomed terminology. Keep still, and, as they begin to talk, their fleshy and bestial desires will begin to peek out from behind the front of familiar words. They will use the phraseology of truths dear to your heart, but, as you hold your peace, you will discover the inner motive of the flesh in its self-kingdom-building. The mark, the desire of the heart, will be revealed. Even the religious desire of seeing souls saved, sick healed, etc., will be discovered as a self-desire to build, to gather around self for the furtherance of their own kingdom and glory."
"There will be those mentally developed but spiritually non-developed who will seem clothed as it were with a garment of light; but it is not light, only that reflection of the light that is in you. May God give us keen discernment, for I fear that because of our own deep desire for God we have imputed the same unto another, and then felt they were of like mind because we wanted them to be.

"Again, others will take the words right out of your mouth and speak them, which would seem like confirmation, but the spirit within you shall discern those very special words to be in them as sounding brass and as a tinkling cymbal."

The evil day will be characterized by every imaginable form of evil, false christs, false prophets, false teachers, false signs, and false wonders. There will be so much falsehood in the religious world and all of it so cleverly disguised by good works and apparent displays of devotion that all will be deceived by it except those few people who have come into such a personal relationship with Christ and are so familiar with His voice by continual communion with Him that they cannot be deceived by imitators.

The agonizing burden of my heart that never leaves me night or day bids me to tell every man and woman who has ears to hear that our greatest need in this evil day is not our communion with people, however good they may be. Our need is continual communion with Jesus Christ, reading His word, kneeling before Him in prayer in the watches of the day and the watches of the night, maintaining the continual attitude of praying without ceasing while at work, while walking on the street, while riding in the car. But be warned that we will never accomplish this communion while our minds are occupied with television, for it has become Satan's master distractor, holding the minds, the attentions, and the affections of men in its vice-like grip while it washes our brains of all that pertains to the mind of Christ and fills them with all that appeals to the carnal mind. The evil eye of this monster cannot portray the beauty and loveliness of Jesus Christ, but its phantom figures fill your eyes and your minds with scenes of murder, sluffings, beatings, adultery, fornications, brawls, thefts, riots, divorce, and every evil that carnality can devise, and then people wonder what is wrong with the world that it is filled with murder, sluffings, beatings, adultery, fornication, brawls, divorce, and every evil that the carnal mind can devise. The apostle Paul said, "Evil communications corrupt good manners," and so they always do. If you wish to defend this instrument of evil, my message is not for you, but "let every man who nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity."

"Either make the tree good and his fruit good, or else make the tree corrupt and his fruit corrupt; for a tree is known by his fruit. Oh, generation of vipers, how can ye, being evil, speak good things? For out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. A good man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth good things; and an evil man out of the evil treasure bringeth forth evil things." Matt. 12:33-35. What Christians need today is to be genuinely converted, and that includes those who claim to be born again.

Again we repeat, your greatest need is not communion with people. Do not journey thousands of miles to get acquainted with me, for I am but a man. There is another man, the man Christ Jesus, who is much nearer to you and much more wise and powerful, who holds in His omniscient mind all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge, the answer to every problem of the ages, and the answer to all your problems as well. He knows the secret purpose of your sojourn in the world. He knows the false and the true, the right and the wrong. His unerring hand divides between wheat and tares. He calls His sheep by name and leads them forth. He knows your down-sitting and your uprising. He knows your thoughts afar off. Even the hairs of your head are all numbered, and none of them fall to the ground without His notice.

You do not need to lean upon the arm of man for support. You do not need to sit at his table for substance. You do not need to seek out great or good men, for there is none good but one and there is none great but one. In this, the evil day of abounding iniquity, this day of false prophets, false christs, false teachers, and false miracle workers, every path is beset by danger; therefore, the more time you spend running after men and women to join yourself to them, the more you expose yourself to all that is false and misleading. Oh, that in this evil day God's people would learn the truth of these words:

The Lord is my Shepherd; I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures.
He leadeth me beside still waters.
He restoreth my soul.
He leadeth me in paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death,
I will fear no evil; for Thou art with me;
Thy rod and Thy staff comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of my enemies:
Thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life.
And I shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever.

The man who thus puts his faith in Christ, coming to know Him personally, separate and apart from men or institutions, will never, never be moved or deceived, for his delight is not in preachers and miracle workers, but "his delight is in the law of the Lord, and in His law doth he meditate day and night; and he shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf also shall not wither and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper." Psa. 1:3.

Though we might write books without number or spend endless days instructing men how to recognize false christs and false prophets, I know of only one perfect safeguard against all the evils of the evil day, one perfect refuge against the countless deceptions that even now are rampant in all the world and all the professing church. That refuge is Christ Himself for all who take the time, carefully seeking to know Him, will immediately recognize all that is false. They will have learned the meaning of the blessed truth, "My sheep hear My voice, and I know them and they follow Me, and a stranger will they not follow, but they will flee from him, for they know not the voice of strangers. "Your only safeguard against false christs is to know Christ. Your only refuge against false teachers is to know the one true Master above all masters, Jesus Christ.

In the name of Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God, cease from giving your ear to every man that clamors for attention. In quietness and confidence give your ear to Him that you might know His voice apart from all strangers. Cease from trying to divide between sheep and goats and seek to know the one true shepherd. He will do the dividing for you. Cease from consulting with men about who is right and who is wrong, who is of God and who is of Satan, but seek to know Him who is the only mediator between God and man. He is your only refuge in this time of storm, this evil day, when light is everywhere mingled with gross darkness, this day of wolves in sheep’s clothing, and beasts with horns as lambs and voices as dragons.

This is the evil day of false prophets, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ, and no marvel, for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light; therefore it is no great wonder if his ministers also be transformed as the ministers of righteousness, whose end shall be according to their work. 2 Cor. 11:13-15. Our Lord warned us that "Many false prophets shall rise and shall deceive many, and many shall come in My name, saying, I am Christ." Matt. 24:11, Luke 21:8. Now when Jesus said many, then there must certainly be many. If, however, you are expecting to see men stand on a platform saying, "I am Christ," you will wait a long time, for few men will ever openly manifest their error in such a way; but yet, if they did, you may be sure they would find plenty of followers.

Now the word Christ means Anointed, and you have only to cast your eyes about you to find many men and many women who are claiming to have a special anointing from God for this particular hour. These are saying, "I am the anointed, or I am Christ." The meaning is the same. The literal translation of Matt. 24:23,24 from the Emphatic Diaglott brings this out with great clarity thus: "Then if any to you should say, Lo, here the anointed, or here, believe not, for many false anointed ones shall be raised... and shall give signs and great wonders, so as to deceive if possible even the chosen." This passage of scripture is of enormous importance, and it should be applied without hesitation, discrimination, or fear to all men and women who make great claims for their ministry. It should also be applied to all sects and denominations, for they all claim to possess the one true way. Every informed person must be aware that at this very moment there are many who claim they are the anointed for this hour. They are God's man or God's woman, or God's prophet or God's denomination. Without difficulty I can think of a dozen such men over the country at the moment. One claims to have a golden altar powerful enough to stop an invading horde of two hundred million Chinese. Another claims he is Elijah the prophet and goes to great lengths to prove it. A dozen men claim to be God's man of the hour. Many women are claiming to be specially anointed to bring new revelation for this last day. And then there is that arch-deceiver who throughout successive generations has blasphemously claimed to be Christ's representative on earth. All these and many more claim to be anointed of God, and every one of them have hundreds of followers, while some of them count their followers in millions and hundreds of millions. These are false prophets and false christs, deceiving many by their crafty claim to be anointed of God. Full well did Peter say, "There were false prophets also among the people as there shall be false teachers among you, who privately shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction? And many shall follow their pernicious ways; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of. And through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you: whose judgment now of a long time lingereth not, and their damnation slumbereth not." Pet. 2:1-3.

In the above passage the apostle uses the word pernicious to describe the ways of these men. This is a powerful word which means, "Having the power of destroying or injuring; tending to kill or hurt; very injurious, deadly, malicious, and wicked." How terrible are these deceivers whose ambition is to draw away disciples after themselves. Seek them not nor follow them, for all who ever came before Him (Christ) are thieves and robbers.

Notice also that Peter gives a glaring clue that unmistakably identifies a false ministry. "Through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you." Their need of your money is always evident in every meeting they hold, every article or letter they write. They need money for this, money for that, money for missions, money for the destitute, money for their broadcast, money for their new tent, and with a thousand other plausible lies they make merchandise of the gullible people who blindly follow them. You will hear them tell how God revealed to them that a certain number of people in the meeting have a certain amount of money that they are to give, and they usually get it. This is not God's doing, but these are feigned words by which they make merchandise of you. From such turn away.

The warnings we have given here of the evil day that is even now spreading itself like a shadowy spectre over all the earth are not given to scare or frighten, but that God's people should be alert to the marauding dangers that beset them and that they might turn their hearts from all that is vanity and whatsoever loveth and maketh a lie, being no longer followers of men or denominations, but of Jesus Christ, the faithful and true witness, the true Shepherd and the first begotten from the dead, for in Him we shall be more than conquerors in the evil day.

THE VIRGIN AND THE HARLOT

The true church is the most glorious institution in earth. Nothing like it was ever before known, not even in heaven itself. When God almighty instituted the church, He began to display His manifold wisdom in all grace and glory and power by transforming the lives of sinful men from men of the world to men of God, healing all manner of sickness and disease, delivering from the power of Satan, placing the very Person of the resurrection in the hearts of all believers, so that the hope of eternal life was a present experience manifesting itself in the souls of men, giving them a living hope that, though they die, they would live again and that many who live by His faith would never see death. For had not Jesus told them, "Whosoever believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live, and whosoever liveth and believeth in Me shall never die?" John 11:25.

People become members of the church, not by any act of man as the sprinkling of holy waters on the head, the reciting of blessings, the signing of cards, the receiving of certificates, nor yet by the waters of baptism, but by a divine act of God through which the Holy Spirit grants repentance for sin, and faith in the all powerful blood of Jesus Christ for cleansing from all the guilt and sins of the past, the present, and the future. He who thus repented of his sins receives immediately from God the witness of the Spirit that he is purged from all defilement, for he who believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself (1 John 5:10) that he is no longer a child of Satan, but a child of God and an heir to the promises of the Most High. Upon this cleansed vessel the Father pours out the Holy Spirit that he might receive power as God's child, being delivered from the power of darkness and translated into the kingdom of His dear Son. Col. 1:13.

Those blessed men and women who are thus begotten from above and translated into the kingdom of God's dear Son find themselves of one heart and one soul. The love of Jesus Christ burns in their hearts and they want nothing but Him. If indeed believers were to remain in such a happy state, the kingdom of Satan would be thrown into confusion and ruin. No place would be left any more for the power of darkness, and the kingdom of God like rays of dawn would transform all the world with the sunshine of God's love.

There is every reason to believe that in the early church after Pentecost every vestige of the old life had disappeared from the believers. Selfishness was gone as believers with the love and wisdom of God had all things common. As a healthy man has power to cast off sickness and disease from his body, so the glorious infant church had power to throw off every evil device that man or devil could force upon it. There was no hiding place for covetousness, deceit, or trickery. Deceivers like Ananias and Sapphira were unloaked by the power of discernment and judged by the wisdom of God. Acts 5. There was no room for the cunning trickery of such sleight of hand experts as Simon the sorcerer (Acts 8:9), and when Elymas withstood Paul, he was brought to his knees by the power of Christ in His church. Acts 13:6-13. The preachers of that holy assembly knew nothing of the wisdom or letters of men, but men took note of them that they had been with Jesus. That was their one recommendation and they needed none other. Their sermons came not from the staleness of a notebook, but, as they opened their mouths, from their innermost beings streams and rivers of life flowed forth, confounding their enemies, convincing the gainsayers, and refreshing the souls of the believers.

Sinners by multitudes were saved. Men coming out of paganism were immediately transformed. Sick in multitudes were healed every one. The dumb spoke; the blind were made to see; the dead were raised up; cripples leaped and ran. When the apostles were beaten, they rejoiced. When they were cast into prison, they prayed and the angel of the Lord opened the doors and led them forth. Thus were believers added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women, and of the rest durst no man join himself.

There was such a personal awareness of the wonderful presence of the risen Christ that men and women became followers of God as dear children. They were not disciples of men. No man among them sought to lead away disciples after himself. The light and glory of Christ shone like a sun in every believer whether apostle or prophet or ditch-digger. They sought no glory of man. They sought nothing of man. Their only recourse was in the wisdom and power of a living Christ. Thus were sinners saved. Multitudes of believers were added to the Lord and, by being joined to the Lord, they became at once an integral part of Christ's body, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth. Thus the word declares, "And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved." The wickedness of dividing that living organism which God was building into a harlotish thing full of sects and names never once crossed their pure minds. Christ dwelt in them, and they dwelt in Him. They belonged to Him and He belonged to them. To call them by some other name would have been blasphemy to their pure minds, even as it is blasphemy to the pure now. It was Christ who saved them. It was Christ who healed them. Such a flood of His divine wisdom was imparted unto them that their enemies could neither gainsay nor resist them. When they were beaten, they rejoiced. When they were threatened, they prayed. When they were chained in prison, their bonds fell off and great barred doors on rusty hinges heaved open of their own accord at the miraculous presence of the angel of the Lord. No man said that aught that he possessed was his own, for they were all one body because they were all one spirit with the Father. There was one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and one Father who was above all and over all.

Such was the church then and such is the true church now, for God is separating those who truly bear the name of Christ from those who pride themselves in the names of blasphemy. These are false spirits, false christs and false churches, compassing land and sea to make proselytes who will bear their banner, proclaim their doctrine, live their life and die their death.

It is doubtful if any who lived in the white heat of the early church ever imagined that sad and terrible days of declension would presently overtake them until the wheat that held such hundred-fold promise would be choked and strangled by tares; that sheep and goats would baa and bleat in the same pasture indistinguishable one from the other; that the way of Cain (hatred among brethren), the error of Balaam (using gifts for reward), and the gainsaying of Core (opposition against the Lord's anointed) would become rife among the believers. Long ago there was a Pharaoh in Egypt who beheld the glory and wisdom of Joseph, but generations later there arose another Pharaoh who knew not Joseph. Even so it came to be in the church, for, as the fathers passed on, a second generation was rising up who knew not Christ as the one and only Lord. The error of Balaam was that he would gladly prophesy anything for the sake of promotion or reward, and it was not long before this sinister error began to work in the hearts of the Christians. A love of power became increasingly evident among the ministering class. Elders and bishops vied with each other for more authority. Preachers, learned in the schools of theology, no longer spoke the word of the Lord, but bound men in doctrinal chains, often rejecting those who were truly sent of God. Cf. 2 John 9-11. Thus the church, once clothed with the glory of Christ until she shone like a radiant star in her righteousness, was now waning as the light of the moon when the shadow of earth passes over it. Forsaking the poor, she embraced the rich and powerful, boasting that she was rich and increased in goods and had need of nothing, but knowing not that she was wretched and miserable, poor and blind and naked. Rev. 3:17.

It is impossible for a man who has begun his walk with God in the Spirit to finally become perfect through the flesh, yet this is exactly what millions of God's dear people are attempting to do. Regrettable as this may be in the case of an individual believer, it is nothing less than tragic when we realize that the whole church system has wandered into this same delusion. The glorious virgin church of the beginning, without spot or wrinkle, walking in the love and wisdom of God, marching contrary to all the ways of the world and literally turning it upside down, began to find itself settling down in the world, becoming more and more a part of the world-system, until in this very day the so-called church and the world are indistinguishable the one from the other. The nominally Christian world is governed by men who are church goers, and we need not hesitate to say that the graft, its sex and immorality, is carried on by men who take an active part in that harlot system which everyday is falsely called the church. They pay its ministers, sing in its choirs, and donate to its program. But it is not the church. It is a pretentious harlot whose father is an Ammonite and whose mother is a Hittite.

One of the most desolating plagues ever to overtake the church was forced upon her when her ministers began to be a class by themselves. What room is there for class distinction between the hand and the foot? In a human body dare the hand say to the foot, "I have no need of you?" Or can the eyes say to the ear, "I have no need of you?" Or even the head with all its wisdom and understanding, can it say to the other members of the body, "I have no need of you?" It would seem to me that a head without a body is as useless as a body without a head, for if either be absent there is no true body.

Our ascended Lord Jesus Christ twice affirmed that He hated the doctrine of the Nicolaitanes. Rev. 2:6 and 2:15. The word Nicolaitane is composed of two Greek words, - nikao, which means "to conquer", and laos, which means "the people". The doctrine of the Nicolaitanes refers to the earliest form of the hateful notion of dividing an equal brotherhood into clergy and laity that one should rule and the other be ruled. That which began as mere deeds in the church at Ephesus (Rev. 2:6) and had developed into a doctrine in the church at Pergamos (Rev. 2:15) has in our day become an established tradition so firmly rooted that scarcely anybody in all the church system ever questions its authority or authenticity, and even less is aware that Jesus Christ Himself, the only true head of the church, twice declared that He hated it. And I shall not hesitate to say that every last one of these pompous puppets who have firmly established themselves as lords over God's heritage shall be the first to fall in the great desolation that will soon overtake that city of confusion.

How these aborted hirelings love the praise of men, desiring to be called all manner of titles: - Reverend, Right Reverend, Very Reverend, Most Reverend, Father, Holy Father, The Vicar of Christ, Doctors of Divinity, and all such assumed titles! No wonder John beheld the harlot full of names of blasphemy! Rev. 17:3. Is it not blasphemy for one to call himself Father when Jesus said, "Call no man your Father, for ye have one Father, even God?" Matt. 23:9. And is it less blasphemous for carnal man to call himself Reverend when that holy term is used only once in all scriptures and that in reference to the holiness and sanctity of God Himself? The moment a man assumes one of these titles, he embraces Nicolaitanism, putting himself into the clergy class, distinguishing himself as something separate, apart from and superior to the other members of the body of Christ.

Behold what conformity to the world we have attained when for the sake of reduced rates on the world's transportation systems or for the sake of deductible income tax receipts we are willing to be incorporated into the world's systems! What a base thing has befallen God's people when men seek ordination to avoid their army draft! Is it any wonder in the face of these things that the church which was once clothed with Jesus Christ, shining with the light of the Sun of Righteousness, should now be found stripped naked to her heavenly garments, or that her purity, holiness, and righteousness should have disappeared and, instead, she should wear the filthy rags of selfishness, pride worldliness, and intolerance? Well did Isaiah prophesy of this evil day, saying, "How is the faithful city become a harlot! It was full of judgment: righteousness lodged in it, but now murderers. Thy silver is become dross; thy wine is mixed with water, Thy princes are rebellious and companions of thieves. Every one loveth gifts and followeth after rewards: They judge not the fatherless, neither doth the cause of the widow come before them." Isa. 1:21-23.

The world today and the professing church are fat becoming one and the same institution, groveling like slaves under an ever, deepening shadow of delusion. "Darkness covers the earth and gross darkness the people." For the past years I have been writing under enormous pressures. Pressures, which at times are almost unbearable, are greatly increased by awareness of the fact that a large majority of people who continually read these messages do not understand what they are reading. I hesitate not to declare that the moment a man sees by the eye of God's Spirit what Babylon really is he will flee from it with greater haste than Lot fled from Sodom. Far, far too often Christian people love to quaff Babylon's wine from vessels of the Lord as Belshazzar wickedly did. So bound are they by church tradition that they do not know that God has departed from it. Like Samson they lie with their heads in Delilah's lap, then shake themselves and go out to battle as before, but they know that the Spirit of God has fled. They sing their songs, clap their hands, listen to sermons, and claim all manner of spiritual gifts, but God is not in it. He is outside the camp. I have spoken to many people about these truths. With few exceptions men everywhere realize that every religious sect and system is an integral part of mystery Babylon and that all these systems are fast uniting under one diabolical head. Yet, in spite of this knowledge, they continue as part and parcel of it. Now surely it is clear for any man to see that, if God is calling, "Come out of her, My people," then He Himself must be on the outside, for how could he who is within call to us to come without?

Oh, that people would seek the Lord that He might reveal to them what the true virgin church really is! Then they would be convinced that this visible mass of disorder and confusion that has stolen and usurped the name church is not the true church, but the harlot. Then all who have spiritual eyes would clearly see that all over the world today a white-robed, sanctified host is forming, whose only head is Christ, invisible to man but known of God and precious. This is the true virgin church. She has only one head, even Christ. Her holy inhabitants know neither form nor ceremony, but, because they are one spirit with Him, they are one body and one spirit with each other. They have one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father, who is above all, and through all, and in all. This is the treasure hid in the field, this is the pearl of great price. This is the virgin church, the true body of Christ.

If you think you are going to reform the harlot system, you are wrong. Over and over again from time immemorial God has decreed that He will destroy it, and verily its destruction is very nigh at hand. From the womb of mystery Babylon shall come forth the very incarnation of the mystery of iniquity, the Antichrist, who will oppose and exalt himself above God Himself and all that is worshipped.

Let us take heed to ourselves, for every day and every hour the stage is being set for the final breaking forth of the mystery of iniquity in a way the world has never deemed possible in all its generations. Events are transpiring in our very midst that appear to be both right and essential, but the end result will be terrible beyond imagination. Try to imagine, if you will, the end result in immorality, social disease, promiscuity, and broken homes that will follow in the wake of what appears to be a very, very necessary birth control pill. The loud-talking, fleshly-minded delinquent crew that has invaded the world like a noisome pestilence will smugly reach forth its eager hand for a pill that will assure safety to indulge to the full every base and carnal appetite. The morality of the husbands and wives of our land has already reached a low that beggars description. Temptation, we freely admit, is common to all mankind. Millions of young women seem to imagine that it is just as legal and right to seek a husband from the ranks of married men as from the unmarried. Husbands and wives who have sworn allegiance to each other till death without hesitation commence to magnify some displeasure or incompatibility that they might cast each other aside, caring neither jot not title for the enormous suffering inflicted upon their innocent children, who must silently suffer the kind of heartache that only a little child knows as he sobs himself to sleep in a vain attempt to analyze to why his father and mother have deserted each other, leaving him to be shuttled back and forth between parent and foster parent while he bears the punishment of their crimes. Cursed be such a generation. It would have been good for them if they have never been born. How much easier will the twin crimes of fornication and adultery become once the fear of conception has been removed from temptation, for fear, standing guard as a stern officer of the law, has always held a restraining power over those who would otherwise defile all that is holy and pure.
The children of our nation have become so mixed up through the curse of divorce as families have been divided and re-divided, some to the father and some to the mother. That would be bad enough, but the tragedy seldom remains there, for both parents usually re-marry, and many separate again to leave still more children the hapless victims of their iniquity. It is necessary to enlarge on this colossal corruption, for its abounding iniquity is as present as the crowd we meet.

The further man departs from God the greater his sin becomes and the deeper his dilemma. Adding still further to his confusion, he puts God further and further out of his life, denying His word, disbelieving His miracles, contradicting the story of creation, scoffing at the virgin birth, seeking evidence that Christ did not die, vainly hoping to thwart the resurrection, and counting the blood that redeemed him an unholy thing. How I detest the God-defying and unproved theories of evolution that are advanced and received on every hand as facts, but which in reality have not an ounce of proof. I rather glory in the answer of the late Mr. Etheridge, a foremost expert of that renowned Institution, The British Museum. The scientific gentleman, Professor Post from Syria, when visiting the British Museum, asked Mr. Etheridge to show him some of the proofs of Darwin's theory of evolution. He was astonished when so great an expert replied, "In all this great museum there is not a particle of evidence of transmutation of species... It is not founded on observation and fact. The talk of the antiquity of man is of the same value. There is no such thing as fossil man. I have read all their books, but they make no impression. This museum is full of proofs of the utter falsity of such views."

Hold fast that thou hast, that no man takes thy crown, for we are living in an age when strong delusion is everywhere abroad. Furthermore, the strong delusion that stalks the world is being permitted by God Himself, for man has not loved the truth, but rejected it. Embracing a lie in his heart, he has brought forth an evil cockatrice that stingeth like a serpent and biteth like an adder. Because he has not loved the truth that he might be saved, but had pleasure in unrighteousness, God has sent him strong delusion that he might believe a lie, that they all might be damned, who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness. See 2 Thess. 2:7-12.

The prophet Isaiah was speaking of such a day as this when he uttered the electrifying words of Isa. 66:3-4. See how the prophet shows that the beauty and simplicity of true worship had sunk so low that even the sacrifices commanded by God were now a loathsome abomination to Him. "He that killeth an ox (for sacrifice) is as if he slew a man; he that sacrificeth a lamb, as if he cut off a dog's neck; he that offereth an oblation, as if he offered swine's blood; he that burneth incense, as if he blessed an idol. Yea, they have chosen their own ways, and their soul delighteth in the abominations. I also will choose their delusions, and will bring their fears upon them; because when I called, none did answer: When I spake they did not hear; but did that which was evil in mine eyes, and chose that in which I delighted not."

This is the detestable low to which public worship in our day has descended. There need to be no delusion about that, for the situation is odious beyond words. There was a time in Israel when God Himself commanded the people to offer their sacrifices in purity and dedication before the Lord. All such sacrifices were acceptable to Him. He had ordered the slaying of oxen for sacrifice. He had given explicit direction for the slaying of the sacrificial lamb, and precious in His sight where all who with true and good heart obeyed. Detailed instruction was given for the offering of oblation and the burning of incense unto God. And while their hearts were right with God and their spirits were humble before Him, He rejoiced in their every act of worship. But a dismal change had overtaken them, for the spirit of worship had departed, leaving naught but empty form and ceremony, a thing most hateful in the eyes of God, until the slaying of an ox for sacrifice was as wicked as the slaying of a man, and the spiritless worshipper, coming with his pretended submission to God, slaying his lamb as sacrifice, was as guilty as though he had cut off a dog's neck and offered the blood of an unclean animal on the altar. For, if the heart is unclean, so also is the offering. He who thus offers an oblation unto God is as if he offered swine's blood, and he that offers incense (typical of prayer) is as he that blesses an idol.

Consider carefully how desperate a situation this is. How dreadful beyond words that worship had degenerated to such a degree that it has become actual wickedness and iniquity in God's sight! Christians today have chosen their own ways. They have not regarded the will or the mind of God. Their consuming ambition in life is to propagate their own programs regardless of cost until the whole iniquity has become an enormous snare. Men have long supplanted the will of God by their own will. All that they had determined to do they proclaimed... to be the will of God. The schemes that came forth from their own minds they advanced, saying, "The Lord spoke to me." But the Lord had not spoken at all. The thoughts were their own, fathered by their carnal ambition. Oh, how hateful are all these things in His sight, and what an abomination they are in the mind of the Planner and Designer of all the universe!

Now therefore, because Christians have so wickedly chosen their own way, deluding themselves in hoping that the way they took was God's way, thus saith the Almighty Lord, "I also will choose their delusions, and I will bring their fears upon them; because when I called none did answer; when I spake, they did not hear, but they did evil before mine eyes, and chose that in which I delighted not." Isa. 66:5. As drowning men in their desperation cling to a sinking vessel, so now do men cling to the false christ of a depraved church system from which the Spirit of God has departed. Look no longer to the false christs of form, ceremony, or mighty efforts, nor yet to the false christ of denomination. Look rather to Jesus, the Christ of the living God. All that came before Him are thieves and robbers. John 10:8. Even now in this age of Laodicea He stands without the camp, knocking at the heart's door, saying, "If any man hear My voice and open the door, I will come in to him and sup with him." Rev. 3:20.

"Hear, O heavens, and give ear, O earth: for the Lord hath spoken; I have nourished and bought up children, and they have rebelled against Me. The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib: but Israel doth not know; My people doth not consider. Ah, sinful nation, a people laden with iniquity, a seed of evil-doers, children that are corrupters; they have forsaken the Lord, they have provoked the Holy One of Israel unto anger, they are gone away backward... Ye will revolt more and more; the whole head is sick, and the whole heart is faint. From the sole of the foot even unto the head there is no soundness in it; but wounds, and bruises, and putrefying sores: they have not been closed, neither bound up, neither mollified with ointment." Isa. 1:2-6.

Hearken diligently to the words of the apostle Paul, for his vivid description of the fearful delusion that will overtake the church people of the latter times would cause one's heart to tremble. Speaking of the great deceiver who will shortly appear on the religious scene when the hindering influence of God's elect saints is removed, he says, "Then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of His mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of His coming. Even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish: because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: That they all might be damned (condemned) who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness." 2 Thess. 2:8-12.

If, however, it is possible to state the case with greater force than the King James Version has done, then the translator J. B. Phillips has succeeded with these potent words. "Evil is already insidiously at work, but its activities are restricted until what I have called the restraining power is removed. When that happens, the lawless man will be plainly seen - though the truth of the Lord Jesus spells his doom, and the radiance of the coming of the Lord Jesus will be his utter destruction. The lawless man is produced by the spirit of evil and armed with all the force, wonders, and signs that falsehood can devise. To those involved in this dying world he will come with evil's undiluted power to deceive, for they have refused to love the truth which could have saved them. God sends upon them, therefore, the full force of evil's delusion, so that they put their faith in an utter fraud and meet the inevitable judgment of all who have refused to believe the truth and have made evil their play-fellow." 2 Thess. 2:8-12 (Phillips).

Nothing can be clearer than this: The delusion of the last days will be marked by the operation of every imaginable sign and wonder. Real miracles will be seen and of such a caliber that even the very elect will be shaken by them. Physical healings emanating from the power of Satan will abound. Those who perform the miracle -will profess to uplift Christ and believe in His blood. They will greatly advertise their burden for souls, and their feigned compassion for the sick.

The following things are evident in the lives of those who are of the truth. There is no advertising of self, no proclamation of personal prowess or past successes, no smiling pictures, no hand bills, no advertising trumpet or fanfare, no effort to gain money through falsely pretending to be burdened for a program. Christ is seen and not the minister, for when John the Baptist preached, he so upheld Jesus Christ that all the multitudes left him.
and went thronging to Jesus. And, when one complained of this, he replied with joy, "He must increase, but I must decrease." John 3:50.

With frankness I must tell you that the religious world is full of men who do nothing but seek their own, and not the things that are Jesus Christ's. Millions and millions of dollars are gathered in by eloquent talkers who tearfully describe their great vision for Christ. But their great vision for Christ is usually nothing but a 'Judas goat' to lead your money into their pockets. Have we become so stupid and carnal that we can actually believe that the eternal purpose of the most high God is dependent upon man's haste or upon man's money? I tell you, nay! For God knoweth all things and these programs are for the most part self-will and rebellion against Him. If for one moment I should think that my eternal salvation depended upon the ability of some smooth-talking preacher to wheedle the unwilling dollars from an audience that the gospel might be preached to me, then I must confess that all my love and admiration for the Almighty God would disappear in the quicksand of unbelief and disrespect. He who formed the soul of men and gave His Son for their life depends not on gold and silver nor on the cattle of a thousand hills, but on the might of His Spirit. Three things are outstandingly evident in a false ministry and a fourth lies beneath the surface. First, the love of money. Money is always the life-line of their program. Every deceitful device is used to make merchandise of the people while they live on the fat of the land. Second, Christ, though preached, holds no pre-eminence. The preacher himself is the outstanding name in the act. It is around his banner that the people flock. Third, they seek to draw away disciples after themselves, compassing land and sea to make a proselyte. Fourth those who walk in close communion with Christ cannot help but recognize the wrongness of the spirit at work among them.

I only write these distasteful things because I know the hour of great deception and strong delusion is upon us. I write them because many will be deceived, because iniquity shall abound and the love of many wax cold. Jesus Christ Himself gave us this awesome warning, saying, "Take heed that no man deceive you, for many shall come in My name saying, I am Christ, and shall deceive many. Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted and shall kill you; and ye shall be hated of all nations for My name's sake. Then shall many be offended and shall betray one another, and shall hate one another, and many false prophets shall rise and deceive many, and because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold." Matt. 24:4,5,9-12. It was not of publicans and harlots, murderers, thieves, and drunkards that Jesus was speaking when He spoke of abounding iniquity, but of those lawless and wicked men, full of religious program and zeal of their own manufacture, who will come saying, "Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in Thy name, and in Thy name have cast out devils, and in Thy name have done many wonderful works? Then the Lord will answer them, depart from Me, all ye that work iniquity."

When will every eye be opened to see that all that is done in the name of the Lord, but without the command of Christ, is iniquity and lawlessness in His sight? For, except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it, and, except the Lord keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain.

Among the deceptions of the last day will be false prophets. We need to be aware of them because they will come in sheep's clothing. If we imagine for one moment that such deceivers will be easily detected, we have made our first great error. We have let down our first barrier against deception. These deceivers will have all the outward appearance of sheep and true followers of Christ. They will outwardly appear to be humble men, always professing to give Christ the glory. They will appear to be prayerful; they will minister under an apparent anointing; they will point to signs and wonders as proof that God is with them. But, if we follow them, we will be deceived. If today we are casting our eyes about us, scanning the horizon for some great prophet to arise, we are wide open for deception. Make no mistake about that. Neither Elijah nor Moses nor John the Baptist had to write books to advertise themselves as God's prophet of the hour. An excellent scripture to remember in this day of abounding iniquity and deception is this: "God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake unto our fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by His Son." Heb. 1:12,2. May God help us all to remember that. I am not looking for mighty prophets. I am looking for the manifestation of the sons of God, and, the moment we get our minds on something else, we are losing contact with our head, which is Jesus Christ Himself.

The great burden of my own heart has been to bring as many as possible into a close and living relationship with Jesus Christ, separate and apart from all sects, systems, denominations, or ministries. Perhaps I have failed to make men see the truth, but, frankly, I am appalled to see how people can read these things, rejoicing in the hope of them, and yet go running after the first fantastic fad that appears on the scene. We have long been taught that a sheep knows the voice of its shepherd and cannot be deceived by the voice of a stranger. This is true in all cases except one. A sick sheep will follow a stranger. Are God's people sick? Verily they are, for they follow strangers who lead them, not to green pastures, but to the fleecing and to the butcher.

There is a great famine in the land, not of food and drink, but of hearing the word of God. In this dread hour of abounding deception every man and woman should take time to read the Bible, for it is the word of God. Every word of the Bible bears the stamp of holy inspiration. Heaven itself will pass away, but the word of God abides forever. We do not hesitate to say that the best book ever written by man is as much inferior to the Bible as man is inferior to his matchless Creator. It is but a small step from the written word to the Logos, that Living Word, Christ Himself, who was before all things and by whom all things consist. The man or woman who reads the Bible, honoring it as the word of God, abolishing from his mind the theories and traditions learned of men, will find himself coming face to face with Christ, the Son of the blessed Father, and, beholding Him, he will be changed into that same image, from one glory to another, even as by the Spirit of the Lord. Follow Him and you will learn the meaning of that glorious truth, "He that followeth Me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." John 8:12.

In the end of this age, it is now plain to see, evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived. 2 Tim. 3:13. Surely none needs to be persuaded of the truth of this, for deceivers are everywhere. Should we not, then, betake ourselves more earnestly to Christ who is the truth, and the light, and the way? Waste no time trying to decide who is right or who is wrong, who is a false prophet or who is a true, who is of the Lord or who is of the devil, and what is wheat or what is tares. Let Christ be the center of your life. Make Him your Lord, your wisdom, your understanding, your counsel, your might, your knowledge and fear. Look to Him for your guidance and wisdom. Let His mind dwell in you. Cease from man whose breath is in his nostrils, for, when Jesus Christ becomes the first and last in your life, the alpha and omega, the beginning and the end, then all these little human idols will fall as the image of Dagon fell before the Ark of the Covenant. 1 Sam. 5:1-5. While Catholics and Protestants are taking steps toward unity, while Evangelicals and Pentecostals are being deceived by a movement with pseudo gifts and much vaunted glossolalia, that all sects might come under the domination of the mother of harlots, let the elect waste no time wondering about the lightness or wrongness of any of these things, for they are all part of the strong delusion of the last days. Flee away to Christ and abide in Him, for, "if ye abide in Me and My words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be done." John 15:7.

Do not hope that so-called full gospel people will escape the deception of this ecumenical Trojan horse, for strong delusion has already engulfed them. The ecumenical movement has many more arms than an octopus. If it cannot enfold you in one of them, it will grip you in another. The Pentecostal people have already had one observer at the ecumenical council. Now nicknamed Mr. Pentecost, he is spreading the evil net that will capture millions of these people, whose love long ago waxed cold because of the abounding iniquity of our day.

The true church has always been in the world, unrecognized and unidentified by all visible systems. Its true identity has always been concealed beneath the cloak of divine mystery, its presence overshadowed entirely by the visible systems that have usurped its holy name. Thus man, in looking for the true church, never looks beyond the named and visible systems of Babylon's confusion. That bold, strutting, swaggering, unveiled harlot has obscured the comely veiled virgin so that man sees her not nor beholds her purity, but, lusting after the beauty of the lewd woman, they even accept her as the bride of Christ. A great truth was in the heart of Abraham when he said to his servant, Eliezer, "Ye shall not take a wife unto my son of the daughters of the Canaanites, among whom I dwell: But thou shall go unto my country and to my kindred, and take a wife unto my son Isaac." Gen. 24:3-4.

The true church is the mystical body of Christ; first, the body of the sons of God, the holy bridegroom company is His image and likeness. These are the called, the chosen, and the faithful. Rev. 17:14. Then comes forth the body of the bride, another company in the image of Christ, for Adam was first formed, then Eve. Afterward shall come the marriage of the Lamb when male and female, divided since Eve was taken from Adam's side, are united in one new Adam, even Christ, that the mystery of God might be complete. This is a great mystery, but I speak concerning Christ and the church, for, as a bride takes the name of her husband, so shall the virgin church take the name of Christ that He may be all and in all.
Make certain in this important hour to set your eyes upon Christ alone. Learn to know Him supreme above all others. Seek not to know me. I am only a man. Seek not prophets or healers or miracle workers. Their glory at best is only reflected.

There is a virgin company being prepared today, redeemed from all the ways of earth, singing a new song which none but they can learn. “These are they which are not defiled with women (church systems); for they are virgins. These are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth. These are redeemed from among men, being the first fruits unto God and to the Lamb. And in their mouth was found no guile: for they are without fault before the throne of God.” Rev. 14:4-5.

THE MYSTERY OF INIQUITY

A mystery is something that is unknown and unexplained. It is dark and incomprehensible to the natural mind. Though the fact exists beyond all doubt, it transcends all human wisdom and defies human understanding. It cannot be fathomed and the secret depths of its truths are hidden. Who on earth can doubt the fact of life? Yet what life is human beings have never discovered though earth's cleverest brains have for centuries sought its fountain. We often read of an exciting scientific breakthrough as learned minds hopefully proclaim that they are on the verge of discovering the very secret of life itself, but they never do; and outside of God they never will, for in Him is life, in Him was life, and in Him life shall ever be. If man can discover God with a microscope, a telescope, or an excursion among the planets, then he may also discover life. But both God and the life which He is stand beyond the realm of human senses, defying all their power of analysis and comprehension. It is the wisdom of God that makes manifest and at the same time conceals in inky darkness that which He has made manifest. Omniscient wisdom alone can plainly speak, yet hide the spoken words in such darkness that naught but the illumination of the Holy Spirit can unfold and reveal them. Poor little earthbound man, sweating over his scientific instruments, seems never to comprehend that all his investigations, remarkable as they may be, always begin and always end in the natural realm and beyond this tiny pin-prick of his limitation he cannot go.

Man that is born of woman is hermetically sealed on the natural side, and it is only when he is born of God that light and illumination from the eternal realm of the Spirit penetrate the darkness of his mind. It is when God says, "Let there be light", that there is light. It is when the Spirit of God moves on the face of the waters that the bright waters above the firmament are divided from the dark waters beneath the firmament. It is when the light and revelation from the eternal world breaks like a glad morning o'er our spirits that we become more familiar with the stars of heaven than with the dust of earth. Then these eternal things, which hitherto were all unseen, unheard, untouched, untasted, and unsmelled, become so vivid in their reality that the visible things of a corruptible world grow dim and fade away. Then and then alone we learn that here we have no continuing city, but, being born from above, we look for a city which hath foundations whose builder and maker is God. Those strange souls who see the eternal seem like fools to those who see it not, for the natural mind has no ability to comprehend or see the things of the Spirit of God.

Six young brothers played in their farmyard one evening after the Lord had watered the earth with a sudden shower. As an invisible hand parted the curtain of the clouds, the smiling sun with miracle fingers cast the mantle of a rainbow about the shoulders of the sky. One of the boys stopped his play to behold with delight the seven magnificent colors of the giant bow. Excitedly he called the attention of the other five, but they saw nothing. The glory he saw was hidden from them, for they all had been born color blind. All natural things have their spiritual counterparts, and this in truth is one, for, while natural men behold natural things, only the few have entered that blessed realm of the open heaven where their spiritual senses are awake to the wonders above to see the invisible, hear the inaudible, and touch the untouchable. The men who rode to Damascus with Saul of Tarsus "heard not the voice of Him that spoke to me (Paul)". Acts 22:9.

The apostle Paul frequently spoke of the vast mysteries of God and, in speaking of them, he left no shadow of doubt that naught but the revelation of the Lord could unfold those eternal mysteries. In the following words he told how the mystery of the will of God had been made known to him, a mystery that had been kept secret since the foundation of the world: "Having made known unto us the mystery of His will, according to His good pleasure which He hath purposed in Himself; that in the dispensation of the fullness of times He might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven and which are on earth, even in Him. In whom also we have obtained an inheritance, being predestinated according to the purpose of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His will; that we should be to the praise of His glory who first trusted in Christ.” Eph. 1:9-12. It was in the hope that we, too, might share this marvelous revelation of the mystery of God’s will that Paul prayed for us all, saying, “Wherefore I also, after I heard of your faith in the Lord Jesus and love unto all the saints, cease not to give thanks for you, making mention of you in my prayers, that the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give unto you the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Him; the eyes of your understanding being enlightened, that ye may know what is the hope of His calling and what the riches of the glory of His inheritance in the saints, and what is the exceeding greatness of His power to usward who believe, according to the mighty power which He wrought in Christ when He raised Him from the dead, and set Him at His own right hand in the heavenly places.” Eph. 2:15-20. “The natural man understandeth not the things of the Spirit of God, howbeit we speak wisdom among them that are perfect; yet not the wisdom of this world, nor of the princes of this world, that come to naught; but we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom, which God ordained before the world unto our glory: which none of the princes of this world knew, for, had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory. But as it is written, eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither hath entered the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him, but God hath revealed them unto us by His Spirit... . Now have we received ... the Spirit which is of God, that we might know the things which are freely given of God.” 1 Cor. 2:6-12. Thus the mysteries of God are, and thus, and thus alone, are they revealed.

There are three great mysteries, which enfold in themselves all other mysteries:

The mystery of godliness which is the mystery of God.
The mystery of iniquity which is the mystery of Satan.
Mystery Babylon, which is the mystery of man.

The mystery of godliness embraces the mysteries of the kingdom of God, the mystery of Christ in you, the mystery of Jew and Gentile, the mystery of Christ and the church, the mystery of the reconciliation of all things. Indeed, we need not hesitate to say that the mystery of God embraces all other mysteries, for the unsearchable mysteries of all ages have come forth from His infinite mind. Even the mystery of iniquity and the mystery of Babylon must in their final analysis be included in the eternal mystery of God, for man never comes to know God until the truth dawns upon his heart that before all things stands the infinite wisdom, the immutable purpose, the omniscient knowledge, and the almighty power of God, the designer and creator of the universe and all it contains. For from Him everything comes, by Him everything exists, and in Him everything ends.” Rom. 11:36. (Goodspeed). Or, in the more familiar words of the King James version, “Of Him and through Him and to Him are all things.” Our God is a God of mysteries. His mysteries are not mysterious to Him whose mind is infinite and His knowledge omniscient. They are mysteries to us whose minds are finite and our knowledge limited by the tiny sphere in which we dwell. Who has known the mind of the Lord that he should instruct Him? 1 Cor. 2:16. If He should question us, we could not answer Him one in a thousand. Job 9:3. Modern science with all its vaunted human knowledge still cannot answer the forty questions which the Lord demanded of Job and which made that man squirm in the revelation of his own ignorance. Cf. Job chapters 38-41.

God moves in mysterious ways His wonders to perform;
He plants His footprints on the sea, and rides upon the storm.

Man has lost his sense of the majesty of God. Christians do not know that God has an eternal purpose. They do not perceive that back of every design is the designer, back of every building is the architect, back of every creation is the creator. Before every son is the Father and in the perfecting of that son is the divine purpose of God to chasten, scourge, and correct every son whom He receives. So certain is this decree that God the Father plainly states for all His children to understand that, if we receive not chastisement, it is because we are bastards and not sons. Heb. 12:8. God, in bringing many sons to glory, takes no part in the nonsense of self-expression, a curse that has swept the modern world permitting children to do as they please without restraint lest restraint should endanger their genius. If we sow the wind, we shall reap the whirlwind. For the past thirty years or so, as this foolish doctrine has been taught, children have become ever more disobedient to their parents, but now the whirlwind is upon us, for these same children who were raised in disobedience to parents now think it is their right to defy all authority. And what is the result? The result is a fearful rise in crime of every kind — street gangs, cruelty, rape, drunkenness, slaggings, divorce, willful destruction of property, vandalism, and sex crimes of every sort, and all this in an age of plenty. This trend will grow increasingly worse until parents re-learn that "foolishness is bound up in the heart of a child, but the rod of correction will drive it far from him." Prov. 22:15.

Let all who prize the hope of sonship know that God will never permit us to do as we please. He will bring the chastening rod upon us until we howl with the pain. Neither will He spare for our crying. Prov. 19:18 He will chasten us with adversity and scourge us with tribulation. He will make us suffer in the flesh that we might cease from sin. He will leave us forsaken of friends that we might learn to lean on Him. He will strip us of earthly glory that we might seek the glory, which comes from Him. Men we trust will fail us that our only trust may be in the living God. The hopes and dreams of years He will banish in a night that with tears of rejoicing we might say, "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away. Blessed be the name of the Lord." Do not expect rosy paths when you walk with God. I cannot find one saint in any age who was ever free from the fiery furnaces of tribulation, but to obtain that better resurrection they had trial of cruel mockings and scourgings, yea, moreover of bonds and imprisonments. They were stoned; they were sown asunder; they were tempted, were slain with the sword; they wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins, being destitute, afflicted, tormented: (of whom the world was not worthy). They wandered in deserts, and in mountains, and in dens of the earth; and these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise, God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect. Heb. 11:36-40. No! No! Sonship does not come by doing our own pleasure. It does not come by making a glorious name for ourselves in the earth. It has nothing to do with world renown. It has only to do with the thorny pathway of the will of God and the cup of suffering that all must drink. If we follow our natural inclinations, we will probably spend our lifetime running hither and thither, searching for glorious meetings, seeking physical blessings, healings, and gifts, but, if we follow Him and walk in the pathway of His will, we will find ourselves at strange variance with every voice that calls for our attention except the voice of the Good Shepherd who calls, "Follow me".

Iniquity as used in New Testament scripture simply means lawlessness. We are inclined to look upon iniquity as wrongful acts or wicked and unjust deeds. While this is indeed, the modern meaning of the word, the Bible meaning goes beyond the open and overt acts to the very source of all wrong and evil, which is inherent rebellion against God, manifesting itself in all manner of lawlessness.

Because iniquity is one of the mysteries, we can never hope to understand it by merely talking about it. One might discuss the subject forever, yet still be void of understanding. The eternal question, why, would still remain unanswered. Why do people do this? Why do they do that? Why do they murder? Why do they steal? Why is foolishness bound up in the heart of every child? Why do the people who make the laws of our land forever break them? Why do children who love their parents rebel against them? Why do wives rebel against their husbands, and husbands against their wives? Why did Lucifer, the son of the morning, rebel against God? Why did Cain offer a sacrifice that was unacceptable to God, and, though offered forgiveness, rebel still further in that he rose up against his brother and slew him?

The mystery of iniquity, which is the mystery of lawlessness, is in the heart of every man, and there it will remain until the will of man has been crucified and nailed to the cross. It is only when we have passed through our Gethsemane where the will of man is forever crushed and crucified and the will of God exalted that the great mystery of iniquity is forever dead. Then a whole new realm surrounds us and we begin to live in a new domain, even the blessed realm of the mystery of godliness. Great indeed is that precious region where God is manifest in our mortal flesh, God's Spirit, God's will, God's love, God's life, God's truth. There the peaceful spirit is in rebellion against everything everywhere that is in rebellion against the will of God, that all things may be subdued unto Him.

Man in his present state of iniquity is completely incapable of understanding the things of God. In his rebellious pride he vainly imagines that his puny mind can comprehend the most spiritual things. With his scientific instruments he presumptuously delves into anything and everything, even to the vain-glorious point of contradicting the word of God, the story of creation, or the virgin birth. Instead of the simple truth of Genesis he prefers to believe the impossible theory that, though man is superior to a monkey, yet he descended from him. All this vanity rises from the noxious root of the mystery of lawlessness, which is the mystery of iniquity.
Because of man’s inability to comprehend even the simplest things of God, the Lord has confined Himself to merely stating facts. Seldom, if ever, does He offer an explanation. If we believe those facts, building on their foundation, we will come to the truth in the end, but if we ignore them, creating a foundation of our own, we will end in a quagmire of confusion as the present world and the professing church have undoubtedly done. The word of God abounds with basic facts that need no explanation. “In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.” “The earth was without form and void. Darkness was upon the face of the deep.” God said, “Let there be light, and there was light.” No explanation is made about who God is or where God came from, what the earth is or where it came from, what caused the darkness or from whence the light appeared four days before the sun was placed to rule the day. These things are facts. They are truths. They are to be believed and not pried into, for God, who cannot lie, has said that they are so.

In like manner also John begins his gospel: “In the beginning was the Word. The Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by Him; and without Him was not anything made that was made. In Him was life. The life was the light of men. The light shineth in darkness. The darkness comprehendeth it not.” Foolish, earthbound man, depending on his carnal mind that receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, thinks he has a democratic right to come to his own conclusions, but he does not know that the very right he demands is in itself the mystery of iniquity working in him, questioning the God of truth who cannot lie and rebelling against Him.

Some years ago I was deeply impressed by reading the story of the ex-negro slave, Dr. Carver. This strange man had an over-whelming love for God and all things He had made. One day, when in communion with God, he asked this question; “Lord, why did You make the universe?” To this the Lord in grace replied, “That is far too great a subject for a little mind like yours. Ask Me something more your size.” Then the man of God asked, “Lord, why did You make me?” And again the Lord answered him, saying, “That is still far too great for a little mind like yours. Ask Me something smaller.” After some consideration the man of God asked this question: “Lord, why did You make a peanut?” The Lord replied, “That is more nearly your size, but it is still almost infinite.” Then the Lord showed him how to take a peanut apart and how to put it together again, and during the wonder of that revelation He revealed to him three hundred different uses for the peanut. Some of these were peanut butter, face powder, printers ink, shampoo, creosote, vinegar, dyes, a dandruff cure, instant coffee, rubberoid compound, soap, salad oil, and wood stain. So great was this understanding that the failing peanut industry of the United States was literally revolutionized and reborn. Let us not then be wise in our own conceits, for, if any man thinketh that he knoweth aught, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know, but if any man love God, the same is known of Him. The same is true of the mystery of iniquity. Why it exists and whence it came remains a mystery locked up in the mind of God. Be it known to us all, however, that so great a mystery as this cannot exist without an eternal purpose, nor could the great plan of God for all ages be accomplished without it, for God moves in mysterious ways His wonders to perform.

There is a most enlightening story in the twenty-eighth chapter of Ezekiel where a lamentation is taken up against the King of Tyre. Ezek. 28:12. As Jesus indirectly addressed Satan when He said to Peter, “Get thee behind Me, Satan; thou savorest not the things which be of God” (Matt. 16:23), and as He indirectly addressed Satan in the Garden of Eden, saying to the serpent, “I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head and thou shalt bruise his heel” (Gen. 3:15), so in Ezekiel, chapter 28, by addressing the King of Tyre, the Lord reveals the first manifestation of the mystery of iniquity as it came into the heart of Lucifer, son of the morning, before ever the world or man existed. Men will rush in where angels fear to tread, but with fear and reverence I must confess I know not from what source this strange mystery of rebellion sprang, nor why God permitted it to rise in the heart of Lucifer, son of the morning, the anointed covering cherub, and thence to flow into the heart of all mankind, reaching even the animal creation. But by the faith of God I know that back of it all there is infinite purpose, purpose which none but God understands, purpose too extensive and great for the puny minds of earthborn men, and when that omniscient purpose is unfolded and all things in heaven and earth are reconciled to God, when every knee shall have bowed (Rom. 14:11), and every tongue confessed that He is Lord (Phil. 2:10), when every creature in heaven and in earth and under the earth and in the sea is heard saying, “Blessing and glory and honor to Hun that sitteth upon the throne” (Rev. 5:13), then and only then will we understand the eternal, immutable purpose, by whose device the mystery of iniquity shall be eliminated from the heart of all creation forever and ever. Amen! “For He must reign till He hath put all enemies under His feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death, for He (God) has put all things under His feet. But when He saith all things are put under Him (Christ), it is manifest that He (God) is excepted which did put all things under Him. And when all things shall be subdued unto Him, then shall the Son also Himself be subject unto Him (God the Father) that put all things under Him that God may be all in all." 1 Cor. 15:25-28.

"Son of man, take up a lamentation upon the king of Tyrus, and say unto him, Thus saith the Lord God; Thou sealest up the sum, full of wisdom, and perfect in beauty. Thou hast been in Eden the garden of God; every precious stone was thy covering, the sardius, the topaz, and the diamond, the beryl, the onyx, and the jasper, the sapphire, the emerald, and the carbuncle, and gold: the workmanship of thy tabrets and of thy pipes was prepared in thee in the day that thou wast created. Thou art the anointed cherub that covereth; and I have set thee so: thou wast upon the holy mountain of God; thou hast walked up and down in the midst of the stones of fire. Thou wast perfect in thy ways from the day that thou wast created. And when all things shall be subdued unto Him, then shall the Son also Himself be subject unto Him (God the Father) that put all things under Him that God may be all in all." Ezek. 28:12-15. Please read to verse 19.

When he that readeth can grasp the truth that the mystery of iniquity, which is the mystery of rebellion, had its beginning or at least its first manifestation long before Eden in the heart of Lucifer, son of the morning, then he can better understand how rebellion, the mystery of iniquity, has crept like a devastating plague into the hearts and lives of all earthly creatures. If principalities and powers are defiled by it, it is no great wonder that this same plague should darken the hearts and minds of all men, bringing them into rebellion against the will of Him who created us. Consider then how great is our calling, for the apostle Paul by inspiration too sublime for human minds has told us that the church (not the harlot, but the virgin) shall be used of God to display His wisdom to principalities and powers. "Unto me, who am less than the least of all saints, is this grace given, that I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ, and to make all men see what is the fellowship of the mystery which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God who created all things by Jesus Christ: To the intent that now unto principalities and powers in heavenly places might be made known by the church the manifold wisdom of God, according to the eternal purpose which He purposed in Christ Jesus, our Lord" Eph. 3:8-12.

As the mystery of iniquity came with stealth into the Garden of Eden, defiling with rebellion the hearts of the parents of the human race, making a murderer of Adam's first son, and filling the whole earth with satanic rebellion, so in like manner rebellion surreptitiously found its way into the beautiful heart of the virgin church. Without hesitation or fear I must declare that God's intention was that Jesus Christ should be the Head of His body, the church. In those few holy years when Christ was the only head of the church, unity and harmony flowed like a river and the body of Christ was one. There was no government but the government of the Spirit. Love and wisdom shone like the sun from the mind of God. When the human body knows no government but the government of its head, all is order and unity. So also it is with the body of Christ. But when the hand begins to say to the foot, "I have no need of you," and the ear says, "Because I am not the eye, I am not of the body," then confusion begins. The very moment the love of God begins to wane from our spirits and fly out the windows of our soul, then human government with all its disorder stalks boldly through the door. Then men begin to cry for another head in place of Christ, saying, "I am of Paul, I am of Apollos, I am of Cephas." 1 Cor. 1:12.

The beautiful infant virgin church was not very old before the seeds of rebellion against Christ began to appear. We read of the deception of Ananias and Sapphira and of the murmuring of the Grecians against the Hebrews because their wives were neglected in the daily ministration. We read of hard-bitten old Judaizers who insisted on adding the bondage of their law to the liberating grace of Christ, perceiving not that those who freely partake of the grace of God already have the very spirit of the law written and engraven in their hearts. For many years I imagined that the Jerusalem council (Acts 15), where the subject of circumcision was debated and decided, was God's pattern for the settlement of all future arguments. Today I see it for what it is, for, had not the mystery of iniquity been working like leaven in the hearts of some, there would have been no need for any council either then or now, for all knowledge would have freely flowed forth from the mind of Christ, the Head, manifesting itself in wisdom and understanding in every believer. Make no mistake about it! No man is persuaded by a council of any kind, for all who are convinced against their will are of the same opinion still. It is only the revelation of the Head, Christ, that can change the heart or mind that one may see clearly as God sees. Truly did Jesus say, "Have not I chosen you twelve, and one of you is a devil." And well did John in his epistle write, "Even now there are many antichrists."
The mystery of iniquity (lawlessness) has pervaded the world system and the church system during this entire age of grace. Rebellion against the authority of God is the founding father of the awful confusion of religious denominations. Every flaming revival of the church age began with Christ as its head, but each revival in its turn rebelled against the authority of Christ, setting up its own authority and thereafter parading as a christ, boldly proclaiming that it possessed the one true way of salvation and greater light than all the others. It is to these false rebellious systems that Jesus referred when He said, "Many shall come in My name saying, I am Christ." This they do by setting themselves up as the very last word in God's plan. They have the revelation. They are the true church. And eventually, they think, God will prove to all others that they were right while everyone else was wrong. This is & false christ.

Now Paul taught the Christians at Thessalonica that the mystery of iniquity, already at work in his day, would grow and increase in the professing church until one diabolical head appeared, even antichrist himself, who would oppose and exalt himself above God and all that is worshipped. Earnest heed should be given to all he says in this passage, for it is full of truth for our day. Even as you read these lines, the religious systems of the earth are feverishly hastening to join hands with the drunken, swaggering harlot of Rev. 17, apparently without let or hindrance from any source. We can now well understand how he as God shall sit in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God. Thus in our day shall the mystery of iniquity come to its full head and be made ripe for destruction. "Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God. Remember ye not, that, when I was yet with you, I told you these things? And now ye know what withholdeth that he might be revealed in his time. For the mystery of iniquity doth already work: only he who now letteth (hindereth) will let until he is taken out of the way. And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of His mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of His coming. Even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: that they all may be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness." 2 Thess. 2:3-12.

Those who read these lines can readily accept the undeniable fact that during the last few years an incredible momentum has been given to all the forces of rebellion, lawlessness, and iniquity. A few years ago scarcely anyone in the church system had ever heard the word 'ecumenical'. Interdenominational gatherings among Protestants then were fewer than assemblies of Protestants and Catholics now. In the book, Mystery Babylon, we warned that these things were coming, but now we see their alarming increase every day as Protestants, Catholics, Buddhists, and Mohammedans cast their amorous glances at each other, and even Jews have done obeisance before that pompous king of Babylon. Even today I received the report of a Buddhist priest ministering in a Methodist church in Seattle, Wash. Just as a toboggan gains momentum as it descends the slippery slope, so also has this sordid and blasphemous evil gained incredible momentum, sucking into its evil vortex every Christian who loves the visible more than the invisible.

There is a very definite reason for the heightening momentum of this mystery of iniquity. All this would have happened centuries ago but for one hindering thing. For many years I pondered the meaning of these words: "He who now letteth (hindereth) will let until he be taken out of the way, and then shall that Wicked be revealed." 2 Thess. 2:7. What is it that for centuries has hindered the full manifestation of lawlessness? Without hesitation we may boldly affirm that the one thing that has hindered the breaking forth of this mystery of iniquity is the fact that for all these centuries God's true church, God's true believers, God's true sons, have been held in captivity by this Babylonian harlot. They have been the salt of the earth that has kept the whole thing from going to the dunghill and, had it not been for their presence, this mystery of iniquity would have broken out long ago. Our Lord Jesus said, "Ye are the salt of the earth, but, if the salt has lost its savor, wherewith shall it (the earth) be salted?" Salt is an excellent preservative, and it is the true saints in the professing church systems that have hindered all lawlessness until this day. The angel said to Lot at the gates of Sodom, "Haste thee, escape thither; for I cannot do anything till thou come thither." Gen. 19:22.

During the past few years more and more Christians have been hearing the call of the Spirit to come out and no longer touch the unclean thing (the harlot system). More and more people have been obeying the call and, as they have obeyed God, the influence that restrained the breaking forth of the mystery of iniquity has been taken away until now the great rebellion is in full flood. Thus before our very eyes we see the fulfillment of the prophetic words of Paul, "He who now hindereth will hinder until he be taken out of the way, and then shall that Wicked be revealed." In the translation of this passage by J. B. Phillips, great clearness is added in these words: "You will probably remember how I used to talk about a restraining power which would operate until the time should come for the emergence of this man. Evil is already insidiously at work, but its operations are restricted until what I have called the restraining power is removed. When that happens, the lawless man will

As the true saints of God continue to have their eyes opened to see that they, like the prodigal son, are devouring their living with Babylon's harlot daughters, that their sheepfolds have become swine pens, and their bread is naught but husks, they will arise and go back to their heavenly Father, and, as they depart, leaving the harlot system behind, the mystery of iniquity will break out more and more until that which was once called the temple of God will be the very seat and throne of that wicked one who opposeth and exalteth himself against God, so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God. Many well-meaning but mislaided people imagine that there will be another revival in the old church system, but God has declared that Babylon will not be revived. Babylon is to be destroyed, and great and terrible will be her destruction.
There will not be left one stone upon another that will not be thrown down, and she shall be remembered no

When considering the mystery of iniquity, the natural mind, which is itself an enemy of God, goes wandering off on a tangent of imagination. It considers every evident and open fraud. It contemplates the efforts of atheists who openly defy God, denouncing His very existence. It recounts the multiplied sins of evil men and seducers, and of everything everywhere that is in opposition to the Almighty God and His way of truth. The world with all its sin and rebellion against God is without doubt under the very control of the mystery of iniquity, but that evil which is outward and obvious to all is not the true danger of the spirit of iniquity. Satan, who had his beginning as Lucifer, son of the morning, was 'full of wisdom and perfect in beauty' (Ezek 28:12), and he who would picture him as a clumsy, cloven-hoofed creature with no more intelligence than an ox is not only a fool in understanding, but one who speaks evil of dignities. Let us not forget the words of Jude who said, "Likewise these filthy dreamers defile the flesh, despise dominion, and speak evil of dignities. Yet Michael, the archangel, when contending with the devil he disputed about the body of Moses, durst not bring against him a railing accusation, but said, The Lord rebuke thee." Jude 8:9. We must never imagine that the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience, has so little cunning or subtlety that all his schemes are so thinly veiled that they are open and obvious to men. Just as Satan entered the Garden of Eden with his diabolical questioning of everything that God had said, so now as an angel of light he surreptitiously enters the very garden of truth itself, standing in church pulpits robed as a minister of light, proclaiming a gospel that is acceptable to the people as truth, but which is in reality rebellion against God because it is man's program, not God's. Thus the mystery of iniquity is continually at work.

After a scathing denunciation of the money-grabbing, self-exalting ministers who gloried in their status after the flesh (cf. 2 Cor. chapters 10 and 11), the apostle Paul tore the subtle sheepskin mask from their wolffish faces.
"For such," said he, "are false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into apostles of Christ; and no marvel for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light. Therefore it is no great thing if his ministers also be transformed as the ministers of righteousness; whose end shall be according to their works." 2 Cor.

I am frankly appalled at the lack of spiritual discernment among the people of God, for they give heed continually to the voice of strangers, but the voice of the Good Shepherd they do not know. Why are the children of God so ready to take at face value every glib-talking, self-styled prophet that comes on the scene proclaiming himself to be God's man of the hour, glorying in gifts which he does not possess, talking of dreams and visions which he has not had, or telling how the Lord appeared to him and commissioned him to some great thing — and may I repeat, always some great thing! Frankly I do not believe these juggling imposters, for while their words sound right, their spirits send forth an evil savor, which grieves the spirit of all who are in touch with Christ. They resemble the soothsaying maiden of Acts 16:16-19 who followed Paul and Silas, crying, "These men are the servants of the Most High God that show unto us the way of salvation." The words she said were perfectly true, but her spirit was false and evil, and Paul was grieved in spirit, knowing that her commendable words did not come from God, and, when he had cast the evil spirit from her, he was immediately in trouble with her masters, for they had made much gain by her soothsaying.

The mystery of iniquity is often manifest by the unauthorized works of men not truly sent of God. The scriptures abound in warnings, examples, and teachings to make us aware that the whole dispensation of grace would be corrupted by false apostles, false teachers, false shepherds, false pastors, and false miracle workers. It clearly shows that these noxious weeds would thrive side by side with wheat, and that the tares would so resemble the wheat that only the angels of God would know them apart. Matt. 13:24-30 and 36-43. Foremost among those who warned that we should beware of these things was Jesus Christ Himself, who in His sermon on the mount declared, "Beware of false prophets which come to you in sheep's clothing but inwardly they are ravening wolves." Matt. 7:15. If only people would seek to walk quietly in the will of God, they would soon learn that not everyone that saith Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but "He that doeth the will of My Father which is in heaven." Verse 21. When men make great claims of miraculous gifts and miraculous powers, let them produce their goods in the meekness and humility of Christ - not with glaring advertising and fanfare replete with fraudulent claims of healings and miracles to deceive the hearers, for "Many shall say to Me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in Thy name? and in Thy name cast out devils? and in Thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: Depart from Me, ye that work iniquity." Matt. 7:22-23. Here we are told that these unauthorized works by unauthorized persons, good as they seem on the surface, are in truth the working of the mystery of iniquity.

When the Lord in this passage says, "I never knew you," He means that He had not sent them to do these things that they were doing. On every hand today we are seeing the fulfillment of the words of Jeremiah: "In the latter days ye shall consider it perfectly. I have not sent these prophets, yet they ran; I have not spoken to them, yet they prophesied." Jer. 23:22. "How long shall this be in the heart of the prophets that prophesy lies? Yea, they are prophets of the deceit of their own heart." Verse 26. What an unsavory thing was in Israel when Jeremiah wrote, "A wonderful and horrible thing is committed in the land; the prophets prophesy falsely, and the priests bear rule by their means: and my people love to have it so: and what will ye do in the end thereof." Jer. 5:30-31. The last statement is the most amazing of all! My people love to have it so! Why is it that people love this kind of thing? Why is it that, though a healer has ninety-nine failures out of a hundred, people still laud him as some great one? Why is it that, when one prophecy after another fails, people overlook the damming error and still go on trying to believe that a prophet is in the midst? Has not the word of God clearly told us that, if the prophecy fails to come to pass, then the Lord has not spoken? "If thou say in thine heart, how shall we know the word which the Lord hath not spoken? When a prophet speaketh in the name of the Lord, if the thing follow not, nor come to pass, that is the thing which the Lord hath not spoken, but the prophet hath spoken it presumptuously: thou shalt not be afraid of him." Deut. 18:20-21. "Then the Lord said unto me, The prophets prophesy lies in My name: I sent them not, neither have I commanded them, neither spake unto them. They prophesy unto you a false vision and divination, and a thing of naught, and the deceit of their heart." Jer. 14:14. Is it any wonder then that the Lord will say to these people, "I never knew you. Depart from Me, ye that work iniquity." This is the working of the mystery of iniquity.

In these dreadful days of the famine of the word of God people are turning more and more to the spectacular. As people know less and less about the word of God, they fall more and more into the net of deceit, building their hopes on visions and dreams and on self-styled prophets and miracle workers. Any person today who can come up with some fantastic notion can draw away disciples after himself, and the more fantastic the notion the more the people run after it. Acts 20:29-31. How often through the years have earnest but misguided people sold all their possessions to wait for an earth-shaking event which their deluded leader said would occur on a certain day. But the day passed uneventfully, and they were left a gazing stock before an unbelieving world. Recently a preacher prophesied that a three hundred foot tidal wave would sweep over Los Angeles. It never came. On another day in India white-robed crowds waited for the Lord to come. On Feb. 4th, 1965, the whole west side of California was to slide into the ocean, but it didn't happen. President Johnson was to die before Jan. 1, 1965, but the prophesy failed. Even while I write, well-meaning but deluded people are waiting in a coal mine for a catastrophe that is supposed to occur March 16th. Let us flee from all this fantastic nonsense, for it is the working of the mystery of iniquity. Learn rather to live in touch with the Holy Spirit. Heed not the voice of strangers, but seek to be of one mind with the Father. He will warn all His people in plenty of time of all the calamities that are coming upon the earth. Those who are in touch with the Spirit of God have no need whatever to listen to these false predictors, for God has not sent them. Their message is unknown to...
Him, and it is to such as these that He will say, "I never knew you. Depart from Me, ye that work iniquity." For this is the working of the mystery of iniquity.

Without question the Lord has ordained that signs and wonders should follow the preaching of the gospel. Nothing could be surer than that. Jesus Himself gave this arresting array of miraculous signs that would follow the preaching of the gospel: "And these signs shall follow them that believe. In My name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak in new tongues (languages), they shall take up serpents, and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay their hands on the sick and they shall recover." Mark 16:17-18. All these things came to pass just as Jesus had said they would, for in the ministry of the apostles that followed neither man nor demon was able to stand before the divine wisdom, knowledge, discernment, and miracle-working power of these men of God. Furthermore, it can be abundantly proved that these signs and wonders were to follow all who believe and would continue to the very end of the age.

It is in the knowledge of this very fact that great danger lies, for, since the mighty outpouring of the Holy Spirit which began in 1901, every sickness and every disease known to mankind has been healed. Demons have been cast out. By the Spirit men have spoken in all manner of foreign tongues, often understood by men of other races. In fact, we need not hesitate to say that all wonders wrought by the apostles have on occasion been repeated in our day. But a horrible thing is taking place in the earth today, for though the spirit of true revival has waned, many people are trying to continue in the flesh the signs and wonders that once flourished by the Spirit. Prophets are prophesying from the wind of their own lungs, and, because men live so much after the flesh, they have literally gone-a-whoring after healing and miracles. Carnal men are taking advantage of this human craving for health and have advanced themselves as great healers, not because they love the sick and suffering, but to make merchandise of them for filthy lucre's sake. Fantastic and fraudulent claims of the appearance of fire and blood and oil are circulated while curious people flock to the deception like little children to a circus.

All this it the working of the mystery of iniquity and is abundant preparation for the coming of that wicked one, the prince of rebellion, antichrist himself. Pastor, priest, and cardinal, men and women who refused to love the truth when it was poured out among us years ago, are now being overtaken with strong delusion, professing all manner of miraculous things in their midst, but with & frightful absence of the Spirit of God. All this is preparation for the appearing of that great prince of rebellion and iniquity, "even him whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion that they should believe a lie: that they might all be damned (condemned) who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness." 2 Thess. 2:9-12. The hour is at hand, for he who now letteth is at this moment being taken out of the way, and then shall that wicked one be revealed. Cf. 2 Thess. 2:7-8. Wherefore "come out from among them and be separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." 2 Cor. 6:17.

"In the last days perilous times shall come." 2 Tim. 3:1. Dearly beloved brethren, we are living in the last days. The morning cometh, but also the night. The morning will be that glad and golden day when our Lord Jesus Christ will set up His kingdom, and this will be done when He has brought the members of the body of Christ into the image of Himself. When they are like Him, when His mind and His Spirit dwell in them so that all their thinking and all their acting is in harmony with His throne, then the kingdom of God will come and nothing can possibly hinder it.

The word of God bears immutable testimony that toward the end of this present age there will be an almost volcanic eruption of every imaginable evil. There will be an outer darkness such as never was from the very foundation of the world. My words may shock you terribly and well meaning people will write to rebuke me for my statements, but after much consideration and with much regret I feel I must state that in all the world today there is not a body of people meeting together on truly scriptural grounds. Everywhere men have turned to their own way, and they of the leavened bread of malice and wickedness sit side by side in the same pew with those who are of the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth until in all the world the church system has become the abomination of desolation. When we make such statements as these, some good church members bristle and heatedly deny that their great organization is anything less than the very apex of doctrinal purity, order, and obedience. Likewise also those little undenominational sects loudly disclaim any connection with the harlots of Babylon, and even more insistent still are the voices of little groups who, having come out of the bigger sects, now conduct their own gatherings. Nevertheless, I tell you the truth! All such gatherings contain the seeds of error and before many days that little group you cherish as the pure unadulterated body of Christ will have drifted off into corruption and impurity just as surely as did the corrupt monstrosity you left a few years or months before.

There was a popular song a few years ago which depicted a thirsty cowboy riding a very thirsty horse across the burning sand of the desert. The blazing sun reflecting on the sand gave the deceptive appearance of cool, clear water, and the cowboy is saying to his horse:

"Keep a-movin', Dan;
Don't you listen to him, Dan!
He's a devil, not a man,
That paints the burning sand
With water, cool, clear water."

It is only a song, founded no doubt on fact, but it illustrates how men and women in their thirst for living water are turning aside today to follow some deceiving mirage that for a moment appears to be the answer to all their problems; but they will not find the water of life by turning aside to join in the song and dance of some crowd of energetic people. They will find it rather when they enter into their closet and shut the door and commune with their Father in secret. There truth will be made real to their hearts. There He will open His mind to them and give them understanding in the deep things of His purpose. In the secret place of the most High they abide under the shadow of the Almighty. Among the crowd they learn the doctrines and traditions of men. In the presence of God they learn the secrets kept hidden from the beginning of the ages.

In the last days perilous times shall come. The times will be perilous for many reasons, one of which is that men will not endure sound doctrine, but will be turned to fables. The end times will be perilous because evil and good will be so lumped together that few will know which is good and which is evil. I recently attended a public meeting where a large crowd had gathered. The event opened with the playing of the national anthem, but, before this was done, the master of ceremonies announced, "While the band is playing the national anthem, let us all bow our heads and in our way pray for peace in this troubled world." I love national anthems no matter what country they honor, but the sweet strains of O, Canada had scarcely died away when the same master of ceremonies was punctuating his speech with profanity and betimes reciting the words of some obscene poem. God does not hear the prayer of the profane. He hates all forms of mixture and forbids that the ox and ass should plow together. A few years ago denominations began to adopt many modernistic trends. No more stressing sin; no more mention of the blood; no more washing of regeneration or baptism of the Spirit; and no more preaching of the resurrection. Along with this demoralizing declension the fallacy of evolution was taught as fact in the professing church and in schools as well until today this most groundless humbug ever foisted upon the human race is received as indisputable fact. All these are perilous evils and their degenerating effect upon the lives of the people is nothing less than incredible. Evolution is "science, falsely so called." It is an opposing force. 1 Tim. 6:20. From it we should turn forever away.

Now I am going to tell you of a far greater evil than either of these that has crept in among the people of God during the last ten years. That evil is the new evangelism that in our day is sweeping over the earth. The old modernistic doctrines that crept in, spreading their seeds of apostasy, were dangerous enough, but they served to stir godly men and women to vigorously contend for the purity of truth. This new evangelism that has sprung like a beast from its lair of darkness is something else altogether and is engulfing in its deceptive maw many thousands of well meaning people. Its great power of deception lies in the fact that, instead of denying the truth as modernism does, it claims to uphold the accuracy of the Bible and every truth it proclaims, but it denies all in action and life. They fulfill the words of Paul: "They profess that they know God; but in works they deny Him, being abominable, and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate." Titus 1:16. I care not what men profess, but wherever there is lack of dignity and profound irreverence then be assured the people have not met God, neither do they know Him, no matter what they say nor however loud is their shout. These trashy songs about "Jesus is my kind of people" and "Me and Jesus got our own thing going" are not of the Holy Spirit and they are not of God. The people who sing them are deceived and they are worshipping
"another Jesus." 2 Cor. 11:3,4. All such expressions as "Wow! Praise the Lord" are a blasphemous indignity to the Spirit of Him who sits upon the throne, from whose face the earth and heaven fled away. Rev. 20:11. When men see God, they abhor themselves and repent in dust and ashes. Job. 42:6. They cry, "Woe is me, for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips; for mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts." Isa. 6:5. They cry as Daniel did, "How can the servant of this my lord talk with this my lord? for as for me, straightway there remaineth no strength in me, neither is there breath left in me." Dan. 10:17. Many of the worldly performers, who make themselves rich by daily spewing their demoralizing filth on a gullible public, think all this kind of corrupt religion is just great and they join in with it. Men who are foreigners and strangers to the grace of God sing and popularize such songs as "Amazing grace, how sweet the sound, that saved a wretch like me," but these wretches are not saved and their lives continue on just as they were before. One entertainer boldly stated that he made more money in the church than he did in Hollywood, and, of course, money is the reason he is there.

One religious publication contained the testimony of a converted gang leader. The testimony seemed genuine until one reached what was supposed to be the punch line or invitation, the language of which would make the spirit of any true Christian recoil and in my opinion give the lie to his testimony. This is what he said: "I offer Christ to you for your consideration, praying that you, too, will find that Jesus Christ is exciting. He is where its at. He swings and can turn you on!" Make no mistake, dear reader! These words are a blasphemous departure from the very spirit of the New Testament and the very Spirit of Christ Himself. Make no mistake about it! These statements are blasphemous. Christ does not swing with the world. He is the sovereign Lord of eternal life. His throne is high above all principality and power, all might and dominion, both in this age and in the age to come. He came to deliver the souls of men from this untoward swinging generation. He came to lift men above the world and to save them out of the world. "If ye were of the world," He said, "the world would love his own: but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." John 15:19. Christ is not a swinger! He is seated at the right hand of the majesty on high. He does not swing with the rebellious self-assertiveness of this present untoward generation.

It is an absolute lie that Jesus "turns you on!" The truth of the matter is that Jesus turns you off. The consuming passion in the hearts of the rebellious youth of this perilous day is one of self-assertiveness and love of self. Paul stated distinctly that this turning on of self was one of the great perils of the last times - "For men shall be lovers of their own selves." 2 Tim. 3:2. Christ does not turn you on; He turns you off, saying with the greatest possible clarity, "If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself," that is, let him turn off self and be forever done with its evil assertiveness. Furthermore, He added these solemn words, "Let him take up His cross and follow Me." Matt. 16:24. I suppose such uncouth words may be excused where ignorance reigns supreme, but it is inexcusable in those who should know better. In my opinion such words and sentences as we have read above are evidence indeed that these people have never met with the Christ of Calvary, nor have they been made partakers of that godly sorrow that worketh repentance unto salvation not to be repented of. 2 Cor. 7:10.

Can you imagine Paul, when he was smitten to the ground on the Damascus road, crying out, "Wow! Jesus is a swinger! He really turns you on! He is where its at?" Can you imagine Daniel, who, because of the vision he had seen, fell sick for certain days and could not speak (Dan. 8:27), making such asinine statements as these? Would John have uttered such light-hearted carnal nonsense when in the presence of Christ he fell as one dead, and had to be revived by the Lord Himself? Rev. 1:17. O that God's people would catch a glimpse of the glory of Him who sits upon the throne, from whose face the heaven and the earth fled away, and there was found no place for them! Rev. 20:11.

Modern evangelism is a peril of unspeakable dimensions because it parades in the garment and reputation of good men of ages past. From whence is this modern evangelism that exploits for personal gain the fame of so-called Christian athletes, whose prowess as athletes is only excelled by their fame for breaking and desecrating the Lord's day? What kind of evangelism is this, which capitalizes on the popularity of young ladies whose physical beauty and charm have made them beauty queens at the price of their own modesty and oftentimes of their virtue as well? What kind of evangelism is this which introduces as a born again believer and a Christian an entertainer who has just arrived by plane from the night clubs of Las Vegas? What kind of evangelism is this which offers Christ as the key to fame and success and wealth and popularity for a self-seeking, self-indulgent twentieth century society?
When Peter cried aloud, "Save yourselves from this untoward generation" (Acts 2:40), he was crying out against all these things and telling his listeners to save themselves from all their corrupting power. Untoward means vexatious, refractory, perverse, uncouth, and ungraceful. But here is modern evangelism joining the two together and seeking to present a Christ who goes swinging along with this untoward, merry-go-round generation! Christ does not go swinging along with this generation. He still commands all men to repent. He still is the fulfillment of that law which cries, "Thou shall not steal; thou shall not commit adultery; thou shall not kill; thou shall not covet." The first work of Jesus Christ, the Saviour, is to save you from your sins, from the world, and above all from yourself. Then, after He has delivered you from the present evil world with all its yokes and hellish bondage, He places His own yoke upon you, saying, "Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me; for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest for your souls, for My yoke is easy and My burden is light."

"If ye love Me," saith Christ, "keep My commandments; and if any man come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow Me." Modern evangelism is a peril of the last days. It is an evangelism saturated with the spirit of the world, even the spirit of this untoward generation. It goes hand in hand with the spirit of Hollywood and Las Vegas as is evidenced by the appearance of their prodigies on an ever-increasing number of religious programs. Modern evangelism is bankrupt of truth. The Jesus it preaches is another Jesus, even the one of whom our Saviour spoke, saying, "I have come to you in My Father's name, and ye receive Me not: If another shall come in his own name, him ye will receive." John 5:43.

We have seen in our day some of the most phenomenal evangelism of all times as popular evangelists, well spoken of by all men, have instigated their massive campaigns that have brought the applause of the world, the professing church, and the honor and commendation of Rome as they popularize the gospel and preach their swinging Jesus, but, in spite of all their massive effort, we have not seen true revivals that transform cities and nations and whole generations. We have not seen men weeping and howling over their sins and repenting with a godly sorrow that needs not to be repented of. The evidence that proves modern evangelism to be completely phoney is in the fact that year after year, month after month, and day after day the world sinks ever deeper into the slough of sin. This is contrary to the testimony of all past revivals and all true evangelism. The revival in Luther's day not only transformed Europe, but also affected the world as a whole. The revival of Welsey's day saved England from civil war and revolution. The revivals of Finney and Moody had transforming effects on all American society, and the power of Billy Sunday's message almost succeeded in driving King Alcohol and John Barleycorn from the North American continent, bringing in its wake a tremendous uplift in business and the sanctity of the home. This was also true of the mighty Pentecostal revival in the early twentieth century, but the modern thing that parades itself abroad today in the name of evangelism is having the very opposite effect as the world and the church system sink ever lower into increasing darkness and corruption and despair.

If you are conversant with the trends of evangelism during the last three decades, you will remember that since World War II there has been a surge of effort to evangelize the world, and with much misguided emphasis upon youth. The cry has gone forth everywhere, calling upon the church to show that the Gospel is "relevant." It must be presented in an appealing manner. The Gospel must be "geared to the times." Expressions such as beat, pop, folk, contemporary, and even psychedelic and many other senseless expressions have increased ad nauseum. Fun was substituted for joy, food for the meat of the word, and revelry for fellowship. Each new venture that came blazed brightly for a moment and then died out and gave way to some newcomer. And so in succession they came - Youth for Christ with its doctrine of food, fun and fellowship; The Jesus Freaks, the Jesus People, the Charismatic Movement, the Ecumenical Movement, and Key 73 with its abortive attempt to present the claims of Christ to every person in North America in 1973. Along with all this confusion we have the household name preachers with their vast radio and television hook-ups. Yet for all their efforts to make the Gospel "relevant" it becomes abundantly clear that the world and the professing church are sinking deeper and deeper into the morass of evil and sin.

While these movements are purporting to reach the world, it becomes increasingly obvious that the world is reaching them instead. The world's beachhead was established by unsound words, permissive morals, daring dress, and every downright fleshly appeal. The carnal desire to follow the "in" crowd, who were really "with it," produced a shameful breed of mini-skirted temptresses, jerking and swaying to rock music in a carnal attempt.
to attract the world, and when they give their idle talk about how "meaningful" Christ is, no one is convinced and few hear a word that is said.

Centuries ago Balak hired the prophet Balaam to curse God's people, Israel. Balaam, for the sake of the money involved, was willing to do it, but, because he was unable to speak anything but the words God gave him, he devised another scheme to destroy them. He taught Balak how to cast a stumbling block before the people, teaching them to sin and commit adultery. His evil trick was a great success. Please read Numbers, chapters 21, 22 and 23. Notice especially chapters 22:5 and 31:16, and Rev. 2:14. Though Balaam could not curse what God had blessed, through his evil advice they stumbled at his stumbling stone and became a curse to themselves.

In these perilous times all clear distinction between evil and good, light and darkness, seems to have been eliminated. How often we observe some creature only to wonder whether we are beholding a man or a woman! It is unscriptural for a woman to wear that, which pertaineth to a man; neither shall a man wear a woman's garment. Deut. 21:5. It is a shame for a man to have long hair. 1 Cor. 11:14. All these things signify the evil spirit of this age of rebellion against God, when light and darkness, good and evil, Israelite and Gentile, black and white, church and world, Christian and sinner, male and female have become so intermingled that God has turned His face away that they may taste the fiery indignation of the great tribulation to purge them for their filth.

Vice is a creature of so frightful mien
As to be hated needs but to be seen;
Yet seen too oft, familiar with her face,
Will first endure, then pity, then embrace.

Do you wonder that God is calling, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her sins?" This is the evil day, and these are the perilous times of which the faithful apostle spoke. The great and terrible day of the Lord is nigh at hand. Turn to Christ and save yourselves from this untoward generation and the perilous times that beset us on every hand.

CHAPTER FOUR Watch

As we diligently sought the Lord for His message this month, we felt directed to write in such a manner that reference could be made to a number of subjects whose relation to each other may seem to be somewhat disconnected. We sincerely hope that as this chapter is read our eyes will be enlightened afresh to behold the boundless hope of His calling and the riches of the glory of Christ in His true saints. It is our earnest prayer that those who read these lines may be inspired to lay hold with ever increasing firmness upon the hope that is set before us.

The world as we now know it is sinking ever more quickly into the quicksands of destruction and may we say with utmost assurance that every prophecy given by the ancient prophets or by Jesus Christ or by the apostles is now being fulfilled on every hand. We have but to open our Bibles to 2 Timothy 3:1-5 to find a list of predictions so vital and to the point, so sound and inspired and full of meaning for our day, that the wayfaring man, though a fool, could not err therein. Bible prophecy is being fulfilled with such amazing speed that some of the things I write today may be out of date by the time you read them.

It is a most significant thing that U Thant, the secretary general of the United Nations, recently questioned the wisdom of his continuing in his present office because he saw the world sinking fast into corruption and every form of government falling to pieces. When men who profess to know nothing of the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ are able to see that the end of the present system is at hand, how much more then should we who are of the day eagerly lay aside every weight to be strong in the Lord and the power of His might, girded with the whole armor of God? Our struggle is not with mere flesh and blood, but against spiritual wickedness in high places, against principalities and powers and the rulers of the ever, increasing darkness of this age. Let us not sleep as do others, but let us watch and be sober.
Time and again throughout the Bible the Holy Spirit has exhorted us to constant watchfulness, as, for example, in this text: "The Son of man is as a man taking a far journey, who left his house and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch. Watch ye, therefore: for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even or at midnight, or at the cockcrowing, or in the morning; lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping. And what I say unto you I say unto all, watch." Mark 13:34-37.

Watching is vigilant observation, wakefulness and forbearance of sleep. In the text quoted above Jesus closely associated watching with forbearing to sleep when He said, "Lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping. And what I say unto you I say unto all, watch." I honestly testify that, though I have great confidence in the purposes of God, knowing that all things will be accomplished according to His plan, my heart is in constant trepidation because of the sleepiness of God's people, the evident lack of true spiritual understanding among them, and the ever present lack of watchfulness. I am not wrong nor beside myself when I tell you with great soberness that the attitude of the vast majority of God's people is "business as usual" and "on with the ball". In this solemn hour when God's people should be watchful, there is far too much feasting and not enough fasting, too much running here and there in pursuit of this and that and too little waiting in His presence, too much noise and too little awesome silence, too much mechanical entertainment and too little meditation and stillness, too much listening to puppeteers and too little listening to the still small voice of God's Spirit speaking to the hushed and longing heart.

With great regret we must now admit that mass production is not confined to the assembly line, but it has invaded the minds of men as well. The multitudes no longer think for themselves but they are told what to think and what to do and believe by the harping voices of the advertisers tempting and teasing their minds from morning to night as they vaunt the pseudo merits of their products; and, lest you should find a moment for thought between one advertisement and the next, the intervening seconds are filled up with crashing cymbals, weird music, and meaningless rackets to keep your brain washed from any thoughts of your own that you may better listen to the ideas and decisions of the people who are thinking for you. In this evil hour of conformity there is scarcely a non-conformist left in the western world! The younger generation pitifully boasts that they are rebelling against the status quo by refusing to follow the way of previous generations. But what is the truth? There is scarcely a non-conformist among them all. They are playing "follow the leader". How many children are there today that can bear to dress differently from the rest of the gang, or to talk differently or act differently? What the crowd does is the thing to do and there is scarcely anyone who will walk his own way. The cry of the hour seems to be "everybody does it", and who among us is willing to give the lie to it all and say, "I am one who does not".

Our Lord Jesus Christ told us to watch lest we be overcharged with eating and drinking and surfeiting. I shall not waste time in condemnation. What I have said above is that we might see that things are not as they ought to be. My message is not written to people who are bound to follow the wicked ways of the age, but rather to those people who are the elect of God. It is unto them that the message of the hour is delivered. The elect of God are the people who will have to stand up and be counted in these last days and deny themselves conformity to the age, even as our beloved brother Paul by the excellent wisdom given unto him wrote, "Be not conformed to this world (age), but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God." Rom. 12:2. I have no argument with those Christians who think they can dip deeply into the world's pot of flesh and still attain the promises of God. They are blind leaders of the blind. They have already fallen into the ditch, a deceptive rut so deep that they will not emerge from it until the glory of the kingdom of God has passed into history. But if in this trysting hour there are still those who will cast aside every yoke and besetting sin that they might run with patience the race that is set before them, it is unto them that I now write.

When Paul wrote to the Corinthians telling of his many afflictions and sufferings, he used this expression: "in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often." 2 Cor. 11:27. What did he mean, "in watchings often"? What was he watching for? Honestly I do not know for certain, but the very obscurity of the thought emphasizes our great need of watchfulness. I may be wrong, but it would seem that there are far more things in the world today that require our watchfulness than existed in the days of Paul. Peter also adds his exhortation to vigilance in these words: "Be sober, be vigilant: because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour." 1 Pet. 5:8.
Among the besetting perils named especially for the last days is this great evil that men would be lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. What a place for watchfulness is this! Ours is a day when men are pleasure mad, a day when almost every person imagines he should be continually entertained by some artificial means. With all sincerity I attest that those who seriously hope to reign with Christ will do themselves the greatest possible favor if they lay aside all seeking after the momentary joys of earth, giving their fleshly nature to be crucified as they wait for the sound of the voice divine saying, "This is the way; walk ye in it." Let those who would seek to be rich in this world and to gather earthly things about them in abundance hear the voice and wisdom of the apostle telling them that godliness with contentment is great gain; that we brought nothing into this world and it is certain we can carry nothing out; that having food and raiment we should be content, and that they who will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many hurtful lusts which drown men in destruction and perdition. For the love of money is the root of all evil... but thou, O man of God, flee these things and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, and meekness. Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art also called, and hast profess ed a good profession before many witnesses. Read 1 Tim. 6:6-12. Be watchful about this pleasure crazed age lest you conform to it and slip into its abominable swing, for she that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth. We should be watchful about earthly riches, which drown men in perdition and which are in truth the god of this age. "Lay not up treasures on earth", said Jesus, "where moth and rust corrupt and where thieves break through and steal, but lay up for yourselves treasure in heaven, where moth and rust do not corrupt and where thieves do not break through and steal; for where your treasure is there will your heart be also."

The question, "when the Son of man cometh, will He find faith on the earth", was a very sobering query, indeed. Our Lord Jesus Christ never did tell us the answer but we can readily see it for ourselves. Even in Noah's day there was faith, but it was found in one man and in one alone who was righteous before God. There is little reason to believe that any but he possessed either faith or righteousness. Even Shem, Ham, and Japheth were no shining examples of spirituality but were preserved in the ark because of the righteousness and faith of their father himself was saved and his house. Let it be remembered, then, that as it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the day when the Son of man shall come. There will be faith on the earth, but only in the hearts of a few elect for whose sake the evil days will be shortened. Otherwise, as it was then, so it is now. They ate, they drank, they married and divorced, they planted and builded until the very day that Noah entered the ark and the flood came and destroyed them all. The same awful sins that beset the world in his day are besetting us now - the same promiscuity between the sexes, the same going after strange flesh, the same general despising of every law that was made by God for the benefit of mankind. As these abnormalities continued until the very day that Noah entered the ark and the flood came and destroyed them all, so also shall it be now, for the end of the age is certainly come upon us.

If a man such as Noah should appear on the earth in this evil hour, he would find no favor with the world and even less with the smug believers of the professing church. I am appalled at the unspeakable apathy and worldliness among professed believers. In our day there is scarcely any separation between the church system and the world system. They have become two parts of the one whole. The thing that interests the one interests the other. The pleasures sought by the one are sought by the other. I am sick of the testimonies of supposedly born again movie stars with their power boats and race horses who claim, "You don't have to be a square to be a Christian." If, when I was a boy, the community testified that a certain man was "square", all knew that he was a respected and honest man who was worthy of trust and confidence. Today the word "square" is always used in disrespect and, if a man is a square, he is the object of ridicule and jest. I don't know about you, but I for one am very happy to be a square. I think it will pay good dividends in the end, and it is the end, not the present, that matters, for "he that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much, and he that is unjust in the least is unjust also in much. If, therefore, ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will commit to your trust the true riches?"  Luke 16:10-11. Because there are many young men and young women who love God and want to live for Him, I would like to offer a word of encouragement to you. Never be afraid of being different! When people glibly tell you, "It's the fashion" and "Everybody does it", don't be afraid to tell them that you are one that does not conform to the public looseness nor do as others do even though you may stand completely alone.

Now here is a most important thing that worldly Christians seem to have forgotten. It is the joy of the Lord that is our strength. Here is the place where so many people fail. They want to be Christians but they try to find their pleasure in the things that belong to an unregenerate world, the realm of the unredeemed. Let us learn here and forever that, once a man believes on the Lord Jesus Christ and is converted and saved by the blood of Christ and the regenerating power of the Holy Spirit, he no longer belongs to this world but, being bought with a price, he has become a citizen of a higher realm. He is one of God's heirs and a joint heir with Jesus Christ, our Lord. The moment a man is born of the Spirit, his feet tread the threshold of the spirit realm and one of his first discoveries will surely be that in this new realm there are pleasures and joys that simply did not exist in the old realm of the world and the flesh where he dwelt before. Here the believer begins to discover the transcending wonder of the fruit of the Spirit, of love, joy, peace, longsuffering, goodness, gentleness, faithfulness, meekness, and temperance. These simply do not exist in the old realm whence he came. What substitute has the world to offer for love, joy, and peace? The thing the world calls love is usually some sort of lust. The transient and disappointing thing the world calls fun can never be compared in any degree with the eternally abiding joy, which only God's Spirit can give. As for peace, the world knows not the meaning of the word, for there is no peace, saith God, to the wicked. In this Dark Age men learn war, not peace. Since the beginning of the twentieth century there have been five hundred wars with a loss of one hundred million lives. Trillions of dollars have been spent on weapons, and as for the accompanying sorrow, weeping, and endless heartache, only God Himself could number it. And yet all the while men talk of peace, peace, when there is no peace. Only in Christ can peace be found, for peace is not a fruit of man's corruption, but a fruit of God's Spirit. The reason so many people both young and old find it difficult to truly walk with God in this evil day is not because the world is more attractive than before or even that there are more things to occupy one's time. It is because the hireling preachers of the harlot system have descended from the realm of the spirit where heavenly joys abound to seek satisfaction in the realm of the flesh where no lasting satisfaction ever dwells, but only deception and disappointment.

You have probably noticed that the nine fruits of the Spirit (Gal. 5:22,23) are divided into three triads as follows: love, joy, and peace which is the fruit of the Spirit in the personal life of the believer; longsuffering, goodness, and gentleness which is the fruit of the Spirit flowing through the believer to all mankind and to all creation; and, thirdly, faithfulness, meekness, and temperance which is the fruit of the Spirit manifested in our walk and attitude before God. These blessed attributes belong to those watchful saints who live and move and have their being on the higher realm of the spirit, and by no imagination or effort can such blessed joys be dragged down to the weak and beggarly realm where men live their lives after the flesh. The works of the flesh are manifest, which are these: adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness and revellings. Gal. 5:19, 21.

Small wonder it is that in the light of these things Paul told us that, if we lived in the Spirit, we would not fulfill the lusts of the flesh. The realm of the spirit and the realm of the flesh are two entirely different realms. They are actually two different countries. We seek a better, that is an heavenly, country. See Heb. 11:14-16. To pass from one to the other is a much greater change than to pass from the darkness of heathenism to an enlightened Christian land. I fear there are far too many Christians today who, like Lot, seeing the well-watered plains of the Jordan, pitch their tent toward Sodom only to find in the end that the world has become their dwelling place as they hobnob with the people and with the elders in the gate of that evil city of flesh. There are too few Christians who, like Abraham, care not a straw for the well-watered plains of earth's abundance and look instead for a city, which has foundations, whose builder and maker is God. It is so easy for people to choose the gay luxury of the present world, knowing not that all its glitter is mere tinsel, all its beauty a fading leaf, all its blessings chaff that the wind driveth away, all its harbors whirlpools, and all its foundations sinking sands.

Though we are called upon to live in this intemperate, inebrious, and befuddled world, we are exhorted time and again by the apostles of the Lord to be sober and watchful. "For they that sleep, sleep in the night; and they that be drunken are drunken in the night. But let us, who are of the day, be sober, putting on the breast-plate of faith and love; and for an helmet, the hope of salvation." 1 Thess. 5:6-7. The aged men should be sober, grave, and temperate. Titus 2:2. The older women should teach the younger women to be sober, to love their husbands and love their children. Titus 2:4 See also verse 5. We are told by Peter to gird up the loins of our minds, to be sober and hope for the end of the grace that is to be brought unto us at the revelation of Jesus Christ, 1 Pet. 1:13, that we should be sober and watch unto prayer, ch. 4:7, and to be sober and vigilant. Ch, 5:8. There seems no place in these things for the mad, unwatchful, pleasure-loving Christian, for they are not vigilantly watching unto prayer, but vigilantly watching for every opportunity to grasp the fleeting joys of this... present evil age. The recent hit song, "Enjoy yourself; it's later than you think", seems to have gripped the lives of those who profess godliness as well as those who do not. Hence they go about to enjoy themselves in the fleeting things of earth, all the while forgetting that it is later than they think.

In my book, Belshazzar's Feast, I pointed out that this pleasure-crazed man dragged the vessels of the Lord into his drunken orgy and how in parallel today every effort is being made by the world and by the professing church to drag the holy things of God down to the common level of earth's corruption. There are far too many people talking about the kingdom of God who do not possess the spirit of the kingdom. They belong to this present evil age and their minds are of the earth earthly. Too many people are talking about sonship who do not have the spirit of God's Son, but there will be no sonship apart from Him. Many thousands will come on that blessed kingdom morning, saying, "Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in Thy name? and in Thy name have cast out devils? and in Thy name done many wonderful works", who will hear the Lord say, "I never knew you; depart from Me, ye that work iniquity." Matt. 7:22-23. It is not, you see, the things we claim to have done in God's name that will commend us on that day, but whether or not we have done His will. "Not every one that saith unto Me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of My Father which is in heaven." Matt. 7:21. As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God. In my brief life I have found a thousand times twice told the truth of the scripture, "For My thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways My ways, saith the Lord." Many there are who confuse their own ambitions and desires with the will of God.

When the prophet Isaiah was speaking of things concerning the kingdom of God and the preparation for it, he made this strange and remarkable statement, "And in that day seven women shall take hold of one man, saying, We will eat our own bread, and wear our own apparel: only let us be called by thy name to take away our reproach." Isa. 4:1.

The scripture has a remarkable way of interpreting itself, it is therefore evident that the seven women referred to by the prophet Isaiah are actually the seven churches named in the book of Revelation - Ephesus, Smyrna, Pergamos, Thyatira, Sardis, Philadelphia, and Laodicea. See Rev. 1:20. Whatever else may be implied by these seven churches (women), they do without doubt portray the history of the church from Pentecost until the end of this age in which we live. Discard all superficial understanding of the words of Isaiah and we will see that these are very evil words and that they represent the whole church system with particular emphasis upon the days in which we now live. It is most amazing, even staggering and appalling, to see the vast array of corrupt organizations that want to wear their own clothes, eat their own food, and in general go their own way, yet dare to call themselves Christians - "be called by Thy name". Their only excuse for existing is their pretense that Christ is their head. "Let us be called by Thy name to take away our reproach." Their burning desire is to vastly increase their numbers and enormously increase their wealth under the false pretense of belonging to Christ. They are like odious women whose only desire for an husband is that they might be called Mrs. instead of Miss lest they should bear some reproach. If you are a member of one or any of these denominations, then I have the unpleasant task of telling you that you have thrown in your lot with the seven women who wear their own apparel, eat their own bread, but wish to be called Christians to take away their reproach. As I have repeatedly and without ceasing warned God's people of the evils of Babylon, that system which has ensnared the entire Christian world and which even now awaits a fearful destruction, it has been amazing to find that only a tiny handful, a mere remnant of God's people, have been awakened to see its destroying, desolating evil and flee from it.

From an August, 1967 issue of the Vancouver Province we have the following amazing article, "A Roman Catholic priest, Rev. Richard Grider, has written in a widely quoted Wall Street Journal article - "The Roman Catholic Church must be the biggest corporation in the United States. Our assets and real estate holdings must exceed those of the Standard Oil, American Telephone and Telegraph, and the U.S. Steel combined. The Baptist Foundation of Texas, according to reports cited by Anglican Bishop James Pike, increased its assets to $53,000,000 from $20,000,000 in ten years by encouraging tax exempt capital to multiply. Protestant, Orthodox, Mormon, and Jewish church groups, like Catholic, can be found as owners of hotels, textile mills, factories, department stores, and so on down to car washes and second hand stores. The visible wealth of the real estate of churches in the United States is estimated at $44,500,000,000 for the Roman Catholics, $28,000,000 for the Protestants, and $7,000,000 for the Jewish, which adds up to about three-fifths of all the tax exempt privately owned real estate in the country. The warning that churches might be able to control the whole United States economy within the predictable future was sounded this spring by Episcopal Anglican Bishop James A. Pike. The world wide wealth of the Roman Catholic Church is estimated to be $500,000,000,000 (five hundred billion) of tax exempt wealth."

I quote the above article as a clear demonstration of the truth of the words of Isaiah, "We will eat our own bread and wear our own apparel; only let us be called by Thy Name to take away our reproach." Is it any wonder that in the awful hour of Babylon's irretrievable destruction the merchants and rich men of the earth, standing afar off for fear of her torment, will mourn and cry, "Alas, alas that great city, that was clothed in fine linen, and purple, and scarlet, and decked with gold, and precious stones, and pearls! For in one hour so great riches is come to nought... And they cast dust on their heads, and cried, weeping and wailing, saying, Alas, alas that great city, wherein were made rich all that had ships in the sea by reason of her costliness, for in one hour she is made desolate". Please read Rev. 18 where the whole story is told in dreadful detail. Babylon and the seven women that take hold of one man are identical. They are in truth the denominational harlot system of the twentieth century. It is from the entangling tentacles of this dreadful system that God, His angels, and His true servants are warning you to flee, for the time of her destruction is very near at hand.

You will tell me that your little undenominational denomination is not part of this wicked system, but you are deceived. The leaven that was put in the meal long ago has worked on and on until the whole loaf is leavened, and there is nothing left for you to do but come out. Even Christ Himself was found locked outside the door of the church of Laodicea, which represents the final state of the church in this age. From His position without He is knocking and saying, "If any man hear My voice and open the door, I will come in to him and sup with him."

Over the past six years the Spirit of God has granted me much help as I have written without ceasing to warn men and women in many parts of the world of the impending destruction of the whole Babylon system. As I have fasted and prayed, waiting on God both night and day, I have been conscious that the days of warning are almost over. It is time for Noah and his family to flee into the ark. It is time for Lot to flee out of Sodom. The day of God's wrath and fearful judgment is at hand. Therefore the Spirit speaks again, saying, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her plagues, for strong is the Lord God that judgeth her." "Rejoice over her, thou heaven, and ye holy apostles and prophets; for God hath avenged you on her. And a mighty angel took up a stone like a great millstone, and cast it into the sea, saying, thus with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all." Rev. 18:20-21.

It would be impossible for one to try to put on paper even a condensed list of the ever increasing signs of the end of the age. Those who read this message are already sick to death of hearing about the abounding violence in the homes, on the streets, among the nations, on the highways as murder, insurrection, rebellion, rape, arson, torture and every fiendish thing the human mind can devise is daily filling the country all around us. And the earth itself, seeming to echo the violence of man, convulses with an epilepsy of earthquakes, tornadoes, typhoons, hurricanes and volcanoes. It is estimated that since the year 1900 five hundred wars have been fought and at least one hundred million people killed. The money spent on war would buy a three-bedroom brick house for every family on the face of the earth. Man never learns by his lessons, but goes right on repeating over and over the same atrocities and crimes generation after generation. At this very moment the world is a powder keg with sufficient nuclear energy equaling 30,000 pounds of T.N.T. for every man, woman and child on the globe. With these dreadful forces in existence, increasing in quantity every day as more and more nations are added to the nuclear club, is it any wonder that two thousand years ago the Bible predicted that two thirds of the earth's population would be destroyed before the end of this present age, and that, except those days where shortened, there would no flesh be saved?

In the book of Jeremiah there is a strange prophecy that speaks of a nation being raised up from the sides of the earth. For centuries this scripture has been passed by with little or no meaning attached to it, but prophecy however obscure is always brought to light as the day of its fulfillment draws nigh. When the prophet Jeremiah said that a nation would be raised up from the sides of the earth, he was saying, as we do now, that a nation would be raised up on all sides. When we continue to read the description of this new nation, we find it fits perfectly with the dreadful phenomenon that is taking place in practically every nation on earth as tens of thousands of delinquent young men and women, wearing ridiculous clothes and weird hairdos, adopting all manner of devilish names as Mods and Rockers, Hell's Angels, and Banshees ride their motorcycles, burn, loot, rape, and carry on every imaginable and unreasonable crime in their senseless orgies of so-called rebellion against society, until it is literally unsafe for any one to be on the street. This wicked phenomenon is not happening in America alone. It is happening all over the world among democratic and communist nations alike. The earth is filled with violence and spoil just as the word of God said it would be.

With this in mind then let us quote at least parts of the prophecy given by the faithful Jeremiah that we may see how true it is. "Thus saith the Lord, Behold, a people cometh from the North Country, and a great nation shall be raised from the sides of the earth. They shall lay hold on bow and spear (weapons); they are cruel and have no mercy; Their voice roareth like the sea (people); and they ride upon horses (motorcycles), set in array as men for war against thee, O daughter of Zion. We have heard the fame thereof: our hands wax feeble. (Laws are weak against them). Anguish hath taken hold of us, and pain, as of a woman in travai. Go not forth into the field nor walk by the way; for the sword of the enemy and fear is on every side ... They are all grievous revolters, walking with slanders: they are brass and iron (bold and brazen); they are all corrupters. The bellows are burned, the lead is consumed in the fire; the founder melteth in vain; for the wicked are not plucked away. Reprobate silver shall men call them, because the Lord hath rejected them." Jer. 6:22-25 and 28-30.

These people are being raised up from all sides of the earth. They are springing up as weeds among all people, and though they represent all languages and all colors of skin, they are one nation, for their doctrine and creeds, their violence and filth are the same. In truth they are a nation from the sides of the earth, coming from nowhere and everywhere at the same time.

No disorderly society has ever survived. It is impossible for morals to collapse, God's word to be abandoned, and every imaginable sin to be exalted, and at the same time to see the world grow better and more enduring. All these evils give rise to the coming of that man of sin who opposeth and exalteth himself against everything that is of God or that is worshipped, so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God showing himself that he is God.

Seeing then that all things as we have known them are to be destroyed, what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness?

Paul in the epistle to the Thessalonians, speaking of the coming of the Lord, made this remarkable statement: "The mystery of iniquity doth already work; only he who now letteth (hindereth) will let (hinder) until he be taken out of the way. And then shall that Wicked be revealed..." 2 Thess. 2:7-8. Two thousand years ago Paul was aware that the mysterious spirit of iniquity (rebellion) was at work in the church. But he told us of a tremendous force that was hindering that wicked spirit, saying, "He who now hindereth will hinder until he be taken out of the way. Then shall that Wicked be revealed." That which has always hindered the working of the spirit of iniquity is the elect of God, that chosen company walking in the fear of the Lord and the power of the Holy Spirit. It was of these that Jesus said, "Ye are the salt of the earth." Amid the confusion of Babylon God has been forming an elect company of sons. This company has for two thousand years been scattered among all the Babylonish church system just as Daniel, Shadrach, Meshach, Abednego, Nehemiah and Ezra were found among the hosts of Babylon long ago or as the seven thousand who had not bowed the knee to Baal existed in obscurity in the days of Elijah. These people were often unknown to each other, but they were nevertheless the elect of God, the salt of the earth that kept the whole thing from going completely rotten. These elect persons, scattered throughout every system, have for two thousand years or more hindered the full working of the spirit of iniquity and the revelation of anti-christ.

We have now come to the end of the age and the word of God is very clear that at the end of the age the Lord will gather His elect out of Babylon, saying, "Come out of her, My people." He will gather His elect from the four winds. He will gather them out of the fields and separate them from the tares. He is dividing them as a shepherd divides his sheep from the goats. That great day of separation has surely come and he that hinders (the elect) is being taken out of the way. This long awaited event is happening before our very eyes and to it may be ascribed the reason for the ever increasing moral corruption in the world which has already reached indescribable proportions. It is also the reason for the unbelievable breaking down of truth and all godliness in the church systems until they are no longer separate and apart from the world, but completely one with it and a part of it.

Now please don’t write and tell me that your little group is different and that they are the elect of God. I receive letters like that all the time. All such thinking is humbug and idolatrous nonsense. The elect sons of God do not exist in groups. They are scattered as the eagles. In all the world there is not a group without leaven, there is not a field without weeds, there is not a pasture without goats, and there is not a group without its pretenders and hypocrites. I have come to see that groupism is equally as bad as denominationalism, for it is sectarianism in the extreme. They all imagine that "they are the people" and "wisdom will die with them". Such groups exist all over the world and they are just as deceived as they can be. The true elect of God are the people who are one spirit with the Father, and, because they are one spirit with Him, they are one spirit with all people who are one spirit with the Father. This is in truth the true body of Christ and all who are in that Christ Spirit are sons of God and will respond when the trumpet sounds. In "one Spirit are we all baptized into one body".

What does it mean to you, my friend, to realize that the true elect are being taken out of the church systems to stand in preparation and waiting for the moment when the dead in Christ will rise first and the living in Christ will rise with them to meet the Lord in the air that they might descend with Him on the Mount of Olives for the beginning of the marvelous kingdom age? Is this the time to seek out little groups or large groups that we may cast in our lot with them? Is this not rather the time to seek the Lord and come into unity of spirit with Him?

Some time ago I was intrigued by a little incident that will illustrate this thought of the readiness of the elect. In Canada our five cent pieces are made of nickel. We call them nickels for that reason. One day lying upon my desk was a handful of change consisting of dimes, quarters, Canadian nickels, and American five cent pieces. I happened to have a little magnet in my hand and for some unknown reason I passed the magnet over the money on the desk. To my surprise every Canadian nickel in the pile immediately sprang up and clung to the magnet, leaving the rest of the money (silver) still on the table. Intrigued, I repeated the experiment several times until I realized that the reason the Canadian five cent pieces responded to the magnet was because they were made of nickel while the rest of the money was made of silver and could not respond. The lesson is this: There is an elect company among all people and Christians who are living and moving in the Spirit while other Christians around them are walking in the flesh and following the natural mind. These in Christ people are the ones who will hear the voice of God and respond to it when the trumpet sounds, even though they are lying in their graves. These are the firstfruits unto Christ and the firstfruits of the resurrection. They will respond to the magnetic voice of the archangel and the trump of God. They will be caught up whether living or dead to meet the Lord in the air and to descend with Him upon the Mount of Olives for the beginning of a kingdom that shall never be destroyed, a kingdom that shall spread itself over the whole earth, embracing all men within its government of peace until the rejoicing choirs of earth join with the majestic hosts of heaven in the glorious anthem:

   Jesus shall reign where'er the sun
 Doth his successive journeys run;
 His kingdom spread from shore to shore,
 Till moons shall wax and wane no more,

During our holidays we had the opportunity to visit the World Fair at Montreal. Amid the remarkable displays from many nations one thing, to me, stood out above all else to make an indelible impression upon my mind. In the Israel Pavilion, emblazoned in twenty-four languages upon a large and specially prepared wall in letters like gold for all the world to read, were the words of Psalm 126:1-3. "When the Lord turned again the captivity of Zion, we were like them that dream. Then was our mouth filled with laughter, and our tongue with singing; then said they among the heathen, The Lord hath done great things for them. The Lord hath done great things for us; whereof we are glad."

In the light of the restoration of the Jews to the Holy Land since 1917 and the unforgettable events of eternal significance that have taken place in this year of 1967, our hearts cannot but be overwhelmed by the significance of it all, and especially so when the Jews, returning from ages of wandering, sense in their spirits that this is indeed the hand of God delivering them from their captivity, fulfilling the ancient prophecies, and restoring them to their land. Though still in darkness and unbelief, the hour is at hand for the revelation of Christ to His brethren even as Joseph long ago revealed himself to his brothers who had rejected and hated him, saying, "I am Joseph, thy brother, whom ye sold into the land of Egypt". Gen. 45:4.

Wonderful things are even now at hand. Let us watch and be sober, looking neither to the right hand nor to the left. Fear not the tribulation nor the things that shall come upon the earth, but look with patience and anticipation to the glory that shall follow.
CHAPTER FIVE
BEWARE

Our pathway through this world is marked by many a pitfall and almost endless dangers. Ever since the fall of man our way has been beset with perils - perils by land and perils by sea, terrors by night, arrows that fly by day, pestilence that walketh in darkness, and destruction that wasteth at noonday. From the moment we draw our first breath until our breathless bodies return to the dust, the specter of danger and death hovers about us like an evil spirit ever ready to strike the body with disease or snuff out the breath of life by accidents so varied that no human mind can conceive their number. Though we are prone to feel safe within the four walls of our home, insurance companies have found that more accidents happen in the home than in any other one place. No part of the physical body is beyond the reach of this stalking peril. From the toe-nails of our feet to the precious brain in our heads every organ within or without is a target for the deadly arrows that seek our life to take it away.

Many times through life have we been thankful for the warning signs erected by thoughtful people in the hope of delivering our feet from some snare, our minds from corruption, or our souls from death. "Beware of the dog!" reads one sign. "Beware of pick-pockets," reads another. "Danger! Thin ice." "Danger! Soft shoulder." "Long hill. Use your gears." "Dangerous curve." "Pavement slippery when wet." The oceans of the world are dotted with light-houses flashing out their warnings to mariners at sea lest they fall on the rocks and be lost. There are warning notices in factories, warning notices on farm machines, poison labels on bottles, flammable signs on gas tanks, explosive labels on munitions trucks and high voltage warnings on power lines. There is no end of warnings because all our earthly existence is beset by danger from the cradle to the grave. Yet in spite of all the warnings, every day of the year people die by thousands who could have been saved by taking heed, while others are injured or maimed for life. "I forgot," "I wasn't thinking," "I was in a hurry", we hear on every side, but what does our excuse suffice when it is too late? We are never past the time in life when we can cease to take heed, for ever present peril walks with us in the morning, stalks our way at noon, and wastes us in darkness.

If our physical lives only were in such constant jeopardy, we might have cause to rejoice, but an even greater danger besets us, even the ever present danger to our spirits. The realization and reality of this danger inspired the apostle Peter to say, "Be sober, be vigilant, because your adversary the devil as a roaring lion walketh about, seeking whom he may devour: whom resist steadfast in the faith..." 1 Pet. 5: 8-9. This evil one of many faces, who appeared to Eve as a wise and clever serpent to beguile her mind with his subtlety, has as a roaring lion sought to terrify Christians in all ages, bringing them into all manner of fear and bondage to wicked systems, that their lives might be devoured by their evil ritual and become unfruitful. Terrifying as his roaring may be, nothing he has ever done has been so deceptive and deceitful as his continual appearance in the pulpits of the land as an angel of light. And I shall not hesitate to tell you that in this dread hour of darkness and confusion in which we live Satan as an angel of light stands in millions of pulpits, transforming himself into the minister of Christ. "They are false prophets, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ, and no marvel, for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light; therefore it is no great thing if his ministers also be transformed as the ministers of righteousness: whose end shall be according to their works." 2 Cor. 11:13-15.

Even the possibility that such a one as this may now be preaching the sermons that hold you spellbound from week to week should be a warning, red letter sign, halting your heedless step and shouting, "Take heed! Beware!" Satan in his deceptive wisdom has blinded the minds of men that they might think of him as an ugly, easily recognized monstrosity with a mouth so full of falsehood that even a child could recognize his lying. But herein lies one of his greatest deceptions, for he seldom comes in recognizable form. He whose nature is ravening as a wolf appears in the clothing of a sheep, gentle and harmless as a lamb, or as an angel of light he walks as an apostle of Christ and a minister of the church. 2 Cor. 11:13-15. As an anointed prophet of God he speaks forth words of prophecy, beguiling the minds of people to make them disciples of men.

It was for this very reason that our Lord Jesus Christ flashed out the warning signal: "Beware of false prophets who come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves." Matt 7:15. Our Lord then said that we should know them by their fruits, and well we may thus know them! But I greatly fear that almost all of God's children have mistaken works for fruits; therefore, pointing to the many good works fervently undertaken by these men and observing many ambitious programs to evangelize the world and heal the sick, they think of a certainty that such must surely be the angels of God and ministers of light, and thus they are deceived. Surely our Lord demonstrated this subtle truth when He said in this same sermon, "Not every one that saith unto Me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of My Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, Have we not prophesied in Thy name? And in Thy name have cast out devils? And in Thy name done many wonderful works'? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from Me, ye that work iniquity." Matt 7:21-23. In scripture the word iniquity always conveys the thought of rebellion.

Thus from the lips of Christ, who is the truth and cannot lie, we have this dread warning that many - not few, but many - shall come preaching and prophesying and performing miracles who were never sent of God at all, and who in reality seek their own glory. They propagate every imaginable plan to convert the world, to evangelize this and Christianize that, but their plans are all out of their own heads, springing from that fertile field of the carnal mind. Thus they appeal to the carnal minds of the believers who find it easier to associate themselves with grandiose schemes which give them that comfortable feeling of having done some great thing for Christ rather than having associated themselves with Him, that through unity and fellowship with Him they might be delivered from their own flesh to flow like a river into the ocean of God's divine mind.

We are living in the Laodicean period of the church age. This is the age when our Lord Jesus Christ is completely outside the church system. Rev. 3:14-22. We are not living in the age of great revival, but in the hour when Christ is speaking to individuals at whose door He knocks, saying, "If any man will hear My voice and open the door, I will come in to him." Rev. 3:20. This is the work God is doing and, because this is the foreordained plan of God, it cannot be changed. We may talk all we like about great revivals in the earth. There are none. We may point to this city-wide campaign, and that healing campaign, this great man and that great man. They are pseudo revivals and by their fruits we can know them. If the thousands were being saved that they claim are being saved, there would be a brake slammed on sin and iniquity such as would transform the whole country, for even unbelievers are mightily affected when God's Spirit is moving with revival in the earth. Instead of the fruits of love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faithfulness, meekness, and temperance appearing in the religious systems of earth, we find an appalling increase in adultery, fornication, unclean-ness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like. As a good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit; wherefore by their fruits shall ye know them. Let none try to convince himself that these evils exist among the worldly only, for such is not the truth. They abound among the professing congregations and stand unabashed in the pulpits, transforming themselves into angels of light and ministers of righteousness.

There is only one sure path in this dread hour of the world's final iniquity. There is only one way that is ever right and never wrong. Even now as in the long ago, our blessed Lord, Jesus Christ, standeth, saying, "I am the way, the truth, and the life" There is one voice that all true saints must know. It is the voice of Jesus Christ. There is one shepherd that all true sheep must follow. He is the good shepherd who gave His life for the sheep. There is one door by which all true saints must enter the fold. It is the door Christ Jesus. John 10: 1-15. Centuries ago the apostle Paul wrote, "There are, it may be, so many kinds of voices in the world..." (Cor. 14:10), and, if I may add a comment, I would say there are many more voices in the world today than there were in his day, many more deceivers walking after their own lusts, many more seeking to draw away disciples after themselves, many more seeking to make themselves rich by robbing widows' houses and seeking gifts from the poor. Rich and increased in goods, they have need of nothing without, but within they are wretched and miserable, poor, blind, and naked. Rev. 3: 17. But there is one gentle voice still ringing clear to those few who have ears to hear it, still calling above all this abominable religious turmoil, "Follow Me! Follow Me!" He continues, "My sheep know My voice and they follow Me, and I give unto them eternal life, and they shall never perish; neither shall any man pluck them out of My hand, for My Father which gave them Me is greater than all, and no man can pluck them out of My Father's hand.

Never in a lifetime, though it should abide a thousand years, will we ever learn to know the voice of Christ by listening to the many voices of preachers, for no man can lead us higher than he himself is. For this very reason we have often found that the same man who once led us to Christ or taught us of the Baptism of the Holy Spirit now persistently hinders us from any further progress in God, refusing to partake of the new wine of the kingdom lest it will burst his organizational bottle. He justifies himself by saying, "The old is better." Luke 5: 39.

I believe the professing church is full of false prophets and full of false christs. The organized religious system itself from Rome, the mother of harlots, to the youngest and most glamorous of her Protestant daughters has become a false christ to millions, offering a false security and a false anointing. The prophets of this vast denominational system are more numerous by far than the prophets of Baal, for they are legion, and they have completely captured the minds of the people, leading them to revel in the confusion of Babylon rather than the knowledge of the Son of God. Therefore beware of false prophets.

"Then in the audience of all the people He said unto His disciples, "Beware of the scribes, which desire to walk in long robes, and love greetings in the markets, and the highest seats in synagogues, and the chief rooms at feasts; which devour widows' houses and for a pretense make long prayers..." Luke 20: 45-47.

While the false prophets and the miracle workers are the glamour boys of religion, binding millions of captive souls in slavery to their every whim, they are by no means in the majority nor do they have the largest following. "Beware of the scribes," Jesus said in the audience of the people, for the scribes, who were men of great reputation for wisdom and honor and constant students of the Law of God, were generally the bitter enemies both of Christ and His marvelous gospel. Proud and haughty they loved to parade in long robes that all men should know their status. They loved to be greeted in the market place and receive the obeisance of the people, who addressed them as Reverend or Father or Teacher, and to be admired of men for their learning and apparent spiritual stature.

Fine feathers make fine birds, but they are as likely to adorn a vulture as a dove. Unhappy, indeed, will be the man who looks only on this outward show, for they, like sepulchers, appear beautiful and expensive without, but within they are full of dead men's bones. Beautiful without but covetous and oppressive within they make the robes of their religion the cloak of their covetousness. Entering into the houses of widows, they persuade them to give up their means or mortgage their property to finance some ambitious scheme and this they often do without written guarantee of repayment, but with only the unfaithful and crafty word of these fine-feathered deceivers, who, having obtained their purpose, become distant and evasive. By the use of long prayers in public they leave the impression of nothing but pious concern for God and His Kingdom. Thus people are charmed into thinking that surely such devout men may be trusted with untold amounts of gold, and they by sleight of men and cunning craftiness, having obtained their purpose, roll in costly coaches and live on the fat of the land.

Never trust a man who parades in robes, for his religion is in his skirt and not his heart. It was of this class that Jesus said, "The same shall receive greater damnation." Luke 20: 47. Beware of scribes.

Leaven as used in scripture is a symbol of corruption. Our Lord likened leaven to the corrupting doctrines of the Pharisees, saying, "Beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees." Matt. 16:11. From this statement His disciples understood that He bade them beware of the doctrine of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees. Verse 12. Likewise also the apostle Paul likened leaven to malice and wickedness, saying, "Therefore let us keep the feast, not with the old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth." 1 Cor. 5:8.

The corrupting influence of false doctrine is ever with us and has continued from the beginning of the Christian era. Jesus in His seven great parables of the kingdom of heaven illustrated the working of evil as a leaven in the kingdom of heaven continuing its work of corruption unto the very end of the age when "the whole would be leavened." Matt. 13:33. By this convincing parable He teaches us that corrupting and false doctrine would permeate the whole of Christendom until there was nothing left in all its system that was not corrupted by it. Is it any wonder then that God is calling to you, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her sins?" The wheat and the tares have grown together until now; the sheep and the goats have roamed together in the same pasture. The leaven has worked in the meal until the whole is leavened. The good fish and the bad have been caught in the same net. Now at the end of the age the separation is beginning. The good are being gathered into vessels and the bad are being cast away.
Though we might instruct forever, endlessly trying to discern between false doctrines and true, we would still never come to any conclusion, for the carnal man sees through carnal eyes, the dog returns to his vomit, and the sow to her wallowing in the mire. Thus men, having eyes, see not and, having ears, they hear not, neither do they understand, for, their hearts having grown gross by the love of this age, they believe only what suits them and hear nothing of the rest. There is, therefore, only one word of advice that I can give. Beware of all teachings and doctrines and strivings and concentrate on Christ. He is truth and beside Him there is no truth. If you believe only what I say, sooner or later you will find yourself on a side track, but if you know Him and know His voice, you will never be turned aside by the voice of strangers.

Like a choir of wary voices, ascending in pitiful prayer to God, so the weary pilgrims cry, "Lord, how can we know the way? Which among this confusion of voices can we believe? Which among this conglomeration of doctrines is right?" There is, thank God, one answer and one only. It is the answer given by Jesus centuries ago. "I am the way, the truth, and the life." John 14:5-6. Oh, that men would turn aside from the voices that clamor all about them, and let their troubling cease in Him. Seek not the way. Seek Christ, for He is the way. Seek not truth from the learnings of men. Seek Christ, for He is truth. Neither shall you seek after life, for those who believe into Him shall never die. "For if ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affections on things above and not on things on the earth; for ye are dead (have died), and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with Him in glory."

One of the outstanding marks of the end of the age is an abounding and almost universal covetousness. 2 Tim. 3:2. We have entered a period when little or nothing matters except the dollar. Pride of workmanship, devotion to duty, the honor and love of friends, and even devotion to that precious heritage, the family, is vanishing from the earth. To millions of fathers and mothers the possession of things takes pre-eminence over the home life. Infants in their formative years are left to spend most of their waking hours with professional baby sitters while their parents, weary in their search for gold, become virtual strangers to their offspring, who in turn come to think of mother and dad as people who take them to the sitter in the morning and pick them up in the evening, but who are too tired to do much more than put them to bed. Then, of course, with wide-eyed wonder we express astonishment that the world is full of delinquents.

The apostle James foretold that at the end of the age there would be many rich men who had heaped together enormous treasure for the last days. They in their covetousness had robbed the laborers who had reaped their fields, keeping back their wages by fraud. Jas. 5:1-4. If a man could have lived and earned $10,000.00 a year since Adam's day, his fortune would be small compared to the vast aggregate some men have amassed in the last ten years. Covetousness in one form or another lies at the bottom of all strikes, for the laborer, not content with his wages, demands more of the employer's profits, and the employer, not content with his profit, seeks to rob the laborer of his hire. Well did Paul say, "The love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith and pierced themselves through with many sorrows." 1 Tim. 6:10. Have you ever wondered why the love of money is the root of all evil? It is simply because money has power to buy only things for the body of flesh to use - things to see, things to taste, things to touch, things to smell, and things to hear. Things, things, things to lavish luxuriously upon the flesh and the natural man. Money can buy nothing for the spirit nor for the spiritual man, neither is it of any great value to evangelization, all the protestations of Babylon's covetous preachers notwithstanding.

The word of God is very clear in its teaching that all the accumulated wealth of the world will suddenly be destroyed or become completely valueless. Surely that must be the meaning of the inspired words of James: "Your riches are corrupted: your garments are moth-eaten. Your gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as with fire." Jas. 5:3-4. An even more vivid description of this dire destruction was given by the apostle John, who in unerring vision beheld the downfall and dreadful overthrow of both spiritual and political Babylon, together with her accumulated wealth, in one hour of calamity. He saw the merchants of the earth weeping and mourning as they saw the smoke of her burning. Standing afar off they cried, “Alas! Alas! For that great city! For in one hour her destruction has come, and she shall be no more! The merchandise of gold, and silver, and precious stones, and of pearls and fine linen, and purple, and silk, and scarlet, and all thyme wood, and all manner vessels of ivory, and all manner vessels of most precious wood, and of brass and iron, and marble, and cinnamon, and odors, and ointments, and frankincense, and wine, and oil, and fine flour, and wheat, and beasts, and sheep, and horses, and chariots, and slaves, and souls of men." Read Rev. 18:1-24. No wonder they wept at such a destruction, for all the fruits that their souls lusted after were departed, together with all dainty things and goodly. All those, too, who traded by sea stood afar off crying and casting dust on their heads because in one hour all the wealth of this world system had been destroyed.

The awful calamity that shall come to the world's system of confusion will be the cause of rejoicing for those precious saints of God who have trusted, not in these things, but in the living God, who having food and raiment have been content. The heaven itself rejoiced together with the apostles and prophets of God, and a mighty angel, joining in the celebration, heaved a great millstone into the sea, saying "Thus with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down." Please read the account in Rev. 18:1-24.

This great destruction is the end of Babylon both spiritual and political and the end of all covetousness as well. It is a warning much too great for elaboration, teaching us that we should never set our hearts on the abundance of this age, nor lust after any evil thing. Covetousness is a thing of deceit. It lives not only in the hearts of sharp-eyed crooks, but surreptitiously parades in clerical robes. Pioulsy sobbing out its tale of woe with pretentious devotion, it suggests the sale of the precious ointment for three hundred pence that alms may be given to the poor, not because it cares for the poor, but because it is a covetous thief and has the bag, clandestinely stealing that which is placed therein. It counts the number of the heathen and proclaims their eternal loss if we withhold our money until one would certainly think that God's eternal plan depended on the dollars and cents of American capitalism. Let us never be deceived by these covetous men, and, more important still, let us never stoop to the practice of such things. Let us rather beware of covetousness.

A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of things, which he possesseth. Therefore Jesus gave double warning regarding the evil of covetousness in these words: Take heed and beware. Luke 12:15. Well do I know that every man who reads these lines will quickly deny any suggestion that his labors are motivated by covetousness, but a week of fasting and prayer might uncover the deceitfulness of his heart, for covetousness is a deep-rooted evil that hides itself in the most unusual places, never revealing its presence unless it is rooted out by the Spirit of God.

My heart is made heavy when I see Christians so busy that they have no time to pray, too filled with earth's trash to enjoy conversation about eternal things, too pressed to read the Bible, too much in demand to hold family worship, fathers and mothers too involved with the petty things of house, meals, and children to sit at Jesus’ feet as Mary did to hear the only story in the universe that really matters. Ah, let us beware of covetousness, for that which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God. Luke 16:14-15. Covetous men and women will have no part in the kingdom of God, for they are all one with fornicators, idolaters, adulterers, effeminate, homosexuals, thieves, drunkards, revilers, and extortioners. 1 Cor. 6:9-10. If the people of God would make a diligent practice of reading the Bible, they would not be easily deceived either by false teaching or by covetous men with their crafty schemes to obtain their money. My own observations over the past years have led me to believe that most Christians know practically nothing of what the Bible really says. They have read snatches of it here and there - enough to fortify themselves in some man-made doctrine - but they have never read it as a love-letter from God that its truth might sink into their hearts and become vital to their life and experience. Christians have made the Bible fit their experience rather than make their experience fit the truth. People would not get into all the dreadful tangles they do if they knew the word of God and read it as it is written. Christians have become so muddled in a multitude of human doctrines, so tangled by divorces and remarriages, so deceived by every spiritual quack who proclaims a new revelation, so blown about with every wind of doctrine, so hood-winked and sucked-in by the grandiose schemes of covetous preachers who demand money galore for tents and trucks, literature and clothing and a hundred other feasible sounding notions that they have lost communion with Christ altogether. I frankly confess that I have no confidence whatsoever in any scheme that ends with an appeal for our money, whether that appeal be made... from a pulpit or by an urgent letter through the mail. Avoid any person who sends you a self-addressed envelope for your offering for his work. We punish men for vagrancy who openly beg on our streets, but we honor these spiritual mendicants who openly operate their crafty business from a pulpit or defraud the people through the mail.

Let us then conclude with the burning exhortation of Peter, who with weighty words of wisdom warns of these covetous deceivers and of the gullible multitude who blindly follow them. "But there were false teachers among you, who privately shall bring upon themselves swift destruction. And many shall follow their pernicious ways: by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of; and through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you: whose judgment now of a long time lingereth not and their damnation slumbereth not." 2 Pet. 2:1-4. Please read the whole chapter.

In the light of all these things let us then search our hearts. Let us rob neither God nor man. Let us covet neither the money, the prominence, nor the gifts of another, but having food and raiment, let us be content; and should riches by the will of God increase, let us not set our hearts upon them. Psa. 62:10. "For why shouldst thou set thine eyes upon that which is not? For riches certainly make themselves wings; they fly away as an eagle toward heaven." Prov. 23:4-5. Beware of covetousness.

Our Lord had just warned His disciples in these words, "Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves," verse 16, and followed the warning with this statement: Beware of men. Matt. 10:16-17. The ancient Latin expression, Homo homini lupus - man is a wolf to man - reveals the very thought Christ had in mind when He likened our presence among men to the presence of sheep among wolves. And what, indeed, may sheep expect of wolves? The wolf cometh not but for to kill and destroy. Cursed is the man who putteth confidence in man and maketh flesh his arm, for the nature of unsanctified man is the worst nature in all the world next to devils. Even the savage lions and bears agree among themselves and seldom prey on their own kind, but not so with man, whose barbarism and hate to his fellow man makes him devoid of the thing called humanity, persecuting to the death all that oppose, and that in the name of righteousness. Crafty and politic as a man, but cruel and barbarous as a beast, his rage and enmity, especially against the seed of Christ, will turn him into a devil.

Sheep who are to live in the presence of wolves must expect to be hated; therefore our Lord said, "Ye shall be hated of all nations for My name's sake." We have never been promised flower strewn pathways, but rather this: "All who will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." 2 Tim. 3:12. And again: "In the world ye shall have tribulation." John 16:33.

It is not my desire to scare those who read this message, neither do we desire to lull any to sleep or to give a false sense of security. But the day is surely at hand when God will divide between the false, and the true and separate him that serveth God from him that serveth him not. Several years ago we warned that the day was at hand when Rome, the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth, would unite with her harlot daughters of Protestantism. Many people scoffed at the thought then and said it could never be. Protestant people, and especially those with fundamentalist background, would never submit nor succumb to such a thing as this. But today few people are hardy enough to deny it, for they see the awful reality of this truth right before their eyes. I have on my desk at this moment a lengthy advertisement advertising the restaurant banqueting and religious gatherings of this lewd harlot and her daughters, and lo! the fundamentalist groups, the Nazarenes, Pentecostals, and Friends are all there among them. The thing is not only coming! It is here! Furthermore, this brazen woman of spiritual Babylon is even now preparing to climb aboard the beast of political Babylon. What other interpretation can be drawn or what other reason can be given to explain the visit of the Pope to the United Nations? Read the whole story as it was pre-written 1900 years ago in Revelation 17.

The joining together of the harlot and her daughters and the final uniting of spiritual and political Babylon poses an ominous threat to the true people of God. Remember this: The harlot is drunken with the blood of saints and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus. Rev. 17:16. The hour is certainly coming when no man can buy or sell unless he bears the mark or image of this abominable spiritual-political alliance, the mark of the beast that ariseth out of the earth.

Therefore Jesus said, "Beware of man," for they will deliver you up to councils and scourge you in their synagogues. Matt. 10:17. You will be counted as the filth and off-scouring of the earth. 1 Cor. 4:13. You will be hated of all nations for Christ's sake. Matt. 10:22. Neither shall your own kindred defend you, for the brother shall deliver the brother to death, and the father the child, and children shall rise up against their parents and cause them to be put to death. Matt. 10:21. The rage of man against Christ breaks asunder family ties and desolates the bonds of friendship even as it broke the golden link between David and Ahithophel. See Psa. 54:12. The precious things that are chosen of God are the same things that are disallowed of men. 2 Pet. 2:4.

Now the Lord did not say fear men; He said beware of men. In all our dealing with man we must never forget that he is nothing but man. His breath is in his nostrils. He is soon coming to judgment; therefore fear not him who can destroy the body, but never trust him, for there is not an ounce of stability in him. Beware of man!

"Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit after the tradition of men." Col. 2:8. The word, word spoil here simply means rob, and Paul is saying, "Beware lest any man rob you through philosophy and vain deceit," that is, through intellectualism and the world's crude way of looking at things, for such stuff is only man's idea and of the nature of the world, disregarding Christ and the purpose of God.

Centuries ago the apostle Paul wrote these words to the Christians of Galatia: "Ye did run well; who did hinder you that ye should not obey the truth?" Gal. 5:7. As long as the world endures, Satan will always be using someone to rob you of the simplicity that there is in Christ. It is so deplorably easy to get involved with a hundred things outside of Christ, for God's people seem to forget so soon that it is in Him that all the fullness of the God-head dwells embodied, and that we are complete in Him who is the head of all principality and power. Voices call from all directions and from within as well as from without, seeking to add this to our faith in Christ and that to our faith in Christ - a little philosophy here, a fact of science there, a bit of tradition, the regarding of a day, the observing of a month, the keeping of a feast, the ritual of circumcision, or the regulations of Lent. The time we spend concentrating on these things is time lost in concentrating on Jesus Christ, and the time we spend trying to add something to our faith by the use of such things we lose in the enjoyment of the fullest grace of God, knowing not at all that these things are fulfilled in Him.

Our blessed Lord did not do away with the law because men could not keep it, as so many vain talkers with their human learning would have us believe, for the law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul. Jesus Christ came to fulfill every jot and tittle of it in all its holiness, righteousness, and purity that by the grace of God all who receive him might be fully justified because they believe into Him. Thus all who receive Him become transformed by Him that the law of God may no longer make impossible demands upon carnal men from a table of cold stone, but, being by God's grace written in the hearts of believing men, it becomes part and parcel of their new nature in Christ that they might show forth all the righteousness of the law, not by being enslaved by an outward command, but from the wellspring of Christ's righteousness written within. Those deluded souls who would have us believe that all who receive the grace of Christ are free to break the law of God will find at last that they have never believed at all, for those who have truly believed into Him are not only justified but empowered to live as sons of God that, as He is, so should we also be in this present world. 1 John 4:17.

See to it then that you do not spend your years trying to concentrate on the law of God, for you have no power to meet its demands. Concentrate rather on Christ, for he fulfilled its demands to the letter, both by His righteous life and by His death as a sacrifice and atonement for all the world. "For if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh (when they were offered under the law), how much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God?" Heb. 9:13-14. God's people should steadfastly resist the efforts of men, however good the men may be, who seek to make you concentrate on anything but Christ. On every hand we find people who are devoutly religious, but who have no true knowledge of Christ. They are something like the good Martha, always busy serving, but always missing that vital union with Him which is of such eternal importance and without which true sonship cannot be attained.

Let us see then what great encouragement God has given us to concentrate on Christ that we might know Him, and live and move and have our being in Him. The apostle Paul had great conflict about this very issue, for men are always prone to concentrate on things rather than on Christ. Therefore he wrote, "For I would have you know what great conflict I have for you, and for them of Laodicea, and for as many as have not seen my face in the flesh, that their hearts might be comforted, being knit together in love, and unto all riches of the full assurance of understanding, to the acknowledgement of the mystery of God, and of the Father, and of Christ; in whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge... As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in Him: rooted and built up in Him, and established in the faith... abounding therein with thanksgiving.” Col 2:1-3, 6-7.

Now if all the fullness of wisdom and knowledge is in Him, then it is in union with Him that all the fullness of wisdom and knowledge dwells in us. It is thus and thus alone that we begin to understand what is the length, and breadth, and depth, and height of the love of God that passeth knowledge. It is in union with Him that understanding of the eternal purposes begins to unfold. It is here that our understanding departs from the hodge-podge of human reason, which robs God of the attributes of omniscience, omnipotence, and immutability to make all creation a victim of chance. In union with Him understanding unfolds as a flower until all things, yes, all things, become a part of an eternal purpose, omniscient, immutable, and divine, where all things so work together for the eternal good that even evil men are made God's servants (Rom. 9:17), and good men are made His sons.

Personally I am convinced that if God's people who are afflicted and sick in body would learn to sit at Jesus feet as Mary did, they might hear the instruction that drops as dew from His lips. They would either find health and healing as Hezekiah did or discover the benefits of a thorn in the flesh as Paul did. But instead of making our physical infirmity a grand occasion for the triumph of our spirit in union with Him, we endlessly run in search of a man who, we hope, can pray the prayer of faith for us, only to go away still sick in body, depressed in mind, and undone in confidence. See to it that you are not robbed of your vital union with Christ by putting your confidence in a highly advertised healing ministry, for they allure you through great swelling words of vanity to make merchandise of you. Eloquently they affirm that many are healed, but secretly they hide from your notice the tens of thousands who were never touched at all. Beholding as I have for many years their grandiose schemes filled with covetousness and feigned words with which they bewitch people who have never learned to hold to Christ, the Head, I have lost all confidence in them. Furthermore, I think it can be truthfully said that such meetings find no sound base in scripture, for while both Jesus and the apostles did in truth heal the sick, never once do we read of a healing campaign or even a special meeting for such a purpose. The healings of Jesus appear to be purely incidental as He passed along in His duty or was besought by some needy one.

Now, while some men are robbed of their union with Christ through philosophy and vain deceptions, others are robbed by the human tradition of church meetings. To belong to a church has become the important thing to almost all the people, yet few have ever considered that that which man calls the church is not the church at all. The church is not a building that stands on the corner of the street; neither is it the congregation that fills the building each night of the week. The church is that mystical body who, having heard the voice of Christ, have followed Him. They are a people chosen of God, known to God, and called of God. They are His chosen treasure who live and move and have their being in Him.

Why are God's people so easily turned aside from their abiding place in Him to become the amused spectators of a pompous and pretentious show and the attentive listeners to the balderdash of these mouthy puppeteers who with feigned words and psychology make merchandise of the gullible people? Such people display little love for God and know nothing of His ways, but will always be found to chatter endlessly about the things they have seen in the meetings and of the vast programs of so great a man of God. Thus they become spoiled and robbed of their heritage in Christ, because they have chosen a thing that offers glamour, momentary satisfaction, and excitement to the outward man. Labor not for the meat, which perisheth, but for that which endureth unto everlasting life.

There is yet another way in which God's people are being robbed and spoiled. As we come closer to the end of the age and as some honest people see the dreadful lack in the existing system erroneously called the church, they begin to seek after visionary people who put all manner of stock in visions and dreams, which they claim to have seen. On this important subject Paul wrote, "Let no one defraud you of your prize, priding himself on his humility and on his worship of angels, and taking his stand on visions he has seen, and idly puffed up by his unspiritual thoughts. Such an one does not keep his hold on the head, from whom the body in all its parts, nourished and strengthened by its points of contact and its connections, grows with a divine growth.” Col. 2:18-19. (Weymouth).
This very thing is rampant in our day. Good people leave their abiding place in Christ to put their confidence in visionary people who seem to be able to have a vision about anything any time they so desire. They deceive people to believe and do all manner of foolish, spectacular things, leading them to hide in caves, holes, and deserts. They make predictions of judgments that never come to pass, give out vain hopes of immortality, and even claim the immaculate birth of a child. When will God's people awake and cease to be robbed of Christ's blessedness by these vain people? When will they believe God's word, which says that, if the thing the prophet spoke does not come to pass, then God has not spoken. Some people, I am sure, love to be deceived. I am amazed and almost frightened to find Christians putting confidence in Mrs. Jean Dixon as though she were a prophet of the Lord.

There was a day when King Saul became so out of touch with God that he sought the help of a notable witch that lived at Endor. Men out of touch with God are often prone to seek after witches, astrologers, star-gazers, and monthly prognosticators, wizards, and them that have familiar spirits. Isa. 8:19; 47:13. The harlot system will be full of this evil at the end of the age. Nahum 3:4. Should not a people rather seek after their God? I do not understand the weird séance of the witch of Endor, but suffice it to say that King Saul received his answer and the result was death. Sam. 28:7-2,5. The more devoid of the Spirit the church becomes, the more they will seek those who have familiar spirits. Therefore, beware of this evil, and let no man rob you through vain deceit. Finally, "beware lest ye also, being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own steadfastness." 2 Pet. 3:17. With this warning the apostle Peter ended the fervent instruction of his second epistle, and, because of the abounding peril of our day, I can use no better words than his to conclude the exhortation of these pages.

Many centuries ago John wrote, saying, "Little children, it is the last time: and as ye have heard that antichrist shall come, even now there are many antichrists; whereby we know it is the last time." 1 John 2:18. His use of the term "the last time" indicates to me that he was speaking of the sixth day, the last day of man's week of misrule and sore travail. The seventh day will be the Lord's day. In it the sons of God will reign with Jesus Christ their Lord. If John, dwelling in the morning of the last day, could say in truth, "It is the last time," how much more may we, who live almost two thousand years later, believe that we are now in the evening of that same "last day"! And if John, beholding the bright rising of the Sun of righteousness, was moved to say, "Even now there are many antichrists," how much more shall we, who dwell in the gathering darkness of that day, be aware of their presence among us.

The spirit of antichrist is the error of the wicked (the wicked one), who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God or that is worshipped, so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God." Listen with care to this exhortation because great importance should be attached to it. As surely as there is one Christ there is also one Anti-christ. Of this we may be certain. But, as surely as the Spirit of Christ is dwelling in God's people, motivating them in every good, so also there is a spirit of antichrist (1 John 4:3) dwelling in and motivating other people in every evil and opposition to the truth. This antichrist spirit will make its appearance in all manner of places. We will find it preaching in the pulpits. We will find it adorned in the clerical cloth of church leaders. We will discern it among those who with their mouths confess that Jesus is Christ, but with their lives deny it. We will discover that spirit among the miracle minded and the miracle workers. We will hear its voice among that ministry which Paul describes as false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into apostles of Christ. 2 Cor. 11:13. And no marvel, for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light. Therefore, it is no great thing if his ministers be transformed into ministers of righteousness. 2 Cor. 11:14-15. We will find it flourishing in the great ecumenical movement and among the boisterous banner-waving street marchers who display more of the spirit of the mob than the Spirit of Christ. Our only safety in this hour is in obedience to God's command, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues. For her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities." Rev. 18:4-5.

We will find the antichrist spirit not only in the church system, but in the world system as well. With great heaviness of heart we confess that at the present time it is difficult to tell where the former ends and the latter begins. The church system of our day is neither separate nor removed from the world. Christians, alas, are deeply engrossed in the world; each with open arms embraces the other because they are of the same spirit. The sins of the world are rampant in the church system, and, with but few exceptions, the one is as deeply engrossed in worldliness as the other. Both are lovers of wealth. Both are lovers of pleasure. Both are bent on laying up store for this present evil age, taking delight in the abundance of the things they possess. Divorce and remarriage are rampant among both. Professing Christians in slavish homage sit before the speaking image of the beast in their parlor as do the people of the world. The spirit displayed at Belshazzar's ungodly feast when the vessels of the Lord were dragged into the drunken orgy of the king (Dan. 5:1-4) is the exact spirit of this present evil hour, when light is mixed with darkness, flesh is mingled with Spirit, evil walks hand in hand with good, judgment smiles on error and disobedience, and lips that take God's name in vain shamelessly lift their voices with those who praise the Lord. This is not the Spirit of God! This is none else than "the error of the wicked." Have no part with them nor lift up your voice in blessing upon them; neither bid them God-speed, for he that biddeth him God-speed is partaker of his evil deed. 2 John 10,11.

"Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." 1 John 2:15. Seldom, indeed, will it be that a Christian will admit that he is a lover of the world; yet our Saviour said, "For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." Matt. 6:21. Prayerful consideration of this text might be a disconcerting revelation to many a soul. Where do our thoughts remain the longest? What do we talk of most? What do we do in our spare time? Why do God's people love the world so fondly that they must be told, "Love not the world?" Do we not know that the world is passing away? Have we not learned that things capable of passing away are not real? Did not Paul speak the word of truth when he said, "The things that are seen are temporal (belonging to time and sense), but the things which are not seen are eternal" and belong to the ages to come? Faith, hope, charity, love, joy, peace, long-suffering, goodness, gentleness, faithfulness, meekness, and temperance all belong to the unseen, but they are the things that are eternal, the product of life eternal. "Never give your hearts to this world or to any of the things in it. A man cannot love the Father and love the world at the same time. For the whole world-system, based as it is on men's primitive desires, their greedy ambitions and the glamour of all that they think splendid, is not derived from the Father at all, but from the world itself. The world and all its passionate desires will one day disappear. But the man who is following God's will is part of the permanent and cannot die." John 2:15-17. Phillips Translation.

The error of the wicked is manifest and propagated in the schools and universities of the world. Many who read this book are better informed than the writer concerning the degrading trend in modern education. It is a most disconcerting thing to find in so-called Christian countries that the Bible, which is truth, is barred from the class rooms on the pretext that religion must not be taught in the schools; yet the professors are permitted to freely teach every flagrant error while they unhesitatingly consign the infallible word of truth to the realm of myth, fable, and falsehood, their statements all too often couched in the obscene and filthy language of the gutter. For many decades parents have sacrificed to give their children the best in education. Young people, too, have sacrificed and diligently labored to put themselves through college or university; but in this, the end of the age, these schools of learning have so degraded themselves that they have overwhelmed the faith of many, who, being led away by the error of the wicked, have fallen from their own steadfastness. If young men and women upon graduation from college possess only a certificate of degree but are robbed of faith, devoid of morals, and strangers to truth and even good manners, then in my opinion they would have been immeasurably better off if they had not attended at all, for they have been robbed of the gold of things eternal and been given the worthless clay of things that are temporal. We do not need more psychologists; we need more faith in God. We do not need more counselors; we need more truth. We do not need more policemen; we need the commandment of God written on our hearts. It is a strange paradox to now discover that, in spite of all the education and higher learning, employers still prefer hard-working, faithful and honest men and women who can be trusted rather than the hireling who looks only for his wages and the coffee break. If I were a parent today with young adolescent children, I would not hesitate to advise them to face life without the dubious blessing of a college degree.

There is yet another error of the wicked which we must speak of here. During the last century the world has been blessed by the appearance of several excellent translations of the Holy Scripture. The help that may be received from the masterful translations of Moffatt, Weymouth, Young, Rotherham, and a good number of others is beyond estimation. There are, however, some translations appearing at present that are more the product of man's wishful thinking than they are the product of scholarly endeavor.

Thrice in the Bible we are warned of the consequences of adding anything to it or of taking anything away from it. Like a flaming sword keeping the way of the tree of life comes the word: "Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish ought from it, that ye may keep the commandments of the Lord your God which I command you." Deut. 4:2. Again, at the close of the Old Testament, Malachi wrote: "Remember ye the law of Moses My servant, which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Israel, with the statutes and judgments." Mal. 4:4. Finally for the sake of the whole Bible it is written: "For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, if any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book: and if any man shall take away from the words of the prophecy of this book, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book." Rev. 22:18-19. The translation known as Good News for Modern Man, Today's English Version, has omitted the word "blood" from at least ten passages in the New Testament. The word "reconcile" is omitted from several important passages. The word "girl" is substituted for the word "virgin". We may readily see that these three errors strike as daggers at the very heart of Christian faith. Without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin. Reconciliation of all things in heaven and earth is by the blood of His cross (Col. 1:20), and the deity of Jesus Christ stands or falls on the fact of the virgin birth.

Beware lest ye be led away with the error of the wicked and fall from your own steadfastness. Seek no longer to run after things! Let us rather run after Christ, for in Him we are circumcised, in Him we are baptized, in Him we are raised from the dead, and in Him we are forgiven. Col. 2:9-13. All the wisdom and knowledge of the universe is in Him (Col. 2:3), and we are complete in Him. Therefore live and act in vital union with Him, and "as ye have received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in Him; rooted and built up in Him, and established in the faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving." Col 2:7.

SEE THAT YE BE NOT TROUBLED

There are secrets known to the elect of God which are of necessity hidden from all worldly people and all carnal Christians. Those who are the elect of God for this age manifest an abounding and ever increasing love for the Father. This love is disclosed by their fervently laying hold on all things that concern His wise and eternal purpose. Such love is not in word only, but in deed and in truth. These people display a quiet abandonment toward their Lord and a gracious and happy submission toward everything that concerns his will. These elect people are more than mere believers; they have become obsessed with the very spirit of sonship. To be led by God's Spirit is their meat and drink. They are a people chosen by the infinite wisdom and foreknowledge of God before the ages were formed. Their body, soul, and spirit have become sanctified by the cleansing of the blood of Jesus and the sanctifying power of the Holy Ghost. They lovingly cooperate with the Father in their own sanctification, thus identifying themselves as the elect sons of God. They do not swank concerning their standing with God nor boast of their prowess in signs and wonders of mighty works. Content they are in heart to know God and be known of Him.

The elect of God are to be found everywhere, though in any age they are very few in number. Like flying eagles, soaring heavenward on motionless wings, they are seldom found in crowds or flocks. Jeremiah saw them coming to Zion one of a city and two of a family. Jer. 3:14. The elect are a peculiar, lonely, and a wayfaring people. Day in and day out they prove by their consistent lives of sanctification and devotion that they "look for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." In their blood-washed hearts the knowledge is ever alive that the moment this earthly tabernacle is dissolved a building of God, an house not made with hands, awaits them, eternal in the heavens.

Within the vast world of Christendom there is a company of saints who are chosen to be conformed to His likeness. The Christ image and likeness will manifest itself even in this present evil world. It will probably not be a likeness, which men can gaze upon or admire, but a likeness seen of God and seen as well by those who know Him. All during our earthly pilgrimage the elect will be found following closely in the steps of the Lord. Jesus had no form or comeliness and, when men saw Him, there was no beauty that they should desire Him. He was despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, and from him men hid their faces. Can it be otherwise with us? Can we expect to be the darlings of the world when our Lord was despised and rejected by the world? "The disciple is not above his master, nor the servant above his lord. It is enough for the disciple to be as his master, and the servant as his lord. If they have called the master of the house Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of this household?" Matt. 10:24-25.
This page discusses the difference between careless, lethargic fatalism and election. Fatalism is described as a passive acceptance of whatever happens, while election is the active pursuit of knowledge and growth through faith in God. The page references 2 Peter 1:1-14 to support the idea that those who have been elected have a responsibility to grow in virtues such as faith, knowledge, temperance, and patience.

The text also touches on the consequences of the fall of man, which led to disunity, violence, and corruption. It mentions the dispensation of conscience during this age and the importance of diligence in adding to the experience in Christ. The elect are those who have received God's foreknowledge and election, and they are encouraged to make their calling and election sure.

The page concludes with a reflection on the momentous events that saw the end of the age of innocence, leading to the dispensation of conscience. It notes that the elect are those who have overcome the corruption of the world and have entered the heavenly country as they wander through the wilderness of this world.
until the stench of it all filled the nostrils of God, and in grief (Gen. 6:5-6) He sent forth a flood to cleanse the earth and slay the wicked, reserving only His elect for a future age.

The dispensation of human government was no exception to the rule. That dispensation continued from the time God made a new covenant with Noah (Gen. 9) to the great confusion of tongues and dispersion of the seventy families mentioned in Gen. 10. It is reasonable to believe that each of these seventy families received a language of its own. All evidence, both from scripture and secular history, leads to the conclusion that the inhabitants of the earth at the time of Babel were extremely wicked. According to the book of Jasher, a book twice mentioned in the Bible (Josh. 10:13 and 2 Sam. 1:18), their religion was wicked. They were idolaters, delighting in corrupt forms of worship. Thus destruction inevitably followed. Not only was the tower of Babel itself destroyed, but confusion of tongues followed, and as no one family could understand another, all the families of the earth were scattered abroad to some place of their own. Confusion of languages has been an almost impenetrable barrier between the peoples and a great deterrent to progress. Personally I am convinced that not only was the language confounded, but the personalities of the people were changed accordingly so that they did not think or react in a similar way. An Englishman cannot become a Frenchman by learning the language. There is also a psychological barrier. Even in our day, when language barriers are greatly lessened, we are forced to admit that there is a vast difference in the thought patterns of the races. The Englishman does not think like a Frenchman. The Norwegian does not think like the Russian. And when it comes to men of different color, there is an insurmountable barrier in their mannerisms and thought patterns. The white man born in Africa never fits into their pattern and a Negro born in America continually manifests the tendencies of Africa. These differences, together with the language barrier, were parts of the calamity of Babel, which wrote finis to the dispensation of human government.

The dispensation of promise began with the calling of Abraham, but this, too, ended in calamity with the seed of Abraham and the heirs of God's promise in cruel bondage and slavery in Egypt and then the destruction of all Egypt itself by the hand of Moses as the heirs of the promise were led forth with a high and mighty hand.

Then followed the law. The law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ. The law, though it continues ever, ended dispensationally at Calvary. So vast and important was Calvary in God's plan that the earth was shaken with a fearful earthquake, while the sun withdrew his shining, hiding his face in darkness that could be felt, and the Son of God, when He had cried with a loud voice, gave up the ghost, and the earth shook, the rocks rent, the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom, and darkness cloaked the earth from high noon until Jesus died. All creation held its breath as fearful sights filled the earth with dismay till amid the breathtaking confusion a grief-stricken Roman centurion cried aloud, "Surely this man was the Son of God!"

The dispensation of grace, which began with such ineffable glories as the resurrection of Christ and the Pentecostal outpouring of the Holy Spirit, is now about to come to its end. It has been a trouble filled age, suffering the frowns of fortune, an iron age of ups and downs, often suffering the ill winds of misfortune and the gathering clouds of evil and tribulation. This age, that has now lasted nearly two thousand years, is growing old and even now the pains of death and hell have seized upon it. Now I must tell you a strange and terrible thing — a truth, which I believe you have not heard said before. Great and terrible as were the calamities, which ushered in the death of other ages, none of them, to my knowledge, except the crucifixion of Christ, was important enough to be prophesied aforetime in the scripture. Scripture did not foretell the fall of Adam, nor did it predict, except to Noah, the destruction of the earth by flood nor mention the desolation of Egypt through the signs and wonders of Moses. It did, indeed, speak of the sufferings of Christ and the glory that should follow, but the point I want to make is this: All scripture, both in the Old Testament and in the New Testament, bears witness to the painful depredations that are to come upon all the world and all mankind as this age of grace, in which we now live, draws to its dispensational end.

So great and terrible is to be the sin of the last days that Jesus likened it to Sodom and Gomorrah, history's two blackest epitomes of wickedness. Furthermore the final years of this age are likened to the days of Noah, in which the thoughts and imaginations of men's hearts were only evil and that continually. The violence we see all about us was distinctly foretold as an evil to accompany the end of this age. The marrying and divorcing of the present evil hour is vividly described in scripture. Wars and rumors of wars are spoken of in great detail. The fact that wars were to become world wide and of universal scope is laid out plainly in the words of the Master, "Nation shall rise against nation and kingdom against kingdom." Then we are told of famine and pestilence, a thing which we now see in ever increasing starkness and awfulness, so much so that at the present moment (1974) the world never has more than a twenty-eight days supply of food on hand and this small margin between mankind and starvation is continually decreasing. Millions die of famine and starvation every year, and the so-called developing nations are in worse straits now than they were even ten years ago. The heathen nations of India and Africa, in spite of their vast wealth, never learn to feed themselves and they never will until their minds are enlightened by Christ.

Paul summed up the world-wide confusion and disorder of this age when he said, "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unhateful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away." 2 Tim. 3:1-5.

Our Lord, the greatest witness of all witnesses and prophet of all prophets, was foremost in His warnings of those earthshaking calamities that will prevail universally as this age moves to its conclusion. Listen to His positiveness as He answers the threefold question of His disciples concerning the end of the age. "Tell us," said they, "when shall these things be? What shall be the sign of Thy coming? And of the end of the age? Matt. 24:3. "And Jesus answered and said unto them, Take heed that no man deceive you. For many shall come in My name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many. And ye shall hear of wars and rumors of wars; see that ye be not troubled: for all these things must come to pass, but the end is not yet." Then, turning His attention significantly to our particular hour, He continued: "For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places. All these are the beginning of sorrows. Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you: and ye shall be hated of all nations for My name's sake. And then shall many be offended, and shall betray one another, and shall hate one another. And many false prophets shall rise, and shall deceive many. And because iniquity (rebellion) shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold. But he that shall endure to the end, the same shall be saved." Matt 24:3-13. Then, after speaking of the abomination of desolation, He said, "For then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be. And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved: but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened." Matt. 24:21-22.

In the midst of all the dire prophetic warnings concerning the end of the age, our blessed Lord interpolated these remarkable, soothing words: See that ye be not troubled. Matt. 24:6. Upon hearing all the distressing description of things as they are to be in the end of the age, it is easy for even the most devout saint to become greatly troubled in heart, and as our eyes are opened to see how these predictions are being fulfilled on every hand and in every country on earth, our hearts are inclined to become even more troubled. Only this week I was reading of the incredible increase in the rate of suicides in the world. Not only was this increase evident in destitute countries, but it was predominately in affluent countries like the United States and Canada. The principal cause of the alarming increase is believed to be the racing inflation which is evident everywhere. Inflation at its present rate will eat up the entire life savings of any individual in a period of ten years. People in despair and hopelessness are ending their lives as a means of escape from the calamities coming upon the earth. It is my own considered opinion that the present reckless inflation is deliberately planned by our national leaders to bring about a one world government and the rule of the Beast of Revelation 13, and the present rulers have one mind to give their power and authority to the Beast. Rev. 17:13.

If these are not the days of tribulation spoken of by Jesus and the inspired prophets and apostles, then I know not what manner of fulfillment would be necessary to satisfactorily fulfill the predictions. Do we have wars and rumors of wars? Yes, there have been over three hundred wars since 1914, including two world wars. Do we have famines? Yes, indeed, we do, and their stark horror is increasing with every passing month and will yet be much more devastating and cruel. Do we see violence? Why, the word is as common on the newscasts as the weather report. Are there false christs? Yes! They are almost as numerous as the pulpits, and besides this staggering aggregate individuals are increasing, both men and women, who publicly state, "I am Christ." The number of their followers has become legion, and there will be an ever increasing number of them performing lying signs and wonders to deceive, if possible, the very elect. Are we seeing perilous times? Why, friend, you know as well as I do that millions of people in the land of the free and the home of the brave dare not venture to cross a street at night. The law-abiding people live in consternation behind their locked doors while thugs, rapists, and jailbirds roam the streets, looting, raping, and killing at will. The judges and enforcers of the law have become so corrupt that it is now a common thing to see the offender mollycoddled while the offended is accused and persecuted. The hateful part of all this racketeering is that it could be stopped in a week if laws were swift and rigidly enforced without fear or favor to anyone. When the meek and lowly Jesus comes to reign, the rod of iron will be applied without favor until He has put down all evil rule and authority. Under His rule lambs will safely lie down with wolves, and calves and bears will feed together. The child will safely put his hand into the nest of the asp, and nothing shall hurt or destroy in all God's holy mountain.

Perilous times are not confined only to the violence that lurks on every hand. The world's financial system is in imminent peril. It is without doubt collapsing and, though divinely decreed, it is taking place through the intrigue of evil men who themselves have corrupt ambitions of selfish power, once they have rendered the multitudes helpless. The imminent collapse of the present financial system and the fall of the governments of this world, together with those religious systems of Babylon that have held the people in bondage for centuries, is a process of divine appointment in preparation for the coming of the man of sin, the son of perdition, Antichrist, who "opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God or is worshipped, so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God."

These are perilous times, because the antichrist spirit is developing all over the world. Be not deceived! The present, much vaunted ecumenical move is designed, not to present a united front to the world, but to bring about a world church over which the Beast and the false prophet shall preside. Rev. 13:11-12. The World Council of Churches is part and parcel of the same evil system. The Charismatic Movement is, in my opinion, a great deception, possibly the greatest deception in the long series of deceptions of the church age. It is deceiving born again believers into bowing down to the idolatry of Rome. Christians by the tens of thousands are making the phenomenon of speaking with tongues the basis of fellowship. Vainly they imagine that anyone who professes to speak with tongues is a born again believer. Is not this one of the lying wonders of which Paul warned us in 2 Thess. 2:11-12 and by which many thousands will be deceived? Certainly it is. Do not be surprised to find in it the spirit of devils working miracles. Rev. 16:14. I am a believer in speaking in tongues, but it is not and never was a basis for Christian fellowship. Furthermore, I do not believe that all these people are genuine. Some may be, but there are many deceivers among them who are leading the people into the Beast's world church. Neither do I believe they are all speaking by the Spirit of God. No man can speak by the Holy Spirit and still be a worshipper of idols or continue to pray to the Virgin Mary, count beads, love money, and exercise false gifts. True speaking in tongues must be preceded by bitter repentance of sin, and complete turning away from the world and the filth of the religious systems.

In my opinion, the Charismatic movement is a perilous thing. It is of necessity basically wrong, because God has called His people to "come out and be separate." The very call, come out, signifies as nothing else can that Christ Jesus Himself is on the outside of the systems and not on the inside. If therefore he is calling men to come out, then He Himself cannot be within. I shall not accuse my Lord of the hypocrisy of remaining within the system after He has called His saints to come without. We are now seeing the greatest spiritual deception of history and the multiplication of every lying wonder and every deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish, because they love not the truth.

Let it be known to every reader that when Paul wrote, "He who now letteth (hindereth) will let until he be taken out of the way, and then shall that Wicked be revealed," he was referring to the elect saints. He who hinders the progress of the wicked one is the company of the elect saints of God, and once they are called out, then their former restraint and savoring influence is taken away, and wickedness and lawlessness, together with every Satanic and lying wonder, will have free and unhindered course to work every imaginable wickedness in the religious systems. If the so-called revivals we see today were genuine, then they would have a corresponding savoring influence upon the world. Every true revival in the history of any age has had a tremendous impact on society, deterring wickedness and lawlessness of every sort. But the so-called revival we are witnessing now is not a revival at all, but a pretense. Thus in consequence evil men and seducers, both in the world and in the church system, are "waxing worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." We are indeed beset by perilous times. The spiritual perils are even more dangerous and deadly than the perils that lurk about us in the streets, the lanes, the highways, and in the warlike nations of the world. The latter may indeed kill the body or rob man of the trash in his purse, but the former are spiritual perils which will kill the soul and destroy its hope for the kingdom age to come.

We need not ask if children are rebellious against their parents or if people are lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. Neither need we ask if men are unthankful and unholy, trucebreakers, traitors, heady or high-minded; nor need we inquire if they are incontinent and fierce, or despisers of all that is good; or if they have a form of godliness, but deny the power of it. All these signs of the times are so evident to any understanding mind that they require no more than the briefest mention.

Our message to the saints of God in this amazing hour of turmoil, sin, and tribulation is this: See that ye be not troubled. A saint who permits himself to worry cannot possibly trust. If we are worrying, then we are not trusting, and there can be no exception to the rule. There is, I believe, a difference between worry and concern. When Jesus spoke the significant words, "Let not your heart be troubled," He did not mean that we should be unconcerned, flippant, light-hearted, or careless. Lack of concern for the things of God is a tragedy, but worrying about them is an even greater tragedy. The untroubled attitude of heart of which Jesus spoke had its sure foundation in this: "Ye believe in God; believe also in Me." Well may they be troubled who believe not in God and who have no confidence in His Son, Jesus Christ. He who believes says within his heart, "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore will we not fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea; though the waters thereof roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof." Psa. 46:1-3. The heathen may rage and the kingdoms of earth be moved. The earth itself may melt at the voice of the Lord, yet, to those who believe, "the God of Jacob is our refuge." They who find this kind of rest in God speak from the midst of the fire, saying with joy, "Come, behold the works of the Lord, what desolations He hath made in the earth. He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth; he breaketh the bow, and cutteth the spear in sunder; he burneth the chariot in the fire. Be still, and know that I am God: I will be exalted among the heathen, I will be exalted in the earth. The Lord of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge."

See that ye be not troubled about your welfare. People are continually writing me, asking whether or not they should join some group who are going to a wilderness hideout. My answer is to stay clear of all such human schemes. The idea of gathering up a group of people and fleeing away to a wilderness hideout is a childish notion that can end only in confusion, disappointment, and disillusionment. Time and again people ask me if they should join a group who has bought an acreage in some "safe" place where they intend to establish a community and weather out the storm of coming tribulation in safety. I discourage all such childish notions. If you feel led to go farming, then go farming, by all means. That is your prerogative. But God has nowhere indicated that His people are to establish such communities in the wilderness. When tribulation comes in all its fury, your little hideout will not be hidden. My brethren, there is only one true hiding place and that is wide open to us all. There is but one place where God's people may flee for refuge, and that safe hiding place is in God. Not long ago a well-meaning Christian wrote me to enquire if we had a refuge up here in Canada where people could go when the tribulation comes. In my reply I said, "Yes, indeed! We do have a refuge, and its location may be found in Psa. 91:1-4." "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty. I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress: my God; in Him will I trust. Surely He shall deliver me from the snare of the fowler, and from the noisome pestilence. He shall cover thee with His feathers, and under His wings shalt thou trust: His truth shall be thy shield and buckler."

The Bible gives revealing record of a certain saint who lived in a time of great tribulation. Elijah was a prophet to the house of Israel. Some of the Old Testament prophets were prophets to the house of Judah, but Elijah and Elisha were prophets sent to the ten tribes of the ungodly and rebellious house of Israel. At that time the house of Israel was ruled by a reprobate character by the name of Ahab, who himself was ruled by his idolatrous and wicked wife Jezebel. The nation itself had abandoned the worship of the God of heaven and in place of the one true God the idols of Baal with their blind eyes, deaf ears, silent lips and helpless hands stood in the temple and in the groves. There were four hundred and fifty prophets of Baal, besides the four hundred prophets of the groves, who proclaimed the merits of this worthless, heathen, idolatrous religion. In all Israel Elijah alone was the prophet of the Lord. The whole scene is typical of the coming tribulation, since all these things happened to them for ensamples and are written for our admonition. 1 Cor. 10:11. Wickedness reigned in high places. False prophets lifted their deluding voices everywhere and great danger stalked the life of any man who faithfully followed the most High. In the midst of this reign of falsehood, delusion, and danger the Lord God instructed His servant Elijah to go to the house of a widow who dwelt at Zarephath. 1 Kings 17:9. There he was sustained for the space of about three years. Though Ahab sent search parties into all parts of the country to find Elijah, he could not be found, though he was near at hand, dwelling with the widow of Sarepta on the Mediterranean coast not far from the city of Sidon. The searchers could not find him because God had hidden him. But when the day came for the Lord to reveal him, He spoke to Elijah, saying, "Go show thyself to Ahab," and he went and stood before him. 1 Kings 18:1-2.

It is neither right nor necessary for groups of people to sell their belongings and go away into some desert place where they hope to escape the tribulation. Such schemes are usually the product of some deluded man who himself desires to be an exalted leader. The whole scheme is man-made, man-planned, and man-organized and is doomed to be a dismal failure and a great disappointment. When the time of trouble comes in its fury, I am inclined to believe that such places will probably be among the first to be molested. Wherever these wilderness refuges appear, there is always some persuasive and clever leader engineering the scheme. He has always had a "revelation." He must have people for followers, because he needs their money to put his plan over. Some of these men may be sincere in their own minds and their followers may be, too, but they are deceived and, after their leaders have stripped them of their earthly goods, they will discover their error. You will remember how very recently a company of people stored food in a coal mine and went there to hide themselves because the Lord, they thought, had revealed to them that He was coming on such and such a day. The day passed uneventfully, as was to be expected, and they emerged, shamefaced and chagrined, from their hiding place, witnesses to their own deception. O that God's people would recognize that false prophets are to abound in the last days, and O that they could see that false prophets are men who lead people astray, both by their words and by their actions. They profess to speak from God, but God has not spoken to them. Many follow their pernicious ways and by reason of their error the way of truth shall be evil spoken of. Compare 2 Pet. 2:3.

The end of this age is to be a time of trouble. Jesus told us it would be. Matt., chapter 24. The apostles testify with great plainness that the world will be full of trouble. 2 Tim. 3:1-5. Jeremiah speaks of these days as the day of Jacob's trouble. Jer. 30:1. Daniel vividly describes the end of the age as a "time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation, even to that same time: and at that time Thy people shall be delivered, everyone that shall be found written in the book." Dan. 12:1. Jesus saw it as a time of trouble so great that He described the end times in these words: "Then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world (earth) to this time, no, or ever shall be. And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved." Jesus described the end times as a time of war and distress of nations, the sea and the waves roaring, and men's hearts failing for fear of the things coming upon the earth, because even the power of heaven would be shaken. Jesus spoke of these days as days of famine, pestilence, unbridled sin accompanied by a breakdown of morals comparable to Sodom itself. He spoke of the end of the age as a time of religious persecution, of parents betraying children and children betraying parents. He saw it as a day of great deception with false prophets, false teachers, and false christs abounding on every hand.

"Where are the false prophets?" asks one. My brother, we have become so accustomed to them through the years that we can no longer recognize them, yet they are in many cases as numerous as the church buildings and pulpits of the land. A preacher not called of God is a false prophet, yet we embrace these assembly-line ministers as prophets of God. As Israel accepted the prophets of Baal as the prophets of the true God, so Christian and sinner alike today listen to the childish twaddle proclaimed and broadcast all over the land and swallow it as the truth, and its teachers as the teachers of the Lord. By long association we become accustomed to error, evil, false prophets, blasphemy, pride, and foolishness and, having become accustomed to their presence, we first endure them, then pity them, then embrace them.

Paul described the end of the age as a time of peril. The word peril is a very forceful word. Certainly it will be a time of physical peril, but physical peril, my brethren, is not a thing of great concern. Our Lord exhorted His people concerning the very present dangers that would threaten them, saying, "And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell." Matt. 10:28. Our greatest peril then is not physical but spiritual - false prophets, false teachers, false christs, and the false doctrines emanating from all such false people.

Many thousands of believers are completely sold out to the miraculous, or what they deem to be supernatural. We should never go awhoring after miracles or men who claim to be miracle workers, or run from coast to coast to see healings of healing ministries. Certainly miracles do occur, but those who seek this sort of thing are inadvertently building themselves up for a great deception, because they form the habit of thinking that everything, which appears to be supernatural is of God. Let us pay earnest heed to the warning in this scripture: "For the mystery of iniquity doth already work: only he who now letteth will let, until he be taken out of the way. And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of His mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of His coming: even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved."

Set not your heart on miracles or signs or wonders. You will be deceived if you do. Refuse to fellowship with the harlot system on the basis that some of her priests or cardinals or bishops speak in tongues. Such things may be lying wonders. Many thousands are being deceived by this and are already falling into the clutches of a world church system, which is the Antichrist system. I myself have spoken with tongues by the Spirit, but this manifestation never was and is not now the basis of Christian fellowship.

The apostle John gave us the one and only true basis for Christian fellowship when he wrote these enlightening words: "The life was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear witness, and shew unto you that eternal life, which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us; that which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us; and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with His Son Jesus Christ. And these things write we unto you, that your joy may be full." 1 John 1:2-4.

Fellowship with the Father and His Son Jesus Christ is the only true fellowship in earth or in heaven, and all fellowship with other human beings must stand upon this foundation or fall short of true fellowship in every sense.

Personally I am extremely skeptical about all the movements of the present hour - the World Council of Churches, the Ecumenical Movement, the Charismatic Movement, the Jesus Movement, and the mass meetings of world, renowned evangelists. They are all heading in one direction. They are moving with increasing momentum toward a world church - a super body that will dictate to and completely dominate everyone on earth. This is definitely what John saw in Rev. 13:11-12. "And I beheld another beast coming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon. And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, and causeth the earth and them that dwell therein to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed." The Ecumenical Movement, the Charismatic Movement, the Jesus Movement, and big evangelism are merely different arms of the Babylon octopus. If they do not grasp you in one arm, they will grasp you in another. It is all a very deceitful and false thing, and the only safety for a Christian in our day is to be obedient to the voice of Christ and come out from among them, abandon every phase and form of them, and be separate unto Christ, refusing to touch the unclean thing. Neither worry about it nor make it a matter of concern. "Come out of her, My people," saith God, "that ye be not partaker of her sins; for strong is the Lord who judgeth her."

In the midst of the abounding trouble and confusion, which was prophesied for the end of the age and by which we are now encompassed on every hand, living as we do in the perilous hours so graphically described in God's word, our natural inclination is to become greatly distressed and troubled. We are troubled about ourselves and how we will be affected. We are troubled about friends and relatives and how they will be affected. We are even troubled about our nation and how the gospel itself will survive. It is in the midst of all this tribulation that the voice of our Lord comes sounding clear as evening bells: "See that ye be not troubled." In times like these there is nothing greater than that a saint of God should know that God holds the universe in His hands. The things that are unfolding before our eyes are the things He Himself has designed. The Lord of heaven and earth is bringing these things to pass that the kingdoms of this world will fall from their own weight of corruption. God now in the end of the age is sending forth His angels with the explicit purpose of dividing the wheat from the chaff, the sheep from the goats, and the righteous from the unrighteous. He is gathering the good into vessels and casting the bad away. His eye is running to and fro through the whole earth to search out those people whose hearts are one with Him. He is beholding that unseen company who, amid a world of Mammon worshippers and false gods of every kind, stand clothed in fine linen pure and white, refusing steadfastly to bow the knee to the sordid religious systems of this age.
See that ye be not troubled by the confusion around you. Today you are a kernel of wheat in the chaos of the threshing machine. The weeds, the chaff, and the straw are being cast out upon the ground, but you are being gathered into the garner. See that ye be not troubled about the present disorder, deception, violence, hate, war, disease, famine, pestilence, and even persecution. Do not run away and hide. Let God hide you in the secret of His pavilion. Let Him cover you with His feathers and shelter you beneath His wings.

It is necessary that offences come. It is necessary that saints be tried. It is the fierce heat of the furnace that separates the gold from the dross. It is the sevenfold heat that purifies the gold, and we must not be amazed or troubled by it. The fiery trial that is to try us is for our own purification and eternal good. I find it difficult to believe that the saints will be raptured out of the tribulation. Noah was not saved from the flood, but in the midst of its awful torrents. Daniel was not saved from the lions’ den, but in it. Neither were Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego saved from the furnace, but walking in the midst of it with the Son of God. Paul says he was delivered out of the mouth of the lion. We are not saved/row the cross, but by it. And I think we could cite many other illustrations that seem to confirm this truth.

When Paul wrote to the saints in Thessalonica, he told them of many dreadful things that would come upon the earth. He warned them not to be shaken in mind or be troubled by letters or words saying that the day of Christ was at hand. 2 Thess. 2:2. Writing to this troubled and persecuted people, he made this statement: “We ourselves glory in you in the churches of God for your patience and faith in all your persecutions and tribulations that ye endure: which is a manifest token of the righteous judgment of God, that ye may be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, for which ye also suffer.” 2 Thess. 1:4-5. This is a most remarkable statement, and certainly deserves our prayerful thought. Then in verses 7-10 he gives us this beautiful assurance, “And to you who are troubled, rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with His mighty angels... when He shall come to be glorified in His saints and to be admired in all them that believe.”

A few hours before our Saviour departed out of this world, He told His disciples many distressing things. He warned them of the trouble-filled days to come. He frightened them by telling them of His own death and crucifixion. He astonished them by warning them that one of them would betray Him, and disheartened them by telling Peter, the most outspoken in his declaration of fidelity, that he would deny Him, and that they all would forsake Him and leave Him alone. Then amid their overwhelming distress and consternation He comforted them with these wonderful words: "Let not your hearts be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in Me." And that, my friend, is the secret of a trouble free, worry free life. "Ye believe in God; believe also in Me." Thus it must be at the end of the age when sorrows like sea billows roll over the earth, bringing all kingdoms to ruin and tribulation and desolation. See that ye be not troubled. Behind the gloomy clouds of this hour the hand of the Almighty is moving to make dust of the kingdoms and sovereignties of this world that the stone, which Daniel saw may become a mountain and fill the whole earth. God is ordering all these things according to His infinite wisdom and immutable will. Therefore, see that ye be not troubled.

AS YE SEE THE DAY APPROACHING

I am writing this final chapter as a personal letter to the many dear people, chosen of God and precious, who earnestly desire a fuller understanding of the sacred purpose of the Lord for the closing hours of this age and for the ages which are to follow. I frankly admit that my own understanding is pitifully small, but let us remember that by the loving kindness of our heavenly Father His chosen people are continually supplied with present truth that they may walk in the light, which He is and not in the darkness that now fills the world with gloom. Our Lord Jesus said, "Are there not twelve hours in the day? If any man walk in the day, he stumbleth not, because he seeth the light of this world. But if a man walk in the night, he stumbleth, because there is no light in him." John 11:9-10.

If we understand how a machine works, then the most intricate mechanism in the world is simple, but if we lack this understanding, even the simplest contrivance can baffle us. Well do I remember my bewildered admiration, he smiled and said, "Well, really it is quite simple once you understand the principle of it." Difficult as it was to grasp this statement, I do not doubt the truth of it. I once watched with amusement the angry frustration of a school teacher as he tried to loose his cow from the stall. The snap on the halter shank, though very simple, was of a type he had never seen. The harder he tried to unfasten it the more difficulty he was in. Since I was a farm boy, the gadget was nothing new to me, and when with a simple twist of the wrist I unsnapped it for him, he could scarcely believe his eyes. So, whether it be a million dollar computer or a ten cent snap, both are quite simple when you know how they work. The way of the eagle in the air is amazing to man, but to the eagle it is merely his way of life. The same thought of understanding was in the heart of Solomon when he wrote, "Then shall thou understand righteousness, and judgment, and equity: yea, every good path. When wisdom entereth thine heart, and knowledge is pleasant unto thy soul; discretion shall preserve thee, understanding shall keep thee." Prov. 2:9-11.

Without doubt we are now at the end of this dispensation of grace. The coming of the Lord draweth nigh, and when He appears, the resurrection will take place and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall all be changed; for this corruptible must put on incorruption and this mortal must put on immortality. Then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, "Death is swallowed up in victory." Following this long awaited resurrection of the saints in Christ, all the governments and kingdoms of this world of whatsoever sort they be, together with all the works of men, will be cast down and completely cleared out of the way. The kingdom of Christ will then be set up and the blessed one thousand year Sabbath will begin. Rev. 20:6. In it there will be none of the works of man, but a millennial Sabbath of God's rest - rest, happy rest, from all the idle and frustrating works of man that for six thousand years have cursed the whole earth with greed, war, injustice, inequity, sickness, and death. "Vanity of vanity," said Solomon. "All is vanity." And so throughout all man's six days of labor it has been. But the seventh day is the Lord's day! In it will be no vanity, for the knowledge of the Lord will fill the earth as the waters cover the sea. Who can better tell the story than the prophet Isaiah, who with prophetic wisdom and the eloquence of the Spirit of God within him spoke of the millennial kingdom of rest in these words: "The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them; and the desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose. It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice even with joy and singing: the glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it, the excellency of Carmel and Sharon, they shall see the glory of the Lord, and the excellency of our God. Strengthen ye the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees. Say to them that are of a fearful heart, Be strong, fear not: behold, your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompense; He will come and save you. Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb shall sing: for in the wilderness shall waters break out, and streams in the desert. And the parched ground shall become a pool, and the thirsty land springs of water: in the habitation of dragons, where each lay, shall be grass with reeds and rushes. And an highway shall stand there be, and a way, and it shall be called, The way of holiness: the unclean shall not pass over it; but it shall be for those: the wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein. No lion shall be there, nor any ravenous beast shall go up thereon; it shall not be found there; but the redeemed shall walk there: And the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: and they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." Isa. 35. With these and many other eloquent words of hope the Holy Spirit has brightened the pages of scripture - pages that all too often seem filled with gloom because of the blindness and thick darkness of the carnal mind during these six thousand years of travail.

But now let him that readeth understand that all things, from the beginning or ever the world was, were planned with infinite care by the omniscient mind of our kind heavenly Father, and the "all things" are all working together to fulfill the purpose of Him who worketh all things according to the counsel of His divine will. Whom He did foreknow He did predestinate. Whom He did predestinate, them He called. Whom He called He justified, and whom He justified them He also glorified. Who then can possibly lay any charge against God's elect, since it is God who has justified them, and since it is Christ who has died for them? Yea, in all things we are much more than conquerors through Him that loved us; for I am convinced that neither life nor death, nor things present nor things to come, nor principality nor power, can separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

If we desire to enter into the peace and understanding of the Lord, we will certainly find it necessary to shake off many traditions that we have held in such high esteem that they seem to have become almost sacred, for often, though they knew it not, tradition has blinded men to truth, turning their feet out of the way and drowning them in perdition. Without one hint of sarcasm I testify that for perhaps the last sixteen hundred years the harlot church system has propagated the childish tradition that has made men believe that God in the beginning made man in His image and placed him in the glory of the Garden of Eden, but that, alas, the devil sneaked in and tempted the man and the woman whom God had made in His image. They ate the forbidden fruit and fell into sin, and thus by this unforeseen tragedy the whole lovely plan of God was utterly ruined. Then the ridiculous story goes on to show that God in His frustration was obliged to find a Saviour through whom He would salvage some small part of mankind from the fearful dilemma into which he was fallen. And, whether you enjoy my bluntness or whether you despise it, the end of the matter, according to the incoherent madness of their church tradition, is simply this: Those few, who in this age come under the influence of the gospel and are saved, will be transported to a far off heaven, there to enjoy eternal bliss while those billions who never once heard that God had a Son on whom they could believe will be tortured eternally in the literal, raging fires of hell with no hope of either remission or cessation of judgment. From this kind of instruction it naturally follows that mankind must work his fingers to the bone and drive himself to exhaustion in hope of saving as many as possible before it is eternally too late.

Perhaps it is unnecessary for me to state that I believe all such tradition to be heresy and a complete distortion of truth. Such crude notions are not the teaching of the Old Testament and certainly not the teaching of the New Testament. Such twisted distortions as these had their beginning in that Romish harlot who maintains at her head that evil seducer who for seventeen hundred years (more or less) has as God sat in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God. If you find this difficult to believe, then consider well the words of the late Pope Pius 10th, who when Archbishop of Venice said, "The Pope is not only the representative of Jesus Christ, but he is Jesus Christ Himself, hidden under the veil of the flesh. Does the Pope speak? It is Jesus Christ who speaks." The Catholique Nationale, July 13, 1895. This then is he who with all others of that succession have usurped the place of Jesus Christ. It was of these popes that Paul wrote, saying, "Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God." 2 Thess. 2:3,4. About the year 235 A.D. Hippolitus in his treatise on Christ and Antichrist wrote, "The seducer will seek to appear in all things like the Son of God. As Christ a lion, so he a lion; as Christ a king, so he a king; as Christ a lamb, so he a lamb (though inwardly a wolf). As Christ sent out apostles, so will he similarly send out false apostles." Let all who read assuredly know that the Antichrist of the future will be of the same succession as those of the past. Let no man deceive himself, thinking Rome has changed her attitude or that her king has changed his mind. Let none imagine that her pretended interest in the so-called Charismatic Movement is evidence of her change of heart. This movement is not founded on Christ, but upon the phenomenon of speaking with tongues, and in its fold before many days will be found not only Protestants and Catholics but Moslems and Buddhists and Mohammedans as well. The Charismatic Movement, together with the Ecumenical Movement, is in my opinion a deception of enormous proportions, calculated to break down those barriers that hinder Christians from taking part with the apostate system known as The World Council of Churches and from thence to the Romish system that all the world may worship the Beast that was and is and yet is. What a tremendous description of the arch deceiver is contained in the words of inspiration quoted above! "The Beast that was, and is not, and yet is!" Rev. 17:8. He was there in the past. Now it appears that he is not; yet he is!

Shall we return to what we were saying about the fall of man. The first statement concerning man is contained in these inspired words: "Let us make man in our image, and after our likeness; and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth." Gen. 1:26. From earthly things that creep on the ground to heavenly creatures that inhabit the air - all was to be placed under the dominion of man in God's image. Let it be understood by all that the words of Gen. 1:26, quoted above, are in reality a prophecy from the immutable lips of the Father, outlining in detail that none but deity can devise the infinite purpose God had ordained for man. I am certain of the truth of this because other men inspired of God greatly enlarged the scope of the picture presented in Gen. 1:26, showing that God's word includes all things on earth and all things in the heavens, thus making man in God's image to be the lord of the universe under God and committing to him the word of its reconciliation. David, meditating on the purpose of God for man, said by the Holy Ghost, "When I consider Thy heavens, the work of Thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which Thou hast ordained; what is man, that Thou art mindful of him, and the son of man, that Thou visitest him? For Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and has crowned him with glory and honor. Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of Thy hands; Thou has put all things under his feet." Psa. 8:3-6. Then Paul, warning the Hebrews that they must not neglect so great a salvation, reminded them of God's purpose for man in these words: "For unto the angels hath He not put in subjection the world to come, whereof we speak. But one in a certain place testified, saying, What is man, that Thou art mindful of him? or the son of man, that Thou visitest him? Thou madest him a little lower than the angels; Thou crownedst him with glory and honor, and didst set him over the works of Thy hands: Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet. For in that He put all in subjection under him, He left nothing that is not put under him. But now we see not yet all things put under him. But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor, that He by the grace of God should taste death for every man. For it became Him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings." Heb. 2:5-10.

The words "but we see Jesus" are of tremendous importance because He, who, like ourselves, was once made lower than the angels, is now perfected, resurrected, glorified, and made higher than the heavens, and all power in heaven and earth is given unto Him. He must reign until every enemy is under His feet, even death itself—the first death, which we are now in, and the second death, which unbelievers shall endure, and all death wheresoever it may be found. The fact that we now see this first Son of man perfected is God's positive guarantee that we, who are as yet unperfect, shall be both like Him and with Him where He is. The words "we see Jesus" are the Lord's perfect assurance that the purpose He had in mind in the beginning when He said, "Let us make man in our image and after our likeness," is now in the process of being fulfilled, and in Jesus we now see the first man made perfect. He is the firstfruit of a vast harvest to follow. He is the guarantee that mankind in his totality will eventually be in the same image which God ordained for him in the beginning.

The thing all Christians seem to have forgotten, if indeed they ever knew it, is simply this: The almighty Lord of the universe said, "Let us make man in our image and after our likeness." The initial step in the plan, which would take ages to complete, was to make a man in God's likeness, but not wholly so, for the man He made was to begin in innocence. Intelligent as he was, he was woefully ignorant of good and evil, sin and death and vanity. Because of this lack he was incapable of assuming the authority that God intends to give Him when the work of creation is finally complete. Have you ever heard people affirm that it is wrong to spank a child? You should reason with him, they try to tell you. The real truth is that you cannot reason with a child because a child has neither experience nor basis from which to reason. In his innocence he must learn to obey or suffer the pain of correction, and later on he will understand the reason for your demand. The foolish restraint of parents in sparing the rod is the one basic cause above all others for the dreadful wave of disobedience, hate, and rebellion among the young people of our day. A child does not know good from evil, neither does he understand right from wrong any more than Adam understood it. Don't waste your time reasoning with children who as yet have no basis from which to reason. All they will do is "pull away the shoulder" and purposely break your heart. Catherine Booth, the mother of a large family of godly children, declared, "If you do not break a child's will, that child will break your heart."

The first thing, then, the Lord did in making man in His image was to make him innocent and without experience. The second thing He did was to let him fall. We may also notice that the Lord did first reason with Adam, saying, "In the day you eat thereof you will surely die." But man, poor creature, knew not what death was, so just like a child who thinks he knows all but in reality knows nothing he had to find out for himself; and find out he has through six thousand years of unspeakable evil, vanity, and death. We stated above that the fall of man was part of the plan of creating man in the image of God. Our great misunderstanding lies in our thinking that innocent Adam in the Garden of Eden was God's finished product. Oh no, he wasn't! Jesus Christ is the finished product. He is man made perfect in the image of God through suffering, and His perfection is our assurance that all men will at last be in the same image. 2 Cor. 3:18.

All the prophets from the beginning of the world have spoken of the restitution of all things. Acts 3:21. Paul wrote of Christ, saying, "And, having made peace through the blood of His cross, by Him to reconcile all things unto Himself; by Him, I say, whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven." Col. 1:20. Would that all men might see that the Lord, who purposed to make man in His image and after His likeness, willingly bears responsibility for the vanity in which mankind now finds himself. What else could Paul have meant when he spoke forth the tradition shattering truth of Rom. 8:20? "For the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him who hath subjected the same in hope." And what was this mysterious hope that so inspired the Father's mind? It was the same hope He had in the beginning when He decreed that man should be made in the image and likeness of God. Thus Paul in wisdom continues to unravel the secrets of this mystery, "For," says he, "I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us. For the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God."

Rom. 8:18-19. In verse 21 he continues: "For the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God."

When the understanding grips our spiritual minds that all things, absolutely all things, are operating according to the Father's original blue print and all things are working according to the intention of Him who does all things after the counsel of His own will, and that all plans and purposes are on schedule, then all things, great and small, known and unknown, understood and not understood, begin to make excellent spiritual sense and divine wisdom. But, if we still permit ourselves to gaze through the distorted crystal of the Babylonish church tradition, which still nourishes the spirit of antichrist in its holy place, nothing will ever make for wisdom and the sacred mysteries of God will seem meaningless and empty. When we come out from among them and be separate unto God, and touch no more the unclean thing of man's making, then God becomes a Father to us and we become His sons and daughters. We open the door in response to His knocking and He enters in to sup with us and break the bread of life and truth to our famished soul. Mark this statement well, for in truth I warn you that no man can enter into the wisdom of God while he remains in the harlot system. The reason for this is very simple. The Lord Himself stands outside the church system. Therefore, to know Him we must go unto Him without the camp, bearing His reproach. Heb. 13:13.

The third step taken by the Lord in making man in His image was man's redemption. I must make as clear as possible, even at the expense of much repetition, the truth that redemption is part of the work of creation. No one reading these words will discredit for a moment the fact that creation itself is the work of God', but, lest some should doubt that redemption also is both part and parcel of the original plan of creation, let us be reminded that Jesus Christ is "the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world." Rev. 13:8. He was slain for our redemption. He was not slain before the worlds were formed as some sort of precautionary measure in case man should sin. He was slain for man's redemption before ever man was formed of the dust of the ground, because man's fall was part of the divine process of creating man in the image of God. Our Lord Jesus Christ is the first man finished and completed in the image of God, and Paul teaches us with no uncertain voice that we were chosen in Him before the foundation of the world that we should be holy and without blame before Him in love, having predestined us unto adoption (sonship) by Jesus Christ according to the good pleasure of His will. Eph. 1:4-5. It is with great significance that Paul in verse 10 of the same chapter reveals this still greater mystery of His will: In the dispensation of the fullness of times God will gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven and which are in earth, even in Him. Consider well, then, the tremendous force of the truth we now contemplate - that redemption is part and parcel of God's work of creation, gathering up in its mighty arms everything in heaven and in earth and under the earth, bringing man, yea, all mankind, into the image and likeness of God according to the original intention of Him who works all things after the counsel of His own will.

The apostle Peter revealed his great understanding of God's intention when he said that we were redeemed, not with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from our vain conversation (manner of living), but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot, "who verily was foreordained before the foundation of the world, but was manifest in these last times for you." 1 Pet. 1:18-20. Both the old creation in Adam and the new creation in Christ are God's work of creation and our redemption is part of the wonderful creative plan. Redemption is all inclusive. It is beyond me to remotely portray the limitless extent of its all inclusive scope. Redemption embraces our justification by faith, our sanctification, and our resurrection, in which the redemption of the body is complete. Sonship in fullness will never be reached until the redemption of the body.

The redemption of the body, which is complete and perfect in the resurrection, is the very next thing in order. Let us stop speaking of the "rapture." The word rapture is not in the scripture and is at best very misleading. If instead of the rapture we speak of the resurrection, which is scriptural, we will rid ourselves of much confusion, and we will have a much better understanding of the immediate program of God. The resurrection of the in-Christed ones (I Thess. 4:16) completes the perfection of the body of Christ, which is the firstfruit company. The physical rising from the dead of the body of Christ in full perfection heralds the manifestation of the sons of God. It will signal both the end of the reign of carnal man and the beginning of the kingdom of God on earth. The resurrection will clearly show that the first elect company of mankind has come into the image of Christ.

The kingdom of God with all its glory is by no means the end of God's plan of creation. During that triumphant millennial reign of the Bridgroom (that is, Jesus and all the sons of God) the bride makes herself ready. This wonder, too, is part of the great redemption. At the end of the millennial kingdom the bride is seen descending as the Holy City from heaven to open wide her twelve gates that never will be closed and to lift her charming voice with that of the Holy Spirit to say to mankind in the fullness of times, "The Spirit and the Bride say 'Come.'"

My brother, my sister, hear well the words of the apostle which he spake from an overflowing heart: "All things are of God, who hath reconciled us to Himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation; to wit, that God was in Christ, reconciling the world to Himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath given unto us the word of reconciliation. Now we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God." 2 Cor. 5:18-20. How plain it is to see that even now in our present lowly estate the Lord God, who said, "Let us make man in our image," has already advanced us far enough into His image to begin to commit to us the word of reconciliation for our brethren who are still in the world! When our spiritual minds begin to grasp the Father's infinite purpose, and we understand that His immutable purpose was neither spoiled nor defiled by the cunning of Satan, but that rather all things are working together for good according to the purpose of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will so that we should be to the praise of His glory who were the first to fix our hope and trust in Christ, then our hearts are filled with confidence, knowing that we are part of His plan and always have been. We know, too, that at this very moment we are special objects of His care and that all things are working together for our good because we love Him. We know now as Job knew in the long ago that "when He has tried me, I shall come forth as gold." We know also that tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and experience hope; and hope maketh not ashamed because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost, who is given unto us. We are living in days of extreme peril. The feverish activity of all the religious systems of earth is immense, but it is not motivated by the Spirit of God. "In the last days," the Holy Spirit said, "perilous times shall come." If we will carefully compare the moral and spiritual atmosphere of the day in which we live with the prophecy given by Paul in 2 Tim. 3:1-5, our eyes will be opened to see that we are not only in the last days of this age, but in the last hours as well. Every word and every prediction of that prophecy is both fulfilled and being fulfilled before our eyes every day and every hour of the day. These are perilous days for many, many reasons. Our lives are in peril within the four walls of our own homes. Every passing day men, women, and children are being robbed, bludgeoned, raped, and murdered, not only by gangs on the street, but by molesters who enter their houses. In many cities it is unsafe to be on the street even in the day, and in most cities it is unsafe to be on the street at night. Mobs and gangs roam the streets and highways, burning, looting, rioting, and senselessly destroying.

Bad as these things are in the natural realm, the greater perils of our day are the spiritual perils. This is a day of every imaginable spiritual deception. There was a day not long ago when the things of God were considered sacred, and all who had entered their spiritual realm were considered separate and apart from the world. But now, alas and alack, the new birth, the baptism of the Spirit, and every sacred, sanctified truth and pious theme is bandied about in the mouths of the obscene, discussed by the impious on T.V., demonstrated and mimicked on radio, made the plaything of religious movements and the discourse of men and women who have neither part nor lot in this inheritance, whose hearts are not right in the sight of God. If you would question why such conditions exist, I will answer plainly. These are the deceptions of the last days. These are the spirits of devils, working miracles. This is that spirit of antichrist of which we are warned, calling down fire in the sight of men. The hour is at hand when the world will wonder after the beast. It is the spirit of him whose coming is after the working of Satan, with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish, because they received not the love of the truth that they might be saved. And for this cause (because they do not love the truth) God shall send them strong delusion that they should believe a lie, that they all may be damned (condemned) who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness. 2 Thess. 2:8-12. Who are these people who now revel in speaking with tongues and who make this phenomenon their point of contact and unity? They are the same people, the denominations and sects, who did not love the truth, but rejected it, when God was pouring out the Holy Spirit in the first half of the twentieth century. They were the ones who mocked and reviled and scoffed, and they were the ones who rejected and ejected the baptized saints as fanatics and heretics, putting them away from their midst as the blind man was thrust from the synagogue. "Away with such fellows from the earth," was their cry. But now, without a thought of repentance or sorrow for their deeds of unbelief, they make a playfellow of the experience they rejected, and in so doing they fulfill the words of Jesus, "I am come in My Father's name, and ye receive Me not: if another shall come in his own name, him ye will receive." John 5:43. Remember the words of Paul: "From such turn away." 2 Thess. 8:5.

I am unable to believe that the Charismatic Movement is the outpouring of the Spirit on all flesh, spoken of by Joel the prophet. Peter claimed that prophecy for his day when at Pentecost he said, "This is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel." Acts 2:16. Jesus was not telling us to look for a last day revival when He said, "When the Son of man cometh, shall He find faith on the earth?" In my opinion the so-called Charismatic renewal is a very cunning deception, designed to bring the harlot daughters of Babylon back to the mother of harlots and under Rome. It seems to be most significant that we now see two of the foremost Protestant evangelists in North America exerting their great influence to unite the many Protestant denominations with Rome under one great head, and that head will be of that succession of popes who for some 1260 years have "sat in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God."

Let everyone know of a certainty that the terrifying vision John beheld of the swaggering power and filth of Mystery Babylon is even now coming to pass in all its fullness. When the angel of the Lord carried John away in the Spirit into the wilderness to show him Babylon and her final judgment, this is what he saw: "And I saw a woman sit upon a scarlet colored beast, full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns. And the woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet color, and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls, having a golden cup in her hand full of abominations and filthiness of her fornication: and upon her forehead was a name written, Mystery, Babylon the great, the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth. And I saw the woman drunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus: and when I saw her, I wondered with great admiration." Rev. 17:3-6.

Many years ago I stated that we would soon see bishops and ministers, priests and cardinals, making profession of miraculous gifts, laying claim to the gifts of the Spirit and ministries of the Holy Ghost; and now this is daily before our eyes. I also said at that time that we would see pagan religions such as Mohammedanism and Buddhism coming into the picture; this we are also seeing. Babylon was always a mystery, but in our day it is Mystery, Babylon the great. Rev. 17:5. In our day Mystery Babylon is greater in stature and more drunken and confused than at any time since she was founded by Nimrod, the mighty rebel, in the far distant past. Paul continued his prophecy concerning the last days thus: "In the last days perilous times shall come; for men shall be lovers of themselves. This love of self is manifest in all circles, whether religious or secular, from the laborer to the magnate and from the thumb-bum on the highway to kings and presidents. Men have become selfish lovers of themselves as never before in all history. Upon the spiraling branches of the tree of love of self the fruit of evil grows as naturally as apples grow on apple trees. From that hateful quality - love of self - come the covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of them that are good, traitors, heady, high-minded, and the lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, having a form of godliness but denying the power thereof. From such turn away.

"From such turn away," is the word of the Lord. Those who try to make order out of this confusion will fall a prey to its evil power. If Jesus were here today, He would say as He said before, "Let them alone: they be blind leaders of the blind. And if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch." Matt. 15:14. "From such turn away," said Paul. "Come out of her, My people," shouted the voice from heaven, "lest ye be partaker of her sins." Rev. 18:4. Our only safety in this hour of confusion is in obedience to the divine command, "Come out from among them and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing." 2 Cor. 6:17. With this command comes the promise of God, "And I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." Verse. 18.

We have considered Babylon and God's command to the saints concerning her. Let us now speak a few words about the true church, which is His body. The church, which is the body of the Lord, has been a divine mystery in the earth ever since the day of Pentecost. Its elect members consist of men and women "chosen in Christ before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before Him in love." Eph. 1:4.
These people were predestined unto sonship, foreordained to be God's sons according to the good pleasure of His will. Eph. 1:5. These people have been redeemed. They have redemption through the blood of Christ and forgiveness of sins. God hath abounded toward them in all wisdom and prudence. See Eph. 1:7-8. God is opening the eyes and the understanding of these elect saints, whom He has chosen for Himself that they might "know what is the hope of His calling, and what the riches of the glory of His inheritance in the saint." Eph. 1:18. These people have been made alive with the life of Christ (Eph. 2:1), and God has raised them from the realm of spiritual death to reign with Christ in heavenly realms of the Spirit, Eph. 2:6. It is God's intention that these elect people, this church of the living God, shall in ages to come demonstrate and manifest the exceeding riches of His grace, and show God's great kindness toward us through Jesus Christ. See verse 7. The people who have been brought nigh to Him through the blood of our dear Lord Jesus are no longer to be considered strangers and foreigners to God, but fellow citizens with the saints and of the household of God. So truly are they the household of God that, in the descriptive words of Weymouth's translation, it is written: "You are a building which has been reared on the foundation of the apostles and prophets, the cornerstone being Christ Jesus Himself, in union with whom the whole fabric, truly bonded together, is rising to form a holy sanctuary in the Lord; in whom you also are being built up together to become a fixed abode for God through the Spirit." Eph. 2:20-22.

In these days of confusion (Babel means confusion), when multitudes are being sucked into the whirlpool of Babylon's vain and worthless striving, how good it would be if God's dear children would get off the system's merry-go-round and get alone with Jesus Christ their Lord, shut out all the din and noisy commotion of Babel's activity and the bondage it brings, and there in the light of His cross and with an open heart request that He would grant to their searching spirits the knowledge of what the true church really is, and what eternal hope He had in mind when He foreknew and chose them as a special habitation for Himself! If God's dear people would do this, I think it would not be long before they would lose their love for this antichrist system, now rising to new heights in the earth. Oh, that God's people would quickly learn that the greatest deception of all time is now at work in the earth and rising to its deceptive power - Mystery Babylon the great, an unholy mixture of the iron of Rome and the clay of Protestantism in the realm of religion with the iron of Communism and the clay of Democracy in the realm of politics! These developments do not belong to the distant future. If we will open our eyes, we will plainly see that they are already here.

There is good news for the saints of God, though worn out they may be through weary days of waiting. Long ago the prophet Daniel, speaking of these last days, left us this blessed hope: "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." Dan. 2:44. And John on lonely Patmos, listening to the trumpet blasts of the seven angels, heard, when the seventh and last trumpet sounded, "great voices in heaven, saying," The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of His Christ: and He shall reign forever and ever." This seventh trumpet is the same trumpet Paul speaks of as "the last trump," saying, "Behold, I show you a mystery, We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump (trumpet); for the trumpet shall sound, (see Rev. 11:15), and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." 1 Cor. 15:51, 52. The resurrection of the elect in Christ is even now at the doors. While Babylon is rising to her dizziest height, the mysterious stone cut out without hands is being prepared in secret to strike the feet of iron and clay, and the whole image of this world's system shall come crashing down, never to rise again; but the stone shall become a mountain that will fill all the earth with God's kingdom.

In writing these tremendous truths, no personal gain accrues to me. I seek not yours, but you; for "what is our hope or joy or crown of rejoicing?" It will be the joy of seeing you standing in Christ's presence when He comes. It cannot be far hence.
CHAPTER ONE
ACCORDING TO THE PURPOSE

Long before there was a world or any man, God, almighty and all wise, planned every detail of the whole creation from start to finish. He not only planned each detail of the earth itself but with infinite wisdom He planned your life and mine before the foundations of the earth were laid. 2 Tim. 1:9. He planned the moment and place of our birth, the circumstances that were to prevail throughout our life, our down-sittings and up-risings, the trials and tribulations, the joys and sorrows that were to have their part in shaping us according to His purpose. He knows the appointed times and how many ages He will spend to bring us to the perfection He planned for us before the world began. I am perfectly aware that this is not church tradition. This is not what we were taught from our youth nor is this commonly accepted doctrine, but I affirm that this is truth according to the word of God, and it is also according to the true longing of our own spirit within us.

Did not Paul teach us that we were chosen in Him before the foundation of the world when he said to Timothy, "Be thou partaker of the afflictions of the gospel according to the power of God, who hath saved us and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began." 2 Tim. 1:8-9. And then again, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessing in heavenly places in Christ according as He hath chosen us in Him before the foundation of the world..." Eph. 1:3-4.

There will come an unbelievable transformation to your understanding, together with a fresh and vivid relationship with God, when the revelation of this truth dawns upon your soul, teaching you that God is the author and finisher of all things. He is the First and the Last. He is the Alpha and the Omega. Not only is it true that God was there at the beginning and will be there at the end, but also that God is the beginning and God is the end. He is the Alpha and He is the Omega (the first and last letters of the Greek alphabet) and consequently He is all the letters in between. "I am He that is and was and is to come." All things, all things had their beginning in Him and all things, all things will have their end in Him.

It is sad to say the least that for centuries Christians have taught that God is omniscient (all wise) and yet they accuse Him of the grossest foolishness. Preachers have proclaimed that God is omnipotent (all powerful) and in the next breath accuse Him of helplessness. They preach a God of love and in the next breath accuse Him of a grotesque sadism that would make the tortures of Buchenwald look insignificant. The greatest need of God's people today is to have a complete change of heart in their attitude and relationship to God. It is time for all men to see that God is God, all wise, all powerful, unchanging, eternal, glorious in power, fearful in praises, doing wonders.

If God is all wise (omniscient), then there is no possibility of anything's happening in all the universe without His knowledge. A God who numbers every hair of every head among the billions of earth's inhabitants (Matt. 10:30) is certainly a God of infinite knowledge. A God who sees every sparrow that falls in death cannot be accused of inattention. And are ye not of more value than many sparrows? He has declared His knowledge of the thoughts and intents of men's hearts, that He knows their thoughts afar off. Nothing is hidden from His eyes, nothing is beyond His knowledge, nothing is out of His presence. The light and the dark are both alike to Him. In Him are hidden all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge. Should we make our bed in hell, He is there. Psa. 139:8.
We have long believed, and with abundant scriptural backing, that God knows not only the present but every minute detail of the future. He knows the end of every matter from its beginning. The fact that well over half of the entire Bible deals with prophecy, telling in intricate detail the vast array of events still to come, should convince any man that the future is not kept secret from the mind of God. But it is not enough for us to believe that God knows the future in all its intricate detail; we must thoroughly know that every minute detail of the future was planned and purposed by God and that nothing can possibly change or alter the plan, for God is immutable (unchanging) as well as omniscient and almighty.

There is a wonderful prayer found in Acts 4:23-28 that portrays the wisdom and foreknowledge of God and shows perfectly that everything that happens is ordained of God and is part of the eternal purpose. The disciples of Christ were under great persecution and in danger of death when they assembled for prayer to God. The following is the prayer they prayed: "And when they heard that, they lifted up their voices to God with one accord and said, Lord, Thou art God, which hast made heaven and earth and sea and all that in them is; Who by the mouth of Thy servant David hast said, Why did the heathen rage and the people imagine vain things? The kings of the earth stood up, and the rulers were gathered together against the Lord and against His Christ. For of a truth against Thy holy child Jesus, whom Thou has anointed, both Herod and Pontius Pilate with the Gentiles and the people of Israel were gathered together for to do whatsoever Thy hand and Thy counsel determined before to be done." Can anything be plainer than that? The crucifixion of Christ, the opposition to the apostles, the persecution of the church was appointed, ordained, and determined by the counsel and the hand of God long before it happened. Verse 28.

I do not think it is necessary here to multiply scripture to prove that God not only knows the future, but that He plans the future and that the thing that He plans is part of an eternal purpose that He purposed before the ages began. Everything is planned of God before it starts. Everything is before ordained. The blueprint is complete in minutest detail before the program begins. Eternal wisdom forbids the need of making changes, alterations, or additions. The finite architects of earth sometimes are forced to do such things, but the architect of the universe, who is omniscient, never has such need. The beginning is certain and the end sure, for God is the beginning and God is the end.

There is one more thought that should be mentioned here. It is the truth of God's omnipotence. God is all powerful. I do not need to tell stories or refer to acts of omnipotence to prove this point, for the whole Bible and the whole creation in heaven and earth and the universe breathe, proclaim, shout and sing of the omnipotence of God. "By the word of the Lord were the heavens made and all the hosts of them." He speaks and myriads of worlds appear. He commands and they whirl away forever in their orbits. He says to oceans, "Thus far and no further: here shall thy proud waves be stayed," and mighty billows can but lash the shores and fall away at His command. "Praise ye Him, all His angels! Praise ye Him, all His hosts! Praise Him, sun and moon; praise Him, all ye stars of light! Praise Him, ye heavens of heavens, and ye waters that be above the heavens! Let them praise the name of the Lord, for He commanded and they were created. He hath also established them for ever and ever; He hath made a decree which shall not pass. Praise the Lord from the earth, ye dragons and all deeps: fire and hail; snow and vapors; stormy wind fulfilling His word: mountains and all hills; fruitful trees and all cedars; beasts and all cattle; creeping things and flying fowl; kings of earth and all people; princes and all judges of the earth; both young men and maidens, old men and children; Let them praise the name of the Lord; for His name alone is excellent. His glory is above the earth and heaven." Psa. 148. By the word of the Lord were the heavens made and all the hosts of them. Angels and principalities and powers obey His wise immutable plans. He raiseth up kings and putteth them down. He sends forth His word and living things are created from things that are not. He speaks, and the whole face of the earth is renewed. He commands, and the sun hides its face at noon or retraces its steps in the sky. The stormy winds and the raging seas obey His word. He hangeth the earth upon nothing. Not only were all things made by Him but all things were made for Him. Beasts and all cattle, creeping things and flying fowl, man, angels, principality and power all come from Him, were made for Him, and end in Him. Each existing thing, animate or inanimate, was designed for a purpose, and has a par. in the great universal purpose of God. Nothing in heaven or earth was made without purpose. Nothing was made to exist without being part and parcel of the great eternal plan. Everything everywhere is a link in the eternal chain, everything a part of the purpose, everything a part of the plan, everything a cog in the intricate machine, every drop of water a part of the mighty ocean, every sunrise a part of eternal day.
One day during the Christmas rush I crowded along with the multitudes of shoppers on a Chicago street. People by the tens of thousands thronged about, all intent on their own little plan. Very few, I imagine, had any thoughts of God. Still fewer knew anything of His purpose. Perhaps not one in a hundred had that day read God's word or lifted their hearts to Him in prayer. As I grew weary of being jostled about by so great a throng, I said within myself, "Lord, why did You ever make all these people?" And as though the Lord was speaking to me, He replied, I have a purpose for every one of them." Ah, what a revelation of truth that was to my heart and what an infinite change it has made!

Can you not see what a vital, transforming difference is made to your understanding when you see purpose, purpose, purpose written in flaming letters over everything created and made in all heaven and earth? Can you not see what a vital difference it makes in your attitude toward all things and all people whether good or bad when you understand that purpose is ever present, partly for their sake, partly for your sake, partly for the sake of creation, but above all things for God's sake? My attitude toward the rebellious and wicked King Pharaoh was for years an attitude of scorn and distaste for such a hard-hearted, rebellious enemy of God until one day I read these words in Exod. 9:15: "For now will I stretch out mine hand that I may smite thee and thy people with pestilence; and thou shalt be cut from the earth. And in very deed/or this cause I raised thee up, for to show My power and that My name may be declared throughout the whole earth." Listen to the enlightened revelation of Paul as he speaks of Pharaoh and says "It is not of him that willeth nor of him that runneth, but of God that showeth mercy. For the scripture says of Pharaoh, even for this same purpose have I raised thee up that I might show My power in thee and that My name might be declared throughout all the earth. Therefore hath He mercy on whom He will have mercy, and whom He will He hardeneth." Rom. 9:16-18.

When I saw from this passage that Pharaoh was raised by God for a definite purpose just as Moses was raised up for a definite purpose, my whole attitude toward him had to change, for anything that is a part of God's purpose must be treated with respect even though we do not understand it. Undoubtedly it was for this reason that Paul declared by the wisdom of the Spirit, "Judge nothing before the time until the Lord come who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness and will make manifest the counsels of the heart: and then shall every man have praise of God." 1 Cor. 4:5. Just meditate on that statement and see how it transforms your thinking toward all men. We are so inclined to be full of bombastic judgment because we see things only through our narrow slit and thus we miss the greater wisdom that God has ordained it thus to bring some part of His plan to perfection. Truly in this we see through a glass darkly, but then we shall see face to face.

Because Michael, the strong and glorious archangel, understood God's purpose and knew that even Satan had a part in that purpose, he would not bring a railing accusation against him but committed him to the Lord's rebuke. How significant and terrible is the statement of Jude when he, speaking of men and their foolish judgments, says, "Likewise also these filthy dreamers defile the flesh, despise dominions, and speak evil of dignities. Yet Michael the archangel, when contending with the devil he disputed about the body of Moses, durst not bring against him a railing accusation; but said, The Lord rebuke thee. But these speak evil of those things which they know not; but what they know naturally as brute beasts in those things they corrupt themselves." Jude 8-10. Oh what a difference it makes in our attitude to and understanding of all creatures and all things when we see that divine purpose is ever present. Did not Peter say that men who walk after the flesh despise governments, are self-willed and not afraid to speak evil of dignities, whereas ingels which are greater in power and might bring not railing accusation against them before the Lord... but these... speak evil of things they understand not and shall utterly perish in their own corruption? 2 Pet. 2:10-12. Paul adds his testimony to this truth by saying in Romans 13, "Let every soul be subject to the higher powers, for there is no power but of God. The powers that be are ordained of God." Whenever men speak against Satan, demons, or Babylon in railing, reviling, or flippant terms, they shout aloud their lack of understanding of God's purpose.

How my heart rejoices in all these things. The knowledge of them completely transforms my attitude toward all men, for God has concluded them all in unbelief that He might have mercy upon all. Rom. 11:32. It transforms my attitude toward governments, for I see they are raised up to fulfill some design in the purpose of God. The fact that my puny mind does not understand the purpose means nothing at all. It changes our attitude toward principalities, powers, and dignities, and even towards Satan himself, for we can clearly see that there is no power but of God and the powers that be are ordained of God. Rom. 13:1. But best and greatest of all our entire attitude is changed toward God Himself, for we see His divine mind of wisdom, omniscience, and purpose back all things. Here and here alone do our triumphant souls proclaim, "All things are working together for good to them that love God and to them who are called according to His purpose," Rom. 8:28, and all creation echoes and re-echoes the refrain, "And we know all things work together for good to them that love God, who are the called according to His purpose. For whom He did foreknow He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son that He might be the first born among many brethren." Rom. 8:28-29. Oh, the depth of the riches and goodness of God! How inscrutable are His purposes and His ways past finding out! Let me testify against that I never really began to love or appreciate God until I began to see that God's divine infinite purpose lay hidden behind all things and that all things in the universe, visible and invisible, whether thrones, dominions, principalities, or powers, creatures of flesh or angels of light - all are moving by the power and wonder of the purpose of Him who created all things according to the counsel of His will. Undoubtedly there is a day coming when every intricate detail of His fathomless purpose shall be revealed to our wondering eyes. Then and then alone shall we see the reason behind the storms that beset us. Then we shall understand the reason for pain and suffering and see what purpose it had in our molding and making. Then we shall understand the purpose of death and sorrow, and why it was that war darkened our horizons and disappointment deflected our hopes and dashed our ambitions. And though we cannot understand it all now, how it lightens our load and fills our hearts with love and understanding when we know that back of it all is one great revealing truth - God's purpose.

Divine infinite purpose lies behind all things and the moment this wonderful truth dawns upon our spiritual understanding, all things begin to make sense and our love for God springs from a new foundation, even the foundation of wisdom and understanding. We may not yet understand the purpose of any of the things that have puzzled us or the reason for the doubts and fears, the pains and woes that often come upon us, but our hearts rejoice that in the process of our making God is using the proper methods to make us according to His purpose.

It is completely impossible for any man to truly love God until his spirit has been taught that before all things, through all things, in all things, and after all things is God, omnipotent, omniscient, immutable, eternal, filled with goodness, righteousness, love, kindness, forgiveness, and truth, that in Him and Him alone is light and in Him alone is life. He was before all things and by Him all things consist. There is no angel, principality, or power that does not hold his authority by direct permission and appointment of God. In Him all men and angels live and move and have their being. By Him and for Him and to Him are all things. From Him everything comes, by Him everything exists, and in Him everything ends bringing glory to God forever and forever. Amen and Amen! The imagination that a thing can have its beginning in God and have its end in destruction and a flaming fire in separation from God is an imagination that comes from the mind of man and not a truth that comes from mind of God, for of Him and through Him and to Him are all things; to Him be glory forever and ever! Amen! Rom. 11-36. Even more enlightening is the translation from Goodspeed, which says, "Who has ever known the Lord's thoughts or advised Him? or who has advanced anything to Him for which he will have to be repaid? For from Him everything comes: through Him everything exists; and in Him everything ends. Glory to Him forever! Amen." Rom. 11:34-36. Or as Moffat's translation bluntly and beautifully words verses 34-36, "Who ever understood the thoughts of the Lord? Who has ever been His counselor? Who has first given to Him and has had to be repaid? All comes from Him, all lives by Him, and all ends in Him. Glory to Him forever, Amen."

The words of this beautiful passage of scripture, even if left to stand completely alone, cast a ray of eternal hope across the gloomy pages of human tradition that for centuries has confused men's minds and made their feet to stumble and lose the way and caused their faith in the omniscience, immutability, and omnipotence of the Lord to falter and die. I have positively no hesitation in saying that no man on earth can truly come to love God as he ought until he sees that back of all things and before all things is a wise designing mind that is filled with an eternal purpose, and with that eternal purpose is omnipotent power, all power in heaven and earth, to carry to completion the design of His omniscient mind. If then God is both all wise and all powerful, we must conclude that He has the infinite wisdom to plan from the beginning to the end and the almighty power to carry out His purposes without let or hindrance from any source in all the universe. Nothing can stand before His wisdom and nothing can resist His power. Man in his present state of bondage and ignorance knows nothing yet as he ought to know, but love and trust must teach us that in the hands of Him who is omniscient, immutable, omnipotent, gracious, loving, and true all is planned and all is well.
It should be abundantly evident that creation in all its forms must be one of the chief delights of Almighty God. The work of His creation goes millions of light years beyond the power of the mightiest telescopes ever devised by man, embracing worlds and galaxies and universes unheard of and undreamed of. A galaxy is a luminous band of light encircling the heavens and consisting of numberless stars. As astronomers have swept the heavens with their mighty telescopes, they have estimated that there are enough galaxies in the heavens that one could be given to every man and woman that was ever born. In speaking of galaxies and worlds we are only speaking of dust, but God's principal creation consists of glorious living things. It embraces the unknown wonders of the cherubim and seraphim and heavenly hosts glorious and innumerable of which the mind of man has never dreamed. When we speak of creation, we like to dwell upon the great, the universal, and the mighty, but God's power to create things both animate and inanimate goes not only beyond the power of the telescope but beyond the power of the microscope as well, where even drops of water swarm with living things and God giveth life and breath to them all.

Time will not allow us to dwell on the glories of God's creations, but the Creator looked upon it all and saw that it was good, and by His Holy Spirit He inspired Isaiah to write, "Thus saith the Lord that created the heavens; God Himself that formed the earth and made it; He hath established it, He created it not in vain; He formed it to be inhabited; I am the Lord and there is none else." Isa. 45:18. We dare not endeavor to explore such vastness, and indeed our ability to even begin does not exist. The knowledge that must impress our minds just now is this: none of these things was created without a definite purpose. God does not create things for a pastime. God creates all things for a purpose. It may be now that we see no connection between many things of His creation, but eventually, when all is complete, they will fit together as the parts of an intricate machine.

Let us then bear these thoughts continually in mind as we read through the remainder of this story, for until we can see God's purpose we can see nothing. If God's purpose does not stand out clearly and distinctly as the motivating factor in all He is and does, then we have nothing but a Hodge podge of unrelated, meaningless creations with no more purpose than the shavings that fall from a whittler's jack-knife or the logs that drift meaninglessly on the tides of the ocean. By Him were all things created that are in heaven and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones or dominions, or principalities, or powers; all things were created by Him and for Him. Col. 1:16.

Not the least of the creations of God is the one we will now consider, that great and wonderful creation of God, which is known as man. Great as is the creation of the earth, yet it was made to be inhabited by man. All the things put in it and on it are there for man's sake. Man therefore is the most important creature on the earth and He has been created and made as part of the plan and purpose of the all wise God. None of us will fully understand that purpose now, but we do not need to understand it fully. All we need is to know that the purpose exists. It will then be easy to align our lives, our spirits, and our souls with the mind and will of God for this present dispensation.

It seems to me that if any man should announce his intention of making or doing anything, he should also be ready with a reason for his intention. If we announce some task that will take a life-time to complete and can give no reason for undertaking such a task, then I think we would be classed among the unwise and the fools. But if any man has a purpose and a reason for devoting his life to anything, be it ever so small, we must commend his vision and devotion and class him among the wise of the earth. Now surely what would be wise in man would be wise in God also, for there is no wisdom but of God. Therefore when the all wise and almighty God makes announcement that He will create a man and put him upon the earth, we may well expect that He will also have a definite purpose for doing so, and, though He is under no obligation, we may expect that He will announce His purpose to His creatures that they may better know His mind and do His will. This then is what we may expect, and it is certainly what God has done for all who have a mind to see.

During my brief life I have seldom heard any man even attempt to give a reason for man's creation or a purpose for his existence. If you will think back upon your past, you will also agree that, while preachers talk glibly of "heavens to gain" and "hells to shun" and the awfulness of the fall and the punishment of sin, you could count on a fingerless hand the number of times these same preachers have even tried to explain why an omniscient God would have let His creation slip beyond the power of His Almighty hand, or what was His purpose in making man in the first place. It is small wonder that this negative nonsense has caused men to drift on seas of infidelity and wander in the deserts of agnosticism. No man on earth can have faith in that which has no purpose and it is a miracle that any man could trust such negative thought. God never intended that we should drift along without a knowledge of His will, and I say of a truth that, the moment God announced His intention to make man and put him on the earth, He also announced His reason and purpose for so doing. These are the words spoken by the almighty and all wise God: "Let Us make man in Our image, after Our likeness, and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowls of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over everything that creepeth upon the earth." Gen. 1:26.

This then is the first announcement of God's intention regarding man and the first announcement of His purpose, but locked up in that glorious fiat is a universe of meaning that does not reach the eye and that the mind has never understood. When God announces that man should be in His image, we try to visualize Adam as the final and finished product of God's image, but it never enters our unenlightened minds that God was announcing His intention of taking ages and dispensations that would consume thousands of years to bring man into the image of God. And when I say man, I mean all men, great and small, black and white, yellow and brown, ignorant and intelligent, vessels of honor and vessels of dishonor - that they should all eventually come into His image.

Furthermore, after God had announced that He would make man in His image, He next announced that this man in His image should be given dominion over all the earth. We are never told how long Adam lived in that wonderful garden where he enjoyed complete dominion over everything God had made, where every animal and bird and creeping thing obeyed his will, and where even plant life bowed in obedience to his godly mind, but that glorious reign of wonder and peace under the direction of a son in the image of God was but a type and a shadow of the day when a whole first fruit company of sons in God's image would reign over all the earth and everything everywhere would be in submission to their godly minds and will. Ah! What an Eden of God's glory it will be when the judgment is upon His shoulder, to order and establish it in justice and righteousness, when saviours shall come up on Mount Zion to judge the house of Esau (flesh) and the kingdom shall be the Lord's. Obadiah 21. Then shall the earth be filled with the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea. Heb. 2:14.

But let us not pause here. Wonderful and glorious as was the Edenic reign, we must look beyond the book of Genesis to find the full purpose God had in mind when He created man and planned to take thousands of years to bring the entire human race into God's image. David, speaking by the Holy Spirit, asked, "What is man that Thou art mindful of him and the son of man that Thou visitest him?" Then in answer to his own question he continues: "Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of Thy hands: Thou hast put all things under his feet." Psa. 8:4, 6 This then was God's purpose in making man - that man should be in the image of God and have dominion over all the works of God's hands. We may reverently expect then that a creature who is being groomed and prepared for such a glory and majesty must be a special object of God's attention. We must expect that God will take both ages and dispensations to bring him through every imaginable test that he may be perfect and entire in the complete image of God.

When David, with the pen of inspiration, wrote the eighth Psalm, he must have been overwhelmed by the knowledge that God's intentions and purposes for man go far beyond the realm of this little earth on which we dwell; therefore his inspired tongue said, "When I consider the heavens, the work of Thy fingers, the moon and the stars which Thou has ordained, what is man that Thou art mindful of him, and the son of man that Thou visitest him?" What David was really asking is the same question we are asking now. "What is man that Thou art mindful of him?" Or as we would say, "What have you in mind for man?" I think the answer from God's own lips is this: man in God's image, filled with God's mind, is eventually to govern all things, for that is the purpose of sonship. Let us read a little further on this same subject as the Apostle develops the theme in the book of Hebrews. "For unto the angels hath He not put in subjection the world to come, whereof we speak, but one in a certain place testified saying, "What is man that Thou art mindful of him? or the son of man that Thou visitest him? Thou madest him a little lower than the angels; Thou crownedst him with glory and honor, and didst set him over the works of Thy hands: Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet. For in that he put all in subjection under him, he left nothing that is not put under him. But now we see not yet all things put under him." Heb. 2:5-8. We see not yet all things under man because man is not yet ready. He is now in the process of coming into the image of God. He is in the process of coming into sonship, and when that process is complete, he will take his place of lordship and dominion to carry the will of God into all the universe.

Though the Apostle says, "We see not yet all things put under him," it is beautiful to note that in verse 9 he says, "but we see Jesus... crowned with glory and honor" - Jesus who said, "All power in heaven and earth is given unto Me," Jesus the first manifested Son, Jesus the son in God's image, Jesus the first born of many brethren, Jesus who is bringing many sons to glory, Jesus who said, "Behold I and the children which God has given Me," Jesus who said, "The glory which Thou gavest Me I have given to them." No wonder he said, "We see Jesus," for He is so are we in the world." We are on our way to His glory, not to strum harps and sit on clouds and walk golden streets shouting hallelujah, but in God's image and likeness to take our place as lords of God's creation, carrying His almighty will into the uttermost universe and fulfilling His mighty purpose. "Let Us make man in Our image and after Our likeness and let Us give him dominion."

It will be a help and a blessing to us here to read Weymouth's translation of this passage, of which we have been speaking. "It was not to angels that God has assigned the sovereignty of that coming world of which we speak, but as we know, a psalmist has exclaimed, "How poor a creature is man, and yet Thou dost remember him and a son of man and yet Thou dost come to him! Thou hast made him for a little while lower than the angels; with glory and honor Thou has crowned him, and hast set him over the works of Thy hands. Thou hast put everything in subjection under his feet. For this subjecting the universe to man implies leaving nothing not subject to him. But we do not as yet see the universe subject to him."

These passages stagger the imagination with their wonder. Such things are too wonderful for me. In our fallen state while yet our eyes are dim through the ravages of sin and death, we can but see through a glass darkly. Though the centuries of sin's awful night have hidden His face from our eyes, yet we shall stand in the latter days upon the earth and in our own flesh we shall see God. Though the centuries have made us deaf to the voice of the Eternal, still His inspiration rings in our spirits. "Let Us make man in Our image." Glorious as are these great truths, they are almost terrifying in their reality. Any man who can read these things and feel proud and boastful in heart has never really seen them at all. Such a man has heard only with the carnal mind, which always caters to his pride, but the holy sobering truth he has never seen. When my own soul thrills with this message, my lips seem to be sealed, for the wonder of it all is too great for me. Such merciful purpose fills me with repentance and such kindness for so poor a creature lays me in the dust of desolation. Those who see God's purpose for man will fall in love with Him afresh and breathe their holy adoration to His name. Gone will be self-seeking and pride, vanquished the human will. The hopes of earth for gain and glamour will vanish in the hopes and purposes of God and our will shall be one with His. "Such things are too wonderful for me; they are high; I cannot attain unto it."

As we are about to discuss the important subject of God's purpose in the fall of man, there are a few things I should like to mention in preparation. As soon as any one begins to see the design of God in a thing, he is bound to have to depart from his human ways of looking at things. When he begins to see the infinite wonders of God's eternal purpose, his heart immediately begins to flow with infinite love for his wonderful Lord. Earthly desires and earthly wills begin to lose their grip upon him. He will be bound to find his life and will slipping into harmony with the eternal purpose. That which is bound up in God's heart will become bound up in his. The purpose hidden in the mind of God through dispensations to be revealed in the last days will be the joy and wisdom of his own mind. The plans and purposes of his life will be forgotten and like water vanish into the sands as he joyfully exchanges his plans for time for His purposes for eternity.

The Lord Jesus Christ brought a dreadful indictment against the Pharisees and religious leaders of His day when He said, "You make the commandment of God of none effect by your tradition." Matt. 15:6. This is a hateful thing indeed, but throughout all the ages of religious history it has been pitifully true. The great truths and revelations of the Spirit of God have been flung aside as heresies because they did not conform to establish tradition. Jesus was always at odds with the Pharisees and doctors of the law because they rejected the counsel of God rather than cast aside their tradition. They had come to the place where it was useless to quote scripture to them, for their established ideas had become their true doctrine and mainstay. They were the people and wisdom would die with them, and all teachings conflicting with their long established creeds must of necessity be of the devil.
Now it would be folly to examine them and find them guilty, yet pass lightly over our sad plight, for like the Jews the church in all its existing forms has established its traditions and doctrines and will rise up and cast out anyone who does not conform to them. We may quote all the scripture we wish, but few are moved by it and few have a mind to change the traditions of the past for the unfolding revelation of the days to come. Be assured therefore that every man on earth who is going to follow the revelation of God as it is revealed by His word and by His Spirit will have to lay aside tradition after tradition and be willing to be branded as an heretic that he may walk in the glory of the light that falls from God's presence.

Many people will be willing to follow me to this point. They rejoice in the truth that God is almighty, all wise, ever present, full of love, everlasting. They rejoice to hear that He is full of purpose and that nothing can come into the world or into existence without His divine permission. But it is right here that their established tradition comes into conflict with the truth they profess to believe. If God is omniscient, then nothing can happen without His knowledge. If God is omnipotent (almighty), then He has the power to permit or stop anything that is not His will. If He is omnipresent (everywhere present), then He is always present to know and see even the sparrow that falls. How much more, then, did He notice the fall of Adam!

The story of the fall of man in Eden through the temptation of the devil is commonly looked upon as something that happened when God was not looking. True God walked and talked with Adam in the evening, but the idea is always foremost that, when Satan came to tempt the woman, God was not present. The fall of man is always represented as something that slipped unnoticed and unwanted into the plan of God. The pitiful story is preached of the lovely pair whom God had placed in His garden to dress it, and how Satan came and ruined the whole lovely plan. God forbid that I should stoop to cynicism, but if we know anything at all about the church's tradition, we also know that what I have stated above is the general idea that has been foisted upon the gullible ears of the people for hundreds of years. All this is enlarged upon and sermon pictures are always being painted of God's holding a hasty conference in heaven to devise a scheme by which He could redeem the man that had fallen and the world that had fallen with him. Now do not assert that this is not so, for dozens of times in my life I have heard this stated both by pulpit and radio, and in my younger days I followed the same nonsensical tradition and stated the very same things.

To go into further detail in this regard would be a waste of time, but it is abundantly evident that any man who dares to say that the fall of man was not an accident brought about by the cunning wisdom of Satan, but a designed purpose of an all wise, almighty, ever-present God, will immediately find himself in conflict with the tradition of the age and will be cast out as an heretic. Notwithstanding I do affirm with every ounce of emphasis at my command that the fall of man was not an accident nor a chance, but was part of the plan of an all wise, omnipotent, and immutable God and that through the plan of the fall and redemption of man the whole creation would be brought into the image of God, and when I say the image of God, I refer to the image that God had in mind when He said, Let Us make man in Our image." It is true that Adam was made in the image of God, but Adam was in the precarious position of being innocent, not knowing good or evil. Blessed as his condition must have been, I know of no condition more dangerous than complete innocence, and, left in this condition, he could have fallen into sin at any time throughout all eternity.

God was not planning a race of weaklings when He created man. He was preparing a whole race, which He would bring to sonship and to whom He would give dominion over all the works of His mighty hands. God was looking into the ages yet unborn, purposing and planning a righteous government by His sons. Time means nothing to God, for He takes endless ages in preparation for his eternal purposes.

Now let us see what the inspired apostle Paul had to say about the purpose of the fall. Let us throw away our childish tradition about the harps and mansions in the skies while we listen with bated breath to the word of inspiration as it flows from the heart of God. Read in Romans 8:20. Paul emphatically declares that the fall was not the plan of the creature, but the plan and hope of the Creator. These are his words: "For the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him (God) who hath subjected the same in hope." Can any statement in the world be plainer than this, in which it is plainly stated that God had a hope in mind when He subjected the creature (man and the whole creation) to the vanity of the fall?
The inspired apostle does not leave us in doubt as to what that hope and purpose was, for the following verses, 21-23, clearly show that God's plan and purpose was to bring us to sonship, which he here calls adoption. Notice carefully as we read it. "Because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children (sons) of God. For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now. And not only they but ourselves also groan within ourselves waiting for the adoption, (sonship), to wit (which means) the redemption of our bodies." Rom. 8:20-23. Paul is still on the same theme of sonship when he continues in verse 28 with these words: "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purpose. For whom He did foreknow He did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He (Jesus) might be the first born among many brethren."

Can you not see the tremendous value of the desperate vanity and night of the fall as you read these truths? Can you not see that by the travail, darkness, pain, and temptation of this dismal night of sin God is building something into the entire creation that will shine and blaze in transcending splendor in the glory of the ages yet unborn? Now listen further while we read the introduction to the above passage. In Rom. 8:18-19 Paul says, "For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed, for the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God." There is purpose in the suffering of this present time. There is glorious unequalled design, for it is the suffering and night the world is enduring now that will bring forth unequalled and unexcelled glory, even the glory of sonship in the image of God. There is definite purpose in all suffering. It is producing the very image that God desires. He cannot make the kind of sons He wants without the blazing furnaces of suffering and affliction. Do not forget this truth and do not forget that this kind of fiery trial that is to try us could not have existed without the fall of man. Oh, how much we miss by adhering to our jejune and stupid traditions, which make the fall to be an accident brought about by the cunning of Satan and the inattention of the Lord!

Christians of all ages have diligently enquired, "Why do the righteous suffer?" The answer is very, very simple in the light and understanding of His infinite purpose. Few subjects in scripture receive more attention than suffering and affliction and the Holy Spirit has constantly pointed out that suffering and affliction that come as a result of the life of man are for our eternal benefit in bringing us to perfection and sonship. Even of the blessed Christ Himself it is clearly stated, "Though He were a son yet learned He obedience through the things He suffered, and being made perfect He became the author of eternal salvation." Heb. 5:8. Listen to James as he exhorts us. "Take, my brethren, the prophets as an example of suffering affliction and of patience. Behold, we suffer in the suffering of this present time. There is glorious unequalled design, for it is the suffering and night the world is enduring now that will bring forth unequalled and unexcelled glory, even the glory of sonship in the image of God. There is definite purpose in all suffering. It is producing the very image that God desires. He cannot make the kind of sons He wants without the blazing furnaces of suffering and affliction. Do not forget this truth and do not forget that this kind of fiery trial that is to try us could not have existed without the fall of man. Oh, how much we miss by adhering to our jejune and stupid traditions, which make the fall to be an accident brought about by the cunning of Satan and the inattention of the Lord!

I cannot go on with the scriptures that show the vast benefits derived from suffering, affliction, sorrow, heartache, pain, deferred hopes, loss, disappointment, and the thousand other things men endure. You may study them all for yourselves. Let me assure you, however, of this: the anguish and sorrow of all these things are the furnace that refines the gold and brings us to sonship and the image of the Lord. When God proclaimed, "Let Us make man in Our image and after Our likeness," little did any creature know the eternal methods and fires He would use to perfect that image beyond the power of destruction. None of these things could have been accomplished without the fall of man, for without the fall none of them would have existed at all.

When we realize that even some of the angels of heaven sinned and were cast down, we are brought to understand as never before why it was necessary for God to bring into being a race of sons who knew experimentally the dire results of sin, and so, being wise through knowledge and experience and not innocent, they would know both good and evil and could choose the good and refuse the evil. Never again will sin darken the universe, for a race of sons of God who have been redeemed and cleansed from sin shall reign in righteousness eternal.
Suffering and affliction, the results of the fall, are even carrying their eternal benefits to those who are still in the world of sin. This is clearly indicated by Peter when he says, "Whom resist in faith knowing that the same afflictions are accomplished in your brethren that are in the world." 1 Pet. 5:9. I have long believed that God saves some first and teaches them after, but others He teaches first and saves them after. But every day God reaps an enormous harvest from mankind.

Now that we have seen that it was impossible for sin to surreptitiously slip into God’s plan and spoil His eternal purpose and that the fall of man was part of the eternal purpose, we immediately find ourselves at variance with established tradition. The established visible church has preached its multiplied sermons seeking to prove its tradition that the vast majority of God's human creation will be lost, finally, irrevocably, and eternally, and not only will they be lost to God forever and ever, but they will be given up to the most sadistic, inhuman, uncodly torments that could be devised only by the vilest fiends. According to the tradition of the church this hellish torment is to fall upon all who do not believe. It matters not a whit whether they had opportunity to believe or not. It matters not at all if they were born in the darkest jungles of Africa, the swamps of Borneo, or the deserts of India or China. The fact that they never heard there was a God will be no excuse whatever. The fact that they never heard that God had a Son will not impede their dreadful destruction. Heathen who never heard that God had a Son are, according to this teaching, faced with the same dreadful doom as men who heard the gospel from their birth and yet rejected it. To add to the stupidity of their teaching they make pitiful attempts to prove that this is the justice of God and that God is manifesting His love in the punishment of sin.

The doctrine of eternal punishment is based on a literal interpretation of some of the metaphors of scripture (to the complete neglect of many other scriptures, which I shall presently show). No doctrine has ever been propounded with more confidence and greater bitterness nor with a grossness and coarseness more hideous and repugnant, and, in the face of the love and kindness of God, more inconceivable and incredible.

One of the theologians of the Church of England (Jeremy Taylor) speaks of the fate of the wicked in the following terms: "In hell every sense and organ shall be assailed forever with its own appropriate and most exquisite sufferings. We are amazed at the inhumanity of Phalaris, who roasted men in his brazen bull, but that was a joy in comparison with hell." And here is what the renowned evangelist, C. H. Spurgeon, said on the same subject. "There is real fire in hell. Thy body shall be suffused with agony; thy head tormented with racking pains; thine eyes starting from their sockets, thine ears tortured with horrid sounds; thy pulse rattling with anguish; thy limbs cracking in the flame; every vein a pathway for the fire to tread; every nerve a string on which the devil shall forever play the diabolical tune of hell's unutterable lament."

Is it any wonder that in the face of such sadistic humbug there has been a wholesale manufacture of infidels? All these statements may be a show of oratorical eloquence, but they are nothing more. They hold no part of truth. They deny every attribute of God. They make wisdom foolishness, turn eternal love into exasperated hate, make omnipotence helplessness, and make the justice of God the grossest injustice in the universe. To say that I believe in such repugnance would be a lie of the first order. I do not believe it because it is contrary to the nature of God. It is contrary to the love of God. It is contrary to the power of God. It is contrary to the scriptures and it puts God in the ridiculous position of being the almighty King of kings and Lord of lords yet having in His dominion a pocket of hate and resistance that even He cannot overcome. Further than this it makes the mighty sacrifice of Christ that was made for all the world to be almost impotent in its power and scope. Worst of all it frustrates the purpose of God laid down in the beginning when He said, "Let Us make man in Our image and after Our likeness and let Us give him dominion."

Some will immediately ask me whether I do not believe in hell. My answer is very definite on this point. I most certainly do believe in hell, but the hell of the Bible and the hell of human tradition are not the same thing at all. The hell of tradition is punitive, hopeless, and eternal, while the hell of the scripture, like every judgment of God, is corrective, remedial, and restorative. I do not understand enough of this great truth to make broad claims about it, but I do want to say that the whole doctrine of eternal punishment stands on the shaky foundation of a misunderstanding of the Greek word aion. This word, which means age, has been translated into English in the New Testament by seven different English words. It is translated as age (twice), course (once), world (thirty-two times), eternal (twice). The adjective form of the word, aionios, appears as eternal.
God will return to Him again. It is the day when every planet shall have completed its given orbit, when every of times. It is the eighth day when all things are made new. It is the age when everything that came out from the dispensation of grace, the next is the dispensation of the kingdom of God, and the age following is the fullness of times. The dispensation of the fullness of times is the dispensation that follows the kingdom. We are now in the dispensation of grace which He, the possessor of all wisdom and understanding, lavished upon us, when He made known to us the secret of His will, and this is in harmony with God's merciful purpose for the government of the world.

We will now read the thrilling translation of Eph. 1:7-10 by Weymouth. "It is in Him and through the shedding of His blood that we have our deliverance - the forgiveness of our offences - so abundant was God's grace, the grace which He, the possessor of all wisdom and understanding, lavished upon us, when He made known to us the secret of His will, and this is in harmony with God's merciful purpose for the government of the world when the time is ripe for it - the purpose which He has cherished in His own mind of restoring the whole creation to find its one head in Christ; yes, things in heaven and things in earth to find their one head in Him."

How I rejoice and how I exult in such a glorious hope of universal reconciliation! What a day it will be when the fires of God have devoured the adversary that has existed in every man, when every evil work has been burned up and every man presented purified and faultless before the throne of His glory with exceeding joy.

If you have the translation of Moffatt, Goodspeed, Rotherham, and others, you will see they are all plain and emphatic on this final restoration of all things. Well do I know that such teaching is contrary to the traditions of Babylon, but we are not interested in Babylon's traditions. We are interested in the revelation of the Lord.

Every reader should notice especially how Paul prays that God would give us all the Spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Him, and that the eyes of our understanding might be enlightened as to what is the hope of our calling. See Eph. 1:17-18.

How often we have heard preachers warn people that "the day of grace will soon be over forever." Now nothing can be further from the truth, for as long as God exists the grace of God will be with us. Please notice that Paul shows that the grace of God is going to be made known in the ages to come through those who have received it here and now in this dispensation. Eph. 2:7-8. "And hath raised us up together and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ, that in the ages to come He might show the exceeding riches of His grace in His kindness toward us through Christ Jesus. Not only does this passage tell us of the great purpose of restoration in the ages to come, but it also shows us that it is for this very reason that God is saving a first fruit company now. The displaying of the grace of God in the coming ages, i.e., the kingdom and the fullness of times, is the true reason for the manifestation of the sons of God. God has no intention of bringing all the world into the fold now. The whole purpose of this age is to gather out a people to display His grace in the coming ages. Eph. 2:7. James also declared this truth when at Jerusalem he said, "Simon hath declared how God at first did visit the Gentiles to take out a people for His name"... "that the residue of men might seek after the Lord and all the Gentiles upon whom My name is called... Known unto God are all His works from the earliest ages through the lips of His holy prophets since the world began." Acts 15:14,17-18.

The universal greatness of God's purpose in calling out a people to display His glory in coming ages is seen in Paul's reference to principalities and powers in Eph. 3:10. "To the intent that now unto principalities and powers in the heavenly places might be known by the church the manifold wisdom of God." This passage is too mighty for my feeble comment, so we shall leave it for the Holy Spirit to reveal to your heart. Surely, however, anyone can see that our calling is not merely to escape hell and spend our eternal lives in heaven, but rather that "He has saved us and called us, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose which He purposed in Christ Jesus before the world began." 2 Tim. 1:8. It reaches far beyond the redemption of man to the restoration of all things in the universe. In one grand sweeping statement the apostle Paul includes everything in heaven and earth and under the earth in the great redemption and sees them all confessing to the glory of God and the Father that Jesus Christ is Lord. Phil. 2:9-11. "Wherefore God hath highly exalted Him and given Him a name which is above every name; that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth: and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father." Notice the universal magnitude of the statement of Col. 1:15-22. "For by Him were all things created that are in heaven and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones or dominions or principalities or powers, all things were created by Him and for Him and He is before all things, and by Him all things consist... For it pleased the Father that in Him should all fullness dwell, and having made peace by the blood of His cross, by Him to reconcile all things unto Himself; by Him, I say, whether they be things in earth or things in heaven."

It was this same theme that Peter had in mind when in Acts 3:20, 21 he declared that the restitution of all things had been spoken of by every prophet since the foundation of the world. "And He shall send Jesus Christ which before was preached unto you: whom the heavens must receive until the times of the restitution of all things, which God has spoken by the mouth of His Holy prophets since the world began." Some have tried to interpret this scripture to say that Peter meant that only the things spoken by the prophets would be restored, but in verse 24 he says, "All the prophets from Samuel and those that follow after ... have likewise foretold of these days." Weymouth adds a weight of understanding when he words it thus: "Heaven must receive Him until those times of which God has spoken from the earliest ages through the lips of His holy prophets... the times of the reconstitution of all things." Verses 22-23.
It is not at all fair to the subject at hand to deal with it thus so briefly, for the truth of final and universal reconciliation actually fills the theme of Scripture. Why do we pass so lightly over the great statements of Paul with reference to the fall and redemption of man? He points out continually that, as sin with all its dire results passed upon us all because of the disobedience of one man, so righteousness passes upon us all through the righteousness of one man, Jesus Christ. Notice the convincing terms used in Romans 5:15-21. "Adam prefigured Him who was to come, but the gift is very different from the trespass. For while the rest of men died by the trespass of one man, the grace of God and the free gift which comes by the grace of the one man, Jesus Christ, overflowed far more richly upon the rest of men. Nor is the free gift like the effect of one man's sin; for while the sentence ensuing on a single sin resulted in doom, the free gift ensuing on many trespasses issues in acquittal. For if the trespass of one man allowed death to reign through that one man, much more shall those who receive the overflowing grace and free gift of righteousness reign in life through one, through Jesus Christ. When then, as one man's trespass issued in doom for all, so one man's act of redress issued in acquittal and life for all. Just as one man's disobedience made all the rest sinners, so one man's obedience will make all the rest righteous. Law slipped in to aggravate the trespass; sin increased, but grace surpassed it far, so that while sin had reigned the reign of death, grace might also reign with a righteousness that ends in life eternal through Jesus Christ our Lord." (Moffat).

It should not be necessary to enlarge on this all-inclusive statement. Nothing could be more reasonable and just than that which Paul has explained in the passage above - that since death passed upon all men because of Adam's disobedience, so life and righteousness will eventually pass upon all men because of Christ's obedience. For as by the disobedience of one many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous. The multitudes of earth who have never heard of Adam are none the less affected by his disobedience. It is equally true that those who have not heard of Christ are affected by His righteousness. Christ is the Saviour of all men, especially of those who have the privilege of hearing and believing, for they are able to partake of the benefits of His redemption here and now.

The subject of redemption is so vast that no book can cover it, let alone the few pages at our disposal, but it should be very clear to all that, since there is a definite purpose in the fall of man, there is every reason to hope for his universal redemption. The glorious Lamb that was slain before the foundation of the world (Rev. 13:8) was not slain because of a possibility that man might fall, but because both the fall and the redemption were fore-ordained of God.

Let us, then, conclude by noticing a few other scriptures that include all men in the wonderful redemption of our Lord Jesus Christ. "For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Saviour, who will have all men to be saved and come to a knowledge of the truth." 1 Tim. 2:3-4. "And they shall not teach every man his neighbor and every man his brother saying, Know the Lord, for all shall know Me from the least to the greatest." Heb. 8:11. "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men." Tit. 2:11. "And every creature which is in heaven, and on earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them heard I saying, Blessing and honor and glory and power be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne and to the Lamb forever and ever." Rev. 5:13.

There are always those people who object to this truth on the grounds that the preaching of universal reconciliation will make Christians and unsaved careless. People who want to be careless will always find an excuse to be careless and they will have to suffer the result of their carelessness in the judgment. The knowledge of God's purpose does not make true men careless. It makes them long to become a part of His will and part of His eternal purpose. We can embrace every travail in understanding, grace and love, when we clearly see it is working for eternal good according to His purpose, which He purposed in Christ before the ages began.

Some have declared that if they believed that all men would eventually be saved, they would just throw up everything and have a good time. Such people might well ask themselves for what purpose they are serving God now. If they are only serving God because they live in dread of eternal torment, then they are serving as slaves in fear of a tyrant, but those who see God's purpose serve God because they love Him and long to partake of His glorious plan.
CHAPTER TWO
THE RICHES OF GOD'S INHERITANCE IN HIS SAINTS

Cold blows the blast across the moor;
The sleet drives hissing in the wind.
Yon toilsome mountain lies before,
A dreary, treeless waste behind.
So faint I am these tottering feet
No more my feeble frame can bear;
My sinking heart forgets to beat,
And drifting snows my tomb prepare. This world in which we dwell is a waterless, foodless, purposeless wilderness until men find Jesus Christ, who is Himself the living water, the bread of life, and the beginning and the end of the purpose of God. In the book called Pilgrim's Progress, which in its time had the honor of gracing almost every home in the English speaking world as well as being translated into dozens of foreign tongues, the author begins his inspired narrative with these significant words: "As I walked through the wilderness of this world, I lighted on a certain place where was a den and laid me down in that place to sleep; and as I slept, I dreamed a dream. I dreamed, and, behold, I saw a man clothed with rags, standing in a certain place with his face from his own house, a book in his hand, and a great burden upon his back." I see no purpose for this world, or for this life, or for any of the things in this life if no eternal purpose is to be found in God. If there is nothing in eternity past save the vain strivings of men, and nothing in eternity future save the vanity that has always been, if man's only hope is to enjoy the fleeting interval which we call life, then certainly we are most miserable. If the fleeting vanities of this present life are the only ends in view, then what profit would there be of all man's labor under the sun? What value would there be in labor or travail, joy or delight, much less in pain and sorrow? Would not a man rather curse the day in which his parents were glad that a man child was born? And would not he bless the day when the enemy, death, would at last relieve him of his labor and travail, his groaning and his pain, his hunger and his thirst that he might go to that lifeless place where the dead know not anything, the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest?

To the young and uninitiated the fleeting joys of this present world appear to be permanent blessings. Before his inexperienced mind lies a whole world rich with lasting prospect and satisfaction. He dreams of shiny automobiles, a home full of furniture and every modern convenience, a summer cabin by the lake with power boats and gear galore, an ideal wife or husband, a perfect family replete with just so many healthy children. On and on his fertile mind wanders through the green fields of temporal blessings until one day he awakes to find himself a toil-weary man who has scarcely had time to even enjoy his youth. These are the words of Solomon, the son of David, the king in Jerusalem: Eccles. 1:2-11. (Goodspeed).

"Vanity of vanities, all is vanity!
What does a man gain from all his toil
At which he toils beneath the sun?
One generation goes, and another comes,
While the earth endures forever,
The sun rises and the sun sets,
And hastens to the place where he rose.
The wind blows toward the south,
And returns to the north.
Turning, turning, the wind blows,
And returns upon its circuit.
All rivers run into the sea,
But the sea is never full;
To the place where the rivers flow,
There they continue to flow.
All things are wearisome;
One cannot recount them;
The eye is not satisfied with seeing,
Nor is the ear filled with hearing.
Whatsoever has been is that which will be;
And whatsoever has been done is that which will be done;
Is there a thing of which it is said, 'Lo, this is new'?
It was already in existence in the ages
Which were before us.
There is no memory of earlier people;
And likewise of later people who shall be,
There will be no memory with those who are later still."

The man who, during his pilgrimage in this world, fills his life with mirth and pleasure will undoubtedly testify in the end of his days that these are all vanity. He will say of laughter, "It is mad," and of mirth he will say. "What good is it?" If about himself he gathers great works, building houses and planting vineyards, gardens, trees, and fruitful orchards amid fountains of water and murmuring streams, he will say in the end as they pass from his grasp, "Behold, all is vanity and vexation of spirit." If he gathers servants to serve him, filling his pastures with cattle, possessing both silver and gold and delighting himself with peculiar treasures from many parts of the world, and for his pleasure he is entertained with musicians and minstrels so that his heart rejoices in his labor and delights in his possessions, when at last he stands to gaze with pride upon it all, he will yet accede to that which millions before him have already confessed: "All is vanity and vexation of spirit."

The favorite hymn of His Majesty, King George V of England, was this:

Swift to its close ebbs out life's little day;
Earth's joys grow dim; their glories fade away.
Change and decay in all around I see.
Oh, Thou who changest not, abide with me!

Kings, presidents and millionaires must in the end give the same doleful testimony. Their glories fade as a leaf. Their iniquities like the wind take them away. For what is our life? It is even a vapor, which appeareth for a little time and then vanishes away. James 4:14. It is like the grass which today is and tomorrow is withered in the heat; for the wind passeth over it and it is gone, and the place where it stood shall know it no more.

Many years have come and gone since that November evening when the blood of Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God, cleansed my heart from sin. There 'neath His cross Jesus gave me His pardon and bade me take up my cross and follow Him. It was there that the purposelessness of life began to vanish and before my believing heart the goodness of the Lord began to unfold. My spiritual eyes, so long accustomed to darkness, began to behold the distant horizons of God's eternal purpose. He began to teach me that "nothing useless is, or vain," but that everything is part and parcel of a purpose so infinite that none in the universe could have conceived it save He whose wisdom is inscrutable, whose knowledge is higher than the heavens, whose love cannot be measured by heights or depths or lengths or breadths, and whose power is so completely omnipotent that nothing can halt or let or hinder for even a moment the irresistible moving of His purpose.

One of the greatest crimes ever perpetrated against the human family is that dastardly crime committed by a man-made clergy who, having rejected God's eternal purposes, have substituted in their stead the traditions and doctrines of men. They have not told the people of God's eternal purpose, which never for one moment strayed from the control of its almighty Author and Architect. I do not mean to be disrespectful when I say that the kind of gospel preached by this man-made ministry amounts to little more than this: Trust in our system and tradition and you will "fly up high and eat pie," but refuse to believe it and your soul will writhe in the unutterable torments of the damned forever and ever. And while these misguided men are harping such diabolical and purposeless discord, they have the audacity to declare that this is the program of Him whose mind is omniscient, whose power is limitless, and whose love is eternal. Had they sat in God's counsel to listen to the sweet harmony of eternal wisdom, they would have heard the Creator speak such words as these: "The creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him (God Almighty) who has subjected the same (the creature) in hope. Because the creature itself shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God." Rom. 8:20-21.
If the above words be true, and God, who cannot lie, inspired the apostle's heart to write them, then it can be clearly seen that the omniscient God is taking upon Himself the responsibility for the fall of man. He is trying to tell us, if we will but pause to listen, that Adam's fall was not Adam's idea. It was part and parcel of a purpose that lay hidden in the mind of God to bring men into the image of their Creator, that mankind by actual experience should know both good and evil and that of every kind. Those who by experience know evil in all the vile horrors of its multiplied ramifications, being by the blood of Christ delivered from it, will never in a billion years again fall victim to its power; for they, being redeemed from it, will not be as Adam, who, though good, was innocent and easily deceived, but having been redeemed by the blood of Christ and made spotless, they will stand in the holiness of God Himself, knowing, and that by experience, both good and evil. Shall he who knows evil experimentally fall prey thereto a second time? Is not he who has known evil the only one who truly knows good? No man can fully appreciate his health until he has known the despair of sickness and pain. Who can appreciate the presence of friends as he who has long been encompassed by foes? The man born with a silver spoon in his mouth can never appreciate good and prosperous times as can he who has known famine and evil days. Neither can any know good save him who has known evil.

The mind of God was filled with hope and purpose when He subjected the creature He had made to the vanity and futility of his fallen state. Nor does He leave us in doubt as to what His hope and purpose was! Having said, "The creature was made subject to vanity ... by reason of Him who hath subjected the same in hope," He straightway declares in verse 21, "Because the creature itself shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God." Oh, that God's people would meditate with prayer and thoughtfulness concerning these wonderful mysteries! Then would they see that the pathway of evil, of bondage and corruption from which Christ has now redeemed us through His blood is in reality the valley of the shadow of death through which we must pass to receive our sonship in Him. As we pass through the valley of evil and death, we groan within ourselves, waiting for full redemption, even the redemption of our bodies, which will signify that at last we have attained full sonship. Rom. 8:22-23.

Not only do we pray with hope and faith for the fullness of our sonship, but the animals and birds, the forests and hills, and the heathen in their dismal darkness groan out of their longings with us that our sonship may be speedily accomplished to the end that this body of God's sons, fully acquainted with both good and evil, may be prepared to take the reins of government with Jesus Christ, their elder brother, that they forever may administer good, and evil shall be no more forever. The day is at hand for the manifestation of God's sons and the long day of preparation is almost over. Their first act will be to restore righteousness and righteous government to the whole earth in that heaven blessed dispensation of the kingdom of God. Then will follow the great dispensation of the fullness of times when God will gather everything in heaven and earth into His Son. Eph. 1:10. Then will begin the restoration of the universe when new heavens and new earths are spoken into being by the eternal Logos.

When the astronauts returned from their journey to the moon, they brought back colored pictures of the earth taken from outer space. One picture showed the beautiful planet earth sparkling with colorful magnificence while in the foreground lay the forbidding plain of the moon, desolate, barren, and rock-strewn. Far off in the limitless expanse of space hung the planet earth, brilliant in her radiant splendor. Clearly visible was the azure blue of the oceans, the ravishing spectacle of green forests and grass-carpeted fields, while draped about her shoulders hung a protecting mantle of cloud, assurance of an invisible atmosphere, the life breath of mankind and all living things, an eternal testimony that earth alone of all the celestial bodies was prepared by God to be inhabited. Isa. 45:18. But there in the foreground lay the lifeless, waterless, treeless, airless, rock-strewn desolation of the moon. No words written or spoken could better describe its hopeless wastes than the inspired words once spoken of the earth, "The earth was without form and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep." Gen. 1:2. The brave men who for a few fleeting hours stood in the depressing gloom of its desolate wilderness wanted above all else to leave the dejection of its unpopulated wastes and return to that place prepared by God for man.

Man is seeking and hoping to find life on some other planet in the vastness of the heavens, but he will not find it. All planets and stars of the universe are as desolate as the moon. There is one exception and one only and that one exception is the planet where humans dwell. There was a time when the earth, too, like all the other planets, was without form and void and darkness was upon the face of the deep. There was no air. There was no water, no forests, no grass nor flowers nor any beautiful thing. No animals roamed its surface. No strange bright birds on their starry wings bore the rich hues of all glorious things. Nor was man created in the image of God or given lordship over the work of God's hand. The earth was without form, lifeless, void, and desolate as the moon or Mars or any other planet or star. The mailed hand of impenetrable darkness held it in its vice-like grip until that matchless hour when God began to unfold His perfect plan for the restoration of the entire universe.

Out of the glories of which we know nothing at present came the creative command of the eternal Logos, each command in itself being instantly obeyed. "Let there be light," said the Lord, and there was light. *Gen. 1:3.* And God said, "Let there be a firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it divide the waters from the waters." *Verse 9.* And God said, "Let the earth bring forth grass, the herb yielding seed and the fruit tree yielding fruit..." *Verse 11.* And God said, "Let there be lights in the firmament of heaven to divide the day from the night..." *Verses 14-19.* And God said, "Let the water bring forth abundantly..." *Verses 20-23.* And God said, "Let the earth bring forth the living creature after his kind, cattle and creeping things and beasts of the earth after his kind..." *Verses 24-25.* And God said, "Let Us make man in Our image, after Our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth. So God created man in His own image; in the image of God created He him: male and female created He them." *Verses 26-27.*

Let us remember when we hear these things that the earth upon which we dwell, the earth which shines as a gem among all the planets and stars of the firmament, was once a lifeless wilderness as desolate as the moon, and thus it would have remained unto this day had not the Lord in wisdom purposed to make this tiny world the genesis and starting place for the restoration and habitation of the limitless universe.

Let me tell you a remarkable truth with which God has filled my heart, and after we have thought about it, we will show that the scripture bears record of its accuracy.

God has planned the restoration of all things. It is estimated that our galaxy may contain as many as five hundred billion stars, and astronomers say that there are enough galaxies in the vastness of the heavens to give one to every man and woman that was ever born. Is it any wonder that God Himself likened the stars of heaven to the sands of the sea in number or that astronomers reckon that the stars of the heaven and the sands of the seashores of earth are about equal in number? Is not this the more remarkable when we remember that the same God who created these said to Abraham as he gazed upon them, "So shall thy seed be"? *Gen. 15:4-5.* May our spiritual eyes be enlightened to see and our hearts to understand that earth alone among all the vast array of heavenly bodies has been prepared for man. "For thus saith the Lord that created the heavens; God Himself that formed the earth and made it; He hath established it, He created it not in vain, He formed it to be inhabited: I am the Lord; and there is none else." *Isa. 45:18.* And that the earth was to be inhabited by man David, the prophet of God, made exceedingly clear when he declared by the Spirit, "The heaven, even the heavens, are the Lord's: but the earth He hath given to the children of men." *Psa. 115:16.*

The burning question that has betimes beset the minds of thoughtful men is this: What purpose lay in that mind of infinite wisdom when from the innumerable multitude of heavenly bodies He chose one of the smallest of all planets and prepared it with infinite care for the habitation of mankind? And what purpose had He in His mind of infinite wisdom when all heaven echoed to the eternal fiat, "Let Us make man in Our image and after Our likeness, and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth"? *Gen. 1:26-27.*

Let us pause here long enough to affirm that the scriptures clearly show that God's purpose in placing man here on this earth, which He so carefully prepared for our use, was that He might through the dispensations of time prepare a creation in His own likeness who under God in the ages to come would reign with Christ as governors, lords, and restorers of the entire universe. The billions of planets and stars, which today lie as desolate as the surface of the moon, are waiting and groaning with all creation for that vast family of God's sons to be fully prepared and manifested as lords and governors of the universe. *Rom. 8:22-23.* When they are grown to maturity in God's image and they as Christ Jesus are one spirit and one mind with the Father, they will first restore the earth to the perfection of Eden and then will begin the restoration of the universe. Though men in the blindness of tradition have failed to see it, eternal wisdom has declared it, saying, "For, behold, I create new heavens and a new earth: and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind." Isa. 65:17.

Peter the apostle spoke of the day when the heavens, being on fire, should be dissolved and the elements melt with fervent heat, Pet. 3:12, but he spoke also of the promise of God by which we should look for new heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness. 2 Pet. 3:13. And John the beloved in his vision on the Isle of Patmos saw before his wondering eyes the excellent glory of the new heavens and a new earth in their recreated perfection, for he says, "I saw a new heaven and a new earth; for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away." Rev. 21:1.

Now, when the Lord desires to plant truth in the heart of man, He first must sow the seed. Then, after seed is sown, it springs forth from its tiny germ, first the blade, then the ear, and after that the full corn in the ear. See Mark 4:28. It is after this same order that revelation grows. The seed of truth is planted in the heart. There it flourishes more and more until the tree of truth becomes so large and all-embracing that man can no more comprehend its lengths and depths, its breadths and heights. When our heavenly Father placed man in Eden and proclaimed that he should have dominion over cattle and fishes, birds and creeping things, and over all the earth, Gen. 1:26, He was planting in infinitesimal form a seed that was destined to grow far beyond the confines of the earth until its branches filled the universe as well, until the sacred word had been fulfilled, "Thou hast put all things under his feet." Psa. 8:6.

King David, seeming to tremble in the shadow of his own insignificance, realized what a babe he was to dare to mention the vastness of God's purpose; therefore, he prefaced his mighty edict with this statement of his utter humility: "Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings hast Thou ordained strength because of Thine enemies, that Thou mightest still the enemy and the avenger." Then he continues, "When I consider the heavens, the work of Thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which Thou hast ordained, what is man that Thou art mindful of Him? and the son of man, that Thou visitest him? Thou madest him a little lower than the angels; Thou crownedst him with glory and honor, and didst set him over the works of Thy hands; Thou hast put all things under his feet; all sheep and oxen, yea, and the beasts of the field; the fowl of the air, and the fish of the sea, and whatsoever passeth through the paths of the sea." Psa. 8:2-8.

The seed of the truth of man's dominion was planted in Gen. 1:26, but the blade soon appeared above the earth and David saw that man would be given dominion over all the works of God's hands. Then the writer of the book of Hebrews saw the "full corn in the ear" when he proclaimed the things we now repeat. "For unto the angels hath He not put in subjection the world to come, whereof we speak. But one in a certain place testified, saying, What is man, that Thou art mindful of him? or the son of man that Thou visitest him? Thou madest him a little lower than the angels; Thou crownedst him with glory and honor, and didst set him over the works of Thy hands. Thou hast put all things under his feet. For in that he put all in subjection under him (man), He left nothing that is not put under him. But now we see not yet all things put under him. But we see Jesus ..." Heb. 2:5-9.

This statement, "we see Jesus," is of tremendous significance, for Jesus is the first begotten Son. He is the head and the firstborn of God's whole family of sons. Rom. 8:29. He is the head of the body, Col. 1:18, and the body of Christ is composed of nothing but sons in Christ's image. Therefore the significance of the statement "but we see Jesus" is simply this: Though at present we do not see all things in the universe placed under the dominion of redeemed man, yet that head Man, Jesus Christ, the firstborn Son of God, has already been crowned with such glory and honor and has already become higher than the heavens. All things are already under His feet and under His command. Even now He is only waiting and expecting until the entire sonship company is complete. Then shall we also with Him be ready to begin our reign, first to reign over all the earth and finally as God wills through the eternities over every planet and star in the universe until all has been redeemed, all reconciled, and all restored. See Col. 1:20.

Marvelous as this wonderful truth is, it grows even greater and more emphatic as we read the translation of this text by the scholarly Weymouth, who freely implies that man in Christ Jesus is lord of the universe. His translation of Hebrews 1:1-4 reads thus: "God, who of old spoke to our forefathers in many fragments and by various methods through the prophets, has at the end of these days spoken to us through a Son, who is the predestined Lord of the universe, and through whom He made the world. He brightly reflects God's glory and is the exact representation of His being, and upholds the universe by His all-powerful word. After securing man's purification from sin, He took His seat at the right hand of the Majesty on high, having become as far superior to the angels as the Name He possesses by inheritance is more excellent than theirs." The statement above is definitely spoken of Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God, but, if you will remember that through Him we also are sons and members of His body, of His flesh, and of His bones, Eph. 5:30, and that those who have suffered with Him will reign with Him, 2 Tim. 2:12, then you will fully understand the next statement which we quote from Hebrews 2:5-9. (Weymouth). "It is not to angels that God has assigned the sovereignty of that coming world of which we speak. But, as we know, a psalmist, Psa. 8:2-8, has exclaimed, How poor a creature is man, and yet Thou dost remember him! And a son of man, and yet Thou hast made him for a little while lower than the angels; with glory and honor Thou hast crowned him and hast set him over the works of Thy hands. Thou hast put everything in subjection under His feet. For this subjecting of the universe to man implies the leaving of nothing not subject to him. But we do not as yet see the universe subject to Him ..."

God has planned to reconcile to Himself all things both in heaven and earth. Even at this very moment the full price of the reconciliation of the universe and everything in it has been paid. Dare any man say that this is not what Paul was teaching when he wrote this all-embracing truth, "And having made peace through the blood of His cross, by Him to reconcile all things to Himself: by Him, I say, whether they be things in earth or things in heaven. And you who were sometimes alienated and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now has He reconciled in the body of His flesh through death to present you unblameable and unreprovable in His sight." Col. 1:20-22. The reconciliation purchased by the precious lifeblood of the Son of God, even Jesus Christ our Lord, will be carried out in every remote corner of the universe until the vision of John will be complete as he said, "And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever."
many evil men with carnal minds among professing Christians who dare to think and say that if God will eventually reconcile all things, let us eat and drink and be merry. Let us live for the world and freely partake of the lusts of the flesh. Does rhyme or reason exist in such a thought as this? Do not such men clearly show that their service to God is a service fraught with impure motive? They do not serve God because of the burning love of their hearts but from some secret dread of punishment, which dread, if removed, would prove them to be open rebels against God and not disciples at all as they feigned to be. The man who is serving or professing to serve God because he is tormented by fear of what may happen to him if he fails to serve is neither a servant nor a disciple but a dispirited vassal, held captive by a tormenting fear. It is not to such as these that we now write, but to those slaves of Christ whose ears have been bored through with the awl of love, Deut. 15:16-17, that they might serve Him forever, whose eyes are single and not double, Matt. 6:22, whose minds are one with the eternal, whose purposes are God's purposes, and whose lives are hid with Christ in God.

Since then it is through the saints and members of the mystical body of Christ that God has purposed to restore all things, what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness? Oh, that God would open the eyes and the minds of those who read these eternal truths to see that the redemption which Christ Jesus purchased with His lifeblood will be carried into the uttermost parts of the earth and the vastness of the universe by those sons who have been redeemed by His blood. "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who has crowned us with every spiritual blessing in the heavenly realms in Christ; even as, in His love, He chose us as His own in Christ before the creation of the world, that we might be holy and without blemish in His presence. For He predestined us to be adopted by Himself as sons through Jesus Christ - such being His gracious will and pleasure - to the praise of the splendor of His grace with which He has enriched us in the beloved One. It is in Him, and through the shedding of His blood, that we have our deliverance - the forgiveness of our offences - so abundant was God's grace, the grace which He, the possessor of all wisdom and understanding, lavished upon us, when He made known to us the secret of His will. And this is in harmony with God's merciful purpose for the government of the world when the times are ripe for it - the purpose which He has cherished in His own mind of restoring the whole creation to find its one Head in Christ; yes, things in heaven and things on earth, to find their one Head in Him." Eph. 1:9-12. (Weymouth).

We have been chosen now and we are being prepared for the extolling of His glory. God has sealed us to Himself by the Holy Spirit, which is but a pledge and foretaste of our full inheritance as sons of God. We are being prepared of Him and by Him as the body of Christ, the sonship company of which Jesus is the Head and elder Brother, that we might extol His glory throughout the universe and restore all things in heaven and earth and in the whole creation. V : have obtained this inheritance in Him and through His grace. Please read Eph. 1:9-12.

Since, then, such an inheritance and spiritual birthright is ours, what manner of persons ought we to be? And how shall we escape if we neglect a salvation and a redemption so great as that now offered to us by the Lord? It is in Him and in Him alone that this great salvation is ours. Apart from Him no salvation can be found for ourselves and neither could it be our lot to carry its message of reconciliation into all the universe. Therefore let us consider with utmost care, praying that God will give us understanding and great light, our place in Him that we might see that He is all things in heaven and earth unto us.

If we should for a moment trust in ourselves or imagine that by some goodness or power or holiness we could inherit even the least of these things, then we would find ourselves in utter loss. I have no way of salvation. Christ Himself is my salvation. Neither is there salvation in any other, for there is none other name under heaven, given among men, whereby we must be saved Acts 4:12. Death worketh in all men, but it is in our association with Jesus Christ that life is found. He alone hath eternal life. Corruption and mortality are mine by birth. He alone hath immortality, dwelling in the light unto which mortal man cannot approach. 1 Tim. 6:16. "There is no peace," saith my God, "to the wicked," yet "He is our peace," having abolished all enmity in Himself. No rest can be found for the wicked or the sinner, but those who come to Him find rest for their souls. Matt. 11:28. How truly the apostle wrote: "But Christ is all and in all!" Col. 3:11.

The heart of any Christian should thrill in anticipation of the great hope that is the heritage of God's beloved sons, the hope of bringing restoration and reconciliation to the entire universe. It will be their joy in the ages to come to stand in His name amid the desolations of the moon or any one of the countless celestial bodies and there with God's commission in their hearts speak the word of restoration, "Let there be light," and there will be light. And the light that shall dispel the darkness will not be the light of the sun, for the Lord God Himself shall be the light thereof. And they shall say, "Let there be life," and life shall spring forth in abundance until the universe is filled with light and life and beauty and holiness and righteousness forever. Say not in your heart, oh believer, that these things are impossible, for the Lord created not these wonderful works for vanity, neither made He them hi vain. He created them to be part of God's great eternal purpose in that day when He fills the universe with Himself.

Some man will ask, "How am I to prepare myself for such a gladsome, glorious hour as that of which we speak?" And well may we ask this question and diligently consider lest, a promise being left us, any of us should come short of it. The more I read God's word and the more I meditate before Him the more I am convinced that our sonship, our wisdom, our gifts, our graces and our knowledge depend one hundred percent upon the relationship we bear to our blessed and wonderful Christ, the first born Son of the almighty God Himself. Time and again we have reiterated that our association with men means nothing. Our membership among sects or groups or denominations is of less value than the chaff which the wind drives away. Titles before our name or letters after our name mean nothing, but our relationship to Jesus Christ means absolutely everything.

I doubt that any passage in the New Testament has been the text for more sermons than Eph. 6:11. "Put on the whole armor of God that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil." But is it not true that most of those sermons left the listeners hanging in mid-air? Though we listened to the sermon a hundred times twice told, did we not stand naked and divested of that spiritual armor which is so essential to our warfare and success as sons of God? Our minds still questioned, "How can I put on the breastplate of righteousness? How can the sword of the Spirit gleam in my hand? How may I always walk in peace, wearing the helmet of salvation on my head?" Surely it is true that we are ever learning, but never able to come to the knowledge of the truth.

It was only recently, as I re-read this passage, Eph. 6:11-18, that God's Spirit pointed up with clearest emphasis that Jesus Christ is Himself the spiritual armor of which Paul spoke, and those who have "put on Christ" have put on the whole armor of God. Those who consume their lives in sects and denominations can never be clad with that bright armor of the Spirit, but men who live and move and have their being in Him are clad already with God's armor. Christ must become everything to everybody. He is all and in all and without Him we have nothing and are nothing.

"Stand, therefore, having your loins girt about with truth." Need I hesitate for even a moment to remind you that Jesus Christ Himself is the girdle of truth? Pilate in his perplexity once asked, "What is truth?" John 18:38. Had he lingered long enough to hear the answer, he would have heard the Saviour say, "I am the truth." Hearken, oh man of God! He is the truth - all the truth of earth and heaven and the universe as well finds its source, its being, and its end in Him. There is no lie in Him. Truth is the light and falsehood the night; falsehood is death, but truth is life. If we leave out the parenthesis, John 1:14 reads thus: "The Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, full of grace and truth." When men walk in Christ, they walk in truth. Though a man be a walking Bible, yet if he abides not in the truth, he may be a walking liar as well. You may listen to a sermon from a Bible text, yet the sermon may fill your mind with error; but if you sit at the feet of Jesus Christ as Mary did, you will not only be hearing truth but communicating with truth Himself because He is the truth.

And what shall we say of the breastplate of righteousness? Is there any righteousness to be attained anywhere other than the righteousness which He is”? Paul by divine wisdom said of Christ, "Of Him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption." 1 Cor. 1:30. This wonderful passage declares that the righteousness, which He is is the righteousness which God offers to us and which alone satisfies Him and justifies man. "For He (God) hath made Him to be sin for us, who knew no sin: that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him." 2 Cor. 5:21. Thus we must conclude that no other righteousness that we could devise would be acceptable to God. Isaiah said, "All our righteousnesses are as filthy rages." Isa. 64:6, but he who puts on the breastplate of righteousness has put on Christ and his life is being motivated by the Son of God. He lives and moves in God, manifesting the righteousness of Christ before men and angels and our heavenly Father as well. He thinks God's thoughts, for he has the mind of Christ. He shows forth purity and holiness, not by human effort or subjection to laws or codes of ethics, but from that everlasting well-spring of righteousness which is Christ within. He is our breastplate against which all the fiery darts of the enemy fall, blunted, broken, and harmless, to the ground.
"He that toucheth you toucheth Me," said God, "for I am thy righteousness."

What we have found to be true concerning the girdle of truth and the breastplate of righteousness we will also find to be true of the preparation of the gospel of peace with which our feet are shod, Eph. 6:15, the shield of faith, verse 16, and the helmet of salvation, verse 17.

Of peace Paul has written, "For He is our peace." At His birth the angels of God in heavenly anthem chanted in chorus, "Peace on earth; goodwill to men." Luke 2:14. Before He ascended to heaven, He left this will: "Peace I leave with you, My peace I give unto you." John 14:27. In Gal. 5:22 Paul has taught us that peace is one of the abounding fruits of the Spirit in our lives. "In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world."

Faith likewise, that shield of defense capable of protecting the head, the feet, and the whole man is Jesus Christ our Lord. He shields the whole man, spirit, soul and body, against every fiery dart of evil from wheresoever, whatsoever or whomsoever it may come. Faith is not only a gift of God's Spirit. 1 Cor. 12:9. Faith or faithfulness is also named among the fruits that blossom and grow upon the tree of the Holy Spirit. Gal.
5:22. When the lame man of forty years was healed at the temple gate, Acts 3:1-11, Peter and John spoke thus to the wondering and excited crowd: "Ye men of Israel, why marvel ye at this? or why look ye so earnestly upon us, as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk? ... His name through faith in His name hath made this man strong, whom ye see and know. Yea, the faith which is by Him hath given him this perfect soundness in the presence of you all." Acts 3:12, 16. The faith, which is by Him! This is the shield!
This is the victory! It has nothing in common with the frothy, worked-up thing that men try to exercise as faith.
We will learn some day that faith is a living thing more real than electricity and far more powerful. It was by the use of this strange power of God that the Creator Himself formed the visible earth out of things invisible. "By faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the Word of God, the Logos, so that things which are seen were made of things which are not seen." Compare Heb. 11:1.

Of the helmet of salvation we shall also say that it, too, is Christ our Lord. "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." Acts 4:12, When the aged Simeon came by the Spirit into the temple at the dedication of the child Jesus, "then took he Him up in his arms, and blessed God, and said, Lord, now lettest Thou Thy servant depart in peace, according to Thy word: for mine eyes have seen Thy salvation, which Thou hast prepared before the face of all people; a light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of Thy people Israel." Luke 2:28-32. Mohammed, Confucius, and Buddha were men capable of establishing systems of religion, but none of them had salvation to offer; and to this very day the teeming multitudes of their followers grovel in the thick darkness of superstition, ignorance and filth. None but Jesus Christ ever offered the gift of eternal life to men, and the greatest proof that His offer was genuine is clearly manifested by the almost incredible transformation that takes place in the life of the vilest sinner who repents of his sin and accepts Christ as his personal Saviour.

There is a fountain filled with blood
Drawn from Immanuel’s veins,
And sinners, plunged beneath that flood,
Lose all their guilty stains.

Not only do they lose their guilty stains, but they go forth into a world of unregenerate men with salvation on their heads, a new kind of people with a new kind of life and a new kind of hope, "which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the veil." Heb. 6:19. "That within the veil is Christ.

Nor does the man redeemed by the blood of Christ walk unarmed through the perilous wilderness of this world.
He who has the helmet of salvation upon his head grips the shining sword of the Spirit in his hand! And the sword of God's Spirit is the word of God. Eph. 6:17. Perhaps you will say that the sword of the Spirit is the Bible, which is the word of God, and I agree that it is. Never can we over-estimate the superlative value of that touched word of written truth, which God has put in our hands. Wonderful, however, as is the written word of it is in reality only a love letter, an epistle of truth, written from Him who dwells in heaven to us who dwell on earth. The written word is a revelation of Him who Himself is the living of Word, and of that living Word, which is Jesus Christ, the written word has clearly said, "In the beginning was the Word, (the Logos), and the Water was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by Him; and without Him was not anything made that was made... And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, and we beheld His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father full of grace and truth" John 1:1-3, 14.

My heart is often sad when I have to end a writing, because I know that the world itself could not contain the things that should be written of Him who fills the vast expanses of the universe with Himself, for whom and by whom all things are made, of Him who is the brightness of God's glory and the express image of His person.
The time has come when the children of God must concentrate on Christ. Oh, that saints might understand that, as certainly as they were once in Adam, so now the power and wisdom of God has placed them in His Son, Jesus Christ! God has made our identification with Him complete and it is our faith, which makes it a reality in us. It is in this identification with Christ that we now stand. God no longer beholds or accepts the filthy rags of our own righteousness; He sees only the righteousness of Christ. By His divine power He has placed us in His Son. His holiness is our holiness; His peace is our peace; His victory is our victory.

Evil thoughts may not in themselves be sin, but lust, which begins as a seed thought in the mind, when it has conceived, bringeth forth sin, and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death. Therefore he that soweth to the flesh in his thoughts shall of the flesh reap corruption, but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting. Therefore Paul wrote, "Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report", if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." Phil. 4:8. And in thinking on these virtues, we think on Christ, for Christ Himself is truth, justice, purity, virtue. All virtue and loveliness wheresoever they are found flow from Him. This is how to fellowship with Him. This is how God's sons must meditate and think.

Would God that men could see that a lifetime lived in association with paltry, anemic little groups who lay claim to gifts and ministries, or sects who vainly imagine that to belong to their circle is a sure ticket to sonship and the kingdom, produces only barrenness, nakedness and narrowness in their lives. They will find in the end that their association with these little groups has yielded nothing but emptiness, "for they are proud, knowing nothing, but doting about questions and strifes of words, whereof cometh envy, strife, railings, evil surmisings, perverse disputings of men of corrupt minds, and destitute of the truth, supposing that gain is godliness: from such withdraw thyself." 1 Tim. 6:4,5. The Son of God in the loneliness of His earthly ministry invited all men to partake of His goodness, saying, "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest for your souls. For My yoke is easy, and My burden is light." Matt. 11:28-30. But now He speaks from heaven with a voice as the sound of many waters, saying, "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man will hear My voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and sup with him, and he with Me." Rev. 3:20. Is not this the communion our hearts have craved all these years? Is not this the association of which we speak and the fellowship which we so desire? This is, indeed, the secret place of the Most High where men abide under the shadow of the Almighty. Here He becomes all and in all, and in Him and Him alone lies the fullness and consummation of every hope and every promise of which in these pages we have spoken.
In searching out the ways of God, what greater lesson can be learned than that set forth in Paul's word of inspiration? "The creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him who hath subjected the same in hope." Rom. 8:20. What a breathtaking, heart stopping statement that is! How wonderfully it explains God's purpose in the fall of man with all its attendant and devastating results of death, pain, war, disease, sorrow, separation and a million other calamities that can be summed up in that one awesome word — suffering. Of this word the Bible has very much to say and teach, the benefits of which can be summed up for our Christian understanding in these inspired words of Peter: "He that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin; that he should no longer live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God." 1 Pet. 4:1-2. To this Paul adds: "If we suffer, we shall also reign with Him." 2 Tim. 2:12. Therefore let us not despise the chastening of the Lord nor faint when we are rebuked of Him, for whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth and scourgeth every son whom He receiveth. Heb. 12:5-6.

The purposes of God are written in letters of gold in all His splendid creation.

Nothing useless is or low;
Each thing in its place is best,
And what seems but idle show
Strengthens and supports the rest.

There is purpose in God's creation, design in the making of man, object in his fall, a method in man's redemption, intention in the desolation of the universe and a marvelous plan in its restoration. The whole creation is alive with vivid purpose and, when at last these feeble eyes of ours are opened, these dull ears unstopped and these dim wits enlightened, our beings will throb and thrill as we gasp in wonder at the unfolding of such infinite purpose. Such knowledge is too wonderful for me! It is high; I cannot attain unto it, but it is true.

Poor, benighted, little man writhes and squirms under his load of affliction, often in his dwarfed understanding charging God foolishly, self-righteously grumbling at his Creator as he unashamedly complains that if God is a God of love, why does He allow war, and pain, and suffering, and crime and death? Why does He not destroy Satan? These and many other implications he indulges in all because of his ignorance of God's merciful purpose. Many pastors, God's word declares, have destroyed God's vineyard. Jer. 12:10. And there certainly are many of them who, being themselves ignorant of God's eternal purposes, hold the people in the same ignorance. As the scripture so aptly says, "Like people, like priest." Hos. 4:8-9. For this very reason the great Jeremiah spoke, saying, "I have not sent these prophets, yet they ran: I have not spoken to them yet they prophesied. But if they had stood in My counsel, and had caused My people to hear My words, then they should have turned them from their evil way, and from the evil of their doings." Jer. 23:21-22. When men, ignorant of God's merciful purpose for the restoration of the universe, teach the people, then the bund lead the blind and both fall into the ditch. Platforms and pulpits are filled today with men and women teaching things they ought not for filthy lucre's sake.

I exult in the words of the apostle Paul to the Philippians as he names the encumbering traditions that bound him in the chains of ignorance lest he see the truth as it is in Christ Jesus - his circumcision, in which he trusted; his tribal ancestry; his meticulous observation of laws and ordinances; his tremendous religious zeal to the extent of persecuting the true saints of God. Then, having stated his bondage to the traditions of religion, he theoretically loaded them all on the dung wagon and trundled them off to the nuisance ground. Phil. 3:4-8. "What things were gain to me," he said, "those I counted loss for Christ. Yea, doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ." A marvelous revelation of truth stands ready to ravish the soul of him who will obey God and come out of the Babylon system, bidding it farewell forever, that God may be His Father and he His son. There at His table he will feast upon the fatness of heaven as he grows up into the maturity of Christ.

Often times my spirit has been carried away to the realm of enchantment as I have basked in the beautiful inspiration of certain of the poets. Even Paul seemed to credit them with inspiration when quoting their words to certain Greeks. Acts 17:28. See now how beautifully the purpose of God shines forth in these inspiring lines.
O, my Father, Thou who dwellest
In a high and holy place,
When shall I regain Thy presence
And again behold Thy face?
In Thy holy habitation
Did my spirit once reside?
In my first primeval childhood
Was I nurtured by Thy side?

For a wise and glorious purpose
Thou hast placed us here on earth,
And withheld the recollection
Of our former place and birth.
But at times that inward something Whispers, "You're a stranger here,"
And I feel that I have wandered
From a more exalted sphere.

O, my Father, Thou who dwellest
In a high and holy place,
Yet shall I regain Thy presence
And again behold Thy face.
Day by day Thy Spirit leadeth Ever onward unto Thee,
Till at last I find perfection
In Thy pure reality.

Another poet, giving in the first person God's kind reason for calling a young girl to Himself through death, shows God's purpose in these plaintive words:

I cannot promise that she'll stay,
Since all from earth return,
But there are lessons taught down there
That I want this child to learn.

Ah, how fascinating it is to know that every day of our life here below is a learning experience, polishing us uncut jewels to the glistering finish He has planned as we are being prepared for a temple not made with hands. Here the haughty lose their arrogance, the scornful their disdain. The lordly lose their snobbishness, the conceited their condescension. The tyrants lose their villainy and the wicked are freed from sin. O that God's people were delivered from the bondage of their traditions that they might bask in the wisdom of God's merciful purpose!

In the light and revelation of all His glorious purpose, how can we help but exult in this triumphant strain? "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who has crowned us with every spiritual blessing in the heavenly realms in Christ; even as, in His love, He chose us as His own in Christ before the creation of the world, that we might be holy and without blemish in His presence. For He predestinated us to be adopted by Himself as sons through Jesus Christ - such being His gracious will and pleasure - to the praise of the splendor of His grace with which He has enriched us in the beloved One.

"It is in Him, and through the shedding of His blood, that we have our deliverance - the forgiveness of our offences - so abundant was God's grace, the grace which He, the possessor of all wisdom and understanding, lavished upon us, when He made known to us the secret of His will. And this is in harmony with God's merciful purpose for the government of the world when the times are ripe for it - the purpose which He has cherished in His own mind of restoring the whole creation to find its one Head in Christ; yes, things in heaven and things on earth, to find their one Head in Him.
"In Him, too, we have been made heirs, having been chosen beforehand in accordance with the intention of Him whose might carries out in everything the design of His own will, so that we should be devoted to the extolling of His glorious attributes - we who were the first to fix our hopes on Christ. And in Him you also, after listening to the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation - having believed in Him - were sealed with the promised Holy Spirit; that Spirit being a pledge and foretaste of our inheritance, in anticipation of its full redemption - the inheritance which He has purchased to be specially His for the extolling of His glory." Eph. 1:2-14. (Weymouth).

Thus and thus shall it be according to His glorious purpose.
The scriptures contain much teaching concerning the glory of the Lord and the wonder working power contained in the glory of its transforming light to transfigure the fledgling saint from glory to glory as he earnestly beholds it. "For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." 2 Cor. 4:6.

One day in spring I watched my wife planting gladiola bulbs in the dark, cold earth just outside my study window. They were dirty little bulbs, ugly, unattractive and apparently as lifeless as Pharaoh's tomb, but the glory of the sun shone down upon them and the rain fell from heaven to water the earth, making it to bring forth and bud, giving seed to the sower and bread to the eater. As the sun warmed the earth with its glory and the dew of heaven fell upon those ugly, lifeless bulbs, tiny blades began to appear above the ground. The sun smiled down from heaven upon them and, as the growing plants looked up into his shining face, change after wonderful change took place. Magnificent spikes began to appear, more delicate than any power on earth could grace them, and in an array of glory and color that beggars the power of description. Big bumblebees came to caress them and gather their honey. Humming-birds on their invisible wings hung suspended in mid-air to praise the glory and sip the sweetness of their nectar. Humans, too, paused to admire them and touch the fragile glory of their flowers, and no one troubled to remember those ugly bulbs of yesterday; nor did any consider that all that magnificent color, sweetness and beauty had been wrapped up in grubby little tubes that months before had been planted as roots in a dry ground. But God knew its beauty, for He had placed it there, and well did His mind understand the transformations that would take place as the miracle working glory of the sun looked down upon them.

A traveler on the dusty road
Strewed acrons on the lee;
And one took root and sprouted up
And grew into a tree.
Love sought its shade at eventide
To breathe its early vows;
And age was pleased at height of noon
To rest beneath its boughs.
The dormouse loved its dangling twigs;
The birds sweet music bore.
It grew a glory in itself,
A blessing evermore.

All nature everywhere radiantly manifests the ever, progressing work of God. "The heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth His handiwork. Day unto day uttereth speech and night unto night showeth knowledge. There is no speech nor language, where their voice is not heard." Psa. 19:1-3. For many years I have been thoroughly convinced that everything in nature is a magnificent portrayal of gospel truth. Is it then any wonder that Jesus, teaching men to trust in God, mused as He admired the flowers that grew about Him, "Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin: And yet I say unto you, that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these." Matt. 6:28-29. And again: "Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing? and one of them shall not fall on the ground without your Father." Matt. 10:29. And again, making known to Nicodemus the hidden mystery of the new birth, which can only be accomplished by the transforming power of the Holy Spirit, He likened its mystery to the strange and awesome motion of the wind, saying, "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou nearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, or whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit." John 3:8.

The more the glory of God shines into the human heart the more His Spirit reveals that His very nature is manifest in all His wonderful works, whether they be works that we call natural or works that we know to be spiritual. "The invisible things of Him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even His eternal power and Godhead." Rom. 1:20.

The truth that I will try to unfold in this message, though exceedingly glorious, could never in a million years be grasped by the natural mind and, because it concerns God's glory, is of necessity very sobering. I know that people can become happy and blessed as the Spirit falls upon them, but no human hilarity is ever manifest when saints behold the glory of the Lord. If it is true that no man can see God and live, then it must be that seeing God is a very sobering experience. It must have been a glorious thing in the life of Jacob when in the dead of night a ladder appeared before him, reaching from earth to heaven with the angels of God ascending and descending upon it, Gen. 28:11-22, but it provoked no light-hearted hand clapping, shouting or frivolity in the careworn patriarch. Rather with trembling and reverential fear he murmured, "How dreadful is this place! God is here and I knew it not." Could anyone imagine Moses jumping and jitter-bugging before the burning bush? Do we not rather see him standing in dreadful awe as the glory light of God's presence began to transform him into the image of Christ and to wash him clean of all his earthly desires, filling him with terrible awe, reverence and godly fear as God prepared him for a momentous life that would manifest the glory of God's presence as none before had ever done? Nor was there any light-heartedness on the memorable day when Jesus miraculously filled the boats of His disciples with fishes. Rather we hear the distressed cry of Simon Peter as he pleads, "Depart from me; for I am a sinful man, O Lord." Luke 5:8. In this miraculous act, performed by Christ to pay these men for the use of their boat, His glory was manifested and shone upon them, bringing the knowledge of the glory of God from the face of Jesus Christ. Whenever the glory of God is truly manifested, there is fresh repentance, not of old sins, but of sins we never knew existed. A revelation of Christ's glory is as a light, shining into a dark place, bringing the knowledge of the glory of God from the radiant face of Jesus Christ our Lord.

The last book in the Bible begins with these five simple but wonderful words: The revelation of Jesus Christ. And what effect do we see upon John that blessed saint of God, as the revelation of the glory and fullness of Christ begins to unfold? Do we see him leaping up and down, dancing and swaying and shouting praises? No! That is not what we see, but this John, who had lived near to the heart of Christ while they walked together on earth, this man, who once was awed by the transfiguration and struck dumb by the glory of Christ's resurrection, this man, who had experienced the burning, cleansing flame of Pentecost, now falls as one dead as the transforming vision of the Christ unfolds. If any man had ever been changed from glory to more excellent glory by beholding the face of Christ, it was John.

Oh, if only I could make men see that in beholding His glory the old you shrinks into insignificance and dies away and the new man, the Christ man in the image of God matures and grows in His likeness. As the glory light of His revelation shines into our hearts, things that belong to the old creation pass away like the fading of a leaf and, behold, new things are born. Have you ever wondered why these experiences come to so few people? Well, the burning truth is that as long as Christians maintain any connection with the old church system, which today is Babylon and her harlot daughters, they need never hope for any deep experience with God. These sects and denominations of the Babylon system have taken away the key of knowledge. They enter not in and those who are entering they hinder. Once the key is lost, then the doors remain locked and the Christian is barred from the distant peaks sublime.
For over twenty years I have earnestly sought to show God's people that the modern church system, whether Protestant or Catholic, which daily becomes more closely allied to the world, the flesh and the devil, is MYSTERY BABYLON. She is drunken with the blood of the saints. She saps and sucks their life away. While she grows richer in silver and gold, plush seats and lavish buildings, she robs the saints of their progress with God. She denies and contradicts all true revelation and so shuts out the transforming light of God's glory. Her preachers preach and prophesy, but tell their people nothing they have not heard a thousand times as they rehash the philosophies of bygone years. They have taken away the key of knowledge. They enter not in and those who would enter they hinder. It is the bright shining of the face of Christ that brings the knowledge of the glory of God.

Are we so blind that we cannot see that the whole church system is drifting back into Rome? The mother of harlots is waiting with drooling lips to welcome us back into her fold of darkness and death. Are we so blind that we cannot see that the great radio preachers of our day are extolling the Roman pope and opening wide the gates for a world religion based, not on the unity of the Spirit of Christ, but upon the hard and fast rules of that domineering mother of harlots and abominations of the earth?

What does it mean to you, my brethren, when the Spirit of Christ in His holy word commands you, saying, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her sins?" Does He who says, "Come out," really mean, "Stay in?" Does He mean, "Remain where you are?" Do you think that God does not know what He is talking about? Are you wiser than He is? Do you really want to be partaker of the dreadful plagues that are coming upon Babylon's world and Babylon's church?

What does it mean to you when Paul commands, "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them"? What does it mean to you when Paul says, "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty"? Can you not see from this mighty appeal that the only way to the sonship you cherish is by obedience to the Spirit's call, "Come out from among them"? Does He promise sonship to those who remain in the system? He does not! Is He not promising sonship to those who come out? But you say, "I am staying in to help those who are there." Did God instruct you in His word to do such a foolish thing as that or did He tell you to come out? What do you think would have happened to Noah had he delayed outside the ark, hoping to help the unbelievers, after the Lord had said, "Come thou and all they house into the ark"? What would have happened to Lot had he remained in the city of Sodom after the angel told him to flee? Obedience, my friend, is better than sacrifice and to hearken is better than the fat of rams. The first lesson a child should learn in life is obedience. After that he can learn whatsoever the parent wills. So also it is with God and His children. Learn first to obey Him and do His bidding, for as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God.

If, then, we are going to consider the revelation concerning the glory of God, we shall be obliged to cast off every relationship we have with the harlot church system, for God will not cast His pearls before swine, knowing full well that the pearls will be trampled underfoot and those who cast them there will be rent asunder. Our Lord Jesus Christ always hid His transforming revelations behind the darkling veils of parables that, seeing they might see and not perceive, and hearing they might hear and not understand, because the heart of this people is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing and their eyes they have closed, lest they should see with their eyes and hear with their ears and understand with their hearts and be converted, and Christ should heal them. It is not sufficient to remove ourselves physically from Sodom, but her spirit was not removed. It remained there among the fornicators of the world. She, too, physically from Sodom, but her spirit was not removed. It remained there among the fornicators of the world. She too, looked back and became a monument of witness against all those who cast amorous, longing glances toward the system of bondage. For thus saith the Lord, "He that putteth his hand to the plow and looketh back is not fit for the kingdom of God."

I write these things because I know it is not possible for any Christian to proceed to the realm of the more excellent glory while he remains associated with the harlots of Babylon. "Give not your strength to women," was the exhortation of the wise man of Israel. It should not be difficult in the least to grasp the spiritual application of that statement, because the women here referred to are the ecclesiastical harlots of our generation, the entire Church system, mystery Babylon, the great, the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth.

It is doubtful that in all the Bible any subject is more prominent and yet surrounded with such mystery as the truth concerning the glory of God. It has always been the policy of our Father in heaven to hide His deep and transforming truth just beyond the prying eyes and grasping fingers of nosey, unsanctified children who roughly walk with muddy feet where angels fear to tread. For this reason Jesus hid the full knowledge of His truth behind the darkling veils of parables that "seeing they might see and not perceive, and hearing they might hear and not understand." Thus He hid these things from the wise and prudent of this world and revealed them unto babes. The more we are beset with church tradition the less of God's glory we see. The less the glory of God's revelation shines upon us the less we understand, and the less we understand the more we are inclined to make the word of God of no effect by our tradition. However veiled in mystery the glory of God may be, I am convinced that God's glory is always involved with spiritual revelation, spiritual light and spiritual understanding. Whenever the light of the glory of God shines into the human soul, there is revelation and with the glory light of that revelation comes transformation of spirit, soul and body, when "we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord." 2 Cor. 3:18.

The first appearance of the term the glory of the Lord, is found in Exod. 16:7. Strangely enough it was at the time when the children of Israel were murmuring against Moses and Aaron for bringing them forth from Egypt into the wilderness. In answer to their murmuring and fear Moses promised them that the Lord would give them bread in the morning and flesh in the evening and that the glory of the Lord would appear to them as assurance of His presence and that He was leading them. Thus it was that on the morrow, as Aaron spake unto the people, the whole congregation looked toward the wilderness and, behold, the glory of the Lord appeared in a cloud. Exod. 16:10. This cloud of glory was not a thunderhead or a rain cloud, but the glory of God's presence. It appeared, not as they looked toward Egypt, but as they looked toward the wilderness. This cloud of glory, the manifestation of God's presence, was the glory that was to cover them by day as a cloud and as a pillar of fire by night. This was the glory that was to lead them all through the forty trial filled years of their wilderness journey. That glory was God's presence given to lead them by day and guide them by night. In the daytime it hovered over the congregation as a blessed shadow, protecting them from the suffocating heat of a wilderness. This cloud of God's presence indicated their every move and went before them on every journey. "In the daytime also He led them with a cloud, and all the night with a light of fire." Psa. 78:14. God Himself dwelt in that cloud by day and in the fiery pillar by night. That strange pillar of cloud and fire was the visible manifestation of His glory and presence. While Israel walked in the light of His fiery presence, no malevolence could harm them, no enemy could beset them, no evil could befal them nor plague come near their dwelling. God was with them in all their marches. "Thy raiment waxed not old upon thee, neither did thy foot swell, these forty years." Deut. 8:4. "There was not one feeble person among their tribes." Psa. 105:37. It was only when they grieved the Lord by murmuring or by some stubbornness or self-will that the glory departed from off the tabernacle and judgment fell upon them.

On that momentous occasion when the Lord called Moses into the mount to receive the pattern for the building of the tabernacle, we read these remarkably descriptive words: "And Moses went up into the mount, and a cloud covered the mount. And the glory of the Lord abode upon Mount Sinai, and the cloud covered it six days: and the seventh day He called unto Moses out of the midst of the cloud. And the sight of the glory of the Lord was like devouring fire on the top of the mount in the eyes of the children of Israel. And Moses went into the midst of the cloud, and gat him up into the mount: and Moses was in the mount forty days and forty nights." Exod. 24:15-18. It was there amid the radiant cloud and flaming fire of God's glory that Moses received specific instruction for the building of the wilderness tabernacle, that wonderful, typical habitation of God from which the kingdom of Israel was to be directed and governed by the glory of God's presence.

Many years ago the Lord laid upon me an intense desire to search out the mysteries hidden beneath the glory cloud of the tabernacle in the wilderness. I searched out every material and color in it, together with all its measurements and ministrations. I came to know by heart all important scripture connected with it. I did not then understand the reason for my interest or concern with it, but as the years passed by I discovered that the wilderness tabernacle with its fabulous treasures of silver and gold, its precious stones, its exotic acacia wood, its magnificent coverings of blue and purple, scarlet and fine twined linen, its goat hair and rams' skins dyed red, the ministrations of its priests, its brazen altar and its golden altar, its outer courts, its vail and its holy places, and all this glory covered over and almost hidden by a lowly covering of badger skins was the grandest and noblest and most sublime picture of the mystical body of Christ that the Lord had ever devised. Here over God's tabernacle, the prophetic revelation of the mystical body of Christ, the cloud of God's glory abode in the day and in the night His fiery glory was ever their guiding light. There was never anything like it before that time, but, blessed be God, there will be something like it in the future.
