It should not be necessary to spend time trying to convince people that we are now at the end of the age. The coming of the Lord is very nigh. The kingdoms of this world, torn by strife and confusion, are about to become the kingdoms of our blessed Lord and His matchless Christ and we shall reign unto the ages of the ages. The passing years bring increasing signs of the end of the age. Evil forces have been turned loose at an alarming rate; so much so that we are all becoming like battle-hardened veterans who can fall asleep amid the roar of cannons and the bursting of shells. Turmoil, tribulation, riots, violence, strikes, earthquakes, storms, floods, hurricanes, tornadoes, typhoons and war, together with drunkenness, recklessness and immorality have become a way of life to us to such an extent that, though we hear the most dreadful things, we matter-of-factly turn off the radio and forget all about it.

The kings of the east, Rev. 16:12, long dormant like sleeping giants, are rousing themselves from slumber, for the day is at hand when they will come to the valley of Jehoshaphat to battle and to discover that Christ is Lord of all. The day of judgment and reckoning is here. These things are not going to get better, but much worse until finally all the turmoil will end by the kingdoms of this world becoming the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ.

I am neither a prophet nor the son of a prophet, but the world and the people of God are about to see the long looked for antichrist appear on the scene. He will not come from the Near East nor from some Communist state, but from the very heart and confusion of the church system. We should know by now that TREASURES OF TRUTH the organized church system is the great mystery Babylon. The mother of harlots is Rome; the harlots are her Protestant daughters. The coming king, the Nebuchadnezzar of the whole thing, is the Pope of Rome, either the one now reigning or one of his successors.

The visit of the Pope to the United Nations is the most significant thing we have seen for centuries, for as the Vatican is the head of spiritual Babylon, so also the United Nations is the head of political Babylon. The two are soon to be united under one head. There need be no question about that. Any man who thinks at all knows that the United Nations-Organization is a dead issue. Its knees are weak, its hands are tied, and its sword slumbers in its scabbard. Its pleading, feeble voice is a laughing stock to the whole world. It is as weak as Rome would be without the voice of the Pope. The United Nations is waiting for its king to set it in order, and what more potent king could take the throne of this potential Babylon than the Pope of Rome, who is already head and king and the very voice of God to five hundred million Catholics in spiritual Babylon, and is about to be accepted by another three hundred and fifty million Protestant daughters of Babylon, who even now stand with open-mouthed expectancy, wondering after the beast.

"Little children, it is the last time," wrote the apostle John, "and as ye have heard that antichrist will come, even now there are many antichrists." 1 John 2:18 When John wrote these words, though there were already many people in the church who had the spirit of antichrist, the coming of the real antichrist was still in the future. This scripture, though all truth, has caused many people to look forward to the coming of an antichrist which has in fact been in existence right in our midst for over sixteen hundred years - a system masquerading as the church, having at its head a man who blasphemously claims to be Christ's representative on earth. In the end of the age one of these claimants of apostolic succession will emerge to take control of both spiritual and political Babylon, and, reverting to the devilish paganism of the dark ages, will cause all, both small and great, to worship the beast and receive his mark or the number of his name in their foreheads.

We freely admit that there are many things that are hazy and not clear. The wisdom of the Lord has ordained to keep it that way for the present distress, but we have no need that that day should overtake us as a thief, for we are not the children of darkness, but the children of the day. Let us then be sober and not fail to recognize that every event that happens both now and in the near future will be just one more rung in the ladder and one more step on the road that leads to the conclusion of all things that pertain to this swiftly passing age.

Among the burning exhortations of Peter on the day of Pentecost was this: "Save yourselves from this untoward generation," (that is, refractory, unyielding, and perverse). If ever there was an untoward and perverse generation, it is the one in which we now live. Minorities have become so perverse that they are a tyranny to the majority. Picketing, sit down strikes, and civil disobediences are rampant everywhere, and not only in the world. They are now making their appearance in the very buildings where public worship is conducted. In the city of Saskatoon a sit-down was staged by some individuals of two different denominations, demanding to hold communion together.

HOW WE SHOULD LIVE IN THIS PRESENT HOUR

In 2 John 7-8 we have this exhortation: "Many deceivers are entered into the world, who confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh. This is a deceiver and an antichrist. Look to your selves that we lose not those things which we have wrought, but that we receive a full reward."

The greatest blessing that will ever come to you will come on the day that you wake up from your present frustration and begin for the first time in your life to look to yourselves. God's people today have become like the person in the Songs of Solomon, who said, "They made me the keeper of the vineyards, but my own vineyard have I not kept." S. of S. 1:6. It is time to pray, "Tell me, O Thou whom my soul loveth, where Thou feedest, where Thou makest Thy flocks to rest at noon: for why should I be as one that turneth aside by the flocks of Thy companions?" Vs. 7 Christians have become so busy with the rush and program of the church system, striving to convert the world and perfect others that they have forgotten that their own vineyard has gone to weeds and lies desolate and unkept. They are so intent upon listening to the mouthy puppeteers of the land and so readily swayed by their oratory that they do not know the voice of Christ nor where His true flock feeds. Like the parents of Jesus they have taken their journey and left the Lord behind, but unlike them, they return not to find where they lost Him. It is time to pray, "Tell me, O Thou whom my soul loveth, where Thou feedest."

Our Lord Jesus Christ, being weary with His journey, once sat on a well in Samaria, whence a women came to draw water. The conversation that followed between them is without doubt one of the most remarkable stories ever told. "Our fathers worshipped in this mountain," said the woman, "but ye say that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship." To this Jesus replied, "Woman, the hour cometh when neither in Jerusalem nor in this mountain shall men worship the Father... but the hour cometh and now is when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth, for the Father seeketh such to worship Him." John 4:21-23

"In Jerusalem or in this mountain!" How sadly often the words are repeated in our day! Oh, man of God, are you still so infantile in your understanding that you think you must go to some certain plaeca to worship God?
God no longer dwells in temples made with hands. Such things are no longer even figures of the true, and while you still think they are, you rob yourself of the priceless blessing of knowing that you yourself are the temple of God, the habitation of God through the Spirit. The hour has come when true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth, for the Father seeketh such to worship Him.

The foundation of the true church began to be laid when Jesus Christ arose from the dead. Henceforth the Lord dwelleth not in temples made with hands, for we are the living temple of God, and in Him we live and move and have our being. When once the disciples took Jesus to see the wonderful buildings of the temple, they proudly said, "Master, behold what manner of buildings are here." But Jesus, knowing that the day for temples of brick and stone were past, replied, "Seest thou these great buildings? I tell you that there shall not be one stone left upon another that shall not be thrown down."

People always do the things that they think are the most important whether they are aware of it or not. The thing that is first in their own mind is the thing they do even though they protest otherwise. Whatever they love and cherish the most is the first to be accomplished. A drunkard will fill his stomach with liquor and let his children go hungry because he loves strong drink. The sluggard will sleep even though he knows he is coming to poverty because he loves sleep. The slothful man will not roast that which he took in hunting because he is too lazy. He only enjoys the fun of the chase. Thus it is with the people who profess to love Christ. Their church activities come first. Yes, they come before the Lord because that is what they love; but their personal relationship to Christ means little or nothing at all. It is easier to give ten dollars to the missionaries than to spend time and effort dying to self and coming into the pure relationship of a son to a Father. People are willing to prophesy in the name of the Lord and do many wonderful works, but they think not at all of the terrible day when they will hear the Lord say, "I know you not; depart from Me, ye that work iniquity." Billions are being spent on temples of worship while spiritual life languishes in the dust.

There is an almost unbelievable rash of church building today. Everywhere church leaders are doing like the foolish rich man - tearing down their old barns and building them greater to find room to bestow their goods. The mighty reformer, Martin Luther, said, "The apostles preached on the Day of Pentecost in the market place and in the streets of Jerusalem. Philip preached to the eunuch in the chariot. Paul preached in private homes, by the river, and in prison, just as Jesus had commanded in Matt. 10:7, and it is my opinion that they were as good preachers as those we now have. But it was to be thus. Great buildings with imposing arches are for sermons full of delusions and satanic knowledge, but the word of God is unable to find a single lodging house in all of Bethlehem where it can be born."

We are at the crossroads. We are at the time of decision. The voice of God is calling, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her plagues." The voice of Paul, ringing with the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, calls to us over the centuries, "Come out from among them and be separate, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you; and ye shall be My sons and daughters, saith the Almighty."

During the last few years people in increasing numbers have become awakened to the bondage they were in while they remained in the man-organized system. More and more have broken its shackles to come out and have made themselves free. We may certainly be thankful for this, but let there never come a time of letting down in our experience. It is very easy to begin well, but afterward permit some insignificant thing to come between us and God. Of the Israelites it was written: "They did all eat the same spiritual meat and they did all drink the same spiritual drink: for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them and that Rock was Christ. But with many of them God was not well pleased: for they were overthrown in the wilderness. Now these things were our examples to the intent we should not lust after evil things, as they also lusted. Neither be ye idolaters as were some of them; as it is written, The people sat down to eat and rose up to play. Neither let us commit fornication, as some of them committed, and fell in one day three and twenty thousand." 1 Cor. 10:3-8. Cf. Num. 35:1-9

It is easy, brethren, to let the cares of this world and the deceitfulness of riches and the lust of other things entering in choke the word until it becomes unfruitful. It is easy to become so busy with our affairs that our time for family worship and our family is choked out. Our time for meditation, reading, and devotion becomes taken up with the vanity of providing a good living for the body, and all unawares the glory seeps out of our hearts. While we may not notice it, others do, for our conversation and outlook on life has noticeably changed. "You did run well; who did hinder you?" Paul asked the Galatians. And many, I fear, there will be who began the race well and continued well, but the foolish incessant rush of providing a better and better living for the flesh and for old age has like a wily thief stolen the precious things from our hearts until they no longer have any appeal to us.

WATCH!

Over and over again the scriptures command us to watch. I used to wonder what Paul meant when he used the term "in watchings oft," but, knowing the sly subtlety with which the cares of this world and the lusts of other things enter in to squeeze out the priceless things of the Spirit of God, I know there is no more need to inquire. Constant watchfulness is ever a demanding necesssity, for Satan walketh about considering every man even as he did in the days of Job. Rest assured that he earnestly considers us, and the moment he sees any way to hinder our fervent spirit toward God, he will certainly do it with dispatch.

Tarry ye here and watch with Me is still the command of Jesus, but that command is not as easily obeyed as appears, for the disciples now, as then, are always heavy with sleep concerning the things of God, but wide awake concerning the miserable things of a passing world. "What I say unto you I say unto all, Watch," He said. Mark 13:37. And Paul in his many exhortations urged, "Watch ye, standfast in the faith," and, "Let us watch and be sober." It is easy to watch when the presence of the enemy is felt on every hand, but it is most... difficult to get any man to watch for an enemy he does not believe exists. We become like the men at Pearl Harbor who, though they were on guard against enemies, could not be aroused to the hideous, impending dangers that seemed to them to be non-existent. But they did exist, and in a moment they came with frightful devastation. Let us then who are aware of the day not fail to put on the whole armor of God. Let us watch and be sober.

"I must work the works of Him that sent Me while it is day, for the night cometh when no man can work." These solemn prophetic words were the words of our Lord. By them He designated a time for work, which He called day and spoke of a future time, which He called night, in, which no man could work. Perhaps I cannot convince you of this, for you may believe like thousands of others that all things will continue just as they have in the past, but there is a time coming, if it is not already here, when no man can work. In the present hour there is more effort being put forth to proclaim the gospel, or what men call the gospel, than at any other time in the history of the world, and yet any man with eyes to see and a heart to understand must surely see that spiritual life is waning everywhere and faith in God is decreasing. Evangelism is becoming a financial racket. Religion for religion's sake is becoming popular among the people. The night cometh when no man can work. John 9:4.

Be it far from me to try to hinder the efforts of any man who feels he is doing the will of God, for that is between himself and the Lord, but we are without doubt at the evening of the age and the night of tribulation is even now cloaking the world with its deepening shadows. Do not be amazed, therefore, when you find that it is next to impossible to accomplish great things, or even small things, for the very law of the harvest is, first, the firstfruits; second, the ingathering; and last, the gleaning. After that there is no more harvest until a new age dawns. It is now the time of preparation of the sons of God, the time of judgment, the time for the kingdoms of our Lord and His Christ, for the Lord God of heaven will soon set up a kingdom which will never be destroyed, and the people whom He hath chosen will reign with Him unto the age of the ages.

THE WONDER OF LOVING HIM

In this tremendous hour many anxious voices inquire, "How may I know whether I am on the right track or not? How may I know whether this one or that one is false or true? How can I be sure of this doctrine or that doctrine?" With these and many other such sincere questions the minds of honest souls are often troubled. Ah, my friend, how wonderful it would be if they could only know the wonderful satisfaction of just loving Him! For eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him. He has not prepared such unseen and unheard of glory for men and women who are technically right, for people who are doctrinally right, or for people who spend their lives working their fingers to the bone to accomplish their religious ambitions, but He is preparing such effulgent glories for those blessed ones who love Him.

Knowledge puffeth up, but love buildeth up. "If any man think that he knoweth aught, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know, but, if any man love God, the same is known of Him." Or, as Weymouth translates it, "If any man loves God, that man is known by God." 1 Cor. 8:2-3 Observe this great truth, then, that they who boast of great knowledge and learning become puffed up, a thing which God abhors, but those who love God are built up by His Spirit with more wisdom than all their fellows, for love is the fulfilling of the law.

In the Gospel of Luke the story is told of a woman of Capernaum, who was a sinner, who came as Jesus sat at meat in the house of Simon the Pharisee. She stood at His feet weeping, washing His feet with tears and wiping them with the hair of her head. Then, breaking an alabaster box of ointment, she kissed His feet and anointed them with ointment. "Now, when the Pharisee which had bidden Him saw it, he spake within himself, saying, This man, if He were a prophet, would have known who and what manner of woman this is that toucheth Him: for she is a sinner. And Jesus answering, said unto him, Simon, I have somewhat to say unto thee! And he said, Master, say on. There was a certain creditor, which had two debtors: the one owed five hundred pence and the other fifty. And when they had nothing to pay, he frankly forgave them both. Tell me therefore, which of them will love him most? Simon answered and said, I suppose that he to whom he forgave most. And He said unto him, Thou hast rightly judged. And He turned to the woman, and said unto Simon, Seest thou this woman? I entered into thine house, thou gavest me no water for My feet; but she hath washed My feet with tears, and wiped them with the hairs of her head. Thou gavest Me no kiss: but this woman since the time I came in hath not ceased to kiss My feet. My head with oil thou didst not anoint: but this woman hath anointed My feet with ointment. Wherefore, I say unto thee, Her sins, which are many, are forgiven; for she loved much: but to whom little is forgiven, the same loveth little... And He said to the woman, Thy faith hath saved thee; go in peace." Luke 7:36-50

We can never quite fathom the wonders of a story like that. This unknown woman, this unnamed sinner, knew nothing of the washing of ceremonial pots, the offering of incense, or the law of Moses. She knew nothing of going to Sunday School or listening to learned discourses from eloquent preachers. She knew only that she was a sinner, a little worse, perhaps, than most people around the town. She knew, too, that the life she lived was not the life she wanted, and she was quick to recognize the only Person in the universe who truly loved her and could give her peace. She did not know how to pray nor recite the sinner's prayer, but she by love's compulsion poured forth from her heart the priceless treasures of love, an incense sweeter far than the fragrance of the ointment that filled the house. In that hour she learned that love is stronger than sin. She learned that love poured forth is more pleasing to God than all the theology of the world. And the revelation of that glad hour unearthed this priceless gem: If any man love God, that man is known of Him. As in water face answereth to face, and as deep calleth unto deep, so the love of God responds to the love of man, sending him forth in heavenly peace.

I have no hesitation in saying, and you need have no hesitation in believing, that no evil or error can ever come to those who truly love God, for God will love them and will manifest Himself unto them. He will not suffer them to be moved or deceived because His eye is upon them and with a godly jealousy He guards them. For the Lord has declared, "Because he hath known My name, He shall call upon Me, and I will answer him. I will be with him in trouble. I will deliver him and honor him. With long life will I satisfy him and show him My salvation."

In some parts of the world, even today, professional mourners are paid to attend funerals that by their lip homage and crocodile tears they might add to the solemnity of the occasion. What hypocrisy is such a thing as this! Grief is always simple and from the heart, but the moment anyone tries to magnify its intensity it becomes hypocrisy. I think the religious system today is full of professional lovers whose protestations of love for God are as hypocritical as the mourning of paid mourners, for, as such mourners have no true sense of sorrow, but wish only to be seen of men, so also are such lovers who, though they proudly profess their love for God, think nothing of breaking His law. They know not at all that love is the fulfilling of the law. He who loves God in truth fulfills all that is written in the law because every word of the law is written within the heart of the true lovers of God. When Jesus was asked which was the greatest commandment in the law, He answered with great discretion, "Thou shall love the Lord thy God with all thy soul and with all thy mind and with all thy strength." Even the blindest man can see that he whose heart is joined to God in love can never do aught but that which pleases God. Instinctively he will love his fellow man. He cannot take the name of the Lord in vain, for it is the Lord he loves. Neither is it possible for him to covet that which is his neighbor's, nor to bear false witness, nor to do any other thing that the law forbids - not because the law has said, "Thou shall not do so and so," but because the fervent love of God constrains him and he can do naught but that which overflowing love within commands.

Perhaps you have wondered ten thousand times why there is strife in every church assembly in the land. You have sought and diligently inquired for the cause. You have listened to the preacher exhort the people to walk in harmony. You have heard him exhort the congregation to show love to one another, but the exhortation was in vain and an utter failure, for the bickering and petty differences continued endlessly, never seeming to find a place of healing or peace. Do you know what the trouble is? It is that the people do not love God. They are taken up with much serving and are troubled about many things, but they do not love God. I did not say they were not converted. I said they do not love God. They have not sat at His feet to adore Him. They have not marveled at the glory of His eternal purpose. They have tried to create unity with fellow believers before they had unity with the Father and with His Son, Jesus Christ.

It would be very hard for one to imagine this woman of Capernaum, who washed the feet of Christ with her tears, ever finding time to quarrel with any fellow believers. She was far too devoted and taken up with Christ to worry about the faults of other people or the unkind things they said about her. She loved Him with all her soul and with all her might, and all who thus love God love their neighbor as themselves. It is impossible to do otherwise, for love suffereth long and is kind. Love envieth not, vaunteth not itself and is not puffed up. Love does not behave itself in an unseemly way. Love seeketh not her own, and is not easily provoked. It beareth all things, believeth all things, and endureth all things. Love never faileth, for love is stronger than sin, greater than difficulties, victorious in tribulation. It is patient, kind, and full of long-suffering. It is stronger far than death itself. We will never learn to love God by listening to eloquent sermons, nor will we possess love by merely seeking it in prayer, for God is love and love is God, and he who dwelleth in God dwelleth in love, and God in him. We come to love God when we absorb our life in Him, when we behold the glory of His eternal purpose, when every word of His lips and every meditation of His heart is precious to our souls and spirits.

The church people, like the world, have gone on without God. They have mapped out their insignificant course, made their plans, determined to reach their goals. Like Samson they shake themselves to go out against the enemy, but they wist not that God had departed from them.

Men may prophesy and speak with tongues of men and angels and still be as sounding brass and tinkling cymbal because true devotion to God is lacking. Though they turn on the enthusiasm until they shake the building with their noise, yet the tinny note of the clanging cymbal is ever present with them because the love of God is not in their hearts.

Christians may understand all mysteries, have all knowledge, and have all faith so that they can remove mountains, and still be absolutely nothing. Yea, they may give all their gifts to the poor and in defiance of their enemies give their bodies to the burning only to find that it profiteth them nothing. Giving the body to be burned is no sure proof of love for God. Many a stubborn Communist has died for what he believes, but there was none of the love of God in his atheistic heart. So, too, one can die as a Christian martyr and still be devoid of that true motivating love that has inspired so many in time past. Thus love is greater far than spiritual gifts and love is greater than any achievement, regardless of what sort it is.

Perhaps your first impulse upon reading this message will be to resolve that henceforth you will show more love. Never make that mistake, my friend, for as water cannot be given from an empty vessel, so no man can give what he does not possess. Seek rather to dwell in God, for He that dwelleth in God dwelleth in love, and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God. If we live and move and have our being in Him, then the love of God in which we continually dwell will radiate from us as naturally as light radiates from the sun. We do not have to tell the sun to try to show light. It cannot help but show light because it is full of light and it is light. Neither do we tell God to try to show love, for God is love. Even His severest judgments are in love and mercy. He who dwelleth in God needs never be told to try to show more love, for love is of God, shining as a bright light that cannot be hid, beaming forth its radiant glory from all who dwell in Him.

Surely almost every man and woman in the land would be intensely interested to know the order of events which are soon to come upon the world - the day and hour of the coming of the Lord, the time of the great tribulation, the secrets concerning God’s elect, and the manifestation of antichrist. But should we be able to answer all these mysteries, possessing all knowledge and understanding of them, yet lack that all essential unity with God, it would profit us nothing at all.

The continual prayer of my heart and my incessant longing day and night is to see men and women, long bound by the dark chains of church tradition, begin to awake from their sleep and arise from the dead to walk in newness of life in unity with Christ. Let the curse of God rest upon blinding tradition and human program, and let men instead walk in love and unity with Jesus Christ.

Upon a certain day an earnest scribe came to Jesus with this important question: "Which is the first commandment of all?" Jesus answered him, "The first of all commandments is, Hear, O Israel; the Lord our God is one Lord: and thou shall love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul and with all thy strength. This is the first commandment: and the second is like, namely this: Thou shall love thy neighbor as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these. And the scribe said unto Him, Well, Master, Thou hast said the truth; for there is one God; and there is none other but He: and to love Him with all the heart and with all the understanding, and with all the soul, and with all the strength, and to love his neighbor as himself is more than all whole burnt offerings and sacrifices. And when Jesus saw that he answered discreetly, He said unto him, Thou art not far from the kingdom of God." Mark 12:28-34
It is very doubtful if there is any other command more frequently spoken to God's people throughout all ages and dispensations than the command "come out." From that dark day in the Garden of Eden when man went out from the presence of the Lord, the Spirit of the Lord has been calling man back again to Himself by progressive steps of separation and consecration. I doubt that any man will ever enter into the glories of the coming kingdom without repeatedly hearing in divers places and at divers times the impelling voice of God commanding him to come out. Come out of the world with all its overt and shameful sin! Come out of the denominations with all their divisive tendencies, their creeds that they worship, their doctrines of men, their programs that have taken the place of true worship and of God Himself! Come out of the sects with their shriveling narrowness of understanding and vision, their continual harping on discordant strings, their worship of individuals and leaders who, if removed from the scene, would cause the collapse of the whole set. Come out! Come out! Come out is the continual call of God.

Many, many times in my life I have heard men boast that they had not changed one whit in their beliefs since they were first saved many years before. They believed exactly the same things and lived after the same fashion. To many Christians this boast seems to be a remarkable achievement, but in reality it is an enormous pity and a thing of which for the most part we should be completely ashamed, for such a testimony is contrary to everything that God is and does. All nature and everything in creation lift up their voices to cry aloud against such a testimony. The witness of nature is not a witness to a sort of static stability, which never moves and never grows, but is indeed the exact opposite of this. The Lord Jesus described the growth of the kingdom of heaven by this expression: "First the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear."

The words quoted above actually portray the plan of God for everything from plants and animals to things, which concern the kingdom of God. We expect the acorn to grow into a mighty oak tree. We expect the kernel of wheat to mature into a harvest. We expect the tiny helpless infant to mature to the stature of a full, grown man. According to astronomy the universe itself is expanding at the rate of fifty thousand miles a second, which certainly could be more accurately described as an explosion rather than an expansion. Even Jesus Christ, the blessed Son of God, did not remain static, but "grew in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man."

Let us not then boast ourselves in the vanity of standing still, for all things that are static and without growth are in the process of death. Perhaps I will be greatly misunderstood in venturing the following statement, but I am positive it cannot be rightly denied. If we are today walking in company with the same crowd we were with years ago, then it is doubtful that we are making any spiritual progress. I do not hesitate to say this because every evidence of the Bible, every evidence of church history, and every evidence of experience proves beyond any possibility of denial that the inevitable trend of all denominations, sects, organizations and groups, denominational or undenominational, named or unnamed, large or small is always backward and downward. Indeed, there may be tremendous numerical growth, enormous increase in wealth and influence, but there is always a corresponding declension in spiritual life and experience until the fires of yesteryear have become but the ashes of today. The alarming truth of this statement is forever emphasized by the ancient exchange between the Pope of Rome and the godly Thomas Aquinas. The Pope, relaxing in the magnificence of his pontifical palace, remarked, "Well Thomas, the church can no longer say, 'Silver and gold have I none'." To this Thomas Aquinas replied, "No! Neither can it say, 'In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk'!," See Acts 3:6 This statement is true, not only of Rome, but it is equally true of every religious revival and every religious sect from the days of the apostles until now. No man can possibly read the Epistles of Paul without concluding that even in the lifetime of the apostles declension after declension had set in until even Paul himself was calling, "Come out from among them and be separate, and touch not the unclean thing." 2 Cor. 6:17

We have positively no thought whatever of proposing that Christians should follow the fruitless habit of wandering from one sect to another in search of spiritual food. This is a useless practice. There is a great difference between coming out of one group only to wander about in search of another and coming out from among them all that we might seek God and walk with Him as Abraham and Noah did. Many, many people have become disgusted with the group they have been with for years and have left them, but they usually make the mistake of immediately starting out in search of another group which they hope will be a little more to their liking. This is a useless procedure, for surely we must know that all these groups, though different in name and in the exaltation of some pet doctrine, are really only going in circles, and should we remain with them for years, we will find eventually that we have not progressed in wisdom, in stature, nor in favor with God or man. The coming out that God demands is a coming out unto Himself. It is not coming out unto groups. It is a coming out unto God. Anything short of that is not coming out at all. It is only a change from one parching desert to another.

With all my heart I believe that the truths, which are to follow in the remainder of this chapter are among the most important things that God has ever given me to say. Let us then settle in our hearts to consider all that follows with an open heart and with a true spirit of prayer. Let us ask the Spirit of God to make our hearts burn with the truth. Oh, that the inspiration of the Almighty might be given us so that we might see the invisible, hear the inaudible, and comprehend the incomprehensible! It is not in vain that God said to Daniel, "The wise shall understand." Nor is there any disability with God that He should fail to open our understanding that we might understand the truth. The things of which we now speak are the more important because we are without doubt living in the final moments of this dispensation. The Spirit of God witnesses that it is so. In the hearts of thousands of elect men and women there is an expectancy that is indescribable. There is a feeling that every voice may be His voice, every footstep may be His footstep. There is a feeling even in the hearts of men and women who have never lived for God that some great event is impending. Many men and women are being warned and prepared by dreams and visions. Revelation and understanding are being given to many in preparation for the things that are shortly to come to pass.

It has never been my policy to try to set dates. I do not think that is a scriptural thing to do. But we should remember this: Though Jesus said, "No man knoweth the day nor the hour when the Son of Man cometh," Paul said by the Holy Spirit, "Ye have no need that that day should overtake you as a thief." 1 Thes. 5:4-5 When all creation is groaning out the unutterable longing, "Even so come, Lord Jesus" we may rest assured that the coming of the Lord draweth nigh. There is no need that we should be caught unawares or that that day should overtake us as a thief, for we are not the children of darkness, but the children of the day and of the light. Let us remember that in all ages and dispensations of the past God forewarned His elect people concerning the great events that were to come. Did not God warn Noah of the coming of the flood many years before it came? Did He not tell him to build an ark and to save his house? And did Jesus not say, "As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the day when the Son of Man cometh?" Is there any reason to believe that Moses was not forewarned of a ministry to come when one day it came into his heart to deliver his people? So also it was in the day when Jesus was born. There were those faithful ones who were prepared for His coming and who were watching and waiting for the long-expected moment to arrive. Simeon was in the temple serving God, having the witness in his heart that he would not see death until he had seen the Lord's Christ. While the religious world of scribe and Pharisee continued its dreary round of ritual and ceremony, there were those whose hearts were quickened by the secret voice that whispered, "Jesus is coming soon." Their hearts, like our own, grew restless for the hour. Faith within waxed and waned like the moon, but hope was constant as the stars, assuring their hearts that God's promises are immutable and His failures are unknown. So it was that, "while Shepherds watched their flocks by night", He came just as the promise said He would. And once again He is coming, first to appear to all who look for Him and then to appear to all who look for Him not.

"Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins which took their lamps and went forth to meet the bridegroom. And five of them were wise and five were foolish. They that were foolish took their lamps and took no oil with them, but the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps. While the bridegroom tarried they all slumbered and slept. And at midnight there was a cry made, Behold, the bridegroom cometh. Go ye out to meet him. Then all those virgins arose and trimmed their lamps and the foolish said to the wise, Give us of your oil, for our lamps are going out. But the wise answered saying, Not so, lest there be not enough for us and you; but go ye rather to them that sell and buy for yourselves. And while they went to buy, the bridegroom came, and they that were ready went in with Him to the marriage; and the door was shut. Afterward came also the other virgins, saying, Lord, Lord, open to us. But He answered and said, Verily I say unto you, I know you not. Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of Man cometh." Matt. 25:1-13.
For almost two millennia now men have debated the meaning of the parable of the ten virgins. With their carnal wits they have sought the answers to the questions: Who are the virgins? Who are the foolish and who are the wise? How was it possible to buy oil at so late an hour? And many other questions. Each man came to his own conclusions, no doubt, but I greatly fear that in our inquisitive desire to understand the details of the parable we have missed entirely the lesson it teaches. It is far more necessary that we receive the spirit of a truth than that we insist on the exactness of the details. It is far more necessary that we be ready to meet the bridegroom than that we understand who the wise virgins are who rise to meet Him. It is far more necessary to have our vessels filled with oil than to know just who those foolish virgins were who had no oil in their vessels. It is better far to have an ear tuned in to the voice of the Spirit than to come to conclusions as to when this event will be. For centuries men have sought to understand the truth instead of being possessed with the spirit of truth. The world abounds in learned men who know the doctrine of Christ but have not Christ in their hearts. There is no lack of professors who can elaborately explain the fall of man and the redemption of Christ, who have never been delivered from sin nor partaken of the power of redemption. To know the theory of the resurrection is one thing. To know Christ, who is the resurrection, is another. Let us then seek to be partakers of the spirit of truth rather than clutter our minds with theories about the truth.

The time has certainly come for us to do some plain speaking, and the time has also come for us to do some very attentive listening, for we are without doubt at the end of this dispensation. It is time to trim our lamps and go out to meet the bridegroom.

When a truth, which has lain dormant for centuries suddenly springs to life in our heart that is because the Holy Spirit has revealed its truth to us. Paul was carried into the third heaven to receive a whole dispensation of truth that would abide two thousand years, but that was not the end of all revelation. The Holy Spirit has been coming to humble people for ages to take the things of God and show them unto them. The spirit of understanding will increase as we draw near the end of the age, for Joel said, "Your young men shall see visions and your old men shall dream dreams." It is absolutely wrong to seek either visions or dreams, but the Spirit of God will grant them in His own wisdom to humble vessels He has chosen.

Whatever theories men may hold about the parable of the ten virgins is of little concern to me personally, but I do most emphatically declare that it has been made very clear to me that the cry, "Behold the bridegroom cometh" is at this very moment going forth to the virgins, and with that cry the accompanying command, "Go ye out to meet Him." This truth burns like a fire within and especially significant at this moment are the words, "Go ye out to meet Him."

It is not at all my purpose now to try to explain all the details of this parable, but there are a few outstanding things that should be awakened to our hearts that the Spirit of God might reveal them to us.

Firstly, have you noticed that no bride is mentioned here, but only ten virgins? When we think of virgins, we usually think of women, but again we ask, have you noticed that the 144,000 of Rev. 14, who are without doubts sons of God, are described as virgins, and that because "they were not defiled with women"! Rev. 14:4

And furthermore, these are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth. These virgins of Rev. 14:1-5 are sons of God, and so also are the virgins of Matt. 25. God is without doubt preparing His sons now. He is calling them to go out to meet Christ. He is preparing them for that uniting of the Son with the sons, that joining of the Head, which is Jesus Christ, with the members of His body, which are the sons of God and members in particular of Himself. They are becoming bone of His bone, flesh of His flesh, and spirit of His spirit. They are to partake of His resurrection, His life, His mind, His glory, His government, and they will reign with Him in the age, which is even now knocking at our doors. There is no bride as yet, for as Adam was first formed, then Eve, so Christ must come into all His completeness with His many sons and then the bride will appear.

There is without doubt a secret coming, a secret revelation of Christ, not to the world at large, but only to those undefiled virgins who are looking for Him. Jesus Himself taught these truths to His disciples when He said, "He that hath My commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth Me, and he that loveth Me shall be loved of My Father, and I will love him and will manifest Myself to him. Judas saith unto Him, not Iscariot, Lord, how is it that Thou wilt manifest Thyself unto us and not unto the world] Jesus answered and said unto him, If a man love Me he will keep My words; and My Father will love him, and We will come and make Our abode with him."

John 14:21-23 This is the secret coming of Christ to specially chosen and elect people, and we are without doubt at this moment hearing the cry, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet Him."

Let us notice further that, when Jesus went up to the Feast of Tabernacles, He did not go up openly but as it were in secret. The Feast of Tabernacles as recorded in Lev. 23:34-44 took place in the seventh month of the Jewish year after harvest. It is the feast of the coming of the Lord. When Jesus went to the Feast of Tabernacles, He went in secret. John 7-10 All His brethren wanted Him to go up openly and show Himself, for they said, "There is no man that doeth anything in secret, and himself seeketh to be known openly." This is always the reasoning of man, but it is not the reasoning of God, for after His brethren had gone up to the feast, Jesus Himself went up also, not openly, but as it were in secret. While the Jews were asking, "Where is He",
He was walking among them. While they were murmuring against Him, He was standing in their midst listening, but completely unknown. John 7:10-13

Nevertheless, His identity was not kept secret for all the feast, for about the middle of the feast He stood up in the temple and began to teach with such power and authority that all men were forced to take heed of the wisdom, the power, and the authority with which He spake. I have no hesitation in saying that the secret coming is taking place at this moment and the world and the professing church know nothing of it. At the very moment in which they say, "What think ye? Will He come to the feast? When will He come? How will He come? For whom will He come?" even at that moment He has secretly come and has appeared unto all who have been looking for Him and who have heard the cry, "Go ye out to meet Him." In reference to this secret coming to the believers the apostle Paul has declared by the Spirit, "Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many and unto them that look for Him shall He appear the second time, not to deal with sin, but to bring them to full salvation."

We will no doubt be asking ourselves the meaning of this command, Go ye out to meet Him. How are we going out? Why are we going out? Going out for what! Going out to what! With these questions in our minds let us consider some of the alarming conditions of the present day which the Holy Scripture has foretold.

It is not my purpose to ridicule the beliefs of others, but without doubt the people of God have been largely living in a world of delusion and make-believe. Christians have concocted doctrines, which are partly founded on truth and partly founded upon their own fancy and desire. Somehow we have got ourselves to believe that the end of this age will find a vast number of Christians of all denominations and sects going up to heaven in a glorious rapture, and that the world will then be left to antichrist and the sinners will be without hope. I have no hesitation in saying that this is not the picture the Bible leaves us. Indeed, the true picture is very opposite to this.

The word of God speaks of a time at the end of the age when evil men and seducers would wax worse and worse. 2 Tim 3:1-8 These men without doubt appear in the religious world of the professing church. The Bible speaks of a time when men would have a form of godliness without power. This condition exists universally in the professing church. The Lord Jesus described the end of the age in these words: "As the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be," and on one occasion He asked the pertinent question,"When the Son of man cometh, will He find faith on the earth?"

Let us solemnly consider the conditions that will exist at the end of the age both in the professing church and in the world. We will then be in a better position to see why it is so essential that the elect of the Lord must hear the midnight cry, "Go ye out to meet Him."

In the book of Revelation there are three chapters, which deal with one of the most sobering mysteries of all times. Chapters 17, 18, 19 That mystery is the great mystery of Babylon. There is no mystery in the world today, which is so deceptive as this, and no other power holds so many people in captivity and abject spiritual bondage. We have said many times before and now say again with even greater emphasis that the mystery of Babylon is the mystery of confusion. Babylon consists of all the religious systems of the earth and in particular of those systems which are called Christian. In its gigantic circle are included all religious denominations of whatsoever profession or faith they may be. It matters not a straw whether they profess to be cold, hot, or lukewarm. Neither does it matter whether they are Catholic or non-Catholic. Within the all-embracing arms of this harlotish octopus are included all sects and cults, whether named or unnamed, and in its intricate network may be included all those little groups that profess to be completely independent of all else.

When the apostle John saw by vision the truth concerning Babylon, he saw her as a harlot sitting on many waters (many people). He saw her as being drunk with the blood of the saints, and he saw that the nations of the earth were drunk with the wine of the wrath of her fornication. What an awesome picture this really is! Here is this harlot sitting astride the nations of the earth, drunk with the blood of the saints and martyrs of Jesus. She is sucking away the very life blood of millions of Christians, leaving them weak, insipid, and spiritually anemic. Whether we realize it or not, this is what has become of the strength and power of the church. It has been given to the harlot, Babylon, and she has become wealthy, fat, and drunk at the price of our blood.

Not only has this harlot system drunk the blood of the saints, but she in turn has made them drunk with her wine. Whenever one becomes drunk with wine, he is incapacitated. He does not walk right, talk right, nor think right. His understanding is impaired. His manners become corrupted and he is in no wise his true self. But the pitiful thing about drunkenness is that the person feels self-sufficient, wise, and intelligent. He knows not that his voice is thick, his actions ridiculous, his conversation absurd, and his presence undesirable. What a parallel this is to the modern church system. The people have become so intoxicated with the church system, so enamored with her programs, her doctrines, and her creeds that they can think of nothing else. The system has taken the place of God and the harlot sits on Christ's throne. The monster we have built is devouring our flesh and drinking our blood.

Since writing the booklet Mystery Babylon, many startling developments have taken place. The sessions of the Ecumenical Council in Rome have been concluded with significant results. It is my firm conviction that the time has come for the reuniting of Rome, that great Mother of Harlots, with all her harlot Protestant daughters. However much this statement may hurt us, however much it may make us shudder, be assured of this: This sinister union is about to take place and nothing can stop it. There are many, many people who are trying to fight such a union, but there is positively no use whatever in trying to fight against an event that God Himself has said would come to pass.

Day after day I become more and more convinced that the call from heaven, "Come out of her, My people," Rev. 18:4, and the call to the virgins, "Go ye out to meet Him", are really one and the same thing. It is impossible to hinder the fulfillment of the prophecies concerning the dreadful doom and destruction of Babylon. There is only one thing for the saints of God to do, and that is to obey the trumpet call of God that even now is ringing in our souls. Leave the whole wretched harlotish thing, and obey the command of the Lord. "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her sins."

It has been nothing short of amazing to see the trek toward Rome during the last few years. Kings, queens, princesses, bishops and presidents have their private interviews with the Pope of Rome. Only recently the archbishop of Canterbury, the highest authority in the church of England, paid a visit to the Pope of Rome. Upon meeting together his opening salutation was, "Your Holiness, we are making history." How significantly true those words were will surely be seen in the very near future.

Protestant churchmen from all over the world, sitting in as observers on the Ecumenical Council in Rome, have declared that they see no reason whatsoever for division between Catholic and non-Catholic, and of a truth there is no reason, for they both belong to the same enslaving system.

Surely it has not escaped our notice that Protestant churches are frequently in session, seeking to find ways by which they can unite with each other. Much publicity was recently given by press and radio concerning the possibility of union between the English Methodists and the Anglican Church. Similar discussions are under way both in America and other lands. These facts may cause alarm to some, but they are taking place before our eyes. Without doubt we are going to see the plans for union gather momentum in the days immediately ahead. Very soon we shall see before our eyes a system so powerful that nothing will dare to defy it, and "all the world will wonder after the beast."
Now I shall venture a step further and declare that the power of Babylon will not end with the union of Catholic and non-Catholic, but this system is going to stretch out her arms until she encompasses all nations, and all nations shall drink of the wine of her fornication. I say without any hesitation whatever that before long we are going to see Buddhism, Mohammedanism, Confucianism, Shintoism, and many other cults come under the power and authority of Babylon until, swaggering in her power, she sits astride all nations, as a universal religion. I have on my desk a picture cut from the pages of the Edmonton Journal, which shows Rev. G. There Moratuwa, a Buddhist monk from Ceylon, bending to kiss the ring of Pope John during an audience in Vatican City. What is the reason for this obeisance? Certainly there must be a reason for a Buddhist priest to visit the Pope of Rome just as there is a reason for so many Protestant dignitaries to pay their homage by a visit to him. The reason is the hope of eventual union, the eventual union of all religious systems in one great Babylon until all the world will wonder after such a mighty system.

The conclusion of the whole matter is that there is going to be a union of the religious systems of the earth under one great head, and this Babylonish harlot is going to have an accord with the great red dragon of Communism. This picture is aptly brought before our eyes in Rev. 17:3. "So He carried me away into the wilderness; and I saw a woman sit upon a scarlet colored beast full of the names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns." The woman is Babylon and the beast is Communism. Is it any wonder that the scripture says, "They that dwell on earth shall wonder, whose names are not written in the book of life." Rev. 17:8 While we remain finite, we are always of limited understanding, but the word of God clearly portrays that at the end of this age we are to see this confusion of united religions, mystery Babylon, as a drunken harlot sitting like a lewd, unchaste bawd astride a scarlet colored beast having seven heads and ten horns, Rev. 17:3, elsewhere described as a great red dragon having seven heads and ten horns. Rev. 12:3 We would be very amiss in understanding if we overlooked the satanic connections here, or the fact that red is the symbol of Communism and the dragon the emblem of China. These unions are taking place before our eyes, and very soon all the world will wonder after the beast. Rev. 13:3

Now let us remember that all these things must come to pass. There is positively no use whatever in trying to stop them. Jesus our Lord told us what our attitude should be when He said, "When ye see these things begin to come to pass, lift up your heads and rejoice, for your redemption draweth nigh." Luke 21:28 The fact that all these things must come is not a signal for grief and sorrow. It is a signal for rejoicing because we are rapidly approaching the hour when the kingdoms of this world will become the kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ, and we will reign forever and ever.

We so often forget that all things, absolutely all things, are working according to God's plan. God is at the helm. He has declared that these things must be. Without them the wonder of His purpose concerning good and evil could never come to its fullness. I feel only pity for those poor unenlightened preachers who are making frantic efforts to "turn the tide". They recommend spending vast sums of money and using every available means to counteract the trend of the age. Honest as some of these men may be, they cannot turn a tide which God has set in motion, for all these things are ordained of Him and have a definite end in view.

Could we carefully consider the many signs given by the Lord, it would be plain to even the darkest mind that we are now in the very end of this age. Between the dispensations of law and grace there was a little period of about three and one half years in which John the Baptist and Jesus preached. That interim period was neither law nor grace, but belonged to both. So also between the dispensations of grace and the kingdom of God there is a little interim period in which the manifested sons of God will minister in the power of the resurrected Christ. The doors to that period are opening, and indeed it may have already begun.

In Matt. 24 we read that the disciples asked, "What shall be the sign of Thy coming and of the end of the age?" Verse 3 The remainder of the twenty-fourth chapter is a solemn prophetic answer to their question. In verse 4 He told them not to be troubled when they heard of wars and rumors of wars, but in verse 5 He foretold a time of greatly increased war on a universal scale such as had never before been known. Beginning in August 1914, we have the first true picture of nation rising against nation. Before this time armies of professional soldiers fought bloody battles on chosen fields, but now nations were rising against nations and kingdoms against kingdoms. Voluntary service became a thing of the past and conscription the order of the day. Twenty years after the close of the First World War the earth was again plunged into a second World War. No longer was the battle confined to front line trenches where men locked in fearful combat, fought and cursed, bled and prayed and died, but flaming hell was carried on the wings of death to lay in smoking ruins the hopes, the aspirations, and the dreams of centuries. And when at last the truce was signed and the weary warriors wandered home, did peace reign serene as we had hoped? No! Far from it! Trouble increased still more until today, though open war is not declared, we are living in a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation and never again shall be. Dan. 12:1

We have become so accustomed to trouble in the earth that we scarcely notice it any more. As a man with an old infirmity forgets its nuisance and pain, so we dwell in the midst of a world reeling in trouble and know it not. There is very seldom any good news today but rather news of trouble, rebellions, floods, famines, pests, crime, murder, arson, earthquakes, tornadoes, hurricanes, volcanoes, bomb tests, highway accidents, political strife, and the ever present threat of sudden nuclear war which threatens to annihilate the earth and everything in it. Is it any wonder then that Jesus, when recounting the things, which precede the end of the age, declared, "And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved." Matt. 24:22

Following this He told of the rise of false christs and false prophets who would show many signs and wonders and deceive the people. It is regrettable that many Christians have become so sign and wonder minded that they would run almost any distance in hoping of seeing a miracle. Unscrupulous men have capitalized on this foolish tendency, setting themselves up as great ones and deceiving the people for personal gain. Worse still, they have so educated the people to seek after miracles that many have come to believe that anything which savors of the supernatural must of necessity be of the Spirit of God. Thus their minds have become fertile fields for the seeds of deception and, when the great antichrist comes performing signs before them and calling fire down from heaven, they will follow him doubting nothing.

The next sign of the end to which Jesus referred was the sign of His people Israel. (A good example of this symbol may be found in Jer. 24 where Judah is likened to two baskets of figs.) When Jesus cursed the fig tree in the incident related in Matt. 21:19-20 saying, "Let no fruit grow on you henceforth for an age," symbolically He was putting a curse upon Judah, who for all the age of grace would bear no fruit. But later He said, "When you see the fig tree putting forth her leaves, ye know that summer is nigh. So likewise when ye shall see all these things, know that it (the end) is near, even at the doors." It is not necessary to remind anyone that Israel, the fig tree, is putting forth her leaves, for in 1948 she became a nation with a national home, a national flag, and her own government. The wonder involved here - that a nation without a homeland could wander among all the peoples of the earth for two thousand years without losing its identity - is nothing less than a wonder of God, and, further, that that nation should be now established in its ancient territory in spite of fierce opposition from overwhelming forces can be attributed only to the power and wisdom of the Lord.

Jesus told us that, when we should see these things, we were to know that the end of the age was even at the doors. Matt. 24:32-33 But the next verse, verse 34, is most significant of all, for it declares, "Verily I say unto you, this generation shall not pass till all things be fulfilled." The generation referred to here as 'this generation' without doubt refers to that particular generation which actually sees these things begin. Verse 33. This, of course, is our generation. Millions living today, including myself, were alive when Palestine was made the national home of the Jews in 1918 at the close of World War One. It was Jesus Himself who made the declaration, "When ye see these things, know that it is even at the doors."

Among these indisputable signs of the end of the age our Lord added another great sign: "As it was in the days of Noah, so also shall the coming of the Son of Man be." Matt. 24:37 The day of Noah was a devil-may-care day. It was a day of eating, drinking, marrying, and divorcing. These were the things for which people lived, and it is just the same today. The sixth chapter of Genesis gives many details of the days of Noah that are in exact accord with the conditions of our day. Any thinking man reading Gen. 6:5-6, 11-12 can see without explanation that our day is the duplicate of Noah's day. "And God saw that the wickedness of man was great upon the earth and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually. And it repented the Lord that He had made man on the earth, and it grieved Him at His heart... The earth also was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence. And God looked upon the earth, and, behold, it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth."
We do not have space now to continue pointing up the overwhelming evidence that we are at the end of this age. The sands of time for this dispensation are quickly trickling through the hour-glass and the great day is without doubt at hand.

It was against this background that Jesus unfolded the truths of the parable of the ten virgins. Matt. 25. It was against this background that they waited for the bridegroom. It was while they were waiting and slumbering that the midnight cry went forth. Behold, the bridegroom cometh! Go ye forth to meet him.

Many people are expecting to hear a mighty voice from the sky proclaiming, "Behold, the bridegroom cometh", but this is not the way it will be. He is first coming to those who look for Him while the rest of mankind sleeps on through the midnight hour hearing and seeing nothing at all. The midnight cry is going forth right now. The command is sounding in the ears of our spirits, "Go ye out to meet Him."

Why is it that we must go out to meet the Lord? The answer should be very evident to all who love and seek Him. Dare we for a moment imagine that He will come and be partaker with Babylon? Will He join in with a system that has dethroned Him, a system that is filled with confusion, a system that has fashioned itself to suit the carnal mind and taught the commandments of men for the doctrines of the Lord? No! Never in a thousand ages! If we are to be one with Him, we will have to leave every trace of Babylon behind and go out to meet the Lord.

When our blessed Lord came to the earth centuries ago, He was not accorded the luxury of being born in the great temple at Jerusalem nor yet even in some humble synagogue. Full well it was known unto God that His Son would find more welcome among the lowing cattle and bleating sheep than among the scribes and doctors of established religion who had long ago made the word of God of no effect by their traditions, for they, though filled with form and ceremony, were empty of God. So, while priests performed their rituals in the temple and rulers droned out their litanies in the synagogues, angels announced His birth to shepherds and wise men from a far country laid their trophies at His feet.

When the mighty ministry of the Son of God began, was He hailed as some great one by the religious leaders of the day? Far be it from that. He came unto His own, but His own received Him not. They hated, contradicted, disputed, and blasphemed Him. They ever sought occasion against Him and attributed His work to Satan. Was it in the temple where His first miracle was performed? No! It was at a wedding where wine flowed freely and all was gay, but where hearts unbiased by creeds and ceremonies that could never deliver them from sin were open to see and hear the truth. For publicans and harlots will find the door of mercy while organized religion finds Him not at all.

Those who found Him in that day had to go out to find Him. They found Him preaching in the meadows. They sat on the hills to listen to words such as no man had ever spoken. He healed the sick who thronged about Him in the wilderness and He spread a table for the hungry multitude on the green sward. He led His disciples to transfiguration on a mountain and, while Galilee with her watery fingers played sweet music on the keyboard of the shore, He preached from a little boat because the people thronged Him.

Upon the mountain Jesus sat, the hillside, by the beach, Grass-carpeted cathedral where He could speak and teach Those burning, flaming words of truth that priest and demagogue Would never tolerate at all in church or synagogue.

Those who wanted to find Him when first He came to the earth had to go out from their systems of organized religion, for He was not welcome there. Men have not changed a whit in the intervening centuries. Churches are churches in name only. They would not know Him if they saw Him, nor welcome Him if He came to them. All who will find Him must go out unto Him as they did when He came two thousand years ago. Wherefore the Holy Ghost says, "Let us go forth therefore unto Him without the camp bearing His reproach, for here we have no continuing city, but we seek one to come." Heb. 13:13-14
Do you realize that, after Israel came out of Egypt, it was a bigger task to get Egypt out of them than it was to get them out of Egypt? How often they longed for the flesh pots of Egypt! How often they said, "Would God we had died in Egypt!" How often they murmured and said to Moses, "Have you brought us out here in the wilderness to kill us and our cattle and our little ones with thirst?" Yes! It was a big job to get the people out of Egypt, but an even greater task to get Egypt out of them. Since God has revealed to me the secret depths of Babylon with its many abominations and enormities, I have found that it is one thing to get people to see what Babylon is and another thing entirely to get them to leave its bondage and confusion, and still another thing to root Babylon out of their hearts. In spite of all the things I have written people still write me to enquire which denomination I belong to, and, after I have assured them that I have left them all and gone out to meet the Lord and Him alone, they still insist that I must belong to some group or sect somewhere. Then again other well-meaning people will commend the article Mystery Babylon, yet enclose an envelope full of church advertisements that fairly reek of the systems and programs of Babylon and all its multi-headed confusion. There is positively no doubt that Mystery Babylon is a blinding, confusing mystery that has painted over men's eyes so that they cannot see, and stopped their ears so that they cannot hear. It has dulled their minds so that they cannot understand and, though men wallow in its miry depths, they remain oblivious to their state.

We might well ask ourselves the question, "Is the church Babylon?" The answer is an emphatic no! But all who adhere to its organized confusion think that Babylon is the church. This is what makes Babylon the dread mystery that it is, but God will enlighten our eyes if we will but ask Him for understanding. When Israel was carried away into Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar, she was forced to remain in captivity and had adopted the ways of her captors. Still no one could say that an Israelite was a Babylonian. So it is today. The people who have been redeemed by the blood of Christ have become captive to a system that has ruled and regulated their lives, sucked away their blood, and stunted their growth. In this system everybody is concerned about our standing with the church, and few care about our standing with the Lord. It has become extremely difficult to convince anyone that we are a Christian at all if we do not attend the services of some denomination. But let it be known that, just as God called Israel to leave Babylon and return to Zion, so now He is calling His saints to leave this great, mysterious, harlotish system that straddles the earth and go out to meet the Lord. The angelic call, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her plagues," is sounding in many hearts and an ever increasing stream of pilgrims is leaving the disorder and confusion of organized religion and is going out to meet the Lord.

The longer we walk with God, the more we read His word, the more we seek His face and pray, the more firmly convinced we become that the true church is not a visible thing at all. It cannot now nor could it ever be circumscribed. There is no use whatever in trying to count its numbers, for God alone knoweth them that are His. Even among the smallest number of people, regardless of their profession, we will find the Judases, the Aithophels, the Achans, the Simons, the Demases, the Dio-trephes, and a host of other pretenders and fakers, who appear good on the surface, but are not the children of the Lord. The true church, like the kingdom of God, cometh not with observation. Its members cannot be counted. They are a treasure hid in a field and God alone knows who they are. He calleth His sheep by name and leadeth them out. They know His voice and follow Him and a stranger will they not follow. Their names are not found on the record books of earth, for they are the church of the first born, whose names are written in heaven.

The parables of Matthew 13 accurately describe the growth, of the kingdom of heaven from the days of Christ to the end of the age. The kingdom is likened to a sower that sowed good seeds everywhere, yet only a quarter of it matured and of that only one third brought forth a hundred fold. Jesus likened the kingdom of heaven to a field in which grew both wheat and tares side by side until the end of the age, at which time they were separated by God's angels. He likened the kingdom of heaven to a grain of mustard see which though so tiny, grew so large that it became a dwelling place for all manner of fowl both clean and unclean. He likened the kingdom of heaven unto leaven, which is symbolic of malice and wickedness, which a woman put in the meal until the whole thing was leavened. He likened it also to a drag-net which caught from the sea both good fish and bad which were separated at last, some gathered into vessels and some cast away. Then He showed the genuine and true kingdom to be like a hidden treasure and a pearl of great price.

Our relationship to denominations, sects, creeds, people, churches, congregations, and all such things means less than nothing. Our relationship to Christ means everything. Let us rise and go out to meet Him.
Our condition in Babylon is aptly described by the story of the prodigal son who came of age and went out to have a rolicking good time. He devoured his living with harlots. (Mystery Babylon is the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth.) But before long he found out that they had contributed nothing to him, but instead had brought him to desolation until at last he found himself in a swine pen feeding hogs. It was while he was there that he heard the voice of God speaking to him and with determination he declared, "I will arise and go to my Father." That is what we must do. Let us go unto Him without the camp bearing His reproach.

There is a call ringing down the corridor of the years that had its beginning centuries ago. For the Lord had said to Abraham, "Come out from thy kindred and from thy people and from thy father's house unto a land that I will show thee," God through the apostle Paul said, "Come out from among them and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing and I will receive you." The voice from heaven is calling, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her plagues." And now at this midnight hour we hear the voice of His Spirit, crying o'er the tumult and the strife of the age, yea, even above the voices of Babylon's harlot daughters, "Behold, the bridegroom cometh. Go ye out to meet Him." Rise up, my love, my fair one, and come away. S.O.S. 2:10

TILL INDIGNATION BE OVERPAST

The burden of my heart - a burden which, I confess, never departs from me - is that men and women who see the end of the age approaching would abandon themselves completely to God to become one hundred percent disciples of Jesus Christ. Oh, that men would learn the simple lesson expressed in this word of wisdom: "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." Matt. 6:24 Mammon is the god of riches. How hardly shall they who have great riches enter into the kingdom of God! It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God. You will certainly ask, "Why is that?" The answer is simple and there is but one. The riches of this world provide much for the flesh, much for the body, and much for the natural man, but the flesh, which is the body, is an implacable enemy of the spirit, warring against it night and day so that it is never free to seek and embrace God's kingdom. Oh, that God's people would learn that friendship with the world is enmity with God! How true were the words of Paul, "She that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth!" 1 Tim. 5:6 No one is more dead than she who from the abundant riches of this world's goods spends her time satisfying the insatiable flesh.

There is one thing above all else that is lacking among the people of God in our day. It is the spirit of true repentance. Godly sorrow for sin and worldliness is the sorrow that brings the glorious light of abounding salvation into our hearts. Paul made this remarkable statement: "Godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of; but the sorrow of the world worketh death." 2 Cor. 7:10 Experience has taught me that each new ascent into the realm of the Spirit, each new revelation received from God, must be and always is preceded by a true spirit of heartfelt repentance. No sinner can come to God without repentance of his sin and repentance of a sort that never will be repented of. Perhaps you have thought that once a man is converted he will never more have need of repentance, but that is a pitiful error. I have repented far more during my long pilgrimage with my God than I ever did that blessed night when He found me straying and brought me home. That blessed and wonderful night, November 21, 1926, when I knelt to give myself to Christ, I gave myself to Him forever; and, as I remember it today, forever was the deal we made. Mine it was to repent and believe and His it was to save and deliver. Never once in all these years has He failed me, and, though my life has been of little worth, never once have I looked back or desired even for one second to return to the weak and beggarly realm of this present evil world.

There was a day when Jesus called to a dead man, "Lazarus, come forth!" And forth he came from the darkness and night of death, bound hand and foot with grave clothes. I do not know what truth you see in this, but, though perhaps you know it not, it is true that, on that day when Jesus gave His life to you, there were many smelly grave clothes wrapped about you and many bondages that savored of the old death from which He delivered you. As a stranger in a strange land still bears the marks of the country from which he came in speech and dress and tradition, so we, too, at the beginning of our pilgrimage into these celestial realms of God found among our wares many things that savored of the land of sin from which we came. That is why Paul said, "Mortify therefore your members which are upon the earth; fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry: For which things sake the wrath of God cometh on the children of disobedience: In the which ye also walked some time, when ye lived in them. But now ye also put off all these; anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth. Lie not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds; and have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of Him that created him." Col. 3:5-10

In this new realm into which we came when we believed all old things begin to pass away and, behold, all things become new. We have entered a new life, a new country, and a new citizenship. Old things pass away only as we let them pass away, and they become new as we desire the new. In this new realm there is no Greek and there is no Jew. There is no circumcision (made with hands) and no uncircumcision. There is no barbarian, no Scythian, no one in bondage to written laws, no one free to walk after the flesh; but in this new realm Christ Himself is the realm. In this new country Christ Himself is the country. The new kingdom we have entered is the kingdom of Christ. This new law we embrace is the law of Christ. The banner or flag that waves over us is the banner of God's love - not a banner that waves from a flag-pole in our streets, but a banner that burns like the fire of God in the secret place of every heart. The law of God was never done away. The law of God was simply removed from cold, dead, lifeless tables of stone, where it heralded doom to unregenerate helpless men, to the tables of the believer's heart, never more to be a burning, smoking, fiery law before which the unregenerate world would cringe in helpless terror. The law of God, written by God on the tables of the heart, becomes the very innate nature of every believer, for thus saith the Lord: "This shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel: After those days, saith the Lord, I will put My law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be My people." Jer. 31:33

The Ten Commandments, written in Exodus, chapter twenty, can never be done away, because of the ten commandments are the nature of God. "Thou shall love the Lord thy God with all thine heart and with all thy soul and with all thy mind" is a law that can never be abolished because God is love. Neither can it ever be fulfilled by unregenerate men. For this very reason Jesus Christ the Son of God is given to us, as the scripture has said: "Unto us a Son is given." The moment any man or woman believes on Christ and invites Him to come in to his heart, Christ Himself becomes not only our Saviour, but our very nature as well, and henceforth to all who walk in Him it becomes our first nature to love God. No longer does our heart cringe before the command, "Thou shall love", for love has become our nature, flowing as a river from our regenerated heart. No more do we vainly try to show love. We love God and our neighbor as ourselves because it is our nature to love even as it is His nature to love. He who now abides in us has given us His nature, and Christ, who gave His life for us, has now given His life to us. How often I have heard Christians say, "We must try to show love." Rubbish! Rubbish, my dear friend! Trying to show love is but a fraud born of the carnal mind. Do not try to cultivate love. The whole idea is wrong. Ask Jesus Christ to come into your heart. Bid Him take possession of your life. Ask Him to set up His kingdom within you. Then His banner will be unfurled both over you and in you and the love of God will flow forth from that one pure fountain, Jesus Christ, the Son of God, in you. All imitation is useless. All feigned submission to laws written on pieces of paper or on tables of stone is useless and hopeless beyond expression; but, when the nature of God dwells in your heart because Christ, who is the brightness of God's glory and the express image of God's person, dwells in your heart, then God's nature becomes your nature and God's law, which is God's nature, is removed from the flinty tables of dead stone to the living tables of believing hearts to flow as a boundless river of life to a world cursed with sin and dead to God.

It is exasperating to me to hear some teachers talk about the law of God. The carnal mind is forever preaching that every dispensation of the past was a failure. Innocence, they teach, was a failure; conscience was a failure; human government was a failure; law was a failure; and I suppose grace would be considered a failure, too. The truth is that none of these dispensations was a failure. It is carnal man who is the failure. Everything everywhere finds its complete fulfillment in the Christ life. In Him is the grace of God fulfilled. In Him is true innocence with fullness of knowledge. In Him is the dispensation of promise fulfilled. In Him human government finds its fullness, and God will govern the world by that man He has chosen. In Him the law of God, which is the nature of God, finds its complete fulfillment, and grace and truth are by Jesus Christ alone. Yea, in Him is the wisdom of God, the knowledge of God, the righteousness of God, the truth of God, the fullness of God; and God, our blessed Father, has given us His Son that His Son may dwell in our hearts and that we may dwell in Him, and we, being thus in Christ, shall both have and be His nature, His wisdom, His knowledge, His law, His grace, His love, His soberness, His virtue, His longsuffering. Christ is all and all is Christ that Christ may be in all and all may be in Christ. The unity of Christ with His Father is expressed in these words: "Thou in Me and I in Thee." John 17:21 The unity of ourselves with Jesus Christ is expressed in these words: "The glory which Thou gavest Me I have given them; that they may be one, even as We are one: I in them, and Thou in Me, that they might be made perfect in one." John 17:22, 23 "I in them," the Saviour said, and this is the whole need of man. It is the need of both sinner and saint alike.

There will be men and women reading this book who long to find true salvation and peace with God. Perhaps you have joined this group or that, hoping to find that peace of soul that only Christ can give. It is possible that by joining some church organization you did find some temporary relief or mental satisfaction, but religious organizations can never bring peace to your soul. Jesus Christ alone can give you peace. He is the Saviour of the world. Church systems are false christs who deceive many just as Jesus said they would do. Matt. 24:5. They make their members believe that they are safe because they have joined them. They teach their followers to adhere to their petty traditions, a few little do's and don'ts, certain days to keep or clothes to wear, certain foods to eat or not to eat, but the heart, the poor, poor, unregenerate heart remains unchanged and the sinner unconverted. These systems are false christs. They are all false christs without any exception. They are the many false christs of which Jesus spoke when He declared that in the latter days there would be many false christs and many false prophets. The false christs are the religious systems that call themselves churches: and the false prophets of which Jesus spoke are the preachers that preach for the systems. The systems are false christs because they are false saviours, making men believe they are safe when in fact and truth they are lost. The preachers are false prophets because they proclaim the false teaching of the systems they represent.

People sometimes accuse me of an attitude of hate because I never say anything good about the Babylon system, but can you give me any sensible reason why I should try to speak good of that which God's word declares is wholly evil? Truth is the light, but falsehood is the night. I do not hate cobras or rattlesnakes, but I solemnly warn you that their sting is deadly. Therefore toy not with them nor go near them, but keep as far as possible away from them, for to associate with them will bring you death. In one of our readers at school there was a little verse, which said:

Speak the truth and speak it ever Cost you what it will.
He who hides the wrong he did
Does the wrong thing still.

So, if the price of telling the truth is to be wrongly accused of hatred, then it is a price I shall gladly pay that I may take my place with such lovers of men as John the Baptist, who said in love, "Oh, generation of vipers, who has warned you to flee from the wrath to come? Bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance: and think not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father." Matt. 3:7-9 Even their connection with Abraham was no value, for salvation is not of human blood. Listen now to Jesus, that foremost of all lovers of mankind, who, when speaking to the Pharisees, who took such delight in washing cups and pots and eating certain meats, thus deceiving the people with false assurances that they were righteous, said: "Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell? Wherefore, behold, I send unto you prophets, and wise men, and scribes: and some of them ye shall kill and crucify; and some of them ye shall scourge in your synagogues, and persecute them from city to city." Matt. 23:33, 34

Don't waste your ink exhorting me to speak kindly of the denominations and religious systems, for they are, indeed, false christs. The poison of asps is in their tongue and their sting is the sting of death. At their feet lies the full responsibility for the appalling condition of anarchy, rebellion, godlessness, love of pleasure, immodesty and immorality now extant. The salt has lost its savor. The systems have not honored Christ as the only Saviour. They have used Him rather as a drawing card for their earth-born programs as the night clubs of Las Vegas use Elizabeth Taylor or Elvis Presley. Woe to Babylon, for she is fallen! Woe to the mother of harlots Rome for she is a deep ditch and a narrow pit. Prov. 23:27 Woe to the daughters of the mother of harlots all Protestant denominations. Woe to all those who adhere to her ways, and woe to me if I tell not the truth. She has made all nations to drink the wine of the wrath of her fornication. Rev. 14:8 Deliver yourself from her power, for strong is the Lord whose judgment even now is falling upon her. "Come hither," saith God. "I will shew unto thee the judgment of the great whore that sitteth upon many waters: with whom the kings of the earth have committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication. So He carried me away in the Spirit into the wilderness: and I saw a woman sit upon a scarlet colored beast full of names of blasphemy, (these are denominational names), having seven heads and ten horns. And the woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet color, and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls, and having a golden cup in her hand full of abominations and filthiness of her fornication: And upon her head was a name written, Mystery, Babylon the great, the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth. And I saw the woman drunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus; and when I saw her, I wondered with great admiration." Rev. 17:1-6

It will not be our purpose here to speak further of this great, many-headed, many-named system that dares to call herself the church, but I will vouchsafe one more statement: This great multi-headed, multi-named fornicator is guilty of and responsible for all the dreadful social ills and upheavals in our nation at this present frightful hour of tribulation. I have no good word to say for the riotous, the rebellious, the hippies and yuppies and weirdies that wander our highways, loll about on filthy pads, plagued with loathsome diseases and enslaved with every mind - and soul - destroying drug, demanding everything and giving nothing but trouble and destruction. Yet for all their loathsome degradation I believe I speak the truth when I say that the reprobate alienation and estrangement of their minds, and consequently of their lives, can be laid en masse at the feet of this many-named, many-colored, multi-headed harlot system, who calls herself the church, not because she has failed to make disciples, but because she has sought to draw men to herself rather than to Christ. She has literally compassed land and sea to make proselytes in every realm, and, having done so, she has made them more the children of the devil than they were in the first place. Matt. 23:15 She has not made them to be lovers of Christ. She has not made them to be lovers of God. She has hidden from their eyes and blinded their minds to God's eternal purpose for the government of the universe through the sons He has chosen and has placed before their eyes instead an eternal heaven for Christians like themselves and a blazing hell for those not like them. And God has refused to bless their human tradition and imagination. They have failed to tell mankind that God has a purpose for every man that comes into the world, a set day for his birth, a set day for his death, and a set time for his enlightenment; and in the place of this eternal wisdom they have preached a hit and miss jumble of human notions, which they dare to call the gospel, that envisages a paltry handful of saints fast closed up within jasper walls while the billions of earth who never heard that God had a Son are left to wail their tortured lament to the diabolical tunes of hell with its raging fires forevermore. Because the system has not taught the truth, mankind has turned to fables. Because it has not shown the way of life, men have embraced the ways of death. Because the truth has not been loved, error has been exalted. Because now they do not want to retain God in their knowledge, He has sent them a reprobate mind to do all manner of things, which are not convenient.

Make no mistake about it! I think the hippies and everything that pertains to their sordid ilk are an abomination in the earth, but I am certain that their odious lives and shocking revolt lie at the feet of that hypocritical, drunken harlot system which dares to call herself the church. While she calls herself by the name of Christ to take away her reproach, she eats her own bread, which is not the bread of life; she drinks her own water, which is not the water of life; she wears her own apparel, which is not the righteousness of Christ, and she preaches her own gospel, which is not the truth of Christ. Babylon is fallen, is fallen, and is become the hold of every foul spirit and every unclean and hateful bird. Is it any wonder, then, that the wrath of God is soon to be poured out without mixture upon her? Is it any wonder that this hypocritical thing has produced hypocrites? Is it a marvel that this rebel against Christ has produced rebels? Is it strange that this reprobate has produced reprobates in the earth?

Behold, the day is at hand when her children will rise up and burn her with fire, for "thus saith the Lord: Behold, a people cometh from the north country, and a great nation shall be raised from the sides of the earth (worldwide anarchy). They shall lay hold on bow and spear; for they are cruel, and have no mercy, their voice roareth like the sea; and they ride upon horses, set in array as men of war against thee, O daughter of Zion. We have heard the fame thereof: our hands wax feeble: anguish hath taken hold of us, and pain, as of a woman in travail. Go not forth into the field, nor walk by the way: for the sword of the enemy and fear is on every side. ...
They are all grievous revolters, walking with slanders: They are brass and iron; they are all corrupters." Jer. 6:22-25, 28

Is not this prophecy an exact picture of what has become of the world in our day? Revolt, rebellion, fear, danger, weapons, death, high-jacking, kidnapping, assassination, cruelty and an absence of mercy? And is it not true that these people have arisen, not from one country but, as the prophet has so aptly described, from the sides, all sides, of the earth! Every nation has them and, make no mistake about it, they are inspired by the king of the north, which is Russia, even as we are shown in verse 22.

I say without fear at all that both Russian Communism and hippyism with all other anarchy and rebellion can be laid in the lap of that apostate system which dares to call itself the church. Say not in your heart that we need more evangelism and greater efforts to win these people back to the church. That is not the seat of the trouble. The truth is simply that this haughty harlot, drunken with wine and swaggering with pride and the riches and the filthiness of her fornication, needs to repent and turn to Christ, for judgment is even now falling. She will be burned with fire, for strong is the Lord who judgeth her. Rev. 18:8 Therefore my exhortation to all men is that they should flee from all connection with the church system lest they be partaker of her sins and her judgment, which even now is falling upon her. Please read Rev. 17:1-7; Rev. 18:1-24 She is false. She is a blind leader of blind men. She is drunken with her own wine and jiot deliver men from their sins. She is full of false prophets and false teachers. She has slain all that is true and has left nothing but her useless tradition to destroy the souls of men. God does not command us to reform her. He commands us to "come out of her."

Behold Elijah, the prophet of God, who fulfilled the wrath of God in Israel, slaying with his sword four hundred prophets of Baal and four hundred fifty prophets of the groves! And has not God declared that in the latter days He would send Elijah once again? Mal. 4:5, And shall he not come in the same spirit to destroy all that is false - Babylon with her false prophets, her false teachers and her high places on every street corner? Turn to Christ and Christ alone, for the true church of the living God consists not of denominations nor of those who dwell therein, but of those whom Christ has cleansed from sin by the washing of regeneration and the renewing of His Holy Spirit. In one Spirit they have been baptized into one spiritual body and thus by the Holy Spirit have they been joined to Him. This is the true church and the true mystery of God - an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. To this the Spirit says, "Come."

Many who read these lines have never yet come to a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ. I would therefore take time to show you the beginning of the way of God. There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death. Jesus Christ is the true and only way. Long ago, when our Lord was upon the earth, He said on one occasion, "Whither I go ye know, and the way ye know." But Thomas said unto Him, "Lord, we know not whither Thou goest; and how can we know the way?" Jesus saith unto him, "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father but by Me." John 14:4, 5

The way of salvation, the way of justification is not difficult; neither is it cluttered with many doctrines or idle traditions. Jesus Christ is Himself the way. Furthermore, Jesus Christ is the truth along the way, and the life at the end of the way. Neither is there salvation in any other, for there is none other name under heaven, given among men, whereby we must be saved. Act. 4:12

Now the apostle Paul gave this faithful word of truth to Timothy when he wrote, saying, "This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners... 1 Tim. 1:15 This is the truth. It is truth worthy of being accepted by all men everywhere, regardless of race or creed or background. Christ, the righteous Son of God, came into the world to save sinners. For a man to be saved there are two things he needs to know and one thing he needs to do. He needs to know first that he is a sinner, for all have sinned and come short of the glory of God. Rom. 3:23 Secondly, he needs to know that Jesus Christ is the Saviour. Acts 4:12 Thirdly, he needs to believe that the moment he places his faith in Jesus Christ he is justified from sin and saved out of its power. Rom. 3:24-26

To all those burdened hearts who long for deliverance from sin and for the knowledge that God has forgiven them and accepted them as His own blood-bought child let it be thoroughly known that "there is none other name under heaven, given among men, whereby we must be saved." It may be you have joined "a church", but it gave you neither true peace nor deliverance from your sin. You probably adopted the rules and regulations of the church system you joined. You were instructed to keep certain days, wear certain clothes, abstain from certain foods or drink, but none of these human restrictions ever brought the peace or transformation you needed or the assurance your heart so earnestly craved. Turn your eyes away from all these human traditions, for they are of no value to you whatsoever. Men have always been washing cups and pots and hands and hoping by such restrictions they might be found acceptable in the sight of God. Mark 7:4-5. While these things may be good health rules for the body, they have nothing whatever to do with the salvation of the soul. Paul taught us in Col. 2:16, "Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holyday, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath days: which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ." Christ and Christ alone can save you just as you now are and without any pre-conditions. All that God requires is a heart that longs to be free from sin and a faith that believes that Jesus Christ will save all who call upon Him. When the Philippian jailor came trembling before Paul, he cried from the anguish of his soul, "What must I do to be saved?" To this Paul gave the only answer that can possibly be given to that question: Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved. Acts 16:25-31

Now may I add that all who thus believe and are saved immediately become members of the true church, as we are told so clearly in Acts 2:47; "And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved." It was not the apostles who added men and women to the church; it was the Lord. It is still the Lord who adds men to the true church, even the church of the firstborn, whose names are written in heaven. All church joining as we see it today is an abomination to the Lord. It is a man-made fake. All denominational names are the names of blasphemy that adorn that mysterious harlot. That is the vision John saw and that is the account he gave of her in Rev. 17:3 "I saw a woman sit upon a scarlet colored beast, full of the names of blasphemy." I am told that every day in the United States of America a new religious denomination is registered with the government under a new name. I once had a book in my library giving the names of doctrines of every denomination from the Church of Rome to the Church of the Holy Jumpers. God Almighty, forgive your people forever identifying themselves with man's abominable substitute for the true church! Forgive them and awaken them that their eyes may clearly see that, in the moment when we believed on the Lord Jesus Christ, God, the almighty Father, accepted us even as He accepted Jesus, forgiving our sins and adding us to that great spiritual organism which God calls His church! Never has a man ever been saved by any one of them! All men who have ever been saved or will ever be saved have been saved when they left all else and believed on Jesus Christ, the Saviour of all mankind, especially those who believe. 1 Tim. 4:10

The true church is the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. It is the house of which Jesus spoke, saying, "In My Father's house there are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto Myself ..." John 14:2, 3. We can never under any circumstance enter the Father's house by joining the organizations of earth. We cannot enter it by being good or bad, by doing this or that. We enter it when we believe on Christ and receive Him into our hearts as our own personal Saviour, for the blood of Jesus Christ cleanses us from all sin. The greatest hope I can offer to sinful men is found in this "faithful saying" written down by Paul through the inspiration of God: "This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners." All who believe on Him are justified in God's sight and cleansed from all iniquity. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved."

Dear reader, I think we should do some very serious thinking in this present hour. We have without any reasonable doubt arrived at the most serious hour in all the history of this troubled world. Everywhere about us the shadows are lengthening. Wherever we look we see the literal fulfillment of prophecies and predictions made by men of God, who centuries and millenniums ago foretold and forewarned of the terrible calamities that would accompany the consummation of this present age of grace. I shall not endeavor to prove that we are in the end of this dispensation. That, I think, would be a waste of time both for you and for me. The startling evidence lurks like a specter on every hand. Everywhere we look we can see it. Everywhere we listen we can hear it. The physical senses feel it, and the spirit knows it. Even the ungodly and the sinner know the end is very near. Perhaps the most distressing thing among us is that "on with the ball" attitude of mankind that smugly declares that "since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the foundation of the world." But things are not as they were and it is time for God's people to take cognizance and prepare their hearts with care that they might be found both awake and watching in this the most dreadful and yet the most wonderful of all hours in the history of mankind.
In the sixteenth chapter of Revelation we have the epic account of the seven angels pouring out their vials and of the dreadful results that followed. Read it and see for yourself. These seven angels poured out their vials on seven different elements, (1) the earth, (2) the sea, (3) the rivers and streams of waters, (4) the sun, (5) the seat of the beast, (6) the Euphrates, and (7) the air. As we read the graphic account of the pouring out of these vials, it might be well to ask ourselves the question, "What are we looking for, or what are we expecting to happen when the angels pour out their vials? I do not think I am in error when I say that these vials are already being poured out every day. The name of the game is "pollution" and a few hours of serious investigation will show us that pollution of the earth, the water, the sun, and the air is doing to the elements the very thing that the book says will be done when the vials are poured out. The first vial was poured out upon the earth with the result that grievous sores and plagues came upon men. Canada is among the least polluted of all nations, yet animals are being found here with DOT in their bodies up to almost 700 times the safety level. Birds are dying. Three hundred species have become extinct in America alone. Animals are dying. Humans are dying. Hospitals are overflowing and people are becoming sick with many diseases hitherto unknown to mankind. All this is because of the pollution of the earth. Truly an angel has poured out his vial of wrath on the earth.

The second angel poured out his vial on the sea, and it became as the blood of a dead man, that is, congealed, clotted, and corrupt. Beautiful Lake Erie is already dead and filthy with corruption and the other lakes are fast perishing with it. We stated above that the oceans have already lost thirty to forty percent of their life and are polluted one thousand miles out to sea. The third angel poured out his vial upon the rivers and streams, and they, too, became as blood. Many once beautiful rivers are now little more than open sewers unfit for drinking or bathing. The fourth angel poured out his vial on the sun, and power was given to the sun to scorch men. In connection with this inspired statement the following comment from the magazine The Plain Truth is of great interest. "The carbon in jet aircraft exhaust catalyzes (decomposes) the ozone in the upper atmosphere. The presence of ozone is our protection against being fried by ultra-violet light coming in from the sun." Compare verses 8 and 9. The fifth angel poured out his vial on the seat of the beast. The seat of the beast is government, and I would say it includes all present day government. The governments of all nations have become unbelievably corrupt until truth is on the scaffold and wrong is on the throne. The right of the criminal is meticulously preserved while the rights of the innocent are lightly set aside. Justice has fled from the earth and in its place is every wanton greed and every unclean and hateful thing. This depravity has already resulted in men's hearts failing them for fear of the dreadful things coming on the earth as they wring their hands in despair and gnaw their tongues in distress and pain.

And the sixth angel poured out his vial on the great river Euphrates and the water was dried up that the way of the kings of the east might be prepared. The meaning of the drying up of the Euphrates is somewhat obscure, but let there be no mistake that even now the way of the kings of the east — China, India, and other great eastern powers — is being prepared. More and more China is reaching out toward the middle east to meddle with evil fingers in the affairs of those nations that surround Israel even as Russia has already done. The seventh angel poured out his vial into the air. It would be superfluous for me to speak of anything so evident as the present pollution of the air. The truth is manifest to us all. Layers of pollution from high flying jets can be found as high as 43,000 feet, even over the oceans and the polar regions. The Apollo 10 astronauts observed that it was easy to spot Los Angeles from hundreds of miles in space because of the smog hovering over the metropolis.

I have touched on these truths but briefly, but henceforth we must read the sixteenth chapter of Revelation with the definite understanding that the vials are being poured out even now upon the earth with the drastic and terrible results set forth in the prophetic revelation.

My exhortation, then, to all who read these lines is this: Live in all sobriety and holiness before the Lord. Purposefully refuse to set your ambitions on earthly goals, for your life is a vapor; the kingdom is forever. Refuse to glory in your possessions or in the things you hope to possess. Cleanse your hearts by violently putting away the abounding evils of the day. Refuse to waste your precious God-given hours indulging your eyes and ears and other senses in purposeless and useless things. Give yourself to prayer and to the study of the word, ministering continually unto the Lord. Lay hold on life and relax your hold on this realm of death.

"Come, my people! Enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be over past. For, behold, the Lord cometh out of His place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity: the earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain. Isa. 26:20-21

CHAPTER FOUR
UPON THIS ROCK

It is written in God’s word, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him. But God hath revealed them unto us by His Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God." 1 Cor. 2:9-10

That wonderful truth grows ever more profound as God reveals its hidden depths to us by the Holy Spirit. "The secret things belong to the Lord our God, but those things which are revealed belong to us and to our children forever, that we may do all the words of this law." Deut. 29:29 The revealed things and they alone are the things which we can enter into experimentally and make our own. We actually become the truth we see. But the hidden mysteries must remain hidden until the wonderful hour of revelation when the blessed Holy Spirit reveals them to our hearts.

It is my firm conviction that all spiritual understanding is sealed off from the natural mind. Natural minds cannot understand spiritual things. Their understanding is hermetically sealed on the natural side and spiritual things must remain closed to them until the Lord reveals truth to the heart. Man may know the things of man, but the things of God knoweth no man, as Paul has so concisely stated, "What man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him? Even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God." 1 Cor. 2:11 Then he proceeds to show that we have received, not the spirit of bondage to fear, but that Spirit which is of God that we might know the things, which are freely given us of God.

Oh, the endless hours that have been spent listening to lectures by learned doctors of the law and by bishops and canons of the church who understand only the letter but are devoid of the Spirit! Endless years have been spent studying musty old volumes and thumbing through well worn texts, reading the thoughts and interpretations of other men, but still not finding the truth. Dear brethren, truth must remain forever hidden until the Spirit makes it alive; and when the Spirit makes truth alive and reveals it to our hearts, then we know the truth because it has come alive and God has revealed it by His Spirit. The Spirit of life has raised that which is dead in resurrection. What study and books had failed to do over long, weary years of burning the candle at both ends, inspiration from on high has done in a moment of time. The world today abounds with men and women who believe in an historic Jesus. They know full well that such a man once lived and walked the paths of earth. From early childhood they were taught that He was God's Son that He was a just man and went about doing good and delivering all that were oppressed. They have learned by reading that no disease ever to blight the life of man was able to stand a moment before His wonder working power. Even the fiercest storms grew peaceful and still at His command. The wisdom of the world became foolish, even grotesque, in the light of His wisdom, while the wisest of men were baffled by the questions He posed and the answers He gave. But sad it is to tell that, though the world abounds with learned scholars who have studied the historic Jesus all their lives, those blessed people who really know Him are few and far between. Only as the Holy Spirit reveals Him can we know Him and only by revelation can we understand the things that concern His glory. It is when we see Him as He is that we become like Him and from glory to exceeding glory we are changed and changed again by His Spirit dwelling in us.

Our blessed Lord had departed from Galilee where He had faithfully labored with the teeming tides of restless, weary men who thronged Him hourly to hear and see the glory of His ministry. The sick He had healed by the touch of His power. Devils fled at His word. The hungry He fed again and again. He had refuted the quarrelsome arguments of the scribes and Pharisees, those blind leaders of the blind who always caused their followers to fall into the ditch of unbelief and human misunderstanding. But now the Spirit had led Him from Galilee into the region of Caesarea Philippi, that pretty little town nestled sleepily at the foot of majestic Mount Hermon, which is Zion. Deut. 4:48 Of this mount the Psalmist prophesied, saying, "As the dew of Hermon, and as the dew that descended upon the mountains of Zion: for there the Lord commanded the blessing, even life forever more." Psa. 133:3 This was the holy mount (1 Pet. 2:18) that Jesus had chosen for the super-eminence of His transfiguration where three men and only three were to behold the more excellent glory of the Son of man coming in His kingdom.

A little work of preparation remained to be done in the hearts of the disciples who in a few days would accompany Him to the pinnacle of that holy mount. What benefit would suffice if on that day of glory there were men in His company who knew not that He was Christ? Therefore with one ponderous question He searched the understanding of their hearts. "Whom do men say that I, the Son of man, am?" He asked. And they whose ears had so recently heard the opinions of men immediately replied, "Some say that Thou art John the Baptist: some, Elias: and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets." Matt. 16:13-14 Ah, you see how miserably lacking is the comprehension of the natural mind! The natural mind can only guess and come to faulty human conclusions, because the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, neither can he know them, for they are spiritually discerned. The natural mind is able to walk among the wonders of God seeing and hearing continually, yet remaining unable to comprehend that the wonders about Him are wrought by the hand of the Lord. Thus they drew their human conclusions as to who this stranger was who so often displayed God's glory in their midst. Some, beholding His works of power, thought Him to be Elijah. Others, seeing Him weep over Jerusalem, thought Him to be Jeremiah, and others, hearing His prophetic word, imagined Him to be one of the ancient prophets. Still others, seeing the numberless crowds and the many baptisms, imagined Him to be John the Baptist, risen again from the dead. Their human conclusions may have been sound enough to satisfy the reasoning of the natural mind, but they were wrong - all wrong - and nowhere near the truth.

This point I emphasize as a thing of great importance in these closing hours of the age when deception abounds on every hand. Now above all former times is the hour of false christs, false prophets and false teachers. Guesswork in such a time as this will not suffice. We need much more than human opinions, commendation or praise. We must have more than human knowledge and more than the opinions of well-meaning but carnal men. We must have spiritual revelation if we would grasp the truth of spiritual things, and, lacking this heavenly attribute of the Holy Spirit in our lives, we will come to the dead end of error just as surely as we breathe. Never go by the deductions of other men, for their deductions may not be of God. Never conform to the reasonings of the multitude, for they are always wrong and as changeable as the weather. The vital question is not, "Whom do men say that I, the Son of man, am?" But, "Whom do you say that I, the Son of man, am?" Thus before His own disciples He placed this burning question: "Whom do you say that I am?" And Peter with that ready response flowing freely from a heart burning with revelation, burst forth in ecstasy with that marvelous confession, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Oh, what a confession that really was! "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God!" What a transformation the knowledge of this truth works in the hearts of believing men! To know Him is life eternal. To believe on His name is to be saved. To see Him as He is is to be like Him. To confess Him before men is to be confessed by Him before the throne of His glory and before all the holy angels. "I know my Redeemer liveth," cried Job, as the glory of God unfolded before his wondering eyes, "and He shall stand in the latter days upon the earth: and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God: whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another..." Job 19:25-27

"Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but My Father which is in heaven." God in heaven is the source of all spiritual revelation and understanding. Truth does not come from the musty pages of well thumbed volumes. They may guide you, indeed, but the knowledge of who Christ really is is a knowledge that comes down from the Father of lights. It shines into the heart, revealing the knowledge of the glory of God shining like the sun from the face of Jesus Christ.

Some men said, "He is a good man," while others said, "Nay, but He deceiveth the people." Yet another affirms, "No man can do these miracles except God be with him," but to them all Jesus replies, "Except a man be born from above, he cannot see the kingdom of God." Until mortal man with his natural mind and his human way of looking at things is born from above, he will not only fail to see the kingdom, but fail to see even the simplest things of the kingdom. Have you not heard men preach of sonship, yet, even while you listened, your heart told you they lacked the true spirit of sonship? The truths they tried to teach had neither been revealed to them nor made real to their hearts. Time and again you may have heard men preach the kingdom of God, but their words had no force because the kingdom of God was not dwelling in their hearts. It was not within them as Jesus said it would be. You may have listened to ordained ministers address their people with learned words of polish and eloquence about Christ and salvation while they themselves knew not the Saviour, nor had they the knowledge of sins forgiven. "In our set," said one, "it is chic to be born again." Ah, poor benighted soul! She knew not the transforming power, which lifts men out of the realm of childish twaddle into the realm of heavenly respect and glory.

Out of the depths into glory above
I have been lifted in wonderful love;
From every fetter my spirit is free,
For Jesus has lifted me.

Out of the world into heavenly rest
Into the land of the ransomed and blest;
There in the glory with Him I shall be,
For Jesus has lifted me.

Out of myself into Him I adore,
Here to abide in His love evermore;
Through endless ages His glory to see,
For Jesus has lifted me.

"Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," the swarthy old fisherman replied, as the glory of divine revelation swept over his ransomed soul, and from that gushing well of eternal truth the Son of God replied, "Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona, for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but My Father which is in heaven." Oh, Father, blessed Father who art in heaven, hallowed be Thy name! May it please Thee to reveal Thy Son to us who read that we may confer no more with flesh and blood nor even depend upon those who were in Christ before us, but of Thy fullness more and more receive and grace for grace, for the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Thee.
It is a wonderful thing to know Christ, not as an historic Christ who once lived and is dead, but as Christ who is alive forevermore, to know Him as the Christ of the present who, though He died for us in weakness, yet now lives by the power of God. The fact that Jesus lives is above all else the difference between the Christ of God and those base pretenders who have foisted their messiahship upon a gullible world. Mohammed is dead, as dead as a door nail! Confucius is dead, as dead as a stone! Buddha is dead, as dead as the coffin he lies in! But Christ is alive forevermore. The greatest proof that He lives is not only that He was seen by hundreds after His resurrection, but in the marvelous transformation that endures in the lives of those who have repented of sin and believed on His name. "Because I live, ye shall live also," and so it truly is. In the believing heart His eternal life is manifested and those who have received that life shall never die. If Christ be not risen, our hope is vain. But now is Christ risen to become the firstfruits of them that slept. The grave may hold them for a spell, but, as God lives, they shall hear the trumpet of the Lord and the voice of the archangel and, rising in incorruption and glory, they shall be changed in the twinkling of an eye. Thus we sorrow not as those who have no hope, for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even them who sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him on that resurrection morn. "Behold, He cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see Him." "Behold, He cometh, leaping upon the mountains, skipping upon the hills. My beloved spake and said unto me, Rise up, my love, my fair one, and come away. For lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone; the flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land; the fig tree putteth forth her green figs, and the vines with the tender grape give a good smell. Arise, my love, my fair one, and come away."

Revelation flowed like a river that wonderful hour just six days before the transfiguration. "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," said Peter, and Jesus, quick to drive the lesson home, assured him, "Flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but My Father which is in heaven." The reader may be surprised to find with what willingness the heavenly Father reveals His Son to earnest, seeking hearts. "He that loveth Me shall be loved of My Father, and I will love him, and will manifest Myself unto him." John 14:21 If men with searching hearts would come in faith to God, asking the Lord to reveal Himself through His word, then God would honor their faith and show them His glory, but when God is approached with skepticism and unbelief, He withdraws Himself that their blindness and unbelief may continue. "Draw nigh to God and He will draw nigh to you. Cleanse your hands, ye sinners; and purify your hearts, ye double-minded." Jas. 4:8

Be it known, then, that only by revelation can Christ be seen. If we seek him, we will find Him. If we knock at His door, He opens to us. If we ask of Him, He gives us neither serpents nor stones, but living bread. The more we seek Him, the more of His blessed self He reveals, until at last in the glory we shall behold His face and be exactly like Him, for we shall see him as He is.

That which is true of Him is likewise true of all spiritual things. Salvation by faith is a revelation to the sinner's heart. The baptism of the Holy Spirit comes as a revelation to the believer. Divine healing is a revelation to the ill or infirm and the faith to receive it is given as a gift from God. "Open mine eyes that I may behold wondrous things out of Thy law," David prayed, and thus the word of God comes as a revelation to the heart. I would be almost willing to guarantee that scriptures "hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest to their own destruction" would be revealed as clear as the light of day if men would approach the Lord in meekness and penitence, seeking for understanding. Have you never read this blessed verse? "Then opened He their understanding that they might believe the scripture." Luke 24:25 And yet again, "We know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding, that we may know Him that is true, and we are in Him that is true..." 1 John 5:20 Is that not a wonderful statement? Is it not a blessed thing that He has given us an understanding and in that understanding He proposes these two things - first that we may know Him that is true and, second, that we are in Him that is true? This kind of understanding cometh only from the Lord of light, in whom is no darkness, no variability, nor even a shadow.

It was not Peter alone whose spirit was enlightened that day to make the grand confession, "Thou art the Christ," the importance of which cannot be overestimated. Wonderful indeed was the revelation the Father in heaven gave to Peter concerning His Son, Jesus Christ, but give heed now to the revelation the Father gave to Jesus concerning Peter. "I say unto thee that thou art Peter." Was it not wonderful for Peter to know Christ? And was it not equally wonderful for Christ to know Peter? What more glorious knowledge is there than this: "I know My sheep and am known of them"? "Thou art Peter," which is by interpretation a stone. Peter was a living stone, 1 Pet. 2:4-5, and Jesus knew it. Many years later Paul referred to Peter as a pillar, and so he was.
It is of tremendous importance that we should know Christ and know Him to be the God-given head of the body, but do not underestimate the importance of the knowledge that Christ knows us, too, and recognizes us in our particular place in the spiritual body of Christ, the holy temple that is now rising to form a fixed abode for God in the Spirit.

"Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular. And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues." 1 Cor. 12:27-28. All these and many more are the gifts, the ministries and callings distributed according to the will of God among the members of the Christ body. And those precious members of the Christ body will do well to know that they are known of Him. He both cherishes them and admires their place in Him even as precious jewels are admired in tiaras and crowns. "A gift is as a precious stone in the eyes of him that hath it; whithersoever it turneth, it prospereth." Prov. 17:8. We belong to Him. We have been purchased with a great price, even the precious blood of Christ. Whether we be Peter, John, Thomas or Mary, if we belong to Him, He knows us and sees our particular place in His body. "I say unto thee that thou art Peter, and upon this rock will I build My church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

I may err somewhat in my own understanding, but my heart tells me there is much misunderstanding concerning "this rock" Jesus spoke of here. I know Jesus is the Rock and I know Peter was a stone, a mighty pillar in the temple of God, but in my heart I believe Jesus was alluding to another rock, the rock of revelation, which we have seen so wonderfully displayed here. Flesh and blood had not revealed the Christ to Peter nor does flesh and blood reveal those chosen members of Christ's body. It is the Spirit that quickeneth. The flesh profiteth nothing. "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him. But God hath revealed them unto us by His Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God."

While we are knowing Him and admiring Him as the head of the body of God's sons, He is looking with joy and favor, admiring us who are members in particular of His body, of His flesh and of His bones. "For as the body is one and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body: so also is Christ." 1 Cor. 12:12. No man ever yet hated his own flesh, but nouriseth and cherisheth it. So also does Christ love the members of Himself. He admires them and confesses them both before men and before the angels in heaven. "Thou art Peter," or whosoever thou art, and a member in particular of the rising temple which is His body. In one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, and we have all been made to drink of one Spirit. Therefore there is one body, one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father, who is over all, above all and through all and in us all. Eph 4:4-6

A great deal of mystery still surrounds the giving of the keys of the kingdom to Peter, that whatsoever was bound on earth should be bound in heaven and whatsoever was loosed on earth should be loosed in heaven. Here at the moment of Peter's confession of the Son of God, Jesus placed in Peter's hands the keys of the kingdom of heaven. Now the Romish notion which pictures Peter standing at the gates of heaven with a ring full of keys, admitting or rejecting whomsoever he will, is a childish, human fable not worthy of the smallest consideration. No such crude idea is even remotely hinted in this passage.

The key that unlocked to Peter the mystery of Christ's identity was the key of revelation. The truth, which had not entered into the hearts of other men, was revealed to Peter by the Holy Spirit, so that, when He was asked the question, "Whom do you say that I, the Son of man, am?" Peter's response was immediate and without the slightest doubt or hesitation in his mind. "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." This was not taught to him by men, but divine revelation had unlocked the mystery to him so that all the dimness and doubt had fled away and he knew with the assurance of God. Revelation, then, is the key that looses heavenly things long bound up in the storehouse of heaven beyond the reach of carnal minds that cannot understand any of the things of God. When the Spirit reveals mysteries to us that which was bound up like some forbidding mountain of ice then flows as rivers of living water as the sunshine of divine illumination shines upon it. The mystery that was bound on earth was bound (kept) in heaven also, but the moment it was loosed on earth, then it was loosed in heaven. Do you think that heaven itself filled the heart of Peter that day when this earth-bound man had his understanding loosed to comprehend the difference between Jesus, the man, and Jesus, the Christ, the Son of the living God? When Peter turned the key of revelation in that door of mystery, his wondering eyes beheld a sight that far exceeded any expectations. The glory of the truth of Christ's sonship never departed from him from that moment.

Now the end of our faith is the salvation of our souls. 1 Pet. 1:9 But this salvation, which has been revealed to us was not always known. Justification by faith did not become the general experience of the saints until after Pentecost. The Holy Ghost had not been given until then because Jesus had not yet been glorified. But with the resurrection of Jesus Christ and His ascension into heaven a new dispensation with a new revelation and a new experience came into being. When the Holy Spirit was poured out on the day of Pentecost, the Spirit of Christ actually began to enter into and live within the believer. This had not been the experience of the Old Testament saints. Jesus Himself had made this very plain to His disciples when He said, "The Spirit is with you, but He shall be in you." There is a world of difference between the Spirit's being with you and the Spirit's dwelling in you.

Evidently the Old Testament prophets had prophesied of this great and mysterious grace, which was to come in a future age, but, though they prophesied about it, they could not understand it, and, though they diligently sought God for understanding, the key to the mystery was never given to them. Thus Peter, explaining their lack of understanding, made this statement: "Of which salvation the prophets have inquired and searched diligently, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you: searching what, or what manner of time the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow. Unto whom it was revealed, that not unto themselves, but unto us they did minister the things, which are now reported unto you by them that have preached the gospel unto you with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven; which things the angels desire to look into." 1 Pet. 1:10-12

When truth becomes present truth, then that which was beforehand bound on earth and in heaven is loosed on earth and in heaven by the key of revelation. The things which eye hath not seen and ear hath not heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, are revealed to us by the Spirit, for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God.

It has become a source of heaviness to me recently to discover a number of Christians who seem almost ready to tear the epistles of Paul out of the Bible. They cannot understand how he fits into the New Testament picture. Some have even concluded that this mighty man was an imposter. Let us never imagine that the message of Jesus and the twelve apostles was in any way in contradiction to the message of Paul. Christ came preaching that the kingdom of heaven was at hand. He came proclaiming its laws and announcing the manner of its government. I do not hesitate to say that every act in the life of Jesus and every word He spoke portrayed and extolled some outstanding principle concerning the kingdom of God. When He healed the lame, the blind, the deaf, the dumb, the demon possessed, He was openly demonstrating that in His coming kingdom there would be no sickness, deafness, blindness, or demon possession. Every miracle and every inspired word was a prophecy of the glory of that wonderful age, when the knowledge of the glory of the Lord will fill the whole world. That age will be governed by twice-born men, elect according to the foreknowledge of God, who in God's wise purpose are being gathered and assembled during this present dispensation which we now know to be the dispensation of the grace of God. Jesus preached the glory of the kingdom of God and Paul's gospel assembles its elect inhabitants.

One day Jesus spoke a special parable to people who thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear in His day. "He said, therefore, A certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return. And he called his ten servants, and delivered them ten pounds, and said unto them, Occupy till I come. But his citizens hated him, and sent a message after him, saying, We will not have this man to reign over us. And it came to pass, that when he was returned, having received the kingdom, then he commanded these servants to be called unto him, to whom he had given the money...." Luke 19:12-15 This nobleman who went on the long journey is none other than Jesus Christ. The ten servants are the house of Israel. The test of true servants is faithfulness or faith, because we can never be faithful without faith.

During the long time that the nobleman has been away on his long journey, which now has been almost two thousand years, the faithful seed of the kingdom has been assembled. These are the people referred to by Paul as the "in Christ." It is not the Lord's intention in this age of grace to save the world and everybody in it.
That never was the Lord's mind. His intention during this age of grace is to take out a people for His name, and this taking out is being accomplished through the gospel of the grace of God given to Paul.

Paul, willing to explain fully his own calling and show how the whole gospel of the grace of God was committed to him, wrote these enlightening words to the Ephesians: "For this cause I Paul, the prisoner of Jesus Christ for you Gentiles, if ye have heard of the dispensation of the grace of God which is given me to youward: how that by revelation He made known unto me the mystery... which in other ages was not made known unto the sons of men, as it is now revealed unto His holy apostles and prophets by the Spirit; that the Gentiles should be fellow-heirs, and of the same body, and partakers of His promise in Christ by the effectual working of His power. Unto me, who am less than the least of all saints, is this grace given, that I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ." Eph. 3:1-8 The unfolding of the unsearchable riches of the grace of God was given to Paul above all other men, and that marvelous grace of God with all its intrinsic values was given to prepare those who shall be rulers in His kingdom, even the kingdom Jesus came to preach and over which those who suffer with Him shall reign.

The harmony of God's word is like a beautiful symphony, filling all the earth and sky with the cadence of its melody as it echoes and re-echoes among the everlasting hills.

If any man who ever lived experienced the blinding light of revelation, it was certainly Paul. The story of his conversion on the Damascus road, of the glory of the light that shone upon him from heaven and the audible voice of the Christ who spoke to him, is too well known to need repeating here. So great was the assurance that flooded his heart as a result of that heavenly visitation that twice he related the story in great detail as he stood on trial before opposing forces who questioned and condemned his God-given authority, once standing in chains, Acts 21:33, while testifying before a multitude of Jews, Acts 22:1-24, and once again while giving testimony before King Agrippa and Festus. Acts 26 Thus three times in the book of Acts the story of Paul's heavenly vision is recorded and advanced by the Holy Ghost as proof of his heavenly calling and apostleship. Indeed, Paul himself calls upon this revelation of Christ as definite proof of his own apostleship when he says, "Am I not an apostle?... Have I not seen Jesus Christ our Lord?..." 1 Cor. 9:1 And again, "Last of all He was seen of me also as of one born out of due time." 1 Cor. 15:8 The entire gospel and dispensation of grace was given to Paul by revelation. This is clearly demonstrated in his writings to the Ephesians, chapter 3:1-4, as already quoted.

The Bible is a book of revelation from beginning to end. It is a prewritten history, unfolding as a scroll the eternal purposes of God as age succeeds age and dispensation follows dispensation. Progressively throughout the scripture the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit are revealed. The purpose of man's beginning in the Garden of Eden is unfolded through succeeding generations until at last he stands in God's image, heir of all things and lord of the universe.

How pitiful is the man who sees in God's word nothing more than a maze of trial, error, and failure, but who can never see in these things the unfolding of an eternal purpose! The man who fails to see the purpose and all-wise intention of God in our mists of affliction, failure and suffering cannot possibly love God. Do you, my bother, see man in Eden as nothing but failure? And Eden itself with its innocent inhabitants as nothing but a lost cause? If so, your love will always be imperfect while you accept that kind of understanding. Was the destruction of the world by a flood God's admission of a failure or was it the immutable progression of a design? Did the Lord really choose the nation Israel, calling them His chosen people and making an everlasting covenant with them to endure as long as the sun and the moon and the seasons, only to cast them off and admit His own failure because He could do nothing with them? Nobody could trust a God like that, much less love Him. When, however, we hear Paul say, "If the casting away of them (Israel) be the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiving of them be but life from the dead", Rom. 11:15, the design unfolds before our eyes and we worship God, who moves in mysterious ways His wonders to perform. In the light of such understanding and heavenly purpose as this Paul's words become full of meaning as he says, "For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits; that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fullness of the Gentiles be brought in." Rom. 11:25
Revelation is a mighty rock in a dry and thirsty land. Without the waters of life that flow from it Christian experience dries up, withers and decays. Where no stream of revelation flows, no growth appears on the tree of life and no changing from glory to glory as the Spirit reveals what eye hath not seen nor ear heard. Without the spirit of revelation Christians form hard, set, stereotyped doctrines to which they rigidly adhere, not even understanding why they believed the things they do. Well do I remember an older sinner who once emphatically told me, "I was born a Lutheran, I have lived a Lutheran, and I will die a Lutheran." Well, I have nothing against a Lutheran, but whatsoever is static is dead, and after only three days in death "by this time he stinketh." They are certain there is no light beyond what their fathers saw a thousand years ago, but even that light was never revealed to them or made living to them by the Spirit and so they shrivel and die in the frail light of what they have been taught, and not what they have personally seen and experienced.

Now in contra-distinction to this attitude of spiritual deadness, blindness and inertia let us listen to Paul as he gives thanks and offers prayer that the Ephesian saints may advance into ever increasing spiritual understanding. "Wherefore I also, after I heard of your faith in the Lord Jesus, and love unto all the saints, cease not to give thanks for you, making mention of you in my prayers; that the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give unto you the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Him: the eyes of your understanding being enlightened; that ye may know what is the hope of His calling, and what the riches of the glory of His inheritance in the saints, and what is the exceeding greatness of His power to us-ward who believe, according to the working of His mighty power, which He wrought in Christ, when He raised Him from the dead, and set Him at His own right hand in the heavenly places, far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come: and hath put all things under His feet, and gave Him to be the head over all things to the church, which is His body, the fullness of Him that filleth all in all." Eph. 1:15-23 What a vast scope of information is given us in this passage! But see how earnestly he prays that they might be given the spirit of wisdom and understanding to enable them to understand the mighty mysteries he set before them. Ask the average Christian what the church is and he will probably name a series of man-made denominations. Even the dictionary defines the church as "a building for public worship; a local congregation; a denomination." Ask him what the purpose of the church is and he flounders in a sea of vagueness and misunderstanding. Paul knew how impossible it is to understand those mysteries without the spirit of revelation, and that is why he prayed that God would give them such spiritual understanding from heaven.

We have done little more than introduce the subject of revelation as yet. We should have considered the revelation of Christ to Nathaniel and Matthew, to Phillip and Andrew, to Mary and Martha, and to doubting Thomas. We should have explored the experience of Job to see how he was transformed by the revelation of the Lord, and of Isaiah, who saw the Lord high and lifted up and was transformed by the glory of his revelation. We should have spoken of Daniel, who almost wrote the book of Revelation before Christ was born, and we should have considered the beloved John, who saw and related things that are only now unfolding in our time.

There is a secret to revelation, which every saint should know. Let me tell you what it is. The Lord has hidden all His secret things just beyond the reach of the natural mind. They are higher than any human understanding. They cannot be seen with the natural eye. Between the terrestrial realm and the celestial realm there is a fast closed door through which natural men cannot pass. The carnal mind can never understand the things of the Spirit of God; neither can he know them, for they are spiritually discerned. Forbidding as this is, there is a key that will unlock the door, and that key is divine revelation; but the key of revelation or illumination is placed far beyond the reach of the careless, the half-hearted, and the indifferent Christian.

Observe now one Bible instance which clearly demonstrates how the diligent may obtain the key to understanding. In the ninth chapter of Daniel we are told how this saint had been studying the book of Jeremiah, but he understood only part of what he read. Instead of laying the book aside and forgetting about its contents or trying to guess the meaning, Daniel said, "I set my face unto the Lord God, to seek by prayer and supplications, with fasting, and sackcloth, and ashes; and I prayed unto the Lord my God, and made my confession, and said, O Lord, the great and dreadful God, keeping the covenant and mercy to them that love Him, and to them that keep His commandments; we have sinned, and have committed iniquity..." Dan. 9:3-5 Through the whole chapter, verses 1 to 19, the confession of this godly man continues, as he humbled himself before God in repentance and cleansed his soul by power divine. Those who read this soul-searching prayer will become aware that Daniel was not seeking understanding from God so that he would be able to astound and bewilder admiring audiences with a sense of his personal greatness. It was for God's glory, and that alone, he sought to understand the things that had been spoken to him. Pride and selfish ambition were put far off from him. My brother, I fear that much of the stuff that in our day passes for revelation is nothing but utter human imagination that serves to drown men in perdition and helps them not one bit toward a greater fullness in Him. "To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." Isa. 8:20

But listen to this godly man as he searches his heart? "O Lord, hear; O Lord, forgive; O Lord, hearken and do, defer not, for Thine own sake, O my God: for Thy city and Thy people are called by Thy name." Verse 19 "And whiles I was speaking, and praying, and confessing my sin and the sin of my people Israel, and presenting my supplication before the Lord, my God, for the holy mountain of my God; yea, whiles I was speaking in prayer, even the man Gabriel, whom I had seen in the vision at the beginning, being caused to fly swiftly, touched me about the time of the evening oblation. And he informed me, and talked with me, and said, O Daniel, I am now come forth to give thee skill and understanding." Verses 20-22

It is abundantly clear from this passage as well as from Daniel, chapters 10 and 11, that the key to spiritual understanding and the illumination of truth lies just beyond the reach of the natural man. Dear saint of God, there is nothing so valuable as fasting and prayer, together with earnest confession of our own earthly mindedness and carnality, to turn the key in the lock that opens the gates to celestial realms. If God's people will humble themselves with fasting and prayer, not to extol personal righteousness as the Pharisee, who prayed with himself, saying, "I fast twice in the week; I give tithes of all I possess," but rather to humble themselves in the sight of God that He might give them His understanding and open their minds to His wisdom, then they will find the door is unlocked and the things which long have been hidden will begin to "come alive" as the Holy Spirit reveals them. Even the scriptures, which on the surface appear exceedingly simple contain hidden depths of truth that are never revealed to the sluggish and carnal seeker; but to the diligent wisdom and truth reveal their secrets as the soul humbles itself in the presence of God.

Humble thyself and the Lord shall draw nigh thee;
Humble thyself and His presence shall cheer thee;
He will not walk with the proud or the scornful.
Humble thyself to walk with God.

"Upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." We cannot see the true church without an understanding from heaven. We cannot see Christ the Son of the living God until the Father reveals Him. All the beauties of God's purpose lie hopelessly shrouded in mystery until our minds are touched by the spirit of understanding. All the jewels of truth lie bound in heaven's vault until the things which eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered the heart of man are revealed unto us by His Spirit. The closer we come to the end of this swiftly closing age the greater becomes our need of spiritual understanding. The world abounds in darkness and dreadful deceptions. Darkness parades in garments of light. Wolves walk about in sheep's clothing. Devils masquerade as angels of light. "But ye have no need that any man teach you, for the Spirit teacheth all things, and is truth, and is no lie."

"Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," said Peter. "Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona," said Jesus, "for flesh and blood hath not revealed this unto thee, but My Father. And I say unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build My church: and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven."

"If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth lo all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him." James 1:5

CHAPTER FIVE
THE PRODIGAL SON
In the fifteenth chapter of the Gospel of Luke we have the story of three lost things - the sheep which was naturally lost, for all we like sheep have gone astray; the coin which was helplessly lost, for of itself it had neither power nor wisdom to reinstate itself and, had it not been for the diligently seeking woman, it would never have been found at all; and, finally, we are told in great detail of a son who was willfully lost.

The parable reads that a certain man had two sons, a younger son and an elder son. The Father referred to here is without doubt God, the Father. The elder son represents the sons of God who came from Israel, the church of the Old Testament. The younger son represents the sons of God who come from the church of the New Testament. These two sons are symbolic of the two companies of 144,000 (see Rev. chapters 7 and 14) who at last stand one on the right hand and one on the left of Jesus Christ in the glorious kingdom of the Father. From them shall the whole earth be over spread with the light and the glory of God as the law of the Lord goes forth from Zion and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. The hour is at hand when Christ, having abolished in His own flesh the enmity between the two sons, will have made them completely one in Him, "for He is our peace who hath made both one and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us; having abolished in His flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances, for to make in Himself of twain one new man, so making peace." Eph. 2:14-16

How glorious are these two sons in their beginning and again in their end, yet how far from God they both wandered during the years of their preparation. The elder son was carried away to the horrible captivity of Nebuchadnezzar's Babylon, Jer. 52:10-30, thence after a short return to be scattered among all the nations of the earth. The younger son was carried to the even more horrible captivity of spiritual Babylon, which is Rome, the queen mother of all harlots and abominations of the earth. In her is found abundantly of the blood of the saints and martyrs of Jesus. She is a hole for bats and a hiding place for every unclean and hateful bird. She sits as a queen exerting her sway over the kings and governments of the earth. Rev. 18:1-8 When she is in power, she tramples all opposition beneath her bloody feet, torturing, inquiring, burning and murdering all who dare to follow God instead of her. This monstrous beast, this enormous harlot, who received a deadly wound in the days of Martin Luther, now has been healed of her deadly wound that all the world might wonder after her until He that is holy burns her with fire, for strong is the Lord that judges her. Rev. 18:8. It was into such captivity that the younger son wandered. There was a brief return to God and truth in the days that followed the great Reformation even as there was a return to Jerusalem when Ezra led Israel back from the captivity of Babylon, (see the books of Ezra and Nehemiah), but after that brief respite from captivity, as Israel was scattered among the literal nations of the world, Jas. 1:1, so the church and her sons together were scattered among the Protestant denominations, which spiritually we may call nations. These sects without exception comprise the harlot daughters of the great mother of harlots and abominations of the earth. Just as all nations of the earth except Israel had their beginning at Babylon, Gen. 11:1-9, so all the denominations or spiritual nations had their beginning with spiritual Babylon, which is Rome, and the sons of God who had their beginning in Christ have been carried away captive into these harlot systems to waste their substance (spiritual gifts and ministries) with riotous living and to devour their inheritance with harlots. It would not be an overstatement to declare that perhaps the most blinding error in the world today is that Christian people everywhere still imagine that these harlot systems are the true church. When, oh when, will God's people ever learn and clearly see by the Holy Spirit that the true church is a hidden treasure? It has nothing whatsoever to do with these bastard things that everywhere and in all places insist on usurping the name church. They are not churches any more than Nebuchadnezzar's Babylon was Israel. They are a worldly harlot system that has captured the church and carried it away into captivity and confusion. Babylon means confusion. So great, indeed, is the confusion of sight that none can tell whether the fields are fields of tares or whether they are fields of wheat. So confused has become the hearing that none can discern between the voice of sheep and the bleat of goats. So confused has become the understanding that few can distinguish between the true shepherd who feeds the sheep and the false shepherd who bleeds them. So multiplied have become the voices of false shepherds that the sheep no longer know the gentle voice of Christ from the voice of strangers, but accept the false as true and the true as false. These abominable harlots have sunk so low in recent years that they are willing to make an accord with any passerby, joining themselves in unholy marriage with each other, with the world, and with other religious systems that know nothing of Christ, and even now are fondly embracing Rome, the great mother of all harlots, that the scripture might be fulfilled, "They were marrying and giving in marriage until the day that Noah entered the ark and the flood came and destroyed them all."
Just as long as we accept these systems as the church and look upon them as the church, we will always feel obliged to continue to attend their gatherings. But the moment we see that the true church is a thing apart, a hidden mystery, the treasure hid in the field, the pearl of great price, the few stalks of wheat among the crushing fields of tares, the few remaining sheep in the vast pastures of goats, then we too will be ready to "come out of her" that we be not partaker of her plagues. Strong is the Lord that judgeth Babylon, for she is responsible for all the sins and iniquities of the earth.

My heart greatly rejoices that during the past few months more and more people have written me to say that they have heard the voice of the Lord calling them to come out of all these systems to walk before God as Abraham did, and what joy it is to hear them say that they have obeyed the call! There can be no possible doubt that the one thing above all else that hinders the progress of the sons of God is the desolating fact that they have remained captive to these harlot systems. For this reason they have not known God. They have not known his voice. They have wandered devoid of His will. For in 'all these things they are thwarted and made ashamed by the will of that odious woman with whom they are constantly associated.

For decades and centuries the Spirit of the Lord has been speaking to individuals here and there, calling them to leave these worldly systems that they might walk as sons with Him and Him alone. Those who dared to obey the voice of the Lord, rejecting the sects and systems that they might follow Christ alone, were looked upon as foolish fanatics and taunted with the worn-out phrase that they "were so heavenly minded that they were no earthly good". They were looked upon as mystics and eccentrics that might as well be absent, for they were no good anyway. Yet among them were those who knew God, who could discern between the wheat and the tares and that which was of God and that which was not. Every religious move from Noah to now has been led by men who abhorred the harlot system. During the last few months that trickle of sons who are divorcing themselves from the harlot system is growing into a stream, for more and more people are hearing the call of God to come out of her, and more and more people are being obedient to that call. My heart always thrills when someone writes to tell me that they have heard and obeyed God's call, for they soon become mature sons who follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth. The Spirit of the Lord has forbidden me for the present to go much among the people, for He does not want that men should follow me. He wants that all men should follow Him. Why should any man wish to be a disciple of mine, for I am only a disciple of Christ. Learn to follow Him, for all who are one mind with the Father are likewise one mind with each other. Soon there will be a great host forsaking these sordid systems, for the angels of God will fly through heaven repeating the call, "Come out of her, My people." Rev. 18:1-8 This is the day of coming out. The spirit of Ezra, Nehemiah, and Paul (2 Cor. 6:17-18) is in the land. God, the great eagle, is stirring up these old nests, pushing the fledgling sons from them, that they may soar into the glory of His heavenly realm.

"Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird. For all nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth are waxed rich through the abundance of her delicacies. And I heard another voice from heaven, saying, Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues. For her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities." Rev. 18:2-5

The story of the prodigal son is the story of those of us who all through this age of grace have been called to sonship. This story is not the record of a sinner wandering away from God and finally coming to justification by faith. This is the story of a son. It is the record of the whole company of sons, beginning with Pentecost right down to the end of the age, for those sons, though many and raised up under ten thousand varied circumstances over many centuries, are but one son, for "we being many are one body in Him."

The younger son at Pentecost said, "Father, give me the portion of goods that falleth to me", and so it was that they tarried together, being of one heart and one soul as they waited for the promise of the Father, which was their portion from God. Well they knew that Jesus, their Lord, had said, "I will not leave you comfortless; I will come unto you." John 14:16-18 They had heard His command that they should not depart from Jerusalem but wait for the promise of the Father, "which, said He, ye have heard of Me." Luke 24:49-53 And so it was that, after He had led them forth as far as Bethany and had lifted up His hands and blessed them, He was parted from them and taken up into heaven, and they returned to Jerusalem and, finding an upper room where they might wait for the promised Holy Spirit, they continued in supplication and prayer until the day of Pentecost, which is fifty days after the Passover, for it was on the preparation of the Passover that Jesus had been crucified. See Acts 1:12-14 and Acts 2:1-4 There in the upper room they tarried, and there the younger son requested the portion that was rightfully his, and the Father, pouring their inheritance upon them, filled them to overflowing with the Holy Spirit. Thus they entered immediately into a realm of sonship, which few men since that day have so quickly entered.

"And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all of one accord in one place. And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting. And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them. And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance. And there were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven. Now when this was noised abroad, the multitude came together and were confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language. And they were all amazed and marveled, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak Galileans? And how hear we every man in our own tongue wherein we were born?" Acts 2:1-8

The divine weight of heavenly glory that followed that mighty outpouring of the Holy Spirit is really far, far beyond the power of human description. Nothing but eternity itself will even begin to relate the abounding goodness that came to the world as a result of the heavenly portion given to the younger son that day. On that very first day three thousand souls were added to the Lord and the day following another five thousand followed in the way of repentance and life. Multitudes of priests believed, and the Lord added to the church every day such as should be saved. Acts 2:47 Miracles of every description were performed by the young sons of God. Healings were the order of the day until they brought the sick from every quarter that at least the shadow of Peter falling on some of them might make them whole. And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and one soul; neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own, but they had all things in common, and with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus and great grace was upon them all. Acts 4:32-33 And by the hands of the apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people; and they were all of one accord in Solomon's porch, and of the rest durst no man join himself to them, but the people magnified them and believers were the more added to the Lord; multitudes both of men and women insomuch that they brought the sick into the streets and laid them on beds and couches that at least the shadow of Peter passing by might overshadow some of them. There came also a multitude out of the cities round about unto Jerusalem bringing sick folk with them, which were vexed with unclean spirits, and they were healed every one. Acts 5:12-16

The church had become like a vast tree that grew in the garden of the Lord. It grew its fruit and yielded its increase. The gifts of the Spirit were in evidence everywhere and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations. But sadly enough even in the days of the apostles decay began to set in. The Jewish legalists began to rob the church of its new, found grace. The freedom of the Spirit that had made them one heart and one soul began to give place to councils and governments. Men began to separate themselves by becoming followers of men, saying, "I am of Paul, I am of Apollos, I am of Cephas, and I am of Christ." 1 Cor. 1:12, 13 Sin came, too, for Paul found in the church at Corinth sin that was not even named among the Gentiles, 1 Cor. 5:1, and for all this they were puffed up and sorrowed not unto repentance.

Not many days after the young son had received his portion from the Father, he began to wander away. When the apostle John saw by revelation the entire history of the church from his time until the end of the age, he wrote to the church at Smyrna, saying, "Thou shall have tribulation ten days." Rev. 2:10 During the first three hundred years of church history there were approximately ten declensions and ten great persecutions sent to restore a straying church to God but, when at last in 315 A.D. the Emperor Constantine was converted, or at least professed to be converted, persecution ceased and the terrible journey into the dark ages really began. Thus it was not many days after the great portion was given at Pentecost that the younger son took his journey into afar country and there wasted his substance with riotous living.
Many years before the Saviour came into the world and long before the church age had begun or the glories of Pentecost had been imagined, the prophet Joel was seized by the spirit of inspiration. Seeming to scan the coming ages as through a prophetic telescope, he saw the glory of the new, born church. He saw the millions that turned to God until by the end of the first century one-twentieth of the entire Roman Empire was christianized. He saw the love that flowed like an ointment among all the brethren. He saw the healings, and the signs and wonders that were everywhere present. He saw the martyrs fearlessly die, glorying in a martyr's crown until surely his soul must have been lifted to heaven as he in the Spirit partook of the wonders of the coming age. But as he looked upon the wonderful scene, things began to change. He saw certain evil elements eating away at the very vitals of this beautiful garden of the Lord. In his vision he saw four destructive insects. Tiny things they were, but they gnawed away at the very life of the church until there was nothing left. In his amazement at the sight of this dread destruction he penned these words: "Hear this, ye old men, and give ear, all ye inhabitants of the land. Hath this been in your days, or even in the days of your fathers? Tell ye your children of it, and let your children tell their children, and their children another generation. That which the palmerworm hath left hath the locust eaten; and that which the locust hath left the cankerworm eaten; and that which the cankerworm hath left hath the caterpillar eaten." Joel 1:1-4

However much we may dread to believe it, this strange verse contains the entire history of the church until this very hour in which we live. Certainly there have been revivals and brief periods of restoration, but the vision of Joel was right and exact as we shall now see.

Botanists tell us that the palmerworm is a grub that attacks the fruit of the tree. It has the habit of boring into the core of the fruit. Decay then sets in and destruction and rot is only a matter of time. The apostle Paul gave us a list of nine spiritual fruits. They begin with love and flow out like a broadening river: love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faithfulness, meekness and temperance. Gal. 5:22-23 All this fruit abounded in the early church and came as part of the inheritance the Father divided to the sons of God. Love that is born of the Holy Spirit has nothing in common with the fraudulent, fictitious farce that men call love today. Love is of God and every one that loveth is begotten of God. By this shall all men know that ye are My disciples, if ye love one another. Love is not a thing. Love in its first true essence is God. I loathe this smug, smiling humbug that says, "You've got to show love, brother." Love is not a garment that can be put on and off at will. It is not a jewel that is either worn or hidden. Love is God, and he who lives and moves and has his being in God is love in all his being, and all his deeds whether in mercy or judgment are born of God. Christians may well admit to their eternal shame that they have patterned their love from Hollywood's dream rather than from the indwelling Holy Spirit. He that dwelleth in God dwelleth in love, and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, for God is love.

We shall not try to speak of love here, for no man has ability to describe that, which is purely God. He who could thoroughly describe love could thoroughly describe God and that is forever impossible. The church upon whose head the precious oil of unity was poured at Pentecost was not made one by the power of organization, but by walking and dwelling in the love of God. It needed no organization at all, for men walking in the Spirit and in the love of God found their leadership in Christ and were instructed of Him, and so, walking in love and the fear of God, boundless power and signs followed their lives.

It was only when the dread palmerworm began to gnaw at the fruit of love that they found themselves resorting to various forms of organization. It is most tragically noticeable that it was after no small contention and disputation, Acts 15:1-2, that a deputation was sent to the apostles at Jerusalem to decide the question of circumcision. For years I thought this was a correct pattern for the church to follow and in a way it was, but today I see that it was only necessary because many among them were no longer walking in the love and wisdom of God. The palmerworm had rotted the fruit in their lives until now they must resort to wrangling and disputing and decisions that changed nothing in their hearts.

Once the people of God begin to walk in the corrupt wisdom of the carnal mind instead of walking in the unity that flows like a river from the love of God, they have without doubt begun their journey into a far country far away from love, joy, or peace, far from longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, and far from faithfulness, meekness, and temperance. In short, they are far from God. Into such a sorry state the young son wandered, but for all this his gifts had not forsaken him and would not for many years. Like Samson of old he still retained
The locust is not in the least like the palmerworm. They fly in swarms attacking everything that is green. They eat the green grass, the shrubs, and the green leaves of trees, leaving them stripped and naked. Jesus once likened the kingdom of heaven to a tree, and John in Revelation spoke of a tree, saying the leaves of the tree are for the healing of the nations. Rev. 22:2 If there ever was a tree whose leaves were for the healing of the nations, it was the church after the glory of Pentecost, for men were healed in body and in soul and made one in the image of God. The nine gifts of the Holy Spirit were the leaves of the tree, just as the nine fruits of the Spirit were the fruit of the tree. If one will but superficially examine the nine gifts of the Spirit, he will clearly see that no eventuality could possibly arise in the whole earth that would be beyond the scope and power of these nine remarkable gifts given as an inheritance to a church walking in the love of God. When one considers the word of wisdom, the word of knowledge, faith, the gifts of healing, the working of miracles, prophecy, the discerning of spirits, divers kinds of languages, and the interpretation of languages, 1 Cor. 12:4-11, it is clear without a moment's hesitation that there is no power on earth that can resist or stand against such things. The armies of the Assyrians were as helpless as babies before the miracle-working Elisha, and the united armies of the whole earth would be powerless before a miracle-working church. What sickness could stand before their healings? What impossibility could defy their faith? See Heb. 11. What language barrier could bar their missionaries, or what veil seclude the future from their prophets? The church with the fruit of love and the leaves of the gifts of the Spirit was as omnipotent as God Himself while they walked in one mind with the Father.

But just as the palmerworm attacked the fruit of the tree, the locust attacked the leaves, and the gifts of the Spirit became conspicuous by their absence and earthly things began to take their place. The bishops began their struggle for power and a new type of leadership began to emerge. The ugly head of the papacy began to emerge in Rome, exerting more and more authority, blasphemously claiming the very mantle and authority of Christ until nothing was left but form. No longer could the church say, "Silver and gold have I none", and no longer could it say, "In the name of Jesus Christ rise up and walk." The spiritual locust had done its work and done it well. The prodigal son had wandered into a far country. He had wasted his substance with riotous living and now the dreadful famine was approaching in the land.

The cankerworm lives on the new growth of the plants. When the spring comes and the new shoots appear on the shrubs, the cankerworm attacks them. Surely this must refer to the fresh outcropping of revival that so often took place among those sincere souls who steadfastly refused to become subject to the desolating power of cruel organized Rome. It is a most terrible thing to see that the church, which began with such love and glory, had now become the cruel persecutor of everything that was godly. The church which had once seen eighty martyrs a day die in Alexandria now conducted its own ruthless inquisition, sending its armies to destroy all opposition to its will, burning the saints at the stake, tearing them limb from limb on the rack, or crushing their bodies in the iron maiden. Those who visit the Tower of London can still see today the winding stair that led from the church to the torture chamber in the dungeon below. Thus it was that the loathsome cankerworm of organized bigotry and hate greedily gobbled up each tender sprig that grew up where the light of God's glory shone through upon them.

The great caterpillar of the Middle East is big and powerful and very destructive. It bores into the tree and into the roots to greedily eat up the life of the tree at its very source. As the fruit disappeared, then the gifts, then the holiness, so now even justification by faith disappeared from the church. In the Concise History of the Church by A. E. Knight, page 148, we read these words: "The light of the gospel was sadly clouded by the errors and superstitions of popery; and it is but too probable that the zeal of Boniface was more the result of devotion to Rome than of devotion to Christ. The churches built by his sanction and direction were more noticeable for their images than for their evangelists and teachers; and the sign of the cross was more familiar to the eye than preaching to the ear. The relics of the saints were more freely distributed than copies of the scripture, and it would not be going too far to affirm that, in many instances, the so-called converts from heathenism had only changed their form of idolatry. Doubtless there were cases of conversion, but it is certain that many professing Christians were Christian only by compulsion." So it was that the dark, dark, terrible ages came to find a church away from God, a prodigal son in a far, far country.
As the prodigal son wandered farther away from God, difficulties increased. Christians have always adopted the silly idea of trying to substitute some carnal thing for the priceless gift they have lost. Did not Hosea say, "For Israel hath forgotten his Maker, and buildeth temples: and Judah hath multiplied fenced cities." The moment the glory of God disappears the people immediately begin to build up the visible. When they forget God, they build temples, and when they lose His protection, they build fenced cities. Hosea 8:14 The further men get away from God the more human corruption they drag in to take His place, and the more corruption they drag in the further they get away from God. So it was that when this young son had spent all, he began to be in serious want, and there was no one to give anything to him.

His next step down was to join himself to a citizen of that barren, famine-impoverished land. And this is just what has happened to God's sons as the ages have passed. The church system has sunk so desperately low that it knows not from whence it has fallen. As man remembers not the glory of Eden, so the church remembers not her beginning. She has joined herself to the world to such an extent that in name only is it any different. The world system has become the church system. She runs her business as the world runs hers. Its members have become so buried in the affairs of this life that one might well believe they are part of it. The greed that exists in the world exists in the church. The self-seeking, wire-pulling, quarrelling, envy and jealousy so often displayed is unbelievable. Indeed, one Anglican bishop in a recent speech declared, "There should be no distinction made between the church and the world. They are two parts of one and the same thing." How opposite this is to the words of Jesus, who said, "Marvel not if the world hate you; it hated Me before it hated you." And again, "In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer: I have overcome the world." The apostle John said, "All that is in the world is the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, and the pride of life; this is not of the Father, but of the world." When, then, prominent ministers begin to make the world and the church one and the same thing, certainly we have joined ourselves to a citizen of that country. Now the young son had no sooner joined himself to a citizen of that country than he found himself feeding swine. He whose soul had once thrilled to the words:

My sheep know My voice, and day by day They abide in the fold; they go not astray. I love them because they have made Me their choice, And follow My call, for My sheep know My voice, now found that he no longer was feeding sheep, but swine, who had the nature of swine, the understanding of swine, and the filth of swine. Not only did he find himself associated with swine, but he also found himself so stricken with poverty that he had naught but husks to feed them. Where were the green fields of the sheep and the quiet streams? Where was the meat of the word, the fruit of the Spirit and the gifts? While the swine munched contentedly on their husks, he was so hungry for something to satisfy his starving soul that, had it been possible, he would have filled his belly with the husks that the swine did eat.

I take no pleasure whatever in decrying the sins of the hour in which we live. Neither is there pleasure or satisfaction in talking of the horrible depth into which the church has fallen, but I cannot withhold from saying that the church folds of today, in spite of their magnificent buildings, have more in common with swine pens than with sheepfolds. Moreover, the abominable trash fed to the people in the name of the gospel from the most evangelical to the most formal and dead far more resembles husks than the eternal truth of the word of God. My soul is appalled at the utter trash that is coming forth from pulpits to tickle the listener's ear. The miracle is not that some perish with hunger, but that any survive at all. Truly did the prophet say, "The meat offering and the drink offering is cut off from the house of the Lord; the priests, the Lord's ministers, mourn. The field is wasted, the land mourneth; for the corn is wasted: the new wine is dried up, the oil languisheth. Be ye ashamed, O ye husbandmen; howl, O ye vinedressers, for the wheat and for the barley: because the harvest of the field is perished. The vine is dried up and the fig tree languisheth; the pomegranate tree, the palm tree also, and the apple tree, even all the trees of the field, are withered: because joy is withered away from the sons of men." Joel 1:9-14.

There has to come a time when we reach the bottom of the pit into which we have fallen. There must be an hour when we have gone in the wrong direction just as far as possible. Sooner or later we must realize that we have gone so far in this wretched backsliding that we can go no further. If this young man could have gone any lower, no doubt he would have done it, but, as his innermost being ached with hunger and his eyes beheld the contented munching of the swine as they filled their bellies with husks, he suddenly 'came to himself' and began to realize just how far he had really fallen as he had wandered deeper and deeper into the systems of a worldly church until he was sucked into the whirlpool of her giddy activities to starve for spiritual life and food from heaven. Where was the rich bounty he once enjoyed as a true son of the Father in heaven? Where was the fire of Pentecost that made the sinner tremble, where the burning love that brought sweet unity, where the gifts of God that healed the nations, the purity of life that made sons of God as distinct from other men as sheep are distinct from swine? The unity of love had faded away and the substitute unity of organization had taken its place. He could see now that he had devoured his Father's inheritance with harlots, the harlots of religious denominations with which the very kings and priests of earth have committed fornication and adultery. Relationship with them is spiritual adultery because adultery is the mingling of seed, and the moment a man who is joined to the Lord begins to be joined to these sordid systems of earth, he mingles the seed of God with the corrupt seed of earth and thus becomes a spiritual adulterer. When a woman who is joined to a man begins to play fast and loose with another man, she is guilty of adultery. Even so he who is joined to the Lord, yet has intercourse with the godless systems of the world, is also guilty of adultery. "He hath devoured Thy living with harlots," said the older son, Luke 15:30, and so he had. The harlots are the religious denominations of the church systems. Nothing on earth can equal their ability to rob a man of his true inheritance with God. Well did Solomon say, "Give not thy strength to women nor thy ways to that which destroyeth kings." Prov. 31:3

Thus at last the young son came to himself to vividly see the pitiful condition he was in. Would to God that tens of thousands of spiritual young men would 'come to themselves'. Would to God they would wake up to behold the damning effects of their association with these harlot systems. God has awakened many in this present hour to the realization that they are wasting their strength in spiritual swine pens. He has awakened them to see that they are being fed spiritual husks fit only for swine. Yet for all this many run here and go there, hopefully seeking this preacher and that, this healer and that, this program and that, this new scheme and that, always deceived, always deflated, always disappointed. When, oh when, will people really come to themselves and confess that they are perishing with hunger and no man is giving them anything? I am frankly amazed to find that, though many people plainly recognize the coarse and shoddy nonsense that is poured out in the name of the gospel, they continue to attend and listen, remaining faithfully married to this harlot thing. It is time to 'come to yourself.'

"I will arise and go to my father." This is the decision that above all others must finally be made. There must come a time when all prodigal sons will make up their minds with honest conviction to arise and retrace their steps back to our heavenly Father. Can the Ethiopian change his skin or the leopard his spots? Certainly not. Neither can the swine be changed to sheep, or swine pens to sheepfolds. What then are we waiting for? It is time to leave the swine to contentedly munch their husks. It is time to leave those behind who want to stay to feed them. It is time to rise up in firm decision and conviction and walk out of the whole sordid business. It is time to arise, not to change the swine pen into a sheepfold, or to reform the harlots of the land, but it is time, high time, past time to rise up and go to our heavenly Father.

Before the day comes when God according to the word of the prophet will restore the years that the palmerworm, the locust, the cankerworm, and the caterpillar have eaten, Joel 2:25, the sons must return to the Father. We have seen in the vision of the Laodicean church; the church at the end of the age, that Christ is standing outside the door. We have noticed that he is no longer speaking to the church as a group, but He is speaking to individual hearts, individual prodigal sons. Have you never heard Him say, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock. If any man hear My voice and open the door, I will come in to him and sup with him and he with Me?" Rev. 3:20 To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My throne, even as I overcame and am sat down with My Father in His throne." God is not calling sinners here. He is calling His sons, His prodigal sons. He is not speaking en masse. He is speaking to individuals.

The time has come and now is when all who possess the hope of sonship will of necessity be obliged to forsake the harlots and swine pens with which they are entangled, forsaking all else that they may enjoy the true relationship of a son with the Father. We are going to have to desist from earthly leaders, making Jesus Christ our Lord and Head. We are going to have to throw our doctrines in the garbage as Paul did, Phil. 3:4-9, and be instructed of the Lord. We are going to have to refuse the mind of man and all his earthly opinions that the mind of Christ may dwell in us richly. Too long we have been fed stale skim milk from a theological eye-dropper. It is time to go back to Father where there is bread and to spare, not only for sons, but for the most insignificant servant as well.

Repentance became uppermost in the heart of this young man until it filled his being with remorse. He longed to tell his father that he had done the wrong thing in wasting his precious inheritance with women. In the depths of his heart he knew he was no longer worthy to be called a son. So great was his sorrow for the years wasted with harlots that his soul would have rejoiced forever had his father but placed him among the lowliest servants. The thing above all else that leads to true repentance is awakening. We can never repent of anything until we have had our eyes opened wide to its evil. We must know not only that we have sinned, but that we have done wrong in sinning. We must become fully aware that our greatest wrong is that we have offended God. Well might the apostle James repeat the cutting words to all who are joined to these harlot systems today: "Ye adulterers and adulteresses, know ye not that friendship with the world is enmity with God?" Paul once said, "He that committeth fornication sinneth against his own body," and from this precept I will add that all who commit fornication with these harlot systems are sinning against the body of Christ, for he which is joined to an harlot is one flesh.

A few years ago, because of light and understanding the Holy Spirit had poured into my heart, I fell afoul of the people with whom I had long associated. Being forbidden to preach these truths among them, I felt it my duty to begin to raise up other assemblies who would receive such precious revelation. Nevertheless, as meetings continued, it became more and more evident that we were missing the mark in some way. But was not this the way it had always been done? Were we not taking the only possible road open to us? What else was there to do? As we earnestly sought God about it all, these words of a scripture came forcefully into my heart: "Now consider this, ye that forget God, lest I tear you to pieces and there be none to deliver. Whoso offereth praise glorifieth Me: and to him that ordereth his conversation aright will I show the salvation of God." Psalms 50:22-23

Then He spoke to my heart, showing me definitely that, if we did not drop the whole business of meetings, He would tear it all to pieces. It was plain to see that God was seeking a people who would walk before Him, and glorify Him with lives of praise. He wanted, not more meetings and another sect, but the return of all His prodigal sons from the far country into which they had wandered to live before Him as sons of God.

Immediately upon receiving this new understanding, I contacted the assemblies with which I was associated, telling them the understanding I had received and requesting that for the time being at least we would cease from formal gatherings, assembling only as the Spirit of God should lead. To this they gladly consented. And now I must testify that, since the people have begun to desist from their association with these sects and denominations, together with their hireling ministry, their worldly organization, and their multiplied programs, a great change has taken place in many lives. Men and women who floundered along as helpless as infants all their lives are finding the strength and power of sonship in their new relationship with God. Instead of knowing traditions, programs, and human ideas they are coming to know God, and instead of being one flesh with a harlot system they are becoming one spirit with the Father. It is time to arise and go to the Father with the heart-felt confession, "Father, I have sinned."

Our heavenly Father knows that somewhere in His infinite plan it has been necessary for His sons thus to wander that they might learn how fruitless are our lives when wasted in building up earthly systems, all of which will be left without one stone upon another. Every denomination that man has built will be wiped out in the end, for the world passeth away and the lusts thereof, but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever. Our association with the multitudinous activities of organized religion means nothing. Our relationship to our heavenly Father means everything. He arose and came to his father, hallelujah! But when he was yet a great way off, his father saw him and ran and fell on his neck and kissed him; and the son said, Father, I have sinned against heaven and in thy sight and am no more worthy to be called thy son. But the father said to his servants, "Bring forth the best robe and put it on him, and put a ring on his hand, and shoes on his feet: and bring hither the fatted calf and kill it, and let us eat and be merry, for this my son was dead and is alive; lie was lost and is found, and they began to be merry." A whole eternity of heavenly merriment will have begun for all the creation of God when the sons have returned from their poverty, the husks, the harlots, and the beggars rags to wear the robes of kings and priests, and the ring that bears the signet of the authority of the eternal Father, having their feet shod with the shoes of the preparation of the gospel of peace. Gone forever are the husks of swine and in their place that fatted calf of the abundance of eternal truth.
We are living in a day when Christianity has degenerated into a respectable social system that belongs to the present world order. No longer are Christians looked upon as a separate people, called out of the world, but Christianity and the church system have now become recognized as an integral part of the world system, and Christians love to have it so. But the truth forever persists that the world is the enemy of all righteousness. Therefore, all who would be one with the Father must cease to be one with the systems of earth. For this very reason Paul said, "Wherefore come out from among them and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you and I will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." Cor. 6:17-18

Not Athen's blooms, but those of Calvary
And Gethsemane bring the victory
That causes prodigals for home to pine,
And turn their backs for aye on husks of swine.

CHAPTER SIX
SEEKING — LOVING — ABIDING

As the prophet Daniel drew near the end of his earthly ministry, he set his heart to seek God with prayer and fasting and was visited by an angel whom he describes as a man. Dan. 10:5 From the remarkable description given in verse 6 this heavenly visitor must certainly have been the same wonderful being seen by John the apostle and described by him in Revelation 1:13-18, for Daniel said, "His body was like the beryl, and his face as the appearance of lightning, and his eyes as lamps of fire, and his arms and his feet like in color to polished brass, and the voice of his words like the voice of a multitude." This could have been none other than the Lord Himself, and it is worthy of note that in verse 17 Daniel addressed this celestial visitor as "Lord."

So important was the message given to Daniel on this occasion that its truth was not left to angels, but given by the pre-incarnate Christ Himself. Because the message concerns the end time, even the days in which we now live, the vision was a representation of the Christ as He will appear in His wonderful fullness at the end of this age of grace. Christ in His completeness will be a multitude, a vast family of chosen sons, one glorious body of which He is Lord and Head. The voice of that many-membered body will be the voice of a multitude.

Vast and varied were the details unfolded in the vision of that day. As we now look back upon it as history, we see clearly the infinite accuracy of the prophetic forecast given in that hour, but Daniel, held dumb and spellbound with fear and awe, ventured at last the question of his heart: "O my Lord, what shall be the end of these things?" Dan. 12:8. Though the answer to his question seems at first to be negative, in it, in fact, is a vast realm of truth wide open to all who are wise in God. "The words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end. Many shall be purified, and made white, and tried..." Dan. 12:9-10 I need not remind you that this separation, purification, making white, and being tried is now at this moment in progress as men and women are being called by Christ to leave the systems, the sects, the denominations and to abandon traditions, cavilings, and all the rest and "go unto Him without the camp, bearing His reproach."

None of the wicked shall understand. The wicked continue to do wickedly and their wickedness is increasing by such enormous strides that our very imagination is staggered. So great is the present iniquity of the earth that we may be sure the seals have been broken and the bottomless pit has been opened that every iniquitous and devilish thing may come forth unhindered. Day after day we asked ourselves the question, "How much further can men go in their iniquity and rebellion against God? How much more filth can be connived and produced by the corrupt carnal mind? How much more violence and spoil will spue out over the earth?" The answer to our question is simply this: The pit is bottomless. Rev. 9:1-2

Though none of the wicked shall understand, there is a blessed hope for those few people who are wisely deserting everything that savors of the world system that they might flee away to their eternal refuge, even the "secret place of the Most High." Of these wise ones it is written, "But the wise shall understand." Dan. 12:10. In these present days of turmoil and trouble such as have never visited the earth hitherto there is nothing more precious or wonderful, nothing that can bring such quietness and peace as an understanding heart. The man who is in confusion is always the man who does not understand what is happening. Men and even children are being pressured into insanity because they do not understand. Do you know that today the majority of people entering mental hospitals and institutions for the insane are young people? These are people who understand nothing of what life and the world and godliness are all about. The loving companions of understanding are rest and eternal peace. From understanding flows the knowledge that all that is transpiring is according to the word of the Lord, and everything everywhere is working together for good to those who love Him.

In this time of trouble, Daniel was told, "Thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book," Dan. 12:1, and he was also told that many should be purified, verse 10, and that many would run to and fro, and that knowledge would be increased. Verse 4. Since the splitting of the atom and the coming of the computer man's knowledge has so greatly increased that during the last ten years the accumulated knowledge of the past six thousand years has been doubled. Wonderful as this may seem, let us not forget that the doubling of the knowledge of the carnal mind has succeeded only in multiplying the world's trouble and sorrow. Man would be an optimist indeed to imagine that the present generation, under whose wisdom nations and empires are falling apart as they strike and bomb and riot themselves into oblivion, is possessed of one-tenth the fortitude and stability that urged their forefathers to carve empires from the tractless wilderness and forge nations that would shed their blessing over all the earth. In the face of the vast increase of knowledge in every known science evil men and seducers wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived. There is more war, more divorce, more broken homes, more drunkenness, more mind and soul-destroying drugs, more sickness and disease, more poverty in the midst of plenty, more slums and ghettos, more pollution, more ungodliness, more crime, and, in short, more of every bad and evil thing. How true are the apostle's words, "The wisdom of this world is foolishness with God," 1 Cor. 3:19, and again, "The foolishness of God is wiser than men." 1 Cor. 1:25

Now when the angel said, "Knowledge shall increase," there is no reason for us to imagine that only the knowledge of the world would increase. There is knowledge far surpassing the knowledge of the world. It is the knowledge of God. It is concerning the increase of this knowledge that we now wish to speak. "The wise shall understand," saith God, and surely in this, the end of the age, a chosen people will arise who are by no means ordinary, but men and women whose lives are held in such communion and contact with God that the most intimate secrets of the hour will be vouchsafed to them.

During the past months an ever, increasing conviction has come stealing over the meadows of my soul, telling me in no unmistakable terms that the wise, the godly, the elect of God, are about to enter upon a new realm of understanding and wisdom, a new and abiding relationship with Him.

Long, long ago Jesus said to Peter, "And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." Matt. 16:19 Surely this is a marvelous statement and, if we give earnest heed to it, we will discover there are many keys offered to us in God's word. The plan of man is to keep the keys well hidden. He does not lock the door and leave the key for the burglar to see. But God, though He has seen fit to lock the doors of wisdom and understanding against the wise of this world and against the possessors of the carnal mind and all those who tenaciously hold the traditions of the religious systems of the earth, has also seen fit to leave the keys to His wisdom, His understanding, and His kingdom in plain sight of those who have the spirit of revelation. Some one has said, "The best way to hide a thing is to leave it lying around." This may be true or false, but, though God in wisdom has left the keys in plain sight, man has become so blinded by tradition, doctrine, works, rules, regulations, and opinions that he cannot see nor grasp the keys that open the storehouses of the Lord. He cannot touch the magic lock that releases the fountain of living water, nor can he ever discover the source of that faith that makes rivers of living water to flow from his innermost being.

As we walk through the wilderness of this world, it is becoming increasingly evident to some, if not to many, that we are being prepared to enter into new relationships with our heavenly Father and with His Son, Jesus Christ. It cannot be for naught that the Spirit is calling, "Come out of her, My people." As He called His people out of Egypt's bondage in the long ago, so today He is calling His chosen people out of the systems of religion today. His purpose then in leading them out of Egypt was that He might lead them into Canaan; His purpose today is that He might lead them into a new relationship with Himself. Let those who read the following lines pray earnestly that God would grant them the spirit of wisdom and revelation that the eyes of the understanding may be opened and enlightened to see the truth that is now set before them, for herein lies one of the great hidden treasures of the kingdom of God. The opening of this door to our understanding makes wisdom and spiritual sense of all we have previously written. Furthermore, the revelation of this truth to our hearts will display the utter necessity of freeing ourselves from every last vestige of the Babylon of the world system and the Babylon of the religious system.

In the simplest possible language the truth is this: When God made man in the beginning, man lived and moved and had his being under the glory, the sovereignty, and the dominion of God, but, the moment man fell, he became the groveling, sweating slave of the world system, under the shadow of which he labors in vanity until he returns to the dust from whence he came.

We have no way of knowing just how many years or perhaps centuries Adam lived in the blessed first state of sonship to enjoy the surpassing glory of God's dominion, but let us be assured that it was long enough for him to discover and remember forever how excellent it was to live and move and have his being beneath the shadow and dominion of Him whose wisdom is omniscient, whose power is almighty, whose purposes are immutable, whose holiness is unspeakable, whose grace is everlasting, whose peace is all-encompassing, and whose love is eternal. And what shall we say of health, joy, and happiness that flowed like a crystal river from the very fountain of God's throne? Words such as sickness, pain, death, sorrow and war were unknown in the vocabulary of Eden, the garden of God. Such words as fear, hate, strife, and debate were never spoken. Man, walking in the glory and love of the kingdom and dominion of God, derived his wisdom from God's mind, his boundless health and physical strength from the indwelling presence and glory of God's Spirit. Such, then, as my limited and only partially enlightened heart can describe it, was man's exalted place of ecstasy as he lived and walked in the wonderful glory of the dominion of the Lord. Long, long the heart desires to linger, if only in meditation and memory of that supernal state, and loath we are to return from the garden of our dreaming to the harsh realization that we no longer walk in its sunshine and its shadow. But, courage, saint of God, for the flaming sword no longer menacingly flashes, turning every way to guard the path to the tree of life! Blood more sacred and powerful than that of goats and bullocks has been shed to pardon all our sin, and better blood than that of Abel was given to us by the Son of God on that night when in anticipation of His death He took the cup, saying, "This cup is the new covenant in My blood. Drink ye all of it."

The life, praise God, is in the blood, and that precious blood of life was given not only for me, but to me as well till even now in my innermost being my spirit leaps in the anticipation that the day is not far hence when that same blood, which was given for the life of the whole world, will course through the veins of all who live in Him, bringing incorruption, immortality, and eternal life.

It now becomes necessary to consider the second part of the truth we have proposed above, namely, that, when man fell, he became the groveling slave of this world's system. It would be a waste of time and space to endeavor to relate with any degree of fullness the extent of corruption into which man has fallen. Let it suffice that we say enough to open the eyes of our understanding to an awareness of our present cruel bondage to the world system. It is when we grasp the truth that we are given the faith to act upon it. It was after Noah was warned of a flood that he built an ark in faith to preserve his household. It was after Lot was warned of the impending destruction of Sodom that he fled from its precincts. When you and I are awakened to the enslaving power of the world system in which we daily grovel as slaves, we will embrace the promises and use the keys, which open the door of our prison house and the gates of the kingdom of God as well.

So man in his disobedience and willfulness departed from his lordly place of sonship in the dominion of God, and, in departing, he fell immediately into the bondage and slavery of the world system. From that day to this, like the prodigal son, he has been a tired, sweating, burden-ridden slave to the ever, increasing ramifications of the world system. Consider the lot of man today and you will see that his whole existence is a struggle. Like a drowning man, violently struggling to keep his head above water, he thrashes about, grasping for every straw that he hopes will save him, until he sinks beneath the sucking whirlpool to be laid in the realm where "the dead know not anything." The world system is the same cruel task-master whether it be in those dark lands where men, women and children with hollow eyes and stick-like legs extend their bony hands to passers-by for a morsel or a crumb to ease the nagging of their bloated bellies or whether it be in those affluent lands where over-stuffed bodies loll in ease and roll in coaches, "having eyes full of adultery and that cannot cease from sin." Do not the affluent complain of the "rat race", the taxes, the smog, the pollution, the crime, the violence, and the filthy ghettos? Do not the hearts of these affluent people fail because of the pressure of the system until the heart attack has become the most devastating killer among us? Are not the hospitals crowded with people suffering every imaginable disease and torment - ulcers from worry, cancers from smoking, disgusting venereal diseases, the righteous fruit of our degraded morals? Our homes are broken by the millions. Every third marriage ends in divorce, and in some counties there is a divorce for every marriage. Can we not see the travail and hear the groaning of men, every one of whom is a bond slave to the world system - that deceiving devil of which the religious systems and denominations are a thriving part? They are false christs, ever barring the way to true unity with God the Father and God the Son.

All governments of earth, whether they be democracies, monarchies, dictatorships or any other, are all part and parcel of the world system. However honest they may try to be, their citizens live in bondage to them and, when finally the weight of their bondage becomes unbearable, they rise in rebellion to throw it off, only to adopt another of earth's systems, which will in turn bring them into bondage and make them its servant.

Child of God, give the ear of your spirit to the wisdom of the Almighty, for, when you do, God will make plain to your heart the enormous and all-encompassing extent of this world's system. Your eyes will see as never before the deceiving taskmasters under whose cruel whip you daily struggle. Do we not speak the truth when we say that life under the dominion of this world system is but a struggle for these three things - food, clothing and shelter? Food for the stomach, clothing to warm us and hide our nakedness, and shelter for our physical man that we perish not from the cruelty of the elements. Even while we read these lines andmeditate upon their sad truth, from one-half to two-thirds of the world's population have no other thought in mind than to worry about where their next meal will come from. The rags they wear on their emaciated bodies are scarcely fit to be used as floor mops and the shacks and dungeons in which they dwell, if they possess such at all, offer only the scantiest protection from the savage ravages of the unkind elements.

If by some miracle the wealthy nations of earth could empty their bins and give every scrap of surplus food that exists in their lands, it would ease the hunger of their suffering neighbors but very little, and for a very short time serve only to prolong their struggle for these three insatiable demands of the world system - food, clothing, and shelter. I am all for giving to the poor and needy of the earth and do so with meticulous care, but, as long as this world system abides, the words of Jesus are ever true: "The poor ye have with you always." No effort to create a "great society" either at home or abroad will alter that fact. As long as this world's evil system exists and man remains estranged from God, he will live beneath the scourge of these insatiable taskmasters - food, clothing, and shelter. It was to these very things Jesus referred when, speaking to those who were re-entering the realm of God's love and dominion, He said, "Take no thought, saying, What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink? or, Wherewithal shall we be clothed? (For after all these things do the Gentiles seek); for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things. But seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." Matt. 6:31-33

In contemplating this sublime truth, which fell in wisdom from the lips of our blessed Lord, were you not aware of the subtle unbelief that welled up in your heart? Was not your mind filled with "but, but, but?" Is it not true that your mind, so steeped in the ways of this world system, guarded and comforted itself by insisting, "But you must take thought. You must lay up in store. You can't be careless", etc., etc., etc. Jesus was not telling us to be careless or lazy. I cannot endure the sluggard whose field is filled with weeds or the slothful man that "roasteth not that which he took in hunting," but, wretched as such indolent people are, they are probably little worse than the man who works himself into a nervous breakdown in his determination to lay up food and clothing and shelter in ever increasing abundance. Our Lord was not telling us to be dilatory, but He was showing us what is wrong with the whole world. Fallen men seek first the things of the world system. After that, if they have a spare moment, they render lip service to the things of the kingdom of God, but their hearts abide still with the business of the world. Thus their lives become an endless struggle beneath the iron heel of the system with the question ever uppermost, "What shall we eat? What shall we drink? What shall we wear?" And we shall quickly add that when one has attained these things as much as necessary and needs no longer trouble about them, then he begins to seek them more abundantly and in excess of his need. He wants more and better of everything - more food, clothing, and shelter; better food, better clothing, and better houses to live in. In short, he seeks greater gratification of all the five senses of the flesh - more things to see, more to hear, more to taste, more to smell, and more to feel. In his unending search for more of these he finds no time to consider that all who live after the flesh have but one promise: They must die.

Since then all man's sorrow and confusion derives from his wickedness in forsaking God's dominion and willfully abandoning the glory of His kingdom in favor of this useless, fruitless, rewardless and evil world system, what better instruction could we now receive than this: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you"? Could such words of divine instruction be anything less than the wisdom of the eternal God? This instruction is, indeed, the first key to all God's abundance in wisdom, knowledge, righteousness, health, immortality and eternal life. Oh, what beggarly mendicants we Christians have become, who stand at the very gates of our Father's kingdom begging crumbs from the unmerciful hand of this world's system!

Listen to the voice of the Spirit and you will hear secret things shut up from the very gates of Eden. Look and you will see man so immersed and floundering in the world system that he dare not halt his slavish labor to seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness. He is so busy paying taxes that he does not know of a fish with a piece of money in his mouth. Matt. 17:27. He is so busy counting pennies with which to buy bread and finding them insufficient, John 6:7, that he does not know the Lord who multiplies loaves and fishes. So busy is he toiling all night and catching nothing that he has not discovered how God can give to those who seek first the kingdom miraculous draughts of fishes so great as to sink the boat beneath their weight. In short, he does not know the God of the kingdom, or that he will once again live and move and have his being in God as Adam did in the beginning.

Though our words are many concerning the world and its system, let us not forget that, when man forsook the dominion of God, it was not his body alone, but his spirit as well, that came under the dominion of the world system. The religious systems of earth, including the church system, are just as binding and tyrannical as the world systems. In fact, they are one and the same thing with it. It is a dreadful thing that Christians, after many years of religious life, should suddenly discover themselves to be slaves to a system rather than servants and sons of God. Christians have become such bond-slaves to the system, which they call the church that they are hindered from walking with God. They spend so much time re-hashing truths that they never come to know Him who alone is truth. So engrossed have men become in church projects, church doctrine, church meetings, church buildings, church orchestras, church Sunday schools, church Bible schools, church missions, church counseling, church visitation, and a hundred other things that, if they met Christ on the street, they would not recognize Him, but would hurry on their way to some function of that multi-headed monstrosity that saint and sinner alike insists is "the church."

May we once more call your attention to a very great and common error. There is but one church. That church consists of the first born whose names are written in heaven. Heb. 12:23. It is entirely wrong to speak of a denomination as "a church." It is wrong to refer to a sect as a "church". It is wrong to ask, "To what church do you belong", as though there were more than one church. It is wrong for a man who has come out from among them and who has fled from Babylon to declare, "I left the church." You did not leave the church, my brother, for you are the church. You left the system. You left Babylon. Do not write to me and say, "I came out of the church", for I will not believe you. It is the believers who constitute the church. It is the believer who is the church. The thing from which you came out is the system. Call it the church system if you must for reasons of identification, but it is really the world system, and the world system always has been Babylon, or confusion.

Even the blindest man must have noticed that every revival sent by God through the ages had its beginning outside the system which men erroneously call the church, but, as time passed away and love waxed cold, it gradually drifted away into the system. It developed traditions, embraced doctrines, built fences to keep its own people in and to declare to all without, "You cannot enter here unless you believe as we do and see eye to eye with us. We are right, and wisdom will die with us." Even in Paul's day Christians sectarian in spirit were hanging out their shingles, declaring, "I am of Paul; I am of Apollos; I am of Cephas; I am of Christ."

Did not the church, which for three hundred years walked under the dominion of Christ, fall beneath the ravages of the system we today call Rome? And why Rome, indeed? Was it not Jerusalem where Christ died and where the Spirit was outpoured? Is it not to Jerusalem that Christ will come again to set up His kingdom?
But the church of the living God fell beneath the delusion of the world system to become an harlot with one mother and a thousand daughters. How unutterably blind have God's people become that they cannot see that the very thing they love and cherish is indeed part of the system of the world! If we need further proof of it, we will find it in the endless cry of the church system for money, money, money. Every service has its appeal for money. Almost every broadcast has its appeal for money; and what printed paper is it that does not disgrace itself and show its colors by enclosing self-addressed envelopes, or by making appeals for your tithes and offerings? Shame on such a cursed system that makes the kingdom of God to be dependent upon and part of the world, and shame on you, too, oh man, that you have not known in what realm you dwell! The years have convinced me that they who do God's will never lack the means to carry it out, but those who beg and pry for money to carry out their aims are but children of the world's wicked system. They are promoters of their own causes. It is time to wake up. It is time to discover that God's people are dwelling in a far country. They are living on husks and feeding swine. It is time to go back to Father where there is bread enough and to spare for every son in His kingdom.

Many years ago Israel, who had walked under the direction of God, declared their desire for a king like all the nations round about them. 1 Sam. 8:1-6 "And it came to pass, when Samuel was old, that he made his sons judges over Israel... And his sons walked not in his ways, but turned aside after lucre, and took bribes, and perverted judgment. Then all the elders of Israel gathered themselves together, and came to Samuel unto Ramah, and said unto him, Behold, thou art old, and thy sons walk not in thy ways: now make us a king to judge us like all the nations. But the thing displeased Samuel, when they said, “Give us a king to judge us.” And Samuel prayed unto the Lord." From the days of Moses unto the last days of the prophet Samuel Israel had been a theocracy. Their nation was ruled and governed by the laws of God. God Himself had been their Lord and King, administering all His will through His servants the prophets and the judges in Israel. Wonderful had been the success and victory of this tiny nation at all times as its people walked with God. No enemy had stood before them, no sickness had molested them, and the fear and dread of them was upon all the nations round about. "He suffered no man to do them wrong: yea, He reproved kings for their sakes; saying, Touch not mine anointed, and do My prophets no harm." Psa. 105:14-15

Now at the close of Samuel's life the scene changes. The elders of Israel gathered themselves before Samuel, saying, "Make us a king to judge us like all the nations." What a dreadful decision this was that the only theocracy on earth should reject the government and Lordship of God, embrace the world system, and demand to be like all the other nations! But is not this the spirit of people in all ages! How many are there even among those who read this message who can bear to be different? The world is full of conformists. "Everybody does it" is the worn-out phrase. Even children must dress as all the others. Older people, too, must do as others do. Everybody does it, so you do it too. Everybody comes under the system, so you come under it, too. Everybody bows to the image of Babylon, so you bow down, too. How refreshing it must be to the heart of God to find that, when the whole nation demands a king, there is one man who refuses all kings but God, the King of kings! How blessed, when all men bow to the image of Baal, to find seven thousand "queer" people who refuse to bow! How precious, when all men in groveling abasement and subserviency make request and prayer unto Nebuchadnezzar, to find one man who has his window open toward Jerusalem as he kneels down three times a day to make request only to Go & Dan. 6:10. How wonderful, when a whole nation is falling down to do obeisance before the giant golden image of Nebuchadnezzar, to find three men who are standing erect! Dan. 3:1-17.

The millions of earth find it very easy and convenient to flow along with the masses, but with all seriousness let me warn you that it will be the men and women who walk with God, masses or no masses, who will reign with Christ in the glory of His kingdom. The days in which we live are tremendous days of testing. Our examinations are being written and passed or failed every day without our knowledge that we are being examined. Samuel was full of grief when Israel demanded a king to reign over them, and with words of terrifying import he warned them of their folly, saying, "This will be the manner of the king that shall reign over you: He will take your sons, and appoint them for himself, for his chariots, and to be his horsemen; and some shall run before his chariots. And he will appoint him captains over thousands, and captains over fifties; and will set them to ear his ground, and to reap his harvest, and to make his instruments of war, and instruments of his chariots. And he will take your daughters to be confectionaries, and to be cooks, and to be bakers. And he will take your fields, and your vineyards, and your olive-yards, even the best of them, and give them to his servants. And he will take the..."
tenth of your seed, and of your vineyards, and give to his officers, and to his servants. And he will take your menservants and your maidservants, and your goodliest young men, and your asses, and put them to his work. He will take the tenth of your sheep; and ye shall be his servants. And ye shall cry in that day because of your king which ye shall have chosen you; and the Lord will not hear you in that day." 1 Sam. 8:11-18.

How frequent in the above passage is the use of the word take] He will take your sons, take your daughters, take your fields, take your vineyards, and take your servants. Yes, and he will take you as well. Is that not a picture of the system under which we dwell? Whether it be political Babylon or religious Babylon makes no difference. The rulers take, take, take, take — to waste and waste more and more. Under the world system all and everything that belongs to God goes to the gluttonous and insatiable system while God abides in the shadows to be worshipped and adored by a few foolish, but elect, people who refuse to bend the knee to the image of Babylon. Our blessed Lord Jesus Christ, He who will soon reign in that kingdom of God which shall embrace the whole earth, left us this implicit and wise instruction: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."

There is a vast difference between those who belong to the religious system and those who walk before God ignoring systems and loving only Him. This truth is greatly emphasized by the following question and the eternal truth of the answer. "Judas saith unto Him, not Iscariot, Lord, how is it that Thou wilt manifest Thyself unto us, and not unto the world? Jesus answered and said, If a man love Me, he will keep My words: and My Father will love him, and We will come unto him, and make Our abode with him." John 14:22,23. This conversation between Jesus and Judas reveals the very source and foundation from which a Christian life grows and increases more and more in grace and strength, wisdom and holiness. It is the indwelling presence of God the Father and God the Son. The key that unlocks this magic fountain of divine glory is revealed in these words, "If any man love Me." Why does God fail to reveal Himself to those who have settled down to the denominational system, which is in truth the world? Why do they go on decade after decade proclaiming the truth that God revealed to them in A.D. 1700, or 1906, or 1948? It is because they have become old wine skins and, if they dared to accept new truth, their lovely old wine bottle would burst. They do not know that they have come to love the wine skin more than the wine and the deadness of their profession more than God and His ever, increasing revelation. They who long to have Christ reveal Himself to them must first love Him enough to abandon the system; otherwise they will die in their bondage to it.

The question of Judas was prefaced by the revealing words of Jesus: "He that hath My commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth Me: and he that loveth Me shall be loved of My Father, and I will love him, and will manifest Myself to him." John 14:21 The knowledge of God and of things eternal does not come by much study. It does not come by much wading through the endless volumes of the works of men, nor yet by devoted constancy to meetings or mass. The knowledge of God comes simply by loving Christ. He who loves Christ and lives in adoring contemplation in His presence is wiser and more knowledgeable in all eternal things than he would be though his instructors were ten thousand. There is a strange and wonderful element in love, which miraculously calls forth all secret things. We do not tell our deep secrets to those who hate us, but we reveal them betimes to those who love us and who are loved of us. Thus it is with God and with His Son, Jesus Christ, who willingly opens His heart and manifests Himself to those who love Him.

There is nothing complicated about love. Like grief or sorrow it is simple, unassuming, and sincere. The silent tear that falls unbidden from the eye of the sorrowing expresses in the simplest and most eloquent terms possible the grief which fills the heart. John was the disciple "whom Jesus loved" simply because John was the disciple who loved Jesus. It was he who in simplicity and purity of love laid his head on Jesus' breast, and he alone heard the words, "He it is to whom I shall give a sop, when I have dipped it." John 13:26 He it was who stood with Him in Pilate's hall when all others had fled; and he alone, with some women who loved Jesus, stood by the cross. It was to John that Jesus committed the keeping of His aging mother. John 19:26-27 It was John who was so quick to see and believe the resurrection, John 20:8, while Peter departed, wondering in himself. Luke 24:12 It was John who said, "It is the Lord", when they saw Jesus standing on the shore. John 21:7 In the light of these things is it any wonder that it was unto this beloved disciple that the last acts of this age were revealed, or that he above all other apostles should exhort men everywhere to walk in love, for there is no fear in love, but perfect love casteth our fear?
Wisely did the scribe speak when he said to Jesus, "Well, Master, Thou hast said the truth: for there is one God; and there is none other but He: and to love Him with all the heart, and with all the understanding, and with all the soul, and with all the strength, his neighbor as himself, is more than all whole burnt-offerings and sacrifices. And when Jesus saw that he had answered discreetly, He said unto him, Thou art not far from the kingdom of God." Mark 12:32-34 Consider the boundless wealth that lies hidden in this gold mine of God's eternal truth.

Oh, that men who name the name of Christ and who profess to serve Him would really love Him in spirit and in truth! Then would He be unto them their eternal source and endless supply, their beginning and their end, their first and their last. Day after day, week after week, I hear the din and clamor of people crying, "We need one another! We need one another! We must have fellowship! We can't get along without one another." But few I hear breathing out the adoring contemplation, "I need Thee; oh, I need Thee. More love to Thee, oh Christ; more love to Thee." Have you ever taken time to consider that the incessant clamor for fellowship with men arises from the dearth of fellowship with God and His Son, Jesus Christ? The age of law was full of men crowding the altars with burnt-offerings and sacrifices, but having no love for God in their hearts. The age of grace and the church system are likewise full of men and women crowding what George Fox aptly described as "the steeple houses" men and women full of many good works and alms, but in whose hearts there is but little love for and fellowship with the Christ of God. It is time to turn from the abominable vanities of the system that we may return to the beauty of OUT first love and find once again its simplicity as it is in Jesus Christ.

A sister of many years, who had spent much of her Christian life absorbed in activities and surrounded by many people, wrote to me recently to say, "I am beginning to find that it is not people I need; it is Jesus Christ." And was not this the very gist of Christ's message to that dear girl, Martha, who always stood ready and eager to serve? "Martha, Martha, thou art troubled about many things. But one thing is needful; and Mary hath chosen that good part which shall not be taken away from her."

The following paragraph from a letter received from a young man in Christ is worthy to be read by all men, for it bespeaks the important truth of the hour in which we live. "For some unexplainable reason I have lately been possessed of a conviction that a new drawing near to Him is in order, as though we were on the verge of something of eternal significance. If I could tell time, as He could, I would suggest that the time has come for the end of the double mind. We have been of a divided mind and a divided loyalty and a divided attention long enough. The time seems to have come for us to be of a new devotedness, a new mind, and a new spirit." How true this paragraph is! And may I add that many, many thousands more, now scattered in all corners of the world, are of this same conviction. The time has indeed come for a new devotedness and a new drawing near, an end to the double mind and a new choosing of that good part that shall never be taken away from us.

In this great hour of universal turmoil and upheaval I am positive of this one thing: God is shaking everything that can be shaken, that only the things which cannot be shaken may remain. What is more unshakable than love? For God Himself is love, and he who loves God with all his heart is made perfect in Him. And now abideth faith, hope, and love, and the greatest of these is love.

No man who ever lived unfolded such superlative truth as our Lord Jesus Christ. The truths He uttered were far beyond the wisdom of philosophers and sages, for Christ Himself both were and are the truth. Of Moses the poet Alexander wrote:

Never earth's philosopher traced with his golden pen
As he wrote down for men.

But Paul declared that Moses was a servant in God's house; but Christ was a Son in His own house, which house we are. Wonderful as were the words of Moses, the servant of God, nothing can compare to the heights to which Jesus led us. A life time is insufficient to fathom the depths of the sermon on the mount, and eternity alone will make clear the mysteries of the wonderful body of Christ of which Jesus spoke, saying, "In My Father's house are many mansions." The Father's house is not a massive mansion somewhere beyond the blue. It is something more wonderful far than that. It is the abode of God, which we, the members of Christ's mystical body, are becoming. It is the habitation of God through the Spirit. He showed Himself to be the shepherd of a vast flock of sheep, and also He proclaimed Himself to be the door by which the sheep should enter into His fold. He showed Himself to be a veritable fountain of living water, of which if any man drink, he will thirst nevermore. He proclaimed Himself to be the bread of God, which came down from heaven, of which if a man should eat, he would never die. He spoke also of His blood, which was to be given for the life of the world. And He gave us the key by which we might be partakers of better blood than that of Abel, saying, "This cup is the new covenant in My blood. Drink ye all of it." Partake of it, all of you, for it is given to you for the life of the world.

After telling us all these sources of eternal life, He likened Himself to a vine with many branches running in all directions, even branches which run over the wall to bring His life-giving fruit to all creation, saying, "I am the true vine, and My Father is the husbandman. Every branch in Me that beareth not fruit He taketh away: and every branch that beareth fruit. He purgeth (pruneth) it, that it may bring forth more fruit. Now ye are clean through the word, which I have spoken unto you. Abide in Me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit except it abide in the vine, no more can ye, except ye abide in ME. I am the vine. Ye are the branches: He that abideth in Me and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit; for without Me ye can do nothing." John 15:1-5

Perhaps it is superfluous to remind you that branches cut off from the vine wither and die, losing all ability to bear the precious fruit of God. The diligent and loving people who read these words must consider how great and important they are: "The branch cannot bear fruit except it abide in the vine; no more can ye except ye abide in Me." Wonderful were the words of Jesus when He said, "I am the door: by Me, if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out and find pasture." John 10:9 But more wonderful still were His words to the church at Philadelphia: "Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of My God, and he shall go no more out." Rev. 3:12 There are thousands, perhaps millions, of saved people who continually go in and out. They go in to find pasture and take a little sip of spiritual water to momentarily cool their parched tongues, but their main interest and often their main love is found without in the vanity of this present evil world. Christians who once basked in the wonder of their first love hate to admit that today they love the world system, a place where people go when there is nothing else to do, a place home has become a convenient flop house, a place where people go when there is nothing else to do, a place

There must come a time and that without delay when the true members of Christ's mystical body "abide in Him." They must go no more out, for in Him alone we live and move and have our being. We are now in the most serious hour of all history. I cannot believe that the days of Noah were more appalling in violence, in crime, in immorality, and evil imaginations than in our day, nor can I believe that the tremendous hours through which Moses lived were more important than those in which we now live. Wonderful beyond the high praises of angels and archangels was the work and ministry of our Lord Jesus Christ. Endless was the fruit of His death and inscrutable the work of His resurrection. But we now live in the hour when the work of the immutable architect is nearing its completion. The body of Christ is almost ready to stand upon its feet to be filled with the breath of the Eternal. It is ready to open its mouth that the words as of a multitude may come forth, even the sound of many, many waters. The mystical body of Christ, the sonship company, is God's masterpiece of all ages past or present. This is the company who will reign with Christ for one thousand years, that by them the earth may be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord as the waters cover the sea. This is the company who at the end of the millennial kingdom will become the Bridegroom. This is He who comes forth from His chamber to receive the bride, even that Holy City, New Jerusalem, which is the living bride of Christ, adorned and prepared for her husband. The body of Christ, the sonship company, is the temple of God. The bride is the New Jerusalem.

I fear that the vast majority of Christians fail to abide in Him. In the twentieth century, alas, the home has all but vanished. Seldom are eyes moistened by the plaintive singing of "Home, Sweet Home", but in millions of cases home has become a convenient flop house, a place where people go when there is nothing else to do, a place for children to grab a free meal and sleep in a free bed, a place to argue and fight, a place abandoned by Dad and Mom as they rush to work, often on different shifts, until it is a common thing for husbands and wives to see each other so seldom that they communicate by leaving notes for each other to read. Such as this is not home.

Now, am I wrong when I assert that this same spirit that has wrecked the home life of millions has also invaded our relationship with Christ? Are saved people abiding in Him or are they merely going in and out? To many Christians God has become a sort of doting old father to whom they can run when there is nowhere else to run and nothing else to do. Is our relationship to Him on the level of writing notes? Is it true that we know of no other abiding than those few minutes spent on Sunday morning or Wednesday evening in that place we insist upon calling the church? It is not right that the spirit of the world system, which reigns like a fat and pompous old king, should be allowed to rule over the members of Christ's body, for the branch cannot bear fruit except it abide in the vine. "The man who does not share My life," said Christ, "is like a branch that is broken off and withers away. He becomes just like the dry sticks that men gather up and use for firewood." John 15:6 (Phillips) See how apt an expression that is! Those who do not abide become like "dry sticks" that men gather up and burn for firewood.

"Without Me ye can do nothing." John 15:5 Perhaps in all the history of the world there was never a time when men were doing more work for God and accomplishing less. The schemes and programs of the church system are legion. Never are we allowed a moment's peace and quiet from their demands that we might walk and abide in Him. Our ears are continually bombarded by the din of the money changers crying money, money, money. The world system imagines that anything and everything can be accomplished with money and the religious system has adopted the same attitude until people are led to believe that even God is depending on the filthy lucre of this world's abominable system. Prov. 30:15 says, "The horse leach hath two daughters, crying, Give, give," and one would be caused to wonder if perchance in our day this tantalizing bloodsucker may also have some sons who claim to be the ministers of Christ. When do the people hear these preachers exhorting men to abide in God? When do they instruct their followers to live and move and have their being in Him? How few of God's people have ever learned the lesson, "without Me ye can do nothing"! How many of them reverence the truth that the branch cannot bear fruit except it abide in the vine? How few are they who share the promise that all who abide in Him bring forth much fruit!

The preachers of the church system are so busy telling God what He should do that they have no time to patiently discover what He would have them do. Their vast projects for missions and evangelism are the product of their own imaginations; therefore, their clamor for help and money from the people never ceases. Their projects, which they declare to be works of faith in God, are in fact carried on by begging from the people. That work is not a work of faith. Would God that all who read these lines would be awakened to see the abominable fraud of all such programs. These money-hungry preachers cannot find a counterpart for their rapacious ways either among the Old Testament prophets or the New Testament apostles, much less in the Lord Jesus Christ. The surest and most overt designation of a false ministry may be found in his incessant clamor for money.

"If ye abide in Me," said Jesus, "and My words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." John 15:7 How great a promise is this and yet how forthright is its rebuke! The cause for unanswered prayer is not to be found in the unwillingness of God, but in a people who do not abide in Him, who continually wander in and out, a people who, because of reasonings of the natural mind, know not the mind of God. In such a sad state the vast majority dwell. All over the world today Christian people try desperately to claim the promise, "Ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done", yet they know little but disappointment and unanswered prayer. They do not abide in Him; therefore, they do not know His mind. Thus in consequence all their prayers and all their requests come from the desires of their own minds and the lusts of their own hearts. As a result their prayer, not being of God's mind, goes unanswered.

Full well did James write, saying, "Ye have not because ye ask not. Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts." James 4:2-3 There in only one clear reason why it should be the people who abide in Him who are blessed with answered prayer. It is this: They make only those requests that the wisdom of God has put in their hearts. Like Elijah they can say, "I have done all these things at Thy
And like Jesus they can say, "I do only those things that please the Father." "Abide in Me and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit except it abide in the vine, no more can ye except ye abide in Me." As Jesus, weary with His journey, sat upon the well in Samaria, a woman came with her pitcher for water. Day after day through the years she had come to fill her vessel and curry it laboriously home to wash the dishes, scrub the floor, make the tea, water the goats and chickens, and return again to repeat the same drudgery. How well her task portrays the life of all God's people who daily labor beneath the mundane yoke of the system! "Give Me a drink," Jesus requested, but the woman instead gave him an argument as if to debate with Him the age, old dissension between Jews and Samaritans. Is not this the altitude of all who labor in bondage to the system! You believe this and I believe that, so we can minister naught to each other. We are cut off and eternally separated by our doctrine. Then said Jesus, "If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that said, Give Me to drink, you would have asked of Him, and He would have given you living water." "Sir," she argued, "you have nothing to draw with and the well is deep. From whence then hast Thou this living water?" Can you not see the image of sectarianism here? This is the well, the only well, and there is only one way to get the water out of it, and that is by dipping it out with this vessel I have in my hand.

But Jesus knew, as you and I should also know, that, if ever there is going to be a change, there must first of all be an awakening, a revelation of our bondage, and a corresponding thirst for freedom and a burning desire for truth that here and now in this present world we might live and rejoice in God's dominion. It is fruitless and useless to ask men to leave the system and flee out of Babylon until they first have been awakened to its enormous wickedness and despotic power to bind men in groveling slavery to all its abominable will. Therefore to awaken this woman to her need Jesus said, "Go call thy husband and come hither." "I have no husband," she replied. To this He answered in great kindness, "Thou hast well said, I have no husband, for thou hast had five husbands, and he whom thou now hast is not thy husband. In that saidst thou truly." How well His words of wisdom had done their work, for the moment she was awakened to her sin and bondage, spiritual perception and understanding began. "Sir," said she, "I perceive that Thou art a prophet." But, oh, how quickly she again took refuge behind the prison bars of the system! "Our fathers worshipped in this mountain," she argued, "and you say that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship. Who is right? Who is wrong? Let us settle this ancient religious argument. But Jesus knew that the answer to her need lay not in worshipping here or there, in this place or in that place. In this mountain or in Jerusalem was immaterial. But her need, like yours and mine, lay in communion and fellowship with God, abiding in Him who was her Father, your Father, and my Father, yes, and the Father of us all. Therefore, He filled her heart with the wisdom of this truth: "Woman, the hour is coming, and now is, when neither in this mountain nor yet in Jerusalem shall men worship the Father; but the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth; for the Father seeketh such to worship Him. God is a Spirit, and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth." John 4:23-24

"The woman then left her waterpot." What a statement that is! Here was one who, bound by the drudgery and the arguments and the doctrines of the system, found the key to freedom, the source of living water, and eternal truth, for, as soon as she heard that God was seeking a people loosed from the thraldom of tradition, of places of worship and things to believe, and that God Himself, being Spirit, is seeking a people who worship in spirit and in truth, she left her waterpot, that symbol of her perennial drudgery and bondage to tradition, and from the fountain of her new found relationship with God streams of living water began to flow as she testified neither of places, people, things, or doctrines, but cried, "Come see a man who told me all things that ever I did. Is not this the Christ?"

Here at the end of the age we stand together. While men are compassing land and sea to make their proselytes, bidding them worship here and there, in this mountain (building) or that, by this doctrine or that, Jesus is offering to you and me the key to abiding in Him. "God is Spirit, and they that worship Him must worship in spirit and in truth, for the Father seeketh such to worship Him."
CHAPTER ONE

AN OPEN LETTER

If all the things that should be written were written every one, "I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written." John 21:25. Thus wrote the disciple whom Jesus loved.

Chapter one of this Volume 24 is intended to be, as the title indicates, an open letter to all who read it. May it be to each one an earnest exhortation rather than merely a teaching. All the apostolic epistles were in reality letters, often addressed to individuals, sometimes to congregations and even nations. I pray that the pages of this chapter may be as a lamp to the feet of the believer and a light unto his pathway.

It is becoming increasingly clear to all who have a mind to understand that every indication and sign is pointing to the hour of the great unveiling of the sons of God. Your heart may often grow heavy and your eyes dim with waiting for your hopes to be fulfilled, but, as sure as God is on His throne, we are rapidly drawing near the end of this age with all its human rule, and we are coming quickly to the glorious kingdom age when the mind of Christ will reign and rule supreme. It should certainly not be difficult for us to see that, if men are to reign with Him in rest and peace in an age when Christ rules and God's will is done in the earth even as it is in heaven, then they must certainly here and now possess His mind and His will; for if there were even one carnal contrary mind among all the rulers of the kingdom, one mind that was not subject to Him, one mind that was contrary to Him, then the glorious kingdom of God would immediately become filled with the same wars and fightings that everywhere exist in increasing measure throughout the length and breadth of the world today. The kingdom would become filled with the same bickering, enmity, and strife that have always filled the pulpits and the individual lives of the members of the visible church.

The world has been governed by the carnal mind for six thousand years. Wars and rumors of wars have never ceased and never will while the carnal mind reigns. Israel in the Old Testament was often at war among the tribes and especially between the north and the south. At one time the tribe of Benjamin was almost entirely wiped out. So also the existing church for the past two thousand years has fought and bickered, quarreled and hurled insults. On occasion she has even taken up the sword and fought bloody battles in the open field, and on some occasions has even attempted to carry the gospel to the heathen on the point of a spear. The visible church has been governed by the carnal mind and there can never be peace and unity where even one carnal mind exists - certainly not when it bears authority.

Have you ever attended a session of parliament and listened to the arguing, the insults, the innuendos, the contradicting and all such like? As I once sat in the gallery of the legislature and listened to highly paid men wasting their time blasting each other, refuting each other, even threatening to fight each other, I wondered how men who professed to be statesmen doing the nation's business could descend to childish squabbling like little children arguing over a ball game. But that is the carnal mind. It can never agree. It can never be one, not even with itself; and when it comes to the mind of Christ, the carnal mind is not only a dissenter, but a bitter and hateful enemy.
We cannot be too explicit and strong in our exhortation regarding the mind of Christ. No man will rule with Christ in the kingdom unless that man has received the mind of Christ in (his present age. Let us not deceive ourselves about that. As sure as God is on His throne and we are breathing His air, no man will reign with Him in His kingdom unless he has received the mind of Christ in this present age. The kingdom of God is the mind of Christ. The kingdom of God is the will God. The kingdom of God is righteousness, joy, and peace in the Holy Ghost.

There are many useless ideas and misconceptions about the mind of Christ. Men can be found all over the earth who claim to have the mind of Christ - carnal men who resort to carnal means, who go right on carrying out carnal purposes, who are all entangled with Babylon's harlot system and have its name inscribed on their foreheads, who proudly bear the names of sects and denominations and go on building the visible things; men who trust in the visible realm and put confidence in the ability of money to propagate the program of God, who go all out for big and biggest, for large, giant and super, who clamor for crowds and human acclaim and love to be called Reverend or Doctor or Father or Teacher. Ah, wretched condition! It has nothing to do with the meekness and gentleness of Christ and nothing to do with His mind. It is rather the carnal mind that sits enthroned in the temple of the Lord.

Paul said, "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ." Many times before I have emphatically stated that the mind that was in Christ was the Father's mind, and Paul is exhorting us, yea, commanding us, to let the same mind, the Father's mind, dwell in us as it dwelt in the first Son, Jesus Christ Himself. What our mind is is what we are. What our mind is, is what we think. Therefore, if our mind is carnal, we think carnal, we act carnal, and we are carnal. But once the mind of Christ dwells in us, we think Christ, we act Christ, and we are sons of God and a joint heirs with Christ. We become other sons in that vast family of sons. Praise His name! Those who enter into this realm are born of God and cannot sin because they are born of God. Any man who sins has not yet seen Him and not yet known Him. Christ could not sin because of the mind of the Father. Neither will we be capable of sin when the same mind dwells in us.

The first necessity in receiving the mind of Christ is to realize that we have lived under the influence and power of the carnal mind. It has governed our thoughts and actions and has even deceived us into believing we possessed the mind of Christ. It is necessary to seek the cleansing of the blood of Christ that the old leaven of the carnal mind might be purged away by the blood, by the spirit of judgment, and by the spirit of burning. Do not deceive yourself into believing that you can rise in a moment from an altar of prayer and go out filled with the mind of Christ and completely free from the carnal mind. This just does not happen. The carnal mind is a strong man armed that keeps his house and keeps his goods in safety and he will never be dislodged until a man stronger than he (the mind of Christ) binds the strong man and casts him out and destroys his goods. See Luke 11:21-22

When Paul said, "Let this mind be in you," there was a whole world of truth in the little word "let". It is not striving to attain; it is striving to "let". I do not need to tell you that there is a titanic struggle involved for the following reasons: If we are going to "let" the mind of Christ dwell in us, then we will have to refuse to "let" the carnal mind dwell in us. That should be easy to understand. The carnal mind is concerned with the things of the earth and the things of the physical body of flesh. It seeks to satisfy the physical through gratification of the five senses of the body, for the sake of which the whole industry of earth is geared. Our whole trouble has been that we have been willing to let the carnal mind dwell in us. We have nourished it and fed it the things it desires with the consequence that it has grown stronger with the passing years, while the mind of Christ, being starved, has grown weaker within us until we never come under its influence or power. Just a glance into the realm of nature would surely teach us that it is the plant or animal that is fed that grows, and the thing that is starved is stunted. All natural things have spiritual counterparts. It is positively true, therefore, that to feed the carnal mind will make it grow to enormous proportions, but to starve it causes its crucifixion and death.

There are certain means by which the mind of Christ can be nourished and fed within us. Without these means we cannot even hope to see the mind of Christ coming to maturity. In Hebrews, chapter one, the writer unfolds some of the most astonishing wonders of God's purpose for His sons. He shows that God is preparing His sons to be lords and rulers of the glorious ages to come even as it is stated in chapter two, verse nine:
"For this subjecting of the universe to man implies leaving nothing not subject to him." (Weymouth) Just think of that! God has not planned to subject the coming ages to angels, but to man, to those men who have "let" the mind of Christ dwell in them and so have become sons of God walking in all His will. Is it any wonder, then, that, after outlining these wonderful purposes of God for man, the Holy Spirit should ask, "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?"

Have you ever considered the tragic results of neglect? Neglect is such a simple, easy thing. We do not have to go to a lot of trouble to neglect a thing. Usually neglect requires simply doing nothing. A man may pay ten thousand dollars for an elegant automobile and ruin it simply by neglecting to put a dollar's worth of oil in the crankcase. Hundreds of lives are lost every day because someone has neglected some very simple thing. A faulty electric wire is neglected and a house burns down. A faulty brake is neglected and a tragedy occurs on the highway. At school we used to recite:

For the want of a nail a shoe was lost;
For the want of a shoe a horse was lost;
For the want of the horse a rider was lost;
For the want of the rider the battle was lost;
And all for the want of a horse-shoe nail.

"I passed by the field of the sluggard, by the vineyard of the man without sense; and lo! it was all overgrown with thistles, its surface was covered with nettles, and its stone wall was broken down. I looked, and reflected upon it; I saw, and learned a lesson. A little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of hands to rest - so will poverty come upon you like a footpad, and want like an armed man." Proverbs 24:30-34 (Goodspeed)

However tragic neglect may be in the natural realm, it is not even a worthy comparison with the dire results of spiritual neglect, for they bear the import and impact of eternal things. They are freighted with eternal values beyond the power of angels and principalities to explain. It is no wonder, then, that the apostle warned, "How shall we escape if we neglect...." A man who is neglectful about spiritual things will be stricken with poverty in spirit. He will be empty and void of spiritual understanding. He will be without perception of spiritual revelation and truth. He will become sluggish and tend more and more to partake of the things that sustain and feed the carnal mind.

It is a most dangerous thing to neglect the word of God. Show me a man who neglects regular and systematic feasting upon the word of God and I will show you a man incapable of contributing anything to the spiritual uplift of anyone. I will show you a man who cannot understand the purpose of God and one unable to advance in truth, a man who cannot recognize truth when he hears it and who is easily deceived by error because he does not know the word of God. By its many symbols the word of God is pictured to be a lamp for light, Prov. 6:23, a mirror to picture us as we are, Jas. 1:5, a laver for cleansing, Eph. 5:26, a critic or discerner to criticize and exhort us. Heb. 4:12. It is food for the hungry, Job 23:12, milk for infants, Heb. 5:12-13, bread, Isa. 55:10, honey, Psa. 19:10, strong meat, 1 Cor. 3:2. It is fire, water, a sword, a hammer, a seed, and many other wonderful things that show in symbolic language the absolute necessity of reading the word of God.

We must not depend on what others tell us. We must know for ourselves. We cannot depend on prophecy alone. We must know what is written so that the Spirit can quicken it to our hearts. "To the law and to the testimony, if they speak not according to the word, it is because there is no light in them." Isa. 8:20 How often I have seen people searching in the Old Testament for New Testament books and vice versa! What a disgrace it is for men to be so neglectful of the thing they profess to love and desire that they have not even read the written account, cannot remember what it says, and do not refresh themselves with its food and drink abundantly every day! It is no wonder they have nothing uplifting to talk about and truth finds no response in them.

During the last few years I have been discovering that the time of day one reads the word of God is a most important thing. I make this prediction without hesitation or equivocation: If you, the reader of these lines, would spend at least one half hour before breakfast reading and prayerfully meditating on the things you read, your whole Christian life would change and spring into new abundance even as a wilted plant responds to showers, and bodies, emaciated from starvation, to nourishing food. You would find further that the word of God would cleanse you, for it is not only a mirror, but a laver of cleansing as well. Those who prayerfully read the word of God automatically find themselves bowing their heads in penitence and prayer as they read, for the word of God is a discerner or critic of the thoughts and intents of the heart. A man or a woman who goes all day without prayerfully reading the Bible does for his spirit the same thing that a day without food does for the body. It leaves it weak and unresponsive with flagging and failing desires. "The new wine mourneth, the vine languisheth, all the merry-hearted do sigh. The mirth of tabrets ceaseth, the noise of them that rejoice endeth, the joy of the harp ceaseth." Isa. 24:7-8 So also it is with those who starve the spirit. It languishes and is unresponsive.

The reading of the word of God should not be left until the evening. It should be done in the morning even as Israel gathered manna in the morning, for when the sun was up, it withered away and disappeared. If you do your reading first thing in the morning, you immediately open the gates that let in the flood tides of God and, though the rest of the day may require you to walk through the wilderness of this world, you are unaffected by it because streams of life are flowing in the desert and waters in a thirsty land. If on the other hand you leave your reading and communion with God until later in the day, you will find that, as the manna disappeared with the rising sun and the beginning of the day's business, so will disappear your ability to partake of the living waters that flow from His glorious throne and of the bread of life which He Himself is. There is abundant reason why Jesus Himself often rose a great while before day to get alone with God before the crowds gathered and activities began. I have no hesitation in saying that if Christian people would go to bed one hour earlier and rise one hour earlier to get in contact with God, their understanding would be enlightened. They would respond to true revelation and be filled with it themselves, and sonship and the manifestation of the sons of God would become a present and living reality instead of a dead issue that may happen to some lucky people in the far future.

One of the greatest means of grace ever given to Christians is the privilege of prayer. While I suppose much could be said about prayer, I am inclined to think that we could say much less and be more helpful. Very, very few Christians really pray or know anything about prayer. We need one great revolutionizing lesson about prayer and we need to forget most of the rubbish that has been taught us in the past. I have positively no hesitation in saying that most of the prayers that are offered are not prayers at all because they concern our own desires, our own wishes, our own troubles, and our own will. When the disciples asked Jesus to teach them to pray, He showed them an actual pattern to follow - first, in adoration and worship; secondly, concerning the coming of the kingdom; thirdly, a phrase of untold, unimaginable importance, "Thy will be done." But, alas, the prayers that are made in ever increasing number both from the pulpit and by the private individual are all too often a dissertation of our own will and a demand that God will do what we think and imagine He ought to do. We pray that God will save the heathen, not knowing that God has His own plans for the heathen, and that even now, as sure as they are bedeviled by the unrighteousness of an Adam they never knew nor heard of, so also they are redeemed by the righteousness of a glorious Son who declared that, when He was lifted up, He would draw all men unto Himself. Read the wonderful story of Rom. 5:18-21. How my heart leaps as I read Paul's account of the work of Christ! He keeps repeating the blessed words much more! Much more! Much more! Where sin abounded grace did much more abound." Rom. 5:9,10,15,17,20

We pray and plead for years for some man or woman to be saved and we imagine the thought unthinkable that perhaps God has a different purpose in mind altogether. We beg and plead that God will revive the church as we see and know it, not knowing that the true church is an invisible mystery joined to God in the Spirit and in the mind of Christ, but that the visible, existing thing that is everywhere called the church is really only mystery Babylon. The truth of the matter is that God is refusing to call people into it, but rather He is calling to all who have ears to hear, "Come out of her, My people, and be not partakers of her sins." What I am trying to say is that prayer is not prayer except it concerns definitely and directly the will of God. All other prayer is idle words that must be accounted for in the Day of Judgment. It is as useless as the prayers of the Pharisees, who loved to stand in the markets and make long prayers to be heard of men. Most prayers offered in pulpits are of this order and are only prayed because they are part of the service. Any man can be called upon to pray whether or not he knows the will of God.

It should be very evident, then, that the only kind of prayer that is acceptable with God is one that comes flooding up from those fathomless depths of the spirit within, breathing out with unutterable longing the sighings and desires of the Holy Spirit within as He prays according to the will of God. I know what those sighings are, and all others who have experienced them know. They are unexplainable to natural minds, but "as the hart panteth after the water brooks so panteth my soul after thee, oh God." The vast importance of what we have just tried to say is expressed by Paul under the inspiration of the Holy Ghost in these words: "Likewise the Spirit helpeth our infirmities, for we know not what we should pray for as we ought, but the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us according to the will of God, and He that searcheth the hearts knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit because He (the Spirit) maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God." Rom. 8:26-27

You will begin to experience this kind of prayer if you take my advice and begin reading and meditating and getting the stream of life flowing early in the morning instead of waiting until the business of the day like the sun has dried the manna up so that there is none to be found. How different will be the life of the man or woman who thus contacts God in the early morning as compared to the man who sits up late to watch the soul-destroying trash produced by Hollywood's fertile factory of evil, acted out by characters whose personal lives are the quintessence of evil, adultery, fornication, and secret sins too numerous and filthy to mention. A man who thinks he can be entertained by these corrupters of the whole earth and still have the mind of God for prayer for himself and for the people has become a deceiver of himself. Television is a most remarkable invention, but it has become a thief of time, a thief of manners, a thief of morals and it is even a thief of physical exercise.

Our spiritual life is a very sensitive thing. It grows by continual contact with God. The spirit of man and the Spirit of God are the same essence, and the spirit of man can only be nourished by the Spirit of God and the things that pertain thereto. I wish you could see this point: Spiritual setbacks come upon us in the simplest fashion. If a man eats poisonous food or receives in his body a thrust from a sword, his body receives a setback from which he takes days or weeks to recover. Consequently we avoid such things as much as possible. Can you not see, then, that spiritual wounds and spiritual poison deal a destroying blow to the soul, to the spirit, and to the spiritual mind, giving it a setback from which it will take a long time to recover? The solemn question is asked in scripture, "Can a man take fire into his bosom and his clothes not be burned?" Indeed, he cannot. Neither can he partake of the rot and filth of the flesh and not receive a setback in the spirit from which he may never recover. "Shame and dishonor will he get, and his reproach shall not be wiped away." Anger, wrath, blasphemy, and filthy communication from any source should be put away because they are poison to the mind of Christ, and to indulge in them in any way deals a destroying blow to the spirit from which you may never recover. Those who hope to be sons of God and reign with Him in the glorious kingdom, where all is peace and God's will, will certainly have to put away the flesh, for it is God's enemy that the mind of Christ may dwell in them richly.

In Paul's letter to the Philippians, he made this very revealing statement: "I trust in the Lord Jesus to send Timotheous shortly unto you, that I also may be of good comfort, when I know your state. For I have no man likeminded, who will naturally care for your state. For all seek their own, not the things which are Jesus Christ's." Phil. 2:19,21 The last part of this verse which says, "All seek their own, and not the things which are Jesus Christ's", literally staggers my imagination. We are well aware of the selfishness and greed almost universally rampant in the professing church in our day, but most of us have believed that things were much better and Christians far more devout in Paul's day. When he wrote this pitiful confession, he was undoubtedly referring to men who claimed to be the ministers of the gospel. These men no doubt could preach as good a sermon as Paul any day of the week and perhaps many of them were much more popular, but down deep within under the cover of outward show they were self-seekers. Beneath the outward cloak of righteousness, consecration, fire, and devotion lurked the love of self. Their attitude toward the gospel, the people, and the welfare of the church of God was the attitude of an hireling rather than the devotion of a true shepherd. Among them were men like Demas, who forsook Paul and departed because he loved this present world. 2 Tim. 4:10 All that is in the world, let us remember, is the lust (desires) of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life. These are not of the Father but are of the world, and the world with all its passionate desires is rapidly passing away. Strange, is it not, that one who would take the honor of preaching the gospel should beneath the surface cloak of wholehearted devotion to Christ be found to be an admirer of the world and a lover of self? In his second letter to the Corinthians Paul exhorted them in these words: "Examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves." 2 Cor. 13:5 Caution, my brother; for your carnal mind will never be persuaded to examine or condemn itself, but there is, nevertheless, a place of self-examination in the presence of the court of heaven. The value of waiting long hours before God in prayer can never be overestimated. Neither can the results of fasting with pure motives be overestimated because fasting will bring about a condition of abandonment to the will of God. In fasting earthly things lose their attraction. Big things are cut down to their proper size and are seen in a better perspective. It is in such times of pure devotion that a man can examine himself in the revealing light of the Holy Spirit, and in such times the Holy Spirit takes the things of God and shows them to our hearts.

Perhaps Demas was unaware that he loved the world. I am perfectly sure that, when he came to Paul to tell him that he had decided to quit the apostolic party, he did not say that he was leaving because he had a secret love for the things of this present world. Like people in all ages he doubtless produced some more plausible excuse. Nor was he ready to admit to himself or to anyone else the true cause that really lay beneath his decision to depart. We are all like that, if we will be honest. The love of self and the love of this present world is in the heart of every man until the cross of Christ has eradicated it completely, and he who in his heart imagines that the love of the world is not in him is a deceiver of himself.

The first law in the world is self-preservation, and the second law is like unto it - the preservation of the species or the race. For this reason, though few people understand it, there is a strong urge in all creatures to reproduce their kind. For this self-same reason many shallow and foolish people affirm that sex is the second law of nature, but this idea is a perversion of the truth. God made sex in the beginning, not as a toy to be played with, but as an irresistible force for the procreation of the race.

Seeing, then, that these things are so, why should we be surprised to find self popping up and shouting his claims at every opportunity? Now some will ask, "Why, then, should I not consider self?" The answer is simply this: Since we have come to Christ, we are not our own. We have been bought with a price. 1 Cor. 6:19-20 Our only reason for existing henceforth is to glorify God in our bodies and in our spirits, which are God's. In Weymouth's translation of 1 Cor. 7:22 we have these remarkable words: "A slave who has received his calling in the Lord is the Lord's freed-man, and the same way a free man, if called, is the slave of Christ. You have been bought with a price. Do not become slaves of men. Where each one was when he was called, there, brethren, let him stand... close to God."

In the article, The Meaning of the Cross (Volume 4, Treasures of Truth), we pointed out how completely God in His great plan of redemption has identified us with Christ in death, in resurrection, in ascension, in righteousness, and in all other good things. It is a message that should be read and re-read until its truth is indelibly inscribed in our hearts, because our ever present human tendency is to forget the truth of our identification with Jesus Christ, and go slipping back again into the error of dependence upon our self-efforts and self-righteousness. The truth is that self is self and flesh is flesh and there is no possibility of changing the situation. The one and only remedy is death, and that death is not accomplished by our struggles and human efforts to die and obliterate the old. It is accomplished by participation in the death of Christ. It becomes part of our experience when the truth dawns upon our spirit that, when Christ died, we all died with Him. And let us assure our hearts that, when we claim complete identification with Christ, this is no vain imagination. We are not putting our confidence in a lie, but are simply believing what God, who cannot lie, declared when He made known the truth, "I am crucified with Christ." The fatal mistake made by tens of thousands of God's people is this: They wrongly imagine that, when Paul said, "I am crucified with Christ", this crucified state was something he himself had accomplished by years and years of ascetic severity, struggling to overcome self, the carnal nature and fleshly lusts. But the blessedness he enjoyed was not accomplished that way. It was accomplished before the foundation of the world when God included all men in His Son Jesus Christ. The moment we see and by faith accept the fact that we have already died in Christ, our troubles will be over and so also will our struggles be over, for they are already in the past. Everything we are in Christ and everything we might ever hope to be is given to us by God's grace and is made real in our experience the moment we have faith to believe it is so.

In the fourth chapter of Romans, verse 16, we have these revealing words: "Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace; to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed;" The whole truth, and nothing but the truth, is simply this: God's grace has bountifully supplied every blessing, every requirement, and every demand in Jesus Christ, and all those blessings, requirements, and demands are ours through believing faith. What a universe of truth is wrapped up in the simple phrase, "It is of faith that it might be by grace!" How else but by faith could God ever impart such infinite gifts of His grace?

For centuries now there has been a well, cloaked lie walking about in the shining garments of truth. Though theologians (if there be such a thing) have invented many ways of saying it, the meaning is the same. The teaching is that we should imitate Jesus that we should try to do as He would do, and that we should always ask ourselves the question, "What would Jesus do?" All this kind of talk may seem very good and appear very noble, but it will get us exactly nowhere. In fact, it is a great detriment to us because it causes us to take refuge in a false security, namely, our own self-righteousness. I have listened to men clever in the art of mimicry, who could make an audience scream with laughter by their imitation of some person or thing. I have heard preachers doing their utmost to imitate the voice and manner of other preachers more prominent and successful than themselves. But, however clever their imitation was, it changed nothing. They remained what they always were - just imitators. We once listened in amazement as well as amusement to a competition among budgie birds to discover which was the best talker in the British Isles. They had been taught to recite verse after verse of Mother Goose Rhymes and, upon completing the assigned number of such verses, they ended their speeches by giving the announcement for the British Broadcasting Corporation, "This is the B.B.C." It was amusing and very interesting to note that the birds in London spoke like Londoners, the birds from Wales spoke with a Welsh accent and the birds from Scotland had the definite Scotch accent. It was a remarkable imitation of human voices, but they were still birds - neither Englishmen, Irishmen, Welshmen, or Scots, not even human beings - just little birds and good little imitators.

God forgive us that we have all been guilty of preaching sermons about the beatitudes, holding them up before the minds of the people as a target at which Christians should aim, or as an example after which we should seek to pattern our lives, a height to which we should all struggle to attain. We have preached our sermons from 1 Cor. 13 and exhorted the people to try to show love and endeavor to make their lives conform to its blessedness. May the Lord forgive us for this! The Sermon on the Mount was not given as a pattern to which we should struggle to conform nor as a height of goodness to which we should try to attain. It is an unfolding of the glories and riches awaiting those Christ-filled lives who not only have died in Him, but who have in faith shared the glory of His resurrection and who here and now walk in Him. "It is of faith that it might be by grace."

For can the sermon on the mount be lived in human life?
Can sinful man ascend so high above his sin and strife?
Is there the possibility that he can strive and strain
Through a thousand consecrations that life to attain?
Forgive us, Lord, if such we think; for that is not the way.
Oh, give us ears to really hear what Thou didst say that day.
We want that life, oh, vision blessed! From us, Lord, never part;
We can only have it when Thou livest in our heart.

We can indeed live every maxim of the sermon on the mount and fulfill every precept of 1 Cor. 13 if first we believe that, when He died, we died with Him, and, when He arose, we arose to walk in the newness of the life in Him. By such identification we are not as we were, but we now live and move and have our being by the power of God in Christ. Henceforth it is not "I", but Christ, and the life, which we now live in the flesh we live by the faith of the Son of God who loved us and gave Himself for us. God forgive us that we have spent so much time laying down rules and guidelines about dress, the length of skirts, and the fix of the hair. The heart is never made better or cleaner or whiter by the style of our clothes, but, conversely, the style of our clothes will be greatly affected and made better by the condition of our hearts.

In my early ministry I had in one of my congregations an elderly gentleman who was very exact about his dress and all outward forms of holiness. He sat as a model of Christian perfection for all to behold. Never was he seen to wear a tie, or cufflinks, or even a collar pin. Such evidences of worldliness and lack of sanctification were all of the flesh and the world and were contrary to the Spirit of Christ! But I shall never forget the feeling of surprise I had when one night he honored us by visiting in our home. Opening his pocket-book, he drew from its folds the dilapidated wreckage of a letter which he had evidently carried for many years. The paper was so old and worn that in an effort to preserve it he had patched the pieces together with tape. After telling us in grimy detail the story of an old enmity between himself and another brother, he read aloud the letter which the brother had written to him years before. Perhaps it was unkind, bitter and vitriolic, but the question left in my mind was how could a man professing such outward holiness be filled with such inner resentment that he would carry a letter for decades, keeping it patched as a sacred relic of the bitterness and hate that lived in his soul. What good, pray tell, is outward show since "God looketh on the heart"? Does this not shout aloud the worthlessness of self-effort, self-reform, and self-righteousness? The heart is only changed into the image of Christ when we by faith become identified with Him in His death. His resurrection, His life. Thus we become partakers and sharers in His image and His likeness. "It is of faith that it might be by grace."

Solomom from his store-house of wisdom said, "Where there is no wood the fire goeth out, and where there is no tale-bearer the strife ceaseth." Prov. 26:20 As long as there is wood to burn, the fire will keep on burning. As long as self still lives and thrives, there will be carnality. Take away the wood and the fire goes out. Identify yourself with Christ in death and the life you live henceforth will be the life of resurrection through faith in Jesus Christ.

I am writing, not in the hope of gathering enthusiastic friends who will vigorously promote a cause or a message, not to solicit funds or financial aid to reach more thousands of people with this message, but I write these things because of a burden that is upon my heart for a people who, having believed on the Lord Jesus Christ and trusted Him for their eternal salvation, have become hopelessly lost in the dense fogs of church tradition. Darkness has so covered the earth and gross darkness the people that they have lost sight of the true purposes of God. Imagining that temporal gain, crowds, numbers, and acclaims are criteria by which we measure our acceptableness with God, they never remember that in His sight all such things are chaff that the wind driveth away, something to be gathered up in the end and burned in the fire.

May every child of God who reads these words take heed to them. We have now arrived at the end of the dispensation of grace. We have come to the time when we should call a halt and go no further with the thoughtless throng. We are at the moment when we should dismount this merry-go-round of supposed church activity. It is time to take prayerful thought before God and ask ourselves these questions: Just where has it got us in the last ten or twenty or forty years? What has it produced in the world? What kind of fruit has it borne in the nation? What has caused this whirlwind of unbelief and godlessness that is sweeping the land? Where is the unity of faith among these systems? Is this thing of which we are a part the true church? Or is it part and parcel of the harlot system?

Do we realize that one of the major curses of our day is that Christian people as well as worldly people are actually afraid of silence? They get fidgety if there is no noise in the room. They turn up the radio, turn up the television, put on a recording, carry on idle talk, get drunk, or anything except be silent. Why are God's people so afraid of silence? Why must they ever be in a noisy meeting with singing and music, or listening to a preacher who like as not knows less than those who listen to him? Why do we have to hear music in the supermarkets, in the offices, blaring from the pocket transistors of pedestrians on the street and on the bathing beaches? Why do women who spend their days at home insist on having the disconcerting din of rock and roll and other such nerve-wracking noises filling their ears? Why do they say, "I can't stand silence"? It is simply because they are afraid to be alone with themselves, with their thoughts, and with their God. They are afraid that, if there is no noise, they might think. If no one else is talking, God might speak, and they are afraid of that.

Is it any wonder that God said to Abraham, "Get thee out from thy country and thy kindred and from thy father's house", and, when he got out and away from his noisy friends and away from his country, then the Lord spoke to him and told him what He wanted and what He planned to do. It was when Moses was in the backside of the desert that he saw the burning bush. It was not in Pharaoh's noisy court amid excitement and princely splendor, but at the burning bush, that God spoke to his heart. It was after all goodly things of earth had been swept away and all his comforters had become his enemies that the Lord answered Job out of a whirlwind. Job 38:1. And it was after God spoke that Job uttered those immortal words: "I have heard of Thee by the hearing of the ear; but now mine eye seeth Thee. Wherefore I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes." Job. 42-5-6 It was in the year that King Uzziah died that Isaiah saw the Lord, high and lifted up. Isa. 6:1. It was when Jesus had fasted forty days and forty nights in the wilderness that angels ministered unto Him. It was not in the hub-bub of church activity that the Lord revealed the gospel of grace to Paul, but in the awesome loneness of the wind-swept deserts of Arabia. Gal. 1:17 It was not in his fervent duties among the churches of Asia that the Revelation was given to the apostle John, but in the dreary lonesomeness of the little isle of Patmos.

It is time to stop, look, and listen. It is time to examine ourselves whether we be in the faith. It is time to get off the merry-go-round. Long ago at the mount of Horeb the Lord said to Moses, "Ye have dwelt long enough in this mount." Deut. 1:6 Horeb was the place where they drank living waters from the smitten rock, of which Paul later wrote saying, "And that rock was Christ." 1 Cor. 10:4 But now it was time to stop compassing and re-encompassing that mount and to go on and on and on to the Promised Land.

After such a life of whirlwind activity as was my former lot among the religious denominations and sects, I have often wondered why God in His sovereignty not only cut down the tree in whose branches I lodged, but laid the axe to the root of the tree as well and sent me off in the year 1960 to this wilderness Horeb, this mountain of God in the backside of the desert, whispering in my ear even as I departed, "No man hath left houses, or brethren, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands for My sake and the gospel's but he shall receive an hundredfold now in this time houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions, and in the world to come eternal life." But early this morning, Feb. 2nd, 1969, as I waited before Him in the stillness, He made me to understand that a people is being prepared in the four corners of the earth, a people unlike any people ever before them. The seed of the kingdom, of sonship, and of truth is being sown in their hearts. One is planting, another is watering, and God Himself is preparing the increase, which suddenly will burst forth in life to fill the world with its ripened grain.

We are living in the most important hour of the entire dispensation of grace. It is the hour of harvest, the hour of maturity of sons, the time when the full corn in the ear, the many sons of God, is ripening into the image of that first corn of wheat that fell into the ground and died in the long ago. King David, a man after God's own heart, wrote in Psa. 72:16-18, "There shall be a handful of corn in the earth on the top of the mountains; the fruit thereof shall shake like Lebanon; and they of the city shall flourish like grass of the earth. His name shall endure forever; his name shall be continued as long as the sun; and men shall be blessed in him: all nations shall call him blessed. Bless be the Lord God, the God of Israel, who only doeth wondrous things." That handful of wheat in the top of the mountains is the true body of Christ. It is the sonship company in His image. Bishop J. C. Ryle of Liverpool, England, wrote, "It is a church whose existence does not depend on forms, ceremonies, cathedrals, churches, chapels, pulpits, fonts, vestments, organs, endowments, money, kings, governments, magistrates, or any act of favor from the hand of man. Its existence depends on nothing but the presence of Jesus Christ and His Spirit; and they being ever with it, the church cannot die."

This has been a long letter, but the enormous importance of the hour calls for something more personal than the ordinary teaching.

May the wisdom and knowledge and grace of God keep your hearts and minds through Jesus Christ.

CHAPTER TWO
THE PREPARATIONS OF THE HEART

"The preparations of the heart in man, and the answer of the tongue, is from the Lord." Prov. 16:1

In this chapter we will concern ourselves, not with the "answer of the tongue" as mentioned in the scripture above, but with four important things concerning the "preparations of the heart" to make it a fit vessel to receive truth. May I confess, before I begin the first of four exhortations, that I have recently had the experience of beginning to write a message concerning a truth of great importance and feeling compelled to lay it aside for the time being because of the inability of the majority to receive the truth of it.

This will not be the first time that truth has had to be withheld until the hearts of men were prepared even as a field is prepared and made ready to receive and nourish the living seed placed in its earthly womb. Well do we remember the occasion when our blessed Lord said to His disciples, "I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now." John 16:12. And Paul likewise, having commenced to teach the Hebrew Christians concerning the excellent wonders of the priesthood of Melchisedec, was forced to cut short his teaching while he rebuked them soundly for the dullness of their minds and lack of spiritual understanding, saying, "Of whom (Melchisedec) we have many things to say, and hard to be uttered, seeing ye are dull of hearing. For when for the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need that one teach you again which be the first principles of the oracles of God; and are become such as have need of milk, and not of strong meat. For everyone that useth milk is unskillful in the word of righteousness: for he is a babe. But strong meat belongeth to them that are of full age, even those who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil." See Heb. 5:1-14

DELIVERANCE FROM TRADITION

How unspeakably sad it is to find that in our day, two thousand years after the above rebuke was written and with the kingdom of God coming on apace, millions of Christians are still babes at the breast! Worse still, I fear, they are not even at the breast where they could receive the true milk of the word, but are on the bottle, receiving milk, which was never intended for spiritual growth. My heart sinks and my soul is filled with a sadness which is beyond expression when people who have been professing Christians for many years, often claiming the fullness of the Spirit, write to me demanding to know what I think about water baptism, what I teach about the Sabbath, what I think about Easter, why I do not write something about the way people dress, what I teach about the rapture of the church, where I stand on the communion, what I think about the gifts of the Spirit, and the laying on of hands! Honestly!! Did we never read Heb. 6:12?

Did you ever wonder what Jesus must have suffered in His Spirit when in the days of His earthly ministry He traveled through the land demonstrating the power and glory of that kingdom age which is yet to come, healing every imaginable disease, delivering men from the power of sin and Satan, demonstrating the mastery of the sons of God over the elements of sea and air, walking on water, miraculously feeding vast multitudes, speaking with the authority of the sons of God, and unfolding mysteries hidden from ages and dispensations, and then, right in the middle of that display of supernal glory, we are told, "Then came to Jesus scribes and Pharisees, which were of Jerusalem, saying, Why do Thy disciples transgress the tradition of the elders? for they wash not their hands when they eat bread." Matt. 15:1-2 Such a childish, petty, peevish, irrelevant question! What a sinking feeling it must have given our Lord to find men who were leaders and teachers asking such questions, casting away the key of knowledge, and blocking the pathway to the distant peaks of revelation by stumbling over such human tradition as the washing of pots and cups and hands! They did not care how much a poor man suffered the pain and inconvenience of a withered arm just so long as their childish tradition about the Sabbath was respected. It was perfectly all right for a lame man to lie forty years in misery at the pool of Bethesda, but he must not be healed nor carry his bed on the Sabbath day. A blind man could grope in darkness from his birth and they cared not a straw for that, but the Man who made him whole must certainly be of the devil because He healed him on the Sabbath day.

How I admire our wonderful Lord and Christ for walking rough shod over their worthless traditions and calling them hypocrites, vipers, serpents, and liars for drawing nigh to God with their lips while their hearts were far removed from Him! Indeed, they were whitened sepulchers full of dead men's bones, clean on the outside but vile and rotten and stinking within. I tell you, if Jesus were preaching in the church system today, Christians would still come demanding to know how He stood in relation to their doctrines, voiding the glory of the kingdom for the sake of their tradition, and making Him an offender for a word.

What does it matter what I think? What I think or what you think will change neither jot nor tittle of the truth. If men are guided by what I think, they will probably be wrong. The question to be decided is whether or not what I am saying is the truth. If it is, then let us walk in the glory of its light. Let us repent of the gross carnality that everywhere darkens our pathway that we may walk in the light of Him who dwelleth in the light, which no man can approach unto. 1 Tim. 6:16

Never was there written a more faithful word of truth than this: "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him. But God hath revealed them to us by His Spirit, for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God." 1 Cor. 2:9-10 According to this scripture we must conclude that there is one way and only one way by which spiritual truth can be received and understood by the human heart, and that one way is by the illumination of the Holy Spirit of God. It is when He, the Spirit of truth, takes the things of God and shows them unto us that we see, understand, comprehend and enter into those truths hidden from every natural mind from the very foundation of the ages. Decide then in your heart immediately that the deep things of God cannot be learned in schools, colleges, or universities. They cannot be dug out of books of learning. They cannot even be received from sermons though Isaiah, Paul, or Jesus were to preach them to you. Truth must be revealed by the Spirit; otherwise it cannot, simply cannot, be received.

"Why do you speak in parables?" the disciples asked their Lord. "Because to you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom, but to them it is not given" was His revealing reply. How helpless, then, we are if the Holy Spirit is not present to open these hidden things to our minds!

What hinders revelation? "Whom shall He teach knowledge? and whom shall He make to understand doctrine? Them that are weaned from the milk, and drawn from the breasts." Isa. 28:9 This passage of scripture very forcefully teaches that true spiritual knowledge and true doctrine are never entrusted to men and women who subsist on spiritual milk. They are yet babies in spiritual things and no more capable of receiving the knowledge or doctrine of God than an infant of days is capable of understanding the arts and sciences of the natural world. According to Peter newborn babes are to desire "the sincere milk of the word", 1 Pet. 2:2, and they need not be deprived of it, but according to Paul strong meat belongs to them who are of full age, Heb. 5:14, that is, Christians who are no longer "little children," but developing "young men" and mature "fathers". 1 John 2:12-13

Now let us notice what class of people it is who are to be considered spiritual babies and let us also notice in particular who those Christians are who are capable of digesting nothing stronger than milk and who consequently are never able to see "the deep things of God." What I now write will deeply wound many, but it will be a blessed wounding, indeed, if thereby the eyes of their understanding are opened and repentance may be followed by the receiving of great spiritual truth and the receiving of spiritual truth followed by spiritual maturity.

Hear now what the inspired apostle says: "And I, brethren, could not speak unto you as unto spiritual, but as unto carnal, even as unto babes in Christ. I have fed you with milk, and not with meat: for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able. For ye are yet carnal." 1 Cor. 3:1-3 There should be no difficulty for even the most sluggish and unspiritual mind to see that carnality is the curse that keeps Christians in spiritual infancy. It alone is capable of denying them that strong meat which can bring them to spiritual maturity. Let us now investigate what particular carnality it is upon which Paul puts such forceful emphasis. He does not here speak of adultery, theft, gluttony, uncleanness, lasciviousness, or any such thing, but he fastens his attention upon that one carnality which is the root cause of all carnality, successfully robbing Christians of spiritual growth during all the ages, that carnality which has made spiritual dwarfs of prospective giants and hidden from their eyes the glory of those things which eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man. That carnality for which he rebuked the church at Corinth is the same wretched carnality that in our day curses the entire professing church system. It is the carnality of sectarianism and denominationalism. I think it is completely reasonable to believe that 1 Cor. 3:3-4 is speaking of the sectarian spirit and the entire sectarian system. When Paul said, "Whereas there is among you envying, and strife, and divisions, are ye not carnal, and walk as men? For while one saith, I am of Paul; and another, I am of Apollos; are ye not carnal?" he was emphasizing the divisive tendency that inevitably follows wherever and whenever men choose to call themselves by some name whether it be Paul, Apollos, Cephas, Luther, Wesley, Knox or Pentecostal, Apostolic, Baptist, or any one of a thousand other names that purport to describe some distinctive testimony. "Is Christ divided? Was Paul crucified for you? or were ye baptized in the name of Paul?" 1 Cor. 1:13

I repeat without the slightest hesitation or without fear of any successful contradiction that sectarianism in all its forms, and denominationalism in all its forms, is the carnality that exceeds all other forms of carnality. It is the root of the tree of carnality and from its bad and discordant root of bitterness all branches of carnality derive their food and subsist as a green bay tree. It is this most devilish form of carnality that stunts all spiritual growth and keeps Christians drinking the milk of infancy when they should long ago have become spiritual fathers. Every Christian must repent of it and turn from it with all his heart if spiritual growth is to be attained.
How often I hear the time-worn objection, "We need these denominations to keep evil out". You lie, my friend! You do not keep evil out. Evil is rampant among you. It is God who is kept out and with Him the unfolding of His plan for the ages. You say we need these things so we will have a place for the five ministries to develop, but that statement is made only because people have failed to understand, first - what the true body of Christ is, and second - what a true ministry is. Surely you will agree that our true pattern, the Lord Jesus Christ, was an apostle, prophet, evangelist, pastor and teacher all in one as well as a worker of miracles, a healer and a speaker of wisdom, and all these ministries functioned perfectly outside the carnal congregation of man-made systems. He taught in the temple, raised the dead in the cemetery, by the highway, or in the bedroom, and proved His Sonship while walking the waves of Galilee. Seek not to defend and justify that which God has cursed and which in itself is the very root from which the confused and divided image of Babylon has sprung. What nonsense is it, which teaches that we need carnal institutions to promote spiritual ministries?

Let every one who has ears to hear stop and take earnest heed, because the Spirit of God now warns a carnal people, divided and held in infamy by the sectarian system, that, unless they repent of their division, mourn the carnality of their sectarian ways, and, forsaking all, go unto Him without the camp bearing His reproach, they are doomed to spend the remainder of their lives in spiritual infancy and in outer darkness insofar as the deep things of God are concerned.

Not only has denominationalism and all forms of sectarianism been used of Satan to dwarf and blind the minds of Christians, but the division which these wickedly uphold has also been the darkness which has blinded the eyes of sinners for whom Christ died. How can sinful men, who see nothing but war and strife and division among Christians, ever believe that Christ has given them peace? I exhort, therefore, that all men and all women do now repent of this wickedness, and, casting out the evil spirit of sectarianism from their hearts, flee unto Christ who is head of that mystical body, the true church, which will reign with Him, undivided, in the ages of the ages yet to come. Amen.

FASTING AND PRAYER

The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; neither can he know them, for they are spiritually discerned. While we are "at home" in the body, we are absent from the Lord; and I think you will agree with me that most of us are much more "at home" in the body than we are in the spirit. But you will also agree that the spirit is much more important than the body, because the spirit is one essence with God's Spirit while the body is identical with the flesh. "For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live." Rom. 8:13 Even the statement, "The body without the spirit is dead", James 2:26, should lead us to understand that the body itself has no life except what it derives from the spirit. Thus every sin of the flesh is an outrage against the spirit whence it derives its life. Paul taught that, "If the Spirit of Him that raised up Christ from the dead dwelleth in you, He that raised up Christ shall also quicken (make alive) your mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in you." Rom. 8:11

In the days of Noah men were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, which things concern the body and the physical realm only. In our day likewise, as Jesus said it would be, men are eating and drinking, marrying, divorcing, remarried, and spending themselves into poverty in a vain effort to please and satisfy the flesh, which, of course, can never be done. All labor and effort in our day is for the body and not the spirit. Whether it be food and drink, clothes, shelter, comfort and speed of travel, dope, drugs, wine, women, song, perfume, or tobacco - name it all and you find that all things are either directly or indirectly concerned with the physical realm of the body, which is the flesh, the implacable enemy of the spirit. Even the religious gatherings and conventions of our day put great emphasis on their plush motels for accommodation, their good eating accommodations, and the beautiful buildings in which their meetings are held. How often we hear the deceptive expression, "food, fun, and fellowship!" The truth is that food and fun have no more in common with spiritual fellowship than oil has with water. They are iron mingled with clay. Each is the antithesis of the other. I tell you with solemn sincerity that, while you are thus at home in the body, you will find an absence from the Lord. There may be much frothy verbosity in preaching. There may be clapping of hands, singing of hymns, and shouting and praise, but what good are any of these things if you are the same tomorrow as you were yesterday?
Now God has provided a very simple method by which men can begin to become strangers to the body and at home with the Lord. You will find nothing popular or beautifully acceptable about the truth I now describe, but, if you will persevere in it and consider the message it teaches, you will find yourself growing in grace, growing in understanding, departing from sectarianism, and coming into harmony with the plan of the ages. God has ordained fasting and prayer as a means by which the interests of the physical body, which is the flesh, are greatly decreased while the interests of the spirit, so long neglected, are greatly increased. You will probably not be immediately aware of any spiritual progress during a time of fasting and prayer. In fact, you may feel much more dead and listless than at any other time in your life, but it is the flesh only that is growing weak. It is not the spirit; and I guarantee that, if your heart is honest and your motives are pure before God, a new understanding of the spiritual will begin to possess you. Things that were hidden, dark, and cloudy will begin to scintillate with the light of God. Truth long obscured by the carnal mind will awaken to become a part of you.

Men are forever talking about the sonship message, but, O my brother, when you have earnestly fasted and cast off the carnal mind, you find that sonship is something more than just another message. It is the relationship of a mature son to his Father in heaven. It is the adoption by which God places you as "a son" in the spiritual body of sons of which Christ Himself is the head. People talk about the kingdom, but so often their talk portrays a dreadful dearth of the spirit of the kingdom. They talk much about coming out of Babylon, yet they adhere to and advertise every putrid thing that belongs to her harlot system.

God has ordained fasting and prayer as a means of casting down the carnal mind and raising up the spiritual mind. Fasting closes the eyes to the natural realm, displaying its deadness and ugliness while opening the eyes to the glory of those heavenly realms. If you show me a man who never fasts, I will show you a man who never quite sees the fullness and import of the present truth. Yes, he may be able to talk well. He may put it over, so to speak; but his talk, though all unknown to him, always leaves a pitiful vacuum, which need not be there.

Whenever the Spirit of God intends to emphasize the importance of any truth, you will find that it is brought to the forefront over and over again by teaching, by prophecy, by type, by allegory, and in many other ways.
Take, for instance, the importance of the blood of Christ, which was shed for the sins of the world, not merely to save us from the penalty of sin, but to save us from sin itself. Over and over, times without number, in sacrifice, in offering, in prophecy, in type, in anti-type, in allegory we have this scarlet thread running through the Bible from Genesis to Revelation. So also it is with any truth that concerns God's plan of the ages. You will find it line upon line and precept upon precept throughout the pages of the good Book until its many aspects shine out in one great revelation of Christ.

In view of the above I should think that fasting must be a matter of great importance - too great, indeed, to deal with at any great length in the space we have at our disposal now. So great it is that we must conclude that it was vitally connected with the life and ministry of every man of God whether he be a Bible character or whether his ministry be recorded elsewhere. And should I not say further that, in this day of ours when above all other ages our god is our belly and our glory is in the things that should make us ashamed, Phil. 3:18,19, it is high time for us to take account of our own spiritual dearth and avail ourselves of that simple, lowly practice of fasting and prayer, which always determines the difference between those who would enter into the realm of the Spirit and those who would remain in the realm of the flesh. I would not make such a statement as this without thought and consideration. Fasting, though a very simple and valuable act is undertaken by very, very few people simply because it is hard on the flesh, and "no man ever yet hated his own flesh". Why is that so many people manifest a hatred for their spirit by keeping it in bondage to that cruel taskmaster, the body, that can promise it nothing but spiritual decrepitude and impoverishment?

Moses, the man of God, fasted forty days on two occasions, and, if I am not mistaken, those two occasions had no interval between them, so that he actually fasted for eighty days without eating or drinking. In Deut. 9:9
Moses, relating his experiences to the children of Israel, told them that he had been in the mount with the Lord for forty days and forty nights. "I neither did eat bread nor drink water," he said. Upon descending from the mount, he found the people had corrupted themselves and had worshipped a golden calf, whereupon he took the two tables of stone and broke them to pieces before their eyes and fell down again before the Lord forty days and forty nights. "I did neither eat bread nor drink water," he said again. See Deut. 9:17-18. There was a great deal of the sovereignty of God in this act because it is quite impossible for natural man to endure eighty days without drinking and in very few cases could it be accomplished without eating. But it is not this that we are trying to prove. The truth is that the most remarkable revelation ever given by God to man, at least up to that time, was accompanied by fasting from all bodily necessity.

The natural man is completely incapable of receiving the things of the Spirit of God; therefore, the more the natural man with all his beastly natural cravings is put out of the way the more the spirit, which is made after God's image and likeness, is capable of drawing nigh to God. Paul made the seemingly contradictory statement, "When I am weak, then am I strong." To the natural mind such a statement as this is silly, but it is silly only to the natural mind. The spiritual man knows that of all the enemies that bar the way to spiritual attainment the body of flesh is by far the strongest and most persistent and demanding of them all. It is an absolute fact that, while the flesh with its cravings is strong, the spirit is helpless and very weak. On the other hand, when the power of the flesh is at a minimum, then the spirit is freed of its bondage and chains and flies away to its own habitat in the realm of God. God is Spirit and they that worship Him must worship Him in Spirit and in truth. It is this that Paul meant when he said, "When I am weak, then am I strong."

I will gain no friends by saying it, but the truth remains that in all human effort to accomplish something for the Lord there is a super-abundance of flesh. Where the flesh is strong human organization is great. Dependence is upon education, fine singing, fine speech, fine buildings, and above all else money is made the prime necessity. Well have they nicknamed it "the almighty dollar". Carnal men love to display their pictures. They love to be called doctor, teacher, apostle, prophet, evangelist, man of the hour. The ever present glorying in spiritual gifts and ministries is a fleshly thing. Harsh words, you say? Yes, but too terribly true, nevertheless. What Christians need in this hour when darkness covers the earth and gross darkness the people is not a manifestation of fleshly niceties, but fasting and repentance and prayer that there might be unity with the will of the eternal Father and oneness with the mind of Christ.

As we consider the value of fasting and prayer, our minds usually turn quickly to the account of Daniel the prophet. Daniel was a man dearly beloved in the sight of God. Whenever the Lord expresses His exceptional love for any man, you will always discover that His love is not favoritism, but rather it is the Father requiting the love He sees in the man's own heart. God loves the whole world and everybody in it, but He especially loves those who love Him, Prov. 8:17, making them special objects of His correction and thus also of His favor. Daniel was greatly beloved, Dan. 9:23, because he cherished no interest of his own. God's interest was his interest and God's concern was his concern. The whole ambition of his life was knit together with the purpose of God, and besides that he had no ambition. Though he was the third ruler in the kingdom of Babylon - by necessity rather than by desire - his heart was not in Babylon but in Jerusalem, and it was with his window open toward Jerusalem that he kneeled three times a day in his chamber to pray and give thanks to God. Daniel 6:10.

The plans and purposes of God are forever hidden from the natural mind. Please mark that statement well. The natural mind is completely incapable of grasping eternal purpose. That is the reason for so much childish thought among Christians. Daniel was no more privileged than other man, nor was he more beloved than any other man who has a heart like his. Furthermore, he was no more capable of understanding the purpose of God for the ages than you or I. This fact is surely evident by his prayer in Dan. 12:8 where he states, "I heard, but I understood not: then said I, O my Lord, what shall be the end of these things? And He said, Go thy way, Daniel: for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end."

In the 9th chapter of Daniel we have a manifestation of the true spirit of fasting and prayer. Would you give special attention to the three prominent points that follow?

(1) The occasion of his seeking God with fasting and prayer arose from his lack of understanding of a prophecy given by the prophet Jeremiah. Dan. 9:1-2 His lack of understanding evidently troubled him greatly and caused him much concern. We should always give special attention in fasting and prayer when any great concern disturbs or troubles our hearts, for more than likely the concern we feel is a concern born of the Holy Spirit, and, if we will follow it faithfully by fasting and prayer, God will meet us with an answer and an assurance which is of Him. It is positively of no avail whatever to fast and pray in an endeavor to persuade God to give you something you personally desire. Your prayer and your fasting must always be in accord with God's purpose for the ages, always remembering that the present is a most important part of the ages. God has a plan for now.

(2) Daniel set his face unto the Lord God to seek by prayer and supplication, with fasting and sackcloth and ashes. Notice: - Our seeking of God must not be casual, but with purpose. Daniel sought with prayer and supplication. Supplication denotes humble and earnest seeking and requesting special favor. See further how he used all means at his disposal - fasting, prayer, sackcloth and ashes - not to persuade or bribe God into giving an answer, but rather to separate himself from the uncrucified flesh, which hindered his approach to God, and to place his spirit in harmony with God's will and purpose. Many times I have written and spoken my firm conviction that there is only one element in faith, and that one element is the will of God. He who concerns himself with the will of God will find no problem with faith.

(3) He made confession of sin and the committing of iniquity and of rebellion against the precepts and commandments of the Lord. Wherever the word iniquity is used in the Bible the true meaning is rebellion. There are many Christians who live without sinning but who continually live in iniquity (rebellion). God speaks to them about fasting, but they rebel and refuse to do it. That is iniquity. God speaks to them about prayer and the reading of the word, but they won't make the sacrifice. It is easier to read the newspaper, talk to friends, or watch TV. God speaks to them about tithing, but they won't do it. They rebel against it and console themselves by speaking against it. That is iniquity. God speaks to them about backbiting and evil speaking, but they won't stop it. All this is iniquity because it is rebellion. Rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft, and stubbornness is as iniquity and idolatry. 1 Sam. 15:23. Is it any wonder that this stubborn man, Saul, later turned to a witch to answer his problem! 1 Sam. 28:7-25. Notice in Daniel's confession how this truth is further emphasized. "We have sinned, and have committed iniquity, and have done wickedly, and have rebelled, even by departing from Thy precepts and from Thy judgments." Dan. 9:5. A verse-by-verse study of this whole passage, Dan 9, will reveal much truth to the earnest seeker, and God will prepare his heart and reveal his need of cleansing to him.

The fast recorded here took place in the first year of king Darius, Dan 9:1 and the results were beyond description, but these we must leave for the reader to search out for himself. In the third year of Cyrus, king of Persia, Dan. 10, Daniel again set aside three weeks for another special period of fasting before the Lord. During this fast he allowed himself certain foods, but stipulates that he ate no "pleasant bread" (no dainties) and he abstained from "flesh and wine". Verse 3. Again because of limited space we must leave the remarkable results of this fast and the glory of the blessed revelation Daniel received for the reader to search out for himself in the remainder of the chapter.

I think we may safely say that all the prophets were men of fasting and prayer. David states that his knees were weak from fasting, Psa. 109:24, and that he humbled his soul with fasting. Psa. 35:13. Paul makes mention of his own fasting by the simple expression, "in fastings often". 2 Cor. 11:27. Martin Luther in his longings for God fasted until sometimes he fainted. John Wesley and John Knox were men who spent almost countless days in fasting and prayer. Charles G. Finney found that, whenever his great spiritual power was ebbing, a few days of fasting would restore it.

I am sure it would be right to conclude that all the successful fasting and prayer accomplished through the ages concerned God's plan for His present truth. There is always a present truth, and it is with the present truth that we should concern ourselves. In the days of Noah the present truth was that the whole world, because of its abounding wickedness, was to be destroyed by a flood of waters. It was with this purpose and this alone that Noah concerned himself, and in obedience to God be built an ark to the saving of his house. The present truth for Abraham was that God had chosen him to be the father of a nation by whom and through whom He would bless the whole earth. It was to this revelation that he was obedient in all things. The present truth for Moses concerned the deliverance and instruction of the same chosen people. They were his concern day and night, and for them he fasted and prayed. The present truth for Paul the apostle was that the dispensation of grace had been committed to him, and because of that trust he was in watchings with fasting and prayer, continually preaching and writing to fulfill the demands of the time then present. In Luther's day the present truth was justification by faith, and to that all his effort turned.
We should be very foolish people indeed should we allow ourselves to believe that the hour in which we live has no present truth. I am satisfied that no more important hour has ever dawned on the world's horizon than this hour in which we now live. It is, however, an hour as far beyond the understanding of the natural mind as the flood of waters was beyond the understanding of the disobedient of Noah's day. We simply cannot comprehend the message of these closing days of the age except it be by divine revelation. We may talk of Babylon all we wish, and think we have come out of her, but Babylon is a revelation. We may listen to sermons on sonship and imagine we have entered its blessedness, but these truths cannot be comprehended until the Lord God Himself breaks them open to the heart, enlightening the mind and giving understanding.

My dear brother and sister, I believe it is my duty before God to tell you that without fasting and prayer the present truth of sonship and union with Christ will never quite come alive to your spirit. You will always fall just short in understanding. While you preach that men should flee from Babylon, you yourself will yet embrace her harlot daughters. You will exult about the body of Christ as though it were a visible thing, but fail to know that for two thousand years that body has been rising in mystery completely outside the pale of human machinery, being perfected by ministries set of God and not made of man to form a fixed abode, a mysterious house not made with hands, for God Himself in the Spirit. Wake up, my sleeping brother! Tear the darkling veil from off your eyes! The body you are now trying to perfect is not the body of Christ, and the ministries you are desperately trying to establish are not the ministries, which Christ has set. Oh, that men would avail themselves of that mighty key to revelation available to every sincere heart, fasting and prayer!

It was Solomon who said, "Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom, and with all thy getting get understanding." Again he said, "When wisdom entereth into thy heart and knowledge is pleasant to thy soul, discretion shall preserve thee and understanding shall keep thee." These are remarkable words of inspiration and truth. All who read them would do well to take time out to consider them carefully and prayerfully. There is nothing more frustrating and detrimental to spiritual growth than to walk in darkness and ignorance; but, if darkness and ignorance give place to understanding, then doubts, fears, misgivings, and frustration are all erased, and we walk in the light that shines from the face of the Lord.

How often during the journey of life circumstances arise that are beyond our understanding, bringing frustration, disappointment, and even anger! In our dilemma we reproach ourselves, we censor those who seem to be responsible for our foizzle, we accuse the devil, and we blame circumstances, but, when at last we learn that God's hand was in our trial, then we understand. Hence, had our understanding been enlightened in the first place, we would have saved ourselves from the frustration and complaining that served only to befuddle our lives.

As I am writing these words, the three astronauts, Lovell, Haise, and Swigert, together with the control crew at Houston are desperately struggling with all the skill at their disposal to bring the crippled Apollo 13 back to earth. A few days ago millions of people felt a sympathy for a disappointed Thomas Mattingly, whose years of training together with his ambition to take part in a great adventure, were frustrated by the miserable prospect of German measles. But today I think we might congratulate him for his good fortune. If understanding can grip our spirits and open our eyes that we might see that "all things are of God", 1 Cor. 11:12, then we will not only save ourselves much frustration and misgiving, but will rejoice in the knowledge that, because "all things are of God", it certainly follows that all things must be working together for good to those people who love God.

When we consider how God made promise to Abram, not only that he would be the father of a nation, but that he would be the father of many nations, that his seed would be as numberless as the sand of the sea, and as countless as the stars of heaven, and that in his seed all nations would be blessed, dare we blame him if at times he grew a bit frustrated or disappointed as he saw the years pass by the score with no sign of fulfillment of the promise? But we read, "He staggered not". Yet I think the only thing that could have kept him steadfast during those long, long years of waiting was a faith that rested on understanding, unaffected by frustrating and changing circumstances. If I know anything about people, then I am positive that Abraham must have had many well, meaning friends who chided him with many uncomplimentary remarks about his fanatical notions.
No doubt they offered him much excellent advice as to how he should get back into the main stream of things. But here was one man who understood what the will of the Lord was. Permit me to say with all the emphasis born of many years of experience that he who understands what the will of the Lord is must certainly turn a deaf ear to all the free advice of well meaning friends and broken-hearted relatives who tearfully mourn, "What a blessing he could have been if he had only listened to our good advice."

There is a wealth of information to be found in the words of David, "He made known His ways unto Moses, His acts to the children of Israel". No man ever comes to an intimate relationship with God by watching His acts no matter how great they may be. It is a knowledge of the ways of God that brings us to mature faith and understanding. The children of Israel based their faith on the acts they saw God do. They saw the plagues desolate the land. They trembled at the judgment that overtook Pharaoh. They saw the waters divide and marveled at the pillar of fire and covering cloud. They drank the water that gushed from the rock; but, the moment these signs were absent, they whined and complained like spoiled children because their confidence was not in God and His purposes, but in acts and miracles that tickled and pleased their imaginations. Moses was not of this coil. His faith rested in the eternal purpose of Him who works all things after the counsel of His own will. To the children of Israel, if there were no "acts", no miracles, no signs, no wonders, then God was not there. To Moses God was there, working the immutable purpose of the ages, acts or no acts, miracles or no miracles, healings or no healings, water or no water, manna or no manna.

The faith and simple trust that all things are of God and all things are working together for good to them that love the Lord is the faith that the Father is looking for in you and me. I am fully persuaded that neither death nor life nor angels nor principalities nor powers nor things to come nor height nor depth nor any other creature is able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus the Lord. And not only are these things unable to separate us from the love God, but all these things are ministering together and working together to mould us into the kind of sons God is demanding. They are all ministers of His to do His pleasure. Yea, they are among the all things working together for good to them who love God and who are the called according to His purpose.

If a man cannot see that the temptation of Satan in the life of Job was a necessity, then he has completely missed the point and failed to discern the value of temptation altogether. If we cannot see that the temptation of Adam and Eve was a necessary part of God's plan, then I fear we have missed the point and failed to see the plan. The temptation of the Son of God in the wilderness was a necessity, and so also are temptation, trial, suffering, misunderstanding, disappointment, poverty and all else necessary in your life and mine. When we understand what the will of the Lord is, we can say blessed is the man that endureth temptation, for, when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord has promised to them that love Him. James 1:12

LAYING ASIDE THE WEIGHTS

My heart's desire is that all who read these truths may be filled with the conviction that God our Father is preparing a people to share the image of Christ and reign with Him. First we shall reign with Him in that age we call the millennium, which is the kingdom of God, when the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord. Second, we shall reign with Him in the dispensation of the fullness of times when all things will be gathered unto Him. Eph. 1:10 Then we will reign with Him in the ages of the ages when the whole universe becomes subject to the Father in heaven. 1 Cor. 15:25-28 If we imagine that our main ministry is now in this present age, we have accepted one of the greatest errors the system of Babylon was capable of teaching. We all should realize that, while we are given some opportunity to minister in this age, this age is principally a time of preparation for the true ministry to come. With this understanding we begin as true sons of God to lay hold on the hope set before us. Even our blessed Lord Jesus Christ lived with this hope in view. He knew that His main ministry lay in the ages to come, for thus it is written of Him: "Who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God." Heb. 12:2 Why did He sit down at the right hand of the Father? The answer is that He sat down by the Father's throne to take the reins of government, first, to reign by Himself over the mystical church; second, to reign with His brothers, the sons of God, over the kingdom of God; and third, to reign with the sons of God and the bride in the dispensation of the fullness of times. How clearly we see in this the ever increasing glory of His kingdom, and our understanding is enlightened as to the true meaning of this statement: "Who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God." How marvelous are Thy works, O God Almighty, and Thy ways past finding out! Who hath known the mind of the Lord or who can instruct Him? For from Him everything comes, by Him everything exists, and in Him everything ends. Glory to Him unto the ages of the ages! Amen and amen!

Since, then, we have such marvelous hope pulsating in our breasts, what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness? If this is the age of preparation, should we not prepare ourselves? Ought we not in this one thing imitate our Lord, who for the joy set before Him endured all things? Let us avail ourselves of every means of grace, laying aside every weak and beggarly thing that binds us to this present age that we might partake fully of Him and share with Him in that abundant glory which is set before us. As for me, I shall gladly count all things but loss and utter trash unworthy of the least notice that I may share with Him in that infinite glory and reign with Him unto the ages of the ages.

Hear now the wise instruction of our brother, Peter, for it is true that God gave to him the keys (plural) of the kingdom. "Rid yourselves, therefore," said he, "of all ill-will and all deceitful-ness, of insincerity and envy, and of all evil speaking. Thirst, like newly-born infants, for pure milk for the soul, that by it you may grow up to salvation; if you have had any taste of the goodness of the Lord. Come to Him, the living Stone, rejected indeed of men, but in God's esteem chosen and valuable. And yourselves also like living stones be built up into a spiritual house, as a holy priesthood to offer spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God through Jesus Christ. For it is contained in scripture, See, I am placing in Zion a cornerstone, chosen and valuable, and he whose faith rests on Him shall never be disappointed." 1 Pet. 2:1-6 (Weymouth) "You are a chosen race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a people belonging to God... I entreat you as strangers and foreigners to restrain the cravings of your lower natures which wage war upon the soul; to live honorable lives that God may be glorified; to submit for the Lord's sake to the authority set up by man, (emperor or governors), for it is God's will that by doing well you silence the ignorable talk of foolish persons. Servants, submit to your masters with respect, not only to the kind, but to the unreasonable. Married women, be submissive to your husbands. Married men, love your wives and live with them with a clear recognition that they are not as strong as you are, but, being heirs together of the grace of life, treat them with honor, that your prayers be not hindered. Be kind, harmonious, sympathetic, tender-hearted, lowly-minded, not requiting evil with evil, but blessing instead, because you have been called to be a blessing. He who wishes to enjoy life (the life of the ages) let him restrain his tongue from evil and his lips from deceitful words. Let him turn away from all evil and do good; let him seek peace and pursue it. For the eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous, and His ears are open to their supplication; but the face of the Lord is set against evil-doers." See 1 Pet. 2:9-20 (Weymouth)

In the epistle to the Hebrews we have this simple and instructive statement: "Wherefore, seeing we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us." Heb. 12:1 Runners in a race always lay aside their garments so that the race may be run with the least possible impediment. The world's best swimmers often shave off all the hair from their bodies so that their passage through the water will not be impeded. If men to win a corruptible crown lay aside every weight with every hindering thing and strain every well trained muscle and nerve to win, how much more then should their example teach us to lay aside all hindering weights that we for whom an incorruptible crown is being prepared may better run the race that is set before us. See, then, what wisdom Paul uses in this urgent exhortation: "Lay aside every weight, and the sin that doth so easily beset us."

You will rightly conclude from this passage that weights and sins are not necessarily the same thing. Christians are forever impeding their spiritual progress with seemingly harmless weights. "What harm is there in it?" so often they ask. But they are weights none-the-less, so completely able to handicap their progress in the race of life that they will be instrumental in denying them a place in His body and in His throne. There is no sin in eating, but, if a runner over-indulges even in such a simple pleasure, he will not only lose the race, but possibly fall out long before the finish line. Those who indulge the flesh to the detriment of the spirit can do nothing but fail, because ours is a spiritual race.

While Peter is saying, "Lay side all malice, and all guile, and hypocrisies, and envies, and evil speakings," 1 Pet. 2:1, Paul is exhorting, "Put off all these; anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth. Lie not one to another”. Col. 3:8-9 Again in verse 5, "Mortify (kill) your earthly inclinations (Weymouth); fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection (sensual passion), evil concupiscence (unholy desire), and covetousness (greed), which is idolatry."

We do not have space here to consider in detail any one of these weights and sins mentioned above, but it is time God's people disassociated themselves from all forms of the sex craze of our day. Sex in all its inordinate manifestations was the chief offender in bringing about the flood in Noah’s day. Sex in every perverted form was responsible for the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, and sex rampant, perverted, twisted, mingled, exposed, unabashed, and depraved is hurling the present age into the fearful maelstrom of the great tribulation. Blessed is he who in this hour of filth and corruption watcheth and keepeth his garment spotless!

Paul, who said "put off" all these corrupt things that impede our progress, exhorted us to "put on" those things that would quicken our step and hasten our growth. "Put on" therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, longsuffering; forbearing one another, and forgiving one another ... And above all these things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness. Let the peace of God rule in your hearts (remembering that He is our peace)... Let the word of Christ dwell in your richly... Col. 3:12-16 He who feasts upon the living word sups with Christ, giving Him place to dwell richly in the heart. "Whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus... Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as it is fit in the Lord. Husbands, love your wives, and be not bitter against them. Children, obey your parents in all things: for this is well pleasing unto the Lord. Fathers, provoke not your children to anger, lest they be discouraged. Servants, obey in all things your masters... Col. 3:17-22 Walk in wisdom toward them that are without. Col. 4:5. Let your speech be with grace. Verse 6. Continue in prayer and thanksgiving. Verse 2.

Now "blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to His abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time." 1 Pet. 1:3-5 Seeing we have such a hope, we use great plainness of speech, and, beholding as in a mirror the glory of the Lord, we are changed into the image of Christ from one glory to another by the Spirit of the Lord. See 2 Cor. 3:18

Let us, then, cast aside all hindering weights that tradition has heaped upon us and, delivering our feet from the snares that impede our progress to the distant peaks sublime, let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking only to Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith.

THE TRANSGURATION

The life of our Lord Jesus Christ from beginning to end was punctuated by many times of crisis. All these were ordered of God and ordained to accomplish some infinite purpose in the great plan of redemption. His virgin birth was a crisis event, of which we cannot now speak in particular. That birth, nevertheless, was the birth of a God man. By it God was manifest in the flesh. Through the miracle of this wonderful incarnation God came into the realm of man and by it man comes into the realm of God. Here in Christ Jesus God and man are united. "Mercy and truth are met together; righteousness and peace have kissed each other. Truth shall spring out of the earth; and righteousness shall look down from heaven." Psa. 85:10-11

Many years after His birth came the crisis hour of His baptism and announcement of His adoption. After He was baptized, the heavens opened and a voice from heaven proclaimed His adoption and mature Sonship in these words: "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.” Then followed the crisis of the threefold temptation in which He proved Himself victor over the world, the flesh and the devil. The ministry that followed His baptism and temptation is the most remarkable phenomenon in the history of the world. All the shining lights of former years paled before this rising Sun of Righteousness as candles fade before the light of day. Following this came the annunciation of His death, then the marvelous transfiguration, the agonies of Gethsemane, His trial, His crucifixion and burial, His triumphant resurrection and His ascension into heaven, where He remains in immortality, awaiting the glad hour of His second coming. This He promised by this most emphatic statement, "If I go away, I will come again and receive you unto Myself, that where I am there ye may be also."

While each of these momentous occurrences deserves to be considered separately and in detail, it will be our purpose now to consider with the little understanding we have the wonders of the transfiguration. God grant that, as we explore its available depths, our spirits may be edified and our desire increased for the glory and power of His coming.

The books of Daniel and Revelation each contain visions of a glorious One, which are most remarkable for their similarity. Daniel, during his fervent seeking for God by fasting and prayer, was lifted into the realm of the Spirit and, raising his eyes, he beheld "a certain man clothed in linen, whose loins were girded with the fine gold of Uphaz: His body was like the beryl (chrysolite), and his face as the appearance of lightning, and his eyes as lamps of fire, and his arms and his feet like in color to polished brass, and the voice of his words like the voice of a multitude." Dun. 10:5-6

It is not necessary that we point out here the similarity between the vision and that of John in Rev. 1. The agreement is clearly seen by reading the passages, but that John and Daniel were actually beholding the same glorified person there can be no doubt whatever. John, overwhelmed by this vision of the fullness of Christ, writes these awesome words: "And I turned to see the voice that spake with me. And being turned, I saw seven golden candlesticks; and in the midst of the seven candlesticks one like unto the Son of man, clothed with a garment down to the foot, and girt about the paps with a golden girdle. His head and his hairs were white like wool, as white as snow; and his eyes were as aflame of fire; and his feet like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace; and his voice as the sound of many waters." Rev. 1:12-15

Can we doubt that this personage so vividly described by Daniel and John was other than the person portrayed by Matthew, Mark and Luke in their gospels and seen by Peter, James and John in the mount of transfiguration? These gospel writers tell us that, as He prayed, He was transfigured before them, and His face did shine as the sun. and His raiment was white as the light. Matt. 17:1,2; Mark 9:2,3; Luke 9:28-30. Again it is clearly evident that this Christ of the transfiguration is the same radiant One whom John saw coming through the open heaven with the armies of heaven following upon white horses. His eyes were aflame of fire and on His head were many crowns.

He was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood, and His name is called The Word of God. Rev. 19:11-16

Several crisis events preceded the transfiguration of Jesus, the Christ, all of which should be considered as essential to the great event itself. At the time of the transfiguration the end of Christ's earthly ministry was drawing near and the cross of Calvary loomed large on the horizon. In the sixteenth chapter of Matthew the record states that Jesus had inquired of His disciples concerning the public opinion of Himself. "Whom do men say that I, the Son of man, am?" He had asked. His disciples, well acquainted with public opinion, replied, "Some say that Thou art John the Baptist; some Elias; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets." But Jesus, after hearing this, asked this more pertinent question: "But whom say ye that I am?" And Simon Peter answered and said, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Responding to this confession, Jesus said, "Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven." Matt. 16:13-17 How remarkable this confession was can only be understood by those to whom God had revealed His Son. Such truth as this comes not by books nor by teaching. That Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, is revealed to us only by the Spirit. "What man knoweth the things of a man save the spirit of man which is in him? Even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God." 1 Cor. 2:11 And again, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him. But God hath revealed them unto us by His Spirit; for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God." 1 Cor. 2:9-10 It is sad, but true, that the pulpits of our land are occupied by men who question and doubt the deity of Jesus Christ. An incredible number of these men see Jesus as nothing more than the son of Joseph and Mary, while to others He is God in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself. Without the spirit of revelation truth lies lifeless and dead. It is the Spirit that quickeneth. The flesh profiteth nothing. Flesh and blood can reveal no spiritual thing. Only the Spirit of God can do that.
Now notice what follows Peter’s confession and Christ’s commendation of him. We are told in Matt. 16:21, “From that time forth began Jesus to shew unto His disciples how that He must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and be raised again the third day.” But strangely this same Peter, who had been blessed with such a wonderful revelation, is now seen to have no understanding at all of Christ’s real mission to earth - that He might die for the world. Thus, when Jesus began to speak of His approaching suffering and death, Peter took Him and began to rebuke Him, saying, "Be it far from Thee, Lord: this shall not be unto Thee." The utmost necessity of the cross was not understood by Peter nor by any of the disciples. This cross, like all spiritual truth, must be by revelation even as our identification with the cross comes by revelation. While Jesus spoke of the glory and the kingdom to come, the disciples were heartily with Him, but when He introduced the subject of His suffering and death, they drew back in unbelief and fear. If Christ could enter into His glory without suffering, their hearts were with Him, but if suffering and death were involved, they became afraid and withdrawn. It is of infinite importance that we learn early in our experience that suffering is essential to reigning. If we suffer with Him, we reign with Him. If we were heartily with Him, but when He introduced the subject of His suffering and death, they drew back in unbelief and fear. If Christ could enter into His glory without suffering, their hearts were with Him, but if suffering and death were involved, they became afraid and withdrawn. It is of infinite importance that we learn early in our experience that suffering is essential to reigning. If we suffer with Him, we reign with Him. If we deny Him, He will deny us. The man or woman who shies away from the cross laid upon him by the Lord will find himself lacking on the great day of rewards. "If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow Me." Matt. 16:24 Those who accept the cross are prepared to reign. Those who refuse it are weeded out. At the suggestion of a cross and suffering bold Peter at first drew back in horror, rebuking his blessed Master for even making mention of such possibility. He sought to save Him from the cross and hinder Him from the fulfillment of His greatest mission to earth. "For the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many." Then Jesus, turning to Peter, said, "Get thee behind Me, Satan: thou art an offence unto Me: for thou savourest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men."

We are living in a sad and pitiful hour, a day when the cross of Christ is shunned. Christianity and the ministry in our day have become glamour things, glamorous enough that Hollywood stars play saints to increase their wealth. The world's pop singers feign religion and conversion because they make millions selling their records. Men no longer glory in the cross, but rather in the popularity they attain by feigning the new birth and pretending to be Christians. They desire no true identification with the sufferings of Christ, but want instead to enjoy the best of everything of this world and heaven at the end. And this, it seems, may have been a part of Peter’s problem. He could envisage the kingdom and the glory that went with it, but from the cross that stood between he turned aside, hoping to avoid the suffering at all cost. He quickly rebuked the Lord for even mentioning it. Peter was hindering Christ’s true mission because his thoughts were not the thoughts of God, but the thoughts of men. The cross was unsavory to him. He "savored not" the things of God, but the things that pleased men. This stern rebuke given by Jesus to Peter should also suffice for us all. Let us now lay aside every weight and every sin and earthly desire that does so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith, who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the majesty on high. It is the way of the cross that leads to the glorious throne and it is the way of the cross that fits men for the crown. There is no other way and there is no other name but His by, which we can be saved.

The rebuke given to Peter was very severe, but surely it needed to be given since his thoughts were ruinous to his hopes of future glory. So also to shun the cross is ruinous to us. His strong rebuke was immediately followed by these kind and blessed words of instruction: "Then said Jesus unto His disciples, If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow Me. For whosoever will save his life shall lose it: and whosoever will lose his life for My sake shall find it." Then in verse 27 the importance of following Christ is vividly seen in these words: "For the Son of man shall come in the glory of His Father with His angels; and then shall He reward every man according to his works."

Following these words of rebuke and exhortation comes a promise, which must have staggered their understanding. "Verily I say unto you, There be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the Son of man coming in His kingdom." The transfiguration, which followed after six days, was a true revelation of the kingdom of God. Peter, James and John, who were privileged to go with Him into the mount, beheld in miniature, but with no diminishing of glory, the exact circumstances that will prevail in that coming reign of blessedness for which saints have prayed ever since Jesus taught us to say, "Thy kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven. ... for Thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory forever.”
It is a most remarkable thing that, though John was the only one of the four gospel writers who experienced the glories of the mount of transfiguration, he alone omits all mention of it in his writings. He leaves the description of it to Matthew, Mark and Luke, who undoubtedly heard it from Peter, James and John. Peter, however, in his epistle made one brief mention of its glory when he wrote, "For we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eyewitnesses of His majesty. For He received from God the Father honor and glory, when there came such a voice to Him from the excellent glory. This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with Him in the holy mount." 2 Pet. 1:16-18 In this great statement of truth Peter clearly states that what they saw in the mount was actually a revelation of the power and coming of Jesus Christ. They saw Him exactly as He will be in the glory of the kingdom age. Thus was the miracle of the transfiguration a view in miniature of the excellent glories of the millennial reign, which things we will now briefly consider.

We are coming ever nearer to the long awaited kingdom of God. All about us there is the knowledge that old things are rapidly passing away and the new day of blessedness so long desired and so long prayed for is at hand. The whole creation for six thousand years has ceaselessly groaned for the manifestation of the sons of God. The blessed manifestation has been long in coming, but it will surely come. Once in the fullness of time God sent forth His Son, Jesus Christ, to suffer and die for the world, and when the fullness of time comes once more, nothing will hinder the manifestation of the sons of God. The Lord Himself will bring them forth in the manner so vividly described in Revelation, chapter nineteen, and again in this great display of kingdom things so clearly manifest in the transfiguration. In the day of the manifestation of the sons of God heaven and earth will rejoice and every creature will be glad. Throughout this whole age of grace Christ has purposely hidden His power and glory from the world, even as Habakkuk wrote, "His glory covered the heavens, and the earth was full of His praise. And His brightness was as the light: He had horns coming out of His hand: and there was the hiding of His power." Hab. 3:3-4 The Lord will not hide His power forever, but in the age to come His might will be manifested in all the world. Though His glory has been hidden throughout the ages, at certain times and on rare occasions that hidden glory has flashed forth into prominence before the eyes of the few who for reasons known to God were permitted to experience unspeakable things unlawful for a man to utter. So it came to pass that these disciples, who so lately had shrunk in amazement from the thought of crucifixion and death, were now given the opportunity to see for themselves the results that would come from His suffering and the travail of His soul. They were now to see the glory that would follow the cross, even as the scripture has spoken of "the sufferings of Christ and the glory that should follow." 1 Pet 1:11

The dazzling glory of this experience is gathered from the accounts of the three gospel writers. "He was transfigured before them," says Matthew, "and His face did shine as the sun, and His raiment was white as the light." To this Mark adds this descriptive sentence: "His raiment became shining, exceeding white as snow; so as no fuller on earth can white them." Luke in his account adds the significant statement, "His countenance was altered, and His raiment was white and glistening." The significance of the word glistens is that that which glistens is merely reflecting light as a bright object might reflect the light of the sun, but that which glisters shines from light that comes from within itself. It was in this manner of animated illumination that Jesus was seen in transfiguration. The light, which He really, is was shining as the sun from within Himself. Can we wonder that a glad day is coming when there will be no need of the sun to shine by day or of the moon to shine by night for the Lord God giveth them light? All three gospel writers solemnly direct our attention to the outstanding prominence of whiteness and light. The light with which Jesus was clothed on this sublime occasion was none other than the light of life. "In Him was life, and the life was the light of men." The garments that clothed Him on this supernal day of transfiguration were not the garments of earth, but the garments of life and immortality.

This, I am convinced, is the manner in which the first Adam appeared in his original glory, clothed, not in tattered wrappings of men, but the celestial vestments of life and light, naked insofar as man's attire is concerned, but clothed upon with that house from heaven, the light and life of God. When transgression overtook Adam, the covering of light vanished away, and the life in which he had hitherto lived and moved and had his being now faded and disappeared, and Adam was dead in trespasses and sins. "In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shall surely die," the Lord had forewarned; and die he did, for just as surely as darkness is the absence of light, so death is the absence of life. The only life then left to Adam was that fleeting, transient thing akin to animal life which now flowed sullenly through the veins of his body to maintain some semblance of life till his heart would forget to beat, but, as far as the life of God was concerned, Adam was dead - dead in spirit and dead in body. For this reason Paul, writing to the Ephesian Christians, made this remarkable statement: "You hath He quickened (made alive) who were dead in trespasses and sins." In this same condition of death Christ finds us and we find ourselves when He first calls us and shows us the way of life. By means of repentance and faith that which was dead is made alive by the Spirit of regeneration and we, being quickened by the power of His resurrection, are made alive unto God. Eternal life - yea, the life which Christ is - is reborn within us and the working of that resurrection life, that marvelous power that raised Christ from the dead, will never end until the hour of our own transfiguration. Those who partake of the life of Christ are changed by His Spirit from glory to glory, more and more and yet more into the image of God.

With overwhelming awe these three men awakened from the drowsiness of their sleep, for they had been sleeping, Luke 9:32, to gaze in wonder at the magnificence of the transfigured form of their master. Luke tells us that "as He prayed, the fashion of His countenance was altered, and His raiment was white and glistering." Luke 9:29 Matthew says His face shone as the sun. In their association with Jesus they had often seen Him as a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. Day after day He had shared the sorrows of sin-cursed and broken man and had bitterly wept because of their unbelief. He had told them of the cross, which was soon to engulf His life and of the rejection and suffering that would precede His crucifixion. No doubt they had become accustomed to seeing Him a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, distressed by the blindness of those who received Him not. But now, as He prayed, the fashion of His countenance was altered, and He stood transfigured before them.

It was many years after this heavenly event that Peter wrote, "We were eyewitnesses of His majesty." The word majesty occurs only three times in scripture. Once it is translated mighty power, once magnificence, and once majesty. It speaks of splendor, beauty, glory and power and that which overwhelms the human mind, enlightening the believer to the beauty of holiness and worship, subduing the nature and inciting to the depths of veneration and adoration. The light that shone from the face of Moses when he returned from the glory of Sinai was a reflected light which, though glorious, soon faded from his aspect, but the light that lightened the countenance of Christ was not a reflection but the out-shining glory of that life-light which He is, radiating and glistering through the veil of His humanity, which hitherto had hidden His illustrious magnificence, until His raiment sparkled in splendor - not from an outward shining that fell upon Him, but from the inherent flashing forth of His own more excellent glory.

It is so very essential in our walk with God that times should come in our experience when Christ becomes far more to us than Jesus, the meek and lowly man of sorrows. That He is meek and lowly in heart none dare doubt who even carelessly have read the account of His wonderful life, but there are other scriptures which clearly show that His name is above every name. No authority in the universe is greater than His. His glory is the more excellent glory. It is the glory that excelleth. God has highly exalted Him and given Him a name, which is above every name that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow and every tongue should swear, of things in heaven and things in earth and things under the earth. Phil. 2:10 with Isa. 45:23 His blood is better than the blood of Abel. His power is greater than that of angels. In Him dwelleth all the wisdom of the universe. He was before all things. He Himself is the beginning. He is the end of all things in that all things have their end in Him. All things were made by Him and all things were made for Him, and by Him all things consist. He is the head of the body, the church, the bride. He is the head of all principalities and powers. He raises up rulers and puts them down. He is the Prince of the kings of the earth.

The disciples of Jesus had become accustomed to seeing Jesus the man, Jesus the healer, Jesus the man of sorrows. They had heard Him tell of the splendor of the kingdom to come, but had never grasped the significance of its glory or the majesty and power of the Christ who was to reign in that coming age of restitution and reconstitution so wonderfully foretold by the prophets. So accustomed had they become to His presence and so out of harmony with the true Spirit of the Christ and the vision of His kingdom that, Luke tells us plainly, they had all fallen asleep in their prayers on the mount. "Peter and they that were with him were heavy with sleep; and when they were awake, they saw His glory, and the two men that stood with Him." Luke 9:32. Brethren, I wonder if many of us, and perchance all of us, are now in this day of trial and crisis fallen fast asleep to the true circumstances so evident all about us. We become so occupied with facts and figures, which in themselves are good, but we so easily forget that it is the Spirit that makes truth living and real.
Have we become heavy with sleep and thus failed to behold Christ's glory? I know of a certainty that men could not speak of Jesus Christ so lightly if their spiritual eyes had grasped the glory of His majesty and power. No one who has tasted or in any way shared the exalted sacredness of His majesty and power could ever lightly refer to Him as "the man upstairs" as so many of these light-hearted and empty-headed preachers often do, though holy angels, mighty in glory and strength, bow in reverence before Him and cherubim cover their faces as they proclaim His holiness.

Among the most beautiful and awe-inspiring chapters in God's dear book, Isaiah chapter six stands out in its magnificence. Here the prophet tells of his vision of the Lord, which occurred in the year that king Uzziah died. Uzziah was a reasonably good king and Isaiah had often ministered to him, but so often the people we like and admire and the people upon whom we are prone to lean and depend are taken in death or removed in some other way from us so that we can see the Lord. This had been the experience of Isaiah the prophet and thus he wrote: "In the year that king Uzziah died I saw also the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and His train filled the temple. Above it stood the seraphims: each one had six wings; with twain he covered his face, and with twain he covered his feet, and with twain he did fly. And one cried unto another, and said, Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts: the whole earth is full of His glory. And the posts of the door moved at the voice of him that cried, and the house was filled with smoke. Then said I, Woe is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips: for mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts." Isa. 6:1-5. See now in this how man's glory quickly fades into nothingness before the glory of Christ? See how human opinions and reputation vanish into insignificance in the light of the glory that excelleth? And see also how unclean we feel in the presence of His holiness, where cherubim, always the guardians of all that is sacred, cover their faces and cry one to another, "Holy, holy, holy is the Lord God of hosts. The whole earth is full of His glory."

It was not until the perfect and upright Job saw the Lord that he cried out in his uncleanness and despair, "I have heard of Thee with the hearing of the ear, but now mine eye seeth Thee; wherefore I abhor myself and repent in dust and ashes." Job 42:6 Even Peter, upon seeing the miraculous draught of fishes, saw the glory of God's Christ and cried out in fear, "Depart from me, for I am a sinful man, O Lord!" Luke 5:8 John likewise, upon seeing the radiance of Christ in the Patmos vision, fell as one dead before the majesty and power of the heavenly specter. Ah, my dearly beloved, refrain your lips from ever speaking of Christ or of God in any terms but those most sacred and in words conveying the highest respect and adoration for His wonderful name, the name above all names. He is the King of kings. He is the Prince of the kings of the earth, the fairest among ten thousands. Great men of earth should be treated with utmost respect, but Christ with utmost reverence. Should the President of the United States or the Queen of England come into my presence, I would rise immediately to do them honor; but should Jesus the Christ come into my presence, I would fall before Him in adoration to give Him worship.

I once read of an incident that impressed me. At a party given by Princess Margaret of England a young man lacking in proper respect, while speaking to the princess, lightly referred to King George VI as "your dad". With a flash of indignant fire in her eye at this ill-mannered disrespect for the king of a mighty Commonwealth, the princess retorted, "I suppose you mean His Majesty". Perhaps you will smile at this, but the word of God teaches us to give honor to whom honor is due, and so we should. How much more should we be fully awake to the transcending glory of Christ, for it is by beholding Him as He is that we are changed into that same image.

Luke has told us that, as He prayed, the fashion of His countenance was altered and His raiment became white and glistening. Luke 9:29 But sad it is to say that, while He prayed and was transformed, His disciples had fallen asleep at their prayers and they remained unchanged, as natural and carnal as ever. No saint has yet fully estimated the transforming power of prayer and communion with God.

The word transfigure is derived from the Greek word metamorphoo, which means to transform, (meta, beyond, and morphe, form). From this Greek root comes our English word metamorphosis, which means to change from one form, shape or substance to another, as from a chrysalis to a butterfly. The transformation or metamorphosis of a worm possessing a voracious appetite for natural food to a butterfly that has appetite only for nectar is the best, known example of a metamorphosis. In like manner our Lord upon the mount of transfiguration was transformed or altered from the lowly Jesus of Nazareth they had known to the glorified Christ He was to be after the suffering of death, the power of the resurrection and the exaltation of His ascension into heaven. It is most important to see that He was transformed into the likeness that will be His in that glorious kingdom age when He will be King of kings and we in like glory shall reign with Him.

The Greek word metamorphoo appears only four times in the New Testament. In Matt. 17:2 and Mark 9:2 it is translated transfigured; in Rom. 12:2, transformed, and in 1 Cor. 15:51, changed. A thoughtful study and comparison of these four passages will yield a fruitful understanding. It is a most remarkable thing that the word transfigured, which refers to the glory of His transfiguration on the mount, should also be used in another form with reference to the experience of believers who are to come into that same image of Christ. Let us consider the wonder of this thing carefully, because it is certain that metamorphosis has already begun in us and will continue until the complete transformation has taken place. Too many of us are inclined to sit with folded hands, waiting for a change in some future day though God's word clearly shows that this process of change has already begun.

Notice then how in Rom. 12:2 the apostle say, "Be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed (transfigured) by the renewing of your minds, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God." Paul wrote to the Philippians, saying, "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus." Now the mind that was in Christ Jesus was the Father's mind. Biologists have discovered that it is a certain hormone in the brain of the caterpillar that actually causes the metamorphosis from the chrysalis stage to the butterfly. This is a wonderful discovery, but how true it becomes when we apply it here to the mind of Christ, for it is the mind of Christ that begins the change, works the change and completes the change until our transfiguration is complete at the resurrection of the body, when the complete change from the corruptible to the incorruptible takes place. 1 Cor. 15:51-53 Make no mistake about it! It is the dead in Christ only who rise first. Not the carnal and corrupt dead. No, not even the carnal Christian, but the dead in Christ. Paul declares forthrightly in Rom. 12:2 that this transformation, this change, this transfiguration, this metamorphosis actually begins with the casting off of the corrupt and carnal mind and the replacing of it with the mind of Christ. Notice that he says, "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind..." Never yield your bodies to sin and to the many lusts and desires of the flesh, but present them instead to God as a holy and living sacrifice. We are living in an age of abominable conformity to the world and to every lust and passion of the world and the flesh, but these things have no place in the lives of Christians. God's people should be pure in body and in mind. He that is joined to an harlot is one flesh with her. Therefore Paul says, "Can I take the members of Christ and make them the members of an harlot?" We are exhorted to flee fornication, for he that committeth fornication sinneth against his own body, and certainly against the body of Christ.

If you long to have your mind renewed, then put off all these: anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth. Lie not one to another, seeing ye have put off the old man with his deeds and have put on the new man, which is renewed in the image of Christ. And, as you put off all these, then put on all these: bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, longsuffering, and above all these put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness. Quit watching the T.V. with its filth and corruption, its violence and immorality, for such things cater only to the corrupt and carnal mind and to every hurtful and deceitful lust. Read your Bible instead and become acquainted with all its heavenly precepts, for thus saith the Lord, "The entrance of Thy word giveth light." It is no wonder that the church system is so full of light-headed, light-hearted, carnal and sinful Christians, since they allow their minds to be filled with so many harmful and hurtful things, at the same time neglecting the hours of prayer and communion with God so essential to sonship and the exercise above all else that brings about the transfiguration of the mind. If Christians would take this one-eyed god before whom they sit in worship for hours every day and cast it into the fire, giving it no more place in their houses, and would instead spend the time they wasted watching its corruption in reading and prayer, conversing with their children or enjoying family worship, in one year's time they would be absolutely amazed at the change in their home life, in their relationship with God, in their communion with their wives or husbands and with their children. If God's people would enter into His mind, His glory and His reign, they must first cast away everything that hinders the development of the mind of Christ in them. I do not say they are not saved, but if they live in carnality, they will be saved "so as by fire." No man who leaves this life with the carnal mind still on the throne will be fit to reign with Christ in His kingdom. Only those transformed by His mind will reign with Him. "... Put off concerning the former conversation the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts; and be renewed in the spirit of your mind; and that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness." Eph. 4:22-24

As Jesus prayed on the mount, He was transfigured before them. At that moment of transfiguration two celestial visitors appeared on the scene. Moses, who represented and gave the law, and Elijah, who represented the prophets, appeared in glory that is, transfigured with Christ. Moses gave the law, Elijah called the people of Israel back to the law, and Christ came to fulfill every jot and tittle of the law. Those who have Christ dwelling in them have the law written in their hearts and by their new nature do the things, which are written in the law. The law of God is perfect, enlightening the eyes. The testimonies of the Lord are right, making wise the simple. The law was given to lead men to Christ. The Ten Commandments were never done away. The only part of the law that was done away was the law of commandments contained in ordinances, which are not the same thing as the Ten Commandments. Christ died to fulfill the law and give unto us His Spirit and His life, by which His holy commandment could be written and engraved upon our hearts.

When these two heavenly visitors came to the mount, it must have been with profound amazement that the disciples gave heed to the solemn subject of their conversation. Luke records the discourse in chapter 9:30,31 thus: "And, behold, there talked with Him two men, which were Moses and Elias: who appeared in glory, and spake of His decease which He should accomplish at Jerusalem." The very death, which Peter had said should never be was the topic of their conversation on the mount. No more important event could ever be in the history of the world for time past or time to come than the death that Christ was to accomplish at Jerusalem. This momentous event was worthy of discussion on the highest level imaginable because the time had come and the hour had arrived which God Himself had predestinated before the world began. The Lamb, slain in God's purpose before the foundation of the world to bring the universe back into harmony with God, was now to be sacrificed in actuality. These two notable men now conversed with Christ concerning the death He should accomplish to secure eternal redemption for His creation. There is no other way than the way of the cross. Glory in what else we may, we must return to this important fact, "God forbid that I should glory save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world."

It amazes me that even in the light of such heavenly things poor Peter, awakening from his drowsiness and seeing the majesty of Christ and the transfigured forms of Moses and Elijah and hearing the conversation concerning the things that Christ would accomplish by His death, should yet be so dull in his understanding that he would put forward a suggestion that might yet avoid the cross. Perhaps I am mistaken, but it appears that his hope that Christ would avoid the cross may have been the notion that prompted him to say, "Let us make three tabernacles; one for Thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias." I fully realize that the Feast of Tabernacles signifies the coming of the Lord, and this may have been Peter's thought, but more likely his natural mind still dreaded the cross, so to build three tabernacles and remain where they were would be a splendid way to avoid it. Christ was transfigured. Moses and Elijah appeared in glory. Surely that was sufficient. Let us then remain in this condition of glory and splendor forever. But nothing of glory can be any more than a vision in the night until the cross has been met, death has been accomplished, the blood has been shed, and life eternal released and shed abroad that all men may have life and return to the image of the heavenly Father. Thus if there is no cross, there is no glory, no kingdom, no crown, no restitution of all things. The hope of the universe centers around the cross. The cross is the center of the ages and the center and hub of all God's purposes for time and eternity.

It is more than coincidence that, as Peter spoke, a cloud overshadowed them and a Voice came out of the cloud, saying, "This is My beloved Son: hear Him." Peter had given his opinion and ten thousand other men have given theirs, but human opinions mean nothing and are worth less than nothing. The only begotten Son of God will be heard when all other voices fall silent. All other plans must be laid aside, all other human purpose abandoned and forgotten in the light of His superseding knowledge and truth. The end of all this heavenly visitation was glorious indeed and the result just as Christ intended, for "when the disciples heard it, they fell on their face, and were sore afraid. And Jesus came and touched them, and said, Arise, and be not afraid. And when they lifted up their eyes, they saw no man, save Jesus only." Matt. 17:6-8 That was a happy ending to their fears of the cross, and it will be a happy ending to your fears and mine when we hear Him say, "This is My beloved Son in whom I am well pleased: hear ye Him." O how good it would be for us all if in this hour of many voices, so many opinions, so many Hollywood star evangelists we would obey God and, coming out from among them, would listen to Jesus only!

Nothing that ever occurred in the life of Christ or in all history portrays the kingdom of God so vividly as does the transfiguration. The promise was that some of them would not taste of death till they had seen the kingdom of God come with power. From this event we learn that in the kingdom of God Jesus will be glorified and He, being the head of the Christ body, assures the saints that all who are in Christ will be glorified in Him. Likewise also the saints of ages past will share that same glory. "The glory that Thou gavest Me I have given them."

The transfiguration of Christ manifests the consummation of His human life. He was born into the world as recorded in the holy scripture. He advanced through life from a babe in His mother's arms through childhood, through temptation and testing and the severity of public ministry to exaltation, transfiguration and glory. In this wonderful progression so evident in His life it is possible for us to behold the divine intention of every man. Beginning as we do in weakness and imitation in childhood, we pass through the uncertain years of youth, enduring temptation and gaining the victory through abiding in Christ. Then, when the race is run and the tumultuous journey is complete, we enter into the glory of resurrection by the way of incorruption and immortality.

Look, if you will, upon a tiny seed. It is without beauty and without radiance or glory, but in this tiny husk lie the gorgeous colors of the magnificent flower that will appear after the seed has fallen into the ground and died. In the transfiguration God's plan for saints blossomed in splendor like the sun, in whiteness like the light, in glory as a flash of lightning scintillating with radiance through the darkness. This is God's intention for man - first the glory of Christ, the pioneer and apostle, and then the glory of all mankind, each in his own order.

The transfiguration being a miniature view of the kingdom, it is no wonder that Jesus taught us to pray, "Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven... For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, forever, Amen." Matt. 6:9-13

THIS IS YOUR HOUR

At a definite hour appointed by God John the Baptist lifted up his voice in the wilderness, crying, "Prepare ye the way of the Lord; make His paths straight." Matt. 3:3 His message was "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." The long time of waiting was over. The first appearance of the King of glory was at hand. Dispensations in their successive order from innocence to law had come and gone, leaving with the world their own precious message of truth, truth as timeless and enduring as God Himself, truth which will endure when heaven and earth and dispensations are passed away, truth which was the expression of the divine mind and the perfect will of God. But now a new day was dawning; a new order was appearing on the earth. The time allotted for other dispensations had been fulfilled and the period of waiting was past. Though the sleeping world and the drowsy priesthood of the existing decadent systems knew it not, the hour had arrived for the Son of God, the King of the coming kingdom, to reveal Himself personally upon the earth. The time had not yet come for him to reveal Himself as King of kings and Lord of lords nor yet to set up His kingdom and to reign over all the earth, but the hour had arrived for Him to prepare that mystical kingdom, the body of Christ. It was time for the King to establish His throne in believing hearts and to fill them with the very spirit of the coming kingdom. The hour had come for the King to regenerate and separate a people in His image and likeness in preparation for the day when the kingdom of God would spread its glory like a mantle of light over all the earth. A people different from all people who had ever appeared on the earth were now to come forth, born of the Spirit from above, a people possessing the Spirit of His Son, a people who from their hearts cry, "Abba Father, Thy will be done in earth even as it is done in heaven."

Laws written on tables of stone were to be forever abolished. Henceforth the tables of the heart would be the living stones upon which God would indelibly inscribe His eternal law and His everlasting will. No longer would carnal men wince beneath the stentorian tones of a voice from without, crying, "Thou shalt not", but hearts, transformed by the Holy Spirit and washed in the blood of the Lamb of God, would smile up into God's face to say with adoration, "I delight to do Thy will. O God; Yea, Thy law is written within my heart." Psa. 40:8 Say not, oh man, that the law of God, the only perfect law in the universe, is done away! The law of God is the very expression of God's nature and the manifestation of His perfect will. The law is removed indeed from its place on tables of stone to be written forever in the hearts of the sons of God whence its pure fountains pour forth rivers of life from the very throne of the transformed life.

Well did the weeping prophet, Jeremiah, speak through his fountain of tears when with the far-sighted vision of a true prophet he beheld the coming of a better day, a day when God would make a new covenant with His people by which He would transfer the law from tables of stone without to the tables of the heart within. "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah: not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which covenant they brake, although I was a husband unto them, saith the Lord: But this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; after those days, saith the Lord, I will put My law in their inward parts, and write it upon their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be My people." Jer. 31: 31-33 Is it any wonder that He went on to say, "And they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for they shall all know Me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord." Verse 34 The truth prophesied by Jeremiah is realized in the heart of every man where Jesus dwells, and they with the bard now lift up their voices in truth to sing the glad refrain,

"What a wonderful change in my life has been wrought
Since Jesus came into my heart!
I have light in my soul for which long
I had sought Since Jesus came into my heart."

The law of God was never taken away in the sense that preachers try to tell us. The truth is that it was transferred from a dead stone to a redeemed heart. How often we hear these carnal preachers telling the people that, because God saw the people could not keep the law, He therefore abolished it. Nonsense, man! God could no more do away with His law than He could do away with His Son. His law is His word and His word is His Son. John 1:1 Even an unregenerate man can understand that to say to a thief, "Thou shalt not steal", does nothing to change his nature. The penalty undoubtedly restrains him, but his thieving nature is not taken from him. At heart he is still a thief and he will steal again the moment he thinks he can avoid the penalty. But, if we erase the command, "Thou shalt not steal", from the table of stone, planting it instead in the believer's heart, then he who stole will steal no more because his very nature has become one with the commandment and the truth has transformed his heart. The word of God, which is none other than Jesus Christ, is in his heart; therefore, his whole nature abhors the thought of theft, not because of the penalty that must be endured, but because of the God-like nature that came when the incorruptible seed, the word of God, Jesus Christ the Lord, came to live the life of God in his heart.

The greatest commandment of all is this: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy strength and with all thy mind." Can a man who is full of the world and absorbed in fleshly lusts, whose god is his belly and whose glory is in his shame, be made to love God by showing him a commandment written on a stone which says, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God"? Can you love your neighbor just because you are told to do so? Can a woman love a man or a man love a woman simply because someone suggests that he should? What is the use of saying to the godless, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God", when his heart is far away from God and God is not in his thoughts? If such a man is ever to love God, then the law, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart", must be transferred from the written commandment, staring at him from a tablet of stone, to the living commandment, even the word of God, dwelling in and transforming his heart. That is what Jesus, the Christ of God, came to do. That is why He said, "The kingdom of God is within you." The first appearance of the kingdom of God in this earth is when God sets up His kingdom in the human heart, transforming it by His Spirit and liberating it with His perfect law of liberty.

According to Daniel the prophet the day is coming when the stone cut from the mountain without hands will break in pieces the image of Babylon that now fills the whole earth. After it has broken the image, the stone itself will become a mountain that fills the whole earth, and I mean literally the whole earth. Dan. 2:34-35. But be assured of this: Before the stone, which is the body of Christ, fills the whole earth, the stone, Jesus Christ, must first establish His throne and His kingdom in the hearts of His chosen sons. There in my heart He will smite the image of Babylon on its feet. The old man and the old nature vanish as the dust of the summer threshing floor. The incorruptible seed, the living stone, Jesus Christ, flourishes within the heart until we say it is "not I, but Christ".

Need anyone say to such a transformed being as this, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart?" Does not such a one already love God more than his tongue can tell? Do you think you need to say to him, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself? Does his soul not abhor theft? Does he not cringe at the thought of lying or of covetousness? The law then is not done away at all except from tables of stone. It is transferred to the tables of the heart there, like God's kingdom, to flourish and grow, there to become a mountain that fills the whole of his earthly being. If such is not the case in our own hearts, then Christ does not yet reign in us.

So John the Baptist came preaching, "The kingdom of God is at hand," and Jesus Christ lifted up His voice with the same message: "The kingdom of heaven is at hand. Repent and believe the gospel." The economy of God abounds with times and seasons. Would God that mankind would learn that absolutely everything, which concerns God's program for the ages is timed to the exact day and hour. We can no more hasten the events on His timetable than we can hasten the rising of the sun. It is as impossible to slow down the program of God or hinder it in any way as it is impossible to slow down or hinder the setting of the sun. I hear people pray, requesting God that the coming of Christ might be delayed that a few more souls might be given time to repent. What a foolish, thoughtless prayer that is! The day and the hour of His appearing was set by God and known of the Father long before Jesus of Nazareth walked the earth He had made. Matt. 24:36. Though our hearts may often echo the prayer, "Even so, Lord Jesus, come quickly," yet in these words we but express the longing of our hearts for His coming, but the time appointed for that coming was set before the foundation of the world and cannot be altered even an hour.

Few facts were better known by men of God of old than this: God has appointed both times and seasons during which everything in His plan must be accomplished. As time and tide await no man, so God waits for no man. Happy is the man who is alert and awake to present truth. Blessed is the man who is not ignorant of the times and seasons, which God has in His own power, knowing that the day of the Lord comes as a thief in the night. Blessed is the man who, seeing the fig tree putting forth her leaves, discerns that summer is nigh and prepares himself for it. Such a man as this will not be found sleeping when the Lord comes, but girded and ready to go forth.

No man who ever lived was more certain of the predetermined hours set by God than was our Lord Jesus Christ. More than once He spoke of "the hour" with such certainty that one would think He was watching some great time clock upon whose face was inscribed the detailed plan of the ages and whose great hands pointed unerringly to the hour in which each event was to take place. Can you hear Him as He instructs His disciples for (he last time? Listen as He leaves with them the eternal truth contained in John's gospel. Rejoice with them as they hear His promise of the coming Holy Spirit who would abide with them. Stand in awe as He warns them of denials and betrayals to come. Hear Him comfort them with the blessed truths of chapter 14. Listen to the infinite wisdom of God that makes them part with Him of one and the same vine, rooms of one mansion and one house, even the Father's house, not made with hands. Then after Idling them of His coming resurrection and of the abiding Spirit that would lead them into all truth, He turned from addressing them to speak in prayer to His Father in heaven - His Father, your Father, and my Father. Thus, when His sermon was ended, He lifted up His eyes to heaven. John 17:1 But notice as you have never noticed before the first words He spoke: "Father, the hour has come!" The hour! What hour? Why, a specific and special hour that God the Father and God the Son had arranged in their councils before ever Adam and Eve shared the perfumed glory of Eden! Or yet before the foundations of the earth were laid or the command given to the sun to rule the day and to the moon to rule the night! The hour of which He now spoke had been set. Nothing could hinder it or delay it. Had every soldier in the Roman Empire been at Pilate's command that day, he could neither have stopped nor delayed the crucifixion of Christ, for "the hour" had come. Had every stone on earth been placed upon His tomb, His resurrection would have taken place on time, for that, too, was an appointed hour.
When the almighty God, the God of the mornings, the evenings, the days, the years, and the seasons, says, "The hour has come", then the hour has come and no power in the universe can hinder or delay it. Therefore the record says, "When Jesus knew that His hour was come that He should depart out of this world..." John 13:1. He arose from supper, laid aside His garment, took a towel and girded Himself, poured water into a basin, and began to wash His disciples' feet. All these things He did because He knew His hour and recognized the times and seasons which were in God's power. Like a true son of God He was not caught unaware of the moment in which He lived as many now are, who will stand naked and ashamed, saying, "/ didn't know!" The consciousness of the hour in which He lived was ever present with the Saviour. As He saw His hour only a few days away with all the tribulation it would contain, He seemed to take cognizance of Himself. Was the task ahead too difficult for Him? Would Gethsemane be a load even He could not endure? Would the cross prove to be an insurmountable obstacle? What the troublesome thoughts were that crowded through His mind I am not prepared to say, but these are the solemn words that flooded from His heart as His hour drew near:

"Now is My soul troubled; and what shall I say? Father, save Me from this hour: but for this cause came I unto this hour." John 12:27 As though to encourage His soul in God, He referred to yet another hour, the hour of His glorification, saying, in verse 23, "The hour is come that the Son of man should be glorified." He who was so aware that His hour had come at the time of the feast of the Passover was just as certain that His time was not yet come at the feast of tabernacles many days earlier. At that time, when His brethren had bidden Him go to the feast to publicly show forth His miracles, He had replied, "My time is not yet come." John 7:6 And so also did He speak to His mother at the wedding feast, saying, "Woman, what have I to do with thee? Mine hour is not yet come." John 2:4 But now it had come, and like a true son He was aware of it, knowing that nothing could delay it.

"To everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose under heaven: A time to be born, and a time to die; a time to plant, and a time to pluck up that which is planted: a time to kill, and a time to heal; a time to break down, and a time to build up; a time to weep, and a time to laugh; a time to mourn, and a time to dance; a time to cast away stones, and a time to gather stones together; a time to embrace, and a time to refrain from embracing; a time to get, and a time to lose; a time to keep, and a time to cast away; a time to reaper and a time to sow; a time to keep silence, and a time to speak; a time to love, and a time to hate; a time of war, and a time of peace." Eccles. 3:1-8

"Of the times and seasons", wrote Paul, "ye have no need that I write unto you. For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. For when they shall say. Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape. But ye, brethren, are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief. Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness. Therefore let us not sleep as do others; but let us watch and be sober." 1 Thess. 5:1-6

There was a day preceding the crucifixion when our Lord came to Bethphage near the Mount of Olives. Having sent His disciples to fetch a donkey upon which no man had ever ridden, He sat upon him to make His triumphant entry into Jerusalem, as the prophet had before spoken. "Behold, thy King cometh unto thee, lowly and sitting upon an ass, and a colt, the foal of an ass." The common people cast their garments in the way, and the multitude of the disciples began to rejoice, saying, "Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord: peace in heaven, and glory in the highest." Luke 19:28-40 But the religious leaders of the day, who should have known the times and seasons, who above all others should have recognized the signs of the times, and been aware of the hour in which they lived, understood nothing of what was happening, nor could they recognize the remarkable fulfillment of prophecy being enacted before their very eyes. Coming to Jesus with evident incivility, envy, and displeasure, they said unto Him, "Master, rebuke Thy disciples." But Jesus replied, "I tell you that, if these should hold their peace, the stones would immediately cry out." If the rough stones that paved the road on which He trod would have opened their dumb lips to rebuke the unbelief of all who beheld that scene in silence, shall not the living stones of His living temple in this our hour lift up their voices in rebuke of the darkness and unbelief of a world that lives as though God did not exist and a church system whose preachers know not the living God, but cry instead that God is dead, whose tables are full of vomit, and who have turned everyone to his own way?
When Jesus therefore had come to Jerusalem, He stood beholding the city, which knew not its hour, and, as He beheld, He wept over it. Innumerable memories of the past and thoughts of the future flooded His infinite mind as He stood looking and weeping over the city. Was not this the traditional place of Adam's burial? Here on Mt. Moriah, the site of the temple, Abraham, the friend of God, had obediently offered his son Isaac in type of the Saviour's sacrifice for the world. Here David, the sweet singer of Israel, reigned, to whom it was promised, "There shall not fail a man to sit upon the throne of Israel". Here the tribe of Judah from which He sprang would now crucify the Lord. Here, too, He would be raised from the dead. Here the Spirit would soon fall on the waiting souls at Pentecost.

From here He would ascend into heaven and here He would return to earth at the end of the church age to set up His kingdom. Here He would reign in splendor with His saints over all the earth for a thousand years in the kingdom of God. Is it any wonder that He wept, and that His weeping was made the more bitter as He beheld the darkness and blindness of the people who should have discerned the greatness of the hour? Lifting up His tearful voice, He said, "If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes. For the days shall come upon thee that thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee, and compass thee round, and keep thee in on every side. And shall lay thee even with the ground, and thy children within thee; and they shall not leave in thee one stone upon another; because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation."

Awake! Awake, thou that sleepest! Arise from the dead and Christ shall give thee light! He will come unto thee as the bright rays of the sun, revealing the hidden things that lie in darkness and making manifest the counsels of His heart. Past and gone forever is that scene of the Saviour weeping over Jerusalem. Gone are the shouts of the exuberant throng who cried, "Hosanna in the highest! Blessed is the King that cometh in the name of the Lord!" Long dead and rotted in their graves are the scribes, the Pharisees, and the doctors of the law who bade the multitude hold their peace. But Jesus still lives, and even at this very moment the Lord of heaven is making the final preparations for the hour of his triumphant re-entry into Jerusalem. All heaven is astir today. The living stones are crying out, "Behold, thy King cometh unto thee." He will come riding upon a white horse in the clouds of heaven. He that sits upon the horse is called Faithful and True. In righteousness doth He judge and make war. His eyes are a flame of fire, and on His head are many crowns; and He has a name written which none can know but He Himself. He is clothed in a vesture dipped in blood. His name is called the Word of God. Out of His mouth goeth a sharp two-edged sword, His word of truth, that with it He should smite the nations. And He shall rule them with a rod of iron, for He treadeth the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God. And He hath on His vesture and on His thigh a name written, King of kings and Lord of lords. And the armies of heaven, the sons of God, followed Him upon white horses. Hallelujah!

Oh, Jerusalem, Jerusalem! Oh, mystical church, the body of Christ! Oh, sons of God, ye saints of the Lord! Could it be that thou knowest not thine hour? While ten thousand ransomed voices at this hour cry, "Hosanna! Hosanna! Blessed is the King that cometh in the name of the Lord," must it be that you go on in unbelief, mingling your soul with the souls of those who sit in the darkness and despair of Babylon? Must you be found committing spiritual fornication with her daughters? Must you be found sleeping, the oil all burned out of your lamp? Will you remain where your soul is ever vexed with the filthy conversation of the Sodomites who wait for the fiery indignation of God? Or will you know that this is your hour?

Deep within a voice is saying that the kingdoms of this world are soon to become the kingdom of our Lord and of His Son Jesus Christ. The misrule of the carnal mind is soon to end. The time of trouble foretold by the prophet Daniel is not merely a thing of the future. Lift up your eyes and look, for that time of trouble is with us now, surrounding us on every hand. It will end only when the King of kings comes in the clouds of glory and with Him all the sons of God to set up the only righteous government this world has ever known or ever will know.

It is said that during the last ten years the world has doubled the accumulated knowledge of the previous six thousand years. This is probably true, but, while our knowledge has doubled, our trouble and sorrow has much more than doubled. Man in his blindness has been assuring us that all we need is more knowledge and we will be rid of all our trouble. So we have more medical science than ever before, but hospitals cannot be built fast enough to contain the sick and infirm. Distances have shrunk to meaninglessness. Communication is worldwide and instantaneous. But among nations there is more misunderstanding and distrust than ever before. education bill for our schools and universities is a staggering sum, but what have we got to show for it but rebellion, ill-will, disobedience, moral degradation, and godlessness? Trouble never before known multiplies as knowledge increases. Compare Dan. 12:1, 4

Jeremiah the prophet said, "Thus saith the Lord, A people cometh from the north country, and a great nation shall be raised from the sides of the earth... They are all grievous revolters, walking with slanders; they are brass and iron; they are all corrupters... Reprobate silver shall men call them, because the Lord hath rejected them." Jer. 6:22, 28, 30 Please read the whole passage. The nation being raised from the sides of the earth appears to be these rebellious people who have arisen like an evil specter in almost every country on earth, literally from all sides of the earth. So terrible has this rebellion become that it is a far greater danger than the threat of invasion from any enemy. Such a conglomeration has never before been known - children of wealthy parents, graduates of colleges and universities,bums and mendicants off the street, whites, Negroes, Indians, men and women, boys and girls, living in filth, screaming rebellion and defiance, burning, looting, bludgeoning, raping, filling their hides with needles, with pot, LSD and liquor, and practicing every sex perversion known to mankind. No wonder the inspired prophet said, "We have heard the fame thereof: our hands wax feeble: anguish hath taken hold of us, and pain, as of a woman in travail. Go not forth into the field, nor walk by the way; for the sword of the enemy and fear is on every side." Jer. 6:24-25 Do you know that thirty-two million American women are afraid to venture out on the streets alone at night and that a large percentage of men share the same dread?

As I was meditating on all this fearful rebellion, my mind took up the words of the apostle Paul, who said, "For the creature was made subject to vanity (futility), not willingly, but by reason of Him who hath subjected the same in hope. Because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children (sons) of God. For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now... waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body." Rom. 8:20-23 The restlessness, the hateful rebellion, the degradation, the filth, the drugs and the immorality are the blind, dumb, ignorant cries of a groaning creation to be delivered from the bondage of the present corruption. They do not know for what they groan. They vainly imagine that, could they but cast off every value they have ever known, they would find peace and satisfaction. But stranger than fiction is the truth that their fearful groaning is in reality the desperate travail of a creation which in unbelievable ignorance cries and sighs for the manifestation of the sons of God who will deliver every created thing from its fearful bondage and corruption into the glorious freedom of the sons of God.

There is an insane madness among the leaders of the world. Like king Nebuchadnezzar they have refused to fear God or give glory to Him, so God has given them a reprobate mind. "Even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind to do those things which are not convenient." The great men of the earth have been stricken with a strange mental block that causes them to do everything wrong. Practically every decision they make is a mistake. While men are dying in Viet Nam, while wives are losing their husbands and little children are losing their fathers, while the strongest boys in the land are being maimed and ruined for life, while towns and cities are being laid desolate, and evil is continuing unabated, the great statesmen of Viet Nam and the United States sit in Paris, fiercely arguing about the shape of the conference table, whether it will be square or round or oblong, and about the order in which the conferees will speak. And, while they argue, men die! Is it any wonder I declare that the leaders have reprobate minds? Can we not see there is a mental block! Is it peculiar that in such circumstances boys burn their draft cards? Who dare expect that men can be brave under such circumstances as these? Can we wonder that the whole creation groans and travailes, longing for deliverance and emancipation from such bondage of corruption and decay?

A new day and a new hour is dawning upon the world. The healing rays of the kingdom age are beginning to appear in the eastern sky. Heavenly voices are heralding the message, "The kingdom of God is at hand". Angels proclaim the message that Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen. The smoke of her torment is rising up. Men who have trusted in her riches shall cry, "Alas, alas, for that great city." Revelation, chapters 17 and 18, contains the vivid description of her wealth and power and of her impending fall and doom. Is it any wonder we continually cry, "Come out of her, My people!"
The all-wise God, the author of times and seasons, has left us many infallible proofs that should show us plainly that days and seasons belong to the realm of time. Every one in its order was made to pass away. The passing of each day and each season of the year is intended, not only to end the old, but to begin the new as well. The evening of one day ushers in the morning of the next day. The day slowly draws its curtains and fades away into the night; and the night, removing its mantle of darkness, matures into the fullness of day. If we turn our eyes backward to the distant peaks of the past to look upon mountains and hills over which the human family has come, we cannot miss the truth that the omniscient God has been pleased to introduce us to new days and new dispensations, each one in its turn bringing to the world a further and greater revelation of God's divine will for man and thus displaying His immutable purpose. The teachers of the confused church system have made the mistake of believing that God experimented with the different dispensations and, finding them a failure, He did away with them one by one. Nonsense, man! The truth is that each succeeding dispensation brought ever increasing light to the world and ever expanding revelation of the very nature of God. In the kingdom age and in the dispensation of the fullness of times the combined truths of the seven ages will be gathered together as one perfect light, a perfect revelation for a perfect age. The toil of six days of labor will produce the wonderful Sabbath of rest.

Men and women of all ages and dispensations have found it almost impossible to believe that the age in which they lived was passing away and the truths in which they rejoiced were about to give place to a greater revelation than they had ever before known. It may be for this very reason that, though every dispensation begins in glory, it ends in judgment. Let us not forget, then, that the dispensation in which we now live is the same dispensation that began in the upper room on that day of Pentecost when men were filled with the Holy Spirit and a heavenly relationship hitherto unknown was ushered in. Such wonderful grace was upon the young church that by the end of the first century A.D., amid blood and tears and persecution, one-twentieth of the entire Roman Empire was converted to Christ, and by the year 300 A.D. Christianity became the state religion of the previously heathen Roman Empire. The act of Emperor Constantine in making Christianity the state religion of the Roman Empire proved to be the most devastating blow ever dealt the church of the living God. Enjoying the popularity and protection of the Roman eagle, she folded her arms and fell asleep, becoming part and parcel of Babylon. Thus the age, which began with the glory of Pentecost, is ending with Christ's standing outside its apostate doors. Cast out of the system called by His name, He stands before the door of the individual believer, saying, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock; if any man will hear My voice and open the door, I will come in to him and sup with him, and he with Me." Rev. 3:20

It must have been a stunning blow to Adam to see his wonderful age of innocence ending in judgment. There is evidence, it seems to me, that Adam was neither willing nor prepared to leave the sanctuary of the age of innocence to go forth into the newness of another dispensation with all its seeming uncertainties. As the Jews were prone to return to the law, Adam was ever prone to return to his lovely garden, looking with longing eyes back to the good old days so familiar to him. It was here his life on earth had begun and here he would gladly remain forever. Have you not noticed these words, which vividly portray his unwillingness to leave the garden? "Therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the Garden of Eden to till the ground from which he was taken. So He drove out the man; and He placed at the east of the Garden of Eden Cherubims, and a flaming sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life." Gen. 3:23-24 The Lord drove him out. Adam did not want to leave the age of innocence any more than people today want to leave this age with its message of grace to go forth and embrace the kingdom. If God is going to shake men loose from this present age and this system of confusion, He must drive them out; otherwise they refuse to go. I am sorry to say that, even after He has driven them out, He still must put a flaming sword behind them to guard every avenue of return. Otherwise, they would stray back to the old system as a flock of stupid sheep returns to lie down in its old fold even after the pasture is dried up. Twice during my own life the Lord has driven me out, making it impossible for me to stay where I was and impossible to return. I know by experience how Jacob felt when the sun had set on the old ways, the old home, and the old associates, and that forever. Gen. 28:11 And I know how restless his head must have been as it lay on the pillow of stone, but I know, too, of a Lord who stands at the top of the ladder, smiling down as though He would say, "Every rung brings you nearer to Me."

Many people who have written to me lately indicate that they are being forced from the womb of the old system as a babe is forced from the womb of its mother to enter upon the glory of a new world and the wonder of a new day. Courage, my brother! It is God who is leading you forth. The heavens are opening before you as you...
advance. The angels are ascending and descending upon the sons of God. Heavenly voices are proclaiming that the old age is dying and the kingdom of God is at hand.

So it was that Adam's age of innocence ended with judgment, man being driven forth from the garden. What a tragedy, someone will say! No, my brother, it is not a tragedy. It is part of the eternal purpose of an all-wise God, for the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him who hath subjected the same in hope; because the creature itself shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the sons of God. Rom. 8:20-21 Had the eyes of Adam been opened as were the eyes of Jacob, he, too, might have seen a ladder from earth to heaven. So God drove him forth from the garden that he might unfold to all the universe the seven great steps of His eternal purpose.

As Adam's day of innocence ended in judgment and the promise of a new day, so also ended the age of conscience when Noah alone of all earth's inhabitants was found righteous in His generation. So God ended that wicked age, bringing in the flood upon the world of the ungodly, and Noah came forth from the ark to look from the mountain top upon an entirely new age, to gaze on a world that had been cleansed from the filth of a highly civilized but morally degraded people, the like of which had never been before and has never been since until this solemn hour in which we now live. Need we remind ourselves that it was of our day that Jesus spoke when He said, "As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the day of the coming of the Son of man." In that day the earth was corrupt and filled with violence, and the thoughts and imaginations of men's hearts were only evil continually. It was that way then; it is that way now. Filth and evil are portrayed everywhere. Perhaps the most dreadful indictment of all is found in the fact that smoking, drinking, fornication, and homosexuality have become rampant among the hireling ministries of the decadent, earthly Babylon, that haughty harlot who with brazen effrontery parades as the bride of Christ and the church of the living God.

The days of Noah are with us on every hand. Make no mistake about that fact. This age of grace is not going to end in the triumphant glory of world-wide revival as some vainly imagine. It is going to end in world-wide judgment. It is going to end in gross darkness as all other dispensations have ended that from the darkness and the judgment may emerge the glory of the new day. I have no hesitation whatsoever in declaring that there will not be another real revival in this dispensation. There may be many false revivals. They are in progress all the time. Just as there are many false prophets and false christs, so there are many false revivals. If it were not so, the false prophets and false christs could not exist. Every sect and denomination eventually becomes a false christ which men trust for salvation. There will not be another revival in this dispensation, because judgment was pronounced upon this age by both Jesus and the apostles. "If any man hear My voice and open the door, I will come in to him and sup with him," saith the Lord. Other than that there will be no great turning to God. When this evil age has ended in the awesome judgment of the great tribulation, then the dispensation of the kingdom of God will begin - a dispensation unlike all other ages, because in it Jesus Christ in person, together with His brothers, the sons of God, will rule the whole world in righteousness. All other rule and authority will be put down forever, and righteousness, justice, and equity will fill the whole earth as the waters cover the seas. Men will not learn war any more; neither will covetousness or greed hold any in their sway. But all shall know God from the least of them to the greatest of them. The lame man shall leap as the hart. The tongue of the dumb shall sing. The eyes of the blind shall be opened. Upon the bells of the horses will be "Holiness unto the Lord."

We are now in the hour of preparation for the kingdom of God. Let us not be mistaken. My message is not a message to the wretched harlot system, that false christ who dares to call herself the church. My message is to the precious sons of Zion, who are being called out from the harlot system and being called out unto God. Sons of God, the hour has come to disentangle yourselves; otherwise you will share the judgment of the great whore of Babylon. Rev. 18:4. In these last days of the dispensation of grace there is no message more important than this: Every son of God, every saint of the Lord, must disentangle himself from the octopus-like arms of the harlot church system. He must come out from among them and touch no more the unclean thing that he may receive the promise, "Ye shall be My sons and daughters." 2 Cor. 6:17-18 My soul gets desperately weary of hearing men quote Heb. 10:25 in an effort to convince themselves and others that they should continue to assemble with the present day harlot church system. When Paul wrote, "Let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works, not forsaking the assembling of yourselves together, as the manner of some is", it never crossed his inspired mind that we would think for a moment that we should bury our lives and destroy our experiences by constantly assembling ourselves with a corrupt and decadent system, now grown full of false prophets and antichrists, a system given over to religious vaudeville, a system that compasses land and sea to make proselytes and whose members too often know little or nothing of a personal knowledge and relationship with Christ. It is a system abounding with smug preachers, exuding self, claiming to be God's man of the hour, end time prophets, healers, workers of miracles, and many other such things. Though many profess to be favored with special gifts and to be blessed with ministering angels, I believe I am right in saying that their audiences are more enamored with them and their high sounding talk then with the Christ they profess to represent.

Have you taken notice that men such as Abraham, Moses, Elijah, Peter, John, Martin Luther, John Wesley, and many others like them never wasted time proving that they were anybody special at all? These men did not even know that they were special vessels. They were what they were, and it mattered not to them what men thought or believed of them. Like Moses of old they wist not that their faces shone. I frankly admit that the moment any man presents himself as having some special ministry or gift, my guard goes up right away. "A man's gift maketh room for him and bringeth him before great men." He needs confirmation from no man. If he is speaking from God, it soon becomes evident. Not for naught did Jesus tell us that false prophets, false teachers, and false Christs would be many in the last days. The sinister word false could be inscribed over this whole system of confusion. In this our day, in this our hour, political Babylon and religious Babylon are hand in glove. They are two harlots in one house. "When I had fed them to the full, they then committed adultery and assembled themselves by troops in the harlots' houses." "How shall I pardon thee for this?" Jer. 5:7

If you will read the third chapter of Isaiah, which is a message concerning Judah and Israel, you will see how aptly it applies to the church system today. Then, in chapter four, verse one, the prophet makes this strange observation: "In that day seven women shall take hold of one man, saying, We will eat our own bread, and wear our own apparel: only let us be called by thy name to take away our reproach." The seven women represent the seven churches described in Revelation, chapters two and three, beginning with Ephesus and concluding with Laodicea. So decadent have these women become in the period of Laodicea that the only thing Christian about them is the name they insist on using. A wife should be sustained by her husband, eating the food he provides and wearing the apparel supplied by his labor… but not so with these women. They have no interest in His garments of righteousness, nor in His bread of truth, nor His water of life. "We will eat our own bread and wear our own apparel; only let us be called Christian to take away our reproach." If they are not called the church, they have no reason for existing at all, so they call themselves by the name of Christ so that there will be no reproach, but they go their own way, eating their own bread and wearing their own apparel, and in general living apart from Him.

Why is it that people who are so fond of quoting Paul's word from Heb. 10:25 are never heard to quote the words of that same apostle from 2 Cor. 6:17-18? Here, after saying, "What concord hath Christ with Belial? What part hath he that believeth with an infidel? What agreement hath the temple of God with idols?" he goes on to command, "Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." Why do Christians imagine they have a duty to sit in the idol's temple, pretending they are obeying the words of Heb. 10:25? Have you not seen that sonship is promised to those who come out from among them? To those who come out is the promise given, "I will receive you and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters." Better far it is to come out and receive the sonship for which creation groans than to sit among the seven women who do as they please, hoping that this religion of yours will assure them of God's favor. There should be no question in the mind of any Christian today that, if the apostle Paul were living in this the end of the age, he would join his voice with that voice in the Revelation, crying, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues. For her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities." Indeed, he did cry, "Come out", even in his own day.

The old day is dying. The darkening shadows are lengthening into the night of tribulation. The new dispensation, the dispensation of the kingdom of God, is dawning out of the darkness and confusion of the age that is now passing away. With it will come new light and new understanding. A strange day has come upon us. Darkness covers the earth and gross darkness the people; yet in the hearts of the true saints there is light, which the darkness comprehends not. I do not know how long we will be permitted to write the message of the Lord, but I do know that light I have never seen before has shined its transforming rays of glory into my heart. The transforming truth of the new age can only reach those who depart from the confusing mixture of light and darkness so universal in the Babylon system to walk with Christ in the morning light of a new day.

Oh, Jerusalem, Jerusalem! If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things that belong unto thy peace; but now they are hid from thine eyes. The time is fulfilled. The hour is at hand. Men should fast and pray that the scales may fall from their eyes and that the truth of the hour may clearly shine, bringing the knowledge of God from the face of Jesus Christ.

_1000 YEARS_ The Jubilee

>> because of lack of space I put the following on this line to show the final column >> See. Lev. 25:10-13

The Beginning From “The Beginning” Gen. 1:1 to the end of the dispensation of the fullness of times is 49,000 years
Gen. 1:1 From Genesis 1:1 to the end of the Jubilee when all returns to God is 50,000 years

God’s plan for the ages is based upon the Sabbath of weeks describes in great detail in Leviticus 25:1-13 where a period of FORTY-NINE YEARS IS DESCRIBED, seven Sabbaths of years, or seven weeks each being seven years long. This is followed by the year of Jubilee, which is the fiftieth year. The time is the restitution of all things. That, the 50 days of Lev. 25:1-13 represent 50,000 years is easily understood in the light of Peter’s instruction.

“A day is with the Lord as 1000 years and 1000 years as one day.” 2 Pet. 3:8

NOTICE CONCERNING CHART OVERLEAF

The foldout chart will be found useful in studying the Bible days and weeks of Chapter 5.

In the inspired words of the apostle Peter, "But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousands years, and a thousand years as one day", 2 Pet. 3:8, we are given the master key or God’s plan for all ages. If one day in God’s economy represents a thousand years and a thousand years represents one day, then seven days must surely represent seven thousand years and seven thousand years seven days, or one week of seven one thousand year days. That simple logic should be understandable to a child. If, then, seven days represents seven thousand years, forty-nine days must by the same logic represent forty-nine thousand years and fifty days would in like manner represent fifty-thousand years.
In Genesis 1:1 to 2:3 we have a record of seven twenty-four hour days which we now name Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday. See figure 1 on the chart. These seven twenty-four hour days of Genesis represent seven one thousand year days from Genesis to Revelation in which are included the seven Bible dispensations, innocence, conscience, human government, promise, law, grace, and the kingdom of God. See figure 2 on the chart.

In Leviticus 25:1-13 we are given an account of forty-nine days, each day being one year long. Forty-nine days are seven full weeks. Read the account carefully. Whereas a day represents a thousand years, we are faced with the conclusion that forty-nine thousand years are determined upon the earth, or seven days, each day being seven thousand years long. See figure 3 on the chart.

Man is made in God's image on the sixth day whether it be the sixth twenty-four hour day, the sixth one thousand year day, or the sixth seven thousand year day. We are now living in the sixth one thousand year day since Adam. See figure 2. We are also living in the sixth seven thousand year day since Genesis 1:1; "In the beginning God created the heaven and earth." See figure 3.

Five vast days each seven thousand years long, had passed away into history before Adam, the first man, was made on the sixth twenty-four hour day of the sixth seven thousand year day. The entire seven thousand years (seven days) shown in figure 2 on the chart are all included in the sixth seven thousand year day shown in figure 3 on the chart. The sixth seven thousand year day of figure 3 includes all God's dealings with man from Adam to the end of the millennial kingdom.

The seventh seven thousand year day shown in figure 3 is the dispensation of the fullness of times, Eph. 1:10, in which period God will gather all things into Christ. It is the Sabbath of rest for the vast week of seven, seven thousand year days.

The fiftieth year, spoken of in Lev. 25:10, is the jubilee in which every man returns to his possession and all goes back to its original owner, who in this case is God Himself. Since these things are so, is it any wonder that Peter said, "Be not ignorant of this one thing that a day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day."

CHAPTER FIVE
SIX DAYS SHALT THOU LABOUR

"Six days shall thou labor, and do all thy work: But the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates."

On a number of occasions we have mentioned that no prophecy is of private interpretation. 2 Pet. 1:20. Almost every scripture has a local and primary meaning which should be clear enough to even the casual reader, but after the primary meaning there comes a secondary meaning of much greater scope and importance which cannot be discerned by the natural mind that is content to dwell in the shallows of spiritual understanding. Therefore that deeper meaning is left for those who with longing hearts follow the Holy Spirit into the realm of wisdom where He dwells. There men begin to see the invisible, hear the inaudible, and comprehend the incomprehensible. It has been truly written, "Eye hath not seen nor ear heard, and neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him, but God hath revealed them unto us by His Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God."

1 Cor. 2:9-10 Then again it has been written, "The invisible things of Him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even His eternal power and Godhead; so that they are without excuse." Rom. 1:20

When the Spirit has revealed a secondary meaning of a truth, He longs to draw aside the third veil that we might behold the ultimate meaning, if in God there could possibly be an ultimate. The tabernacle in the wilderness clearly showed that the worshippers were first led through the low wide gate, which was a curtain, to bring their offerings into the outer court, and thence the priests, the sons of Aaron, went through the second veil into the holy place, a place into which ordinary worshippers were never allowed to go or even to see because of the forbidding veil. But beyond this holy place of the priests was another place called the holiest of all into which none but the high priest could enter, and that but once a year and never without blood, for here in this third place was the presence and glory of God, which would have slain even the high priest had he dared to enter unclean or without the blood of the sacrifice upon him. I have no hesitation in saying that there is no teaching contained in the New Testament that was not first contained in the types and shadows of the tabernacle constructed in the wilderness by Moses. Let no man ever think that he has the last word of truth about anything, for if any man thinketh he knoweth aught, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know. Having established, then, that we may look for three or more levels of meaning in the divine plan, it should not come as any surprise to find that there are also three levels of meaning contained in this simple statement of scripture: "Six days shall thou labor, and do all thy work; but the seventh is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God." Exo. 20:9-10

That there are seven days in a week we need not try to prove. From the beginning of the world this fact has been clearly seen. Six of these days were to be filled with labor, but in the seventh no servile work was to be done. The apostle Peter was ordained to bring forcefully to our minds the truth that each day represents a thousand years, when he said by the Holy Spirit, "Beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day" 2 Pet. 3:8 Compare also Psa. 90:4 This scripture does not teach us, as some seem to believe, that time means nothing with God. Indeed, it teaches the very opposite - that time has a very definite meaning with God. It teaches in the most irrefutable way that just as there are seven days in one week, each twenty-four hours long, so there is a much greater week consisting of seven days, each one thousand years long. Since, then, there is a week of seven days, each twenty-four hours long, and also a week of seven days, each one thousand years long, should it seem incredible that we should also find a third and greater week foreshadowed in God's word consisting of seven days, each seven thousand years long?

If you carefully read the twenty-fifth chapter of Leviticus, you will see that the Hebrews had three sorts of weeks: first, the week of days which was reckoned from one Sabbath to another (Lev. 23:1-3); second, the week of years which was reckoned from one sabbatical year to another and consisted of seven years (Lev. 25:1-7) Then following this was a third week of seven times seven years, or forty-nine years, reckoned from one jubilee year to the next. Lev. 25:8 Every fiftieth year was a year of jubilee. It should not now be difficult for the reader to see that, as one day represents one thousand years, so forty-nine days represent forty-nine thousand years, or one week in which each day is seven thousand years long. Five of these giant days passed by before Adam, for man was created on the sixth day and is brought completely into God's image during the seven thousand year day extending from Adam to the end of the millennial kingdom - that is, the sixth seven thousand year day. Please refer to the enclosed chart. Following this sixth day comes the dispensation of the fullness of times which is the seventh seven thousand year day. In that glorious day God will gather into Christ absolutely all things. Eph. 1:10. This day is followed by the jubilee, one, one thousand year day, in which all debts are cancelled and everything returns to its rightful owner, who is God Himself. If we prove ignorant here, we will certainly miss the plan and purpose of God for the ages. To understand the purpose of God for the ages transforms the Bible into a new book and places the infinite wisdom of God in the pure light in which it belongs.

With these truths fresh in our minds we can easily see that the basis of the whole economy of God as it concerns man is based upon the week of days in Genesis, chapter one - six days of labor followed by a day of rest, each day representing one thousand years. Our minds, however, do not begin to grasp the significance of the plan until we read Lev. 25:1-6, for here the week is translated into years. "Six years thou shalt sow thy field, and six years thou shalt prune thy vineyard, and gather in the fruit thereof; But in the seventh year shall be a Sabbath of rest unto the land..." Verses 3 and 4 Here we have seven days, each day one year long, and each day representing one thousand years even as Peter instructed us. It was certainly in the wisdom of God to gradually make our minds acquainted with this great plan of the ages; otherwise we would never have been able to understand the truth that follows in Lev. 25:8-13, part of which reads as follows: "And thou shalt number seven Sabbaths of years unto thee, seven times seven years; and the space of the seven Sabbaths of years shall be unto thee forty and nine years." Verse 8 Here then we have a week forty-nine years long, or seven days, each seven years long. Remembering again the instruction of Peter, we are immediately brought face to face with the indisputable fact that this period of forty-nine years (or forty-nine days, each day one year long), represents forty-nine thousand years, for "One day," said Peter, "is as a thousand years," or seven days in which each day is seven thousand years long. This vast week represents the time from Genesis 1:1 - "in the beginning God created the heavens and the earth" - to Rev. 21:1 - "and I saw a new heaven and a new earth; for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away." This takes us to the end of the dispensation of the fullness of times spoken of by Paul in Eph. 1:9-10 when God completes His divine purpose by gathering all things in heaven and earth into Christ.

On the sixth day God said, "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness." Gen. 1:26. You will see the whole plan unfolding before your eyes if you can now see that it was in the sixth twenty-four hour day that the Lord made the man in His likeness and it is also in the sixth seven thousand year day that God is accomplishing His purpose of bringing mankind into His image and into His likeness. In the dispensation of innocence man rejected the government of God, and in disobedience to God's command he chose his own way and immediately discovered himself to be completely out of harmony with God's laws and out of fellowship with God Himself. The Lord said to the woman, "I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception; in sorrow thou shalt bring forth children; and thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee." And unto Adam he said, "Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it; cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth unto thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field; in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Gen. 3:16-19

These verses clearly show that the labor and travail now universal in the world is the result of disobedience. It is the consequence of man's being out of harmony with God. "The curse causeless shall not come." Prov. 26:2 The six thousand years of the world's history has found man laboring beneath the curse of the Lord. Everything he touches is under the curse. The ground is cursed and refuses to yield her increase. Only by labor and travail, toil and sweat is man able to wrest his livelihood from the ground until at last he himself is consumed by it and falls back into the dust from which he came. So long has man labored that he has become accustomed to it. He spends his days beneath the curse fighting with thorns and thistles, weeds of every kind, voracious insects that devour the seed in the ground, attack the roots of crops, and cut the shooting stems, sawflies that literally cut the wheat down before the harvest, rust that attacks the stems, weeds that crowd out the wheat, swarms of grasshoppers that consume the young plants, and rodents that steal the ripened grain. Besides all these blighting curses the fields are devoured by drought, consumed by hail, devastated by frost, burned by fire, and sometimes drowned in harvest by unseasonable rain; yet he knows not that all this is the result of the curse. If such things can be told of a field of grain, how the curse is multiplied as husbandmen toil to save their fruit orchards, their fields of cotton, and many other things! There is not one crop unaffected by the curse, not one beast in the field or bird or man that is not laboring every day under the curse that fell upon the world and all things in it when man in disobedience threw off the government of God and chose his own rebellious way.

Man in his rebellion has become so accustomed to laboring under the curse of sin that he has accepted all its ravaging consumption as a mailer of course. He has accepted without question the fact that innumerable diseases attack the human body until there is not one joint or muscle or organ that is immune from disease and sickness of many kinds. Name, if you can, one organ of the body from the hair on your head to the skin on the soles of your feet that cannot be afflicted with disease. But man has labored so long beneath this curse that he thinks very little of the fact that it is the result of his own rebellion. In his vain attempts to deliver himself from the curse of sickness he finds himself confronted with an ever, increasing variety of diseases. Medical skill never can deliver the world from the curse of sickness, but is progressively plunging us ever deeper into it. With what pathetic words we might tell of the curse of accidents, of war, theft, and crime of every description! We need not here elaborate on the fearful blight of it all. One has but to read the papers or listen to the news to learn that in our day there is no good news. It is all bad.

Man in the very beginning of his existence cast off the easy and blessed yoke of God's government, choosing to do his own will and govern himself. The consequence of his rebellion is in evidence everywhere and the ultimate tragedy of disobedience could not be written or spoken. For six thousand years or six millennial days man's very existence has been naught but labor and travail and all his fruitless struggle has been for his own belly. To obtain food, clothing, and shelter has been his primary aim, an aim no higher than that of the beasts of the field. That which he laid up in store he has been unable to take away, leaving it to others to disperse in their sin and folly. For his daily bread man toils and sweats continually nor does his ingenuity and invention gain him much. The more he gains by means of these the more he lavishes upon his lusts or leaves to the vanity of others, bringing evil upon himself in sickness and accident, disease, war, crime, and theft. Five hundred wars have been fought since the turn of the twentieth century, and every war in history, whether rightly or wrongly, has been fought to gain something more to consume upon the flesh.

Besides the numberless curses of the physical body man has had to struggle to wrest his living from an earth that is also under the curse. "Cursed is the ground for your sake," God declared to Adam. "In sorrow shall thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth unto thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field; In the sweat of thy face shall thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Gen. 3:18-19 The curses of the ground are innumerable as men in the sweat of their faces wage their never ending struggle against drought, frost, hail, floods, erosion, ravaging worms, and pests of ever increasing number and variety. No sooner has one enemy been defeated than its very defeat releases a whole variety of new enemies that thrive because of its death. When man undertakes to destroy the carnivorous beasts lest they prey upon his cattle, then the rodents increase to destroy his crops. In his ignorance he destroys the birds lest they pick at his fruit, and in their stead comes the devouring insects, and when man learns to destroy these by using expensive and damaging sprays, he finds that he is poisoning himself and the rest of mankind by polluting the rivers and streams with poisonous insecticides, destroying the fish and birds upon which he fed, and doing damage even to the ground from which his food comes.

All war, sickness, crime, violence, disease, injustice, inequity, and every other ill possible to name has been brought upon man by his own evil and disobedience and is all the result of his carnal rule. "Six days shall thou labor and do all thy work," was the edict of God. Thus for six thousand years, or six millennial days, man has labored and travailed in pain and sweat. He has tried every form of government that the carnal mind could devise and each one in its order has been a dire and terrible failure. If the people choose a monarch to rule over them, he is more often than not filled with his own evil ways, imagining that the world and all the people in it were created for his personal pleasure and satisfaction. If a dictator arises, he soon oppresses the people, forcing every injustice upon them as he rules with his armies and the strength of his arm. And, when men in desperation throw off the evil rule of such men and form a democracy, it, too, falls into decay and becomes so weak and filled with evil that rise is soon given to some man who is strong enough to bring order out of chaos. This very condition is now sweeping over the nations of North America and Europe. Nations once prosperous in temporal things because they feared the Lord have become so evil and defiant against God that their very strength has brought them weakness and their evil savor fills the earth. True indeed were the words of Solomon: "Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people."

Amid the travail and deepening darkness through which man for almost six thousand years has labored there is an eternal ray of hope, for the immutable edict, "six days shall thou labor", is almost complete. The seventh day, the great millennial Sabbath of rest, is even now at the doors. It will be a Sabbath to last one thousand years. It is the dispensation of the kingdom of God, the rule of Jesus Christ over all the earth with the saints He has prepared through the ages.

We can be most explicit when we say that the kingdom of God will be a literal kingdom and that it will endure upon the earth in glory and majesty for a day a thousand years long. There will be no governments elected by the people, but the elect of God, saints chosen by Him from all ages, will reign in righteousness over the whole earth. His government will not be the tyranny of a dictatorship nor the misrule of an earthly demagogue, but a theocracy in which Christ in all the completeness of His body of sons shall rule and reign in righteousness. "Behold My servant, whom I uphold; mine elect, in whom My soul delighteth; I have put My spirit upon Him: He shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles. He shall not cry, nor lift up, nor cause His voice to be heard in the street. (No more electioneering.) A bruised reed shall He not break, and the smoking flax shall He not quench: He shall bring forth judgment unto truth. He shall not fail nor be discouraged, till He has set judgment in the earth: and the isles shall wait for His law." Isa. 42:1-4
It is a most singular thing that Christian people for almost two thousand years have been quoting the Lord's prayer, and yet few of them, even the most devout among them, have ever noticed that practically every sentence of that beautiful utterance concerns the blessed and wonderful day when God's kingdom shall come to earth. The first request of the prayer is, "Thy kingdom come", and the second is like unto it, "Thy will be done in earth as it is done in heaven." And the third, "Give us this day our daily bread", is the heart cry of all creation for that blessed kingdom day when man shall no longer with toil and sweat wrest his bread from the unwilling earth, but our daily bread will spring forth from the blessing of the Lord as "the plowman shall overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes him that soweth seed; and the mountains shall drop sweet wine, and all the hills shall melt."

Amos 9:13 Even the blessed words, "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive them that trespass against us", define the very nature and character of the saints who shall rule in the kingdom of God. If among the rank and file of church believers God forgave them only as they forgave others, few indeed would find forgiveness, but those who shall be accounted worthy to rule with Christ in that blessed kingdom will be saints in whom the grace of forgiveness has been wrought to such perfection that their mercy and forgiveness toward all mankind will be in the same abundant measure as God has shown mercy to them.

The prayer, "Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil", is little understood by those who recite the words. But God through many bitter and heartbreaking experiences is teaching us that, unless by His grace we are delivered from evil, we must be led in the paths of temptation that we may come to ourselves as did the prodigal son in the long ago, returning in repentance unto Him who will bring the best robe and put it upon us, for the son that was dead is alive again, and that which was lost is found. The closing statement of that prayer, so all encompassing and all enduring, so sublime and full of God's purposes in wisdom and understanding, is one of the richest revelations ever given to man. "For Thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory unto the age of the ages." The age of the ages is the dispensation of the fullness of times, which follows the millennial kingdom of God and in which time God will gather into Himself all things in Christ. Eph. 1:9-10

God's purposes for the ages are not doomed to failure. They are being worked out exactly as He planned. We will never understand the ways of God until our hearts discover the wonders of the sacred truth that "all things work together for good to them that love God..." We will never know the depths of His loving kindness and tender mercy until we are able to see that the fall of man in that far off dispensation of innocence was part of a purpose that was to develop and mature through timeless ages, producing at last spotless and experienced sons in the image of God. The six days of man's labor and travail have not been in vain, because God has been teaching the universe by experience that there can be no God but the Lord; neither can there be rule or authority anywhere worthy of mention but only the rule and authority of God. Through the dispensations He has been teaching a benighted world that the carnal mind with its divisive tendencies is always an enemy of God. He is causing the world to see that sin is a reproach to any people and the wages of sin is always death. Great have been the lessons taught to even the vilest of men. But there is one purpose above all that God throughout the wearisome ages of human rule has steadfastly pursued. He has been handpicking and carefully preparing a company of saints in His own image and likeness to reign with Him over all the earth and all the nations in the kingdom of God.

If God's people would now understand the plan of God, they must valiantly unlearn many of the human and Roman traditions handed down from generation to generation. We have no words of condemnation for those who have taught that Christians must soon fly away to heaven and leave the world forever behind, for God does not remove the veils of misunderstanding until the time draws near for His purposes to unfold. There is no truth given greater emphasis in God's word than the truth that he is preparing a kingdom of righteousness that will engulf the whole earth in a glory not exceeded by the glory of Eden and that Christ Himself in all the fullness both of the head and of the body will reign over the whole earth in perfect righteousness, justice, judgment, and equity. His kingdom will spread as a mantle of blessed righteousness that will encompass the whole earth. His saints from ages past, resurrected and glorified, will shine as lights set upon a hill, even the holy hill of Zion, until the whole earth is full of the wisdom and knowledge of God even as the waters cover the sea.

Those who have died in faith, not having received the promises, will be raised from the dead in glorification together with us who are alive and in preparation at this very hour; for, though their instruction was completed and they were made perfect in all the ways of God's kingdom, God has kept them waiting for the full perfection of immortality and glorification until the whole reigning company of the saints is fully prepared that they might all rise together. "For the Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words." 1 Thess. 4:16-18. It is here that truth differs from tradition. Tradition has taught that this wonderful catching away will be a means of escaping the tribulation that is coming upon the world. The truth is that at the time of the catching away the tribulation is almost over and the saints rise to meet the descending Christ that they might descend with Him upon the Mount of Olives. This shall be the occasion of the great wrath and anger of all nations of the earth and the wrath of antichrist, who will rise to make war against Him because He has come to put down all rule and authority and government and to rule the nations with a rod of iron until all men know that He is King of kings and Lord of lords. His coming to the Mount of Olives will not only mean the destruction and end of this world's ungodly system, but it will also mean the beginning of the kingdom of God on earth. "Thy kingdom come," prayed Jesus. "Thy will be done in earth as it is done in heaven." Thus with the Lord's coming with all His saints to the holy hill of Zion shall begin that reign that shall endure unto timeless ages.

For the past two thousand years the kingdom of God has been in the earth only in mystery form. Jesus explained this mystery when he said, "The kingdom of God is within you." The only sign that the kingdom of God existed has been in that handful of people scattered all over the world who were walking with God and allowing Christ to set up His mystical throne within their hearts to rule and reign within them. There is no disputing the fact that both in the Old Testament era and in the New Testament era God has had a people whose lives were wholly given to Him. They walked with Him. They followed the leading of His Spirit. They discarded their own wills and followed only the will of God. They lost all love for earthly things and abandoned the things of the flesh to follow the Lamb of God whithersoever He went. They are not nor have they ever been the ordinary run of church members, for many there be who, though they have believed on Christ, follow the leading of men and whose ears have never become attuned to the voice of Christ. The throne of God has never been established within their hearts. But God has always had a separate and elect people of whom He was able to say, "The kingdom of God is within you." These elect people, within whose hearts the kingdom of God now dwells, will rule and reign with Christ in that wonderful hour when the literal kingdom shall come upon earth.

Soon the mystery form of the kingdom of God will pass away and the literal kingdom of God will be established on the earth. It was for this kingdom that Christ prayed when He said, "Thy kingdom come; Thy will be done in earth as it is done in heaven." We must be very emphatic here, for it is a never, ending source of amazement to find that so many Christians are never able to see beyond the mystical kingdom in spite of the indisputable fact that the Psalms of David and the inspired writings of the prophets magnify the literalness of the kingdom of Christ above all else. Isaiah is continually breaking forth in mighty paeans of truth concerning it as though it were an artesian well in his heart that could not be shut off. Time after time he bursts forth with such phrases as these: "The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them, and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose." "Say to them that are of a fearful heart, Be strong, fear not: behold, your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompense; He will come and save you. Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing: for in the wilderness shall waters break out, and streams in the desert... And the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." See Isa. 35

Over and over again we see this blessed prophet of God in one breath condemning the wickedness of the people among whom he dwells and the evil ways of the kings and governors that rule the land and in the next shouting the praises of that coming wonderful day when the people will be all righteous, the rulers will be the servants of the Lord, and the land itself shall be blessed of God. In the midst of the woes of the day he cries aloud, "Behold My servant whom I uphold; mine elect, in whom My soul delighteth: I have put My spirit upon Him: He shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles. He shall not cry, nor lift up, nor cause His voice to be heard in the street. A bruised reed shall He not break, and the smoking flax shall He not quench: He shall bring forth judgment unto truth. He shall not fail nor be discouraged till He have set judgment in the earth: and the isles shall wait for His law." Isa. 42:1-4 "Sing unto the Lord a new song, and His praise from the end of the earth, ye that go down to the sea, and all that is therein; the isles, and the inhabitants thereof. Let the wilderness and the cities thereof lift up their voice, the villages that Kedar doth inhabit: Let the inhabitants of the rock sing, let them shout from the top of the mountains ... I will make waste mountains and hills, and dry up their herbs; and I will make the rivers islands, and I will dry up the pools. And I will lead the blind by a way that they knew not; I will lead them in paths that they have not known: I will make darkness light before them, and crooked things straight. These things will I do unto them, and not forsake them." Isa. 42:10-11,14-16 Reading the book of Isaiah, one must surely conclude that the prophecy of Isaiah is in truth the gospel of the kingdom of God.

The six days of man's labor and travail are almost at an end and the seventh day, the long awaited Sabbath of God's rest, is at hand. In it man's work will be no more. The six days of man's misrule will be over and his distorted and unholy kingdoms will be ended, and in the seventh day, the thousand year millennial day, the kingdom of God will spread itself over the entire earth and all nations shall serve and obey Him. See Dan. 7:27.
In the light of these things surely our understanding is quickened to see the inspired meaning of the words spoken so long ago: "And God blessed the Sabbath (seventh) day and hallowed it". Ex. 20:11

All throughout the Bible the Lord has been painting pictures of things to come. He has made fleeting shadows to fall across our pathway, reminding us that realities great and eternal are in the offing. It is always typical of man to become so engrossed with the shadows that he is unable to see the reality of the form that made the shadow. He becomes so busy trying to explain the mystic image cast upon the earth in the form of a shadow that he neglects to raise his eyes to behold the reality. A few mornings ago I arose early to stroll in quiet meditation by the shore of a beautiful little lake. The sun, just arisen to gladden the earth, was playfully casting grotesque shadows upon the ground out of all proportion to the objects they represented. As I walked along with my back to the sun, I smiled at my own shadow stretched out fully forty feet in front of me. Certainly the shadow did bear some resemblance to a man, for there was the image of the head upon the shoulders, and the arms and legs were clearly visible. No one could have doubted that this was, indeed, the shadow of a man.
But if we try to judge the man by the shadow, we will get things out of all proportion. I am not forty feet high as my shadow seemed to say; and, by the time my morning walk was over, my shadow had already reduced itself to twenty feet and then to ten, and by noon it would have been less than three feet. So we can not accurately judge the man by the shadow. It told nothing of my nature or my character. It did not tell whether I was white or yellow, black or brown. Indeed, it was the shadow of a man, but only a shadow. One could, I think, have a clearer understanding in a moment of time had he looked away from the shadow to the body that made it: and, had he spoken, he would have seen beyond the outer man to commune with the spirit and nature of the man within.

It was with this truth in mind that Paul instructed the Colossians, for they, though believers in Christ, were inclined to waste their time debating about circumcision and uncircumcision, ordinances and laws, new moons and Sabbaths, meats and drinks, and many other things that are only shadows of things to come. So the wise apostle wrote them a letter to turn their eyes away from the shadows to behold the reality, saying in his epistle,
"Let no man judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect to an holy day, or of the new moon, or of Sabbath days: which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ" meaning, of course, that the body that caused the shadow is the body of Christ. Col. 2:16-17 The exhortation is plain then. Do not spend your life arguing about days and months and weeks and years which at best are only shadows, but raise your eyes to see the reality which He is. A shadow is really nothing at all. It changes with every movement of light. The shadow of the Empire State Building tells us little of its worth. About all the information it gives is that, if we follow the shadow to its end, we will find the reality.

Why are people forever debating about which day of the week they should keep, and whether or not they should eat this or that? Why spend our lives debating about shadows? Look away yonder and you will see the body that made the shadow, and the reality. There are millions of people who keep the first day of the week as holy to the Lord who have never seen that to the Christian it foreshadows the dispensation of the fullness of times, and there are millions who keep the seventh day of the week who have never begun to understand the millennial kingdom, which it foreshadows. I greatly fear that many, after spending their lifetime in debate, will find in the end that they did not possess the spirit of the kingdom of God nor believe in the fullness of times.
CHAPTER SIX
KEEP YOURSELVES IN THE LOVE OF GOD

Many years ago a friend of mine departed this life to dwell forever in the presence of the Lord. He was a young man of about twenty-nine years, but his relationship with God far exceeded his age, for God had called forth from his heart a love and devotion much beyond the ordinary. He was suddenly stricken with a cancer that developed so rapidly that within eight months he passed away. As the time of departure drew near, he lay delirious, occasionally regaining consciousness long enough to breath out a few words of love to God, but when at last the hour came to bid farewell to earth, mustering all the strength of his weary body, he sang as he passed from death into life,

More love, O Christ, to Thee, more love to Thee!
Hear Thou the prayer I make on bended knee.
This is my earnest plea; more love, O Christ, to Thee,
More love to Thee; more love to Thee.

No man that ever lived has been able to define love because love does not belong to the realm of definition but to the realm of experience. We may read all the beautiful passages of scripture that concern the love of God and yet depart in ignorance with a spirit devoid of understanding and a soul as dry as a toothpick. The preacher may exhaust all his explanations as his glib tongue bursts with eloquence upon the ear, but for all his explanations both we and he go away empty, our souls devoid of truth, for it is not "Athen's blooms, but those of Calvary and Gethsemane that cause prodigals for home to pine, and turn their backs for aye on husks of swine." It is not explanations of love we need, but personal relationship with Christ. The soul that can sing from a bursting heart, "My Jesus, I love thee, I know Thou art mine," knows more of the love of God than all his teachers and has a closer relationship with Christ than all the learned professors in the world with their dry explanations of love and their useless ritual. When our time comes to depart out of this life, we will find no consolation whatever in the abundance of our learning or the Tightness of the people among whom we worshipped, but if in that moment our love for Christ abounds, our minds will have no regret and our hearts will know no fear. Whenever I find a Christian who is furtive about the possibility of death, who hates the thought that he is growing old, who resorts to sham and make-believe to convince the public that youth is still present, I know that such a one is lacking in the love of God, for the hidden and secret desire of his heart is to holdfast to this present life and delay as long as possible his departure from it.

The apostle Paul found himself in a great strait. On the one hand he dearly longed to depart this life and dwell with Christ, but on the other hand he was surrounded by people who badly needed him. So he said one day, "I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart and be with Christ; which is far better; Nevertheless to abide in the flesh is more needful for you." Phil. 1:23-24 Had he been free to take his own choice, he would have gladly departed to dwell in the presence of Christ, for well he knew the sacred truth that "where your treasure is, there will your heart be also."

"Love passes the door of many beautiful maidens on the way to his beloved's house," and we, too, when our love for Christ abounds, are kept from all earthly loves that we may worship God in purity with neither guilt nor regret upon our conscience, free in the knowledge that our love for the Eternal dwells in innocence before Him. Where the love of God is dwelling in the heart of the believer there need be no law, for love is the fulfilling of the law. Who needs a law saying, "Thou must love," where love already abounds? Need we ever say to him who dwells in love, "Thou shall not kill," since love worketh no ill to his neighbor and rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth only in truth? Need we ever say, "Thou shall not covet," to him who loves, since love refuses to seek her own, but the things that please God only?

For this reason and this alone love is the fulfilling of the law. He in whose heart dwells the love of God will do by nature all the things contained in the law of Moses. Obedience to precepts need not be demanded of him who dwells in love, for obedience will flow from his heart like living streams of water on their joyful way to the oceans of God. The soul who loves God finds no rest apart from God, but rejoices only in His presence; therefore, that our love may abound more and more, the Lord often withdraws Himself to hide in darkness that we may seek Him diligently and covet earnestly His abiding presence. "By night on my bed I sought Him whom my soul loveth: I sought Him, but I found Him not. I will rise now, and go about the city in the streets, and in the broad ways I will seek Him whom my soul loveth: I sought Him, but I found Him not. The watchmen that go about the city found me: to whom I said, Saw ye Him whom my soul loveth? It was but a little that I passed from them, but I found Him whom my soul loveth: I held Him, and would not let Him go, until I had brought Him into my mother's house, and into the chamber of her that conceived me." S.O.S. 3:1-5

Love never stops seeking until she finds the object of her search, for Thou, Lord, madest us for Thyself and our hearts are restless until we rest in Thee. The watchmen mentioned in this beautiful passage could not tell the seeker where to go to find the Lord, and in this respect they represent the preachers of the church system in our day who, though they go all about the city, compassing land and sea in search of proselytes, have no answer to the seeker's problem, for that answer, important above all others, they do not know. But "It was but a little that I passed from them, and I found Him whom my soul loveth." We will have to go beyond our instructors if we are going to come into communion with the Lord. Sermons and explanations are but vanity here, for God is found only by those who love Him enough to search after Him until they find Him. "Unto them that look for Him shall He appear..." Neither will such seekers be content until they have brought Him to the inner chamber of the human spirit that God may dwell in them and walk in them, that He may be their God and they may be His people. Oh words and phrases, how inadequate thou art, for who with thee can paint love's portrait upon the human soul?

As we come ever closer to the end of the dispensation of grace, I am becoming more and more convinced that our greatest need is an intimate and personal relationship with our Lord Jesus Christ, the blessed and only potentate, the King of kings and Lord of lords. There is something about knowing Christ and loving Him that is better far than whole burnt offerings and sacrifices, for the glory light of His presence fades into nothingness the endless doctrines and instructions of men. These things serve to leave us high and dry on the sand, proud in the knowledge that is nothing short of ignorance and foolishness in the light of God. But men and women who come into a personal relationship with Jesus come to know Him and all who know Him, walking in love before Him, are wiser in God and the things of God than all their instructors. There is something about loving Christ that makes us part of Him. I cannot explain it nor can I quite understand it, but those who love Him and ever seek to be near Him melt away into Him as ice melts away into water. The roughness and rudeness of the natural man is cleansed away by the glory of His presence. His blood cleanses from sin and His Spirit transforms the lover into the very image of Him who created him. As water mixes with water and air mingles with air, so in our relationship with Him our spirits mingle with His Spirit as we melt away into Him, becoming one Spirit with the Father and with His Son, Jesus Christ. It is here, and here alone, that sonship begins. Here it sojourns and matures all the days of our life and here in God's presence it is consummated and brought to eternal fullness. "If any man love Me, he will keep My words: and My Father will love him, and We will come unto him, and make Our abode with him." John 14:23

It would not be hard to write almost endless sermons about the love of God, showing what it is, what it will do, and why we should dwell in it, but for all the head knowledge that men might attain and all the technicalities they might embrace, they might still depart with naught but theory and none of the warm glow of love in their hearts. We may convince men who live in sin that they should love God, but for all that they will continue in enmity against Him. It is impossible to love anything or anybody just because we have been told we ought to do so. A man may be fascinated by the beautiful face of a woman only to find upon acquaintance that everything about her nature repels him, and, indeed, the opposite is often true. We find many people whose appearance holds no attraction for us whatever, but lying beneath the outer appearance there is a personality that draws forth a thousand responses from our spirit.

It was as though the prophet viewed our Lord from afar when he wrote the words, "He shall grow up before him as a tender plant, and as a root out of a dry ground; He hath no form nor comeliness; and when we shall see Him, there is no beauty that we should desire Him. He is despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief: and we hid as it were our faces from Him; He was despised, and we esteemed Him not." Isa. 53:2-3 But as the prophet drew near and revelation from on high flooded into his soul, he saw the eternal purpose of God that lay hidden with this stricken man of sorrows from whom we hid our faces. He saw the reason for His cruel passion and bloody sweat, that His griefs and sorrows were not His own but suffered on our behalf and for the redemption of the whole world and the entire creation. The man of sorrows and acquainted with grief was filled with grief not His own and afflicted with sorrows of another, for surely He hath borne our grief and carried our sorrows. Yet all the time He suffered for us, we stood afar off, deeming Him to be smitten of God and afflicted because of God's wrath against Him. But He was wounded for our transgressions; He was bruised for our iniquities; He was chastised that we might find peace; by the stripes inflicted upon His body we are healed and brought to immortality, and by the thorns upon His head even the earth is cured of its curse. Therefore to stand afar off is to despise and come to false conclusions, but in drawing near to this Sun of Righteousness the ice and snow of our wintry night of unbelief melt away and flow off into the ocean of His infinite self and we are one with Him.

We can never come to love God because we are told or coaxed to do so. Neither can we develop love by hearing sermons and trying to obey rules. We love God as we draw near to Him and His Spirit changes us into His image and likeness, making us one with Him. One night, as the Passover moon hung in the sky, an act of love was performed that must be told throughout all ages. There, while men communed at supper with Christ and the resurrected Lazarus sat with them, a little woman took a pound of ointment, very costly, and anointed the feet of Jesus and wiped His feet with her hair; and the house was filled with the odor of the ointment. She cared not for supper or things to eat or for any conversation, but rather to lavish upon Him all the love of her overflowing heart. And think not that she rose unrequited. In her adoring contemplation she was made like Him, and though she knew it not, she was anointing Him for His burial, for "if we have been planted together in the likeness of His death, we shall be also in the likeness of His resurrection." Rom. 6:5 We cannot come into contact with Jesus and remain unchanged. Even one moment in His presence makes us a stranger to this present evil age. Neither can we ever again be satisfied to roam the wastes of a world already under judgment, but like Noah's dove we will return from the desolation again and again to Him.

How different was the heart of Judas Iscariot who, in feigned concern for the poor, rebuked this humble woman for her wastefulness, not that he cared for the poor, but because he was a thief and carried the purse and stole from all that was put therein. Had not this man walked about the country with Jesus for three years? Was he not among those who had received power to heal the sick and cast out devils? Yes, indeed, he was! And in those short three years his eyes had seen and his ears had heard things too wonderful to tell. But he was like so many ministers today who, having much theology and teaching, preach sermons everywhere. They heal the sick and pray over the demon possessed. They profess to be disciples of the Lord, but their hearts have never been broken before Him or their spirits melted within them. For all their talk and all their profession their ministry is cold and lifeless, and for all their claims of miracles and healings, baptisms and multitudes of disciples, they have never come into vital union with our blessed and wonderful Lord.

We can never really lead men to God unless we live in Him ourselves. It is for this reason that all over the world today our eyes behold the disgusting spectacle of exalted men and women leading multitudes of followers, who idolize them and almost worship them as God. I am sure one could name a dozen or even a hundred such men whose names are of national and international repute, but because they have not lost themselves in Christ, the people follow them instead of Him, and when they are called away in death, all who follow them falter like drunken men because they trusted in man instead of loving Christ.

There are multitudes of people who often long for a deep and blessed experience with God. Not infrequently they express their concern by saying, "Oh, that I had an experience like this man or like that man!" For long and disappointing years they have desired a true relationship with the Lord, but it has been denied them because they sought it outside of God Himself. They imagined they could obtain it by following the rituals of a church system that, though loud in its talk, long in its explanations, and fervent in its proselyting zeal, was in itself far away from the pattern of God and pitifully devoid of His true presence and His will. Centuries ago the disciple Jude earnestly enquired of Jesus, "How is it that Thou wilt manifest Thyself unto us and not unto the world? Jesus answered and said unto him, If a man love Me, he will keep My words: and My Father will love Him, and We will come unto him, and make Our abode with him." John 14:23 Ah, my friend, here lies the blessed secret of a rich experience with God. This is the solution to the problem of the abiding presence of God in your life. This is the fulfilling of the law of God and all the sayings of Jesus. This is the secret of abiding under the shadow of the Almighty. "If a man love Me, he will keep My words. If a man love Me, My Father will love Him. If a man love Me, We will come unto him. If a man love Me, We will make Our abode with Him."
You say you long for a deeper walk with God. Then divorce yourself from the harlot systems that steal your heart away and devote yourself to Christ. Pour the ointment of your love upon His head, bathe His feet with your tears of repentance and joy, fill His heart with your praises and thanksgivings for all things, for you already know that all things work together for good to them that love the Lord. Believe and know of a surety that all who pour such fervent love upon Him will in a very short time find themselves walking in a relationship with God that they never deemed was possible, for "if any man love Me... We will come and make Our abode with Him."

There is a strange verse of scripture found in Prov. 23:26-28 which I would like to take time to explain, for it is full of meaning. "My son, give Me thine heart, and let thine eyes observe My ways. For a whore is a deep ditch, and a strange woman is a narrow pit. She also lieth in wait as for a prey, and increases the transgressors among men." Now, who is this whore to whom the wise man refers? It is none other than the great church whore spoken of in such lurid terms in the book of Revelation. "Come hither," said the angel to John, "and I will show you the judgment of the great whore that sitteth upon many waters, with whom the kings of the earth have committed fornication and the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication." This is the strange woman, the swaggering prostitute, the narrow pit who has made herself drunk with the blood of the saints and corrupted the earth with her fornication. This is the woman decked with gold, arrayed in purple and scarlet color, upon whose head is emblazoned the names of blasphemy and in whose hand is a golden cup full of the abomination and filth of her fornication. This is mystery Babylon, the great whore, the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth. Cf. Rev. 17:1-6, 19:2

It is this harlot churchwoman that keeps prospective sons from coming into vital union with Jesus Christ. This is the whore who is a deep ditch. Men and women who did run well in the race have been taken by her whorish eye and her deceitful kiss and have fallen into the ditch of denominationalism, undenominationalism, sectarianism, and every imaginable ist and ism that the human mind could devise. They have sunk down so far into this deep ditch that they cannot extricate themselves. This deep ditch and narrow pit is the fearful rut of churchianity into which Christians have fallen so that they are never free to follow the Spirit of Christ as sons of God must do, because, when they would follow Him, the deep ditch and narrow pit into which they have fallen will allow them only to follow its monotonous way of doctrines, laws, and ordinances. From infancy men have been taught that they must be faithful to their church, which, if they only knew it, is not the church at all, but a sect or a denomination that has become a slippery and mucky ditch, a winking whore that steals their heart away from true relationship with Christ, robs them of union with the mysterious virgin church which is His true body, and leaves them like prodigal sons far away from the Father's house, sitting in filthy garments, hungry and destitute, and companions of swine.

If we are ever going to escape the harlot systems, if we are ever going to get out of the deep ditch and out of the rut into which we have fallen, we must make the same decision that was made by the prodigal son. We must leave the deep ditch with its husks of swine and rise up in resolution and holy consecration to return to our Father from whence we came that He may clothe us with the garments of sonship, put the ring of union upon our finger, and rejoice that a son who had fallen into the deep ditch of harlots has returned to walk with Christ and know only Him.

Perhaps you will tell me that you long for fellowship with God's people. That is good, but learn first to fellowship with God. Listen to His voice first that you may know His voice and follow Him, and when you have come into fellowship with God, then you will find yourself in true fellowship with all men who love the Lord. You will find yourself a member of that true mystical church of the firstborn whose names are written in heaven, unbound, unhampered, and unconfined by the sickening pride of fanciful little groups who seem to imagine that they have all the ocean of God's truth in their little cup and all eternal wisdom locked up in their paltry church creeds.

People often ask me for a statement of what I believe. I never even try to tell them. Why should I attempt to confine infinite wisdom and the knowledge of the universe behind the paper fence of my human understanding? I have left the deep ditch of harlot systems forever and, please God, may I never fall into another. If you are going to walk with me, you will have to climb up out of the ditch of denominationalism and the rut of sectarianism and race across the Elysian fields of a God who is ever progressive and a revelation that is ever expanding, for the path of the just is as a shining light that shineth more and more till the day is full.
"My son, give me thine heart and let thine eyes observe My ways, for a whore is a deep ditch and a strange woman is a narrow pit."

Let us now speak of a secret that has been hidden from the minds of Christians down through many ages. You have often wanted to know why so often there is trouble among the people of God. It may be trouble over doctrines or trouble over creeds. It may be nothing more than personality clashes and petty dislikes. Indeed, it may be caused by any of the ten thousand imaginations of the carnal mind. I will not defile this paper by trying to name them, for they are many indeed and proceed not from the mind of Christ in men, but from the carnal mind, the avowed and age-lasting enemy of the mind of God. Weeks pass into months and months into years but still the church trouble rages on and on. Though the preacher preaches and exhorts on the sin of division, the wickedness of backbiting, pride, enmity, and all the other evils that divide men one from the other, there is never any respite from trouble and disunity among brethren, for the carnal mind in its enmity against God never ceases to project some phantom image on the screen to re-kindle the fires of bitterness that divide brother from brother.

There is no use in preaching sermons in the hope of bringing unity among brethren and restoring fellowship one with the other, for it is not here that the trouble lies. Broken fellowship is only an ugly rash and a festering sore that warns us of a plague within. The truth of the matter lies in the hidden fact that these warring brethren are in reality out of touch with Jesus Christ, for the man who is in vital union with Christ is at peace with all men, even though they be his enemies. Long ago in the wilderness Miriam and Aaron spoke evil against Moses because of the Ethiopian woman whom he had married. They said, "Hath the Lord indeed spoken only to Moses! Hath He not spoken also by us!" Num. 12:2 The subtle and mischievous words, which they spoke were spoken because they themselves were out of touch with God. Had they been abiding in Him, they would have seen all things as He saw them, for God, though almighty and all wise, had not rebuked Moses for marrying the Ethiopian woman, but He had set His love upon Moses because Moses had set his love upon Him. When men dwell in God, they become completely unconcerned about the vicious noises and cruel accusations that come from the carnal minds of other men, for they have the inclination to recognize that men who dwell in God will often be evil spoken of by men and women with caustic tongues who gnash upon them with their teeth and seek to destroy them. It is necessary for righteous men to suffer many evils, for he who hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin.

Consider how patiently Jesus bore the taunts that were hurled upon Him. When He was reviled, He reviled not again. When He suffered, He threatened not, but committed Himself to Him that judgeth righteously. Amid their mocking and jeering He was able to pray fervently, "Father, forgive them." Because His relationship was right with the Father, God dwelt in Him and He dwelt in God and thus was His love made perfect. And His relationship with all mankind was right even though the world was out of harmony with Him. It is our relationship with Christ that really counts. Get that right and all else will fall into God's pattern and we will find ourselves in harmony with all things, for all things, absolutely all things, even the most evil and dreaded of them, are working together for good to them that love the Lord.

When Mary wept at Jesus' feet, her heart was one with His. The sweet oil she lavished upon Him was worth three hundred pence and this represented a whole year's work, for laborers then received a penny a day. Matt. 20:2. Because she dwelt in Him and her heart was one with His, she was completely unaffected by the idle words of Judas Iscariot, who rebuked her for her wastefulness. Indeed, it may be wondered whether she heard them at all so absorbed was her life in the wonders of the spiritual realm in which He dwelt. Nor did the beloved Stephen grow agitated with his tormentors, for he, too, loved Christ and, dwelling in Him, both saw and understood all things even as God Himself understands them. Therefore he was able to pray with utter and complete understanding, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge." How truly did Paul say that love beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things and never faileth! Cor. 13:7-8.

Long ago a man named Jacob, weary with the journey of life, at enmity with his enemies, and apparently out of touch with God, mournfully complained, "Me have ye bereaved of my children: Joseph is not, and Simeon is not, and ye will take Benjamin away: all these things are against me." Gen. 42:36 But many centuries later, the apostle Paul, beset by evil such as few men have ever known, picked up his pen to write the undying message, "All things work together for good to them that love the Lord." Rom. 8:28 He had learned the secret of dwelling in Christ and had said for all men to hear, "For me to live is Christ."
Our relationship to a denomination means nothing; our membership in a sect is as the chaff that the wind driveth away, but our relationship to Christ is of eternal value, for there alone is sonship complete, and there alone is harmony with all God's creation and the fullness of His purpose. Furthermore, our fellowship with mankind means much less than we imagine, for Christians are far too often out of harmony with the Father. Men out of harmony with God can never draw us closer to Him nor point the way to a deeper life in Him. The husbandman that laboreth must be first partaker of the fruit. "Consider what I say and the Lord give you understanding." 2 Tim. 2:6

The first command of God is: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart and with all thy soul and with all thy mind." And the second command of God is: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." The order of this commandment stands unchangeable. Could God Himself have said, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," and then have said afterward, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God," He would have commanded that which is impossible, for no man can possibly love his neighbor as himself until first of all he has come to love God with all his heart. After our lives become lost with Christ in God, then love for the world and love for all mankind flows from a heart that is filled with divine understanding, for I am sure that beneath all the love of God for His creation there lies that prized possession of understanding. The moment a man begins to understand the wonders of God's purpose, at that same moment his heart leaps out in love for Him by whom all things exist and in whom all things end. The words of the Saviour, "Father, forgive them for they know not what they do," speak with eloquence of the love of God that flows from a heart of understanding.

See now how the love of God supersedes all knowledge whether spiritual or natural. Paul has declared without equivocation, "If any man thinketh he knoweth anything, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know; but if any man love God, the same is known of Him," 1 Cor. 8:2-3, or as Weymouth has so beautifully put it, "If any man loves God, that man is known by God." The pulpits of the world today are filled with men who seem to think they know everything. They depend upon their years in college and university, imbibing the traditions of the elders. They have burned the midnight oil as they pored over their books and crammed for their examinations, but for all this the vast majority of them do not know God, and God does not know them. In spite of all their learning, they know nothing as they ought to know it, for the wisdom of man is foolishness with God. But if any man loves God, God knows that man.

We may say then with all confidence that, if God knows a certain man because that man loves Him, then there need be no doubt that that man also knows God. How can a man love God and be known of God and himself not know God? Such a thing is indeed impossible. But let us follow the thought still further. Now we must declare that, the moment a man comes to know God, all the wisdom of his natural mind commences to become foolishness to him, for the wisdom of man is foolishness with God. Henceforth he is unlearning the things he thought he knew. The doctrines that were his pride and joy often become completely incompatible with the love that God is. He finds himself turning away from them, often repulsed and revolted by them. The love of God in his heart has revealed more eternal wisdom to him in just a moment than all his instructors for decades past. Furthermore, with the understanding that love imparts his attitude toward publicans and sinners becomes strangely changed. His mind is filled with understanding for heathen men who have never heard that God had a Son. No longer does he speak evil of any dignity, for "we have known and believed the love that God hath to us. God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God and God in him." I John 4:16

I do not know how many times people have written to me requesting a doctrinal statement. I never try to give them one, for we know nothing yet as we ought to know, but in all my life few, indeed, have enquired concerning my relationship to Him or have told me how I might come to know Him better than I do. Some men know the doctrine of their sect. Others are filled with the tradition of their denomination. Everyone seems to know what he believes, but have you heard the words of Paul, "I know whom I have believed," 2 Tim. 1:12, not in whom or about whom, but I know whom I have believed?

What tremendous longing filled the heart of this apostle of Christ when he cried from the fathomless depths of his spirit, "That I may know Him, and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings, being made conformable unto His death." Phil. 3:10 This is the man who had been brought up at the feet of the learned Gamaliel and who had said, "Though I might also have confidence in the flesh. If any other man thinketh that he hath whereof he might trust in the flesh, I more: circumcised the eighth day, of the stock of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, an Hebrew of the Hebrews: as touching the law, a Pharisee; concerning zeal, persecuting the church; touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless. But what things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ. Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ, and be found in Him, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith." Phil. 3:4-9

A man may have all this and yet not know Him. He may be filled with all this kind of knowledge and yet not know whom he has believed. His life may be burned out in zeal for all these things, yet still remain devoid of that love in his heart that would cause God to say, "I know him." What better can we do, then, than love God, for he who loves God is known of God and knows God?

In what hateful vanity and pride do men indulge when they argue and strive about the law and the Godhead. Why should we plague our lives with things too high for us? What benefit will I attain by trying to prove that God bears the likeness of some physical thing since it delights the Lord to hide Himself? Better far it is to devote our time to walking with Him and loving Him, for he that loveth God dwells in God and God in him. You may not and do not know all the things that are coming upon the earth in the very near future. You may not know the order of the resurrection nor understand the catching away of the in Christ company. Indeed, you may not even know your own ministry nor your true place in the kingdom, but what does that matter if above all your lack of knowledge you know Him and love Him? Will God pass you up on that day because there were many things you did not understand and could not explain? I tell you, no, for Christ has long ago said, "I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go to prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto Myself, that where I am there may ye be also." And if you like Thomas should object, saying, "Lord, we know not whither Thou goest and how can we know the way," the answer would be the same to you as it was to him: "I am the way, the truth and the life."

What further need you know about the way, since to know Him is to know the way? He is the way. What, O man, is the value of spending a lifetime searching for truth since He is the truth, and to know Him is to possess all the truth there is in the universe. How pitifully often have men enquired, "How can I know the way? Which of all these denominations is the right one? Who of these many preachers has the truth? Forget it, my friend and brother, for all that come before Him are thieves and robbers. Why burden your soul with their uncertain creeds? Seek to know Christ and Christ alone. He is the truth and He is the way.

Jesus said many things that cause us much astonishment. In John, chapter 10, He made Himself to be the good shepherd that enters by the door and the door by which the good shepherd enters, and further still He seems to make Himself to be the sheepfold into which all the sheep come. Said He, "I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth His life for the sheep." And again, "I am the door: by Me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture." And is it not true that He is all these things and life besides? He who finds Him as the truth shall find Him as the way, and he who finds Him as the way shall find Him as the life.

In these momentous days many are much troubled about the time and manner of the Lord's return and, as always, there are many who, imagining themselves to be very wise, are always ready at a moment's notice to spring to the defense of their dogmas or to go to great lengths to prove the points that seem real to them. Some fervently teach a pre-millennial coming of Christ; others are in great opposition, contending for a post-millennial coming of Christ. Some believe in total rapture of the church before the tribulation; others believe that the church will go through the tribulation. The trouble is that we see through a glass darkly and not face to face. We know in part and not as we are known, because the love of God is not perfected in our hearts. The older I grow the more I realize just how little I really know and the less dogmatic I become about almost all things. The less dependence we put in our own understanding the more we are inclined to abide in Him and look to Him as the solution to all our problems, and of this we may be sure: all those who abide in Him and keep themselves in His love will always stand complete in Him and in full preparation and readiness for all things that are to come. Therefore, should Christ come in the early morning or at noon, in the evening or at midnight, He will never find us sleeping, but abiding in Him and kept in the love of God that whether we wake or sleep we shall be found perfect in Him, without spot and blameless.

Perfect love casteth out fear, not only the momentary terrors of the way but the dread of uncertainty that often haunts the people of God who lean heavily on their own understanding. The man that loves best understands best. He who loves best is freest from the torments of fear, for he, abiding in Him, knows that Christ is not only the way but the light that shines ever more brightly upon it.

I do not know how God will fulfill the many promises of His word. The restitution and restoration of all things was clearly taught by the apostles and prophets. We may understand very little of how it will be accomplished, but here in this blessed hiding place, abiding in Him and kept in the love of God, the sure and blessed confidence eternally lives that all things will be restored just as He has promised, that every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess to the glory of God that He is Lord of all, and that every creature in heaven and earth and in the sea will be heard saying, "Blessing and honor and glory to Him that sitteth on the throne, and to the Lamb forever and ever." Rev. 5:13 We need not strive about details when we know Him and abide in His eternal love, for we are complete in Him, and in Him dwelleth all the wisdom and knowledge of the universe. Whether therefore we wake or whether we sleep, we live together with Him. 2 Thess. 5:10

We freely admit that our understanding of God's eternal plan is extremely limited, but there is more abundant understanding in those Christians who concentrate on loving God than is found in those who concentrate on study and strict adherence to the teaching of their tradition. "He that hath My commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth Me; and he that loveth Me shall be loved of My Father, and I will love him, and will manifest Myself to him." John 14:21 The surest way for any man to know the secrets of the Lord is to love Christ. The things contained in books may be just so much chaff, for the world is full of books and of the writing of them there is no end. The mails are loaded with nuisance literature, each proclaiming his pet theory and seeking to draw away disciples, but he who uplifts any save Christ is a thief and a robber, robbing Christ by stealing the love of His disciples from Him and robbing men of the priceless heritage of abiding in Him.

It would seem to be irrelevant to remind God's people that we are at this very moment living in the closing hours of the sixth dispensation - the dispensation of grace. The seventh dispensation - the dispensation of the kingdom of God - will follow this one just as naturally as the days of the week follow each other in their turn, as simply as day follows night. As the book of Genesis begins with man in the garden of Eden and ends with Joseph in a coffin in Egypt, so every dispensation begins with a blessing and ends with a curse, quickly followed by a new age with a new blessing. The dispensation of the law ended with the whole world's being judged in the awful passion of Jesus Christ, but the dispensation of grace began with the glory of the resurrection and the outpouring of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost. But the age that began with such glory is now about to end as John beheld it, lukewarm and with Christ standing outside the professing church knocking at the heart's door of individual men, saying, "If any man hear My voice and open the door, I will come in to him and sup with him and he with Me." Rev. 3:20 Christ is not in the church system as we know it today. He is outside the camp and all who would know Him must go unto Him without the camp of the present system, for He is preparing a mystical church, unseen and unknown of men, but known of God and abiding in Him. These are they who sup with Him. These are they who have overcome through Him. To them it shall be granted to sit with Him in His throne even as He overcame and is set down with the Father in His throne. Cf Rev. 3:20-21

The events that are happening every day are the events predicted by our Lord and by His holy apostles and prophets - wars and rumors of wars, violence, riots, anarchy, rebellions, earthquakes, the sea and waves roaring, men's hearts failing for fear, disobedience to parents, unthankfulness, unholiness, forms of godliness without any sign of power, and the thoughts of men's hearts only evil continually. It would take almost endless pages to even begin to cover the disasters of the past year, and so frequent have they become that our hearts grow hardened to them except we watch and abide in Him. Because of the momentous hour in which we live, it is time to remove our trust from man and all his abominable human systems. It is time to remove our foot from the great harlot system, which has long falsely paraded as the church, that we might abide in Him, for it is only those who are joined in love to Christ that are members of His body, of His flesh, and of His bones.

In this vital hour when all the systems of earth are collapsing, when democracies are falling, mighty empires are fading away, and the church system has wandered off into the sinking sands of the carnal mind, ecumenism and Babylon, there could be nothing better than that men and women should separate themselves unto Him. A week of fasting and prayer would open your eyes to a new realm of understanding in God. It would deliver you from the great ditch into which the harlot system has led you. We have been so busy tithing rue, anise, and cummin that we have passed over judgment and the love of God. Luke 11:42. While we have been busy receiving honor from men, we have awakened to hear the Lord saying, "But I know you, that ye have not the love of God in you." John 5:42. Because we have been busy receiving honor from one another, our faith has vanished away. "How can ye believe which receive honor one of another and seek not the honor that cometh from God only?" John 5:44. Because we have followed the teachings of men, we have gone astray in our doctrines, becoming most unthankful and unholy, but the grace of God teaches us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world, looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and Saviour, Jesus Christ. Titus 2:12-13

"May the Lord direct your hearts into the love of God and into the patient waiting for Christ." 2 Thess. 3:5. "If ye abide in Me and My words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." John 15:7. Therefore, keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life. AMEN!

All over the world today Christians and non-Christians, saved and unsaved, are being cast into the black dungeon of depression. One Robert Barrett describes depression as "a miserable, wretched experience that leaves you exhausted, uninvolved, and in deep, hopeless despair. There seems to be nowhere to turn and not one single thing you can do to escape these horrible feelings. You feel doomed, trapped, and at the end of your rope. It is awful!"

It may be that two thirds of those who read these lines have been afflicted and enslaved by the dread tyrannical monster of depression. It is indeed an horrible encounter with hopeless despair. The experience is common to both believers and unbelievers. Because of depression people have committed suicide. Tens of thousands are running to psychiatrists for help. These men do their best, I am sure, but their help comes only from the natural mind; therefore, they cannot get to the true source of the problem.

Almost any disease could be healed if the cause of it can be ascertained, but if the cause cannot be discovered, neither can the cure be found. To ascertain the cause of depression we must learn the truth that man is spirit, soul and body, and in that order of importance. Everything in the world today is designed for the physical - the body. Body first, the mind second, and last and least important is the spirit. What a tragedy! What a shameful perversion of truth!

Depression, whether found in the saint or in the sinner is caused by the desperate craving of the spiritual man for communion with God. The spirit of man is one essence with the Spirit of God. It thirsts for God! It hungers for God! It yearns for God! It faints for God! It craves spiritual meat and spiritual drink like a parched man lost in a burning desert whose tongue cleaves to the roof of his mouth for thirst, whose soul swoons and whose body droops and faints as hopelessness and despair seize upon him and there is no shadow or refuge from his torture.

Let saint and sinner alike take heed to what I now tell you. If you will simply recognize that what you have been calling depression is not depression at all, but the plaintive, pitiful, heart-rending, tortured cry of the spirit for communion and fellowship with God, its Maker, then you will have the answer to your problem. This that you are experiencing is nothing more nor less than the "groanings, which cannot be uttered", spoken of and experienced by the apostle Paul in Romans 8:26-27. Does not your body literally cry out for food when it is starved? Why then should we think it strange that the spirit should also cry out when it, too, is being starved for communion with Christ? Do you not feel depressed when your body is famished for water? Why then should we think it strange or unusual that the spirit should droop and faint when it is famished for the water of life and the bread of life?

You will have no more depression if you will learn the simple secret. My spirit is hungry; it must sup with Christ and Christ must sup with me. When this feeling of depression falls upon you, go immediately to the secret place - some place where you can be alone with God. Kneel there and do whatever the spirit within you seems to demand. Pray, if prayer wells up within. Groan, if in this the spirit finds release and satisfaction. Praise, if worship is flowing like a torrent from your heart. It will not be long, I assure you, before you begin to learn and sense the way of the Spirit. Take the word of God with you. Read it slowly and meditate upon its blessed truth and, as you do this, you will feel the groaning, the heaviness, the depression ebbing from your innermost spirit as water ebbs from melting snow. In this communion both the Spirit of God and the spirit of man are satisfied and united.

Men and women in all ages have experienced this same depression. Poor, despondent Elijah, sitting faint and weary under the juniper tree, said, "It is enough. Take my life. I do not want to live any longer." Neither in the earthquake, the fire nor the wind was God present, but in the still, small voice of the Spirit. 1 Kings 19:11-13 Disappointed, disconsolate Jonah, blustering because events had not gone the way he hoped, cried out in his depression, "O Lord, take, I beseech Thee, my life from me; it is better for me to die than to live." Listen and you will hear the voice of Job, afflicted, perplexed, and crushed and depressed, cursing the day he was born and imprecating malevolent maledictions even on those who rejoiced at the hour of his birth. These men of God all experienced the horror of depression and each of them have had to learn, even as I have also done, that depression comes from the cry of the spirit for communion with God. It is not depression at all. It is the thirsting of the spirit after God, manifesting itself in "groaning that cannot be uttered". Go quickly then to the secret place that your spiritual travail may bring to the birth that sonship for which not only the spirit, but the whole creation, craves.

Do you not see from this how fruitless it is to try to shake off this so-called depression, which is in fact the spiritual groaning after God's Spirit, by running here and there, or entering into fun or excitement, or running off to church to get with people? It is not people you need, beloved. It is communion with Christ. The psychiatrist cannot help you because he does not understand your problem. Go to the secret place of the Most High. Christ has been knocking. Open wide the door and He will come in and sup with you and you with Him. To the unsaved the same message is true. It is Christ for which your spirit groans. You need Him and Him alone.

Go, carry your burden to Jesus!
To Him let your heart be outpoured.
Your Father, who seeth in secret,
Will bring you a gracious reward.
CHAPTER ONE

THE FIVE SENSES IN THE REALM OF DEATH

Man is a triune being - spirit, soul and body. The spirit is the realm of God consciousness, the soul is the realm of self-consciousness, and the body is the realm of sense consciousness.

Man in his fallen state speaks of himself as body, soul, and spirit, but God always refers to him as spirit, soul and body. The reason for this reversal of terms becomes evident when we understand that man looks only at the visible and temporal, beyond which he cannot see, while God looks at the spiritual and eternal, which though invisible to man is radiantly clear and vastly more important to Him and to all who inhabit that blessed realm of life and reality. Man in his fallen state has never learned that the things he sees are unreal. They are unreal because they are passing away.

Visible things are always changing and never remain the same. How then can that which is always changing and which never remains the same be real? That which is young today is old tomorrow, and that which blooms today has faded tomorrow and gone to the dust the day following. "Man which is born of woman is of few days and full of trouble. He cometh forth as a flower and is cut down. He fleeth also as a shadow and continueth not." Job 14:1-2 "What is your life? It is even a vapor that appeareth for a little time and then vanisheth away." Jas. 4:14. "For all flesh is as grass and the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth and the flower thereof falleth away." 1 Pet. 1:24 "As for man, his days are as grass; as a flower of the field so he flourisheth. For the wind passeth over it, and it is gone; and the place thereof shall know it no more." Psa. 103:15, 16 "For that which is seen is temporal, but that which is not seen is eternal." When the Spirit of God opens the eyes of our understanding, clearly revealing the temporary nature of all visible things, at that same moment they lose their glamour and value. They become as the morning dew that passes away at noon, a fleeting shadow, or a fading leaf.

Man in the beginning, before the shame and desolation of his fall, was clothed upon by the glory of God. He was not naked, as we understand the term, neither was he clothed as animals are clothed. He was radiant with the glory of a spirit in God's image as was Jesus, the last Adam, at the transfiguration, whose face shone as... the sun and His raiment was as the light. He was in truth spirit, soul, and body, for the Spirit clothed his body with glory not as now, for now the body clothes the spirit in death. Paul had hope of the restoration of this very thing when he penned the immortal words of 2 Cor. 5:1-6, inwardly sighing for the day to speedily come when once again he would be clothed upon with his heavenly house, that, being clothed upon, he would no longer be naked. In Moffatt's vivid translation of this passage we get the true meaning of the message that was in the apostle's heart: "It makes me sigh indeed, this yearning to be under cover of my heavenly habitation, since I am sure that once so covered I shall not be naked at the hour of death. I do sigh within this tent of mine with heavy anxiety, not that I want to be stripped, no, but to be under cover of the other, to have my mortal element absorbed by life. I am prepared for this change by God, Who has given me the Spirit as a pledge and installation."

It is no wonder that Paul longed for the return of the day when he would be clothed with the Spirit of God, not that the Spirit should be in him only, but that he should be in the Spirit; not that the body of death should be visible, but that the body of death should be swallowed up in the life of that spirit house which is from heaven that death should be absorbed by life. It is no wonder that Paul was filled with this longing, for, whether known or unknown, that same longing fills the heart of every man; yea even the beasts and all inanimate things groan for the manifestation of the sons of God. The moment Adam and Eve discovered that the glory of their heavenly house had departed from them, leaving them stark naked, they manifested their plaintive longing for its return by pitifully sewing together fig leaves to cover the nakedness made manifest by the departure of their spirit house from heaven. Man alone of all God's creatures finds it necessary to wear an artificial covering. He must rob the sheep of its wool to cover himself. He must rob the plant of its cotton to hide the nakedness of which he is ashamed. Man desires to be clothed, beautifully clothed, but in his blindness, nakedness, and death he knows not at all that a glorious seamless garment not made with hands has been purchased for him by the blood of the eternal Son of God. Righteous Job saw this magnificent truth as he sat among the ashes scraping himself with a potsherd while his flesh rotted on his aching bones. "I know that my redeemer liveth," he cried, "And He shall stand in the latter days upon the earth, and if after my skin worms destroy this body, yet/n my flesh shall! see God, Whom I shall see for myself and mine eyes shall behold and not another." Job 19:25 The hour is at hand at last when this corruptible must put on incorruption and this mortal must put on immortality. Then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, death is swallowed up in victory." 1 Cor. 15:53, 54 We hear a great deal of talk today about entering into the realm of the spirit, but there is one thing above all else that continually stands with drawn sword to block our pathway, always hindering us from entering in to the life for which our spirits crave. The flesh is that one thing and we may safely say the only thing that bars our progress to a true life in the Spirit. The vast majority of people blame Satan for their lack of spiritual progress, but I am convinced that, were it not for the flesh in which all men live and move and have their being, Satan would have no power at all. The moment a man has completely overcome the flesh by the power of the Spirit, Satan is completely robbed of all his power over that man. This I declare to be the truth with no hesitation or equivocation.

WHAT THE FLESH IS

One would suppose that it would be completely unnecessary to ever ask the question, "What is the flesh?" But I for one must testify that, after serving God for almost forty years, daily seeking His face and studying His Word, I am one hundred percent convinced that the question of what the flesh really is, is the best kept secret both in the world and in the church today. The moment we make an assertion like that, perhaps a hundred, perhaps a thousand or ten thousand, voices will be immediately lifted in objection. But, if you were to ask that same hundred or thousand people to tell you exactly what the flesh is, they would all give you different and ambiguous answers that assist your understanding not one whit. If you will but speak the truth to your own heart, and if I will speak the truth to mine, we will both have to confess that, though we have heard the term the flesh used by preachers on countless occasions, having heard many sermons on the subject as well, yet we still went away in complete ignorance as to what the flesh really is, and with no true understanding as to how it so successfully operates that it hinders all mankind from a life in the Spirit. The moment we break through the flesh barrier, we enter into the realm of the Spirit and the spirit becomes supreme. The desperate famine in understanding the simple fact of what the flesh is has given birth to all manner of legalism and bondage.

All the world lives after the flesh whether it be man, or beast, or birds, or fishes of the sea, and yet for some strange reason the knowledge of what the flesh is has been reserved for the end of the age. But once we see what it really is, thus discerning the weakness and unprofitableness of it, it will have no more power over us than common dung and we will be on the path at last to a true life in the spirit and the sonship for which all creation groans. We are going to have to discard the often repeated and generally accepted assertion that the flesh is the carnal mind, for it is not. We must also give up the notion that the flesh is the carnal nature. It is no such thing. As long as we desperately cling to these long-standing notions, we will forever remain in ignorance, always remain in the flesh, and never be free of a carnal (fleshly) mind. We will always be subject to the carnal (fleshly) nature, and never enter into the realm of the Spirit.

We have already stated that man is a triune being. He is spirit, soul, and body. We need have no hesitation whatever in saying that man is spirit, soul, and flesh, for who on earth can say that the body is not flesh? Centuries ago Job sat in dust and ashes, his body covered with boils and his flesh literally putrid with sores. Prophesying of the end of the age, he said, "If after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." Now the most stubborn theologian on earth would surely admit that his flesh and his body referred to here were one and the same thing. Why is it, then, that when Paul uses exactly the same terms saying, "If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die, but, if you through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live," Christians insist on making the body one thing but the flesh something else altogether. The truth is that, when Paul referred to the flesh and the body in the same verse, he was plainly showing that they are one and the same thing. We will develop this truth greatly as we progress, yet for the moment we need have no hesitation whatever in making this clear statement: the flesh to which the Bible writers so often refer is nothing more and nothing less than the corruptible human body. If we close our eyes here, we will never understand the things of the Spirit, but grope vainly for light until the day when our flesh goes to the grave and the spirit, released by the death of the body of flesh, returns to God Who gave it.

When David said, "My flesh shall rest in hope," (Psa. 16:9), he was speaking of the day when his body would lie in the grave, waiting for the resurrection. When Jesus said, "The bread that I will give is my flesh which I will give for the life of the world" (John 6:51), He was unquestionably speaking of his body, which He gave, saying, "Take eat, this is My body." Matt. 26:26 See also 1 Cor. 11:24 "Whoso eateth My flesh and drinketh My blood hath eternal life... for My flesh is meat indeed and My blood is drink indeed." John 16-54-55 When Nicodemus questioned Jesus about the new birth, he said, "How can a man be born when he is old? Can he enter the second time into his mother's womb and be born?" To which Jesus replied, "That which is born of flesh is flesh." John 3:6 To this I might say, would God that all men would accept that, statement for what it says, believing that the flesh of which Jesus spoke is the flesh, the corruptible human body of flesh, nothing more and nothing less.

THE FLESH IS NOT WICKED

People throughout the whole church age have been taught to believe that the flesh (whatever it is) is something terribly wicked. They have come to the conclusion that the flesh (whatever it was) was something created by the devil. Men have consistently confused the flesh with the works of the flesh, and they have consistently confused the flesh with the carnal mind, making them one and the same thing. As long as you maintain that the flesh and the works of the flesh are one and the same thing, you will never find victory, for you will always be dealing with the effects instead of the cause, and always be treating the rash instead of the fever.

In a house where we once lived a certain spider had the annoying habit of spinning a web each night right across our doorway. The moment anyone opened the door to walk out, he walked right into the spider's web. He then spent the next few minutes brushing the sticky mess from his face and clothes. This continued for some days until we learned to take the broom and sweep the web down before venturing out. But we might well have continued sweeping the web down each morning until this day, gaining nothing, had not my wife one morning spotted the spider that was spinning all these webs. With feminine thoroughness she exterminated him, and I need not tell you that the following morning there was no spider web over the door. It was at this time that the Spirit was revealing many things to me regarding the flesh and, as I waited before Him, He put the truth clearly in my heart thus: the work of the flesh is no more the flesh than a spider web is a spider. There is nothing sinful or wicked about a spider though his works can be most annoying. Neither is there anything sinful about the flesh. It is something God made, but the works of which the flesh is capable are all opposite to the spirit and therefore bring forth all manner of evil and death. When the flesh goes to work, it spins a web manifest in all such things as adultery, fornication, hatred, variance, emulation, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like. Gal. 5:19-21 To this Paul adds, "of the which I tell you before, as I have told you in the past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God."

WHAT IS THE CARNAL MIND?

The word carni is a Latin word meaning flesh. The word carnal is the adjective meaning fleshly. Therefore when the Bible speaks of the carnal mind, it simply means the fleshly mind. The carnal mind is the body mind. The carnal mind is never concerned with the things of God or the things of the Spirit. The carnal mind is always and only concerned with the things of the body or the flesh. It is always working to satisfy the physical flesh of man. It is always thinking how it can better satisfy some craving of the flesh of man. It is forever planning some unspiritual thing that it can lavish on the body. It is very fitting, therefore, that Paul begins his list of fleshly manifestations with the words adultery, fornication, uncleanness, and lasciviousness, for, these being cravings of the physical body, the carnal or fleshly mind seeks to satisfy its every desire and fancy.

When the flesh has hunger, the carnal mind is immediately at work to give it food. When the flesh has thirst, the fleshly mind is always at work to find it drink. When the flesh demands sleep, the carnal mind caters to its whim even though the spirit may be longing to commune with God. Jesus in the Garden of Gethsemane told His disciples to watch and pray, yet upon returning He found them sleeping. He revealed the eternal war between the corruptible body of flesh and the spirit when He said, "The spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak." The spirit has God consciousness while the flesh has only sense consciousness. The flesh has many lusts (desires), many of which are terribly evil and none of which do ought but hinder and deter the spirit. The moment lusts arise within our bodies whether it be for the delight of the eyes or ears, or for food, drink, sex or a thousand other things, the carnal mind immediately seeks to find some way of satisfying them. Did not James say, "Every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lust and enticed; then when lust has conceived, it bringeth forth sin, and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death." Jas. 1:14 The carnal mind does not always think of evil things. There is nothing particularly evil about food or drink or taking rest in sleep, but what we want to point out is that the carnal mind is called the carnal mind because it is concerned only with the things of the body whether those things be good or bad. The carnal mind never thinks of any spiritual thing. The things of the Spirit are nothing to it. It is always contrary to the spiritual mind, for the spiritual mind is only concerned with the things that belong to the Spirit and man's relationship with God.

There is an impassable gulf between the carnal mind and the spiritual mind, for the spiritual mind is concerned only with the things of God and all the things that concern the Spirit, which things lead to life and immortality. But the fleshly or carnal mind is concerned only with the things of the physical body of flesh, which things lead only to death and corruption because there is no life in them. For this very reason the scripture says, "If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die, but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live." What other result could there possibly be, for there is no life in the body except what the Spirit gives. Therefore, to live for the sake of the body with its earthly desires must end in death. But the Spirit is eternal, immortal, and incorruptible; therefore, to live after the Spirit is life. Thus Paul says, "To be carnally (bodily) minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life and peace."

THE FIVE SENSES OF THE BODY

We said above that man is spirit, soul, and body. The spirit is the realm of God consciousness, the soul is the realm of self-consciousness, and the body (flesh) is the realm of sense consciousness. The five precious senses of the physical body are these: Seeing, hearing, tasting, feeling, and smelling. These without exception belong to the realm of the physical. They are the five senses of the body or the five senses of the flesh. It will be necessary here to consider at length the five senses of the body and, because there is much misunderstanding about this truth, we must point out here that there is positively nothing sinful or evil in any way about any of the five physical senses. They are all wonderful gifts from God and the present world could not possibly exist without them. What we must make clear, however, is this: these five senses as we know them are in the realm of the body only; therefore, there is no life in them, the consequence being that all who live for the sake of them (the senses) end in certain death - not because they are sinful but because there is no life in them.

THE RUDIMENTS OF THE WORLD

The apostle Paul in writing to the Colossians made this strange statement: "Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy or vain deceit after the traditions of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ." Col. 2:8 Then again, "Wherefore if ye be dead with Christ from the rudiments of the world, why as though living in the world are you subject to ordinances, touch not, taste not, and handle not?" Col. 2:20 Now I think we may safely say that not one person in ten thousand has ever understood what Paul meant by the expression rudiments of the world. Therefore few, if any, have ever understood how it is possible for a person to live after them or for the sake of them.

A rudiment is a first principle. The rudiments of the world are the first principles of the world. They are the most rudimentary or the most elementary things or principles in all the world or perhaps in all the universe. I suppose we may safely say that every branch of science has its own rudiments or its own elements. There are rudiments to arithmetic, rudiments to reading, rudiments to music. These rudimentary principles are the very first principles you must learn in studying any science. I suppose the most rudimentary (elementary) principle of the science of reading and writing would be to learn the letters of the alphabet. The most elementary thing about mathematics would be to learn the figures from one to ten. Possibly the most elementary thing about music would be to learn the scales, and so we could go on endlessly through every art or science in the world.

Now lest we should flounder forever in our search for the particular rudiments of which Paul speaks, he names two or three of them to clear our minds of all doubt, saying, "Wherefore if ye be dead to the rudiments of the world, why are ye subject to ordinances, touch not, taste not, handle not." When Paul mentions touch and taste, he is giving us the key to the particular rudiments of which he speaks, for touch and taste are two of the five senses of the body, or the physical flesh, the other three being seeing, hearing, and smelling. These five senses together are the rudiments (elements) of the world.

THE MOST ELEMENTARY OF ALL

We must point out that the five senses of the physical body are the most elementary or rudimentary principles in all the universe. You may take any branch of science you wish, but you will never find anything so elementary or so universal as the ability to see, hear, taste, touch, or smell. The most rudimentary principles of every science on earth must be studied and learned by man, but no man ever has to learn to see, or taste, or hear, or smell, or feel, for all these marvelous elementary (rudimentary) principles were with us at birth. An infant of one day has the same ability to see, hear, taste, feel, or smell as a grown man. Though the child knows nothing about the rudiments of arithmetic, reading, music, or any science, yet because these five senses are the most rudimentary principles in the universe, he has them in completeness at birth.

There is another fact, which shows beyond doubt that the five senses of the body are the most elementary principles in all the universe, and that is that these five elements are not confined to man. They are also found in all forms of physical life. Animals, birds, insects, and fish are all endowed with the same five senses and in many cases they are in greatly intensified form. A hawk can see a mouse easily at one hundred yards. An antelope on the prairie can see as well as a man with an eight power binocular. A dog can follow a scent, which is unseen as easily as a man can follow a trail that is visible. A robin appears to have the ability to hear a worm beneath the grass of your lawn, and bats fly entirely by sound. Though a boy learning arithmetic must learn that two plus two makes four or a child learning music must learn that the notes in the spaces are F, A, C, E, and the notes on the lines are E, G, B, D, F, or one learning to read must learn his ABC's, no one has to learn these basic elements of all the universe - seeing, hearing, tasting, touching, and smelling. Neither do beasts and lower creatures have to learn them, for they, being the five rudiments of the world, are given in fullness and completeness at birth to all creatures whether man, beast, fish, or insect. There is not the slightest doubt in all the world that when Paul referred to the rudiments of the world in Col. 2:8, 20 and to the weak and beggarly elements in Gal. 4:9, he was referring to these five wonderful physical senses which, though wonderful beyond compare, are weak and beggarly because in the realm of the flesh they have no power to give life and all who live for the sake of them end in death.

THE WORLD AND THE FIVE SENSES

Let us see now the enormous place these five senses of the body have in the present world system. As fire depends on fuel and as man to live depends on air, so also does all world commerce and all the earth's industry depend completely and entirely for its very existence on the five senses of the human body. This at first may seem like a sweeping statement and before any superficial examination it may appear untrue, but with a little careful consideration we will be forced to the conclusion that the world system, whether it be commerce, art, science, transportation or anything else, depends upon the five senses of the body for its existence. I must also emphatically add that not only does all industry and commerce depend upon the five senses of the body, but all industry and commerce on earth exists entirely and operates completely for the sake and satisfaction of the five senses of the human body, and this without any exception to the rule.

THE SENSE OF TASTE

A mighty universal world industry is built upon and entirely depends upon man's physical sense of taste. This fact is so evident to any thinking person that it would seem to be a waste of time to enlarge upon it. Not only in our day, but all through the centuries there has been an enormous appeal to man's sense of taste. I do not mean in the least that this is wrong, but the purpose of this writing will be to show that all the desires (lusts) of the flesh (the body) are manifest through the five senses, and all who live after them or for the sake of them can only hope to die, because there is no life in any of them. For this reason they are weak and beggarly.

Man is forever contriving new dishes and new recipes to appeal to the sense of taste. Listen to the radio commercials as they seek to tempt man's lust for tasty food. Every imaginable adjective is used to describe how tasty, tangy, toothful, delicious, delectable, and appetizing these dainty, lip-smacking dishes are. The ads in the magazines are forever presenting some new delectable dish to tempt man's palate, and so well prepared are they that the very sight of them on paper starts the mouth to watering. Where would the food industry be were it not for the sense of taste? Were it not for this remarkable sense, sawdust would be as tasteful as roast beef and a cup of fine coffee would have no more appeal to the taste than a glass of water.

Solomon proclaimed indisputable truth when he said, "All man's labor is for his mouth, yet the appetite is not filled." Ecc. 6:7 It is not sinful to eat. It is desirable to have a fine sense of taste, but whether we taste much or little the end will be the same, for there is no life in taste. Therefore, it is a weak and beggarly element promising nothing but death. The physical man loves to taste. He is ever inventing more and more things to taste until all his labor is for his mouth. Yet, all such labor notwithstanding, he is slowly and surely dying even while he lives. Furthermore even that fine sense of taste before whose altar he daily worships is gradually diminishing until at seventy years of age he has lost seventy per cent of the keenness of his physical senses. If mankind should suddenly lose the sense of taste, thousands of our food industries would go bankrupt within a month. There can be no denying the fact, then, that a whole world industry depends entirely on man's physical sense of taste.

THE SENSE OF SMELL

It is of great interest to notice that God has grouped all the senses close to the mouth. If this were not the case, many of us would have died long ago. All things that enter the mouth are scrutinized by the eyes, then the nose, then the palate. Indeed, even the sense of touch tells us whether or not certain things are fit to be eaten. While animals and other creatures use their sense of smell solely for their own preservation and benefit, man refuses to stop there, but goes far beyond that. He has capitalized on the human love for exotic smell until he has built an enormous commerce of world, wide proportions that depends entirely on the physical sense of smell for its very existence. Go to any pharmacy or department store and you will find counters loaded with beautifully packaged items created entirely to please and cater to the human sense of smell. There are exotic perfumes imported from Arabia and France, delightful odoriferous toilet waters and Eau de Cologne, aromatic perfumes and fragrant creams, smelling bags and scent bottles, and all manner of fragrant soaps that drop their aroma like the dews of heaven on the nostrils of man.
The perfume industry is nothing new. It was an enormous industry in very ancient times. The Bible speaks of the rich traffic in sweet spices and anointing oils with all manner of perfumes. Even the deodorizers which now crowd the counters are made solely because of man's sense of smell. The fantastic cost of these articles is well known to most who read these lines. Sufficient indeed it is to say that this multi-billion dollar industry of world wide importance depends entirely for its existence on this one rudiment which we all know as the sense of smell.

THE SENSE OF SIGHT

Man is not permitted to use his sense of sight merely for his own survival as is the case with animals or birds, but man uses his sense of sight to please and delight himself. The world, wide industry of sightseeing depends entirely on man's intense desire to see. The fourth largest industry in New York city is the sightseeing industry. The sightseeing industry has grown to such world wide proportions that millions of people are directly or indirectly employed in it every day. In the year 1958 alone sixty thousand Canadians, six hundred thousand Americans and two million Europeans visited the British Isles. The average spending was about $600.00 per person. Most of this vast throng made the journey for the main purpose of seeing. Vast as is this aggregate, it is but a drop in the bucket compared to the world wide interest in sightseeing. Therefore, we must conclude that though the eye is not and never can be filled with seeing, yet a world wide industry of enormous proportions is built on the sense of sight. Men and women spend days, months, and years enjoying the wonderful sights of earth. They browse endlessly in museums, travel far to see ancient architecture, gaze at magnificent mountains, delight themselves with waterfalls and ten thousand things which God has given us to enjoy. There is no sin in it. There is no wrong in any sense of the word. Like bodily exercise it "profiteth little." But though we should see all the sights of earth ten thousand times over, the eye could not be satisfied with seeing, and because there is no life in any sense of the flesh, we would but die. Even while we delight our eyes with seeing, they grow frail and we are forced to resort to artificial aids to assist our physical sight. Again I say that, because all this is in the realm of the body of flesh, there is no life in it. for if we live after the flesh we shall die.

THE SENSE OF HEARING

Consider now how great an industry is built solely to satisfy the sense of hearing. What indeed would the world be without sound and without hearing? I should think it would be even more drab than a world without color. We do not have the ability to tell how much the physical world depends on sound and hearing. Millions of dollars worth of musical instruments are sold every day. They would not exist at all were it not for man's sense of hearing. Millions of songs are sung every day and millions of dollars are spent to hear them sung, but they would neither be sung nor purchased were it not for the sense of hearing. Some entertainers earn 50,000 dollars per week for their singing and music, but they could not be earning fifty cents a week if it were not for man's sense of hearing. Without the sense of hearing there would be no place at all for lecturing, preaching, or electioneering. Big Ben of world renown, standing one hundred eighty feet high with dials twenty-three feet in diameter, pendulum weighing seven hundred pounds, and a voice that can be heard all over London on a calm day, would possibly never have been built had it not been for man's sense of hearing. It would be possible to go on almost forever describing what industry is built around the physical sense of hearing, but this we will leave to the imagination and intelligence of every reader.

Again we must repeat that there is nothing sinful or wrong with hearing, but because all the hearing we know in this world belongs in the physical realm and can never reach beyond that realm, there is therefore no life in it, and though we should fill our ears with the most delightsome sounds all the days of our lives, still we would die, for there is no life in either sound or hearing when it is in the realm of the physical body, which is the flesh.

THE SENSE OF FEELING

The sense of feeling is the most widely distributed of all the senses of the body, for while sight is confined to the eyes, hearing to the ears, smell to the nostrils, and taste to the mouth, yet the sense of feeling or touch is common to all the members of the body. It is a marvelous sense. Without feeling we would be very helpless... and useless creatures. By touch we can make all manner of discoveries. We can discern heat or cold, wet or dry, soft or hard, sharp or dull, pain or pleasure. Watch folks as they walk about a department store. You will notice them constantly touching things. They touch them because their sense of feeling tells them many things which sight cannot tell them. They can easily tell by touch whether an item is made of cotton or wool or nylon. It is the sense of feeling above all others that warns us of irregularities in our bodies. We suffer a pain and know immediately that something is wrong. We feel heat and at once jerk our hand away to avoid a burn. We feel cold and turn up the thermostat or put on an extra garment. We feel hungry or thirsty and act accordingly. This is a marvelous sense inhabiting every member of the physical body.

We would also point out that a whole world industry has been built upon man's desire to gratify his feeling. Why do we use easy chairs? Is it not to make the body of flesh feel comfortable? Why do we use cool drinks on a hot day or hot drinks on a cold day? Is it not for the one purpose of making ourselves feel more comfortable? Why do we in North America literally use tons of aspirin, pain killers, and tranquilizers? Is it not to relieve physical distresses whether it be headaches, stomach aches, arthritis, or a score of other ailments? Certainly it is. The reason we want to relieve our bodies of pain is that we might feel better. The drug industry must now be among the largest of the industries of earth, and certainly we need have no hesitation in saying that it stands or falls on man's feeling, whether his feelings are those of pain, nausea, sluggishness, weariness, or any other. It can be truthfully said that the liquor industry is largely built on man's feelings, for were it not for the physical kick he gets from alcohol this industry could not exist.

Recently the British parliament after long discussion passed a bill called "the street offences bill". The bill was designed to rid the streets of prostitutes. Among the vast amount of evidence brought forward was evidence proving that one prostitute alone had earned 10,000 pounds ($27,000) in one year. This, of course, was just one case among a great number. We need not present any argument to prove that this vile universal traffic, which is capable of destroying both soul and body, is founded entirely on the physical sense of feeling. Take this away and all such vileness would cease overnight. It is a tragedy of enormous proportions that in our day every imaginable gimmick is used to magnify beyond all reason the importance of sex. It has become a monstrous god, a sickening idol before whose shrine countless millions daily worship. Fabulous sums of money are spent to promote it. Billions are spent to see its pictures or read its books. Every effort is made to complicate its function when in truth there is nothing complicated about it. After all the books are written and read on this pet subject, no more is revealed or understood than that which is already well known to ordinary beasts of the field. Nothing has been made better except the bank accounts of the publishers, while the spellbound worshippers have been left in disillusionment and disappointment. Though this physical function is magnified as of great importance, the naked truth is that saving for its God-given purpose of procreation, there is no importance in it. It belongs to the physical realm and fades away with all other sensations of the body.

We have now shown that the five senses are the senses of the body. They are the senses of the flesh. There is nothing sinful about any of them, but because they are in the realm of the flesh, they are in the realm of death. There is no life in them, because the flesh has no life in it except that mortal life which is on the way to the grave from the day of its birth.

Try to imagine what the body of flesh would be if it had no senses. If a man could not hear, see, smell, taste, or touch, such a man would be nothing superior to a vegetable. Indeed, that is the term used to describe those who are so unfortunate. A man who had no physical senses could not live after the flesh, for it is through the senses that the flesh manifests all its desires. The flesh itself then is not sinful and the senses of the flesh are not sinful. The point we must see above all other is that if we live after the flesh we will die, the reason being that there is no life in the flesh or in any of its manifestations, neither is there life in anything it can do, accomplish, or design. Therefore, when Paul says, "If ye live after the flesh ye shall die", the reason for this death is most evident. It is because you are living after a realm that has no life in it. You are trying to satisfy that which cannot be satisfied and trying to find life where there is only death. If a man sees God with the eyes of his spirit, he will live. If he looks upon an image of God with the eyes of his flesh, he will die. If he drinks the water of life with his spirit, he will live forever; if he drinks the water of a well with his body, he will die. If he hears the voice of God with the ear of his spirit, he will live; if he hears the voices of earth with the ear of his body, he will die. If his spirit touches God, he will live; but if his flesh touches the things of earth, both he and they will die.
To understand the things written above is of eternal importance, for until we do understand them we will continue to place great emphasis on the things that concern only the realm of the physical man, a realm which takes up all our time from the cradle to the grave, yet a realm that the scripture describes as grass, a realm that is of no more true value than dung, a realm that profits not a straw those who take their complete fill of it. Rich men and poor alike do their utmost to live to satisfy the desire of the physical man, all of which is accomplished through satisfying the five senses of the body of flesh, for the flesh is the realm of sense consciousness. But rich men and poor alike, after having done their best to satisfy the physical senses, all die and all return to the dust from whence they came, thus proving that if we live after the flesh, we will die. Centuries ago, Paul by the inspiration of the Holy Spirit made this remarkable statement: "For the things that are seen are temporal, but the things that are not seen are eternal." 2 Cor. 4:18 Man is living in a world of unreality and delusion. He affirms that seeing is believing, never learning that the opposite, "he that believes shall see", is the real truth. If Paul had said the things which are seen, heard, smelted, touched, and tasted are temporal, he would have been one hundred percent right, for all these things when confined to the physical realm are temporal; and, because they are temporal, there is no life in them. Thus they serve only to bar the pathway to the realm of reality. The whole world has gone mad with a craving to see and hear and taste and feel and smell all manner of things. As a monkey swings from a tree and a pendulum swings in a clock, so the whole world system swings upon these five weak and beggarly elements that can offer no life eternal to those who bury their lives in them.

Having seen, then, that the flesh, which is the corruptible human body, expresses all its desires and passions through the five senses, and that these are not eternal but entirely temporal, let us no longer spend our lives as men of this world, vainly striving to satisfy that which is passing away, for this serves only to bar our progress to the realm of true reality which is the realm of the Spirit, but, counting bodily pleasures as nothing, let us without these hindrances, lay hold on immortality where all our spiritual senses operate in the realm of reality and life.

ALL MEN LIVE AFTER THE FLESH

We have already shown that every industry on earth exists to cater to the five senses of the body. But we will now go further by saying that every industry on earth operates either directly or indirectly or the sake of the human body of flesh. I say this without any equivocation whatsoever. The manufacturer manufactures his product for the body. It matters not whether he is manufacturing clothing, food, automobiles, electric appliances, or any other thing. The farmer grows his crops, raises his cattle, and milks his cows for the sake of the human body. The transportation industry on the sea, on the land, or in the air is for the benefit of the human body of flesh. Every ship is loaded with merchandise for the body. So also is every train and every aircraft. Everything that is done on earth is done for physical man. Even the years of learning in schools and universities have in mind the ultimate benefit of the body.

Every war is fought directly or indirectly over the human body. Not only are the weapons designed to kill the bodies of men, but the war itself comes from the lust that wars in the members of the body, the desire to take or retake that which will make the physical man more prosperous. The body of flesh with its many greedy lusts is the cause of wars and factions, battles and blood shed, for the origin of all war is the pursuit of wealth, and we are always forced to pursue wealth because we live in slavery to the cares of the body. Because of this slavery man never finds time to consider or diligently search out the life of the Spirit. Indeed, if for a few moments we do begin to search out the things of the Spirit, then our enemy, the corruptible body of flesh, begins immediately to fall in our way at every step of the inquiry, making demands for food or sleep or the satisfaction of some other physical desire. Thus we are filled with confusion, being torn between the flesh and the spirit, so that because of the body we never clearly see or enter the truth. It fills us with many passions, desires, and fears and often times many phantoms and much foolishness so that we can never even quietly meditate because of it. As long as we are in subjection to the demands of this body and such a hindering element is lord over our spirits and our souls, we will never gain what we desire in the spirit, for the body of flesh is always taking up our time with the care it demands day and night, ever demanding to be fed, clothed, rested, washed, and pampered and, when sickness or disease attacks us, we are hindered in our pursuit of the Spirit because we must nurse and comfort the body.
The body of flesh is such an enemy of the Spirit that we are deceived into spending a lifetime in a desperate struggle to maintain the physical man, and when we have laid by in store sufficient to maintain the body in comfort for many years, it will fall ill, devouring all we have saved in a vain attempt to restore our health. Never does it willingly lend us a moment to meditate on eternal things. Then when it has successfully hindered us all our lives, it will lie down and die, leaving the spirit earthbound, flesh bound, and poverty-stricken. Truly one has said:

We spend our health to gain our wealth;
We sweat and toil and save.
We spend our wealth to gain our health,
And all we get's the grave.

The prophets and saints learned centuries ago that it is never possible to enter into a true relationship with God while the body (the flesh) is present to harass and hinder with its divers lusts (desires). It is for that very reason that men of God of all age shave found it necessary to fast for long periods of time that the desires and demands of the body might be mortified or put to death by the demands of the spirit. A man who makes the claim that it is unnecessary to fast in our day is nothing more than a mouthpiece of the flesh. He neither understands what the flesh is nor how it operates in its opposition to the spirit. Once a man clearly sees that the fulfilling of the desires of the flesh through the five senses of the body can only end in death and spiritual poverty, he will realize for the first time in his life what nothing more than a mouthpiece of the flesh. He neither understands what the flesh is nor how it operates in its opposition to the spirit. Once a man clearly sees that the fulfilling of the desires of the flesh through the five senses of the body can only end in death and spiritual poverty, he will realize for the first time in his life what utter trash all the glamour and glitter of this passing world really is, and once he sees how trashy it is, he will gladly drop it and turn to the realm of reality, even the realm of the spirit where there is life and immortality.

A man or woman who cares much about the pleasures of the body such as eating and drinking and sexual passion, holding in high esteem such things as fine clothes and bodily adornments, will never in this frame on mind attain sonship - not because such things are necessarily wicked or even wicked at all, but they are enemies of the spirit in that they never give you leave to seek God without distraction. The man who has set his heart and affection on things above has come to the place where he not only holds in low esteem the things of the body, but he despises them as well, even hating them, for he has learned that these innocent looking things deter his quest for God. Jesus knew this great truth when He said that a man could not be His disciple unless he hated his brothers and sisters and even his own life also, being willing to forsake all he possessed. Luke 14:26-27, 33 He is not teaching us to be hateful, but to clearly see that everything that belongs to the realm of the flesh is worth nothing at all and can therefore be naught but a hindrance to the life of the spirit.

The man or woman who studies to show himself approved unto God studies to stand aloof from the body, bringing it into subjection to the spirit. Such a man seems to release his spirit and his soul from communion with the body, which is the flesh. He deafens his ear to its demands and hardens his heart against it even as Paul said, "I keep my body (the flesh) under and bring it into subjection lest after I have preached to others I myself should be a castaway." 1 Cor. 9:27 Paul once sought diligently that he would be delivered from a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet him lest he be exalted above measure, but the Spirit of God revealed to him that it was best for him to have the thorn, for when his body was weak his spirit was strong. 2 Cor. 12:7-10

Carnally minded men, whether they be worldlings or professing Christians, are filled with delusion that those who forsake the desires of the body, turning instead to the eternal values of the spirit, are living lives that are not worth living, imagining that he who thinks nothing of bodily pleasure is as good as dead. But such persons do not know that the opposite is the truth, for "she (or he) who liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth." 1 Tim. 5:6 It is not possible to make any spiritual investigation or come to any spiritual understanding through the use of any of the physical senses of the body, for all these things belong to the natural realm and come under the unalterable edict that the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, neither can he know them, for they are spiritually discerned. If we are to learn anything at all by the senses, we must ascend beyond the mortal to the place where they operate in the spiritual realm. But as long as we are in the realm of the body, we come closest to God when we have dismissed all physical sight or hearing together with all pleasure or pain, and having ceased all intercourse with the body, our spirits commune with God where spiritual senses operate in the realm of the Spirit of life, even in the open heavens.
"AFTER THE FLESH"

Paul often gave instruction about such things as death, the flesh, the carnal mind, and the spiritual mind. In Rom. 8:5 he exposed a yawning gulf between those who live after the body (which is the flesh) and those who live after the Spirit. He taught that "they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh: but they that are after the Spirit the things of the Spirit." It all depends what we are after. The man who is forever worrying about the welfare of the physical man will always have in mind ways and means of catering to him - how he can provide more in the bank for old age, how he can provide more to see and hear and taste and feel and smell, or how he can be sure he will never want for food, clothing, and shelter. He tries to make sure that the physical man will never be in need. He is always mindful of the physical flesh and the well-being of the natural man. However much we may elaborate or enlarge on this point, we will not improve much on the straight-forward statement of Paul, "They that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh."

Conversely, there is a small minority who spend their lives minding the things of the Spirit. The welfare of the spiritual man is uppermost in their thoughts, for they seek to partake of the mind of Christ. They, like Paul, "die daily" to the physical realm, counting it as a passing thing that is always changing and never remains the same. They esteem the realm of the flesh as less than nothing, seeking always to be one mind with the Father. These, being after the Spirit, mind the things of the Spirit.

THE CARNAL MIND AND THE SPIRITUAL MIND

The moment we grasp the meaning of the scripture, "They who are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh," at that moment we can understand what the carnal mind is. The carnal mind is nothing more or less than the body mind, or the mind that is concerned only with the things of the carnal, the body of flesh. Carnal means fleshly; therefore the carnal mind is the mind that is forever mindful of the flesh. It is always taking thought for tomorrow, what we shall eat, what we shall drink, and wherewithal we shall be clothed. It is the mind that says, "I will tear down my barns and build them greater and there will I bestow all my goods. Then I will say, eat, drink, and be merry, and have a real good time in the realm of the flesh." An angel cannot have a carnal mind because he has no carnal (flesh). I venture to say that even Satan does not have a carnal mind, for he has no flesh (carnal) about which he can worry. His mind is evil and desperately wicked, opposed to all the purposes of God, but to say that Satan had a carnal mind would be a ridiculous misstatement. Only creatures of flesh can have carnal minds. Wolves and bears can and do have carnal minds in that their one and only concern is the simple preservation of their bodies. The carnal mind is an enemy of God and of all things spiritual because it so pampers and exalts every whim and fancy of the physical flesh, which stands as an almost impassable barricade to a life in the spirit. Therefore, the statement "to be carnally minded is death" is one hundred percent true.

The spiritual mind is simply the mind that is always after the Spirit. It tramples underfoot the desires of the flesh. It keeps the body under and brings it into subjection to the Spirit. It will take measures to put to death the craving of the flesh whether it be hunger or thirst, weariness or some other lust. It insists on following the leading of the Spirit of God. It refuses to take thought for tomorrow where such thought would in any way jeopardize the will of God. To be carnally minded is death because there is nothing but death in the realm of the corruptible body where all its interests lie, but to be spiritually minded is life and peace because the spiritual realm is the realm of God where all is eternal life and the shadows of death never appear. The carnal mind is an enemy of God because it is not subject to God's laws, neither indeed can be, (Rom. 8:7). So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God.

In our day man places enormous importance upon eating and drinking, but when the disciples came to Jesus in Samaria saying, "Master, eat", He replied, "I have meat to eat that ye know not of." Jesus knew that those who nourish the soul with the bread of life from heaven are giving life to the physical body as well, but those who nourish the body only are giving physical life to that which always lusts against the Spirit. After Jesus had fed the five thousand with loaves and fishes, the people earnestly sought Him. Jesus said to them, "Ye sought me not because you saw the miracles, but because ye ate the loaves and were filled. Labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for the meat that endures unto eternal life, which God the Father giveth you."

John 6:26, 27 See then how the carnal mind is always concerned about the body of corruptible flesh? We hear much today of gatherings for food, fun, and fellowship. Do not deceive yourself, for these three do not go together; they belong in entirely different realms. You may have food, fun, and friendship, but spiritual fellowship is something entirely apart. It does not go hand in hand with feasting and frivolity. Labor not for the meat that perisheth, for the meat and drink that delights the taste of man is already perishing and has therefore no life that it can give. It is not sinful to eat the loaves and fishes, but they, being dead, cannot give life. Therefore, labor not for any of the things that delight the eyes, the ears, the taste, the smell, or the feelings, but labor for that eternal life which giveth life to the spirit and transforms the body from corruption to incorruption.

I do not think I have ever met a man who understands the seventh chapter of Romans. The reason so few understand it is because it is dealing with our death to the flesh in preparation for a true life in the Spirit, even the sonship of chapter eight. No man will ever understand what Paul taught in Romans, chapter seven, until he is able to see that all the flesh is, is the corruptible human body that demands so much attention that there is no room at all for a walk in the Spirit. Just watch your life today and notice how often the needs of your own body throw themselves in the path of the Spirit to hinder you from communion with God. Announce to your body that you are going to seek God with fasting and prayer for ten days and see for yourself the violent reaction that comes from the carnal mind. It will immediately present a dozen excuses why you should not do so now, but later would be more convenient.

The Law of Moses was not given for righteous men, but for unholy and profane. It was given because of the weakness and unprofitableness of the flesh. All mankind remains bound by that law and in bondage to it until the death of the body or until the body is reckoned dead. "A woman which hath a husband is bound by the law to her husband so long as he liveth, but if the husband be dead, she is loosed from the law of her husband. So that, if while her husband liveth she be married to another man, she shall be called an adulteress; but, if her husband be dead, she is free from the law so that she is no adulteress though she be married to another man."

Rom. 7:2-3 Now in this allegory we have four things - the law, the wife, the husband, and another man. The law is the law of God. The wife is you. The husband is the flesh. The other man is Christ or the Spirit. A woman is bound by the law to her husband as long as he lives; but the moment the husband dies, the law which bound her has no more effect. It is not the law that died; it is the husband. But, because he is dead, the law has no more effect on the wife and she is free from it. With this in mind hear what Paul says, "Wherefore, my brethren, ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ (you are identified with His death), that ye should be married to another, even to Him who is raised from the dead (Jesus Christ), that we should bring forth fruit unto God (not unto death). But now we are delivered from the law, that being dead (the flesh) wherein we were held; that we should serve in newness of the Spirit and not in the oldness of the letter."

Rom. 7:4, 6 Throughout the whole seventh chapter of Romans Paul pictures the old husband, the flesh, our corruptible body, as a terrible tyrant, forcing us (the wife) to do everything we do not want to do. "For that which I do I allow not; for what I would, that I do not; what I hate that do I," (verse 15), until at last in verse 24 he cries in agony for the death of this wicked husband, the flesh, saying, "O wretched man that I am! Who shall deliver me from the body of this death (this body of death)?" It is in chapter eight that Paul reveals the secret of being free from the body of death. By reckoning the body (your husband) dead, you become free from the law that binds you to it, for marriage laws have no power after the death of a husband or wife, so that you are now free to be joined to anew husband, the Spirit. Thus then he says, "There is therefore now no condemnation to them who are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit; for the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus has made me free from the law of sin and death that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us who walk not after the flesh (the old husband), but after the Spirit (the new husband). The moment a man dies, all his earthly passions immediately cease and his spirit is at last free to return to God who gave it. So also with those who have reckoned themselves dead, for they have reckoned the body with all its earthly inclinations to be dead and henceforth they are free to be joined to the resurrected Christ in the Spirit. Rom. 6:11

Of the things which we have spoken this is the sum: The corruptible human body is indeed the flesh which manifests all its desires through its five senses, for the body is the realm of sense consciousness. The eye is not filled with seeing, the ear is not filled with hearing, nor the nostrils satisfied with smelling, or the palate with tasting, for all these elements are passing away and there is no life in any of them. The things which man has imagined to be of great importance and for which the whole world labors - food for the appetite, sights for the eyes, sounds for the ears, perfumes for the nostrils, and various delights and sensations for the body - are in reality not important at all, for there is no life in any of them and they with the body are perishing. The more we fill our lives with them the less we are able to attend to the things, which are eternal. Therefore, "labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto eternal life, which the Son of man will give you, for him hath God the Father sealed." John 6:27

"Never give your hearts to this world or to any of the things in it. A man cannot love the Father and love the world at the same time, for the whole world system, based as it is on man's primitive desires, is not derived from the Father at all, but from the world itself. The world and all its passionate desires will one day disappear, but the man who does God's will is part of the permanent and cannot die." 1 John 2:15 (Phillips)

THE FIVE SENSES IN THE REALM OF LIFE

There is a divine law that manifests itself throughout all the creation of God. It is the law of progressive continuity. You will not be able to find a definition of it in the encyclopedia, yet even a child can see that it operates everywhere and in all things. Strong mature men were not always strong and mature. They were born as helpless infants who from the time of their birth continually progressed and grew both in wisdom and in stature until they reached maturity. Two little seeds almost identical in appearance may lie side by side in the ground. One may mature into a carrot or a sunflower, the other into an oak or an elm. God has ordained that this law should operate through all creation. The tiny embryo must progress until it reaches its ultimate in animal life. The little seed must sprout and grow, first the blade, then the ear, and finally the full corn in the ear. The egg that lies immobile in the nest must hatch and develop into a bird that soars in the glories of God's heaven and the egg that is spawned in the river must develop into a fish that will fathom the depths of God's ocean. The caterpillar that laboriously creeps its way upon the earth voraciously gorging itself on leaves and plants will emerge from its cocoon of death to flit and fly in heavenly places.

This law of progressive continuity, which is so clearly visible in the world of animals and plants is just as clearly seen in the spiritual world as well, for all natural things have spiritual counterparts. It was for this reason that Jesus said, "Except ye be converted and become as little children, you cannot enter the kingdom of heaven." Matt. 18:3 We must enter that kingdom as a child even as we entered this earthly kingdom as a child. Paul in his writings called some people "babes in Christ" (1 Cor. 3:1), and the beloved John wrote, "My little children, these things I write unto you." From the place of spiritual children we are to continually progress until we are mature sons like Him, for we see Him as He is.

Again this same principle of progression is true in the realm of revelation. All revelation is unfolding and progressive. No revelation that was ever given to man was complete in itself. It was always the partial unfolding of a great truth that was to be progressively revealed as the centuries and millenniums passed. Thus it is that the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ. The Apostle Paul was given the gospel of the grace of God and makes no hesitation in calling it my gospel (2 Tim. 2:8), claiming that a whole dispensation was committed unto him (Eph. 3:2). The gospel of the kingdom was given to neither Moses nor Paul, but to those for whom it is being prepared.

It is always wrong for people to imagine that they have the last word about any truth, for we know nothing yet as we ought to know, but we know in part and we prophesy in part as we progress toward the realm of maturity and full growth and love in Him. There we shall know as we are known. The spiritual things we are permitted to see we see but dimly and afar off. The things we are permitted to hear we hear at first with muffled ears as distant voices calling to us beyond the din and clamor of earth's turmoil, faintly at first but with ever increasing distinctness as the inner ear becomes accustomed to celestial voices.

There were many people who listened as Jesus prayed, "Father, glorify Thy Name" (John 12:29), and many heard the voice of God that spoke to Him from heaven. To some His voice was indiscernible from the sound of the thunder while others heard the clearly articulated words, "This is My beloved Son in Whom I am well pleased." So also it was when Jesus spoke to Saul on the Damascus road. While the soldiers heard a voice but saw no man, Saul both saw and heard the Son of God. Daniel fell to the earth for the glory of the things he saw and heard while those who were with him were but terrified at the sense of the presence of the angel, which they neither saw nor heard. Dan. 10:7

For centuries now we have been taught to believe that the dispensation of grace was a very superior dispensation, but the real truth is that it is only a dispensation of grace. It has been an age of immature understanding and immature Christians. It has been an age of strife and division among the people of God, an age of a hireling ministry full of the doctrines of men, and an age in which wheat and tares have grown in the same field, the tares far outnumbering the wheat. It is a dispensation when sheep and goats have pastured together, an age when leaven has worked in the meal until the whole is leavened. It has been a mixture of good and evil, false and true, white and black. Side by side with the apostle is the false apostle and along with the teacher, the false teacher. Side by side with the worker of miracles the sorcerer has deceived and with the prophet of the Lord is the man who speaks evil from his own heart. What a cursed generation it has been! Now we find ourselves at the end of the age in the deepening confusion of Babylon unable to discern among the many voices that are in the world, seeing no difference between "him that knoweth God and him that knoweth Him not." The dismal darkness and blinding bondage of Babylon is cascading endless millions of professors to destruction. But there is a light shining through the gloom for all to see who will and a voice calling o'er the tumult that is distinct from all other voices. It is the voice of our beloved Shepherd and Lord, Jesus Christ the Son of God who said, "My sheep know My voice and they follow Me."

Now if all things whether physical or spiritual begin in embryo form, then he is a very wise man indeed who heeds the still small voice or beholds the light that shines, for of its increase there will be no end. The things of which we are to speak will be seen but dimly at first by most of us, but without doubt there are others whose spiritual senses have been so exercised that they will see all these things clearly and much more as well. To some these truths will be but the flickering light of a candle, but to others they will be a burning shining light. Let us not despise the day of small things and imperfect understanding, for we are approaching the age when we shall see clearly and face to face with neither mist, darkness, nor blindness to mar our perfect understanding.

There are without doubt many realms and many worlds about us on every hand and myriads of heavenly beings as well. Paul by the Spirit was caught up into the third heaven and without doubt there are heavens beyond that also. There are two worlds or two realms in which we are particularly interested just now. They are the risible and the invisible, or the temporal and the eternal. We are inclined to always think of the risible realm as the realm of reality, but when we think of the invisible realm, we think of it as the realm of the metaphysical and unreal. We judge it to be a realm of uncertainty, of mystery, and perhaps of imagination. Because we cannot see it with physical eyes nor hear it with physical ears, we are uncertain about it and we cling tenaciously to the visible realm which we think to be real.

It must now be made clear to our hearts that things are not at all as they seem. In fact, they are exactly opposite to what they seem. It is the visible realm that is unreal and it is the invisible realm that is real. The Holy Spirit who knoweth all things has taught us in the simplest and most beautiful words that this is so. "The things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal." 2 Cor. 4:18 All the things, which can be seen, heard, tasted, touched, or smelled by the five physical senses are temporal and passing away. Can you think of any visible thing that is not passing away? Every form of life upon the earth is passing away, and even the earth itself shall pass away. The visible heavens are also passing away and will one day be rolled up as a scroll. Rev. 21:1 There is positively no true reality in that which is passing and not permanent, for how can we say that things that are always changing and which never remain the same are realities? If indeed their change were toward permanence and maturity, there might be reality, but since their change is always toward decay and death, there can be no reality in it. The invisible things are the eternal things and these are the things that abide forever.

Let us not be misled by the term invisible things. The things, which are eternal, are not really invisible at all. They are only invisible to the kind of eyes we mortals have. Eternal things are only inaudible to the ears of the natural and beyond the reach of the other physical senses as well. Just as there are five natural senses in the realm of the physical, which belong to the physical so also there are five senses in the spiritual realm. The five senses of the body are able only to see, hear, taste, touch, and smell natural things, but these same five senses in the realm of the Spirit are able to see, hear, taste, touch, and smell all spiritual things in a vastly increased and eternal measure. When those spiritual senses become operative, then the realm of the spiritual becomes completely open and discernible just as the realm of the natural is open to us now.

Before Adam and Eve sinned their spiritual senses were even more awake than their physical ones. They saw God, they heard God, they walked with God, and they talked with God. The effulgent perfumes of the heavenly realm were fragrance and life in their nostrils. They were able to taste spiritual things and touch spiritual things.
Let there be no doubt about that. We will greatly increase this truth a little later in this writing. Spiritual entities and spiritual realities were wide open to them and they walked in the presence and the glory of the heavenly realms. The gates of that realm were not closed by day or night and that realm was even more real than the physical things, which lay all about them. They did not need to eat of any tree neither did they need to drink of the four rivers that had their source in the garden. They like Christ had "meat to eat" that we know not of and drink to drink that we have never tasted. Pardon me if I seem fanciful, but the grass and trees, flowers and fruits of that garden had a strange and wonderful spiritual element about them, for they did not fade nor die nor did they wilt with heat and wind. They were there for man's enjoyment if he wished them and were designed to give only life for there was no death in them. The heavens were open to Adam and Eve and they walked in the and light of God's presence.

When the man sinned, all the glory of the eternal realm faded away and the heavens became closed to him, for he immediately lost all his spiritual senses. That was part of his death. The heavens were closed to him. He could no longer see eternal things. He could see only natural things. He could no longer hear spiritual and eternal things. He could hear only the lower sounds of earth. He could no more taste spiritual things but only such things as he could eat with his physical mouth, things which were hard and tangible and which now contained an element of death. Even the plants were partakers with him of his curse, for God had cursed the ground for man's sake. No more could he smell the more glorious fragrance of the heavenly realms, but only those perfumes, which issued forth from the things of earth. Neither could he feel the glory of God's presence, but his feeling was confined to things that belong to earth, that are tangible and do not belong to the spiritual realm. In short the heavens were closed. He could not see, hear, touch, taste, or smell in that heavenly realm.
The only realm left open to him was the physical realm. He was condemned to live after the flesh, for the gates of the spiritual world were closed to him.

Just as the eyes of a blind man are closed to the things of the natural realm, so Adam's spiritual eyes were closed to all the things of the spiritual realm. That was part of his death. He could no longer see the kingdom of God. As the ears of a deaf man are closed to the sounds of earth, so Adam's ears were closed to the sounds of the eternal realm of God's kingdom. Just as men of earth who have lost their senses of smell or taste or touch can neither smell nor taste nor feel natural things, so in like manner Adam and Eve found themselves no longer able to taste or smell or touch the things of the kingdom of God. All this was closed to them and they were locked out of the kingdom of God, hermetically sealed on the physical side. As far as they were concerned, from then on the spiritual realm of reality did not exist, for they could not see it, hear it, taste or touch or smell it. Though its glory was all about them, yet they were completely oblivious to it.

When our minds begin to comprehend how completely they were locked out of the kingdom of God and barred from all spiritual experience because of the death that had come upon them, then we are able to understand more clearly why it was that Jesus said, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God."
There is far more to that statement than any man has ever understood, for just as death deprived Adam of the sight and presence of the things of God's kingdom so also will the new birth bring them back into view. The same heavens that were closed on that day in Eden so long ago will once again begin to open to us that we, being born again, might live in the realm of light and of the kingdom of the Lord.

We have always been sold short on the new birth. Men have believed that they were born again just because they went to an altar to pray. *Tis true that they may have received regeneration in a measure as they became active believers, but I fully believe that the glory of the experience of the new birth is still before us. We cannot fully explain it nor pry into it, but it is there just the same and it will bring us back to the Eden of the Lord where once more heaven will be open to us.
A blind man walks amid valleys and mountains, which he cannot see. Magnificent colors adorn his pathway. Green trees and sparkling brooks surround him, yet he sees them not. Beautiful birds soar through azure skies but he is unaware of them. To walk in a world of towering mountains, massive hills, green valleys, and resplendent beauty and yet never see it is a tragedy indeed, but have we not all been condemned to a far greater tragedy in that we have walked in the very midst of the eternal glories of heaven, but our eyes have not been able to see them, our ears have been dead to their sounds of joy, our nostrils unable to smell their fragrance, and our palates oblivious to their life-giving tastes? God did not remove heaven from man when man sinned, but man's spiritual senses went dead so that he could no longer see or hear or in anywise touch its glory though it is still all about us. God does not remove the earth from blind men nor the wonder of its sounds from deaf men. The sights and sounds still remain all about them, yet, because they are blind or deaf, they cannot see nor hear them. Their senses have become completely dead to all these things. It will be a moment beyond compare when once again our eyes are opened to behold the glory of the kingdom of God which, though all about us, goes unnoticed and unrecognized because our spiritual senses are dead and heaven is closed to us.

HEAVEN OPEN

The truth of the statements we have made above will be clearly demonstrated by that which is to follow. God has not left us without a witness to all these glorious things. He testifies over and over again that the glory of His kingdom is all about us and all we need is a rebirth that will once again open those glories to us just as they once were open in lovely Eden.

How often we have sung that beautiful song:
Open mine eyes that I may see Glimpses of truth Thou hast for me;
Place in my hands that wonderful key
That shall unclasp and set me free.

We cannot blame men for wanting physical healing, but what a tragedy it is that we have been blind and deaf so long to an eternal kingdom all about us, totally oblivious to its existence. It is time to be born again that we might see the kingdom. It is time to be born again that we might hear the kingdom. It is time to be born again that we might smell its fragrance, feel its life-giving glory, and taste its eternal fruit.

There was a prophet in Israel in the days of Ben-hadad, king of Syria, who lived continually in the spiritual realm. His eyes were open to the presence of the kingdom of God and he knew continually the glory of heaven open. Because heaven was open to him none of the things of earth were hidden to him. Thus he was able to frustrate all the plans of Ben-hadad, for he knew even the words the king spoke in his bed chamber. 2 Kings 6:12. Well Ben-hadad knew that he could never accomplish his purposes of war as long as a man like Elisha was in Israel, so he sent horses and chariots and a great host to capture the man of God. By night they came and surrounded the little city of Dothan to capture one man of God. And so it reads: "Therefore sent he thither horses and chariots and a great host; and they came by night and compassed the city about. And when the servant of the man of God was risen early and gone forth, behold, a host encompassed the city both with horses and chariots. And his servant said unto him, 'Alas, master! How shall we do?' And he answered, Tear not, for they that be with us are more than they that be with them.' And Elisha prayed and said, 'Lord, I pray thee open his eyes that he may see.' And the Lord opened the eyes of the young man, and he saw; and, behold, the mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha. And when they came down to him, Elisha prayed unto the Lord and said, 'Smite this people, I pray Thee, with blindness.' And He smote them with blindness according to the word of Elisha." 2 Kings 6:13-18

The thing that makes all the difference is the realm in which a man lives. Two men are standing side by side. One sees only the hosts of men and is oblivious to the presence of the hosts of the Lord. The heaven, though all about him, is not open to him, for he has not regained his spiritual sight. He has not been reborn into the spiritual realm. He is blind to all things except the hard cold things of a physical realm. The other man standing by his side, though walking in the dark vales of earth, yet lives beneath open heavens. Though he sees the hosts of Ben-hadad terrible with chariots and bristling with spear and sword, yet they fade away into misty insignificance before the majesty of the heavenly hosts that surround him. Heaven is open to him. It is not a dream, but a reality. Heaven is not a billion miles away. It is all about us.

When Elisha saw the dread and fear in the heart of his servant, his own heart went out to him in pity. He pitied his blindness; he pitied his deafness; he pitied the dullness of his understanding. It was hard for him to imagine that a man could be blind to the glory he so clearly saw. "Lord, open his eyes," he prayed, and the Lord opened the young man's eyes, and there it was all before him - the heavens wide open. But those heavenly things were there all the time. The trouble was with the man. His eyes were dead to spiritual things, but now for a brief moment he was permitted to see.

THE EXPERIENCE OF JESUS

Nothing was ever hidden from Jesus, for though He walked on earth, He dwelt continually beneath the glory of an open heaven. It was for that reason He once said, "No man hath ascended up to heaven but He that came down from heaven, even the Son of Man which is in heaven." John 3:13

"Then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan to be baptized of him, but John forbade Him, saying, 'I have need to be baptized of Thee and comest Thou to me?' And Jesus answering said unto him, 'Suffer it to be so now; for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness.' Then he suffered Him. And Jesus, when He was baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and, lo, the heavens were opened unto Him, and He saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove and lighting upon Him; and, lo, a voice from heaven saying, this is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Matt. 3:13-17

When the Lord Jesus Christ came to the earth, it became Him to be made in all things "like unto His brethren." Though He came from heaven, there was a period of time when the heavens were closed to Him just as they have been closed to us all. But immediately before His kingdom ministry was to begin, just before His Sonship was to be announced, the heavens were opened to Him, and He immediately began both to see and hear spiritual things. He saw the invisible spirit descending like a dove upon Him, and He heard the inaudible voice of God speaking and proclaiming, "This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Thus it continued throughout His life and, except for that dread moment on Calvary when God hid His face from Him, the heavens remained open unto Him. Never again was He to experience the dimness of a closed heaven or to be sealed out on the physical side. Heaven open is the normal state of sonship. There is no lack of proof that the heavens remained open to Him from that time on. He was constantly in touch with God and the angels of the Lord were ever near Him. Following His great temptation in the wilderness we read these significant words: "Then the devil leaveth Him, and, behold, angels came and ministered unto Him." The glory of the open heavens was clearly seen on the Mount of Transfiguration (Matt. 17:1-9) where the heavens were opened and they saw, heard, and felt the glory and wonder of a realm that was all about them, but that was beyond the reach of physical eyes and ears, which are dead to all except the temporal things of an earthly realm.

Jesus Christ did not walk under a closed heaven. Heaven's glory shone continually upon Him. When at the grave of Lazarus He prayed, He lifted up His eyes and said, "Father, I thank Thee that Thou hast heard Me, and I knew that Thou hearest Me always, but because of the people that stand by I said it, that they may believe that Thou hast sent Me." John 11:41-42 Heaven was wide open to Him and He had access to it at any moment throughout His ministry. The angels of God ascended and descended upon Him. John 1:51. Even in the Garden of Gethsemane amid His cruel passion and bloody sweat the angels of God came to strengthen Him, and when He stood before the shouting mob that came to arrest Him, He bade Peter, putting his sword into its sheath, for He said, "Thinkest thou that I cannot now pray unto My Father, and He will presently give me more than twelve legions of angels?" Matt. 26:53

SONSHIP AND THE OPEN HEAVENS

Do you not think it is most significant that Jesus was proclaimed to be God's beloved Son when first the heavens were opened to Him at his baptism? Matt. 3:17 And is there not even greater significance added to this when He was again proclaimed to be God's well beloved Son when the heavens were opened to Him at the Mount of Transfiguration? Matt. 17:5 We have heard a great deal about sonship in the past few years, and well we might, but I am certain that the opening of the heavens and sonship go hand in hand. As people advance into sonship, the reality of the heavenly realm will be open to them. We have been far too matter-of-fact about the words of Paul when he said, "Our citizenship is in heaven, from whence we look for the Saviour, who shall change our vile bodies that they may be fashioned like unto His glorious body." Phil. 3:20-21

Heavenly citizenship is a reality. It is not a myth. Sonship is a reality, not a pat on the head by a benign Father. To walk in your heavenly citizenship is to walk where Jesus walked in sonship and in the light and glory of continually open heavens.

We have sold ourselves short on citizenship. Like infant children we have played a game of pretend. We have talked much but experienced little. We have played a game that was void of reality. We must sorrowfully admit, too, that we have talked of a sonship which we did not have and which at every point fell short of the glory God has laid down as a pattern for us in Jesus, that first manifested Son who walked and talked in the light of an open heaven where nothing, absolutely nothing, was impossible to Him or hidden from Him. He did the things He saw of His Father and spoke the words His Father gave Him. John 12:49-50

The closer we come to the kingdom, the more we will experience the open heaven. More and more will godly people know what it is to be lifted beyond the pale of natural things to behold the glory of the realm where God lives in the Spirit. It is beholding Him that changes us from corruption to incorruption. It is the glory of His presence that transforms the ragged garments of our mortality to raiment, which is white and glistening. These poor human eyes which have never known aught but the power to receive light from without will soon know the glory of burning as lamps of fire to give light rather than to receive. Rev. 1:14

Fantastic changes lie ahead for all who begin to partake of their heavenly citizenship. Tremendous changes will transpire in soul and spirit and mind, and because of this there will be almost unbelievable changes in body as well. Jesus Christ has brought to light both life and immortality through the gospel. 2 Tim. 1:10 Therefore immortality and eternal life shall be ours in Him. This corruptible shall put on incorrupt/on. This mortal shall put on immortality. This weakness shall put on strength. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, "Death is swallowed up in victory. Oh, death, where is thy sting? Oh, grave, where is thy victory?" Though the sting of death is sin and the strength of sin is the law, yet thanks be unto God Who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

We are living in an hour when God is moving mightily in the hearts of the people He is calling out of Babylon. While the rest of His people go on more or less happy and unconcerned, content with things as they are, satisfied to remain citizens of Babylon, sinking deeper and deeper into its morass of confusion, there is an Ezra company, a Nehemiah company, whose hearts are being mightily stirred up to return to the Zion of their heavenly citizenship. They cannot remain in Babylon. They must return to Zion where the temple of the Lord is in building, for that is their home and their eternal citizenship. God is moving in their hearts and preparing them for a great change.

There is a very important truth, which we should all learn in this connection, and we will explain it as well as possible here. The sighing of the Spirit of God within you for sonship, incorruption, and immortality is calculated and intended by God to begin the work of transformation from corruption to incorruption and mortality to immortality, for as we pray in the spirit, we are beholding the face of the Lord, and, as we behold the face of the Lord, we are changed into that same image from glory to glory, even by the Spirit of the Lord. 2 Cor. 5:4. The time has now come when all those who are burdened with intercession and groanings in the Spirit (Rom. 8:26) should realize that the prayer of the Spirit within them is intended to begin their transformation into the image of His Son. It is the overshadowing of the Spirit that forms the son within. Ten years ago, or even five years ago, intercession largely concerned the future, but we are without doubt at the end of the age and the coming of the Lord is even at the doors. The manifestation of the sons of God is at hand. The transformation is beginning. Let us then believe that physical changes are due as His Spirit moves within.

THE OPEN HEAVENS PROMISED BY JESUS
THE OPEN HEAVENS PROMISED BY JESUS

I love to read the story of the call of Nathaniel. I think he must have been a very lovely brother, full of faith and trust in God with a heart wide open to revelation. When Philip found him and brought him to Jesus, Jesus said, "Behold an Israelite indeed in whom is no guile." Nathaniel saith unto Him, "Whence knowest Thou me?" Jesus answered and said unto him, "Before that Philip called thee, when thou wast under the fig tree, I saw thee." Nathaniel answered and said unto Him, "Rabbi, thou art the Son of God: thou art the King of Israel." Jesus answered and said unto Him, "Because I said unto thee I saw thee under the fig tree, believest thou? Thou shalt see greater things than these... Verily, verily I say unto thee, hereafter thou shalt see heaven open and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man." John 1:50-51

Thou shalt see heaven open! That was certainly a promise beyond compare. Centuries had been added to centuries and millenniums to millenniums since the heavens were closed to man in Eden. Only a few men specially chosen of God had been allowed to see beyond the veil of the natural realm, but now a definite promise is given, not to Nathaniel alone, but to the people of the kingdom age, for it was the gospel of the kingdom which Jesus proclaimed - a definite promise, I say, of open heavens, open vision, open understanding, and open communion, for the angels of God ascend and descend upon the Son of Man. All throughout the dispensation of grace the heavens have been largely closed and the beloved Paul to whom the gospel of grace was given said, "Now we see through a glass darkly, but then shall I know even as I am known."

The promise of open heavens, given to Nathaniel, is for us now. We are living in the wonderful hour when these things are beginning to happen. There will be a continual increase in this strange and glorious phenomena as the kingdom of God draws nearer. Do not rejoice in your visions, your dreams, or even the open heavens, but rejoice in the Lord. Do not seek any of these things for their own sake, but seek the Lord. Seek His face. If people would only stop seeking things and begin seeking the face of God, it might amaze us what would happen. When the Jews sought Christ, they received of the wealth of His wisdom and power and He gave them loaves and fishes as well, but when they sought loaves and fishes, they got nothing. Please read John 6:26-27 "Labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for the meat which endureth unto everlasting life which the Son of Man shall give you, for Him hath God the Father sealed." Anything received apart from Him is not worth receiving.

THE HEAVENS OPEN TO STEPHEN

Few sermons have ever been preached with such remarkable power and conviction as the sermon of Stephen on the day of his martyrdom. He was a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost and had been performing mighty miracles among people. So great was his wisdom that none could resist it, and, like his wonderful Lord, he was dragged before a wicked council to be falsely accused and wrongfully judged. "And all that sat in the council, looking steadfastly upon him, saw his face as it had been the face of an angel." Acts 6:8-15 And when at last his wonderful sermon was over, and the people, gnashing on him with their teeth, took up stones to kill him, even while the merciless stones pounded and broke his body, he "being full of the Holy Ghost looked up steadfastly into heaven and saw the glory of God and Jesus standing at the right hand of God, and said, 'Behold, I see the heavens open and the Son of Man standing on the right hand of God.'" Acts 7:54-56 This was not a vision or a dream. This was something beyond the realm of visions and dreams. This was reality in truth. Heaven was open to him and he saw reality that had been hidden to man since Eden.

Heaven is not far from any of us. It is all about us on every hand. Heaven is God's kingdom. It is God's throne. It is His dwelling place and God is as omnipresent as the air we breathe, for "in Him we live and move and have our being." "For heaven is My throne and earth is My footstool. What place will ye build Me, saith the Lord." Man is like a goldfish swimming about in a tiny bowl which has been placed in a huge room. The tiny fish lives and moves in a little world all its own shut off from the vastness all about it, separate from and completely oblivious to the inhabitants of the world about it. They live in a realm in which it cannot live. They breathe where it cannot breathe. They move where it cannot move. So it is with us. Though heaven and its inhabitants are all about us, we are shut off from them. Though we live among them, we cannot see what they see, hear what they hear, taste what they taste, touch what they touch, nor smell the life-giving fragrance of eternal things. When man sinned in Eden, all the spiritual senses went dead, and man must be reborn to see, hear, taste, touch, or smell the kingdom of God. The servant of Elisha could not see the hosts of the Lord, which surrounded him on every side because he was not living in the realm of the open heaven. He lived on a natural plane as we do and his spiritual senses were dead. But he did not need to go to heaven to see what Elisha saw. All he needed was to have his eyes opened and his spiritual sight restored. Then he found that heaven was not "far away" but all about him. Its inhabitants were so real that the inhabitants of earth faded into insignificance, its music so sweet that earth's harmonies became a discord. Its food once eaten gave eternal satisfaction and its breath was the breath of everlasting life.

HEAVEN OPEN TO JOHN

The apostle John had been partaker of many wonderful experiences during his life. His association with Jesus had changed him from a son of thunder (Mk. 3:17) who was ready to call down fire on the opposition to the meek and lovely apostle of love. He had been with the Lord on every momentous occasion of His life. He had listened with bated breath to the sermon on the mount, watched in awe as He performed His miracles, stood with Him bathed in glory on the Mount of Transfiguration, leaned on His breast at the last supper, stood with Him in Pilate's hall, seen the wonder of the empty tomb, and watched Him ascend beyond the clouds. But near the end of his pilgrimage a still greater glory awaited him, for he stood on Patmos wrapped in excellent glory to see with his eyes and hear with his ears and touch with his hands the things that were beyond the realm of natural men. He walked that day the Elysian fields of the open heaven. He saw what others could not see, heard what others could not hear, and touched what others could not touch. See Rev. 1. He entered into a new relationship with God that day. He walked from then on in the realm of his heavenly citizenship. He lived beyond the veil of the flesh and blood of earth. He had passed with boldness into the holiest of all to live and walk and move in God's presence even while his feet still left their prints on Patmos' sandy shore.

This verily is the truth, for the hour is at hand - the hour of new birth, the hour of the restoration of our spiritual senses, the hour of the open heavens. Ah, blessed and wonderful state! Ah, sweet and perfect realm where storms never darken the loveliness of heaven's horizon nor fears ever annoy! Where every breath of the nostrils is life, where the eyes not only see but give light to all they see, and the sounds that fall upon the ear are the sounds of life, life, eternal, eternal, life!

KIND AFTER HIS KIND

God has ordained in the natural world that kind shall be after his kind. The law operates in the spiritual world as well. It seems possible to fellowship only with people who are on the same plane as yourself. If their experience is much lower than your own, there is very little fellowship. If their experience is much higher than yours, there may also be very little fellowship, for you just simply do not speak their language. As a result you are inclined to look upon them through the eyes of your own misunderstanding and condemn them because you do not understand them.

Did you ever wonder why it was that John in his epistle makes this emphatic statement: "That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you that ye also may have fellowship with us; and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with His Son Jesus Christ." Why was it that this man whom they had known so long was now beyond their reach? They had been able to fellowship with him before; why could they not fellowship with him now? Had they backslidden? No! They were as they had always been, but John had entered a new experience in God. Though he still walked on earth, he was living and moving in the realm of the open heaven. He was seeing and hearing and touching, yes, and tasting and smelling that which was beyond the realm of natural men. Therefore, if these dear people were ever to be able to fellowship with him henceforth, they must come up to his realm, the realm of his heavenly citizenship, for he could not go back to theirs.

See, then, why it was that he opened his epistle with these enlightening words: "That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled of the word of life, for the life was manifested, and we have seen it and bear witness, and show unto you that eternal life which was with the Father and was manifested unto us. That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you that ye may have fellowship with us, and truly our fellowship is with the Father and with His Son Jesus Christ." 1 John 1:1-3 Who dare deny in the face of such statement that John had entered into a new experience and into a new relationship with both the Father and the Son? Certainly he had known fellowship with Christians, but now he was rejoicing in a fellowship with the Father and with His Son. And he declared to all other Christians (for it was to Christians he wrote) that if they would fellowship with him in the future, they would find him in that new realm in fellowship with the Father and with the Son.

My dear brethren, deny it if you can, but our fellowship in the centuries past has not been with the Father and with the Son. Our fellowship has been in the realm of people and Christians. It has concerned itself with doctrines, programs, sects and denominations, choirs and orchestras, drives for this and pushes for that. Don't deny it, for it has been true in the past and it is true now. But there is a fellowship beyond all this. It is a realm where few ever come. It is the realm Jesus referred to when He said, "Whither I go ye cannot follow Me now, but thou shall follow Me hereafter." John 13:36 It is the realm of the open heaven where all spiritual senses are restored and we walk in the light of the eternal and incorruptible even as we have walked in the light of the physical and corruptible. It is simple to see that in the very first verse of his epistle John refers to three of the senses of the spiritual realm, viz; That which we have seen, which we have heard, and our hands have handled - seeing, hearing and touching, and all this in the realm of eternal life itself. The more the natural eye sees, the weaker it becomes. The more the natural ear hears, the duller it gets. The more we feel, the less sensitive we become, and our senses of taste and smell decrease as the years go by until all ends in death.

But the realm of life is the exact antithesis of this. In that spiritual realm of the open heavens everything you see gives life to you and your touch gives life to it. That which you taste does not lose its existence as now, but like the loaves and fishes greatly increase, and the breath of the nostrils is the breath of life.

Oh, glorious and wonderful realm! It is the realm beyond the veil. The opening veil is the opening heaven where we may enter with boldness to tread the highways and fields of our heavenly citizenship. This is the realm of the Son of God. It is the inheritance of the sons of God. It is the realm of the kingdom, and from its inhabitants shall come the government of the world in the blessed age before us, a government of wisdom and understanding, counsel and might, knowledge and fear of the Lord. From the wisdom of those who enter that realm will go forth such justice and confidence that swords will be changed for plowshares, wolves will lie down with lambs, children will safely play with lions, the asp, or the cockatrice, and nothing shall hurt nor destroy in all God's holy mountain, for the knowledge of the Lord shall fill the earth as the waters cover the sea.

I realize that what we are saying now may be hard for some to understand and accept, for very few people have ever realized that man lost his spiritual senses at the fall and in consequence he has been completely shut out of the celestial realm with heaven closed to him. Fewer still have even seen that it is the restoration of our spiritual senses that once again opens the heavens to us. But strong meat belongeth to them that are of full age, who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil. Heb. 5:14.

The apostle Paul frequently made mention of the various senses of the spiritual realm of which we shall speak more particularly in a moment. Dare any man imagine that we could enjoy our heavenly citizenship possessing no ability to see, hear, taste, feel, or smell the ineffable glories that belong to that realm of unspeakable reality? What are we to expect who are coming "unto mount Zion, unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and church of the firstborn which are written in heaven, and to God the judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling that speaketh better things than that of Abel?" Heb. 12:22-24 Are we to enter the transcending glories of that realm and yet remain as dead to its realities as we have been for the past six thousand years? A thousand time no! We are to enter that realm as men born from above and restored to the glory we had with Him before the world was.

In Hebrews 5:11 Paul rebuked the people for their dullness of spiritual hearing. He wondered how a man could fall away after he had tasted the good word of God and the powers of the age to come. Heb. 6:5 David exhorted us, "Oh taste and see that the Lord is good." Psa. 34:8 Paul and David were not speaking of a day when we would die and go to heaven; they were speaking of a spiritual experience when heaven would open to us here and now and when we would begin to enjoy the glory of our heavenly citizenship, when we would not only see and hear, but taste and see that the Lord is good, when we taste the good word of God and taste the powers of the age to come.

Few events of history can equal the mighty outpouring of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost. That transforming experience that was the very beginning of the church age was an event of events. Yet it is with sorrow that we must confess that we have clung to Pentecost as though it were the end instead of the beginning. Pentecost in any man's life should be one of the initial experiences of his progress toward sonship. It should be the alpha and not the omega, the beginning rather than the end. Pentecost is really the earnest of our inheritance; it is not the inheritance itself. Long ago in Israel when one man bought a piece of land from another, the seller removed his shoe from his foot, filled it with the soil, and gave it to the buyer, signifying that the land was now his possession and inheritance. Ruth 4:7. This shoe full of soil was called the earnest of the inheritance. That is what the baptism of the Holy Spirit really is. Pentecost is the earnest or a foretaste of a great inheritance to come.

Let us not miss this fact, however. The earnest of the inheritance contained in minute form all the qualities of the inheritance, and on that glorious Pentecost almost two thousand years ago there was an open heaven. The sounds of a rushing mighty wind came from heaven. Tongues of fire came from heaven. The Holy Spirit came from heaven and filled the waiting believers. Those assembled that glorious day had their spiritual senses awakened. They saw the heavenly fire. They heard the heavenly wind as the Holy Spirit swept over them. They felt the glory and power of their heavenly citizenship as holy waves of eternal life and celestial glory swept through their mortal bodies until they staggered about as drunken men full of the wine of their heavenly Canaan. They were men transformed because they tasted of the blessings and the glory and power of another world, a heavenly world, the realm of our heavenly citizenship. As they walked in the glory of that earnest of their inheritance, nothing could stand before them. Nothing could gainsay nor resist them. The shadow of Peter healed the sick. Angels descended from the glory world to open their prisons and set them free. Acts 5:19 Dead were raised to life, demons scampered away to the nether regions, and multitudes were converted to Christ.

All this was but the beginning. It is not the end. Much as we may rejoice in the glory of it, we are wrong to expect God to ever repeat it. We do not need a return to Pentecost, which was the earnest of our inheritance. We must now possess the inheritance itself - our spiritual Canaan, our heavenly citizenship.

The excellence of the realm of which we speak may seem to cast a shadow of doubt over our minds, for tradition has not taught us to expect these glories here and now as part of our inheritance, but has taught us rather to expect them only after death in some far distant day. But for the sake of faith and hope that maketh not ashamed the Word of God is replete with many witnesses of men and women who, while here on this earth, walked in the light of an open heaven, having all their spiritual senses wide awake to see and hear, taste and feel and smell the effulgent glory and power of an open heaven. The heaven was open to Job when his eye saw the Lord and he was transformed. Job 42:5 The heaven was open to Isaiah in the year that King Uzziah died. Isa. 6. The heaven was open to Daniel when he saw the wonderful sight of the man whose "body was like the beryl, his face as the appearance of lightning, his eyes as lamps of fire, his arms and feet like the color of polished brass, and the voice of his words like the voice of a multitude." Dan. 10:6 Heaven was open to Jesus at His baptism and at the transfiguration. Heaven opened to Stephen at his martyrdom. Heaven opened to Peter when he saw the vision that opened the gates of mercy to the Gentiles. Acts 10:11 Paul was caught away into the open heavens to hear and see things that are unlawful to utter in this earthly realm, for heavenly things cannot be absorbed or understood by earth-bound men whose spiritual senses are still dead. Heaven opened to John on lonely Patmos when he saw, heard, felt, and tasted the excellent glory of the realm we are about to enter, for the coming age is the age of heaven open.

It is true that no man can see God and live, and it is equally true that no man can see God and die. Seeing God neither brings death nor lets you remain as you are but brings transformation. Corruption puts on incorruption, mortality puts on immortality, weakness becomes strength, and the natural becomes supernatural. We become like Him when we see Him as He is. To see His face or hear His voice and not be transformed is unthinkable, and every man who has this hope in him purifies himself even as He is pure.

The kingdom of heaven is at hand. It is the Sabbath of rest. It is the age when the inhabitants of earth are governed by the inhabitants of heaven, even the sons of God who are in the image of the Son of God. It is the age when heaven is the throne and earth is the footstool, the age of heaven open.

"Verily, verily I say unto you, hereafter ye shall see heaven open and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of Man." John 1:50-51
CHAPTER THREE
THE OPEN HEAVENS

Once when the king of Syria was warring with Israel, he took counsel with his servants, saying, "In such and such a place let us make an ambush and conceal ourselves." But the man of God sent to the king of Israel, saying, "Beware that you do not pass this place, for the Syrians have concealed themselves there." So the king of Israel sent to the place of which the man of God had told him. Thus he (Elisha) used to warn him, so that he could guard himself there, not once or twice. Therefore the mind of the king of Syria was agitated because of this fact; and he called his servants and said to them, "Will ye not tell me who of us is for the king of Israel?"

"There is no one, my lord, O king! But Elisha the prophet who is in Israel tells the king of Israel the words that you speak in your bedroom." "Go and see where he is," he said, "that I may send and take him." Then it was told him, saying, "Behold, he is in Dothan." Accordingly he sent there horses and chariots and a large force; and they came by night and surrounded the city. So on the morrow, when the man of God arose early in the morning and went out, there was an army of horses and chariots surrounding the city, so that his servant said to him, "Alas, master! What shall we do?" "Fear not," he said, "for they who are with us are more than they who are with them." Then Elisha prayed and said, "O Lord, open now his eyes that he may see." And the Lord opened the eyes of the lad, and he saw and, behold, the mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire around Elisha." 2 Kings 6:8-18 (Goodspeed)

There are many passages of scripture which undisputedly proclaim the certainty of two distinct realms, the first a natural realm inhabited by natural men with natural minds where temporal things are visible to natural eyes or audible to the dullness of the natural ear, and the second a realm unseen, unheard, untouched, untasted, and unsmelled by natural man, but seen, heard, touched, tasted, and smelled by those who by God's grace dwell in heavenly realms, sit where He sits, and abide where He abides. Far below their heavenly habitation thunder the sickening strifes of this present evil world with its wars and strikes, its violence and spoil, its lust and greed, its worry and distress, its dread, its fear, and its turmoil. The wicked are like the troubled sea that cannot rest, whose waves cast up mire and dirt. Continually do they lust after things, things, things, for they do not know that the things, which are seen are temporal, but the things, which are not seen are eternal. Only those who have caught a glimpse of the eternal realm where Christ sits at God's right hand can ever rise above earth's turmoil to walk with Him in newness of life.

It must have been a tremendous revelation to the servant of Elisha in the little town of Dothan long ago, for he, like the multitudes of Christians today, had never trod one step beyond the natural realm. It is very doubtful if he had ever heard that there was a realm of reality, unseen, unheard, and untouched by natural men. To be sure he was an Israelite, but this was the only difference between him and the heathen across the border. He was like the millions of Christians who, though they have believed on Christ, still toil, worry, and grovel in a realm that is only natural. "Alas," they cry, "for all the enemies that surround me, for all the suffering I must endure!" So busy have God's people become in their struggle for the temporal and the passing, things that please the physical senses, soft clothing for the body, pretty things to hear and dainty things to eat, that they cannot even find time to gather around the family altar to read together of things eternal or pray to their Father in heaven who alone can deliver them from this present evil world. Perhaps I may lose friends and readers by so saying, but / do not and I cannot believe that men who are unfaithful in these things that are least will ever be trusted in the kingdom of God to be faithful in that which is much, for it was our Lord who taught His people, saying, "He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in that which is much." Luke 16:10

I seem to hear the note of pity in the voice of Elisha as he prayed to God on the young man's behalf. He had seen the dread and consternation in his countenance at the sight of so dreadful an array of armed and desperate men. Fear stared from his eyes, cold perspiration started from his flesh, his knees knocked together, and the very hair stood up on his body. "Alas, master! What shall we do," was his terrified cry. But it was not so with Elisha. He did not dwell on such a low place as this young man nor was his vision confined to that natural realm where dwelt the king of Israel and all his hosts. His eyes had been opened to the certainty that there was a higher realm where God dwells and where God's men dwell in Him. So in pity and understanding he prayed, for well he knew that none but God can open the eyes of him that is born blind, and none but He can draw aside the darkling veil that we may see face to face. So, he prayed, "O, Lord, I pray Thee open his eyes that he may see." And the Lord in mercy opened the eyes of the young man and he saw: and, behold, the mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha.

If there were no other scripture but this, our conclusion must certainly be that there are two realms, one beneath, the other above; the first inhabited by natural men with natural understanding, the second the realm of God, the habitation of spiritual men who dwell with Christ in heavenly places. And we may say further that our blessed Lord Jesus Christ plainly told us of these two realms when He said, "Ye are from beneath; I am from above: Ye are of this world; I am not of this world." John 8:23 And yet again: "If I have told you of earthly things and ye believe not, how shall ye believe if I tell you of heavenly things?" John 3:12 Paul, seeing this great truth by the Spirit, wrote to the Ephesians, saying, "God, who is rich in mercy, for His great love wherewith He loved us... hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus." Eph. 2:4-6 Those who seek earnestly to take this way have "come to Mount Zion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and the church of the first born, which are written in heaven, and to God the judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling that speaketh better things than that of Abel." Heb. 12:22-24

It is not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural, and afterward that which is spiritual. 1 Cor. 15:26 Through the wisdom of God and for reasons best known to Him all men have been called upon to begin their lives in a purely natural realm filled with natural aspirations, but the scriptures abound with a glowing revelation that shows that the path of the just need not lead through darkness dim where our feet are ever entangled with the subtle snares of this world, but as a great light it shineth more and more till the day is full.

I have prayed most earnestly that the spirit of divine revelation will possess those who now read these truths, and I am sure that if we will confess our darkness to Him, He will give us light. It is when men are satisfied with their childish philosophies and blinding theologies that God abandons them to spiritual sterility, pronouncing woe upon them who enter not in themselves and forbid those who are entering.

Shame on those who declare that they have not changed a whit in belief since they were first saved! We know in part and we prophesy in part, but when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away. In our early imperfections we see through a glass darkly, but the further we walk with God, the clearer the light shines and the more beautiful becomes the way. The more we know God the more paltry become the worrisome doctrines of men and the peevish tenacity with which they argue their childish theories. Where is the wise? Where is the scribe? Where is the disputer? Where is the wisdom sought by the Greek or the miracle demanded by the Jew? Have they not all become as nothing and mere petty trivialities to those who dwell in wisdom and to those who have become a part of the Omnipotent?

Is it true that you who once began in the Spirit have now become in bondage to the natural realm and slaves to the weak and beggarly elements of the five physical senses? Those who remain in the natural realm are natural men, and the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, for they are spiritually discerned. 1 Cor. 2:14 All such natural men "speak evil of those things which they know not; but what they know naturally, as brute beasts, in those things they corrupt themselves." Jude 10 Depend no more, then, upon your education or your years of Bible College or the doctrines of your particular church group, for there is a realm to which the diligent and obedient come where you need not pore in weariness over endless pages of human theory. "The anointing which ye have received of Him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you: But as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth and is no lie, even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in Him." 1 John 2:27

I am thoroughly convinced in my spirit that we have come to the end of the age of grace and we now stand at the very gates of the kingdom of God. As John the Baptist stood at the end of the dispensation of law to look with wonder into the coming kingdom of heaven, so we now stand at the close of the church age on the very threshold of the kingdom of God. Have you read this saying of Paul, "Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away!" Heb. 8:13 The age of law with all its ritual had to vanish away with the coming of the dispensation of grace, and it is equally true that the age of grace that has now been with us for almost two thousand years has now waxed old and is ready to vanish away. It will vanish away with all its institutions of whosoever sort they be, whether denomination or sect, Bible School or Sunday School, prophet and miracle worker, missionary and mission, for "He taketh away the first that He may establish the second." Heb. 10:9

The dispensational sun is setting on the tired old age of the dispensation of grace. All that is in part is to be done away. No more seeing through a glass darkly. No more knowing in part or prophesying in part, for that which is perfect will come with the rising of the kingdom sun and we shall hail the glad day that shall spread itself in justice and equity to cover all the earth as the waters cover the sea.

The signs around in earth and air tell us as never before that God is drawing the curtains upon this age. Violence as great as Noah's day fills the streets, stalks the highways, pours from the air, and lurks in the hearts of men. Iniquity such as Sodom knew has invaded the whole earth. The fraudulent sex god raises its ugly head, not only in cinema, but in every home as well. Mammon, the god of riches, has set up his throne in the heart of Christian and sinner alike. The church system stinks with rotting forms of godliness that deny every vestige of power or reality, and the same system reeks with deceivers who, seeking their own and not the things which are Jesus Christ's, bewitch the ignorant with fraudulent miracles, devouring widow's houses and for a pretense making long prayers. The mark of this beast system is even now upon the foreheads and hands of many thousands of people, and the day is at hand when all who refuse to bear its mark and be joined to it will be able neither to buy nor to sell. Buy then of Him gold tried in the fire and fine raiment that ye may be clothed with His righteousness that the shame of your nakedness appear not.

Many strange things are happening all over the world that must transpire before the end of the age, and nothing can stop them. We are seeing the dissolution of the British Commonwealth and Empire whose mighty influence has touched and blessed every nation on earth. All the nations of colored skin will separate themselves from her before the end, and the United States also, individually the most powerful nation on earth whose arms are scattered in some forty countries, must be gathered. Mighty kings of the east, long sleeping, are arousing themselves in preparation for the day when God will plead with them in the valley of Megiddo. The Jews also are being fast regathered for the day of the revelation of their Messiah. Zech. 12:10 With the passing of the sixth age the rule of men and carnal minds will vanish away. For six thousand years and for six dispensations the creation has groaned beneath the injustices of human rule. Selfishness and greed have reared their ugly heads in every form of government that has been tried whether in the religious or secular realm, proving beyond the slightest doubt that all rule and authority coming from the natural mind is coming from beneath and is corrupt according to every deceitful lust.

Have you noticed the way in which opposites are generated from one another? Day is opposite to night, yet out of the night comes forth the day and out of the day comes forth the night. Sleeping is opposite to waking, yet the state of being awake is generated from the state of being asleep, and the state of sleeping is generated from the state of waking. Death is the opposite of life, yet the state of death comes forth from the state of being alive, and unless nature should fail in this one respect, then with the greatest certainty the state of life shall come forth from the state of death. No wonder Jesus said, "The hour cometh when all that are in the graves will hear the voice of the Son of God and come forth." John 5:27 It cannot be otherwise.

If these things are so, and who can deny them, then we may further say that the natural mind is opposite to the spiritual mind. The mind from beneath is opposite to the mind that is from above. From the rule of the spiritual mind in the garden of Eden came forth the rule of the natural mind which has continued to this hour, but from the rule of the natural mind shall be generated the rule of the spiritual mind which is the mind of the Lord Jesus Christ as it dwells in His sons. Thus the glorious ages to come are to be ruled by sons in whom dwells the mind of Christ, and in that day all shall be order, interdependence, and unity.

We do not wish to speak against what the world calls learning, but the wisdom that is from above is something entirely different. Saul of Tarsus was a man of great learning in the natural realm, so much so that the governor Festus said, "Paul, thou art beside thyself. Much learning doth make thee mad." He had been raised a Pharisee and had learned all the tradition of that strict sect, being brought up at the feet of the learned Gamaliel. I suppose he could argue scripture and law as few men in his day and even justify himself for his wicked persecution of the saints and for holding the garments of the murderers of Stephen. In his blindness and ignorance he did not know that these saints were living in a higher realm than himself - a realm which he neither saw, felt, tasted, touched, nor heard. "But," he said, "when it pleased God, who separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by His grace, to reveal His Son in me... immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood: neither went I up to Jerusalem to them which were apostles before me; but I went into Arabia..."

Gal. 1:15-17 It was evidently in the lonely deserts of Arabia that the great revelation of the grace of God was given to him, for he was not taught it nor did he learn it of man, but he was given the truth by revelation. Eph. 3:2-8

From the things, which we have said we must conclude that there is a natural realm and a spiritual realm far above it. As there is a people who live and move in this, a purely natural realm, so God is also preparing a heavenly people who live and move and have their being in heavenly realms. My heart is often heavy with longing to make all men see that here and now they can enjoy a heavenly citizenship that is something more than mere wishful thinking or the niceties of words, but that which is in truth the realm of reality. For thousands of years God's people have talked of dying and going to heaven, but pitifully few have ever learned by the Spirit that even while we inhabit the earth, we can inhabit heaven also. This statement may at first seem ridiculous imagination, but not so in the light of truth spoken by men who actually walked in the light of an open heaven. For years I wondered at these words of Jesus: "No man hath ascended up to heaven but He that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven." Is it any wonder that earth-bound men with natural minds thought Him mad, for He was saying that, while He dwelt on earth, He lived in heaven as well. His bearers knew nothing of any realm but the natural, which they saw all about them. Their minds as well as their eyes were holden to the heavenly hosts that surround us - The angels of God and the chariots of fire. We are indeed come unto Mount Zion and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and the church of the first born which are written in heaven, to God the judge of all and to the spirits of just men made perfect. Heb. 12:22-24 Not only did Paul declare, "our citizenship is in heaven", (Phil. 3:20), but he also said, "We sit together in heavenly places." Eph. 2:6

How tragically have God's people walked as natural men in a natural world as they filled their lives with natural aspirations, neither knowing nor caring to know that they could walk as sons of God in heavenly realms while they dwell amid a crooked and perverse generation. Though the first man is of the earth earthy, the second man is the Lord from heaven. As is the earthy, such are they also that are earthy, and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly, and as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly. 1 Cor. 15:47-50

Every dispensation has had its men who knew the wonder of living in the heavenly realm even while they walked on earth, and I am sure that the coming age of the kingdom of God will be first entered by men and women who while strangers and pilgrims in this world were possessors of a heavenly citizenship. What was the experience of John on the Isle of Patmos but a foretaste of things to come? Banished by men and exiled to die in loneliness, he found himself walking with God, and listening to harmonies that would make earth's sweetest symphonies a raucous discord. There his wondering eyes beheld the completeness of Christ, - not the lonely Galilean of yesteryear, but Christ complete with all His glorious sons, whose head was white as wool, whose eyes were as flaming fire, whose countenance was as the sun, whose sword issued forth from His mouth in words of life, whose girdle was of gold, and whose beautiful feet seemed to burn as in a furnace of fire. Even the sounding of His voice caused the man of God to fall as one dead, for no man can see God and live.

It is impossible for man, the inhabitant of this earthy realm, to see God and live and it is impossible for man to see God and die. That is the meaning of the two edged sword of the Word. With one stroke it kills the old and with one stroke it makes alive the new. Deut. 32:39 No man can see God and live as he formerly lived, for the old self has been slain and from the dead carcass of the lion has come forth the honey sweetness of the eternal world. Judges 14:5-9

In the age of innocence Adam lived and enjoyed the glory of the heavenly realm. He was clothed with light and dwelt in light, for light was his covering. Mighty angels were his companions and God Himself walked and talked with him in the cool of the day. He knew as few men have ever known the reality of the spiritual world, crystal clear to spiritual senses, transcending far everything that was earthy. He knew no hunger, thirst, or nakedness, for the bread of life was his food and the water of life was his drink and his garment was the glory and light of God. The "I AM" that nurtured him in the beginning will be the "I AM" that nurtures His people in the end, for the Lord shall be our God and we shall be His people.

And Enoch, too, who lived in the dispensation of conscience, walked with God and he was not, for God took him. Though the fall of man had cast a pall over the world, causing men to walk in dread and fear as they fought and warred, toiled and sweat, to drag a living from the unwilling ground, there was one man at least who lived in a realm far above the strife of natural men, for he walked with God. Little, indeed, is spoken of this good man, but rest assured that he was indeed a stranger to the multitudes about him as he walked in a realm that other men could not understand. While others were filled with religion, he knew nothing about religion; he knew God and walked with Him.

I may be wrong, but I sincerely doubt that it is possible to be spiritual and religious at the same time. The religious susceptibilities of the scribes and Pharisees were continually outraged and shocked because of the irreligious life of our blessed Lord Jesus Christ. They hated Him because He healed on their Sabbath day, because He ate with unwashed hands, and permitted His disciples to rub out corn to eat. They hated Him because He displayed the hypocrisy of their religious acts and likened them to whitewashed sepulchers, which appeared beautiful without but within were full of rotting flesh and dead men's bones. They hated Him because He said the Father loved Him and He loved the Father. They despised Him because He loved the sincerity of sinners more than the hypocrisy of their religion. No, there was nothing religious about Him, and I would to God that the people who read this message would awaken to the fruitlessness of religious activities and come apart to begin to love God and walk with Him. Honestly, I am astonished at the number of people who, having been diligent church members for years, scarcely know whether or not they are saved, and many, alas, have no assurance of salvation whatever. They would not miss a church meeting, yet they do not know God. The whole community knows them as religious, but they are devoid of spiritual life.

Noah during the dispensation of human government found favor with God, and, being in touch with God and knowing Him, he prepared an ark to the saving of his household when all the world was destroyed with a flood. Abraham, too, who lived during the dispensation of promise, knew God face to face, walking in His presence and enduring as seeing the invisible, Moses likewise, under the dispensation of the law, remained in God's presence twice for forty days and forty nights, and all during his life he lived in a realm that other men knew not, even as it is said: "He made known His ways unto Moses, His acts unto the children of Israel."

As for the dispensation of grace in which we have lived out our lives, time would fail us to tell of Jesus, of John, Phillip, Peter, Stephen, Paul, and a host of others who, while their feet trod the earth, had their heads and hearts in the heavenly realm. Not only have we the example of these blessed sons of God, but we have their teachings as well. Our Lord said, "If ye were of this world, the world would love her own; but because ye are not of this world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." Did not Paul teach us that we have a heavenly citizenship, and tell of the wonderful possibility of sitting together in heavenly places? And did he not teach that if we live in the Spirit we should also walk in the Spirit? Divine revelation is full of the hopes that "as He is, so also are we in this present world."

Of the things which we have spoken this is the conclusion: First, that there is a natural realm all about us where people with natural minds and natural understanding wait continually upon natural things. Even their religion is on a purely natural plane. Second, there is a spiritual realm where men and women of God live, their lives in this world being ordered from above as their newborn spirits rejoice in the mountains of the Lord.

There is always so much to write and so little space to write it and certainly the world itself could not contain all the things that should be written but all who are living in vital union with Him will know that the truths I write already lived in their hearts before they heard them so that in spirit they always knew them. He who begins to live in the Spirit begins to know the meaning of that sacred text, "The Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God.

Whenever one speaks of the attainable marvels of God, there are always many who come seeking some magic formula by which they may easily attain yet still remain as they always were. There are always people who wish to be saved, not because they love God but because they fear punishment, but like Lot's wife their hearts are still in Sodom. There were many who, seeing men filled with God's Spirit, desired also to be filled, yet had no desire to live as Spirit-filled men. When Simon the sorcerer saw the miracles of Peter and John, he desired their power, yet he was in the gall of bitterness and the bond of iniquity. How often men and women have sought spiritual gifts merely because they wanted to possess them, or in hope that their possession of them would bring great prominence. The heart is deceitful and desperately wicked, and the sooner we learn that lesson the better it will be. I have no confidence in flesh or fleshly minds. I have no confidence in men nor anything that is in man. I have no confidence in myself. If we are to have confidence at all, it must be in the living God who, having overcome the world and the flesh and the devil, ever liveth to make intercession for us. Before writing the burden that is upon my heart, let me say that repentance and remission of sins must precede every new experience in God, for every new experience with God demands new consecrations, and every new consecration brings repentance of something hitherto unknown to you. You will find yourself like the blessed Job of whom God said, "There is none like him in the earth, a man that feareth God and escheweth evil", yet in the light of his heavenly revelation he bitterly cried. "Wherefore I abhor myself and repent in dust and ashes." When Isaiah saw the Lord, he cried, "Woe is me for I am undone ;for I am a man of unclean lips and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips; for mine eyes have seen the king, the Lord of hosts." Isa. 6:5 And Peter, after the miraculous draught of fishes begged with tears, "Depart from me, O Lord, for I am a sinful man." Luke 5:8

I have no time for frothy preachers who never want to speak of repentance, but who for their own ends would lavish spiritual gifts upon the most carnal of men. There is no magic formula for a spiritual life. You cannot partake of the bounties of this present evil world and be sons of God at the same time. It simply cannot be done. You cannot make a treasure of mammon (riches) and have a spiritual mind, for where your treasure is, there will your heart be also. You cannot sit for hours before a T.V., viewing the filth and rot of the world's most demoralized characters, and still view the celestial realms and hear the beautiful voice of Christ, for purity and vileness do not dwell together. Go ahead and do it if you want to, but refrain from making spiritual claims for you only deceive yourself. You cannot spend hours in idle chit-chat and gossip and have a spiritual mind, for all these things are but products of the carnal realm. They keep men carnal and they are designed for that very thing. Let us lay aside these modern evils that drown men in perdition and hear instead the words of Peter, "Giving all diligence add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity. For if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ... for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ." 2 Pet. 1:5-8,11

The church system with all its confusion is literally filled with men and women who profess to be saved and are not saved. They profess that they know God, but in works they deny Him, being abominable and disobedient and unto every good work reprobate. There are thousands who profess to have received the baptism of the Holy Spirit, but their lives are empty and dry and their profession is vanity. They are in truth filled with emptiness and have become deceivers of themselves. Instead of being after the Spirit they are after the flesh, filling their lives and their time, not with prayer and communion with God and His Word, but with the tinnest emptiness that continually dances before their eyes. "They that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh, but they that are after the Spirit do mind the things of the Spirit." "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affections on things above and not on things of the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God." "Mortify therefore your members who are upon the earth: fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry: For which things' sake the wrath of God cometh on the children of disobedience." Col. 3:1-3, 5:6 A thorough realization that we are in truth the citizens of another world will do wonders in overcoming this present evil one. There is without a doubt a heavenly realm unto which we can look and in which we can abide, a realm where communion with Christ is continual both day and night, for He has raised us up and made us sit together in heavenly places with Christ Jesus.

THE MORE EXCELLENT WAY

TREASURES OF TRUTH, Volume 25, Two Realms [George R. Hawtin] ~ BOOK 28
The church at Corinth was very interested in spiritual gifts, and there was a time when they came behind in no spiritual gift. But you have only to read the book of 1 Corinthians to see that, though these people were zealous to possess spiritual gifts, their lives were in many cases indescribably bad. Many of them were guilty of fornication and incest, and some were committing sins not even common among the Gentiles. They were sectarian in spirit, being followers of men. Their communion table was so disorderly that some made gluttons of themselves while others became drunk from the wine. 1 Cor. 11:17-21. Instead of coming together for better they came together for worse and their disorders must have been a putrid odor even to the world.

It was to these people that the apostle Paul taught the great requirement for a truly spiritual life, and we should pay fervent heed, for this is what he said: "If I can speak with the tongues of men and angels, but have not love, I am a blaring trumpet or a clanging cymbal. Or if I can prophesy and am versed in all mysteries and all knowledge, and have such absolute/fl/V/! that I can remove mountains, but have not love, I am nothing. And if I use all I have to feed the poor, and give my body to be burned, but have not love, it profits me nothing. Love is fore bearing and kind. Love knows no jealousy. Love does not brag; is not conceited. She is not unmannerly, nor selfish, not irritable, nor mindful of wrongs. She does not rejoice in injustice, but joyfully sides with the truth. She can overlook faults. She is full of trust, full of hope, full of endurance. Love never fails. But if there are prophecies, they will come to an end; if there are tongues, they will cease; if there is knowledge, it will come to an end. For our knowledge is partial, and so is our prophesying; but when that which is perfect (love) is come, all that is partial will come to an end. When I was a child, I talked like a child, thought like a child, reasoned like a child: Now that I have become a man, I have put an end to childish ways." 1 Cor. 3:1-12 (Weymouth)

It is time to consider with prayer and meditation the things we have just read, for, if men can possess all manner of powerful gifts yet still be nothing but sounding brass and tinkling cymbal, if they can give all their possessions to the poor and lay down their lives as martyrs and still be profited nothing, then it is time for us to know just where we do stand. We have made such heroes of men who advertise their gifts, whether real or imagined, not considering that all they may be is a big noise and a very empty one at that. We must surely admit that for one to have all these spectacular things and still be nothing is indeed a very serious matter.

There is a more excellent way and this way is the only way that men will ever come to dwell in God or sit with Christ in the heavenly realms of the Spirit. If you are ever to dwell with Christ in God, there is one way and one way only. It is the way of love, for God is love and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God and God in him. Herein is our love made perfect that we may have boldness in the Day of Judgment, because as He is so are we in this world. There is no fear in love, because perfect love casteth out fear. Love is first and foremost of all fruits and in its mighty depths are contained all spiritual wisdom, all spiritual graces, and all spiritual gifts. Love is the more excellent way because it is the excellence of wisdom, the excellence of understanding, and the excellence of power.

The man who dwells in love dwells in God and this is the celestial realm. It is no wonder that Paul said, "Love suffereth long and is kind. It envieth not and is not puffed up", for when men dwell in that new and wonderful realm of love, they have perfect understanding of all things. All things appear entirely different in the light of perfect understanding. The times of ignorance God winked at because His love understood the ignorance of natural men. It was this very understanding love that extended mercy to the murderous Saul of Tarsus because love saw that he did it ignorantly in unbelief. Perhaps you have marveled and wept as you have contemplated the words of Jesus who with His dying breath prayed, "Father forgive them, for they know not what they do." The pure love of God in which He literally dwelt filled Him with the excellence of understanding and His heart overflowed with kindness and forgiveness toward them, because He who dwelt on higher planes knew that these poor creatures of the dust were ignorant of every reality that belonged to His realm. Love is full of understanding, Paul knew this when he said to us, "And this I pray, that your love may abound yet more and more in all knowledge and judgment." Phil. 1:9 The love that was in the heart of Stephen lifted him to the realm of God and caused him to know that even Saul of Tarsus, his chief tormentor, was ignorant of the realm where Christ stands at God's right hand, and so with the understanding and pity of the love of God he prayed, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge." The love of God in Stephen's heart taught him that which even Saul knew not, - that he did it ignorantly in unbelief. 1 Tim. 1:13
Love is the realm of God, and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God and God in him. The Holy Spirit has made real to me that in the realm of love many things are missing that clutter our lives now, and many things are present there that are conspicuous by their absence now. In the realm of love there are no ceremonies. Man's religion has been filled with forms and ceremonies from time immemorable, and all these were only shadows of things that were to come. In them there was no real deliverance from sin, but rather a continual remembrance of sin. Just as true grief is not ashamed of its tears but weeps and sobs in perfect simplicity, so also he that dwelleth in God's love is sincere, all his worship is in simplicity, he needs no ceremony to guide him, and all such are bondage to him. The woman who washed the feet of Christ with her tears, wiping them with her beautiful tresses, kissing them and pouring expensive ointment upon them in prodigal abundance, was not worshipping according to ceremony, but according to the simplicity of divine love. She loved much and was therefore forgiven much, for who can love and go unforgiven? Those who sat about her rebuked her simplicity and rebuked Christ for not knowing that she was a sinner, but love is stronger than sin. Love is stronger than death itself, breaking down the bars of Hades to let the captives free. Nothing is so powerful that it can stand before love, "for God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Herein is displayed the vast difference between the love of man and the love of God. The love of God is unselfish and outgoing, extending itself in lengths and breadths and depths and heights, cleansing sinners and lifting them to highest heaven, calling to the gates of Hades, "Lift up your heads, O ye gates, and be ye lifted up, ye age-lasting doors, that the King of Glory may come in." Psa. 24:7

Love is touched with the feeling of human infirmities, bearing our sickness and carrying away our pains, rejoicing with those who do rejoice, and weeping with those who weep.

What place has form and ceremony in such a realm as this where there is perfect love, perfect understanding, perfect peace? Is it any wonder that, when the new age dawned, Paul declared, "He taketh away the first that He may establish the second." Heb. 10:9 That first realm with its laws written on tables of stone, its ceremonial washings, its daily sacrifices and yearly feasts, could never make the worshippers perfect. "Then said I, 'Lo, I come (in the volume of the book it is written of me) to do Thy will O God.' " Heb. 10:7 Love needs no law to govern it because love itself is the fulfilling of the law. One never says to a man in whom dwells the love of God, "Thou shall not kill", for he who truly loves God loves his neighbor also. Neither need one say to him, "Thou shall not steal", for love worketh no ill to his neighbor. Nor yet, "Thou shall not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain", for who is he who would blaspheme or speak evil of the name he loves? Neither need one say to him, "Thou shalt not bear false witness", for he who loves God is born of the truth and no falsehood is in him, and no lie is of the truth. Neither would one say to him, "Thou shalt not covet", for love envieth not and covets nothing that belongs to this world. Neither shall one say to him who loves, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God", for why should he be told to do that which his heart never ceases to do? It is thus and thus alone that the law is done away. How treacherous is that carnal doctrine that teaches people to live as they please because the law, having failed, was done away! The law is done away only for those who in love fulfill it, because to those who love God every percept of the law is written upon their hearts and has become part and parcel of their very nature.

The things we say in parting from our friends are the things we deem of utmost importance. It was even thus with our Lord who, before leaving this world to go to the Father, said, "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are My disciples, if ye have love one to another." John 13:34-35 This last message impressed itself deeply upon John, who continued the theme in his epistle, saying, "He that abideth in Him ought himself also so to walk, even as He walked. Brethren, I write no new commandment unto you, but an old commandment, which ye had from the beginning. The old commandment is the word which ye had from the beginning." 1 John 2:6-7 That old commandment was the commandment of love. "Hear, O Israel; thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy soul and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind." John, writing to the elect lady, said, "And now I beseech thee, lady, not as though I wrote a new commandment unto thee, but that which we had from the beginning, that we love one another." 2 John 1:5 Love is both the old commandment and the new commandment. It was with us before ever a law was written and will be with us when ages are no more forever.

IN LOVE THERE ARE NO TRADITIONS
Tradition had become such a bondage to the Jews that our Lord frankly told them, "Ye make the word of God of none effect by your tradition." Matt. 15:6 You will surely say amen to that, but will you consent when I also say that God's people today, together with the whole existing church system, are literally bound hand and foot with the grave clothes of tradition so that they are not free to serve God in spirit and in truth? Neither are they free to accept the light that falls in ever increasing rays of revelation upon their pathway. It would not be difficult, I suppose, to name a score or more of traditions that hold men in bondage to such an extent that they cannot move in God at all. Sunday School has become such a tradition that one would think that it was inaugurated by Jesus Himself, or at least by one of the apostles. But such are never mentioned in scripture and were completely unknown until they were begun by Robert Raikes at Gloucester, England, in 1780. Sunday School did not become established in America until the 19th century. I am not saying whether they are right or wrong, - only that they are traditions that bind men so much to form and ceremony that they can never walk simply before God in freedom and love, liberty and spiritual worship.

We may also well say the same thing of the bondage of continual church meetings, campaigns, and conventions. They have become such a tradition that God's people actually imagine that such are a necessary part of a spiritual life. The truth is they are only tradition and a cruel bondage to the spirit, for, while millions are consumed with the activities of their church, they have forfeited their personal contact with God. I am thoroughly convinced that the church system with all its abominable tradition and bondage, its doctrines, its meetings, its conventions, its money grabbing schemes, its hireling pastors and evangelists, has become a ball and chain to all spiritual progress and a strait jacket to spiritual growth, for "of whatsoever a man is overcome, of the same is he brought into bondage."

Our Lord once sat upon a wayside well telling a sinful woman the way of life. Her understanding was pitifully slow and it was not until His divine wisdom revealed the sins of her life that she said, "Sir, I perceive that Thou art a prophet." See how badly even this poor soul was in bondage to the blinding tradition that had clouded her life from childhood! "Our fathers worshipped in this mountain," she said, "but you say that in Jerusalem is the place where men should worship." Can you not see here in these words the bondage of tradition? Can you not see that the same bondage exists in almost every Christian heart today? Where you worship, how you worship, when you worship, and with whom you worship, what the order of worship is to be, and so forth: this is the church system from beginning to end, and it is a chain of darkness about the feet of God's people and a blindfold upon their eyes. How true were the words of Jesus when He said to her, "Ye worship ye know not what!" Could we not say this to all the church systems of our day? Men have left off worshipping God to worship the works of their own hands, worshipping and serving the creature of their own making instead of the Creator Himself. Then He spoke that truth of truths to her heart. "The hour cometh and now is when the true worshippers shall worship God in spirit and in truth, for the Father seeketh such to worship Him," John 4:23 Spirit worship is the worship of love. Times and places mean nothing to such worship, for whether one be in the heart of a crowd or in the loneliness of a desert the spirit is dwelling in God. Deep is answering to deep and love is responding to love. In the realm of love there are no divisions, no denominations, and no sects. Denominations are the work of the carnal-mind, not the work of love. Did not Paul say this very thing when he declared, "...While one saith, I am of Paul; and another, I am of Apollos; are ye not carnal?" Cf. 1 Cor. 1:10-13, 1 Cor. 3:1-4 What then would this great man say could he see today the vast array of sects and denominations that can scarcely be numbered, each blaring forth its own troublesome tradition and shouting aloud its carnality. To all who long to worship God in spirit and in truth and dwell on that celestial plane with Him the first step of obedience will be, "Come out from among them and be separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." 2 Cor. 6:17 What a promise that is for all who long for sonship! Yet how few ever heed it, for church tradition has blinded their minds and snared their feet in chains of darkness. Be not like them, for that is the realm in which they dwell, but God is calling you up higher.

LOVE AND REVELATION

Love is the principle element in revelation. If you would know God, there is but one way. You must love Him with divine love. Have you not found that people who are lovers reveal their secrets to each other? There was much truth in the subtle words of Delilah when she said to Samson. "How canst thou say, 'I love thee,' when thine heart is not with me?" Judg. 16:14. When a man loves God, the love of God responds to that man, revealing the secrets of God's purpose, His grace, and His power. "He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth Me: and he that loveth Me is loved of My Father, and I will love him, and manifest Myself to him." John 14:21 He that has entered into this rest has ceased from his own works, his ceremonies, his traditions, his sectarianism and divisions, and his misunderstandings. Even those bitter enemies who through lies and hypocrisy uprooted him from all he had are seen in the light of love's understanding, for had it not been for their evil, he might well have remained with them on their carnal plane, sinking lower and lower into the slough of tradition and heresy.

The love of which we speak has nothing in common with that human farce which men call love. It knows nothing of sentimentalism. It has no personal requests, for it seeks only God's will. Love "seeketh not her own." It embraces the universal purpose of the Most High. It was Dryden who said, "Let grace and goodness be the principle lodestone of thy affections, for love which hath ends will have an end." That is why it is said, "Love seeketh not her own."

BORN FROM ABOVE

You may no sooner have read these lines than you will say in your heart, "I must show more love." But that, my friend, is not the way, for you cannot show what you do not possess. Love is of God and it is born in our hearts from above. Love comes from the indwelling presence of Christ as He abides in your re-born spirit. I tell you of a truth that if you will constantly love Him and communicate with Him, feasting upon His Word, seeking His mind and His will, doing nothing of importance without His direction, you need never trouble about showing love. The love of God in your own heart will continually constrain you, for "if a man love Me, he will keep My words, and My Father will love him, and we will come unto him and make our abode with him." John 14:23 If God's children would cease from their works and their hoary old traditions and begin to love Jesus Christ in spirit, they would be surprised at their own growth and the revelation that would fill their minds.

God has hermetically sealed all realms on their own side. The rock cannot lift itself into the plant kingdom. The plant cannot lift itself into the animal kingdom. The animal cannot lift himself into the kingdom of God. But have you not noticed how the plant reaches its roots down to the earth and raises it up into itself so that the earth is born into the plant kingdom above it? And have you not seen the animal eat the herbs of the earth so that the herb becomes part of the flesh of the animal, and man likewise eating the flesh of beasts causes it to become part of himself? Thus each kingdom is born or lifted by the kingdom immediately above it. So it is also with the kingdom of God. We must be born from above that we might enter it. God reaches down and puts His Spirit within our own and we are born from above. And what can we more say of love, for we do not attain the love of God by desperate struggle, but by opening our hearts that the love wherein He hath loved us may be born in us. And we have known and believed the love that God hath to us. God is love; and He that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God, and God in him. Herein is our love made perfect that we may have boldness in the Day of Judgment: because as He is, so are we in this world.

My Soul, rest happy in thy low estate,
Nor hope nor wish to be esteemed or great:
To take the impression of a will divine
Be that thy glory, and those riches thine.

Confess Him righteous in His just decrees;
Love what He loves, and let His pleasure please;
Die daily; from the touch of sin recede:
Then thou hast crowned Him, and He reigns indeed!
Many years ago during a long season of prayer I was brought into deep meditation concerning the Holy Spirit. As I waited before the Lord, my mind was flooded in quick succession with a whole series of themes concerning that blessed divine person whom our Lord Jesus called the Holy Spirit. As heading after heading and theme after theme swept into my mind, I wrote them down lest they should be forgotten, and, when at last the Spirit ceased to speak, I knew I possessed in skeleton form material enough for a large and informative book concerning the person and work of the Holy Spirit. As time went by, the book was written, though only parts of it were ever published; but it may be that He who in wisdom reserved the best wine for the end of the feast has also reserved these things for that true ecclesia, which is now rising to form a fixed abode for God through the Spirit. Should it be pleasing to the Lord of all wisdom and understanding, it will be our joy to write of this heavenly person whose divine commission it is to bring to fullness every blessing of Christ in the life of the believer.

It will be my purpose in writing these truths to set forth in awe and simplicity the things of the Spirit, but I shall not attempt to settle any of those vain arguments of men, which pretend to explain even the very appearance of the Godhead. All such carnal debate is an abomination to me and a wretched debasing of things that are higher than the heavens. Never have these carnal debaters succeeded in explaining their views, nor have their views drawn any man closer to God. If it pleased the wisdom of our Lord to reveal Himself to Moses as a fire, to Elijah as a still small voice, to Abraham as three men, to Gideon as an angel, and to Thomas as "my Lord and my God", then learn from this with grace and wisdom all that the Spirit teaches that our enquiring minds may open to greater understanding as a flower opens to the sun. Seek not to conform to childish notions and doctrines of men as though we could understand with our infant minds the greatness of the mystery of God. No pride of understanding fills my soul, but rather a desire to seal my lips in silence when I read the words of holy inspiration, "Without controversy great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory." 1 Tim. 3:16
The longer we walk with God, the greater the mystery becomes, yet they who have walked with God will agree that the mysteries of Him are not of the kind that render the spirit distraught and set the head to spinning, but their mystery, their majesty, and their glory serve rather to awaken in the saint an abounding faith, a sacred reverence, and a trusting humility such as nothing else could do. The man who presumes to stand up to explain the doctrines of God, but afterwards lightly uses God's name in vain, has neither seen God nor heard His voice, And I am sure it is the mind of Christ to say that he who in anger, debate, or malice seeks to propound the mysteries of God is himself far from the Father and knows nothing of the things of which he speaks.

A lifetime of experience will teach us this truth: "If any man thinketh he knoweth anything, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know. But if any man love God, the same is known of Him." 1 Cor. 8:2 "I thank Thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that Thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes: even so, Father, for so it seemed good in Thy sight." Luke 10:21 These words spoke Jesus as He rejoiced in spirit because of the wisdom of God. Let the wise and prudent doctors of divinity and men of letters and learning take heed, for the Father has hidden His mysteries from you and has revealed them to men of humble and contrite spirits that they may with rejoicing enter into them. Cease then from the luxury of vain arguments and definitions of trinities and unities. Faith does not depend on human understanding but, believing the promise, carries off the blessing with rejoicing.

While the Pharisees and Sadducees debated the evil of eating with unwashen hands, there came "a woman of Canaan out of the same coasts, and cried unto Him, saying, Have mercy on me, O Lord, thou son of David; my daughter is grievously vexed with a devil. But He answered her not a word. And His disciples came and besought Him, saying, Send her away; for she crieth after us. But He answered and said, I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel. Then came she and worshipped Him, saying, Lord, help me. But He answered and said, It is not meet to take the children's bread, and cast it to dogs. And she said, Truth, Lord: yet the dogs eat of the crumbs, which fall from their masters' table. Then Jesus answered and said unto her, O woman, great is thy faith: be it unto thee even as thou wilt. And her daughter was made whole from that very hour." Matt. 15:22-28 Even so, O Lord, let it ever be that all things sacred and holy may be hidden from the prying eyes of the wise and prudent men of this world that faith in the heart of the contrite may with great joy receive the blessing.

THE PROMISE OF THE SPIRIT

Consternation, mourning, and heaviness settled down upon the disciples of Jesus when the truth of His departure from their midst began to grip their troubled minds. These men, who in their walk with Christ had seen the power of God manifested in every department of life, could not believe that He would be killed and taken from them, and the promise He gave that He would rise from the dead only served to fill their hearts with greater trepidation and amazement. How could He who had healed every sickness known among men, who with a word had stilled the wild and stormy seas, who had put new limbs on men that were maimed, had cast out the most violent of demons, had eluded those who came to take Him and turned to foolishness the wisdom of the wise, now fall victim to the machinations of men and end His life on a cross? And how much more were their fears aroused by the disquieting news that one of their own number would in wickedness betray Him, and yet another, even the strongest of them all, would deny that he had even known Him.

It was in the midst of their fears and heart-broken consternation at the thought of His departure that the wonderful promise that He would send another Comforter, even the blessed Holy Spirit who would abide with them forever, was given by our Saviour. "I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that He may abide with you forever; even the Spirit of truth, whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth Him not, neither knoweth Him: but ye know Him; for He dwelleth with you and shall be in you. I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you." John 14:16-18

The mystery of God and of godliness is exceeding great and never do I feel so impotent and inadequate as when by necessity I attempt with finite words to explain that which in infinite. Here, far more than other places, we must abandon human wisdom and cut ourselves clean from the many so-called schools of thought and from the wordy dissertations of an apostate church system that the path of the just be no longer clouded by the outer darkness of human theology. "I admit Thou canst do anything, that nothing is too hard for Thee. I thoughtlessly confused the issues; I spoke without intelligence of wonders far beyond my ken. I heard of Thee by hearsay, but now mine eyes have seen Thee; so I despise myself; in dust and ashes I repent." Job 4:1-6 (Moffatt) It is when we come to this state of heartfelt humility before God that the Holy Spirit is able to reveal the priceless things He would have us know. God does not indulge in the senseless pastime of putting new wine into old wine skins. We may as well conclude, then, that we will never receive new light, true revelation or understanding until we quit the old church system with all its multiplied establishments, its doctrines, and its dogooding and join ourselves to Christ alone that we may become one in spirit with that mystical church which is His body. It is the erroneous teaching of the system that hinders our progress, dulls our spiritual appetite, and stagnates our faith. The faith of God leaps out to embrace every true revelation from God without the necessity of our stretching or straining to make ourselves believe.

I cannot explain to the satisfaction of all why it was that in one breath our Saviour declared, "I will pray the Father and He will give you another Comforter," and in the next He said, "I will not leave you comfortless; I will come to you." My spirit grasps it; my inner man understands it; my heart believes it, and my faith carries away the blessing. Let those who wish to fight about it do so if they will, but God will leave them in the darkness of their own hearts while others in adoring faith in what He said receive the rich fullness of the inheritance. While scribes and Pharisees in their carnality argued about the non-essentials, the Canaanitish woman walked off with the blessing. While the disciples of Jesus marveled that he talked to a Samaritan, the woman ran off to the city with the revelation burning in her heart, "Is not this the Christ?" - a truth that even the disciples as yet had not seen. And what shall we say of the blind man, who from birth had seen neither the light of the sun nor the faces of his friends? Rejoicing in his new found treasure, he confounded the challenge of his inquisitors with the unanswerable statement, "Whether He be a sinner or no, I know not: one thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see." John 9:25 Be exhorited, child of God, to turn from human understanding. Lean not upon it. It is completely unreliable. Lean rather upon the Spirit of truth, whom Christ has sent forth from the Father and of whom it is said, "He will take the things of God and show them unto you."

There are some conclusions, which the Holy Spirit would mark indelibly upon our minds. It will make a universe of difference to our understanding, our spiritual growth and progress, when our minds grasp the fact that the Holy Spirit possesses each and every element of personality. This truth I will humbly endeavor to show. If in your mind the Holy Spirit is merely an influence for good or a strange irresistible something as impersonal as the wind, then it is small wonder that you find your progress very slow and your spiritual understanding immature. Would you not say that there would be a great difference between one's being filled with a divine influence and being filled a divine person? A person can speak; an A person can be spoken to; an influence cannot. A person can comfort and help; an influence cannot. A person can intercede; an influence cannot. A person can lead, correct, chasten and illumine; an influence can do none of these things.

A person is that which, when speaking, says "I", when spoken to, is called thee or thou, and when spoken of, is called he or him. This is a very simple and concise definition of what a person is, and I think the Bible bears abundant evidence that in all these things and many more the Holy Spirit is proven to be a person. In the Greek language the word spirit is a neuter noun and is therefore designated by the pronoun it, but it is a most unusual mark of inspiration that, when speaking of the Holy Spirit, this grammatical law is set aside and overruled in the light of the true and definite personality of the Holy Spirit. Thus you will notice in the following statement of truth concerning the Holy Spirit that came from the lips of Christ Himself the pronoun he is repeated eight times and the word himself once. "Howbeit when He, the Spirit of truth, is come, He will guide you into all truth: for He shall not speak of Himself; but whatsoever He shall hear, that shall He speak: and He will show you things to come. He shall glorify Me: for He shall receive of mine, and shall show it unto you."

John 16:13-14 This verse of holy truth establishes beyond question that in this age the work of God is done, not by an impersonal influence sent forth from heaven, but by the personal Holy Spirit of Christ, sent forth into the hearts of believers to work in them all the wonders of God. No wonder Jesus said, "I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you!"

Perhaps, as we were counting the number of times the pronoun he was used in the text above, we missed or passed over the vital truth the scripture itself contained. I am sure we could fill volumes with the marvelous revelation of that text! First we must notice that He is the Spirit of truth. The Holy Spirit does not merely tell the truth; He is the very Spirit of truth. No lie or false doctrine ever emanates from Him. He is Himself the very essence of truth because He is the Spirit of truth. From Him all truth comes. The man or woman in contact with the Holy Spirit need never fear a lie, for He is truth and the very Spirit of it. Of this we will speak in greater particular as this heavenly theme develops.

Notice further that the ministry of the Spirit of truth is this: "He will guide you into all truth." Let saints of God give eternal praise that we have not been left to the helplessness and hopelessness of human understanding, nor is it necessary for any man to seek God's wisdom from another. The promise of God to you and me as believers is this: He will guide you into all truth. All things necessary for our spiritual growth and adoption will be revealed to the heart of the believer by the Spirit of truth as necessity and occasion demand. It is of this same guiding Spirit that Paul spoke when he wrote the words, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him. But God hath revealed them unto us by His Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things yea, the deep things of God." 1 Cor. 2:9-10

The work of the Holy Spirit in bearing witness to the truth is greatly magnified by the words of John. This apostle of God was well aware of the many errors stealthily creeping into the midst of the people of God. There were seducers in his day just as there are many more seducers and deceivers now. And do not imagine, my friend, that seducers are the rare and unusual breed, for there are many more seducers and deceivers at large among the Christians of our day than there are genuine ministries. So much the more, then, should we take heed and depend upon that Spirit of truth that He, and not men, should guide us into all truth. John, knowing the ever-increasing deception, exhorted the Christians in these words: "Let that (the truth) therefore abide in you which ye have heard from the beginning. If that which ye have heard from the beginning shall remain in you, ye also shall continue in the Son, and in the Father... These things have I written unto you concerning them that seduce you. But the anointing (the Holy Spirit) which ye have received of Him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you: but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in Him." 1 John 2:24, 26-27

It becomes very clear from the above scripture that the anointing of the Holy Spirit is truth and that this same Spirit both guides us into all truth and defends us against all error. The Spirit bears witness to the truth and causes the soul to rejoice in it. The Holy Spirit shrinks from error and causes the soul in whom He dwells to remove himself from the spirit of error. How many times in your walk with God have you felt the warm witness of the Spirit that certain teachings were right? And am I not right in saying that often times the Spirit bore witness to the truth long before your own mind was able to grasp or understand it? On the other hand have you not known times when the Spirit shrank away from a man or from the things he had to say even though his words sounded right and even scriptural? When once the Spirit of truth shrinks away and fails to bear witness, we should not allow ourselves to become persuaded or convinced by the cleverness of men. It is entirely true that the scripture says, "Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Spirit is come upon you", but it is nothing short of tragic that the vast majority of Christians think of power only in terms of Christian service. They dream of a baptism that will give them the power to perform miracles, to heal the sick, or raise the dead, and they hope to see signs and wonders follow their ministry. Scarce indeed are those Christians who consider or even notice the many more important offices of the Holy Spirit. In our lifelong search for truth, for instance, why do we not quickly learn that this divine person is the very Spirit of truth? Why do men and women by endless thousands run off to Bible Schools in the hope of learning truth when the Spirit of truth dwells within? Have we never read, "Ye need not that any man teach you?" Do we not believe that the anointing teaches us all things? And that this same Spirit of truth shows us things to come? "There is a spirit in man: and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding." Job. 32:8

It is never difficult to get people to mentally accede to the fact that the Holy Spirit must be our teacher, but we must also learn that even the indwelling Spirit does not teach a sluggish and dilatory soul. As a door turneth upon its hinges, so the sluggard turns upon his bed. How can a man expect to be taught of God if he fails to give himself time to be alone with God, away from the crowd, away from the preacher, away from Sunday Schools, the organization and the program? How can he expect to hear the Spirit's voice if he does not wait on God in the silence of his own soul? How can he expect to hear from God when his stomach is always full and his flesh is put before his spirit to be satisfied in every detail? No man can meet with God as he should without fasting and prayer. It is impossible! He will always be an anaemic Christian if there is a lack of fasting, prayer, the Word of God, and a dependence on the Spirit. If men would fast and continually walk in the presence of God's indwelling Spirit, they would stand amazed at the work the Holy Spirit would accomplish in their lives. How can any man expect to be filled with God and at the same time be filled with everything that belongs to this present evil world? We hear men pray, "Lord, fill me," when they should be praying, "Lord, empty me of the world." How can any man hope to hear the voice of the Spirit when by means of the television he brings into his parlor all the filth and corruption, the violence and murder that dissolute minds can devise? People excuse themselves by saying it is educational. It is, indeed! It is the kind of education that vexed the soul of righteous Lot day after day as he saw their filthy deeds and heard their corrupt conversation. We are drawing very near the end of the age. It is time to watch and be sober lest, when Jesus comes, He finds our minds involved with corrupt and deceitful things and we find ourselves ashamed in His presence.

I cannot help but rebuke the gross hypocrisy of modern Christians, for the Spirit makes the message urgent within me. This is the hour of Laodicea and it is time for lukewarm Laodiceans to repent. It is time for them to throw all corruption out of their parlor and invite the Holy Spirit into the throne room of their hearts that their walk may be wholly with God. If my warning becomes offensive to some, I care not a straw for that, but, if many fall down in repentance, making the Spirit their guide and paraclete, then all heaven shall rejoice, and I shall rejoice and be glad with them. We may indulge in much talk about sonship, but we will never get beyond the realm of spiritual infancy until we cut ourselves clean from systems, organizations, corporations, and love of the world and the things that are in the world whether they be pleasure, luxury, or worldly pastime. "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." The Spirit speaketh expressly that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith. Everywhere we turn our eyes we see the truth of this witness, but that same Holy Spirit speaks expressly in these latter days that we should turn from all these vanities that He may be our teacher, our guide, and our paraclete.

GUIDANCE

If personal names and personal pronouns indicate the personality of the Holy Spirit, it is certain that personal offices also denote His personality. "When He, the Spirit of truth, is come, He will guide you into all truth." This promise is almost too wonderful for comment. "He will guide you into all truth!" Think, if you will, of the years we have wasted in searching for truth, devouring books, listening to lectures, burning the candle at both ends, but neglecting entirely the source of all truth and ignoring that indwelling teacher sent forth from the Father with the explicit ministry of guiding the believer into all truth! It is not my place to deride schools of learning, though we may say with certainty that "they know nothing yet as they ought to know." But it is my place to tell you that, "the things of God knoweth no man but the Spirit of God." He is, first of all, the Spirit of truth, and He has been sent forth from the Father both to be with us and to dwell in us, and to guide us into all truth. "He shall receive of Mine, and shall show it unto you," we are told in John 16:14. No one can show us the things of God. That is the ministry of the Holy Spirit, I may tell you about the things of God, but only the Spirit can show you. Teachers may teach, but forty years of teaching have taught me that only the Spirit can reveal and show the truth. I cannot count the hours I have spent in teaching and writing and explaining the things of God, only to find in disappointment that the listener had heard nothing except with the outer ear. But, when the Holy Spirit came to open the eyes of their understanding, taking the things of God and showing them unto them, then they knew in a moment of time what years of instruction had failed to show them.

It is probable that Martin Luther had read the text, "The just shall live by faith", times without number before that notable day when, ascending the steps of St. Peter's on his knees, the Holy Spirit spoke the words into his heart, "The just shall live by faith!" In that instant of revelation all his struggles were over. Faith shone like a heavenly lamp on his pathway. He rejoiced in the God of his salvation and turned his back forever on the blinding rituals of men and the legalistic forms and ceremonies of an apostate system that dared to masquerade as the church of the living God. "He shall receive of Mine," said Jesus, "and shall show it unto you."

These words are far too potent and full of meaning to be read over carelessly or lightly laid aside to be forgotten. Herein lies the source of the river of all wisdom and spiritual understanding. This is the gate through which we mortals walk on our way to the treasure house of the knowledge of God. Within its jasper walls are hung vessels of gold in pictures of silver. Here are the things, which eye hath not seen or ear heard neither have entered the heart of man. Here abide the things that only God can reveal by His Spirit; and I think we may say with godly assurance, though we still sojourn in this lowly temple, that our city hath no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it: for the glory of God does lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof. "And the nations of them that are saved shall walk in the light of it, and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honor into it." Rev. 21:23-24. Ah, blessed light of God! He will guide you into all truth, for He will take the things of God and show them unto you.

It was only this morning, very early, long before the sun arose, that I rather anxiously enquired of my Lord, "What wilt Thou have me to do?" And when my words were ended and I was quiet in His presence, He assured me that it was the office work of the Holy Spirit to guide me in the way that He would have me go. Having done this, He kindly reminded me of the long, long journey over which we have come since that distant day when we started our walk together. He reminded me of the obstacles He had removed from my path that I might go forward in Him and He reminded me of the obstructions He had placed in my way to turn my steps to the right or to the left. How precious to the believing heart are the words of Solomon: "The king's heart is in the hand of the Lord, as the rivers of water: He turneth it whithersoever He will." Prov. 21:1

There is a power whose care
Teaches Thy way along the pathless coast,
The desert and the illimitable air
Lone wandering, but not lost.
He who from zone to zone
Guides through the boundless coast
Thy certain flight,
In the long way that I must walk alone
Will guide my steps aright.

HE SHALL NOT SPEAK OF HIMSELF

When the Holy Spirit, even the Spirit of truth, is come, He will guide those who receive Him into all truth, for He shall not speak of Himself. John 16:13 When Jesus was here on earth, He said, "I can of mine own self do nothing: as I hear, I judge: and My judgment is just; because I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent Me." John 5:30 He also said, "The Son can do nothing of Himself, but what He seeth the Father do (margin, doing): for what things soever He doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise. For the Father loveth the Son, and sheweth Him all things that Himself doeth: and He will show greater works than these, that ye may marvel." John 5:19, 20 Jesus plainly stated that all the works He did were shown to Him by the Father and given to Him to do. Our Lord Jesus Christ did absolutely nothing that the Father had not shown Him to do. It is my frank opinion that neither sick nor maimed nor demon possessed was ever healed or delivered by Jesus without the Father's instruction. There is no evidence that will support the notion that Jesus went about the country laying hands indiscriminately on every sick man as though the purpose of His life was to heal everyone before He died. He passed by sick people every day without doing anything for them. I do not know how many times our Lord visited the temple at Jerusalem during his life, but I do know that there was a certain man above forty years of age who was laid daily at the temple gate who was not healed until Peter and John passed by and commanded him to rise up and walk. Acts 3:1-11 If there ever was a great and valuable lesson for men of God to learn, it is this: We should not attempt to do anything which the Father has not bidden us do, and I am sure also that we would be wise to say nothing that the Father has not bidden us say.

It gives my heart much joy to know that all our Saviour's words and all our Saviour's works were first ordained by God the Father. They were given to Him of the Father that nothing would be done outside His purpose, but that all things should work together for good to them that love God, being called according to His purpose. Have you never wondered why it is that of the countless hundreds of sick people who are prayed for only a small percentage are ever healed, while the vast majority go away empty? It is because there was no instruction from the Lord concerning their healing, and so they went away empty. How good it would be if men could only know that for the vast majority of Christians in this decadent Laodicean period it is better far for them to remain sick than to be healed. All over the land today preachers are proclaiming that God wants everybody healed and He would have everybody prosperous. It is a lie! They speak falsely! There is no truth in it. Suffering and tribulation of every kind are a positive necessity to our entering the kingdom of God. Both suffering and tribulation are an absolute must. It is in great adversity that Christians avail themselves of grace, but, when all is well in the flesh and in the natural, then they forget God today as Israel did of old.

As Jesus did only the things that pleased the Father, so the Holy Spirit, who was sent forth at Pentecost told the believer, to walk in him, to transform him and be his guide in all things, does not speak of nor from Himself; "but whatsoever He shall hear that shall He speak, and He shall show you things to come." Naught but the inspiration of the Almighty could crowd so much information into one verse. Here we are assured that the Holy Spirit speaks from the Father. He is the very Spirit of the Father and the very Spirit of His Son. As time permits, I will clearly show that a most important part of His ministry is the wonderful work of transforming the believer into the image of Christ that the believer may be one spirit with the Father and with the Son. God hath sent forth the Spirit into our hearts, crying, "Abba, Father." Thus we can clearly see that the spirit of sonship is, indeed, the Holy Spirit in our hearts. He that liveth in us to guide us into all truth is making us one with God the Father and with His Son, Jesus Christ. He is bringing us to the fullness of sonship, which is adoption and manifestation. The Holy Spirit will work in the heart of the believer until he is one with Christ and until that hour of adoption when the Father shall pronounce with a voice like thunder, "This in My beloved son, in whom I am well pleased."

He shall not speak from Himself, but all things that the Spirit has received of the Father that shall He speak to you that your life may be lightened by His presence as the earth was lightened by the presence of the angel who came to announce that Babylon had fallen. Rev. 18:1-2  How tragic it is that Christians should walk in the outer darkness of their natural minds while the promise of such a divine helper is given them by the living Christ! Why, oh why, my brother, my sister, are you content to feed year after year on the husks of men's wisdom when the Spirit of God is within you? Why do you listen to preachers telling and re-telling the old, old story when the Spirit stands ready, not only to guide you into all truth, but to show you things to come as well? Even the servants in your Father's house have bread enough and to spare, while you perish with hunger on husks of men. What a crying pity it is that men and women, who once received the Spirit with many evidences from on high, have failed to grow a spiritual inch, still depending on some one else to feed them and tell them the things of God! There is one within you now, even the Holy Spirit, who from the Father's exhaustless store has received all the things of God. He will guide you personally into all truth. He will show you the things that were shown to Him of the Father. He will willingly take the things of God and show them unto you and with unerring accuracy will show you things to come.

All this day the thought has been returning to tell me that we are the people who belong to the period of Laodicea. Why then do we not listen? Why do we not hear? Why do we not know that the Spirit is urging the Christians who belong to this lukewarm period to buy gold tried in the fire, and white raiment that we may be clothed? Gold signifies God; white raiment is His righteousness. But, instead of our letting the Spirit work His wonders in our hearts, we pride ourselves by saying, "I am rich and increased in goods and have need of nothing." Alas! The real truth is that Christians today have nothing while they vainly imagine they have need of nothing. While priding themselves about gifts and ministries and power and possessions and all such things, they in fact have nothing and know not that they are wretched and miserable and poor and blind and naked. Rev. 3:14-19 What a blistering message that is right from the lips of Christ! Yet no one seems to give heed or believe that the message could be to him.

It is time to fast and pray. It is time to cast aside all outward appearance of religion and let the Holy Spirit work the work of God in your heart. You will grow in grace and in the knowledge of God and your life will begin to yield the nine fruits that grow on the tree of the Spirit when you are willing to quit the harlot system with all her abominable and enormous fanfare and give yourself to fasting and prayer and devotion to God. Walk with Him as Abraham did. Is not the promise of this Laodicean hour given to any man who hears God's voice? Rev. 3:20 Is it not said to us, "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith... ?" Verse 22. Since, then, such promises as these are made to individuals and not to multitudes, your solemn duty is to come out from among them and be separate and touch not the unclean thing that God may be a Father to you, and you may be sons and daughters of Him. Be exhorted, O child of God, for to you the Spirit is given that He may lead you into all truth and bring you to the very image of Christ.

"The Holy Spirit shall glorify Me." said Jesus Christ, "for He shall receive of Mine and shall show it unto you." This is the fountain of God. Here are flowing the rivers of living water. If any man thirsts, let him come here to drink even as Jesus declared when He stood and cried at the Feast of Tabernacles, "If any man thirsts, let him come unto Me and drink. He that believeth on Me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. This spake He of the Spirit, which they that believe on Him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given; because that Jesus was not yet glorified." John 7:37-39 I believe in the baptism of the Holy Spirit. I have received the Spirit and give glory to God with the multitudes of men and women who have also received this heavenly person, this comforter, this paraclete from God. But many there be who once received the Spirit, rejoicing for a time in heavenly fulness, yet they were willing to let the glory fade away as it faded from the face of Moses. They made the initial infilling of the Spirit the goal instead of the gate. They made it the end instead of the beginning. They thought it was the summit instead of the foot, the final instead of the first. The life of a Christian must be a walk in the Spirit if it is to fulfill God's plan. It is the Holy Spirit walking in him and he in the Spirit, "For," says God, "I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be My people." 2 Cor. 6:16

THE IMPORTANCE OF THE SPIRIT'S WORK

Surely there is not a Christian drawing breath who fails to perceive at least in part how incalculable was the value of the presence of the Son of God on earth. His manifestation in the flesh two thousand years ago was without doubt the most important event in the history of mankind, and His coming again in the near future will mean the regeneration and restitution of all things. Acts 3:21 The presence of this Son of man, this Son of God, the Saviour of the world and Redeemer of Israel, of whom it is written, "Of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end," is so important that the human mind cannot grasp it. All the sermons that ever flowed from inspired minds and anointed lips have failed to scratch the surface of the fullness of God's purpose in Him. We would not be wise now to turn aside from our theme to speak again of that transcendent glory in Him. Search it out for the rest of the dispensation and the investigation will only have begun.

The physical presence of Christ was so important to the twelve disciples that they were filled with consternation and were troubled at the thought that He would go away and leave them. "These things I said not unto you at the beginning, because I was with you. But now I go My way to Him that sent Me; and none of you asketh Me, Whither goest Thou? But because I have said these things unto you, sorrow hath filled your heart." John 16:4-6 But Jesus, after saying these things to them, turned His words to the promise of the Holy Spirit, and the words He spoke demonstrate with more conviction and force than any other statement could possibly do how exceedingly important to themselves and to all mankind the coming of the Spirit would be. With God-like assurance He spoke these words: "Nevertheless I tell you the truth: It is expedient for you that I go away; for if I depart, I will send Him unto you." Verse 17 The word expedient means "serving to promote a desired end, advisable, and contributing to personal advantage."

These words are worthy of deep meditation and prayer. Never can we comprehend their forceful meaning without prayerful, careful consideration. Here is one sure place where we need that blessed teacher, the Holy Spirit, to "take the things of God and show them unto us." Jesus was telling these distraught men that His going away would mean the coming of the Spirit. He told them plainly that it was better for them that the Spirit should come to them than that He should remain with them. Blessed and wonderful was His own presence and ministry among them; yet far more blessed would be the presence and ministry of the Spirit within them. "I will pray the Father," He assured them, "and He shall give you another Comforter, that He may abide with you forever; even the Spirit of truth, whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth Him not, neither knoweth Him: but ye know Him; for He dwelleth with you, and shall be in you." John 14:16-17

Wonderful as was the presence of Christ in the world, that physical presence cannot be compared to the magnificent glory of the Spirit of Christ dwelling in the believing heart. No outward manifestation of power or glory can take the place of His indwelling presence. It is within and not from without that the work of transformation is to be carried forward from glory to glory until we shine in that same image of Christ. Though Christ had walked and talked with His disciples, eating with them, praying with them, instructing them and continually demonstrating the works of God among them, even giving them power to heal and work mighty wonders, yet at the time of His departure there was but little sign of any work of grace within them. All was on the outside. Peter was still capable of cursing and swearing and lying. Judas was still capable of stealing and acting the traitor. When the pressure was on, they were all capable of forsaking him and running away. They were still natural men, as almost all the Old Testament saints had been. Christ had indeed been among them, for the Holy Spirit was not yet given, but He was not in them. Transformation does not take place from without. It must come from within. All the evil in the world today, even as Jesus said, comes from within out of the evil heart of man. "Out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies: these are the things which defile a man: but to eat with unwashen hands defileth not a man."

Matthew 15:19-20 Therefore, since all evil begins within and not without, then conversion and regeneration must begin within and not without. A man who quits his drunkenness because he signed the pledge has only an outward change while his heart may remain unchanged, but the man who ceases his sinning because his heart is changed is changed from within and is a new creation. Herein lies the first and greatest blessing of the coming of the Holy Spirit. Jesus had been with them, but the Spirit would henceforth be in them. He would be regenerating, transforming, changing, and renewing. He would be leading, guiding, and directing their lives from His throne room in the heart. He would be taking the mysteries of God and revealing them unto the believer. He would be showing them things to come. How wonderful it must have been to walk the hills of Judea and sail the Sea of Galilee with Jesus by their side! How much more wonderful it is that Christ by the Holy Spirit now dwells within, changing, transforming and transfiguring until we shine in that same image of Christ!

Those who read the scripture with thought and purpose will surely have noticed the transformation that took place in the disciples after that wonderful day when Jesus walked through the locked doors, and standing in their midst, said, "Peace be unto you... And when He had said this, He breathed on them, and saith unto them. Receive ye the Holy Ghost. Whose soever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whose soever sins ye retain, they are retained." John 20:21-22 The Holy Spirit could not be given until Jesus was glorified. John 7:39. But now the cross was past and gone forever. The travail of His thirty years of death was past and gone forever. The price had been paid; the redemption was complete. The blood was shed and had been presented in the holy of holies in heaven where it remains forever in incorruption. Jesus Himself was glorified, and the time had come for the Spirit to be sent forth to regenerate the believer. Thus He breathed upon them, and the Spirit came to them, working the work of regeneration in their hearts. These were the first men of the age to be born again. "The wind (the Spirit) bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is everyone that is born of the Spirit." John 3:8 The regeneration that took place here must not be confused with the mighty baptism of Pentecost. This was regeneration, the first work of the Spirit in the believing heart. You must have noticed how Jesus related forgiveness of sins with the initial work of the Spirit. When He had said, "Receive ye the Holy Spirit", He immediately followed with these words: "Whosoever sins ye remit, they are remitted: and whosoever sins ye retain, they are retained." The new birth is regeneration and regeneration cannot be separated from forgiveness of sins.

The story of the new birth is a story written in the hearts of millions of believers in this age. Those who have been changed by the regenerating power of the Spirit cannot explain the transformation by wisdom, but in their hearts they know the truth of these words: "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou nearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, or whither it goeth. So is everyone that is born of the Spirit." In our readers at school there was a verse that said:

Who hath seen the wind?
Neither you nor I,
But when the trees bow down their heads,
The wind is passing by.

We cannot see the wind; neither can we see the Spirit. We know the wind is there because we see its many works in creation and we know that were it not for its life-giving power we would all be dead men. So also is everyone that is born of the Spirit. We cannot see nor understand His life-giving power, but we see the work that is being done in all who believe and we know with much assurance that without His blessed power we would be unregenerate souls dead in trespasses and sins. That soul who is born of the Spirit pulsates with a life that comes from above. He becomes a citizen of a new world. His hope is anchored within the heavenly veil. He is not a conformer to a new principle or religion. He is the recipient of a new life. He is not the imitator of a person, but the possessor of the life of Jesus Christ.

Let it be thoroughly known that all conviction of sin is the work of the Holy Spirit. Conviction of sin is not the result of eloquent preaching. It does not come through excellent music or fine singing, nor does it come through the art of persuasion. Conviction is the work of the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit will use preaching. He will use singing and He will use persuasion, but let it be known that without Him you can do nothing. If the Spirit is not present to reveal Christ to the unbeliever, if He is not there to show the sinner his sins and his need of a Saviour, there is no power in man or in anything else that can convince him of his need of a Saviour or make him call on God with the repentance that results in salvation. You may convince his mind; you may instruct his intellect, but only God can convert him. It is godly sorrow that works repentance unto salvation not to be repented of, but the sorrow of the world worketh death. 2 Cor. 7:10 I do not think there was any special oratorical skill in Peter's sermon on the day of Pentecost. Many men could have put together a better discourse than that. The thing that brought three thousand souls to their knees in repentance was the fact that they were "pricked in the heart", and that was the work of the Holy Spirit. Peter's sermon the day following, as recorded in Acts 3:12-26, was a simple statement of truth and fact, and through it five thousand believers were converted to Christ - not because of a fine sermon or a dynamic personality, but because of the mighty convicting power of the Holy Spirit as He came convincing the world of sin and of righteousness and of judgment.

Peter and John were foremost in disclaiming either power or holiness of their own. Seeing the multitude staring in wonder at the healing of the lame man, they said, "Why look ye on us so earnestly as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk?" Acts 3:12 He knew what power had made the man whole and did not hesitate to let them know also from whence that power came. These men ran no advertisements proclaiming themselves to be God's men of the hour. They would have been horrified at such blasphemous thought. Instead of indulging in the worthless pastime of self-commendation, they spoke the truth, saying, "The God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob, the God of our fathers hath glorified His Son Jesus; whom ye delivered up, and denied Him in the presence of Pilate, when he was determined to let Him go." Acts 3:13 It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing. I am convinced that all the vain talk about men of the hour, first ladies, men of faith, men of miracles and all the rest is nothing but the world's pompous humbug. Not only is it humbug; it is also a lie, and deception is its artful intention, and that intention is to turn the love and affection that belongs to Christ toward ostentatiousness and pretentious men. All such pomposity and promotion of self is vain glory, and these vain-glorious men are "the scorn of the wise, the admiration of fools, the idols of parasites, and the slaves of their own vaunts." (Bacon) "The vain glory of this world is a deceitful sweetness, a fruitless labor, a perpetual fear, a dangerous honor; her beginning is without providence and her end not without repentance". (Quarles)

"He will convince the world of sin," Jesus said; and He, the Holy Spirit, is the only power that can so fasten the guilt of sin upon a man that he will turn to God and with a broken spirit cry, "God be merciful to me, a sinner."
And when at last the weeping sinner cries in the agony of his guilt, "What must I do to be saved," that same
Holy Spirit responds with the only way of salvation, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shall be saved."
As far as I am aware the only work the Spirit does in the world of unbelievers is to convince them of sin. "No man comes to Me except the Father draw Him," Jesus said; and again, "All that the Father hath given Me shall come to Me, and him that cometh unto Me I will in no wise cast out." When the Holy Spirit convicts a man of sin, that man knows he is a sinner, and when the Spirit draws him, he comes.

It will be useful to us all to notice the ways in which the Spirit brings ungodly men to a realization of their sin.
Three things are especially mentioned here and it is upon these three things the Spirit concentrates. "He will reprove (the Revised Version says convict) the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment." John 16:8 (Please do not add the words judgment to come. That is not what Jesus said.) And this is the way He will convict or convince the world of sin and of righteousness and of judgment. First, He will convict of sin because "they believe not on Me (Christ)." John 16:9 Second, He will convince the world of righteousness "because I (Christ) go to the Father and ye see Me no more." Third, He will convict of judgment "because the prince of this world is judged."

The greatest sin in the world is, not murder or theft or drunkenness or even the breaking of God's commandments. The greatest sin and the only damning sin in all the world is unbelief. Unbelief was the original sin, the very first sin, of mankind, and all the evil in the world today springs from unbelief and from that one particular unbelief stated in this text, "They believe not on Me." Let men first believe. Let them come to Christ, not with resolutions and human effort, but with/ort/i in His blood. God the Father has perfect faith in the blood of His Son, and all who come to Him must come believing that the blood of Jesus Christ, God's Son, cleanses from all sin. I John 1:7 "For if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh, how much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered Himself to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God." Heb. 9:14 Throughout the pages of divine inspiration from Genesis to Revelation there hangs a scarlet cord, of which even the ransomed in heaven sing, saying, "Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: for Thou wast slain and hast redeemed us to God by Thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth." Rev. 5:9-10

There is no use convicting a man of sin and unrighteousness if you fail to point him to the source of cleansing and righteousness. Christ is our righteousness and it is the work of the Spirit to prove it so. I know of nothing that bespeaks the perfection of Christ's righteousness with such certainty and assurance as is shown by the fact that, after men had rejected and killed Him, God raised Him from the dead; and, being raised from the dead, He ascended up on high to the Father, and, being the High Priest, He offered His blood on the altar in heaven to cleanse not only man but the universe as well from all sin. The blood of God's righteous Christ cleanses from all sin wherever it may be found, for once in the end of the age He has appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself. Heb. 9:26. Had we much time and space to speak of the righteousness of Christ, we could add but very little to that one giant evidence which Jesus gave in this one short sentence, "Of righteousness because I go to the Father, and ye see me no more."

Having convinced the world of sin and of righteousness, the Spirit of God will further convince the world of judgment, not judgment to come, as so many say. That is not true. He will convict the world of judgment because the prince of this world is already judged. There is therefore no condemnation (judgment) to them who are in Christ Jesus, for the law of the Spirit of life (the Holy Spirit) in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death. All sin must be judged. It cannot be otherwise. But I will tell you this: All sin has already been judged in God's Son, Jesus Christ, and today the Spirit of God proclaims the message, "He that believeth on Him is not condemned." John 3:18 And he that is condemned is only condemned because he has not believed. The Father judgeth no man, but has committed all judgment unto the Son, (John 5:22), and the Son declares to all mankind, "He that heareth My word, and believeth on Him that sent Me, hath everlasting life and shall not come into condemnation (margin, judgment), but is passed from death unto life." John 5:24

Because of the vastness of the subject, my effort thus far seems paltry, indeed, but from these few words and many scriptures I hope I have made it plain that the Spirit that proceedeth from the Father is not an influence, but a person; that He is not an ordinary person, but divine, even the Spirit of God and of Christ. Thus far, Amen.

THE NAMES OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

Even the simplest equations are difficult to those who do not understand them, but the most intricate problem becomes simple when the mind holds the solution to it. The door that is locked with a skeleton key will baffle the man who has no key, but the massive doors of the bank vault swing open with ease to the man who possesses the combination of the intricate lock. Thus it is in the realm of the Spirit. "The things of God knoweth no man," but the moment the Holy Spirit comes to take control, His divine wisdom unlocks for the seeker door after door to the storehouse of the riches of God in Christ Jesus until with wondering eyes the seeker beholds wealthy mines of glittering and precious jewels.
We have often heard the question, "What is in a name?" Though it is often asked in jest, the fact remains that there is much in a name. Automobile manufacturers give all manner of names to their products because they know that names create an image in the mind of the buyer, so that while the sophisticated may be thinking in such terms as Imperials, Continentals, Rivieras, and Ambassadors, the sportsman type thinks in terms of Comets, Thunderbirds, Corvettes, and Javelins. The names we give our children in the twentieth century usually have little or no significance, but in Bible times names were often given by prophetic utterance, which disclosed both the nature of a man and his life's work as well. "Thou shall call His name Jesus," said the angel, "for He shall save His people from their sins." Matt. 1:21. Jesus means Saviour, and the name rightly belongs to Him and to no other. Abram, whose name means father, at the age of ninety-nine while still childless, had his name changed to Abraham, meaning father of many nations. Gen. 17:4, 5. Though he was to die seeing only a few sons and grandsons, the promise stands confirmed today, for many nations have descended from Abraham, among them the most powerful and influential in the world. Jesus changed the names of James and John to Boanerges, meaning sons of thunder, because the name befitted these men who thought to call down fire from heaven to destroy the unbelievers. When Andrew, the great personal worker, brought his brother to Jesus, our Lord greeted Peter with these words: "Thou art Simon, the son of Jona: thou shall be called Cephas, which is by interpretation, a stone." John 1:40-42 The ministry of an apostle is the ministry of the foundation. Thus the name Cephas calls attention to Peter's ministry as an apostle and to the rock-like character of this simple man. Barnabas means son of consolation (Acts 4:36), and how well the name befits the nature of this kindly man who took Paul and brought him to the apostles when all others feared and rejected him. Acts 9:26-29. It was Barnabas who showed sympathy to the erring John Mark (Acts 15:36-39), and though Paul rejected Mark, he afterward wrote, "Bring Mark, for he is profitable to me in the ministry." 2 Tim. 4:11

Among the heathen in Africa all the boys at a certain age are required to attend the "devil school." They are taken into the bush for several weeks to be trained by their witch doctors. At the end of this period every boy is given a new name according to his ability. If he proves to be a good hunter, his name is Hunter. If he is able to cook, his name is called Cook. It is not difficult to see that even among ourselves many of our names sprang from our occupation or calling. The names Smith, Haymaker, Hunter, Bridge-man, Carpenter, Farmer, and a thousand others signify the occupation, nationality, or dwelling place of the people who first possessed them.

The homely examples we have related above are intended only to show how the many names given to the Holy Spirit were intended to display His personality and to teach our searching hearts what manner of person this divine Comforter really is. I shall say positively and with utmost sincerity that it is of the greatest possible importance that we should know that He who fills our hearts is a divine person, even God Himself, and not merely some strange impersonal influence. He is a divine person with divine names, each separate name a heavenly designation loudly proclaiming His nature, His character, His work in the believing heart, and His ministry toward the many who have not yet believed. It will take many pages to demonstrate the truths we have in mind, but I hope to show that every Christian grace developing in the believer is the operation of the Holy Spirit, doing the work of God in his heart and transforming the diligent believer into the image of Christ.

The promise of our Lord Jesus Christ was twofold: first, that the Holy Spirit would be with them as Jesus Himself had been, and, secondly, that He would dwell in them. John 14:17 This marvelous state of blessedness our dear Saviour could not accomplish in the days of His flesh and the blessing of His indwelling presence could never have been accomplished had Jesus remained with them in physical presence only. Therefore in the midst of the distress and turmoil of their troubled minds He gave them these words of sublime assurance: "It is expedient for you that I go away, for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come: But if I depart, I will send Him unto you." The coming of the Comforter, who is the Holy Spirit, is the fulfillment of the promise, "I will not leave you comfortless. I will come to you." John 14:18

THE SPIRIT

The Hebrew word for spirit in the Old Testament is ruach, and means breath or wind. The Greek word for spirit in the New Testament is pneuma, which also means breath or wind. The English word ghost used in the King James version, though now somewhat obsolete and not in general use, is derived from the Greek pneuma. Its original meaning is exactly the same as the word spirit. Though the word ghost does not carry the same meaning today as in the 17th century and as used in the King James version of the Bible, I am inclined to believe it has a greater significance than the word spirit, and it is to be greatly pitied that we have allowed the word to lose its meaning to such an extent that we now associate it with apparitions and haunted houses. It is like the word love - once so pure and holy that it was associated only with God and those who were like Him, but today so degraded that it is made the jest of the filthy and the obscene to be associated with adulterers and adulteresses, lesbians and homosexuals, who are doomed to find their aionian place in the lake that burns with fire and brimstone, which is the second death.

Wind is a symbol of the Spirit as is also fire and water. We will all agree that these are powerful and expressive symbols. If it were not for these three elements, fire and water and wind, our planet would be as dead and devoid of every form of life as the moon or any of the numberless planets and stars of the universe. These three elements make the difference, for without them neither life nor power can exist. In view of this fact it is significant almost beyond human understanding that it is said, "In the beginning the earth was without form and void, and darkness was upon the face of the deep." Then these three elements immediately come into view. The Spirit of God (the wind) moved upon the face of the water, and God said, "Let there be light (fire), and there was light." Here we have wind (the Spirit), water (the Word), and fire (the light). Each and every one of these are dynamic symbols of the Holy Spirit. And if we may now extend the likeness, we can see these same elements, wind, fire, and water, elevated to the spiritual realm in the wonder-filled outpouring of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost as the one hundred and twenty waited on God as we are told in Acts, chapter two. "Suddenly there was a sound from heaven as of a mighty, rushing wind (the Holy Spirit). And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire (this is also the Spirit), and they all began to speak with tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance." This speaking in many tongues (languages) is the gushing forth of the fountains of living water, even as Jesus promised it would be when on the last day of the feast of tabernacles He stood and cried, "He that believeth on Me, as the scripture has said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. This spake He of the Spirit, which they that believe on Him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given: because He of the Spirit, which they that believe on Him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given: because that Jesus was not yet glorified." John 7:38-39

The Spirit, the wind of God, even the very breath of the Lord, is sovereign in His almighty power. Thus did Jesus teach the inquiring Nicodemus when He said, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot see, and certainly he cannot enter, the kingdom of God." John 3:5 Then, seizing upon the mysterious, life-giving power and sovereignty of the wind, He drew from its mystery a beautiful fantasm in these words: "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh or whither it goeth; so is everyone that is born of the Spirit (the wind)." John 3:8 The wind bloweth where it listeth. It moves irresistibly toward the south and turneth in its sovereignty to blow to the north, - the wind that lifts the dust of the earth on high, that rustles the trees and shakes the forests, that fills the sails of the vessels at sea and stirs the oceans to rage in fury; the wind that warms the earth with his breath in the springtime, causing the waters to flow and bless the land, and in the autumn blows with its cold to congeal the streams of water into fields of ice. The wind, the wind, phantom symbol of the breath of God, the life-giving Holy Spirit, blows where it listeth, awakening the souls of men long dead in trespasses and sins, and moving on the face of the deep darkness and death of our spirits, causes the light that shone out of darkness to shine into our hearts, giving us the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ. The same Spirit that moved on the face of the waters in the beginning when the earth was without form and void moved on my soul when I, like the earth, was without form in my sin, when outer darkness covered the deep of my soul and I was without hope and without God in all the world. When God said, "Let there be light," there was light. The same Spirit that moved on the waters moved on me, convincing me of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment. At my behest He came in to make the living waters flow and open the fountains of the deep that I might be re-born.

Except a man be born of water and the Spirit, he cannot see, and certainly he cannot enter, the kingdom of God. The wind is the Spirit; the water is the water of life. We who are born of water and of the Spirit at our regeneration are born of the fire when our Pentecost comes. If there could be one reason above all others that would loudly proclaim the necessity of a new birth, it would be this: When the Spirit of God first moves upon us, we are literally dead in trespasses and sins. There is no more spiritual life in the unregenerate man than there is natural life on the moon. Unregenerate man. is just as devoid of the life of God as the earth was before that blessed day in which the Spirit of God moved on the face of the waters. Surely, O man, whether dead in trespasses and sins or born anew through faith in Jesus Christ, your soul should now grasp the significant truth of the words of our Saviour, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." How futile in the face of such truth as this is any form of self-reformation! However thorough that reformation may be, it leaves us without life and hopelessly dead in trespasses and sins. Well did faithful Paul bear witness to the work of the Spirit in the lives of the Ephesians when he said, "You hath He quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins: Wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience: ...But God, who is rich in mercy, for His great love wherewith He loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ... and hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus. Eph. 2:1-5

I know not how the Spirit moves,
Convicting men of sin;
Nor how, unworthy, Christ in love
Redeemed me for His own.

But the wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh or whither it goeth. So is everyone that is born of the Spirit. The Holy Spirit is the very life breath of the almighty God.

THE FREE SPIRIT

A second name for the Holy Spirit is given in Psa. 51:12. Here David speaks of the Spirit as the free Spirit. My understanding is much too small to grasp all that this name implies. "Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty," said the apostle Paul. 2 Cor. 3:17 Some translations have it, "Where the Spirit is Lord, there is freedom," - not freedom as some have supposed, to indulge in all manner of senseless manifestation like a drunkard in his intoxication, but freedom from sin, from bondage, from ignorance, from darkness, and freedom from the flesh and the lusts thereof. "If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." John 8:36. David explained the meaning of true freedom in this passage in which he speaks of the Spirit as the free Spirit. After confessing the awfulness of his sin to God and owning the solemn fact that he was both born in sin and shaped in iniquity, he cried, "Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean: wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow. Make me to hear joy and gladness; that the bones that Thou hast broken may rejoice. Hide Thy face from my sins, and blot out all mine iniquities. Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me. Cast me not away from Thy presence; and take not Thy holy Spirit from me. Restore unto me the joy of Thy salvation; and uphold me with Thy free Spirit. Then will I teach transgressors Thy ways; and sinners shall be converted unto Thee." Psa. 51:1-13 What a world of freedom comes to the heart of the believer when God's free Spirit comes to abide. He opens the gates of the prison to let the captive go free. He loosens the chains that His saints may walk unscathed in the burning, fiery furnace of affliction. He bids His ministering angels go to shut the mouths of lions. He opens the gates to the prisoners bound in death that men may walk in glory, immortality, and eternal life.

There came a day in the long ago in which our blessed Christ, feeling the bondage and restriction of His body of flesh, cried out in the anguish of His Spirit, "I have a baptism to be baptized with; and how am I straitened until it be accomplished!" Luke 12:50 Naught but a baptism of crucifixion and death to self can liberate the spirit. Death breaks the golden bowl of self and loosens the silver chord that binds the spirit to the corruptible realm in which we live that dust may be dust and the spirit be free to rejoice in God who gave it. Jesus knew full well that the day was near at hand when He would die and be raised again in glory. Full well did the Son of God know that, when His baptism of death was fully accomplished, the Holy Spirit would be free to go forth, as Noah's dove, into all the earth, convincing men of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment, entering every believing heart to create them anew and bring them into the image of God from whence they had fallen. How often we have heard the expression, "free as the wind"! What is freer than the wind? What could find more freedom to accomplish the work and will of God than God's free Spirit sent out by Jesus Christ into all the world?
I have often thought of the Spirit as the arm of the almighty God. Indeed, our Lord Jesus Christ once referred to the Holy Spirit as the finger of God, saying, "But if I with the finger of God cast out devils, no doubt the kingdom of God is come upon you." Compare Luke 11:20 with Matt. 12:27-28. He is the finger of God. He is the mighty arm of the Lord. Wherever you search in all God's word, you will discover that every work of the Lord of whatsoever sort it be is accomplished by His almighty free Spirit. By His Spirit they are created. He reneweth the face of the earth. It is the Spirit that renews the soul. It is the Spirit that quickens our mortal flesh. It is the Spirit that changes men from glory to glory until they reach that same image of Jesus Christ.

THE HOLY SPIRIT

The name Holy Spirit is the name most familiar to us and more often applied to this divine personage than any other. No other word in the English language could more acceptably define the nature of this divine person than the word holy. In scripture we learn of all manner of spirits - foul spirits, unclean spirits, lying spirits, spirits of infirmity, and many others - but He alone is the Holy Spirit. All true holiness emanates from Him. Not only is He Himself holy, but He sanctifies and makes holy every living vessel in whom He dwells.

From Funk and Wagnalls Dictionary of the English Language comes the following explanation of the word holy. I will quote it partially, but at some length that we may see the richness of purity that is implied in this one descriptive word. Holy - pertaining to holiness; morally excellent; of highest spiritual purity. Set apart for the service of God or for sacred uses; consecrated; hallowed. The synonyms of the word are: blessed, consecrated, devoted, divine, hallowed, sacred, saintly, and set apart. Sacred is applied to that which is to be regarded as inviolable on any account, and so is not restricted to divine things. Therefore in its lower applications it is less than holy. That which is sacred may be made so by institution, decree, or association; that which is holy is so by its own nature and moral perfection. God is holy; His commands are sacred. Holy may also be applied to that which is hallowed, as "the place whereon thou standest is holy ground." In such use holy is more than sacred, as if the very qualities of a spiritual or divine presence were imparted to the place or object. The antonyms are:- abominable, common, accursed, impure, polluted, secular, unconsecrated, unhallowed, unholy, unsanctified, wicked, worldly."

We are living in an hour when the understanding of true holiness seems to have fled from the face of the earth. Everywhere we look we see the appalling tendency toward the unholy and the profane. If the decadent degenerate spirit of this evil age were confined to the world only, it would not seem so significantly wicked, but this retrograde spirit is rampant everywhere, its adulteration abounding among the people who call themselves by the name of the Lord. The adulterous mixture of good and evil, right and wrong, light and darkness, holy and profane has become the abomination of our day. The ecumenical spirit is not the spirit of the Lord, but the spirit of that wicked one whose desire of desires is to adulterate all that is sacred and holy and true with all that is corrupt, profane, and false. I have no hesitation either in believing or saying that the ecumenical movement, however desirable it may appear in the eyes of natural men, is in itself the rising of that antichrist system which will head up all religions in one system with one head so that no man can buy or sell except he bears its abominable mark and pays homage to its beastly head. Furthermore, I warn all mankind, both wise and unwise, that before this century is over, an antichrist head will ascend the throne of this universal system of godless worship by which even now many thousands of Christians and possibly some of the elect are being deceived. He will exalt himself above God and above all that is worshipped, showing himself that he is God. It is certainly true that these people talk freely of signs and wonders and miracles, and speak loudly of salvation and of the baptism of the Spirit, but are not these the very things of which the faithful apostle Paul warned God's people when he said, "The mystery of iniquity (rebellion) doth already work: only he who now letteth (hindereth) will let, until he be taken out of the way. And than shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of His mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of His coming. Even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: that they all might be damned (judged) who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness." 2 Thess. 2:7-12

The Holy Spirit is separate from all that is unholy and profane, and we who are indwelt by Him must grasp the solemn fact that we are different from all men on the face of the whole earth. We are a new race and a new generation, walking temples of the Lord, a peculiar people unto God, - not peculiar in the sense of being odd or queer, but peculiar because we are a chosen people. We are the temples of the Holy Ghost who dwells in us, and our steps are ordered, not by the demands and lusts of this body of flesh or the desires of this present evil world, but of the Lord, and our conversation is in heavenly rears. The kingdom of God has begun in our hearts and the King of kings has already taken His throne. Show me a man who loves the world or craves for its worthless glory and I will show you a man who has pushed the Holy Spirit off the throne of his life and has profaned that holy kingdom which he himself once was.

Because the Holy Spirit is holy, as His name so abundantly implies, God has ordained that His presence in the life of any believer will both sanctify and make holy his innermost being. In the temple at Jerusalem there was an innermost sanctuary called the holy of holies. This holy of holies represents the spirit of man in that living temple which we are. The Holy Spirit is the innermost sanctuary of God Himself. With God all true life springs from within and not from without. It is from within that the Spirit begins His work of sanctification until all is holy and all is sanctified. In the holy of holies neither the light of the sun nor even the light of a candle ever shone. There and there alone was the shekinah, the glory light of God Himself. There in the light and presence of His glory nothing unholy or profane could live or enter, not even the priests of the outer court or of the holy place. The High Priest alone could enter there, and that but once a year and never without the blood of the sin-offering which he offered for himself and the sins of the people.

The earthly temple at Jerusalem is done away. No stone remains upon another. Never again will it be called the temple of God, for "ye are the temple of God", and "the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are". The living temple of God, made of countless living stones, is holy because we are the creation of God, as it is written: "That ye put off concerning the former conversation the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts; and be renewed in the spirit of your mind; and that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness. Eph. 4:22-24 You are the temple of God, and the Holy Spirit of God dwelleth in you. It is His indwelling presence that fashions you into God's temple, and it is because he dwells in you that you are the temple of God and the abiding place of the Lord.

For years I wondered why it was that the Levites were permitted to go into the holy of holies to carry the vessels of the Lord and set them up in a new location in the wilderness and then replace all the holy things, since no man could enter the holy of holies lest he die. But then one day I realized that the moment the cloud and pillar of fire, in which God dwelt, removed from above the tabernacle, without His presence it was no longer the temple of God and the holy of holies was not sacred. But, when the tabernacle was re-erected and the fiery pillar stood over the holy place, then it was the temple of God and nothing unsanctified could approach it. It is the presence of the Holy Spirit that makes you holy. Nothing that you can do personally has any meaning as far as holiness is concerned. It is the working of the indwelling Spirit that cleanses our way and purifies our lives, producing fruit unto holiness and the end, everlasting life.

It is infinitely necessary that every Christian understand that He who comes to abide in his heart is the Holy Spirit of God. We cannot over-emphasize or over-estimate the value of knowing that the Holy Spirit is the Spirit of holiness, and that He is not an impersonal influence, but a divine person, even God Himself, possessing all the elements of personality, having personal names, and having the ability to speak, to love, to chasten, to be grieved, to minister, to impart graces and gifts, and to change and transform the believer into Christ's image. All these truths will be enlarged upon as God permits and leads. Our purpose now is to continue to speak to those divine names which not only reveal His personality but clearly manifest His innermost nature and being.

THE SPIRIT OF HOLINESS

In Rom. 1:3-4 Paul taught that Jesus Christ was made of the seed of David according to the flesh, and declared to be the Son of God with power according to the Spirit of holiness. The apostle could as easily have said that Jesus was declared to be the Son of God according to the Holy Spirit, but the expression, the Spirit of holiness, adds a force of meaning that is not easy to explain. Nevertheless, this name, the Spirit of holiness, adds greatly to our understanding of His inherent nature. Angels are spirits (Heb. 1:7) and angels are holy (Rev. 14:10), and in this sense angels are holy spirits even as human beings might be holy men and women. But the Holy Spirit alone is the Spirit of holiness. He is the very essence of holiness, the quintessence, containing in concentrated form its most essential part. From Him comes all holiness wheresoever it may be found - in angels, in cherubim, in seraphim, or in men. All are holy because He is holy and we are indwelt by Him.

All holiness outside of Him is a pretence and a make-believe. It is substitute, deficient, and inferior, belonging in that company where self-righteousness sits clothed in her filthy rags. It falls short of the glory of God and is completely unacceptable before Him. It is found wanting, imperfect, and less than nothing. Holy men of God in ages past spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit. They moved and they spoke because of the indwelling Holy Spirit, and they themselves were holy men because the Spirit of holiness, dwelling in them, made them partakers of His holiness. Surely this is what Paul was teaching in Ephesians when he drew a sharp distinction between the deceitful lusts of the flesh and the renewed mind: "That ye put off concerning the former conversation the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts; and be renewed in the spirit of your mind; and that ye put on the new man (Christ), which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness." Eph. 4:22-24. The chastening rod of God has this one end in view: "That we might be partakers of His holiness." Heb. 12:10 You may polish a flint rock until it is an object of great beauty, but it still remains flint and it still remains rock. You may reform the "old man" until he appears to be very commendable, but he still remains the "old man". He is still possessed with the old nature. Inwardly he wishes God would go away. The "old man" must be put off and the "new man" put on. Col. 2:9-10. This is the work of the Spirit. This is righteousness and true holiness.

All healing begins deep down in the wound. However severe your wound may be, healing never begins on the surface. A scar will form momentarily to cover the wound, but the healing begins deep down at the very bottom, and, as the healing proceeds from within, all poison and unwanted substance are cast off in the process. Holiness, like healing, does not start on the surface but by the transforming work of the Spirit of holiness in the heart. The holy seed placed in the virgin womb blossomed forth as the Christ of God, and the holy seed, placed by the Spirit of holiness in the womb of the heart, brings forth the new man, even the Son of God, Jesus Christ our Lord. "I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ, liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave Himself for me." Gal. 2:20 Our fathers after the flesh "corrected us and we gave them reverence. Shall we not much rather be in subjection to the Father of spirits, and live? For they verily for a few days chastened us after their own pleasure; but He for our profit, that we might be partakers of His holiness." Heb. 12:9-10

God, even our Father in heaven, is "glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, doing wonders" (Exod. 15:11), and by His holiness He has sworn that He will not lie unto David, but his seed shall endure forever and his throne as the sun before Him. It shall be established forever as the moon and as a faithful witness in heaven. He is the Spirit of holiness. That is His name. We are made partakers of His holiness, for He has created us in righteousness and true holiness. Eph. 4:24

THE SPIRIT OF TRUTH

We do not wish to weary the reader with unnecessary repetitions, but it is our earnest hope that all may clearly see that every name given to the Holy Spirit is intended to convey some outstanding truth concerning His personality and innate nature. It should be plain, therefore, that when the name the Spirit of truth is given, we are to gather from this that just as the name the Spirit of holiness teaches that He is the spirit and essence of all holiness, so this name the Spirit of truth assures us that He is also the very spirit and essence of truth. In the revised version we have this remarkable statement: "It is the Spirit that beareth witness, because the Spirit is the truth." 1 John 5:7 R.V. The Holy Spirit does not merely tell the truth. He is the very quintessence of truth.

The Lord Jesus Christ, who was full of the Holy Spirit, assured His disciples that He also was the truth, saying, "I am the truth." John 14:6 When the Spirit of truth abides in a man, He bears witness to the truth, and I am very sure that this same Spirit of truth can detect a lie regardless of the source whence it conies. The Word of God is truth whether it be the written word, the created word, or the living word. The Bible is the written word. The creation is the created word. "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth His handiwork. Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night showeth knowledge. There is no speech or language where their voice is not heard. Their line has gone out through all the earth." That is the word of God.
as told by God and by creation. The living Word is Jesus Christ firstly, then afterward all the sons of God reflecting as in a mirror the glory of the Lord.

The Bible is truth. It is all truth. For many centuries men have attempted to prove that the holy scripture is false and pock-marked with error, while other men have striven to prove the Bible is true and the Word of God, but the greatest witness to the truth of scripture is not what men say, but the fact that the Spirit of truth is the author of the scripture. The method by which scripture was given is clearly stated in these words: "No prophecy of the scripture is of any private interpretation. For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." 2 Pet. 1:20 "David the son of Jesse said, and the man who was raised up on high, the anointed of the God of Jacob, and the sweet psalmist of Israel, said, The Spirit of the Lord spake by me, and His word was in my tongue." 2 Sam. 23:1-2 Few passages of scripture give greater affirmation to the truth of God's word than those quoted above, in which we are told how the Holy Spirit, who is the Spirit of truth, put the exact words of truth in the tongues of the holy men who wrote them. Holy men, who were made holy by the indwelling Spirit of holiness, spake the truth in its fullness because of the indwelling presence of the Spirit of truth.

It is a wonderful day for a believer when he becomes so conscious of the indwelling presence of the Spirit of truth that he need not enquire of any man concerning truth or error, because the Spirit of truth within bears witness to the truth that he may walk in confidence. When the "Word was made flesh and dwelt among us, we beheld His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth, and John bare witness to that living truth, which is Christ, saying, "This was He of whom I spake, He that cometh after me is preferred before me: for He was before me." John 1:14,15. John, being full of the Spirit of truth even from his mother's womb, knew and recognized the truth the moment he came into its presence, because the Spirit of truth bears witness to the truth. You have no need that any man teach you of truth or error if you walk in the Spirit of truth. The indwelling Spirit will bear witness to truth or be repelled by the error, because no lie is of the truth.

"Thy word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against Thee." Psa. 119:11. The Word is truth. Christ is truth. The Spirit is truth. "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul: the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple. The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart: the commandment of the Lord, is pure, enlightening the eyes. The fear of the Lord is clean, enduring forever; the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether. More to be desired are they than gold, yea, than much fine gold: sweeter also than honey and the honeycomb. Moreover by them is Thy servant warned: and in keeping of them there is great reward." Psa. 19:7-11. All these are the Word of God. Like all truth they are full of edification and eternal profit. They flow from the Spirit of truth. There is no lie in them, and by walking in them there is eternal reward.

The spirit of antichrist, wherever it is found, is known by lying wonders, deceivableness and unrighteousness. By him multitudes are being deceived because they received not the love of the truth, that is, they did not love the truth. For this reason God shall send them strong delusion that they may believe a lie, that they all may be judged who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness. Compare 2 Thess. 2:8-12.

THE SPIRIT OF PROMISE

I think it is a wonder sublime that our Lord Jesus Christ, just before leaving this world, promised us the Holy Spirit, saying, "I will not leave you comfortless; I will come to you." Final messages are usually the most important. Jesus knew it would be a dreadful shock to His disciples to suddenly learn that He was to be taken away from their midst. No words of comfort the Saviour could speak were able to dry their tears or soothe their broken hearts in spite of their efforts to be brave. "Why weepest thou?" He asked the weeping women; and the disciples, too, though men, mourned and wept in their deep distress. Mark 16: 10. Little did they know the excellent glory that would be theirs when the promised Holy Spirit came upon them. The Spirit, promised by Jesus, became the Spirit of promise when Paul said, "In whom also, after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that holy Spirit of promise." Eph. 1:13

The Spirit of promise, for that is His name, is the unalterable oath of God that we will never be left without an abiding and indwelling paraclete, a heavenly comforter, to strengthen and empower our lives, transforming us into the image of Christ by His indwelling presence. The work of the Spirit of promise in our lives is unending... and unceasing. First He comes conviciting. Then He comes converting. Then He comes empowering. Then He comes transforming. It is this same Spirit of promise who produces the gifts, the graces, the fruits, and the ministries in the people of God. It is the Spirit of promise who changes us from glory to glory until we come into that same image of Christ.

I said above that the Spirit of promise comes converting the soul, raising it from the realm of Adam's death by a new birth. It is at conversion that the Spirit Jesus promised regenerates and makes alive that which was dead in trespasses and sins and we become God's children by the wonder of the new birth. The disciples, who for three years had walked with Jesus, had not yet experienced this regenerating power because the Holy Ghost was not yet given, for Jesus was not yet glorified. John 7:39. But after the resurrection, His ascension into heaven and glorification, then the Spirit of promise was given them, not at first to baptize and fill them, but to regenerate and make them children of God by a new birth. So it came to pass that, before He was taken up to heaven, He breathed on them, and said, "Receive ye the Holy Spirit." John 20:22 The blood of Christ was applied to their hearts by faith and the Spirit came to regenerate them and give them eternal life, and they were born of God.

Many people call a halt to all spiritual experience at the moment of their conversion. Jesus did not halt here but, being assembled with them just before His ascension into heaven, He gave them anew the promise that the Spirit would come upon them to endue them with power from on high. "Behold, I send the promise of My Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high." Luke 24:49 To this command of Jesus they were faithful, for, after He was taken up into heaven, they "returned to Jerusalem from the mount called Olivet, which is from Jerusalem a Sabbath day's journey. And when they were come in, they went up into an upper room, where abode both Peter, and James, and John, and Andrew, Philip, and Thomas, Bartholomew, and Matthew, James the son of Alphaeus, and Simon Zelotes, and Judas the brother of James. These all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication, with the women, and Mary the mother of Jesus, and with His brethren." Acts 1:12-14

"Then when the actual day of Pentecost came, they were all assembled together. Suddenly there was a sound from heaven like the rushing of a violent wind, and it filled the whole house where they were seated. Before their eyes appeared tongues like flames, which separated off and settled above the head of each one of them. They were all filled with the Holy Spirit and began to speak in different languages as the Spirit gave them power to proclaim His message.

"Now there were staying in Jerusalem Jews of deep faith from every nation of the world. When they heard this sound, a crowd quickly collected and were completely bewildered because each one of them heard these men speaking in his own language. They were absolutely amazed, and said in their astonishment, 'Listen, surely all these speakers are Galileans? Then how does it happen that every single one of us can hear the particular language he has known from a child? There are Parthians, Medes and Elamites; there are men whose homes are in Mesopotamia, in Judea and Cappadocia, Pontus, Asia, Phrygia, Pamphylia, Egypt, and the parts of Africa near Cyrene, as well as visitors from Rome! There are Jews and proselytes, men from Crete and men from Arabia, yet we can all hear these men speaking of the magnificence of God in our native language.'

"Everyone was utterly amazed and did not know what to make of it. Indeed they kept saying to each other, 'What on earth can this mean?' But there were others who laughed mockingly and said, 'These fellows have drunk too much new wine!'

"Then Peter, with the eleven standing by him, raised his voice and addressed them: 'Fellow Jews, and all who are living now in Jerusalem, listen carefully to what I say while I explain to you what has happened! These men are not drunk as you suppose - it is after all only nine o'clock in the morning of this great feast day. No, this is something, which was predicted by the prophet Joel. 'And it shall be in the last days, saith God, I will pour forth My Spirit upon all flesh: And your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams. Yea, and on My servants and on My handmaidens in those days will I pour forth of My Spirit; and they shall prophesy. And I will show wonders in the heaven above, and signs on the earth beneath; blood, and fire, and vapour of smoke. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the day of the Lord come, that great and notable day: And it shall be that whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved!'
“Men of Israel, I beg you to listen to my words. Jesus of Nazareth was a man proved to you by God Himself through the works of power, the miracles and the signs, which God showed through Him here amongst you - as you very well know. This man, who was put into your power by the predetermined plan and fore-knowledge of God, you nailed up and murdered, and you used for your purpose men without the Law! But God would not allow the bitter pains of death to touch Him. He raised Him to life again - and indeed there was nothing by which death could hold such a man. When David speaks about Him, he says, 'I beheld the Lord always before my face; for He is on my right hand, that I should not be moved. Therefore my heart was glad, and my tongue rejoiced; moreover, my flesh also shall dwell in hope. Because Thou wilt not leave My soul in Hades, neither wilt Thou give Thy holy one to see corruption. Thou madest known unto me the ways of life; Thou shall make me full of gladness with Thy countenance.'

"Men and brother-Jews, I can surely speak freely to you about the patriarch David. There is no doubt that he died and was buried, and his grave is here among us to this day. But while he was alive he was a prophet. He knew that God had given him a most solemn promise that he would place one of his descendants upon his throne. He foresaw the resurrection of Christ, and it is this of which he is speaking. Christ was not deserted in death and his body was never destroyed. Christ is the man Jesus, whom God raised up - a fact of which all of us are eye-witnesses! He has been raised to the right hand of God; He has received from the Father and poured out upon us the promised Holy Spirit - that is what you now see and hear! David never ascended to heaven, but he certainly said, The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit Thou on My right hand, till I make Thine enemies the footstool of My feet.'

"Now therefore the whole nation of Israel must know beyond the shadow of a doubt that this Jesus, whom you crucified, God has declared to be both Lord and Christ.

"When they heard this, they were cut to the quick, and they cried to Peter and the other apostles, 'Men and fellow-Jews, what shall we do now?' Peter told them, 'You must repent and every one of you must be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ, so that you may have your sins forgiven and receive the gift of the Holy Spirit. For this great promise is for you and your children - yes, and for all who are far away, for as many as the Lord our God shall call to Himself!' Peter said much more than this as he gave his testimony, and implored them, saying, 'Save yourselves from this perverted generation!'

"Then those who welcomed his message were baptized, and on that day alone about three thousand souls were added to the number of the disciples. They continued steadily learning the teaching of the apostles, and joined in their fellowship, in the breaking of bread, and in prayer. Everyone felt a deep sense of awe, while many miracles and signs took place through the apostles. All the believers shared everything in common; they sold their possessions and goods and divided the proceeds among the fellowship according to individual need. Day after day they met by common consent in the Temple; they broke bread together in their homes, sharing meals with simple joy. They praised God continually and all the people respected them. Every day the Lord added to their number those who were finding salvation." Acts chapter 2 (Phillips Translation)

Pentecost and the coming of the Spirit of promise may be considered the greatest event of this present age. The crucifixion of God's Son and our Christ ended the dispensation of the law. His resurrection and ascension into heaven open the floodgates of life into an entirely new era with a completely new experience in God. The pouring out of the promised Spirit at Pentecost ushered in the blessed age when Christ would be much more than with His people, for according to His promise the Spirit of Christ would dwell in them, transforming and changing their lives from glory to glory. Power for service has in many ways been stressed to the neglect of all else, but let us remember that the promised Holy Spirit came to bring us to the fullness of sonship and our final adoption in Him.

With the coming of the Spirit of promise at Pentecost another promise was given in words so divinely inspired that they embrace all mankind without exception in one universal blessedness. It is my well-considered opinion that, should some artful philosopher write a book with a golden pen, he could not devise a promise more complete and all inclusive than that which was stated by Peter when with the unction of the promised Spirit upon his humble lips he uttered that all-inclusive promise in these words: "The promise is unto you and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." Acts 2:39

If this is not the "whosoever will" of the Spirit of promise for the baptism of the Holy Spirit, then words fail and speech falls impotent to give forth in words or phrases any promise that would include all mankind.

And has not God continued to fulfill His promise throughout this entire age of grace? Was the initial outpouring at Pentecost a wonder never to be repeated in the annals of the church? No! The promise is unto every believer - to you and your children, to all who are afar off, even to as many as the Lord our God shall call." John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence," was the promise of the Lord before He ascended into heaven. Acts 1:5

Three days He had lain in the grave. Forty days He had been seen of men after His resurrection; and there were but seven days remaining until the day of Pentecost. And, when upon that day the Spirit of promise fell upon them, they were all filled with the Holy Spirit. They were indeed baptized with the Holy Ghost. The wonder of being baptized with the Holy Spirit continued to occur throughout the apostolic days. It occurred among the people of Samaria (Acts 8:5-17), and many days later the assembled few at the household of Cornelius, the Italian centurion, were filled with the Spirit as they were at Pentecost. X — Acts chapter 10. Nineteen years later Paul taught the Ephesian Christians of the coming of the Holy Spirit, and after they were baptised in water, he laid his hands on them that they might receive the Holy Spirit; and with the laying on of his hands the Spirit fell upon them, manifesting His presence by inspiring the people to speak in many languages and by giving many the spirit of prophecy. Acts 19:1-6. He is the Spirit of promise. That is one of His names. And the unfailing promise is unto you and to your children and to all who are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call.

He is the Spirit of adoption for sonship; the Spirit of holiness for purity. Rom 1:4. He is the Spirit of judgment for conviction of sin; the Spirit of burning to purge and refine. Isa. 4:4. He is the Spirit of truth that truth may dwell in your inward parts. John 14:17; 15:26

He is the Spirit of grace that the grace of God may dwell in your heart and adorn your life with the graces His Spirit brings. Heb. 10:29. He is the Spirit of glory to transform you into God's image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord. 1 Pet. 4:14. He is the Comforter, the Paraclete and the Advocate, for such is the meaning of the words of Jesus in John 14:26. These divine titles of the Spirit and many more abound throughout the Word of God that every saint of the Lord may be instructed by the expressive names which are His and may know that in truth it has been written, "In Him we live, and move, and have our being."

It is impossible to bring the vastness of God into the realm of our human understanding. The heaven of heavens cannot contain Him, said Solomon, how much less the building! And we may well add, the heaven of heavens cannot contain Him; how much less can words describe Him! I think we will every one find a new source of glory and joy, a new hope for purity and cleansing, yea, of sonship and adoption, when we have learned by the wisdom of God that the Spirit who has come to dwell in our hearts is indeed the Spirit of God, - yes, the Spirit of Christ. Man can never change himself nor can he add a cubit to his stature, but we are changed into His image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord. He who now dwells in your heart, He who walks in you to comfort you and direct your pathway, is indeed a person, and that person is God, the Holy Spirit.

THE HOLY SPIRIT AND CONVICTION OF SIN

The vast wealth of blessing freely bestowed upon mankind by the coming of the Holy Spirit is, I freely admit, beyond the scope of my ability to portray, nor need we attempt to encompass with our limited understanding the full extent of that which our omniscient heavenly Father knows. We have written briefly of some of the mighty workings of His divine power in the lives of those who yield themselves to Him, but until we rid ourselves of the reasonings of the human mind to let the mind of Christ dwell in us, we will be unable to grasp more than the rudiments of all He is and does. "But, when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, He shall testify of Me: And ye also shall bear witness, because ye have been with Me from the beginning." John 15: 26-27

I know no words, be they many or few, that could more adequately describe the blessedness of the presence of the Holy Spirit in the world and in the believer's heart than these inspired words of Jesus by which He promised that after His departure He would send the Holy Spirit to abide with us forever. "Nevertheless I tell you the truth; It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come to you; but if I depart, I will send Him unto you." John 16:7

The physical presence of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, walking among men for thirty-three years manifesting the truth, the light, the life, and the glory of God, must have been the greatest and most blessed visitation the world had ever known. We dare not deviate from our subject now to roam at will through the delightful meadows of meditation, feasting our wondering eyes on the events of power and glory that daily filled the mighty ministry manifested to the world by that first Son of God. Should we now allow our minds to explore a ministry of such greatness that even the world itself could not contain the books needed to describe it, we could not now write of that Comforter whom Jesus promised to send that we might share His sonship. Behold what infinite importance Jesus, the Son of God, placed upon the coming of the Holy Spirit when He said, "It is expedient for you that I go away." His departure out of this world meant the coming of the Spirit, and this in His wisdom was expedient. (The word means serving to promote a desired end.) He had been with them and had worked the work of God among them, but henceforth by His Spirit He would be in them, transforming them into God's image and likeness and through them extending God's work and will in all the world as well.

"It is the spirit that quickeneth, (John 6:63), and if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His. Rom. 8:9 Only by the entrance of the Holy Spirit are men born of God, and from that new birth all who henceforth walk in the Spirit, not fulfilling the lusts of the flesh, are changed into the image of Christ from one glory to another by each successive step until we arrive at that same image. 2 Cor. 3:18. God hath both finished and manifested His first Son. That Son, Jesus Christ, is the firstborn of a vast family of sons, who are members of His body. God is now in the wonderful process of finishing and perfecting these younger sons who are members of the Christ body. The Spirit has baptized them into the body of Christ and they have all drunk of that one Holy Spirit. 1 Cor. 12:13.

As diamonds are dug from the grime and filth of a mine thence to be cut and fashioned into objects of extreme value and beauty, so now does the Holy Spirit search out from among the filth and corruption of the world those who by God's grace are predestined to share His image and likeness. Man in sin is lost. He is without God and without hope. He is a stranger and an enemy. He is blind and cannot see his way; and, worst of all, he is dead in trespasses and sins. Could a cold stone by its efforts transform its lifeless self into a man, then might a man dead in trespasses and sins transform himself into a living son of God. If the dead by some effort could arise from his tomb, then might he who is dead in sins deliver himself from death's chain to walk in newness of life; but these things cannot be. It is the Spirit that quickeneth. The Holy Spirit quickens those dead in trespasses and sins by planting the life of Christ within them. Man, to enter the kingdom of God, must be born from above. The Spirit of life - the Holy Spirit - reaching down from above, touches the dead soul with the life of God. Then and then only does the creature live. All nature teaches us this vital lesson. Five distinct kingdoms are clearly visible: the mineral kingdom, the vegetable kingdom, the animal kingdom, the human kingdom, and the kingdom of God. Each of these kingdoms is fast sealed and shut up in its own realm. By no effort of its own can the mineral enter the vegetable kingdom. By no effort of his own can man enter the animal kingdom. By no effort of Us own can the animal enter the human kingdom; and by no effort of his own can man enter the kingdom of God.

The clay that lies inert and lifeless in the garden possesses no power by which it can transform itself into a plant and enter the kingdom above it, yet how often our eyes have seen the miracle of a living seed planted in the ground, springing forth, first the blade, then the ear, and then the full corn in the ear. We have seen that seed of life from the vegetable kingdom above touching the deadness of the clay, lifting it up through its tender stem, transforming it into a living plant, a flower, a vegetable, a fruit, or an oak, depending entirely upon the kind of seed that was planted in the dead earth. We shall further affirm that it is impossible for a plant by some effort of its own to enter the animal kingdom immediately above it; yet we have seen with our eyes how both animals and men, eating that plant, do by a miracle which we call digestion lift it up into the animal kingdom and transform it into the flesh of a beast or a man. Though perhaps my thought may seem crude, am I speaking aught but truth and soberness when I say that even the flesh of beasts, eaten by man, does by the same miracle of digestion become the flesh of man? Thus does each kingdom, when touched by the life above it, leave its own realm to enter into the realm above its own. We should now plainly see how impossible it is for man by some effort of his own to enter the kingdom of God above him. How could he by any process transform himself into the likeness of God? It is impossible! Yet when the Spirit of life from God's kingdom above enters his soul, planting there that incorruptible seed of the word of God, who liveth and abideth forever, then that man is born of God. Yea, he is born into the kingdom immediately above him, which kingdom is the kingdom of God. He becomes God's child, God's son, and a full partaker of God's Spirit of life. He is born again. He is born from above.

If we have considered the matter as we ought, we will surely have noticed how all things in God's creation come from a seed whether it be of the vegetable creation, the animal creation, or whether it be the kingdom of God. An oak tree comes from an acorn, planted in the earth. Man comes from a seed, planted in the womb; and sons of God come from the incorruptible seed, planted in the heart by the Spirit of God. That is why Peter said we are born of incorruptible seed, the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever. 1 Pet. 1:23.

We speak the truth in saying that God seeks His sons from the corruption in which they are lost, without God and without hope in the world. It is the ministry of the Holy Spirit to arrest these men in their night of sin. He awakens them, brings them to repentance, gives them faith to believe God's great redemption, and then He quickens them by planting within their hearts that incorruptible seed, which liveth and abideth forever. Therefore Jesus told them, "When the Comforter is come, (the Holy Spirit), He will reprove (that is, convict and convince) the world of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment." Have we not by experience found that man, convicted of his sin and thoroughly convinced of the righteousness of Christ and His power to save and deliver from death and bondage, will soon turn his heart to God in repentance and faith to receive the life that comes pouring into his soul from above?

Let us then consider the work of the Spirit in convicting men of sin. I greatly fear that in our day men are not being convinced and convicted of sin as they ought to be; and, because they are not being convicted of sin as they ought to be, they are not being delivered from the bondage of their corruption. The sad consequence inevitably follows that before long they sink back into sin again, seeing no evil in it. But the man who has seen his deplorable state in sin even as God sees him and has repented with the repentance the Spirit gives him will never again turn back, nor will he desire to do so. My lifelong observation has convinced me that men who turn back, or backslide, are men who never thoroughly repented in the first place. We make a great mistake when in our anxiety to bring men to a decision we force a sort of premature birth, an unwholesome conversion, that is followed by a life-time of sickly, immature Christianity. The world does not need religion. The world needs conviction, repentance, conversion, and life. Men need to know that they are dead in trespasses and sins and that the wrath of God abides upon them. "But," you may ask, "what is the wrath of God?" I must reply that the wrath of God is death. "The soul that sinneth, it shall die," is the edict of the Lord. God's wrath against sin is manifested in the death of the sinner, a Christless death in which he abides throughout all the decades of his existence until Christ comes into his heart. It was this very truth that Jesus was making clear to us when He said, "He that hath the Son hath life, but he that hath not the Son hath not life; but the wrath of God (death) abideth on him," because he hath not life. Though such a one should live in the extreme fullness of earth's pleasures, yet he is dead while he lives (1 Tim. 5: 6), a stranger to Christ, and an enemy of God.

The condition of a man outside of Christ is a condition of complete and utter helplessness, and, insofar as his ability to help himself is concerned, his condition is also one of utter hopelessness. That which is dead is both helpless and hopeless. "The dead know not anything" and are powerless to avoid the corruption that sets in as the skin worms destroy the body. Our condition as sinners outside Christ is the condition of death. To the Christians at Ephesus Paul wrote, saying, "You hath He quickened (made alive) who were dead in trespasses and sins." Eph. 2:1 And Jesus also, when speaking to the Jews who contended with Him, in like manner revealed man's condition of death when He said, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, the hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God: and they that hear shall live. For as the Father hath life in Himself, so hath He given to the Son to have life in Himself." John 5: 25-26 The tenor of thought forcefully expressed throughout the whole scripture is that man in his natural state is dead. It is because of this fact and this alone that our Lord Jesus Christ Himself entered the realm of death, "because we thus judge, that if one died for all, then were all dead." 2 Cor. 5:14 What statement could be more plain or what fact more clear than that which is stated here: - because all are dead, Christ died for all! And, if Christ died for all because all were dead, then without Him and the divine life He freely bestows mankind is not only dead but helpless and hopeless as well.
As a man with his voice arouses another from sleep, so those who sleep in death shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live. Our Saviour demonstrated time and time again throughout His earthly ministry that the power to raise dead men by His word was inherent in Himself. He was, yea, rather is, both the resurrection and the life, and all who hear His voice must come forth. "Young man, arise," he said as His fingers touched the bier (Luke 7:14), and the young man arose to be returned in life to his widowed mother. "Talitha cumi; maiden, arise," was the word of power He spoke to the maiden silent in death (Mark 5:41), and at His word her heart resumed its beating, the blood its life giving flow, and all the people rejoiced at the marvelous thing they had seen. "Lazarus, come forth," He called as they rolled the stone away; and he that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with grave clothes. "Loose him and let him go," the Master spoke; and Lazarus walked in the newness and freedom of life.

"I am the resurrection!" Thus He spoke
In lovely Bethany one cloudy day
To weeping sisters; yet those living words
Healed not their wound, nor dried their tears away.
Naught did they see but death; the chasm wide
Was deep and dark and cold. They did not know Eternal life was standing by their side.

"I am the resurrection!" Yet they wept
Though Life Eternal looked into their eyes;
For resurrection came to visit earth
When Jesus left His home beyond the skies.
So Life walked down that day with human feet
To where death trembled in the grave’s dark gloom.
Life challenged death; he dropped his keys and fled,
And with Christ-life a man came from the tomb.

"I am the resurrection!" Angels smiled
That day in spring they rolled the stone away
While humans wept. They could not yet believe That conquered death could never hold his prey.
But in that grave Life stepped from out a shroud.
Life fears no shrouds nor death’s vales dark and wild.
The everlasting arms are lifting him
As tenderly as mother lifts her child.

"I am the resurrection!" Jesus walked
Beneath the trees that He himself had made,
And watched a broken-hearted woman weep
Outside a tomb where all her hopes were laid.
If He could bring a dead man back to life,
If by His word death vanished from the tomb,
Could He not bring back hopes that now are dead
And resurrect lost joys from night’s dark gloom?

"I am the resurrection!" Jesus spoke;
One word fell from the lips of endless Life,
One word, a name; but that was word enough
To banish all the darkness, fear, and strife.
Raised from the dead were Mary’s hopes and joys.
Gone were her sorrows, gone her doubts and fears.
She understood then what we now should know —
Eternal Life is walking through the years.
He is the resurrection! And today
We walk the road with Him in life anew.
The resurrection life He gave to them
Is life that now He wants to give to you.
He is that life! He gives it freely when We bid Him enter, nevermore to part.
You find it not beyond the starry skies;
You have it when you have Him in your heart.

Charles S. Price

Man has no life in himself. He is dead in trespasses and sins. But, as the Father hath life in Himself, so hath He given to the Son to have life in Himself. John 5:26. When, therefore the soul that is dead in trespasses and sins hears the voice of the Son of God, he awakens to an entirely new life as Jesus said, "I give unto them eternal life." We are mistaken in our thinking when we conclude that eternal life is called eternal merely to signify duration. Eternal life does not speak of duration but of the kind and quality of life that Jesus gives. We already have physical life, and those who possess nothing more are dead while they live. Eternal life is not the life of this world, but the life of the ages, for that is what the Greek word aionian means. Christ gives the believer His life, and His life is the life of the ages. It is the life that will fill all things forever. It is the life of God, and, because it is His life, it is as timeless and endless as Himself. Endurance, however, is only one of the qualities of the life that Jesus gives. "This is life eternal, that they might know Thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom Thou hast sent." John 17:3. Since the Saviour said, "I am the life," then we should be able to see that life in all its fullness is what He is in all His fullness. The life He gives is a different quality of life. That which man calls life God calls death. He sees us with this mist, this vapor we think is life, as dead men burying our dead, but the life He gives to those who believe is His own life, and that life is Christ Himself. "I give unto them eternal life, and they shall never perish," was the promise He made. It is certain they cannot perish. His life is imperishable because He is imperishable and He is life. "I give unto them aionian life," Jesus said, and aionian life is the life of the ages. Eternal life is not an extension of this present life. Christ is eternal life. The life, which He is, is the life He now gives to those who believe. That life is imperishable because He is imperishable. We are in error when we say, "Jesus died that I might live." The real truth is that Jesus died that He might give His life to us. He is the corn of wheat that fell into the ground and died, and, as a result of that death, His life now reappears in the millions of those who believe.

We are inclined to lightly pass over many profound statements of Holy Scripture. There is "a time to be born," the wise man said. Eccles. 3:2 Jesus in His unfolding of the mysteries of God made this remarkable declaration: "All that the Father hath given to Me shall come to Me, and him that cometh to Me I will in no wise cast out." John 6:37 He also said with equal force, "No man can come to Me, except the Father which hath sent Me draw him: and I will raise him up at the last day." John 6:44 These two definite assertions are contrary, if not completely opposite, to the negative preaching of modern evangelists, but let God be true though every man be a liar. No man comes to Christ until the Father draws him. Organize all the revival meetings you wish. Preach your heart out; persuade, exhort, cajole, warn, rebuke, and threaten, but they still will not come except and until the Father draws them. You may by persuasion gain a proselyte or a mere professor, but only the Spirit of God can make a believer. It is the Lord who adds daily to the church such as should be saved; it is not man. Acts 2:47 There is a time to be born in the Spirit just as there is a time to be born in the natural. Men come to spiritual birth when they hear the voice of the Son of God speaking to the innermost depths of their spirit; then they that hear and believe live. No man comes except the Father draws him, but all that the Father hath given to Jesus Christ will come to Him. John 6:37 Our believing on Jesus Christ is the beginning of the resurrection. Our faith in Him is actually the first step in the order of a resurrection which, when completed, will include our spirit, our soul, and even our bodies in perfection, incorruption, and immortality. First the spirit is quickened and made alive by the life of Christ. Then the mind is renewed as we become possessors of the mind of Christ. God does not put His thoughts into our minds; He gives us the mind of Christ. Finally, the body is renewed as it is written, "This corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. (The victory here mentioned is the life of Christ.) O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory." 1 Cor. 15: 53-55
As the resurrection of the dead from the grave proceeds, "every man in his own order" (band or group), 1 Cor. 15:23, so likewise the quickening of the spirits of men walking the earth, dead in trespasses and sins, comes "every man in his own order." Every man comes to Christ in his proper time - when the Holy Spirit calls him. This Jesus plainly taught when He said, "All that the Father hath given Me shall come to Me" (John 6:37), and "No man can come to Me, except the Father which hath sent Me draw him: and I will raise him up at the last day." John 6:44.

If we can lay aside the tradition of the evangelists, theologians, and sects and listen instead to the word of God, we will clearly see that it is only when Christ calls men by His Spirit that they come in repentance to God. Did Jesus Christ consult Saul of Tarsus as to whether or not he wanted to become a Christian? Did He plead with that rebellious, persecuting tyrant to change his ways and to follow Him? No! He did not! He told him in the plainest and simplest manner possible that he was a vessel chosen of God and that he was to bear the name of Christ before Jews, Gentiles, and Israelites, that he must stand before kings to testify in Christ's name, and that in doing so he would suffer great persecutions and hardships. Paul had nothing to do but obey. No wonder this murderous Christ-hater was able to say with power and assurance, "Every man in his own order." If you will search a bit, you will not look far before you find many men who were similarly called against their will and told by the Spirit of God what they must do, though at first they had no intention of doing any such thing. Moses was certainly among those unwilling ones, as was also Jeremiah and many others, both in scripture record and in history as well. When the Spirit of God speaks, dead men, though bound hand and foot with grave clothes, come forth from the darkness and hopelessness of death's deep sleep to be loosed and let go, to live and to sit together in heavenly places with Christ Jesus our Lord.

THE HOLY SPIRIT AND CONVICTION OF SIN

When the hour comes for men to be called to Christ, the first work of the Spirit is to convict them of sin. "When He the Spirit of truth is come, He will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment." With eloquent words the poet sang:

I know not how the Spirit moves,
   Convincing men of sin;
Nor how, unworthy, Christ in love
   Redeemed me for His own.
But I know whom I have believed,
   And am persuaded that He is able To keep that which I've committed Unto Him against that day.

Our hearts respond with reverence and a fervent amen to such truth as this. I frankly confess that after half a century of walking with God, I still cannot explain the miracle of conviction of sin, nor do I fully understand that heavenly wonder, the miracle of the new birth. My ignorance is yet more manifest as I behold with bewildered admiration the miracle of those things we speak of as being natural, which occur momentarily all about us. "Knowest thou how the bones do grow in the womb of her that is with child?" the Spirit questions. Eccles. 11:5 To this, with bowed head and wondering heart, I confess, "My Lord, I know not!" If we understand not the miracle of a leaf falling from a tree in autumn, how shall our little minds explain the miracle of the bones that grow in the womb of her that is with child? How much less are we able to explain the wonder of the Spirit moving in grace and power over the lifelessness of the soul of one dead in trespasses and sins, awakening the spirit with conviction of sin and granting repentance unto life eternal through Jesus Christ, our wonderful Lord! Jesus spoke of something more than a far off resurrection day when He said, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, the hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live." John 5: 25 No one was more certain of a great and final resurrection than was the Christ, who said, "I am the resurrection," and no one understood as well as He that there is a resurrection, which now is, taking place in the spirits of those who, believing, receive life through His name. As the breeze, moving gently in the tree-tops, bears in its breath the mystery of God, so is everyone who is born of the Spirit.
It is the Holy Spirit who convicts the heart of sin, rousing and awakening him to repentance and salvation. The method by which the Spirit convicts men of sin is shown here to be threefold. He will reprove or convince the world of sin, of righteousness-and of judgment: "of sin because they believe not on Me; of righteousness because I go to the Father; of judgment because the prince of this world is judged." John 16: 8-11

The great damning sin upon which the Spirit fastens His work of conviction is the sin of unbelief. "Of sin because they believe not" is the word of the Lord! Unbelief is the one great damning sin. Sin and unrighteousness of any and every kind remain to darken the soul and hold it in the vice-like grip of death wherever unbelief is found, but sins of years are washed away and blackest stains become as snow when men believe on Christ, for the Holy Ghost has said, "The blood of Jesus Christ, God's Son, cleanseth us from all sin." 1 John 1:7

If there is no belief in the blood of Christ, no spirit of repentance toward God, no faith toward Jesus Christ, then nothing is cleansed and the soul dead in trespasses and sins remains in his death and the wrath of God abides upon him - because he has not believed. We have already shown that the wrath of God is death, and, since the unbeliever is already dead in sins, thus the wrath abides upon him while he remains in his unbelief. John 3:36

When Jesus with three of His disciples descended from the mount of transfiguration, a scene of pitiful confusion met His eyes. A lunatic boy, violently possessed of a demon, had been brought to His disciples, but they could not deliver him. So they brought him to Jesus. "And when He saw him, straightway the spirit tare him; and he fell on the ground, and wallowed foaming. And He asked his father, How long is it ago since this came unto him? And he said, Of a child. And oft times it hath cast him into the fire, and into the waters, to destroy him: but if Thou canst do anything, have compassion on us, and help us. Jesus said unto him, If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth. And straightway the father of the child cried out, and said with tears, Lord, I believe; help Thou mine unbelief." Mark 9: 20-24

The question of eternal importance is this: "If thou canst believe." "Lord, now, indeed, I find Thy power and Thine alone Can change the leopard's spots, and melt the heart of stone." Rom. 10:17

"Faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the word of God." Rom. 10:17 Simply stated the meaning is this: Faith cometh by hearing the word of God. "The entrance of Thy word giveth light." It is when the Spirit whispers the promise of God into the sinner's heart that faith, born of the Holy Ghost, reaches up to grasp and lay hold on the truth and bring salvation and the life of Christ to the believing heart. How often during my life I have knelt by the side of repentant sinners only to find that, though they had confessed their sins to God, they still did not have the witness of the Spirit that the blood of Christ had cleansed their sins away. On such occasions I always opened the Bible at that bright promise in 1 John 1:9 to let them read for themselves God's wonderful assurance that "if we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." And I think I can say to the glory of God that I know of neither man nor woman who, seeing the simplicity of that straightforward promise, was unable to believe to the salvation of his soul.
He will reprove - i.e. convict and convince - the world of sin. Conviction of sin must be recognized as the first and initial work of the Holy Spirit in the unbeliever. If there is no true conviction of sin in the heart and conscience of the sinner, then there is no true conversion. Men must be convicted of the fact of sin, the fault of their sin, the folly of their sin, and the filth of sin. The fact of sin is that we have transgressed the commandment of the Lord. The fault of sin is that we have despised God's word, God's law, and God's Christ and have done ill worthy of death by our transgression. The folly of sin is that, while we continue in it, we are acting against our own reason and against the word of the Lord as revealed by His holy law, against the conviction of our own conscience and the reproof of the Holy Spirit, and in so doing are treading beneath our feet the blood of the Lord Jesus Christ, which was shed for the remission of our sins. The apostle spoke a fiery and dreadful truth when he exclaimed, "He that despised Moses law died without mercy under two or three witnesses: Of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden underfoot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace?"

Heb. 10:28-29 The words of the evangelist could not have been far wrong when he cried with eloquence, "Oh dying but immortal men, ye blood-bought hearers of the word, better for thee that Calvary had not borne its burden and that the lips of Christ had not been opened in invitation if, rejecting all, thou goest into eternal desolation, thy hands and thy feet bedabbled with the blood of the Son of God!"

The folly of remaining in sin could be attested to by ten thousand reasons, for "what shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" The filth of our sin can only be fully seen as we behold the inherent purity and glory of God. I dare not deviate from my subject now to endeavor to portray the holiness and the glory of God, but let us at least call to remembrance how, on those occasions recorded in which the Lord revealed His holiness to men, those men, though themselves among the holiest on earth, shrank always to hide themselves in dust and ashes from the blinding light of that holiness which He is. No greater man ever lifted his prophetic voice to unfold eternal mysteries than the prophet Isaiah, yet the inglorious vileness he felt as he saw himself in the revealing light which God is, is recorded for us in these inspired words: "In the year that king Uzziah died, I saw also the Lord, sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and His train filled the temple. Above it stood the seraphims: each one had six wings; with twain he covered his face, and with twain he covered his feet, and with twain he did fly. And one cried unto another, and said, Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts: the whole earth is full of His glory. And the posts of the door moved at the voice of him that cried, and the house was filled with smoke. Then said I, Woe is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips: therefore they are become great, and waxen rich."

Isa. 6:1-7 The reason sinners today are not aware of the filth of their sin is because preachers have lost sight of the glory and holiness of God. "A wonderful and horrible thing is committed in the land; the prophets prophesy falsely and the priests bear rule by their means; and My people love to have it so..." "For among My people are found wicked men; they lay wait, as he that setteth snares; they set a trap, they catch men. As a cage is full of birds, so are their houses full of deceit: therefore they are become great, and waxen rich." These words, quoted from the fifth chapter of Jeremiah, I say with extreme regret picture with vivid inspiration the dreadful condition of preachers and priests in our day. They prophesy falsely and the people love to have it so. But what will they do in the end thereof? Because the preachers have lost sight of the glory of God and have given themselves to numbering their congregations, while compassing land and sea to make new proselytes, therefore the people, Christian and unconverted alike, have lost their sense and realization of the dreadful filth of their sin. It is true that some occasionally speak of the holiness of God, but they seldom seem to have any true conviction of it and seldom do they live the thing they preach. Therefore their sermons are clouds without water and empty words preached from empty hearts.

No man will ever convince men of the filth of sin while he consents to believe that Christ was a hippy, bumming idly about the country as a rebellious, long-haired mendicant, intent on stirring up trouble. I am amazed beyond belief that an almost countless number of professed spiritual leaders have gone aimlessly along with such imbecilic absurdity, and, not content with this, have even allowed themselves to be instructed by this unclean...
rabble, who are intent on fulfilling every lust of the flesh, repenting of nothing, but gratifying every unclean and hurtful inclination. Christ, so far from being a hippy, was holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, and made higher than the heavens. Heb. 7:26 Let us both see and partake of the holiness of God; then shall our presence be a rebuke to those who live in ungodliness. The blood of Jesus Christ cleanses from all sin, and where will that cleansing be more manifest than in the purity of heart and life and conduct of those who believe? If the cleansing within fails to be manifested in the cleansing of the outward life, who can believe that Christ is in them at all?

The folly of sin is the more accentuated in the light of the indisputable fact that there is a fearful penalty for sin. Among the very first instructions given to man was God's faithful and immutable warning of the dire and inevitable result that would follow if he partook of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. "Thou shalt not eat of it, for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." And, when man in disobedience stretched out his inquisitive hand to partake of that which God had forbidden, the life of God departed from him and he stood naked, ashamed, and dead in trespasses and sins. This, O reader, is the first death, and this first death passed upon all men for that all have sinned. This whole existence, which we now erroneously call life, is, in fact, death from the cradle to the grave, and all men and women outside of Jesus Christ are dead. "You hath He quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins," said Paul, speaking to men whose spirits had been made alive through faith in Christ (Eph. 2:1), and, speaking to believers who had received the life of God in their souls, he spoke of the yet unregenerate body, saying, "If Christ be in you, the body is dead, because of sin; but the Spirit is life because of righteousness." Rom. 8:10. Thus we should clearly see that, even after we are born of the Spirit, our bodies are still dead and will remain so until the resurrection morning. But it was not of this first death only that Paul spoke of when he said, "The wages of sin is death." Rom. 6:23. The Spirit has faithfully told us of a second death into which unbelieving men shall surely go. That second death will be a period of time similar to this first death we are now experiencing, but much more terrible and severe than anything we now know - so much so that it is described in Rev. 21:8 as a lake of fire. Its only inhabitants will be the sorcerers, whoremongers, murderers, idolaters, the fearful and unbelieving, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie. The penalty of sin is very great. Not only in this present age does it curse us, but in that second death which is to come. It can only be described as the "lake of fire."

It is the work of the Holy Spirit, yea, the Spirit of holiness, to reprove the world of sin and of righteousness and of judgment, but woe, woe to the inhabitants of the earth, for the believers are lukewarm! They are neither cold nor hot. They manifest not either the holiness or the love of God. Their lives, lukewarm and nauseating, have become mingled with the world and all its ways. As Belshazzar in the dissipation of his licentious orgy mingled the vessels of the Lord with the debauchery that delighted his ungodly heart, so these men, saved and unsaved alike, mingle together, speaking in tongues, worshipping Mary, celebrating mass, converting the world, preaching that God is holy and Christ is a hippy, dancing on the altars, using pop for communion, while delighting in feasts, breakfasts, and dinners. Well did Jude describe this generation in these fearful words: "These are spots in your feasts of charity, when they feast with you, feeding themselves without fear: clouds they are without water, carried about of winds; trees whose fruit withereth, without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots; raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame; wandering stars, to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness forever." Jude 12:13 O corrupt and filthy Sodom of the twentieth century, your degenerate heart does not know that the things in which you delight will bring the wrath of God upon you! Neither do you remember the words of our Lord, who said, "As the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." Matt. 24:37

He will reprove the world of sin and of righteousness and of judgment. There is no surer way to reprove the world of sin than by a faithful demonstration of the righteousness of Jesus Christ. God the Father, the highest authority in all the universe, has now declared to angels, principalities, and men that the righteousness of His Son is sufficient to make all the world righteous, and that we, too, shall be made the righteousness of God in Him. Give audience and hear with reverence the truth He would have us believe: "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God; being justified freely by His grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus: whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation (reconciliation and satisfaction) through faith in His blood, to declare His righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God; to declare, I say, at this time His righteousness: that He might be just, and the justifier of Him which believeth in Jesus." Rom. 23-26
So complete was the righteousness of Christ that, when men by wicked hands killed Him, God raised Him from the dead, and, being raised from the dead, He ascended to the right hand of God's throne. There Stephen in spirit beheld Him when he cried, "I see the heavens opened, and the Son of man standing on the right hand of God!" Acts 7:55 Nothing so completely manifests the righteousness of Christ and the acceptance by the Father of His sacrifice and death as does His resurrection from the dead and His ascension to heaven. Therefore, Jesus said that when He, the Spirit of truth, was come, He would reprove the world of righteousness "because I go to the Father."

It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing.

CHAPTER FOUR
THE WORK OF THE HOLY SPIRIT IN REGENERATION

The book of Genesis, which begins with a man in the blessedness of the Garden of Eden, ends with a man "in a coffin in Egypt." Gen. 50:26 That book which is the Bible begins with man in the Garden of Eden, but ends with man, the temple and habitation of God, in that blest paradise, the new heaven and the new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness.

Before our eyes can see the glory of God, they must become dead to all things that only seem to be. Before our ears can hear the voice of God, they must become insensitive to every earthly voice that clamors for our attention. Before our minds can embrace the depth of that eternal wisdom which knew the end from the beginning, nay rather, planned the end from the beginning, we shall have to divest ourselves of the shallowness of human wisdom and all the limited understanding of the darkness of the carnal mind. When the wisdom of the Holy Spirit touches our understanding, we will confess before our Father in heaven that we know nothing yet as we ought to know and we will see that our natural mind has proved itself again and again to be an enemy of God. Then the Spirit will begin to unfold to our searching hearts the purposes of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will.

When the Holy Spirit reveals that God works all things after the counsel of His own will, He will also reveal that this working out of His counsel is that "we should be to the praise of His glory, who first trusted in Christ." Eph. 1:11-12 Never for one short hour during all the centuries that have come and gone since Eden has our immutable Father deviated from the eternal decree which He proclaimed when He said, "Let us make man in our image and let us give him dominion..." Gen. 1:26 Each and every step He has taken with unerring wisdom. He lowered man, His choicest creature, into the fearful vanity of the fall, that awful pit of death, darkness, blindness, and helplessness, and then revealed through His servant Paul that the dreadful vanity of man's fall was part of the divine intention, "for," said he, "the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him who hath subjected the same in hope." Rom. 8:20 "For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us. For the earnest expectation of the creature (every creature) waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God." Rom. 8:18-19

Was it not God Himself who said, "The creature was made subject to vanity by reason of Him who hath subjected the same in hope?" Yes! Most certainly it was our Lord, the almighty and wise Father who said it! And what, O Lord our Father, was the hope that lay hidden for ages and dispensations in Thy divine mind? It was the hope that the creature itself (all and every creature) should be delivered from the bondage of universal corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God. Rom. 8:20-21 God was - yes, is - in Jesus Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself. He has committed to us that same word of reconciliation principally for that kingdom age to come, but at the end of the millenial kingdom the mouth of the bride of Christ will also be filled with that same word of reconciliation for the ages to come. Then will the Spirit and the bride say, "Come, and let him that is athirst come, and whosoever will, let him come and take of the water of life freely." Rev. 22:17

You will never know the Lord or His merciful purpose so full of wisdom and understanding until He reveals Himself and His purposes to you by His Holy Spirit, and I am sure that you will receive but little revelation from Him until you repent of the blinding traditions of the elders, the denominations, and the sects, and turn to God with an open searching heart. Then will He unfold to your understanding how all things are after the counsel of His will. You will discover that no one can resist His mind or His intention. "He hath shewed strength with His arm; He hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts. He hath put down the mighty from their seats, and exalted them of low degree. He hath filled the hungry with good things; and the rich He hath sent empty away." Luke 1:51-53 He raiseth up the basest of men (Dan. 4:17) and putteth them down that all things may work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purpose.

It is the Spirit (the Holy Spirit) that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing. O child of God, longing for the understanding of the Almighty, if you will but pause to consider these three statements, a great battle will be won within you and a question of eternal importance settled in your mind. These I place before you that you may consider: (1) The carnal mind is an enemy of God. It is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be. Rom. 8:7 (2) The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, for they are spiritually discerned. 1 Cor. 2:14 (3) It is the Spirit that quickeneth;
the flesh profiteth nothing. "The words that I speak unto you, they are Spirit and they are life." John 6:63

E"2;5;5. The truth is that believing is seeing. "Whence knowest thou me?" the astonished Nathaniel inquired of the Lord. "Before that Philip called thee, when thou wast under the fig tree, I saw thee," was the gracious reply. "Master, Thou art the Son of God; Thou art the King of Israel," Nathaniel declared in triumph and awe. Jesus, answering, said, "Because I said unto thee, I saw thee under the fig tree, believest thou? Thou shall see greater things than these... hereafter ye shall see heaven open, and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man." John 1:48-51

"Thou shalt see greater things than these," the Spirit is whispering to the believer. "Thou shalt see the hidden mysteries, which in other ages were not made known to men, but are being revealed in these last days to those whom God hath chosen." Eph. 3:5. Not only will such glories be seen with the eye of the spirit, but they will in fact and in reality become part of our experience with the Lord. It is written, "Eye (the natural eye) hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him. But God hath revealed them unto us by His Spirit for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God."

Whatsoever work the Lord does He does by His Spirit. He sendeth forth His Spirit, and they are created. He reneweth the face of the earth, and whether His work is in the natural realm or in the spiritual realm, the Holy Spirit is the mighty arm and power of God that carries out the will of the Lord. From all our observation of God and from the declarations of His holy word it is easily seen that all and every work of the Spirit is done with the intention of aeonian progression. God does not finish a thing, then leave it to decay as man is inclined to do. All that He does He does with the intention of changing it from glory to glory even as by the Spirit of the Lord.

In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth, and, when He created it, He created it "not in vain", that is, not void and not without form. Isa. 45:18. There is a vast time lapse between Gen. 1:1, when the earth was created "not in vain", and Gen. 1:2 when the earth had become without form and void or vain. What caused this great catastrophe we are not directly told, but, if you will ponder a little, you will know that the earth today, though not without form or void, is suffering dreadful convulsions through man's abuse and transgression. Even now the earth and the oceans are dying and waxing old as a garment, but there is a promise of resurrection. "Nevertheless we, according to His promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." 2 Pet. 3:13 As David by the Spirit said, "Thou renewest the face of the earth." Psa. 104:30

When the earth was without form and void and darkness was upon the face of the deep, the time came for our heavenly Father to launch the second phase of His immutable purpose. He sent forth His Holy Spirit to move upon the face of the waters. "Let there be light," was the word of the Lord, and there was light - not the light of the sun, for the sun was not given his command until the fourth day, but the light that shone was that good light, even the light of God's presence. Gen. 1:4 If I may add this thought, we must conclude that all light is God's light, even the light that shines from the sun, the moon, or the stars. We call it natural light, but can we be wrong in concluding that even natural things are also from the hand of God? One of the works of the Spirit on that wonderful day of re-creation was this: "God divided the light from the darkness. And God called the light Day, and the darkness He called Night." Gen. 1:4-5 Our little minds can but dimly grasp the wonderful transformation that took place when the Spirit of God began to move on the face of the deep. The water, of course, was ice because there was neither light nor heat. That was the true ice age, of which men of science often speak. But now the Spirit of God was moving upon the deep, dividing darkness from light, dispelling the bitter cold, melting the endless snows and the timeless ice, to make the dry land appear that both vegetable and animal life could spring forth at God's command to live and thrive. Thus it is written, "Thou sendest forth Thy Spirit; they are created: and Thou renewest the face of the earth." Psa. 104:30 What a marvelous transformation was taking place in that natural creation as old things began to pass away and all things became new! Gone was the darkness, the death, the snow, the ice, and the dreadful cold, and in its stead bustling life and bubbling song filled the whole earth. "The flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land. The fig tree putteth forth her green figs, and the vines with the tender grape give a good smell," and joy and gladness are everywhere.

The earth, that was without form and void, and the gross and terrible darkness that covered it like a shroud is the Lord's symbolic picture of the condition of unregenerate man. The description given in Genesis 1:2 - the earth was without form and void and darkness was upon the face of the deep - is an apt and accurate description of the spiritual condition of a man outside of Christ, unconverted, unregenerate, and not born again. The word void conveys the meaning of emptiness, destitution, unoccupied, of no effect. What more accurate picture could be given of an unregenerate man as he lives without God or hope in the world? What value can we place on any of the things that now are if we view them without God? What value could there possibly be in a man's living at all, whether in riches or poverty, freedom or slavery, health or sickness, if the grave is to terminate all existence? There is infinite value in all things that have purpose, but, if there be no purpose either in joy or pain, better far for man if he had not been born at all. The earth was "without form" before the Spirit of God moved upon it, and darkness - gross, outer darkness - was upon the face of the deep. O man of the world, is not this a picture of your life without God? What form or shape can be given to such an emptiness as a life lived without the Lord? Darkness hangs like a pall over the soul that is dead in trespasses and sins, and, should one gain the whole world and lose his soul, it would profit him nothing at all. Moffatt in his translation of Prov. 4:18-19 has so significantly stated, "The course of bad men lies through darkness dim. They cannot see what makes them stumble; the course of good men, like a ray of dawn, shines on and on to the full light of day."

The scripture, speaking of the condition of an unregenerate man, describes him as being without God, without Christ, a stranger to God's covenants and promises, and having no hope. Eph. 2:11-12 He is said to be walking according to the course of this age, according to the prince of the power of the air (the devil), who works in all children of disobedience. He fulfills the desires of his own flesh and is by nature a child of wrath. Above all else he is dead in trespasses and sins. Eph. 2:1-3. Thus, as the earth once stood in the beginning, without form and void and with darkness upon the face of the deep, so now stands unregenerate man, whom God formed of the dust of the earth, but who through transgression fell, becoming a stranger to God, unregenerate, unconverted, and without hope in the world. But, as in the beginning the Spirit of God moved on the face of the waters and light came at the commandment of God with warmth to melt the homeless snows that ten thousand forms of life might appear upon the earth, so also it is written of men, once dead in trespasses and sins, without hope and without God in the world, that, even when we were dead in sins, God quickened us (made us alive) together with Christ and raised us up and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus. Eph. 2:5-6

Our Lord Jesus paid the full price of our redemption and our regeneration. "For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though He was rich, yet for your sakes He became poor, that ye through His poverty might be rich." 2 Cor. 8:9 So great is the redemption wrought by Christ that Paul, describing the vastness of its all-embracing, all-inclusive scope and power, wrote this marvelous proclamation to the Christians at Colosse: "For by Him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by Him and for Him." Col. 1:16 Then, proceeding from this magnificent statement concerning creation, he describes the vastness of Christ's redemption of that same creation in these powerful, all-inclusive words: "And, having made peace through the blood of His cross, by Him to reconcile all things unto Himself; by Him, I say, whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven." Col. 1:20 Centuries before Paul wrote these words by the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, Isaiah had lifted up his prophetic voice to proclaim the completeness of Christ's redemption in almost identical words: "I have sworn by Myself, the word is gone out of My mouth in righteousness, and shall not return, that unto Me every knee shall bow, every tongue shall swear... In the Lord shall all the seed of Israel be justified, and shall glory." Isa. 45:23, 25. "Even to Him shall all men come." Isa. 45:24. Paul, once more taking up the same theme in Phil. 2:9-10, thus spoke of the unlimited dimension of Christ's redemption: "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a name which is above every name, that at (in) the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." The beloved John, the last of all Bible writers, describing the redemptive scenes of coming ages, thus portrayed the marvels that unfolded before his wondering eyes: "And I beheld, and I heard the voices of many angels round about the throne and the beasts (living creatures) and the elders: and the number of them was ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands; saying with a loud voice, Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honor, and glory, and blessing. And every creature which is in heaven, and on earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb forever and ever And the four beasts said, Amen. And the four and twenty elders fell down and worshipped Him that liveth forever and ever." Rev. 5:11-14

O that I possessed the words and wisdom of angels! Then would I show the magnitude of the almighty power and the wisdom contained in those two words, but God, found in Eph. 2:4 and in many other texts. But God! But God! But God! We were dead in sins, without hope, without God, without Christ, children of wrath, without form and void, living in the outer darkness and blindness of our unregenerate souls. As for hope, we were hopeless! As for life, were lifeless! As for light, there was nothing but darkness! But God! But God, who is rich in mercy, for His great love wherewith He loved us, even when we were dead in sins, has quickened us together with Christ! By grace we are saved!

If all the books were written that should be written, I suppose the world itself could not contain the books that should be written. John 21:25. Yet, if all those books were written, their endless pages could not contain the limitless wonders God wrought in His Son, Jesus Christ, when He sent Him to raise His creation from the thralldom of death, to fashion them in His own image and likeness, to commit to them the word of reconciliation, and through them to bring the whole universe into harmony with Himself. Could we even tell the unconfined, uncircumscribed extent of such a universal reconciliation, our words would seem but idle tales to the dark and unbelieving mind of man until that blessed Holy Spirit, who proceedeth forth from the Father and the Son, moves like the breath of God on the covering darkness and the dreadful void of the soul that is dead in tresses and sins. It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh with all its slavish religion profiteth nothing. Fill your mind with as many doctrines as you wish. It profits you nothing. Celebrate mass every day of the week, if you so desire. It profits you nothing. Give all your goods to the poor, or give your body to be burned. It profits you nothing, for you are still dead and chained by the power of inbred sin. O that men of every race and every creed might know that it is the Holy Spirit alone who makes men alive! He it is who renews the face of the earth. He it is whose everlasting light shines into the outer darkness in which we have dwelt so long, even as it is written, "For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." 2 Cor. 4:6

"There was a man of the Pharisees, named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews: The same came to Jesus by night, and said unto Him, Rabbi, we know that Thou art a teacher come from God; for no man can do these miracles that Thou doest, except God be with him." John 3:1-2 That was an excellent speech, and I think Nicodemus was most sincere in every word he said, but the Lord lost no time in pointing out to this man of learning and letters, this doctor of the law, ruler and teacher of the Jews, that one basic issue that he and all men must of necessity know. This man, all his learning, his culture, and his religion notwithstanding, was just as dark, just as void, and just as dead as was the desolate earth, from which he came, before that memorable day in which it was said, "The Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters, and God said, Let there be light, and there was light." O what a resurrection, what a regeneration took place on that heaven-blessed day - a resurrection far greater than that which we see in spring when the strengthening rays of the heightening sun with his warming winds breathe upon our land, loosing all creation from the vice-like grip of ice and snow as dancing waters, glad of their freedom, chatter and flow to the ocean, flowers appear on the earth, and the gladsome notes of the song-bird is heard in all the land. The earth, which before Adam was held in the grip of death, covered with ice and snow and embraced in the arms of a darkness that could be felt, could only know life as the life-giving winds of the Spirit breathed upon it and God said, "Let there be light," and there was light. Well did Jesus know that without that life which He Himself is souls dead in trespasses and sins can never see God nor comprehend the glories of His kingdom. Not until the blessed Holy Spirit moves as the breath of God upon our lifeless spirits does life spring forth. It is when God says, "Let there be light," that the Spirit illumines our lives with the light and glory of Himself. You may wonder why it is that suddenly you seem to be awakening from your long sleep of death in sin; it is because the Holy Spirit is moving upon you, filling your heart with a desire to be saved and find rest in knowing God, your Maker. "If our gospel be hid," said Paul, "it is hid from them that are lost: in whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them... For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." 2 Cor. 4:3-4,6

Should you ask me, as Nicodemus asked Jesus, how a man can be born again, I would only answer that, as the Spirit of God moved upon that dead creation in the beginning, even so He now moves upon the soul that is dead in trespasses and sins, giving life where there was death. As a mother wakens her sleeping child, so the Spirit of God wakens those who sleep the sleep of sin and death. He plants in the heart the faith to believe the wonderful grace God manifested to us in Christ Jesus our Lord, as Paul has written: "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that (faith) not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast." Eph. 2:8-9 No man can even desire to know God or to receive of His life until the Holy Spirit begins to move upon him. When the Spirit moves, however gently, within us, conviction of sin awakens, repentance stirs within, and faith in the all-powerful blood of Christ to give complete salvation is imparted to us by the Holy Spirit, by whom we believe the promise of God. Then and there the life that raised Jesus from the dead, the Holy Spirit, raises us from our night of sin and we are born from above, regenerated, renewed in God, re-born. The old life passes away and all things become new. "It is the Spirit that quickeneth (makes alive): the flesh profiteth nothing."

To those who love God and revere His word there are few records in holy writ held in more sacred esteem than the account given by the evangelists of the announcement by the angel Gabriel to the virgin Mary concerning the birth of our Lord Jesus Christ. The mind of this pure young woman must have been staggered beyond measure by the angelic announcement that He who was to be called the Son of the Highest should come forth from her virgin womb. The mightily angel, Gabriel, who always comes with the message of the Lord, had appeared to her, "a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house and lineage of David;

The Christ-child, conceived in the literal womb of a literal woman and then separated from her by a perfectly normal birth, was God's immutable hope of the reconciliation of the world, even as it is written that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself. Can you not see, O believer, the rising crescendo of God's almighty purpose? For it is now written that Christ in you is the hope of glory, and, if I understand God's glory aright, I am convinced that God's glory is God's image and our perfect oneness with Him. "The glory which Thou gavest Me I have given them," Jesus said, "that they may be one; I in them, and Thou in Me, that they may be perfect on one." What greater glory could ever come to the redeemed than that they should be one with Him? Hear the words of poor disconsolate Job as he spoke out of the misery and corruption of his enormous affliction. "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that He shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God: Whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another." Job 19:25 "And we," said Paul, "with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord." 2 Cor. 3:18

All spiritual things are opposite to natural things. Thus it was that, when the literal Jesus was formed in the literal womb of a literal woman, He must of necessity be separated from her; but, when Christ by the Spirit is born within the spirit of man, the two are never to be separated. By His Spirit within we are changed from glory to glory until we reach the exact image and perfection of Him who is the first born among a vast family of sons of God. When a man is born of the Spirit of God, he should be brought to realize immediately that his spiritual birth is only the beginning of a lifetime of spiritual growth and experience. What a tragedy it is that the church system has left new-born souls to groove along in the kindergarten of spiritual experience, feeding on husks, starved and anemic, while they sing of some far-off day when they will die and go to heaven to roam forever through its elysian fields, shouting hallelujah and playing harps! The man who through faith in Christ has believed to the salvation of his soul is not only reborn, but re-generated and re-newed, henceforth to proceed into the image he knew before sin and the fall were ever known. Nothing can be re-generated that was not first generated. Nothing can be re-newed that was not first new; and nothing can be re-born that was not first born. Neither can that be re-plenished which was not first plenished. When a man confesses his sin to God and receives Jesus Christ into his heart, then and there he receives the life of God in himself. Christ is the life of God, as it is written: "He that hath the Son hath life, but he that hath not the Son hath not life but the wrath of God (death) abideth on him." Would God that I could help men see that death and the grave are not synonymous terms. It is possible to be in the grave and yet be alive; conversely, men all around us are walking about on the earth and enjoying pleasure, yet are as dead as a stone. All existence outside of Christ is death. She (or he) that liveth in pleasure, partaking to the full of every enjoyment of earth, is completely dead while she lives, simply because life is inseparable from Christ - in Him is life - and all existence outside of Him, no matter how pleasurable, is death. Man calls it life; He, who Himself is life, says it is death. Not only shall we justly say that those who live in pleasure are dead while they live, but we may also say with equal justice that he who liveth in religion is dead while he lives, if Christ has never become his life. For thus saith the Lord, "To what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices unto Me? saith the Lord. I am full of the burnt-offerings of rams, and the fat of fed beasts; and I delight not in the blood of bullocks, or of lambs, or of he goats. When ye come to appear before Me, who hath required this at your hand, to tread my courts! Bring no more vain oblations; incense is an abomination unto Me; the new moons and Sabbaths, the calling of assemblies, I cannot away with; it is iniquity, even the solemn meeting. Your new moons and your appointed feasts My soul hateth: they are a trouble unto Me; I am weary to bear them. And when ye spread forth your hands, I will hide mine eyes from you..." Isa. 1:11-15 It is not religion that men need. It is life; it is regeneration; it is a new birth. It is “not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to His mercy He saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost; which He shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Saviour; that being justified by His grace, we should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life.” Titus 3: 5-7

Now when a man believes on Christ, then and there the Spirit of life in Christ comes into him, and that man makes the wonderful discovery that what religion could not do Christ has done. The law of the Spirit, which is life in Christ Jesus, makes him free from that death which came as a result of sin. The whole world is full of laws. We cannot possibly avoid them. There is a law, unwritten but positive, that says that, if you jump into a fire, you will be burned; if you leap from a precipice, you will be killed; if you expose your body to the frost, you will be frozen; if your breath is cut off, you will perish. All such laws are irreversible. There is also a law that says, "If you sin, you die," and this law is called the law of sin and death. No religion on earth can alter, change, or abrogate that law. The Law of Moses only accentuates and exposes it. But there is another law that says, "He that hath the Son hath life." Therefore Paul said, "What the law (of Moses) could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh (your flesh and mine), God, sending His own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh, that the righteousness of the law (the law of Moses) might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." Rom. 8:3-4 He that believeth on the Son of God hath life. It is only when we receive His life that we understand how the law of the Spirit, life in Christ Jesus, has thoroughly freed us from the law of sin and death.

All this marvelous work of God in the believer's life is triumphantly carried out by the Holy Spirit, of whom Christ spoke, saying, "When He, the Spirit of truth, is come, He will guide you into all truth." But we must add with the utmost conviction that the work of the Spirit thus far realized within us by regeneration and cleansing from sin is only the infinitesimal beginning of a work that is designed to change us from glory to glory until we shine in His image. Our rebirth and regeneration are the childhood, the infancy, of all Christian experience. Great and marvelous is the work of the Spirit in awakening the soul that was dead in trespasses and sins. Conviction of sin is by no means a pleasant experience. "It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks." Acts 9:5 The sorrow of the world worketh death, but it is the goodness of God that gives us godly sorrow for our sin, leading us to repentance, unto life that needeth not to be repented of. Repentance, which is godly sorrow for sin, is followed by the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Spirit. The power of the cleansing blood of Christ is applied to the believing heart by the Holy Spirit. He it is who washes the soul and renews the Spirit of God within us.

At the moment this renewal, this rebirth, this regeneration of the Spirit, takes place within us, we become members of the true church, which is the body of Christ. "For by (in) one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit." 1 Cor. 12:13 This is where we become members of the true church. There is no church membership in heaven or in earth apart from this. Any other form of church membership is a bare-faced sham, an ungodly mockery of that which is true. The moment you believe, you are a member of the church of the firstborn, whose names are written in heaven. Heb. 12:23 Every effort on the part of man to have you join yourself with one of man's organizations is an effort to lead you astray from your fidelity to Christ and that divine work which the Holy Spirit accomplished when He placed you by His power in His body, which is the true church. The misguided and false shepherds desire to have you commit fornication with that bawdy mother of harlots and her prostitute daughters of many denominational names. How slyly and well do these preachers perform the work of Satan by telling their converts to join the church of their choice! There is no church in the universe except that one mystical ecclesia into which the Spirit baptized you on that wonderful day in which you believed. It is the Lord who addeth to the church daily such as should be saved. Acts 2:47 This His divine power does in that hour you believe. It should be clear, then, that wherewithal some man asks you to join the church, he is both denying that you are already in the church and asking you to doubt and deny the sacred work of the Holy Spirit, accomplished when in answer to your faith He baptized you into the mystical body of Christ, the true church and the true ecclesia. 1 Cor. 12:13. Col. 1:18.
We stated above that regeneration is only the beginning, the infancy, of a life that is entirely new. If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature. Yea, he is a new creation, an entirely new generation, a new race, a new kind of people. 2 Cor. 5:17 Peter was certainly speaking to more than natural Israel when he said, "Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of Him who hath called you out of darkness into His marvelous light." 1 Pet. 2:9 Peter, who himself was a Jew (Gal. 2:14), knew well what a vast difference Christ had made to his life. Paul also, who was a Jew of the strictest sort (Acts 21:39), knew that his meeting with Christ had made him a new man and a new creation, for he said, "What things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ. Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ, and be found in Him, not having my own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith." Phil. 3:7-9

As Adam was the beginning of the old creation and all men were fashioned in his likeness (Gen. 5:3), so now is Christ the beginning of a new creation. He is the beginning of the creation of God. Rev. 3:14 Adam was the beginning of the creation of man. Jesus Christ is the beginning of the creation of God, and those who believe on Him immediately become members of a new creation, a new race of people, even the children of God, having one blood, the blood of Christ; one Spirit, the Holy Spirit; one Lord, the God and Father of all; one faith, the faith of Christ; and one baptism, the baptism into His mystical body, which is the true church. Col. 1:18 He is the beginning of God's new creation, the firstborn from the dead. He is the firstborn of every creature and all creation. When the Holy Spirit says that Christ is the firstborn of all creation, He is emphasizing that new creation of which the believer is a member. Christ Himself was the first to rise from the dead, possessing immortality. He is the head of His body, the church, because He is the beginning, the firstborn from among the dead, for it pleased the Father that in Him should all fullness dwell.

It is the will of God that the eyes of our understanding should be enlightened, and that we might know what hope God had when He called us. He desires that we may know the rich inheritance He has in His saints, and that we may grasp the greatness of the power He manifested toward us when He raised up Jesus Christ from the dead to set Him at His own right hand, putting all things under His feet. It is God's will that we should know that He has quickened us and made us alive in Him that we might share His glory and sit with Him in heavenly places, far above every principality and power and might and dominion and every name that is named, both in this age and in the ages to come. It is God's will that we should know that this magnificent display of grace has been manifested toward us so that we who have now been made partakers of it may in the ages to come show forth the exceeding riches of His grace to all those who as yet have not partaken of it. For this, I declare, is the meaning of the words of the apostle in Eph. 2:6-7 God "hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus, that in the ages to come He might shew the exceeding riches of His grace in His kindness toward us through Christ Jesus." And, lest such grace as this should seem to be more than human understanding can comprehend, He reminds us of this one eternal and indisputable fact: it was by grace and grace alone that we ourselves were also saved. Eph. 2:8. Why, then, should we confine His power, or for one moment think that it cannot bless the inhabitants of ages yet to come?

THE WORK OF THE HOLY SPIRIT IN THE NEW CREATION

"If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature," (2 Cor. 5:17); that is to say, he is a new creation. The Holy Spirit has been sent into the world by the resurrected and glorified Christ as He promised: "If I depart, I will send Him unto you," John 16:7 Thus the Holy Spirit has come to complete in each believing heart the wonderful fullness of the redemption Jesus Christ purchased for all mankind. In our unregenerate and unconverted state we were men and women after the flesh. The only pleasure we knew was the momentary satisfaction obtained from the five physical senses of our bodies - our sight, our hearing, our smelling, our tasting, or our feeling. These, being senses of the body, appear for a moment, then vanish away like a whiff of sweet perfume or the savor of a meal, and, because they are physical senses and not spiritual, they grow dull with the passing years and finally are no more. Because the world lives to satisfy the five senses of the physical body, therefore it is written, "The world passeth away and the lusts thereof, but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." (I have explained this more fully in my book Two Realms. This extremely important message is free upon request.)
They who are in the flesh cannot please God. Rom. 8:8. The man who lives only to indulge his five senses (and that is what the world does) is sensual and from beneath, or earthly. But the kingdom of God is spiritual, from above, and heavenly; therefore, they that live their lives indulging the body can by no means please God.

Says Paul, "But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His. And if Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin; but the Spirit is life (alive) because of righteousness." Therefore, those who are in Christ have become new creations, new creatures, and citizens of an entirely new and higher realm.

Because we have become new creatures through the grace of Christ and the power of His spirit, then we should think of ourselves as a new creature, a new creation, and not as the old man we used to be. I do not believe Christians will ever advance very far in God while they continue to think after the weak and beggarly tradition that the church system has taught us. The whole thought of their philosophy revolves around the erroneous notion that through the fall the all-wise and omnipotent God has got Himself and all His creation into some sort of dire predicament from which He must now in desperation snatch as many as possible. Their crude notions make the all-wise God, who said, "Let us make man in our image," resemble a desperate man, rushing into the flames of a burning house in a frantic attempt to rescue his family trapped in the flames. Being unable to rescue them all, he is forced to be satisfied with saving a few, while abandoning the rest to the flames. Those God has rescued He is jealously guarding through their years on earth until they can be taken to a heaven of many mansions where they will walk on golden streets forevermore. As long as we allow our renewed minds to be filled with that kind of poppy-cock, our eyes will be forever closed to the eternal purposes of the all-wise God, and, because the eternal purposes of Him, who created us in Christ before the world began, are shut out from our vision, darkness will cover our path here and now, and we will fail to reach the high mountains of blessedness unto which the Holy Spirit is lifting all those who have faith in Him.

No greater tragedy can ever overtake a man than that, after he has been saved by God's grace, cleansed by the blood of Christ, and made a partaker of God's Holy Spirit, he should set his affection on things on the earth and not on things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of the Father. What a tragedy that he should forget that his old self, yea, his old life, is dead, and his true life is hidden with Christ in God to appear and become manifest as Christ becomes manifest in his believing heart! Listen, my brother, and hear, my sister! You are being taught on every hand that God's only objective in this age is to get as many souls saved as possible. This sounds reasonable to the natural mind; consequently Christians rush about in every direction like ants on an ant hill, doing this and doing that, going here and going there, praying, preaching, exhorting, sending out missionaries, giving their money, working themselves into nervous wrecks, even neglecting their families and their homes, cultivating the vineyards of others and letting their own experience remain entirely on the surface. Let me tell you with all conviction and assurance that God's plan in this age is not to convert the world. God's plan in this age is to call out a people for His name, a people who will be transformed into His image, a people who can be used in the kingdom age and in the ages to follow to restore all things to their original owner - God Himself.

Hear now what the scripture says on this most vital subject, for I think the scripture must be the final authority for all truth. In the tenth chapter of the Acts of the Apostles the record tells of some Gentiles who were saved and filled with the Holy Spirit and the subsequent amazement of the apostles in that the Spirit of the Lord was moving among these Gentile people. So great was the surprise of the apostles over the fact that the Gentiles were being converted under the ministry of Paul and Barnabas that a conference was arranged at Jerusalem to consider the matter. After much talk Peter related the story of how the Holy Spirit fell on the Italians at the house of Cornelius, giving them the Holy Spirit with the witness of speaking with tongues (languages) as they had done also at Pentecost. Paul and Barnabas also declared the mighty works that God had done among the Gentiles through them. Then James arose. James was a teacher of great wisdom and authority and seems to have been a man whose words of wisdom were always final and conclusive. The following statement is his conclusion of the matter under consideration and the irrevocable pattern and purpose of God throughout this entire dispensation of grace. His summation is given in Acts 15:13-18. "After they had held their peace, James answered, saying, Men and brethren, hearken unto me: Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for His name. And to this agree the words of the prophets; as it is written, After this (that is, after He has taken out a people for His name) I will return and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up: that the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles, upon whom My name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things. Known unto God are all His works from the beginning of the world."

This is without doubt one of the most important statements in the whole New Testament, for it shows that the plan of God for all this age from Pentecost unto the return of the Lord is simply to take out a people for His name. After this He will return that the residue of men might seek the Lord and all the Gentiles upon whom His name is called. All this work, this purpose, and this plan was and is known of God from the beginning of the ages. It cannot be changed. Its purpose is sure, and the Lord will perform it exactly as He has said. Even that scripture which men call the great commission (Mark 16: 15) bears out this very same principle. Whosoever believeth shall be saved.

I think it is time for God's people to wake up to the true and real purpose of God for this age, and to lay off this frantic attempt to convert the world. Whether our traditions receive it or whether they refuse it, the truth is that God has a plan for this age and He will never be persuaded to turn from it. He also has a definite plan for the ages to come, a time which Peter with great wisdom speaks of as the times (ages) of the restitution of all things. Acts 3: 21. These times or ages of the restitutions of all things are spoken of by the various gifted translators of the Bible in these emphatic words:

"The times of the restitution of all things." King James Version.

"When all things are put right." New Testament in Basic English.

"When all is restored." John Knox.

"Until the times of establishing all things." Revised Standard.

"Until the final recovery of all things from sin." Taylor.

These are statements of ponderous power, and to these the translation by J. B. Phillips adds weighty assurance, revealing the plan of God for this present age and for the ages which follow the return of Jesus Christ. This is his translation of Acts 3: 31: "Now you must repent and turn to God so that your sins may be wiped out, that time after time your souls may know the refreshment that comes from the presence of God. Then will He send you Jesus, your long-heralded Christ, although for the time He must remain in heaven until that universal restoration of which God spoke in ancient times through all His holy prophets." Surely a restoration of such great importance that it was heralded by all the holy prophets since the world began is worthy of our faith and our complete confidence and trust, for "ye are the children of the prophets and of the covenants which God made with our fathers, saying unto Abraham, And in thy seed shall all the kindreds of the earth be blessed." Acts 3:25

God now in this age of grace is in the process of calling out a people for His name. I am persuaded that this statement - a people for His name - is an affidavit so profound that scarcely any man has ever grasped its fathomless significance. Biblical names of persons and places almost always bear special significance and meaning. They identify persons for what they are, often revealing their character and calling. Thus, for example, Jesus means Saviour; Christ means the anointed one; Abraham means the father of many nations; and Israel means a prince with God. Such things are too great for me. They are high; I cannot attain unto them, yet I am filled with assurance that, when Jesus gives His name to the people He is calling - a people for His name - then they, like Himself, become saviours because they bear His name. Centuries ago the prophet Obadiah, dipping his pen in the ink of inspiration, wrote this thrilling prophecy: "And saviours shall come up on God hath given Me."

The kingdom of God will see a whole body of saviours, that body of innumerable members will be the body of Jesus Christ, each member bearing His name, each one bearing His likeness, Jesus Himself the oldest and first born of that vast family of sons (Rom. 8:29) that Christ might truly say, "Behold I and the children which God hath given Me."

How good is our heavenly Father that He in grace and wisdom should choose men in Christ from the foundation of the world, calling them by His Holy Spirit, each in his appointed time, cleansing them by the blood of the everlasting covenant, baptizing them with His Spirit, transforming them into His image, uniting them in one body of God's sons, putting the name of Christ on their foreheads and His Spirit in their hearts, that they in the kingdom age should stand with Him on beautiful Zion as saviours to judge all flesh (Esau) in that supernatural kingdom which is the Lord's! God is calling out a people, not to whisk them away and hide them in safety behind the jasper walls of a far off heaven, but to bear His image and extol His name both now and in that dispensation of the fullness of times in which He will gather all things into this wonderful Christ, the body of whom He is now preparing.

These things I write and these blessed hopes I set before you that your spiritual eyes might be lifted far above the dimness of tradition and the outer darkness and wearisome senility of the Babylonish church system. Rejoice, O ye ransomed that bear the name of the Lord, that first begotten Son of God, Jesus Christ, the oldest brother and the eternal head of that vast family of sons who are now coming into His likeness! "For to which of the angels did God ever say, My Son art Thou: I have this day become Thy Father; and again, I will be a Father to him, and He shall be My Son? And again, when He brings His Firstborn into the world, He says, And let all God's angels worship Him. Moreover of the angels He says, He changes His angels into winds, and His ministering servants into a flame of fire, but of His Son He says, Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever, and the scepter of Thy kingdom is a scepter of absolute justice. Thou hast loved righteousness and hated lawlessness; therefore God, Thy God, hast anointed Thee with the oil of gladness above Thy fellows. It is also of His Son that God says, Thou, O Lord, in the beginning didst lay the foundations of the earth, and the heavens are the work of Thy hands. The heavens will perish, but Thou remainest; and they will grow old like a garment, and as a mantle Thou wilt roll them up; yes, like a garment, and they will undergo change. But Thou art the same, and Thy years will never come to an end. To which of the angels has He ever said, Sit at My right hand till I make Thy foes a footstool for Thy feet? Are not all angels spirits that serve Him - whom He sends out to render service for the benefit of those who are to inherit salvation"! For this reason we ought to pay the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, for fear we should drift away from them."

In ages past God spoke in divers ways at sundry times and through all manner of people, but henceforth He will speak through a Son of God, who is heir of all things. He brightly reflects God's glory. He is the Lord of the universe and upholds all things by the word of His power. God's first perfect Son is now seated at the right hand of the Father on high. His name is Jesus. We do not yet see all the universe ruled by the sons of God, but we do see Jesus, the first Son and the Head of that vast family called the sons of God. The first Son is raised from the dead. The first Son has ascended on high. Their Son is proclaiming to the universe that, when all His brothers are ready and complete in His image, the reign of Christ will begin.

"How poor a creature is man, and yet Thou dost remember him, and a son of man, and yet Thou dost come to him! Thou hast made him for a little while lower than the angels; with glory and honor Thou hast crowned him, and hast set him over the works of Thy hands. Thou hast put everything in subjection under his feet. For this subjecting of the universe to man implies the leaving of nothing not subject to him. But we do not as yet see the universe subject to him. But we do see Him who was made for a little while lower than the angels - even Jesus - because of His suffering of death crowned with glory and honor, that by God's grace He might taste death for every man. For it was fitting that He for whom and through whom all things exist, in bringing many sons to glory (that is, to the image of Christ), should perfect by suffering the Prince Leader of their salvation. For both He who sanctifies and those whom He is sanctifying have all one Father; and for this reason He is not ashamed to speak of them as His brothers; as when He says: I will proclaim Thy name to my brothers: In the midst of the congregation I will hymn Thy praises. And again, I will be one of those whose trust reposes in God; and again, here I am, and here are the children (i.e. sons) God has given Me." Heb. 2:6-13. (Weymouth).

Therefore, holy brethren, sharers with others in a heavenly calling, fix your thoughts on Jesus, the apostle and High Priest. He was faithful as a Son over His own house; and He is now a dear Priest, appointed for the people for His name.

Let us consider now just how completely the Lord has made us new creatures in Christ, His Son, for it is not sufficient to merely express the sentiment that we are new creatures, nor to imagine that we are new creatures only in the sense that there has been some change in our manner of living since our conversion. God has done much more than to simply change our deportment. That has certainly taken place, but the change reaches far further than the mere dropping off of a few evidences of carnality noticeable to our neighbors. The person who repents of his sin and believes on Christ his Saviour is made a new creature. The moment he believes, the creature power of the Holy Spirit begins to operate in his life in a work which never ceases until he stands in that same image of Christ. Let those who have believed on Christ give ever increasing thought and concern to the marvelous fact of their being new creatures in Jesus Christ. The scriptural teaching that believers are new creatures or new creations is not merely a pleasant figure of speech; it is a divine, God-given, and living reality. It is a work of resurrection, accomplished by the Holy Spirit. In the distant ages of the past, when the earth was without form and void and darkness was upon the face of the deep, the record is clear that the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters, and from that moving of the Spirit there came light and warmth and every imaginable form of life. The earth, that beforetime was void and dark, cold and useless, now began to move in order, in light, in warmth and purpose. All these wonders wrought by the Holy Spirit in the beginning were living types of that which the self-same Holy Spirit now performs in the earth, which we are. He has moved in mighty conviction upon the void of our sinful lives. He has called for light, and the light, which Jesus Christ is has flooded our pathway and penetrated to the inner recesses of our darkened being. He has divided the waters and brought forth abundant fruit in our lives; yea, He has turned the darkness and death of our Adamic citizenship into a flourishing, fruitful garden with the tree of life in its midst and the river of life flowing from Him who sitteth upon the throne of the kingdom of God within.

It is the Spirit that quickeneth. It is the Spirit who overshadowed our being, forming the Christ-life within. In one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, and that body is the mystical body of God's sons, Jesus Himself being the oldest and firstborn of us all. To him the birthright pertaineth, for He is the firstborn of the new creation. This is the body of Christ. We are Christ's body, for, as the body (physical) is one and hath many members, and all the members of that body, being many, are one body, so also is Christ. 1 Cor. 12:12. The fullness of Christ is Jesus, the Head, together with His many brothers - sons - all immersed into one Christ by the wonder-working power of the Holy Spirit. See how gloriously He has placed His name upon us, for saith He, "As we, being many, are one body in Christ and every one members one of another, so also is Christ." Jesus, the Head, with the sons of God, the body, is the body of Christ in fullness for the kingdom age to come. Nevertheless, there will be an addition, a greater fullness by far, when at the end of the millennial kingdom the body of Christ, God's glorious sons, will be joined to the New Jerusalem bride, who will by then have made herself ready for the bridegroom. Read of her surpassing glory in Rev. 21:9-21. Wonderful beyond our understanding will be the reign of the sons of God, the body of Christ, in that one thousand year kingdom of God, but it seems to me almost unlawful to speak of the surpassing glory of that still greater age which Paul names the dispensation of the fullness of times. Eph. 1:10. Then the bridegroom and the bride will be united in one Spirit. They will become one body. Then will God's Christ, both male and female, be in one together as was Adam in the day of his creation before the woman bride was separated from him. This union of the bride and the bridegroom, the male and female, together in one is beyond comparison with that of Adam, for it is written: "The first man Adam was a living soul; the last Adam was made a quickening (life-giving) spirit... The first man is of the earth, earthy: the second man is the Lord from heaven... And as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly." 1 Cor. 15: 45, 47, 49. Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom nor can corruption inherit incorruption, but God has provided a regeneration for us - a transformation, a new creation, a new citizenship. The Holy Spirit, who raised up Jesus from the dead, is raising us up also. First, of our spirit it is written, "You hath He quickened (made alive) who were dead in trespasses and sins." Eph. 2:1 Of our bodies it is written, "This corruptible must put on incorrupt-ion, and this mortal, immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory." 1 Cor. 15:53, 54. Therefore rejoice in this living truth: "But if the Spirit of Him (the Holy Spirit) who raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken (make alive) your mortal bodies (flesh) by His Spirit that dwelleth in you." Rom. 8:11. O Hallelujah! How great is the mystery of godliness - that God was manifested in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the world, and received up into glory!

As we sit in the glory light of our anticipation of these things, knowing full well that even now, while we read, the transforming power of the Holy Spirit is at work within us, how shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation, which was spoken at first by the Lord, and is now confirmed by those who hear His voice? It was in anticipation of the wonders of God's plan, outlined by Paul in Romans, chapters 10 and 11, that he challenged God's people to the deepest possible consecration, saying in Rom. 12:1, "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God."

In these evil days, when all the world and most of the Christians are eagerly making the lusts of the flesh their plaything, it is my heart's desire and earnest prayer to God that those elect who read these truths will lay hold of them by faith. What does it mean to you, my brother, to present your body a living sacrifice to God? How easy it is for any of us to revel in the glory of these hopes that shine before our eyes, only to walk away and go about our business, our toil, and our earthly pleasures, thus neglecting them and failing to enter into the promise! If we are hearers of the word only and do not grasp the promise and make it a part of our faith and our very existence, we are deceiving ourselves; for "if any be a hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a glass: for he beholdeth himself, and goeth his way, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was." Jas. 1:23-24. Such a man is a forgetful hearer, and I see no hope that such a sluggard will ever attain to the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

The Holy Spirit, who steadfastly works the work of transformation in your life, will change you from glory to glory until you reach that same image of Christ if you earnestly give yourself to Him by pureness, by knowledge, by longsuffering, by kindness, by the Holy Ghost, by love unfeigned, by the word of truth, by the power of God, by the armor of righteousness on the right hand and on the left, by honor and dishonor, by evil report and good report: as deceivers and yet true; as unknown and yet well known; as dying, and behold we live; as chastened and not killed; as sorrowful yet always rejoicing; as poor yet making many rich; as having nothing yet possessing all things. 2 Cor. 6:6-10. "Let your moderation be known unto all men. The Lord is at hand. Be careful for nothing; but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus. Finally, my brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." Phil. 4:5-8.

If you consider with reverent honesty the vast difference that lies between the above exhortation, which produces the mind of Christ in you, and the filthy corruption viewed hour after hour in the parlors of so-called Christian homes and feasted upon by the earth-bound minds of professed believers, you will understand why some are being renewed in the image of Him who created them while others are sinking ever more deeply into the abominable morass of the carnal mind. What a tragedy it is to find professing Christians able to sing all the latest hits or name all the latest Hollywood stars, but are unable to recite the 23rd Psalm or name the books of the Bible. A man who professes a hope of sonship in Christ, while yet indulging his mind in the Sodom-like corruption displayed on television, is becoming a laughing stock before men and a fool in the eyes of God. The mind of Christ and the filth of Sodom do not walk together, for what fellowship has light with darkness? What concord hath Christ with Belial? What fellowship hath he that believeth with an infidel? 2 Cor. 6:15.

This new creature, which God has created in Christ Jesus, is a new creature because the Lord has given him a new heart. God does not change his laws to suit man's wicked heart. He changes man's wicked heart to make it in harmony with His law. One of the weakest and most insipid acts of modern government is the cowardly process of changing and relaxing good laws to suit the criminal. Good is made evil and evil is made good that the criminal may go free. Instead of putting away evil from the midst of society, evil is legalized so that where there is no law there is no crime, even though the nation is brought to ruin. God does not indulge in such insipid acts. He has a method far greater than that. He changes the heart so that the heart of the converted man loves the law of God. Yea, he so loves the law of God that he need no longer receive the command, "Thou shall love the Lord thy God with all thine heart," for his regenerated heart already overflows with love for his Lord, and such a command would be both superfluous and dishonoring to him. Therefore it is said to be done away. No longer need he be commanded to love his neighbor, because the love of Christ in his renewed heart causes him to love all mankind. Such a man need not be told, "Thou shalt not steal," because the very thought of robbing those he now loves is repulsive to his pure heart. He would freely give and give again that his neighbor might be blest, but he could take nothing from him by stealth or guile.

The prophet Ezekiel, foreseeing the days of this remarkable regeneration, prophesied, saying, "And I will give them one heart, and I will put a new spirit within you; and I will take the stony heart out of their flesh, and will give them an heart of flesh: that they may walk in my statutes, and keep mine ordinances, and do them: and they shall be My people and I shall be their God. But as for them whose heart walketh after the heart of their detestable things and their abominations, I will recompense their way upon their own heads, saith the Lord God." Ezek. 11:19-21.

The scriptures give almost endless detail concerning the heart. The Bible makes the heart to be the secret of life and strength. Its meaning includes soul, mind, and spirit, or one's entire emotional nature and understanding. It signifies the center or inner part of a thing. Therefore the Holy Spirit says, "My son, attend to My words; incline thine ear unto My sayings. Let them not depart from thine eyes; keep them in the midst of thine heart. For they are life unto those that find them, and health to all their flesh. Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life." Prov. 4:20-23. Give ear to the voice of our Saviour as He teaches that, "out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies: these are the things that defile a man." Matt. 15:19-20. Over every unregenerate heart there hangs an impenetrable veil of outer darkness that keeps men blinded to the glory of all spiritual things. Even in the reading of the scripture the veil is over their eyes, and they sit in blindness and outer darkness until the heart, being moved upon by the Holy Spirit, turns to God in repentance. Then and only then does the light shine upon them. This is what Paul was saying to the Corinthians when he wrote of unregenerate Israel that "their minds were blinded: for until this day remaineth the same veil untaken away in the reading of the Old Testament; which veil is done away in Christ. But even unto this day, when Moses is read, the veil is upon their heart. Nevertheless when it (the heart) shall turn to the Lord, the veil shall be taken away. Now the Lord is that Spirit: and where the Spirit of the Lord is (or, where the Spirit is Lord) there is liberty (freedom). But we all, with open face (unveiled face) beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord." 2 Cor. 3:14-18. The Lord does not change His law to suit the carnal heart. He changes the stony heart and puts a right spirit within to make the heart a fit habitation for the purity and holiness of the law of God. Remember, when speaking of the law, that the law of God is the very nature of God, the quintessence of His holy mind, a manifestation of His innermost character and the purity of His own heart. "O how I love Thy law!" David cried; but that was because in repentance he had prayed, "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me." Psa. 51:10.
This new creature of which the Spirit speaks, this new creation in Christ, is blest not only with a new heart but with a new mind as well. The mind which God gives to His new creation is the mind of Christ, for says Paul, "Who hath known the mind of the Lord, that he may instruct him? But we have the mind of Christ." 1 Cor. 2:16
"Therefore put off the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts; and be renewed in the spirit of your mind, and put on the new man (Jesus Christ) which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness." Eph. 4:22-24 It is evident from these inspired words that not only is the mind new, but the man himself is new. In every respect the believer who is born of the Holy Spirit is a new creature, a new man with a new heart, a new spirit, and a new mind. The creation of this new man in the image of God is one great part of the mystery, which is hid in Him from the beginning of the world. Eph. 3:9.

We will never in this age be able to understand the boundless power of the mind. It appears to be true that practically everything of good and evil in all the world comes forth from the mind. Even the natural mind, though it understands not the things of the Spirit of God, is capable of astonishing wonders. All the marvelous inventions of the world have proceeded from the mind of man, yet the natural mind receives not any of the things of God. As heaven is higher than the earth, so are God's ways higher than man's and God's thoughts higher than man's. The man who comes to Christ is renewed in the spirit of his mind so that he thinks and acts as an entirely new creature, a new man, a new creation; and, if he follows on to know the Lord, he will find that his former darkened mind has given place to the mind of Jesus Christ. Paul wrote, "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus." The mind that was in Jesus was the Father's mind. Because He was fully possessed of His Father's mind, He was able to say, "I and My Father are one." The mind that was in Christ Jesus is freely offered to every man who believes on His name that he might be one with Christ and one with the Father, sons of God in every true and perfect sense of the word. Let us never forget that in those heaven blest ages to come it will be the mind of our heavenly Father that will rule the universe. The Father has decreed that He will rule the universe by him whom He has chosen, and those sons, every one, will be possessed with the Father's mind. It is idle for us to speak of the counsels of God. God does not hold counsel with Himself or with others to decide issues as men are wont to do. God the Father has given His mind to His son, Jesus Christ, and He in turn has given that same mind to us. As the hands and the feet of a healthy body act in harmony with the head, so every member among the sons of God acts in harmony with the Head, even Jesus, because one mind dwells in them all.

Behold now how great and complete a work the Spirit has accomplished in this new creation of men. He has given them a new heart, a new spirit, a renewed mind, and a new image, the image of Him who created us. Furthermore, He has given this new creature a new citizenship. Henceforth our citizenship is in heaven, from whence we wait for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ; who shall fashion anew the body of our humiliation, that it may be conformed to the body of His glory, according to the working whereby He is able to subject all things unto Himself. Phil 3: 20, 21. (R.V.) Paul is telling us here that we who have received all these blessings will have yet one more glory added to us - a new body, glorified and immortal. Surely this man with a new heart, a new spirit, a new mind, a new body, and a new citizenship is indeed a new creation in the image of the creator Himself! "Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God." Eph. 2:19. All this does the Holy Spirit work as He works out in the believing heart the wonderful redemption of the Lord.

"Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof. Neither yield ye your members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin: but yield yourselves unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God." Rom. 6:12-13 As ye have yielded your members servants to uncleanness and to iniquity unto iniquity, so now yield your members servants to righteousness unto holiness, that, being made free from sin and having become the servants of God, you have your fruits unto holiness, and the end everlasting life. See Rom. 6:16-22

I have written but briefly concerning the wonderful new creation, which the Father is bringing into being by the power of His Holy Spirit. The ocean cannot be contained in a cup. How much less can the purpose of Him who inhabits the universe be explained by the puny words of man. Mighty oaks from acorns grow; so all things great and small come from tiny seeds, which hold within their diminutive breasts every aspect of that life which is to be. We trust the kernel of truth contained in these concluding lines will be as fertile seed, filling the soul with hope as the earth is filled with the goodness of the Lord.
Those who read these lines must certainly believe that the Almighty was completely sovereign in all His work of creation. When the omniscient Father by His omnipotent power created the universe out of nothing, He required neither help nor advice from anyone. When He said, "Let there be light", He was sovereign. When He divided the waters to make the dry land appear, He was sovereign. When the edict came forth, "Let us make man in our image and after our likeness, and let us give him dominion", He was completely sovereign in His declaration and in the wonderful work He purposed to do. If you consider with utmost care the truth I shall here relate, your entire attitude toward God and His immutable purposes will be completely transformed. You will love Him as never before as you grasp the wise and infinite purpose of this long dark night of travail and sorrow through which the world has struggled for the past six thousand years.

In the beginning God proclaimed, "Let us make man in our image and after our likeness." The general misconception among men concerning this statement has been that God made Adam out of the dust of the earth and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life and man became a living soul. That was the end of the story! Error would have us believe that Satan, in spite of the power, the omniscience, and the omnipresence of God, somehow sneaked in and laid waste the lovely plan that God had made to the extent that the eternal Father was hard pressed to salvage some minute portion of His work from the unexpected disaster that had seized upon His creation. Whether we wish to admit it or not, the above statement is in substance the kind of stupidity proclaimed by the church system, the utter absurdity of which is largely responsible for filling the world with faithless and unbelieving people.

The simple truth of the matter is this: When the omniscient, immutable, omnipresent, omnipotent, and eternal God said, "Let us make man in our image and after our likeness, and let us give him dominion", He intended to take at least six thousand years to prepare even the first fruit of mankind in His image. Unfallen Adam was one part of the plan of this creation in His image. The next step in bringing man into God's image was that man should be lowered into the realm of sin and death. This statement will be shocking to many who read, and, if I alone had proclaimed it, they might well declare it an error. Do you believe the scripture to be the word of God? Then hear by the Spirit what Paul wrote by the Spirit, for to him God revealed things hidden from ages past. Eph. 3:4-5 These inspired and thrilling words reveal the true purpose of the fall. "For the creature (creation) was made subject to vanity (futility, death, and sin), not willingly but by reason of Him (God Himself) who hath subjected the same in hope." Rom. 8:20 What then was the hope of God when He made the creature subject to this appalling vanity all about us? His purpose was that the whole creation should be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious freedom of the sons of God!

"Let us make man in our image and after our likeness," said the Lord, whose purposes stand forever. Thus the creation of Adam was the first step in making man in God's image. The fall of Adam was the second step in God's plan to make man in His image. The redemption of the fallen man is also part of God's plan to create a perfect man in His image. Therefore it is written that Christ is the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world. Rev. 13:8. It must never be imagined that innocent Adam in Eden's lovely garden was the finished perfection God designed. There were to be millenniums of temptations and trial before this perfection was complete. The fall and the knowledge of good and evil were a demanded necessity. Redemption, glorification, and eternal freedom from sin were all an absolute must for this new creation God is preparing to rule the universe in His name. "All things are of God, who hath reconciled us to Himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation..." 2 Cor. 5:18

Space forbids us to expand this truth at present, but hear in conclusion the hope God has in store when He has completed the creation of man in His image. Paul wrote to the Romans, "In my opinion whatever we may have to go through now is less than nothing compared with the magnificent future God has planned for us. The whole creation is on tiptoe to see the wonderful sight of the sons of God coming into their own. The world of creation cannot as yet see reality, not because it chooses to be blind, but because in God's purpose it has been so limited — yet it has been given hope. And the hope is that in the end the whole of created life will be rescued from the tyranny of change and decay, and have its share in that magnificent liberty which can only belong to the children of God!" Rom. 8:18-21 (Phillips)

Jesus Christ is the beginning of the creation of God. His perfection was completed two thousand years ago. He is in the image of the Father. Next in order come the younger sons of God, the completeness of the second Adam bridegroom. Our redemption draweth nigh and perfection in His image is near at hand. Following this the CHAPTE SIX
THE WORK OF THE HOLY SPIRIT IN SANCTIFICATION AND TRANSFORMATION

In our meditations concerning the Holy Spirit of God, we will find it impossible to separate the Spirit and His work from that of the Son and the Father. Man, insignificant in his pride and vanity and unable to divide or discern between his soul and spirit, would yet pretend his ability to comprehend the unspeakable wonders of the Godhead. These things are too wonderful for me. They are high; I cannot attain unto them. Therefore, with reverence and godly fear we will read of them, depending the while for all our understanding upon Him in whom dwelleth every treasure of wisdom and knowledge. Neither the wisdom of the present age nor the abounding illumination of ages to come will be sufficient to tell the full story of that which God our Father has accomplished for us in Christ Jesus, His Son. Nor will we fully understand, while yet in this realm, the wonder working power of that blessed Holy Spirit, who proceedeth from the Father to bring into being and fulfillment in our lives all the work which Christ completed for us by His death, His resurrection, and the life with which He is alive forevermore.

For many years my prayer has been that God would put His thoughts, His understanding, and His wisdom into my mind. Good as such a prayer as this may be, it is no longer the prayer that fills my heart. Paul told us of something higher far when he said, "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus." Good as it is that God would stoop to put His thoughts in the human mind, let it be known to all who partake of His grace that He purposed something greater far when He told us that, as His children, we could know the unspeakable wonder of His mind dwelling in us. Those in whom the mind of Christ is permitted to dwell will, as they yield themselves to God, discover that they are thinking in the Spirit, yea, thinking with the mind of Christ. Because a new mind is born within them, it need not be amazing that understanding like unto that of the Most High should be continually with them. The mind of the most, high God dwelleth in them. The old man is dead. The old nature is dead. Ye are dead. You are a new man with a new nature and a new mind, even the mind of Christ. Such is the holy transformation wrought in you by the power of the Holy Spirit.

The mind that dwelt in Christ Jesus during His thirty-three years in this realm of death was the Father's mind. For this reason He was able to say, "I do always those things that please the Father." How could He do otherwise when the Father's mind possessed Him? "I do only those things which I have seen of My Father," He said; and again, "I and My Father are one." Unity of mind and spirit is the greatest unity anywhere, and this unity is ours when God's own mind is dwelling in us.

In these desperately trying and tedious days in which we now walk through the deepening shadows of an age that is swiftly passing away, it will please the Father in heaven to open the eyes of His elect and chosen people to much truth hitherto but dimly seen by the children of God. As the shadows lengthen and deepen for all the inhabitants of the world, yea, and for Christians who persistently grovel in the confusion of the carnal mind, a light brighter than the sun, even the light of life, will shine into the hearts of those who separate themselves unto Him, giving them the knowledge of the glory of God from the face of Jesus Christ.

During the recent months that have been slipping away as shadows, the Holy Spirit has been filling my heart with an understanding of the bountiful completeness of the work Jesus Christ accomplished for us by His so great redemption. It is my earnest prayer that those who read these lines may be given the Spirit of wisdom and the Spirit of understanding in the knowledge of Him that their hearts may fully embrace the length and breadth and depth and height of the completeness of God's work, firstly for us, and secondly in us. If you will ask God for His understanding, you will now be able to discern the infinite difference between a man's having the thought of God in his mind and, on the other hand, having no mind of his own, but possessing the mind of Christ. Of a truth it may easily be that he who has God's thoughts in his mind today may find himself tomorrow filled with his own thoughts and in his own mind denying those things that were so real to him only hours before; but he who lets the mind of Christ dwell in him so that he has no other mind but the mind of Christ will find himself continually transformed by that renewed mind until even his physical body becomes a partaker of that renewal which Christ has provided. For this cause Paul wrote this staggering statement of truth: "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind..." Rom. 12:1-2 The indwelling mind of Christ renews not only our minds, but our spirits and our souls and, lastly, our bodies as well. Our bodies are sick because our minds are sick, corrupt, and carnal, filled with the world and almost completely identified with its corruption. It is not divine healing that we need; it is a renewed mind - a mind renewed after the image of our Creator. The mind of Christ will bring everything in us into complete subjection to God, and will overflow in life immortal, even the life that raised up Jesus from the dead. The mind of Christ, dwelling in the believer, will cast down every imagination and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ. 2 Cor. 10:5

Bear with me for a moment while I point out the one thing above all else that fills the human heart with unbelief and foils all our efforts to attain the blessing God has so freely bestowed on all who believe in Him. We are always falling short of God's blessing because we insist on asking Him to do what He has already done. When Jesus Christ shed His life-giving blood, He purchased salvation and life for all the world. He saved the world and all the people in the world. We do not receive salvation by asking the Lord to save us, for that is something He has already done. We receive salvation when believe that He did save us when He gave Himself for us. Any man who will believe the truth contained in John 3:16 will have the witness born to him that He is both saved and the possessor of eternal life. "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." The unbelieving heart may ask God ten thousand times to save him, yet go away both unregenerate and unassured, but he who believes in His heart that Christ purchased salvation for all men without exception when He died on the cross will through his faith carry off the blessing, and the very word of truth which God has spoken will be his everlasting assurance. In faith he sings,

"I'm believing and receiving as I to the river go; And its waves my heart is cleansing whiter than the driven snow."

While unbelief stands off in the shadows, begging God to do that which He has already done, simple God-given faith in the great redemption wrought by Christ for all the world fills the believing soul with the blessed assurance of sins forgiven. He who has been forgiven has discovered first hand and by personal experience that his victory came not by works of righteousness which he had done, but by the mercy and love of God and by the victory that was gained for him by that Christ of God, who assured us that, though our sins were as scarlet, they should be as white as snow, and though they were red like crimson, they should be as wool. Isa. 1:18

The same trust and the same faith that brings salvation to the believing heart is that which also brings every other blessing of redemption into the believer's life. O how often men have said to me, "I am praying that God will give me the mind of Christ." Frankly, my brother, I do not think you should pray that way. As Christ offers justification from all sin, free of charge, without money and without price, saying to all who seek, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shall be saved," even so now He says by the Holy Ghost, "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus." Consider the significance of this word let, for the Spirit says, "Let this mind be in you." While the Christian in his traditional unbelief is begging God to give him the mind of Christ, the Lord is asking him to accept it. He is saying, "Let this mind be in you." The only way I can receive a gift is to reach out my hand and take it. The only way to receive the mind of Christ is to believe that, when Christ gave me Himself, He also gave me His mind, and now, by my faith in such utter completeness, I let that mind become operative in me. Believing that the mind of Christ dwells in me, I can now attain much through prayer, as I seek to have no mind of my own, casting down every human imagination to bring every thought into obedience to the mind of Christ.

I am well aware that, since I have said these things, many carnal men with carnal minds will boldly proclaim that they have the mind of Christ; but give neither attention nor heed to them, for I say through the grace given unto me that men who walk in the glory and light of the mind that was in Christ Jesus will never be found sounding a trumpet before them. They will rather walk in humility and in the sanctifying grace of the Holy Spirit.
If any man be in Christ, he is a new creation. It is my heart's desire and earnest prayer to God, as these truths are written, that our blessed paraclete, the Holy Spirit, will "take the things of God and show them unto you." If He will but touch our understanding, we cannot fail to comprehend the heights and depths of His promise; but, if He touches us not, we must remain in the outer darkness of the natural mind, understanding not the profound statements of truth He has left us to receive.

Let us further consider the import of the message the Spirit is teaching when He says, "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creation. Old things are passed away, and, behold, all things are become new." 2 Cor. 5:17 Adam was the first man of the old creation. Jesus Christ is the first man of the new creation. Adam was the first born of the dead; Jesus Christ is the first born from the dead. Adam was the first of the dying; Christ is the first of the living. In Adam, the old creation, all die. In Christ, the new creation, all are made alive. The old creation was of the earth earthy; the new creation is from heaven. As heaven is higher than the earth, and as God's mind is higher than man's, so the new creation in Jesus Christ is higher than the old creation in Adam, and all the ways of the new are above the old. In truth the apostle wrote, "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature (creation); old things have passed away, and, behold, all things are become new. And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to Himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation." 2 Cor. 5:17-18 The man who in Christ has become a new creation discovers to his joy that all things are of God, and it is to such new creatures that the Holy Spirit commits the word of reconciliation to display how God is in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself and not counting their trespasses against them. To those who belong to the old creation all things are of the earth earthy. The scripture is very plain that in Adam, that is, in the old creation, all die; but in Christ, the new creation, all are made alive. The entire realm of the old creation is the realm of death. There is no life in it. In this realm of death, which is the old creation, the dead bury their dead, and those who carry the bier are just as dead as the corpse that lies within. Matt. 8:22 Unto those who by faith have entered into the new creation in Christ the Holy Spirit says, "You hath He quickened (made alive) who were dead in trespasses and sins." Eph. 2:1 Believers have been made alive in Christ because through faith they have received the life of God and have been transferred from the old creation of death to the new creation of life. God has made us to be "partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light: who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of His dear Son." Col. 1:12-13 Just as surely as Enoch through faith was translated from earth to heaven (Heb. 11:5), so we who have believed in Jesus Christ have been translated from the earthy realm of the old creation to the heavenly realm of the new creation. We have departed by faith from the realm of Adam in which all die, yea, all were dead, and we have been transferred, translated, and transported into the realm of Christ, where all are made alive and all live by the life of God. Because we have been translated and transferred (Weymouth) from the kingdom of darkness to the kingdom of light, from the kingdom of death to the kingdom of life, from the kingdom of Adam to the kingdom of Christ, from the kingdom where all things are of man to the kingdom where all things are of God, and from the kingdom where all is flesh to the kingdom where all is Spirit, therefore we are citizens of a new kingdom. We who were made dead in Adam are now created alive in Christ. We are His workmanship, created in Christ Jesus (Eph. 2:10). Being renewed in the spirit of our mind, we have put on the new man (Christ Jesus), which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness. Eph. 4:23-24

I pray that the truth and force of these things may grip the believing heart! There is a great gulf fixed between those who are in Christ and those who remain in Adam. Those who remain in Adam are still of the earth earthly. They continually mind the things of the earth. Their pleasure consists solely of the fleeting enjoyment derived from indulging the five physical senses of the body. Those who by faith are in Christ are of the Lord from heaven. Because they have been translated into a new realm, they have become citizens of a new realm, an heavenly country, and because they are created in Christ, they are new creatures, yea, new creations. Because with Christ these heavenly citizens have risen from the dead, they no longer seek things that are of or on the earth, but they seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God, the Father. They set their affections on things above and not on things on the earth, for they are dead to the earth and all the dead things therein, and their life is in Christ. And, when Christ, who is their life, shall appear, then shall they appear with Him in glory. The glory of God is the image of God; "but we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord." 2 Cor. 3:18 Now the Lord here means the Spirit, and where the Spirit is Lord, there is freedom. 2 Cor. 3:17. There is freedom, I say, from all things that pertain to the death and bondage of the old creation.
The old creation is one of labor, sweat, sickness, war, division, flesh, and every imaginable lust; but the new creation is one of love and peace and life, even as Jesus in His invitation to share His glory spoke, saying, "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For My yoke is easy, and My burden is light." Matt. 11:28

O child of God, have you not considered that the life of this present age is death? Why, then, do you plunge into it as though it had aught but death to offer you? I cannot see how any man who has a true understanding of his heavenly citizenship in Christ can act as though he still belonged to this present age. If the people who have been made partakers of the life of Christ would pause in holy meditation and consideration, they would soon see that they do not belong to the world system at all, neither are they citizens of it. Certainly God requires that we submit to the present authority and that we obey them that have the rule over us. He requires that a man work if he wishes to eat, but He does not require that we spend our time here in this world as though we belonged to it. The things of this present world are for our instruction only, and God's people should never forget that "here we have no continuing city, but we seek one to come, whose builder and maker is God." We are not citizens of this world. We are pilgrims passing through it, and our citizenship is in heaven. We have no citizenship in this world. Our citizenship has been transferred from the kingdom of darkness to the kingdom of light. We reject the life of this age, for the life of this age is death. Through Christ we have become partakers of the life of the ages, for that is the life that Jesus gives. "I give unto them aionian life," Jesus said. John 10:28. Aionian life is the life of the ages. As a thousand years are filled with minutes, so eternity is filled with ages, and Jesus Christ has clearly said, "I give unto them aionian life (the life of the ages), and they shall never perish." The life, which Jesus gives, is Himself, and the life, which He is, is imperishable. Those who partake of it cannot perish, for they have passed from the kingdom of death to the kingdom of life, Jesus did not die that you might live! Jesus died that He might give His life to you. Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but, if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit. He is the kernel that fell into the ground and died, and, in dying, the life, which He is, has reappeared in the millions of those who have believed. Because His life is imperishable, they who receive Him shall never perish.

As every man is made alive in his own order, so also there is an order by which a man himself is made alive. Man is spirit, soul, and body, and in that order he is made alive. When Paul said to the Ephesian Christians, "You hath He quickened (made alive) who were dead in trespasses and sins," (Eph. 2:1), he was speaking of the spirit of man. When he said to the Philippians, "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ," (Phil. 2:5), He was speaking of the renewal, the making alive, or the resurrection of the mind, which seems to me to be closely related to the soul. And, when he said to the Romans, "If the Spirit of Him who raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken (make alive) your mortal bodies," (Rom. 8:11), he was speaking of the day when the body as well as the spirit and the mind would be a partaker of that eternal, imperishable life which Jesus is and which He gives to all who receive Him. In this connection the apostle wrote, saying, "If Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin; but the Spirit is alive because of righteousness." Rom. 8:10 That is clear, indeed, but if we turn the sentence around, it is even clearer: If Christ be in you, the Spirit is alive because of righteousness (Christ's), but the body is (still) dead because of sin." The sentence, however, does not end there. He continues, "But, if the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken (make alive) your mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in you."

The making alive of the mortal body will have to wait until God's moment has come for that grand experience. It is plainly spoken that this corruptible (body) must put on incorruption, and this mortal (body) must put on immortality; then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, "Death is swallowed up in victory." Then shall heaven and earth ring with the triumphant chorus, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory." Did not the prophets, the apostles, and Jesus Christ, our Lord, herald the glad morning when all who are in the graves shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and come forth?" John 5:28 "Behold, I shew you a mystery," said Paul; "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." 1 Cor. 15:51-52 And when he instructed the Christians at Thessalonica, he added an entirely new thought to the resurrection, showing beyond question that, when God's moment comes to make the body immortal, there will be no difference between those mortal bodies that lie dead in the grave and those mortal
The life of a believer should be one of constant and continual change from the moment of his conversion to the moment he stands transfigured in the image of Christ in the presence of the Father. That continual change is accomplished only as we, "with open (unveiled) face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into that same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord." 2 Cor. 3:18 It is an enormous tragedy that through the ages God's dear people have been taught to attribute every pleasant and pleasing thing to God and every hard and difficult thing to the working of Satan. The real and oft times hidden truth is that the opposite view is correct. If we would heed the voice of the Spirit as He speaks, we would see the mysterious working of the great Author and Finisher of our faith, both molding our lives and fashioning our faith of Moses in Egypt fill the Israelites with abounding faith and courage to believe God in every impossible circumstance? I tell you, nay! Instead we find them whining and whimpering, complaining, and threatening to destroy us forever. "My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations; knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience. But let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing." James 1:2-4 Surely, if no other instruction was given in the Bible but this one verse, we would have a sound foundation upon which to fasten our firm understanding that it is through fiery trials and the floods of tribulation that the Holy Spirit builds faith and patience into the believer's heart.

We are always inclined to imagine that, could we see miracles and mighty acts of God's power on every hand, our faith would by this be greatly increased. Nonsense, my brother! It is never so. Faith comes by hearing and patiently understanding the work of grace our Lord is performing. Did the mighty workings of God by the hand of Moses in Egypt fill the Israelites with abounding faith and courage to believe God in every impossible circumstance? I tell you, nay! Instead we find them whining and whimpering, complaining, and threatening to turn back into Egypt every time they were faced with difficulty. No, my brother and my sister! We do not come to know God's ways by seeing, by feasting our carnal eyes on signs and wonders and continual miracles. We reach the heights and depths, the length and breadth of Christian perfection and experience by the trial of our faith.

Does history ever record greater signs and wonders than those that followed the ministry of the apostle Peter, who saw the sick healed, the dead raised to life, the wicked fall dead at his feet, and the afflicted rise to walk in newness of life as his shadow fell upon them in the street? Acts 5:15 No doubt he gave continual glory to God for all those remarkable displays of God's power, yet he advocates none of them as any help whatever to spiritual growth in Christ. Hearken now to the words of wisdom flowing like a river from his inspired mind as he gives praise for the things that have glorified God and for those sufferings that are bringing man to the image of Christ. Thus for our learning he wrote: "If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God; if any man minister, let him do it as of the ability, which God giveth: that God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ, to whom be praise and dominion forever and ever. Amen. Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you: but rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when His glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy." 1 Pet. 4:11-13 I have pointed out above that the glory of God is the image of god. We reach the glory of God when we reach the image of God. We are changed by His Spirit, the Holy Spirit, from glory to glory, or from one glory to another, until we reach that same image. With this truth in mind, then, notice especially what Peter is saying in his fervent exhortation, "Rejoice inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings, that, when His glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad..." The Holy Spirit is telling us that our suffering with Christ is producing the very image of God in us. And is He not also telling us that, when His glory is revealed, we will be glad and rejoice as we see that the fiery trial that was to try us was not a conflagration designed by the devil to destroy us, but a furnace of seven-fold heat in which the dross was separated from the gold and the tin separated from the silver? It was a heat that burned off the bands and bondages of the old creation, leaving us to walk in freedom in the midst of the fire with one like the Son of God and bringing us forth at last as sons of God with no smell of fire upon our purified beings. What a day of rejoicing it was for Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego as they walked forth from the fiery trial more in the image of Christ than they had ever been, rejoicing not that they had overcome the fire, but that the fire had over come everything earthly that remained.

bodies that stand dead on the earth, "For," said he, "the Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord." 1 Thess. 4:16-17
Behold the truth that lies hidden here! Nebuchadnezzar, so full of rage and fury (verse 10) that his very visage was changed (verse 19), designed to utterly destroy these three men from the face of the earth. "Therefore, because the king's commandment was urgent and the furnace exceeding hot, the flame of fire slew those men that took up Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, and these three men fell down bound into the midst of the fiery furnace." Three men bound fell into the fire, but three men in the image of Christ came forth in liberty. Where the Spirit is Lord there is freedom, and he whom the Son sets free is free indeed. Therefore, "if ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye; for the Spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you; on their part He is evil spoken of, but on your part He is glorified." 1 Pet. 4:14 "If any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God on this behalf. For the time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God: and if it first begin at us, what shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God? ... Wherefore let them that suffer according to the will of God commit the keeping of their souls to Him in well doing, as unto a faithful Creator." 1 Pet. 4:16-19 I know of no secret more precious to the heart of a child of God or more fraught with such priceless value as an understanding that suffering is designed, not of Satan, but of God, to bring us into the image of Christ. In the October, 1970, edition of The Page (available upon request under the title From Death to Life), I endeavored to show from the scripture that this existence, which we call life, is, in fact, death. I am now most firmly convinced that it is impossible for us to understand the great redemption accomplished by Jesus Christ until we are able to see that all men in Adam are dead both spiritually and physically. All men in Adam are made dead. All men in Christ are made alive. The only life in earth, in heaven, or in the universe is the life of God. "As the Father hath life in Himself, so hath He given to the Son to have life in Himself." All existence outside of Him is death. It is not correct to affirm, as many do, that the moment we are born, we begin to die. The real truth is that we are born dead and continue to exist in death until Christ, who is the life, shines into our hearts, giving us that eternal life which He Himself is. This is the true God and eternal life.

Does the scripture say in vain, "She that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth?" Was Paul speaking inadvisedly when he said, "You hath he quickened (made alive) who were dead in trespasses and sins?" Was he uninformed when he said, "If Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin, but the Spirit is alive because of righteousness?" What was it that made Paul cry out in anguish, "Who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" More clearly, "Who shall deliver me from this dead body?" Was Jesus speaking only in metaphor when He said, "Let the dead bury their dead?" Did Paul say in jest, "Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light?" Eph. 5:14 Death stalks in every corner we look, and the grave with its gaping mouth is naught but the final phase of the death that has gripped us all our years.

It is of great importance that we see how Jesus Christ Himself entered this valley of the shadow of death on our behalf. He became obedient unto death (Phil. 2:8), and walked its dismal valley for thirty-three years, finally ending it on the cross and passing again into life. As He knelt in the garden of Gethsemane and prayed with strong crying and tears unto Him that was able to save Him from death (Heb. 5:7), His prayer was not that He might be saved from the death of the cross, but that He might be saved from the whole realm of death into which He entered for us. His dread was not that He would die on the cross, for He endured the cross with joy; but the terror that beset Him was the awful possibility that in some way He might miss the cross and so remain in this dreadful realm of death and outer darkness. Thank God, His prayer was heard in that He feared, and by the cross His death was completed and by it He was delivered out of the realm into which He had willingly entered.

Surely now we can plainly see why it was so necessary for Jesus to come into this realm of death, for all nature teaches us that, except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit. When a kernel of wheat dies, its life is released into the body of the plant. Therefore Jesus died and, in dying, His life was released that all who believe might freely partake of it and all might live by Him. "For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of His Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by His life." Rom. 5:10 How good was God our Father to give His Son to die, and how full of grace our Lord and Saviour that He who thought it not robbery to be equal with God became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross! But He, being righteous before God, could not be forever holden of death, neither was His soul left in hell (the grave), nor did He see corruption; but, after He had released His eternal life for all, the Spirit of God raised Him up from the dead and highly exalted Him, giving Him a name which is above every name that in the name of Jesus every knee should bow and every tongue should confess that He is Lord to the glory of God. Phil. 2:9-11

He died that He might give His life to all who believe. And now it came to pass even as He proclaimed it on that last day of the feast, "If any man thirst, let him come unto Me, and drink. He that believeth on Me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. This spake He of the Spirit, which they that believe on Him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given; because that Jesus was not yet glorified." John 7:37-39. But now the Son of God is glorified. He only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach (1 Tim. 6:16), but because He lives, we also live by Him, and the moment is wonderfully near at hand when this corruptible shall also put on incorruption and this mortal, immortality. Then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written - death is swallowed up in victory? O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? Thanks be unto God, who always causeth us to triumph in Christ Jesus, our Lord! "For He must reign, till He hath put all enemies under His feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death... And when all things shall be subdued unto Him, then shall the Son also Himself be subject unto Him (the Father) that put all things under Him (the Son), that God may be all in all." 1 Cor. 15:25-28

The life of Jesus Christ is flowing as a river from out the throne of God. "If any man thirst," saith Christ, "let him come unto Me and drink." Because by His death eternal life was released to all, therefore the tree of life shall stand in the midst of the street of the new Jerusalem on both sides of the river of life, and the leaves of the tree are for the healing of the nations in that blest dispensation of the fullness of times. And there shall be no more curse, no more death, no more pain, no more sorrow, and no more crying, because the former things, which belonged to the realm of death, are all passed away.

While we yet tread this dismal valley of the shadow of death, both good and bad are being used by the Holy Spirit to sanctify us unto God and set us apart unto Him. These light afflictions, which are but for a moment, are working for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen; for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal. "For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us. For the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God." Rom. 8:18-19

We know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purpose, but lest we should wonder what purpose is being served, mark with care the unerring course of events that leads us step by step until we reach that glory of God which is, indeed, the very image of Christ. For "whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the firstborn among many brethren. Moreover, whom He did predestinate, them He also justified: and whom He glorified," Rom. 8:29-30. What a blessed chain of events the Spirit numbers here! Surely the truth contained in this eighth chapter of Romans must be the hub from which the purposes of the ages find their source! Therefore, if God be for us, who can be against us? He who spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him freely give us all things?

All this work of sanctification and transformation is being continually wrought in us by the power of the Holy Spirit. He it is who fastens these truths in our hearts as burning and shining lights to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God from the face of Jesus Christ. "And we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord." 2 Cor. 3:18. As we bring these thoughts of sanctification and transformation to a conclusion, we earnestly beseech the Holy Spirit to forcefully fill our minds with the eternal hope that lies hidden in the heart of God — a hope which He reveals only to those who are being called according to His purpose. If we fail to grasp the divine purpose that inspires the Spirit's transforming work within us, then we shall certainly fail to lay hold of the promise He now sets before us. If we understand the goal our heavenly Father has in mind as He calls men to his heavenly citizenship, we will fervently lay hold of the hope that is set before us; but, if we understand it not nor see any end purpose of our travail, then shall our hands hang heavy by our sides. Where there is no vision, the people perish; but, where there is a goal in view, every flagging spirit is revived, the feeble knees are strengthened, and the hands that hang down are lifted up. Even of our blessed Lord it is written, "Who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God. For consider Him that endured such contradiction of sinners against Himself, lest ye be weary and faint in your minds." Heb. 12:2-3

Once our vision truly beholds the joy that is set before us, we will be neither hindered nor bothered by the pains and hardships of the way. We will become like Moses, who, having respect to the reward, "refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter; choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt: for he had respect unto the recompense of the reward." Heb. 11:24-26

And what is the recompense, which is our reward? What is God's inheritance in His saints? Why is He preparing a body of sons through such rigorous discipline, such fiery trial, and with such divers kinds of temptations? Why does the Holy Spirit change the believer from glory to glory, giving him a new life, a new name, a new nature, and a new citizenship to make him a fellow citizen with saints and the household of God? Eph. 2:19 No forceful sentence that I could construct could possibly answer these questions with the grandeur of that first mighty fiat that came forth from the mouth of the Lord: "Let us make man in our image and after our likeness, and let us give him dominion." In this immutable proclamation the purpose of God is heralded forth for the countless ages that will fill the bosom of eternity.

For six laborious days mankind has struggled beneath the ponderous weight of his own cross. His work is never ended; his wars never cease. The nightmare of his ills, his sickness, and his disease crushes him as a worm beneath the wheel, and in the end of his days death mocks his travail and the grave opens wide her insatiable maw to receive his rotting frame. The conclusion of the matter is not unlike the story of the two beggarly medicants who stood on the street of New York City, watching the elaborate funeral procession of a multi-millionaire. "How much did he leave?" asked the one. "Everything," replied the other. What profit is there of all man's labor under the sun?

We are nearing the end of the six days of man's labor. Every day the travail and sorrow grows deeper and more oppressive. Because men and rulers do not want to retain God in their knowledge, He has given them a reprobate mind to do the things that are not convenient. The solution to the problems facing the world today is actually very simple, but because the nations have turned their backs on God, He has given them confused and reprobate minds that muddle along in the darkness, patching up this and that, putting iodine on the pimple, but failing to heed the malady that causes the dreadful rash. The path of bad men leads through darkness dim. They do not know what makes them stumble. The path of good men is as a ray of dawn that shines on and on till the full light of day.

In the midst of all the confusion and turmoil of the hour the Spirit of God is preparing the mighty army of God's chosen sons to take the kingdom in the seventh day. "Six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work; but the seventh is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God. In it thou shalt not do any work." Man's six days of labor are almost over; the seventh day is at hand. In it Christ shall reign in righteousness and there will be no more curse, neither sorrow nor crying; neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things have passed away.

"In the days of these kings (earthly rulers) shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." Dan. 2:44 "And I beheld till the thrones were cast down, and the Ancient of days did sit, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of His head like pure wool: His throne was like the fiery flame, and His wheels as burning fire." Dan. 7:9 "But the saints of the most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom forever, even for ever and ever." Dan. 7:18 This is God's hope for the ages to come. This is the joy that is set before us, and it is for this glory that the Holy Spirit is sanctifying and changing us into the image of Jesus Christ. Thus all the world and eventually the universe will know the delectation and aionian joy that will be theirs when He reigns of whom it is written, "Of His kingdom there shall be no end."
CHAPTER SEVEN
THE ABIDING PRESENCE

"The course of bad men leads through darkness dim; they cannot see what makes them stumble. The course of good men, like a ray of dawn, shines on and on to the full light of day." Prov. 4:18, 19 (Moffatt) The burning truth that lies hidden in these words of inspiration is borne home to our hearts with ever increasing power as we see the lengthening shadows falling about us as sentinels, heralding the end of the age. It is not without purpose that the Holy Spirit has been directing our thoughts and bending our inmost nature toward a deep and abiding relationship with Jesus Christ, our Lord - a kinship in Him none but the elect in any age can know. All about us we see the paths of bad men leading them into ever increasing darkness while on the other hand the path of the just, shining more and more with the revealing light of truth, inspires our hearts to sing that gladsome song, "His lightnings enlighten the world: the earth saw and trembled. The hills melted like wax at the presence of the Lord, at the presence of the Lord of the whole earth." Psa. 97:4, 5

God's purpose in leading men out is that He might lead them in. The God and Father of Abraham led him out of Ur of the Chaldees that he might be led into a land that He would show him. Israel was led out of Egypt that the nation might be led into a land flowing with milk and honey. So now in our day! The God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, who in ages past led them from Babylon and Egypt, is calling to a people enslaved by traditions and bound by sectarian chains of darkness to leave their prison house of confusion to walk in the presence of Jesus Christ, who is the head of the only true church in the universe, the church of the firstborn, the born again, whose names are emblazoned on the pages of the Book of Life - not with the fading ink from the pens of men, but with the eternal Spirit of the living God.

During the short span of our sojourn here on earth thoughtful people, knowing that they must soon depart from this valley of the shadow of death, prepare their last will and testament for the benefit of loved ones who will be obliged to carry on after they are gone. Our last will and testament is not of force, however, until our eyes close in the dreamless sleep of death. Paul made reference to this fact when he said, "For where a testament (will) is, there must also of necessity be the death of the testator. For a testament (will) is of force after men are dead: otherwise it is of no strength at all while the testator liveth." Heb. 9:16-17

During those memorable days in which our Lord Jesus Christ walked among men, He left for us a will so forceful, so strong and completely unalterable, that no power in the universe can change, alter, or destroy it. Hear now, ye partakers of His benefit, as He sets forth His eternal will for us in these immutable words of truth: "Father, I will that they also, whom Thou hast given Me, BE WITH Me where I am; that they may behold My glory, which Thou hast given Me: for Thou lovedst Me before the foundation of the world." John 17:24 And again: "Whatsoever ye shall ask in My name, that will I do ... If ye shall ask anything in My name, I will do it." John 14:13-14 "I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you." John 14: 18. "If any man love Me, he will keep My words: and My Father will love him, and We will come unto him, and make our abode with him." John 14:23

But the special promise which most concerns the message of the moment is this: "I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter, that He may abide with you forever; even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive because it seeth Him not, neither knoweth Him: but ye know Him; for He dwelleth with you, and shall be in you." John 14:16-17 In these words our Lord gave us the explicit assurance that He would be present with us and in us all through the troublesome days of our earthly pilgrimage. It was of this abiding presence that David spoke, saying in Psa. 23, "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for Thou art with me."

You have noticed that, when Jesus gave the promise that the Holy Spirit would abide with us forever, with great significance He added, "Whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth Him not." The world as a whole and carnal Christians are usually ready to proclaim that seeing is believing. What they cannot see with their physical eyes they readily disbelieve, but the power that firmly holds our vessel through the raging storms of life is faith, the steadfast anchor of the soul. Heb. 6:19. So, while the world is confidently proclaiming, "Seeing is believing", the word of faith is filling the universe with the victorious decree, "Believing is seeing!"

There is a power whose care
Teaches thy way along the pathless coast,
The desert and illimitable air,
Lone wandering but not lost.
He, who from zone to zone
Guides thy certain flight,
In the long way that I must walk alone
Will guide my steps aright.

The moment a Christian begins to see the invisible, hear the inaudible, and comprehend the incomprehensible, then his friends and neighbors call him mystical. "Much learning has made thee mad," they say, or sympathetically they think he has gone soft in the head. But, while they amuse themselves with derogation, hoping to belittle and disparage, the truth must ever be confessed that those who share the mysteries of God must of necessity be mystics. "Great is the mystery of godliness," saith the Lord, and to this my searching heart replies, "I shall be satisfied only when I awake in Thy likeness." If this be mysticism, then with all my heart I am a mystic. The Holy Spirit whispers this truth to every believing heart: "The things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal." "Rabbi, Thou art the Son of God: Thou art the King of Israel," cried the fervent Nathaniel as the eyes of his understanding were opened. And Jesus Himself, seeming to be amazed at such divine illumination, responded with this assurance, "Because I said unto thee, I saw thee under the fig tree, believest thou? Thou shall see greater things than these... Verily, verily, I say unto you, Hereafter ye shall see heaven open, and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man." John 1:49-51

The burning desire within my heart in this the end of the age is that God's chosen people might with me become aware of the abiding presence of God. Several years ago one of my dearest friends wrote me a letter in which he spoke of the reality of the presence of God. I read his letter with interest, but the force of the truth did not then fully grip me. The letter was laid aside and the truth contained therein was almost forgotten until one early morning I dreamed a dream in which the presence of God descended upon me from heaven, increasing in wonder and power as it drew near. I awoke in ecstasy of spirit, breathing aloud the words, "How wonderful is the presence of God!" From that moment until now the blessed fact of His presence has often filled my meditation, and the truth which I now set before you comes with the earnest hope that all who read may henceforth walk with an ever increasing consciousness of the presence of Him who told us in words that cannot fail, "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the age."

For centuries men have spoken - some reverently, some carelessly - of walking in the presence of God; but it is indisputably true that such great statements of truth lose their sacred meaning by man's constant and often flippant reiteration. Students of theology, poor souls, are usually first and foremost in this transgression. Poring over their musty volumes, they learn the arguments and proofs, which teach that God is almighty, but the almighty God Himself they do not know. They write their learned essays on the love of God, but the God of love is a stranger to their hearts. They themselves become ineffective and often vacillating and hypocritical because they have separated truth from the Person, knowing the law, but not the law giver, reciting the truth, but having no relationship with Him who is the truth. A lifetime of experience has taught me that it is possible for one to know all the arguments and possess all the answers, but still be a stranger to God. I testify to all, however, that, the moment any man begins to know Him, vast changes take place in his understanding, for to know Him is to be like Him. "We, beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into that same image, from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord." 2 Cor. 3:18

The Holy Spirit, who proceedeth forth from the Father, is not an influence, but a divine person, possessing personal names, personal attributes, personal qualities, personal offices, performing personal ministries and personal acts, and referred to by personal pronouns. I shall never be persuaded to descend to that valley of carnality where men delight to reason and debate about trinities and unities, for why should the fellowship of the saints, together with the joy of their friendship, be cruelly destroyed by debating these sacred things before whose mystery wise and holy angels bow their heads in silent awe? The man who seeks to argue about the Godhead has lost his sense of respect for the awful greatness of God. Yet be it known to one and all that He whose presence abides with us throughout all this age of grace is that same Holy Spirit of whom Jesus spoke, saying, "I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter, that He may abide with you forever; even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth Him not, neither knoweth Him: but ye know Him; for He dwelleth with you, and shall be in you. I will not leave you comfortless; I will come to you." John 14:16-18

With my small and limited ability I cannot make the truth of Christ's abiding presence to be a living, transforming reality to your heart. None but the Spirit of God is capable of this divine and mighty act of illumination. He alone can take the things of God and show them unto you. Nevertheless, I confidently assure you that, the moment the solemnizing fact of Christ's presence grips your heart and fills your mind by the Holy Spirit, the reality of His presence will immediately begin to transform your life. Yea, and I shall further add that the knowledge of His abiding presence will also begin to change and renew your body as well; but of this we shall speak at a later time. The sublime truth of His ever, abiding presence through an indisputable promise of God's grace cannot and will not become real to you until you devote yourself to it by prayer, by meditation, by fasting, and by faith above all else. "Lo, I am with you," Jesus said; and, if His word cannot be trusted, our mighty foundations are but quicksand beneath our faltering feet. But He who abides with us forever is He whom "having not seen, we love; in whom, though now we see Him not, yet believing, we rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory." 1 Pet. 1:8

Again 'tis eventide and we,
Oppressed with various ills, draw near;
And, though Thy form we cannot see,
We feel and know that Thou art near.

"This is He who was with the church in the wilderness, with the angel which spake to him (Moses) in the Mount Sinai, and with our fathers: who received the lively (living) oracles to give unto us." Acts 7:38

Some glad morning, when the ever, unfolding plan of God is complete, our eyes will behold with endless joy that heaven blest Eden, the garden in which walked Adam, the son of God. Our eyes, long dimmed by the things of earth, have not beheld such glories as were there; our ears have not heard its deep songs of joy, nor have our dreams pictured that land so fair whose inhabitants knew no sorrow nor crying, no tears nor death nor pain. Wonderful as were its heavenly charms, the glory above all else that made each moment an endless joy was the glory of God's abiding presence. He who knew all things from the beginning to the end was abiding there with them. He in whom all power dwells, whether in heaven or in earth, was holding them by the hand. The omnipresent Lord, who knows neither slumber nor sleep, was abiding there. It could not have been otherwise else God could not be God. "In Thy presence," wrote David, "is fullness of joy; at Thy right hand are pleasures forevermore." In this secret place they dwelt beneath the shadow of the Almighty, for the Lord God is a sun and a shield to all who walk uprightly. Then in God's wisdom the dark hour came when the creature was made subject to vanity. Rom. 8:20. Stretching forth his hand in disobedience, he took of the fruit of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil and did eat, "and the eyes of them both were opened, and they knew that they were naked; and they sewed fig leaves together, and made themselves aprons." Gen. 3:7 But they were ashamed to meet God in their fig leaf aprons, and, when in the evening of the day "they heard the voice of the Lord God walking in the garden... Adam and his wife hid themselves from the presence of the Lord amongst the trees of the garden." Gen. 3:8 Surely none could have been more conscious of God's presence than were Adam and Eve as daily they walked and talked with Him, but now their disobedience had thrust them into a dreadful outer darkness that made them feel naked, ashamed, and frightened at the very thought of God's presence so that they desired only to hide themselves from Him forever.

Here, then, when man in fear and shame hid himself from the presence of God, was the beginning of our labor, sorrow, and night. Thus from the glory and light of God's presence all men in Adam were cast; for there is no difference, since all have sinned and come short of the glory of God through man's transgression. Upon our eyes a veil was cast that could not be taken away until that day of triumph in which Jesus Christ, the "second man" (1 Cor. 15: 47), rent the veil in two and flung the gates wide open that repentant, forgiven and newborn men might come with boldness into the holiest by the blood of Jesus - by a new and living way which He has consecrated for us through the veil, that is to say, His flesh. Heb. 10:19-20 For this purpose the Spirit of truth was given, that we who have fixed our hopes in Jesus may abide in His presence forever.

Let us consider with care the detriment that fell like a cloud upon the human family when through disobedience and transgression Adam hid himself from the presence of God. We should not be obliged to present lengthy arguments to prove that man without God is hopelessly blind to eternal things, pitifully helpless, and desperately carnal. Once our eyes become closed to the invisible things, then we are blind to the eternal things, for the things, which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen, seen are eternal. When our eyes are closed to the invisible, then our vision changes from things above to things beneath. Because we are no longer conscious of the invisible and the eternal, we begin to feast our eyes on the visible and the temporal. Without God men are hopelessly in the flesh. They pass their time in the worthless pursuits of the flesh. Their days are spent in vanity, seeking to gratify the five senses of the physical body, but seldom do they learn that this cannot be done. The eye is never filled with seeing. The lust of the eye for seeing is insatiable. The ear is never filled with hearing, nor is the taste ever satisfied with the rarest of dainties. All our physical appetites, like the grave and the barren womb, never say, "It is enough".

How often, as I have read the books of First and Second Kings, have I been almost sickened by the dreadful display of carnality and wickedness, manifested in the lives of the kings of Judah and Israel! These were men who from their childhood knew the law of God. They knew better than to do as they did, yet their lives were a continual manifestation of the lusts of the flesh and the desires of the corrupt and carnal mind. The further they went in their unholy desire to gratify the lusts of the flesh the more they rejected God, and the further they departed from His presence the lower they sank in their degrading rebellion. Even Solomon himself, because he loved many women, is found in the end to be a tax-raising oppressor, building altars and places of worship to the abominable gods of his heathen wives, and even stooping to worship them himself. 1 Kings 11: 6-8, 33 Man, without God to change his evil nature, can never hope to bring peace or justice in the earth. The tree of the carnal mind bears the evil fruit of adultery, fornication, uncleanness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulation, wrath, strife, sedition, and heresy as naturally as an apple tree bears apples; but the Spirit of the living God, seated in glory upon the throne of the regenerated heart, filling it with the mind of Christ, bears the good fruit of the Spirit - love, joy, peace, longsuffering, goodness, gentleness, meekness, faithfulness, and temperance. Against such there is no law, neither in earth beneath nor in heaven above.

How wonderful are the words of our Saviour, "Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter the kingdom of heaven." Matt. 18:3 What better word could we find than the word converted? He who believes on the Lord Jesus Christ is converted in every sense of that word. All that he ever was is passed away and all that he never was is vital, unfading, and new. "He whom the Son sets free is free indeed," for he has passed from death across to life, from a child of the flesh to a child of the Lord, from the bondage of corruption to the freedom of the Spirit, from dreaded condemnation to acceptance and pardon in His sight. Changes so great as to seem almost incredible transform the life of every believer when Jesus Christ comes into his heart. He who once, because of the filth of his sin, hid himself in shame and fear from the presence of God now returns to bask in the shekinah of God's presence because he has repented of his sin and been cleansed by the blood of the everlasting covenant. "For," said Paul, "if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh, how much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered Himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God?" Heb. 9:13-14. "The blood of Jesus Christ, God's Son, cleanseth us from all sin" (1 John 1:7), and the man who is thus cleansed by faith in Christ is brought back by Him into that glorious presence from which he hid himself in the long ago. Among the sacred scenes of earth none is more wonderful to the regenerated heart than the sight of a sinner coming home to God in repentance. Many times in my life I have watched them come - from tender little boys and girls, sobbing at the feet of Jesus as though they were the greatest of sinners, to men and women hardened and calloused by decades of groveling in the swine pens of iniquity. To the lover of our souls it makes no difference who we are. The same Christ is as real to one as to the other and the same all-powerful blood cleanses from all sin. As the lines of hardness fade away from the sinner's face and the joy of the Lord fills his heart with peace, myriad angels on high fill the universe with their music and lift their rapturous voices in songs of praise to Him who loved us and gave Himself for us, for we "who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ." Eph. 2:13

The death we endure outside the presence of God is a dreadful experience. Forth from its unholy shadow every evil and ill of all the ages have proceeded to curse humanity. Every war that has darkened the pages of history has come as a result of man's separation from God's presence - every persecution of righteousness, every hateful demeanor, every torture chamber, every sickness and disease, every hospital and cemetery. The vast overpowering corruption of the present hour, which sees humanity more sinful and separated from God than at any time since the days of Noah, is the result of man's continual desire to hide himself from God's presence. Because men do not like to retain God in their knowledge, God has given them up to a reprobate mind to do the things which are not convenient, being filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity; whisperers, backbiters, haters of God, despiteful, proud, boasters, inventors of evil things, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, covenant breakers, without natural affection, implacable, unmerciful; who, knowing the judgment of God that they which do such things are worthy of death, not only do the same, but have pleasure in them that do them. See Rom. 1: 28-32. The murderous rash of convenience abortions now filling the earth with the blackness of iniquity is no less heinous a crime than the slaughter of the innocents in the days of Herod. The callous insensibility of this inhuman act is a crying evidence that mankind has entered the incredible place of stupefaction described by Paul as "without natural affection." 2 Tim. 3:3 Any reasonable person will concede that an extenuating circumstance may arise which could justify the termination of the pregnancy, but God will hold mankind responsible for the mass murder of the innocents that now every year exceeds by far the number of babies thrown into the river by the wicked Pharaoh or slaughtered by that bloody murderer, King Herod. I am often reminded of the words of one devout Christian woman who, being gravely ill during the months of her confinement, was warned by her doctor that it would not be possible for both her and the unborn baby to survive. To save her own life she was advised to immediately terminate her pregnancy. To this suggestion the brave woman gave this beautiful answer of resignation and consecration: "The Lord knows which life to spare and which to take." The result was that both were spared. How good our heavenly Father is to those who put their trust in Him!

The last stage in the corruption and final destruction of a nation is reached by the acceptance and popularization of the sin of sodomy, that vile affection which Paul describes as changing the natural use to that which is against nature, men with men working that which is unseemly. Rom. 1:26-27 This is the sin, which brought fire and brimstone to consume Sodom and purify the ground on which it stood. This is the abomination that hastened the flood in the days of Noah. Man cannot possibly survive nor can a nation endure once he stoops to this dreadful evil. Because of it God curses the people with a reprobate mind to do all manner of things that are inconvenient. Perhaps I will shock you when I say that the problems facing the world are neither complex nor difficult; neither are they complicated nor hard to solve. The solutions are exceedingly simple; the difficulty is in man's mind. It has become reprobate and confused by his iniquity so that every decision he makes is wrong and everything he does is inconvenient. It is useless to try to correct it now. The abominable confusion must await the termination of man's six days of labor, confusion, and turmoil. Then will follow the reign of Christ and His sons. Then the knowledge of the Lord will fill the earth as the waters cover the sea. Selfishness will be gone forever and iniquity shall be no more. Repentance shall have filled the heart of men with believing faith, and we shall have returned to dwell in the blessedness of God's life-giving presence.

The message of life that even in this evil hour still permeates the believing heart of every saint separated unto God by His Holy Spirit is this: It is possible for saints here and now to live with the constant and continual assurance that the same Lord who walked with Adam in heaven blessed Eden is now walking with them. As the days have passed, especially in recent months, there has come to me an ever, increasing assurance that I am dwelling and walking in His presence. God is no longer far away; He is here. No longer need saints say, "Who shall ascend into heaven to bring Christ down from above, or who shall descend into the deep to bring up Christ again from the dead?" The word (Christ) is nigh thee, even in thy mouth and in thy heart. See Rom. 10:6-7

This is not a moment for fine words or eloquent speech. This is an hour for very plain speaking. There is a truth that runs like a golden thread throughout all the pages of Holy Writ from Genesis to Revelation, teaching us that the elect whom God has chosen may even now walk in the light of God's presence. The teaching of this wonderful fact is verified by reality of experience, by many types, and by infallible prophecy. Let all God's people be informed of the truth I now present. Lay hold upon it as you would a precious jewel because its truth uncovers the secret key that will unlock the door to great spiritual experience and understanding. Men and women in ages past attained through faith in their own day blessings promised to men who were to live in ages yet to come. Let us notice a few examples. Enoch walked with God, and he was not, for God took him. Through faith Enoch was translated that he might not see death. Enoch was a man who lived in the dispensation of conscience - five dispensations in the past - yet by faith he was translated and experienced that which is yet future. Abraham lived under the dispensation of promise - three dispensations before Paul preached the message of justification by faith. Yet Abraham, in the far-off day when justification by faith was only a promise, believed God, and it was counted to him for righteousness. Rom. 4:3 Three dispensations before justification by faith was preached, his eye beheld the blessedness and his faith reached forward two thousand years or more to partake of its glory, and Abraham was justified by faith without the works of the law, and that before the law was given. And what shall we say of king David, who lived in the heart of the dispensation of the law when by God's own command sacrifices and offerings for sin were made daily, and the blood of bulls and of goats flowed in an endless crimson stream, heralding a better day when the better blood of Christ, the great anti-type of all sacrifice and offering, would be shed for the remission of the sins of the whole world. David with the eye of the Spirit looked far beyond those animal sacrifices, which could never take away sin, but left with the offerer a heart unchanged. The eye of David, the son of Jesse, looked forward through the corridors of time to the day when the blood of Christ would be shed for the remission of all sin and Jesus Christ, as God's faithful High Priest, would enter Heaven itself to present His own blood as a sin-offering once, forever, and for all, that mankind should through Him be brought back into God's presence. Thus did David under the law turn his face away from the religious ceremonies of his day, and with a heart broken for his sin he prayed, "For Thou desirest not sacrifice; else would I give it; Thou delightest not in burnt offering." Psa. 51:16 "Thou desirest truth in the inward parts... Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean: wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow. Make me to hear joy and gladness... Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me." Psa. 51:6-10 Of David it is written that he was a man after God's own heart. Who then dare doubt that he, who lived so long ago, reached beyond the experience of his age to receive the blessing of justification by faith as we do now when we kneel at God's feet to confess our sins and receive Christ our Saviour into our lives?

There is a promised day in a dispensation still future of which it is written, "Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and He will dwell with them, and they shall be His people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God." Rev. 21:3 Angelic voices, echoing in heavenly charm and eloquence, could not describe the triumphant day of blessedness and rejoicing in His presence! I suppose then it is not to be wondered at if but few in this hour of gross darkness are able to see that God is calling a people in our day who shall know the divine secret of walking in His presence. Here and now the elect will know the wisdom of His Spirit within. They will be sensitive to the reality of His presence, conscious of His Spirit speaking, His hand guiding, and His power transforming the spirit, the mind, and the body into the image of Him who created them. Men and women, elect and chosen of God, are not walking in the nakedness that Adam knew and that sinners know. The Spirit of God, who had departed from them, has returned to abide, and all who believe shall know that through God's Christ we have been led back into the presence of God. The misunderstanding of God's people concerning God's eternal purpose, and the abominable traditions of the false church system rob us continually of the light of the knowledge of the glory of God that shines forever from the face of Jesus Christ. "Lo, I am with you always" was the word Jesus spoke, and in fulfillment of that promise He said, "I will pray the Father, and He will give you another Comforter, even the Spirit of truth, who will abide with you forever," or for the age, meaning this age in which we live. Though all the world and most of the Christians dwell in outer darkness of unbelief, we who believe and lay hold of the promise shall know the wonder of His presence.

There came a day when the patriarch Isaac called his son Jacob to himself. He had blessed him with the dew of heaven, the fatness of the earth, and plenty of corn and wine, saying, "Let people serve thee, and nations bow down to thee." Gen. 27:28-29 Then he sent him to Padan-aram to the house of Bethuel to take a wife of the daughters of Laban, his uncle. Gen. 28 With the command of his father in his heart and a haunting dread of the wrath of his brother, Esau, in his mind Jacob started the long journey from Beer-sheba to Padan-aram. "And he lighted upon a certain place, and tarried there all night, because the sun was set; and he took of the..."
stones of that place, and put them for his pillows, and lay down in that place to sleep. And he dreamed, and, behold, a ladder was set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: and, behold, the angels of God ascending and descending on it. And, behold, the Lord stood above it, and said, I am the Lord God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac: the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed; and thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth, and thou shalt spread toward the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south; and in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed. And, behold, I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and will bring thee again into this land; for I will not leave thee until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of. And Jacob awaked out of his sleep, and he said, Surely the Lord is in this place; and I knew it not. And he was afraid, and said, How dreadful is this place! Gen. 28:11-17

"Surely God is in this place, and I knew it not!" These were the words of the patriarch Jacob. They are words of heaven-sent revelation. This sudden, divine understanding that God was present wrought an instant transformation that changed him from one glory to another throughout his long and difficult life. This revealing experience was his first true contact with the God of Abraham. The sobering knowledge that he was standing in the presence of the almighty God filled his heart with dread, for no man can see God and live. It is impossible! Impossible, I say, because the very knowledge that God is present causes the carnal things of our former life to pass away as ice before the glowing sun, and in their place new things are born that cannot pass away, but, reflecting the glory of God, they abide in His presence forevermore. "God is in this place and I knew it not" will be your inspired words, O Christian, as the transforming truth of His presence, like the life-giving rays of the sun, come stealing o'er the meadows of your soul. It is an immeasurable spiritual tragedy just to see how many Christians, bound by the traditions of Babylon, stumble along over the byways of life, forgetting that He is very present who said, "I am with you always, even unto the end of the age." And this God's people continue to do until by some miracle of God's good grace their eyes are opened and from their trembling lips the words break forth, "Surely the Lord is here, and I knew it not."

Moses was a man of eighty years when he tended the flock of Jethro in the backside of the desert. Gone from his heart was the zeal and fire of yesteryear that had once inspired him to rashly attempt the liberation of his people. Exod. 2: 11-15. He was an outcast now, a name long forgotten both in Israel and in Egypt. He wanted nothing better than to be left in peace to tend his inoffensive sheep, for they, unlike his people Israel, were gentle and docile, peacefully trusting him to lead them by day and protect them by night. No man of account knew where he dwelt. Of that he was glad; and perhaps he wondered in his heart if even God knew where he was. This old man had probably convinced himself that the God of Abraham had no special need of him or any plan for his life. How good it was going to be to live the rest of his life as a simple shepherd of these woolly sheep, and then at last to be gathered to his people and take his place in the bosom of Abraham!

But then there came a day when, looking up, he saw a bush burning with fire. There was nothing very unusual about that except that he presently became aware that, though the flames continued to burn fiercely, the bush was neither harmed nor consumed. Thinking this to be a most unusual phenomenon, he said to himself, "I will now turn aside, and see this great sight, why the bush is not burnt. And when the Lord saw that he turned aside to see, God called unto him out of the midst of the bush, and said, Moses, Moses. And he said, Here am I. And He said, Draw not nigh hither: put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground. Moreover He said, I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. And Moses hid his face; for he was afraid to look upon God." Exod. 3:3-6

It is not our purpose here to speak of the call and ministry of this man to whom God spoke face to face, but rather to show that God is present at all times, even when we know it not. We have stated before that names in scripture have a special meaning, usually describing the character or the ministry of those who have them. Thus, when Moses said to the Lord, "Behold, when I come unto the children of Israel, and shall say unto them, the God of your fathers hath sent me unto you; and they shall say to me, what is His name? What shall I say unto them? And God said unto Moses, I AM THAT I AM: and He said, Thus shall thou say unto the children of Israel, I AM hath sent me unto you." Exod. 3:13-14 There is no other name in scripture that more perfectly represents the ever present, the omnipresent God. As to time God is eternal; as to place He is omnipresent. "Whither shall I go from Thy Spirit? or whither shall I flee from Thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, Thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold, Thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; even there shall Thy hand lead me, and Thy right hand shall hold me. If I say, Surely the darkness shall cover me; even the night shall be light about me. Yea, the darkness hideth not from Thee; but the night shineth as the day: the darkness and the light are both alike to Thee.” Psa. 139:7-12

Know this, O child of God: These words are spoken unto you, and He who speaks them is present with you to guide your thoughts into all the will of God. In the knowledge of the secret of His presence you will possess an understanding hitherto unknown in your Christian experience. He who is present with you is a very present help in trouble, transforming the night of all trouble and sorrow into a fortress of Christian light and experience.

Time fails us to tell of Daniel, who stood all night in a den of lions purposely famished that they might destroy him, and of the angel of the Lord who, being present with him, closed their mouths and made them as docile as house cats. Nor can we speak in particular of the Hebrew three, who, walking in a furnace of sevenfold heat, found a fourth man present with them, the form of whom was "like unto the Son of God." Nor can we tarry long to speak of Paul, who in the midst of the raging storm at sea stood forth with boldness to proclaim safety and deliverance for all who were on board, saying, "And now I exhort you to be of good cheer: for there shall be no loss of any man's life among you, but of the ship. For there stood by me this night the angel of God, whose I am and whom I serve, saying. Fear not, Paul; thou must be brought before Caesar; and God hath given thee all them that sail with thee." Acts 27:22-24

In the thirty-third chapter of Exodus the Holy Spirit has related for our learning a very important and dramatic incident. Leading up to this chapter is the record of the giving of the law of God and of the subsequent abomination committed by Israel in the worshipping of the golden calf. These chapters should be reread that we might better understand the truth that follows. Israel had been spared destruction through the intercession of Moses, and now the Lord says to him, "Depart, and go up hence, thou and the people which thou hast brought up out of the land of Egypt... And I will send an angel before thee; and I will drive out the Canaanites... for I will not go up in the midst of thee; for thou art a stiff, necked people: lest I consume thee in the way. And when the people heard these evil tidings they mourned; and no man did put on him his ornaments." Exod. 33:1-4

"And Moses said unto the Lord, See, Thou sayest unto me, Bring us up hence, thou and the people which thou hast brought up out of the land of Egypt... And I will send an angel before thee; and I will drive out the Canaanites... for I will not go up in the midst of thee; for thou art a stiff, necked people: lest I consume thee in the way. And when the people heard these evil tidings they mourned; and no man did put on him his ornaments." Verse 12 "And He said, My presence shall go with thee, and I will give thee rest. And he (Moses) said unto Him, If Thy presence go not with me, carry us not up hence. For wherein shall it be known here that I and Thy people have found grace in Thy sight? Is it not in that Thou goest with us? So shall we be separated, I and Thy people, from all the people that are upon the face of the earth. And the Lord said unto Moses, I will do this thing also that thou hast spoken..." Verses 14-17

When believers become conscious of God's abiding presence, they become distinct from all other people on the face of the earth. They also become distinct from all other Christians. Men who live their lives continually conscious of the presence of Christ both abiding with them and dwelling in them are men who always walk softly with God. A fool who holdeth his peace is considered wise; so they who in silence listen to His still small voice come to know Him as the great I AM. The rich man in pride answereth roughly, but the poor useth entreaties. So he who is poor in spirit depends upon Him who is our wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption.

The fourth chapter of Acts tells of the great excitement and wonder caused by the healing of the lame man, and of how in hate and pride the priests and lawgivers, together with rulers and authorities, took counsel against the Lord and against His anointed; but "when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men, they marveled; and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus." Acts 4:13 And may we add the confident assurance that Jesus had been with them! Yea, His presence was continually with them.

In the Authorized Version of the Bible Titus 2:13 is rendered in these words: "Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God, and our saviour Jesus Christ." But the Emphatic Diaglott, Moffatt, Young and several others render it thus: Waiting for the blessed hope, even the appearing of the glory of our great God and Saviour Jesus Christ." Christ in you is the hope of glory, and while Christians century after century have eagerly scanned the heavens for signs of the appearing of the Lord, they have forgotten to live in the glory of the presence of Christ here and now. I am fully aware that a crowning day is coming when Christ shall ride forth from the heavens, followed by those celestial hosts of which John spoke. Rev. 19:11-16. I have no power or ability to describe events so supernal; I may only bask in their surpassing glory. I am led to believe that those who will share the blessedness of that triumphant advent will be they and they alone who, while walking in the wilderness of this world, lived in ever increasing consciousness of God's presence. These are they who dwell continually in the presence of Him who said, "Lo, I am with you always." "For what is our hope or joy, or the crown of which we boast? Is it not you yourselves in the presence of our Lord Jesus at His coming?" Thess. 1:19 (Weymouth). Think of the power and majesty of those words that literally say, "Our hope, our crown, and our rejoicing is you in the presence of the Lord Jesus at His coming!"

The presence of the Lord is a secret place. David describes it as the shadow of the Almighty. The cloud overshadowing the camp of Israel throughout their journey in the wilderness, a shade by day and a pillar of fire by night, was none other than the presence of the Almighty. They ate of spiritual meat; they drank of spiritual drink, for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them; and that Rock was Christ. 1 Cor. 10:3-4.

"In Thy presence is fulness of joy," wrote the enraptured psalmist; and how could it be otherwise since the God of Israel is our fortress, our power, and our habitation? As a garment plucked from a perfumed closet bears in its fibers the sweet aroma, so they who dwell in the presence of Christ radiate the glory, the beauty, and the power of His attributes. "All Thy garments smell of myrrh, and aloes, and cassia, out of the ivory palaces, whereby they have made Thee glad," wrote David. The ointment Mary poured with prodigality upon the head of the Saviour filled all the house where He sat with its fragrance, and we would be right in believing that all who came forth from that room carried in their garments the sweetness of that aromatic balm.

To dwell in His presence is to be like Him. To abide in His presence is to be changed into His image. Man can never hope to attain the likeness of the Lord by any outward regulation or command to his carnal mind, such as, touch not, taste not, handle not. It is when saints become conscious of His presence that men say they have been with Jesus. It is not what God commands that changes the heart; it is He Himself. It is not the recitation of God's divine laws that transforms our lives, but our relationship to Him who made them. Our abiding in the presence of Jesus Christ will cure our every ill and transform our spirit, soul, and body into the image of Jesus Christ.

As I was in meditation concerning the truth I have presented here, the following words by Martha Wing Robinson, so full of the breath of the Spirit, reached me through the mail. I think they will make a fitting conclusion to what we have been considering of the presence of God.

"You do not realize that you would have broken down under the weight of your cares but for the renewing time with Me. It is not what I say; it is Myself. It is not the hearing Me so much as being in My presence. The strengthening and curative powers of this you cannot know. Such knowledge is beyond human reckoning.

"This would cure the poor world if every day each soul or group of souls waited before Me. Remember that you must never fail to keep this time apart with Me. Gradually you will be transformed, physically, mentally, spiritually, into My likeness. All who see you or contact with you will be by this intercourse with you brought near to Me, and gradually the influence will spread.

"You are making one spot on earth an holy place, and, though you must work and spend yourself ceaselessly because for the present that is your appointed task, yet the greatest work you can do is done in this time apart with Me. Are you understanding that? Do you know that every thought, every activity, every prayer, every longing of the day, is gathered up and offered to Me now? Oh, joy that I am with you! For this I came to earth, to lead man back to spirit converse with his God." Amen.

CHAPTER EIGHT

"My beloved spake, and said unto me, Rise up, my love, my fair one, and come away. For, lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone; the flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land; the fig tree putteth forth her green figs, and the vines with the tender grape give a good smell. Arise, my love, my fair one, and come away." S. of S. 2:10-13
The winter is past; the rain is over and gone. Winter is the season of the year when all things lie dormant in a state of typical death. It is a time when trees are stripped of their leaves and fruit is forgotten, when the flowers die, song birds fly away, and even great beasts hibernate in dens of the earth. Winter is a time when men's lives are sustained only by that which has been stored away, and should it continue long, all things would perish from the earth.

The six dispensations from innocence to grace have for mankind been a long, dreary winter of death. They have been a time of great and dreadful death when all but a few of the human race have been in a state of spiritual sleep. The heavens, once wide open to Adam, have remained closed since the fall while men have groveled in gross darkness and appalling ignorance, knowing not that all about them a radiant, eternal world of light and glory and liberty shines with a brightness of a million suns.

Now when anyone falls asleep, a strange thing happens to him. Except for his breathing he is in a state of death. Realities are shut out from him. He knows neither where he is nor who he is. Whether he is alone or in company he knows not. Friends and acquaintances, sickness, pain and joy are all forgotten to the sleeper, for he like the dead knows not anything.

It may be hard for you to understand what I now tell you, for sleep may hide it from your eyes, yet some will surely understand that a glorious awakening is even now at the door. Long ago in lovely Eden, we are told in Holy Scripture, God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam. Gen. 2 In that sleep all things were shut out from him. The glory of the angels, the magnificence of the eternal world, wisdom and understanding with counsel and might were obliterated by the deepening stupor that fell upon him. Knowledge was gone, and even the wonderful glory of God's presence was shut out from him so that he knew not anything of the eternal realm and little, indeed, of the natural realm.

The omissions of God's Word are often as important as forthright statements, and here I think we have an omission of tremendous importance. Though it is said that a deep sleep fell upon Adam, yet it is not said that Adam ever awoke from the deep sleep that came upon him. All his remaining nine hundred years he remained dead asleep to eternal things. Certainly I could be wrong, but I myself am convinced that never again were the heavens open to Adam as heretofore, and never again did any of his posterity completely walk in all the light and presence and glory of God until that wonderful day when Jesus Christ, the second Adam, was baptized in Jordan and the heavens opened to Him, and, being opened to Him, they never more closed except for that one awful hour as He suffered vicariously on the cross of Calvary.

There is much more to the fall of man than at first appears to the casual reader. Adam, being both male and female in one, was a son of God and perfect. He was like unto that blessed company who at last shall be in Christ, for in Christ there is neither male nor female but sons of God, for sons of God are male and female in one as it was in the beginning. What need had Adam for a mate like unto the beasts of the field? He, being a son of God, possessed that perfect chaste virgin within himself and could have replenished the whole earth with his kind in God's image by a word of power as God by a word had willed him into existence in the beginning. But, as the beasts were brought before Adam to be named every male with his female, he must have imagined after the outward and fleshly to be as the beasts instead of after the inward to be as God. Therefore it is said, "But for Adam there was not found a help-meet for him." Gen. 2:20 Thus the deep sleep fell upon him and in his sleep the virgin, the female, was taken from him to be presented to him from without in another form to be possessed even as the beasts possessed their mates, and the children that were brought forth in travail and in pain were not brought forth in the image of God as Adam had been, but in the image of Adam himself who had imagined after the outward to be even as the beasts.

If you separate heat from cold, you have two dangerous things, - fire and frost, - either of which will kill you, yet, joined together, they are beautiful and harmless. If you separate judgment from mercy, you have sadism on the one hand and confusion on the other, but joined together you have peace. Positive together with negative is powerful and useful, but either one alone is helplessness. So also, while male and female were one in one Adam, there was a pure virgin sonship and harmony with God; but, separated the one from the other as the beasts, the door was opened wide for all disobedience with its attendant train of sin and death. Thus, when Eve was tempted by the serpent, she was no match for his satanic wisdom, for, when male was separated from female, wisdom war separated from understanding. Hence she, being separated from the knowledge of God that dwelt in Adam, became a prey to the knowledge of good and evil, and Adam, likewise no longer possessing that pure virgin within himself, was moved in passion as the beasts toward that which was without to bring forth sons, not in the image of God, but after the image of himself, in manner as the beasts of the field who, having no knowledge of God, desire only to sustain their physical life and reproduce themselves.

Thus they had partaken of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. Their eyes were opened to see their outward forms and to know the grief of sustaining their bodies by sweaty toil and the sorrow of reproducing themselves in desperate pain and travail. The good spirit and glory that had been their covering was departed from them and they knew the shame of their nakedness before the Lord.

But we are near the end of our long night of deep sleep. The day of waking, of sonship, and of the open heavens is at hand. With every tick of the clock our salvation is nearer than when we first believed. Each violent deed, each act of lawlessness, each war and earthquake that rocks the peace of the world brings us one day nearer to the hour when that first company of 144,000 virgin sons of God shall stand on Mount Zion with Christ and in Christ, clothed upon by the seven spirits of God as a rainbow round about the throne to govern the world in righteousness for-evermore.

One day during the life of our Lord on earth His friend Lazarus fell sick and Jesus, hearing of his illness, remained two days where He was until Lazarus had died. Then Jesus said to His disciples, "Our friend Lazarus sleepeth; but I go that I may awake him out of his sleep." But when He saw that the disciples did not understand, He said to them, "Lazarus is dead, and I am glad for your sakes that I was not there." Please read John 11:1-46 How well these words, our friend Lazarus sleepeth, fit the entire picture of the human race from Adam even until now, but the hour of awakening is almost here. Jesus, the first born from the dead, is about to call "come forth" to all who are in Christ, - not just to Lazarus or some other lonely man, but to all that great company whom he (Lazarus) represents, that all who died in Adam will live forever in Him.

Come now, and let us reason together in the Spirit, for there is an ever increasing longing in my heart to make at least the elect of God to see something of the length, the breadth, the depth, and the height of the goodness, the wisdom, and the love of God. God cannot be sufficed with the weak and sickly twaddle advanced by a harlot church as truth. What good is it for men to spend their lives studying doctrine only to find in the end that they know not God? All striving about doctrines is vanity and vexation of spirit, but to enter into the secret place of the Most High, to abide under His shadow and find delight in His presence is the all important thing. What a disastrous tragedy it is for men to begin in the Spirit and then imagine they can come to perfection by adhering to codes and ethics, rules and traditions. I tell you of a truth that a man who knows in his heart the truth that God loves the world, himself included, knows infinitely more than all his instructors who do not know in fact, but only in theory.

The time has come for you and me to so believe into Christ Jesus that here and now we will experience an awakening from the long winter of our sleep of death. The time has come for us all to stop looking through the polished doors of buildings that men erroneously call churches and start instead looking into the heart of God Himself. The time has come to exchange our sitting in comfortable pews for sitting at the feet of Jesus Christ. High time it is to cease from giving ear to the frothy eloquence of trained puppeteers who hold men captive to their wills, teaching them only what they want them to hear, and to sit instead, as Mary sat, at Jesus' feet to hear from His lips the unfolding of His purposes for the ages.

There are not many people who are sufficiently awake to believe it, but at this very moment tens of thousands of church goers of every sect and creed are walking in the counsel of the ungodly, standing in the way of sinners, and sitting in the seat of the scornful. Their delight is not in the law of the Lord neither do they meditate in it either day or night. They are filled with doctrine and programs, tradition and church activity, and though they profess to be believers, they would not know Christ if they met Him on the street. Oh, let us awake and turn away from such vanity and come to know Him! Of a truth that lowly woman who washed the feet of the Lord with her tears, kissing them without ceasing and wiping them with the hair of her head, knew more than all her learned critics, for she, dwelling in the love of God, believed all things while her learned critics, dwelling in the dismal hut of their human traditions, succeeded only in making the word of God of none effect.
It was in the evening of the sixth day that the Lord made the first man in His image. Now in the evening of the sixth dispensational day, even the dispensation of the grace of God, the Lord is again bringing an elect people whom He has chosen into the very image and likeness of His Son, the Lord Jesus Christ. Oh, how happy are those people whose God is the Lord! How blessed the people who like the blind man of old have cast aside their hindering garments to run after Christ who giveth sight that all may follow Him! How wise the people who have cast off their affiliation with the world and all its outward show of vanity, refusing the mind of satanic wisdom together with useless forms and ceremonies of an harlot church system that they may be partakers of the mind of Christ and the sevenfold spirit of sonship! Upon them as upon their Lord shall rest the seven Spirits of God even as the prophet Isaiah foretold, saying,

The Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon Him,
The Spirit of wisdom and understanding;
The Spirit of counsel and might;
The Spirit of knowledge and/ear of the Lord.

These are the seven Spirits continually before the throne of God by which the world will be governed in righteousness. These are the Spirits that will rest upon all the sons of God in that great kingdom when the whole world shall be governed in righteousness by that man whom God hath chosen. It was of these seven Spirits that John spoke when he wrote, "John to the seven churches which are in Asia; Grace be unto you and peace from Him which is, and which was, and which is to come; and from the seven Spirits which are before His throne." Rev. 1:4

"And round about the throne were four and twenty seats: and upon the seats I saw four and twenty elders sitting, clothed in white raiment; and they had on their heads crowns of gold. And out of the throne proceeded lightning and thunderings and voices: and there were seven lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are the seven Spirits of God." Rev. 4:4-5 The seven lamps of fire are the seven Spirits of God. This is the fulfillment of the ancient type, the candlestick, which stood in the Holy Place in the tabernacle in the wilderness, which was made of pure gold (divine) and had seven golden lampstands and seven lamps burning pure olive oil, a symbol of the Spirit of God.

"And I beheld, and, lo, in the midst of the throne and of the four beasts, and in the midst of the elders, stood a Lamb as it had been slain, having seven horns and seven eyes, which are the seven Spirits of God sent forth into all the earth." Rev. 5:6 The seven horns of God's perfect power and the seven eyes of God's full perfection are the seven spirits of wisdom and understanding, counsel and might, knowledge, reverence, and deity that are ever before God's throne.

I am powerless to describe the magnificence that is here, - seven Spirits of God blazing as seven lamps of fire, radiating forth the perfect light! As the seven lamps of the candlestick are but one candlestick, so also the seven Spirits are but one Spirit, even the Holy Spirit of God. The seven horns of power on the head of one lamb, even the Lamb of God, are but one Spirit of power, and the seven eyes likewise are one Spirit of God. Wonderful beyond words are the glories portrayed here, but our hearts well nigh stand still as we behold with John the dazzling glory that appeared before him. John saw one sitting upon a throne, and He that sat was to look upon like a jasper and a sardine stone: and there was a rainbow round about the throne in sight like unto an emerald. A rainbow is one but it has seven colors, and the seven colors of that glorious rainbow represent the sevenfold Spirit of God, even as the seven lamps of fire, the seven horns, and the seven eyes.

The first rainbow that ever appeared to men was a promise and a covenant from God to assure the world of His goodness and mercy. Here again it appears in the glorious age that even now casts its rays of dawn upon us, promising the world that all its inhabitants will be governed in righteousness by the elect whom God has chosen and upon whom shall rest forever the seven Spirits of God. And there was a rainbow round about the throne! What a magnificent promise for a benighted world that for time immemorial has known nothing but unrighteous government! Even the throne of Solomon was plagued with unrighteousness, greed and taxation so fearfully oppressive that the whole kingdom was divided at his death. The reign of David, good as it was, was filled with bloodshed until he who was a man after God's own heart was denied the right to build the temple because he was such a bloody man. What kingdom or empire has not fallen prey to wickedness and corruption until it finally sank beneath the waves of its own sin and perished beneath the weight of its own iniquity? The historian Edward Gibbon, has listed five primary causes for the decline and fall of the mighty Roman Empire as follows:

1. The rapid increase of divorce and the undermining of the sanctity of the home.

2. The spiraling rise of taxes and extravagant spending.

3. The mounting craze for pleasure and the brutality of sports.

4. The building of gigantic armaments and the failure to realize that the real enemy lay within the gates of the Empire in moral decay.

5. The decay of religion and the fading of faith into a mere form, leaving the people without a guide.

Even the most casual look at the above deductions should convince any man that the same five pallbearers who carried out the corpse of the Roman Empire are at the door of our own nations to carry them out also, for I doubt that any of the mighty empires of the past, the days of Noah, or even Sodom itself could hold a candle to the rampaging iniquity that is sweeping every nation on the face of the earth in our day. Were it not for the mercy of God in sending great tribulation on the earth in the very near future, the whole earth would doom itself in complete destruction.

The ordinary man is kept in the dark and knows practically nothing of the abounding corruption in governmental circles, the fraud, the cheating, the outright lying and endless graft, the hobnobbing with crooks and criminals, the receiving of campaign funds from gangsters and dope peddlers, and the thousand things of which the word of God declares, "It is a shame even to speak of the things that are done by them in secret."

But a better day is coming and it is coming very soon, - the day of the rainbow round the throne high like unto an emerald, the day of the seven lamps burning with fire, which are the seven Spirits of God resting heavily upon those glorious pure virgin sons of Zion, God's masterpiece and the hope of all creation. The day is at hand when the seven eyes of perfect insight and understanding shall search the hearts and minds of men and nations, and the seven wonderful horns of power shall bring into one all nations of the earth in righteousness before Him.

"Awake! Awake! Put on thy strength, O Zion; put on thy beautiful garments. O Jerusalem, the holy city: for henceforth there shall no more come into thee the uncircumcised and the unclean. Shake thyself from the dust; arise, and sit down O Jerusalem: loose thyself from the bands of thy neck, O captive daughter of Zion. For thus saith the Lord, "Ye have sold yourselves for nought; and ye shall be redeemed without money." Isa. 52:1-3 It is time to awake out of sleep, for the night is far spent and the day is at hand. Even now our salvation is much nearer than when we believed. These are not idle words, but words of truth and soberness. It is high time to awake out of sleep. It is high time to realize that the solemn words of Jesus are being fulfilled in all the world about us. It is time to diligently take heed that the searching prophecies of Paul are being fulfilled in that idolatrous system that dares to call itself the church, whose members have on every hand become lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, despisers of those that are truly good, traitors, heady, high, minded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness but denying the power thereof.

One of the most disgusting trends of our age is seen in the fact that evil men with seducing spirits have seized upon the wonderful truths of God and, though they have neither part nor lot in them, they proclaim them far and wide as great revelations. Oh, how I loathe this evil thing! They are as unscrupulous as Simon the sorcerer who, seeing that the Holy Ghost was given by the laying on of the apostles' hands, offered money that he also might be given the same power that upon whomsoever he laid his hands they would receive the Holy Spirit. But Peter, discerning the wickedness of his evil heart, said, "Thy money perish with thee, for thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money. Thou hast neither part nor lot in this inheritance, for I perceive that thou art in the gall of bitterness and the bond of iniquity." Cf. Acts 8:18-25 All over the world today men for filthy lucre's sake are proclaiming the message of sonship, but the Spirit of God's Son is not in them. Vainly they point to miracles and crowds, converts and disciples as evidence of their sonship, but all these things are empty and vain. We may with confidence affirm that every man and every woman who in any way is seeking to build up his own little kingdom does not possess the Spirit of sonship. A man who seeks to be or willingly becomes the central figure is wrong and does not possess the Spirit of sonship, for the true Spirit of sonship points men away from self and toward Jesus Christ. If I seek in any way to hold you as my disciple, I am wrong and void of the Spirit of sonship, but if, after you have read this article, your spirit cries within, "Our Father Who art in heaven, hallowed be Thy name," then I think you are becoming His disciple and the true Spirit of sonship is working in you. "Because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of His Son into your hearts, crying, Abba Father. Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ." Gal. 4:6-7

Those blessed sons of God who are to reign with Him in His kingdom will not be men who have made great names for themselves, but men and women who through contact with Christ Jesus our Lord have partaken fully of the sevenfold Spirit of sonship. Their wisdom and knowledge comes not from schools or universities, but from the blessed fact that they have been with Jesus.

THE SPIRIT OF THE LORD

The Holy Spirit is the Spirit of the Lord. When a man is filled with the Holy Spirit, he is not filled with an influence, a power, or a thing. He is filled with a divine person. Therefore it is said the Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him. If all people who seek to be baptized with the Holy Spirit had the beautiful understanding that they were seeking to be filled with that divine person who bears within His mighty self, not only all the attributes of personality, but all the attributes of divine personality, then their approach to God would be very different than it is. Almost always people who are seeking the Baptism of the Holy Spirit are mistakenly seeking a blessing, the receiving of which, they hope, will impart to them some sort of miraculous power that will enable them to live more powerfully or perhaps endue them with a supernatural gift. To speak with tongues is often their highest aim, for if they can attain to that phenomenon, then they are happy and satisfied in their belief that they have received all that God has for them in this age.

How pitiful is such an understanding! How desperately short we sell ourselves when we seek the Baptism of the Holy Spirit as an experience that we are to attain instead of presenting ourselves as empty vessels to be filled with that divine person, the Holy Spirit! The one hundred and twenty souls who were filled with the Holy Ghost at Pentecost were not receiving an overwhelming blessing; they were receiving a divine person who had come forth from heaven at the bidding of Christ that He might dwell in them and abide with them throughout all the age. For this purpose our blessed Lord Jesus Christ left this promise: "I will pray the Father and He shall give you another comforter, that He may abide with you forever; even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive; because it seeth Him not, neither knoweth Him: but ye know Him; for He dwelleth with you, and shall be in you. I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you. Yet a little while and the world seeth Me no more: but ye see Me: because I live, ye shall live also. At that day ye shall know that I am in the Father, and ye in Me, and I in you." John 14:16-20 This divine person, who is God and is sent forth by God, full of all wisdom and truth, understanding, counsel, might, knowledge, and reverence brings in His mighty fullness untold blessing both to the world that knows not God and to those blessed ones who through His power and the cleansing of the blood of Christ have been brought from darkness into light, being translated into the kingdom of God's dear and precious Son.

It is through the wisdom and power of that divine person, the Holy Spirit, that the world is convicted of sin, given the spirit of repentance, and made ready for the cleansing blood of Jesus Christ. Therefore Jesus said, "Nevertheless I tell you the truth; It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send Him unto you. And when He is come, He will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment.

Of sin, because they believe not on Me;
Of righteousness, because I go to the Father, and ye see Me no more:
Of judgment, because the prince of this world is judged."

John 16:7-11.

See then the eternal weight of blessing the Holy Spirit has brought to a world that knows not God in first convicting the sinner of his sin, - not only in telling him of it, but fastening it upon him, declaring the fact of sin, the fault of sin, and the fruit of sin. But God be praised, He does not leave us in the wilderness of despair in our conviction, but reproves the world of righteousness, pointing sinners to the Son of God who by His righteousness was so acceptable to God that He could not be holden by death, but is risen from the dead and gone to the Father (compare verse 10) that we might become the righteousness of God in Him, and that all who believe in Him may be free from sin that He might be just and the justifier of him that believeth in Jesus. See Rom. 3:26. Likewise also the Holy Spirit convicts the world of judgment: First, that all who persist in sin will come into judgment; second, that Satan, the prince of this world, is judged; and third, that Jesus Christ has fully borne the judgment of God that we may be justified from all things as Paul by the Spirit has declared. "Being justified freely by His grace, through redemption that is in Christ Jesus, whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in His blood, to declare His righteousness for the remission of sins that are past through the fore-bearance of God." Rom. 3:24-25

THE SEVEN SPIRITS OF SONSHIP

Great in goodness is the blessing of the Holy Spirit toward a world of unbelieving men, but behold how great is the Spirit of the Lord toward those who have yielded their lives to the control of Him who is the Spirit of truth, for "when He, the Spirit of truth, is come, He will guide you into all truth: for He shall not speak of Himself, but whatsoever He shall hear, that shall He speak: and He will show you things to come. He shall glorify me: for He shall receive of Mine and shall show it unto you." John 16:13-14

In the Greek language from which our New Testament was translated the word spirit is a neuter noun. Thus in Greek a spirit should always be referred to as it. But so definite is the fact of the personality of the Holy Spirit that even in Greek personal pronouns are used when referring to Him. A prime example of this fact is found in John 16:13-14 where eight times the personal pronoun "he" is used with reference to the Holy Spirit.

Know then, O man, that it is the Spirit of the Lord that rests upon and abides within the sons of God. He who is baptised with the Holy Spirit has not received a mere exuberant blessing in his soul, but a divine person capable of speaking, loving, reproving, teaching, convicting, and transforming, One who will guide you into all truth, for He is the Spirit of truth, and One who will show you things to come. Where in ten thousand worlds can greater truth be found than this: "The anointing which ye have received of Him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man should teach you: but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in Him." 1 John 2:27

THE SPIRIT OF WISDOM

The second Spirit to rest upon the sons of God is the Spirit of wisdom. As the rainbow round about the throne has seven colors yet one bow, so in like manner the seven Spirits of sonship are one Spirit. As each color of the rainbow has its own glory and manifestation, so do the seven Spirits before His throne as they rest upon the sons of God, transforming them into the image of Christ.

To understand what I say you will have to come out of all former tradition. Just as Peter left the safety of the boat to place his feet on the forbidding waves of a turbulent sea, so to follow Christ you must now leave the seeming safety of the ship of church tradition to walk with Him in realms forbidden to natural men. It becomes necessary to see the invisible, hear the inaudible, and touch the untouchable. Thus the invisible things of Him from the creation of the world become clearly seen, even His eternal power and Godhead. Rom. 1:20 Divine wisdom is not something that can be learned from books and teachers. Wisdom must be imparted by God. So great is wisdom and all that pertains to it that the Spirit of God moved upon the wise and understanding Solomon to write a whole book to display that it was a living personality. Numerous writers have often in the holy scripture diligently set forth the marvels of it until the innermost soul of the reader tingles with anticipation.
in the hope of being partaker of that wisdom which laid the foundation of the earth and hung the stars upon nothing. Such wisdom is too great for man. The natural mind can never attain it.

If you will step from the little boat of human understanding to tread the waves of revelation with Him, you will come to believe that wisdom, like the Holy Spirit, is not a thing to be studied but a living personality. She is one of the seven lamps burning with fire before the throne, one of the seven colors of the rainbow round about the throne. Oh, how different do spiritual things become when we trace them from death to life, from inanimate things to living personalities. In the triumphant words of Jesus, "I am the resurrection and the life", resurrection passes from the dead and lifeless realm of theology to the realm of personality and living being which Christ Himself is.

Hear now the declaration of wisdom as she seeks to lead us from the realm of the known to the realm of the unknown, from the grave of dead philosophy to the celestial realm of living things.

"I, wisdom, dwell with prudence and find out knowledge of witty inventions. The fear of the Lord is to hate evil: pride, and arrogance, and the evil way, and the froward mouth do I hate. Counsel is mine, and sound wisdom: I am understanding; I have strength. By me kings reign, and princes decree justice. By me princes rule, and nobles, even all the judges of the earth. I love them that love me; and those that seek me early shall find me. Riches and honor are with me; yea, durable riches and righteousness. My fruit is better than gold, yea, fine gold; and my revenue than choice silver. I lead in the way of righteousness, in the midst of the paths of judgment: That I may cause those that love me to inherit substance; and I will fill their treasures. The Lord possessed me (wisdom) in the beginning of His way, before His works of old. I was set up from everlasting, from the beginning, or ever the earth was. When there were no depths, I was brought forth; when there were no fountains abounding with water. Before the mountains were settled, before the hills was I brought forth; While as yet He had not made the earth, nor the fields, nor the highest part of the dust of the world. When He prepared the heavens, I was there: when He set a compass upon the face of the depth: when He established the clouds above: when He strengthened the fountains of the deep: when He gave to the sea His decree that the waters should not pass His commandment: when He made sun and moon. When He set a compass upon the face of the depth: when He established the clouds above: when He strengthened the fountains of the deep: when He gave to the sea His decree that the waters should not pass His commandment: when He appointed the foundations of the earth: then I was by Him, as one brought up with Him, and I was daily His delight, rejoicing always before Him; rejoicing in the habitable part of His earth; and my delights were with the sons of men. Now therefore hearken unto me, O ye children; for blessed are they that keep my ways." Prov. 8:12-32

Leave not wisdom in the grave clothes of human theology, but let her be raised even as Christ from the dead to abide and grow a living reality in your life, a lamp of fire, a color of the rainbow, the Spirit by which the world will be ruled in the age which is at our doors.

THE SPIRIT OF UNDERSTANDING

The third Spirit of sonship is the Spirit of understanding. Since the Prophet Isaiah has called understanding a Spirit, we must free ourselves once again of the notion of dealing with understanding as a dead and inanimate thing. We cannot learn understanding as we would learn arithmetic, for it, being a lifeless fact, can as well be performed by a machine as by man, but understanding is a living thing that enters as a Spirit into the soul, a lamp burning with fire, a Spirit before God's throne. How easy it is to miss the vital significance of one word in Scripture! When the Scripture speaks of the quick and the dead, it is speaking of the living and the dead, for "quick" here means "living". 1. Pet. 4:5. And again, when Paul says, "The Word of God is quick and powerful" (Heb. 4:12), the meaning is living and powerful. So also when Isaiah says, "He shall make Him of quick understanding" (Isa. 11:1), He means He will make Him of living understanding. If understanding then is a living thing, how apt it is that it should be called a Spirit that shall rest upon the sons of God who are indeed the branch from the rod of the stem of Jesse. Isa. 11:1  Jesse was the father of David, the king. Matt. 1:6. Christ is the rod or vine from the stem of Jesse, and we are the branch out of His roots even as He said, "I am the vine; ye are the branches." And upon this branch shall rest the Spirit of living understanding.

"Wisdom is the principal thing," said Solomon; "therefore get wisdom, and with all thy getting, get understanding." Prov. 4:7  It is sport to a fool to do mischief, but a man of understanding hath wisdom. It is better to get wisdom than gold, and understanding is rather to be chosen than choice silver, for "understanding is a wellspring of life unto him that hath it." Prov. 16:22 Understanding does not judge either by the sight of the eye or the hearing of the ear, but with righteousness it judges the poor and reproves with equity the meek of the earth. Isa. 11:3-4  In the face of the condemning multitudes it cries, "Judge nothing before the time until the Lord come, who shall bring to light the hidden things of darkness; and then shall every man have praise of God." It was neither love nor forgiveness alone that led Jesus to say to the woman taken in adultery, "Neither do I condemn thee", but the Spirit of understanding, for He knoweth our frame and, remembering that we are dust, He said, "Go and sin no more.

The next time you stand ready to condemn men for their slowness to see the glories you behold, give place to the Spirit of understanding that it may possess you; then you will see that God alone can open the eyes of him that was born blind. We have great pity for the man who is blind or who bears in his body some physical deformity, for understanding has taught us that these afflictions came through no fault of his own. Why then do we cast away the Spirit of understanding from us by demanding that he whose spiritual eyes have never been opened should be able to see the mountains filled with the hosts of the Lord? If the men who stoned Stephen to death had seen the heavens open as he did, they would not have stoned him; therefore the Spirit of understanding in his soul whispered, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge."

"Be not children in understanding, howbeit in malice be ye children, but in understanding be men." 1 Cor. 14:20 I greatly fear that for many hundreds of years God's people have been men in malice and children in understanding. From time immemorial the church has been a vast feuding ground of malice, envy, bitterness and strife, full of pettiness, peevishness, whisperings, debate, deceit, backbiting, and evil speaking: Men in malice and children in understanding!

Have you ever prayed that God would open the eyes of your understanding that you may know what is the hope of His calling and what the riches of the glory of His inheritance in the saints? Ah, how much better this would be than to seek gold and silver to the detriment of your devotion to God, for the heart of God is truly pained when He from heaven beholds His sons neglecting their fervent devotion to Him while they diligently rush about to attain temporal things. Walk no longer in the vanity of your mind, having the understanding darkened, while alienating yourself from the life of God through ignorance. Never spend your days seeking riches, for they make themselves wings and fly away, and if by the will of God riches increase, set not your heart upon them.

Just as the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, so the knowledge of the holy is understanding. Prov. 9:10 We can never over-emphasize the importance of our coming to know God since so much is involved in it. Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom, and with all thy getting get understanding. But neither wisdom nor understanding will ever be yours by following the traditions of the dead church systems, for the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, and the knowledge of the holy is understanding.

"Trust in the Lord with all thine heart and lean not unto thine own understanding," saith the Lord. Prov. 3:5 Yet God's people are always leaning on their own understanding and so often our own understanding is nothing more than the faulty understanding of other men whose traditions, interpretations, and deductions we have accepted. Human understanding is terribly limited. It is limited by lack of knowledge, lack of facts, the presence of prejudice and carnal thinking. "Every way of man is right in his own eyes, but the Lord pondereth the heart." Therefore lean no longer upon thine own understanding in anything. Judge neither after the sight of the eyes nor the hearing of the ears, but seek that living Spirit of understanding that comes from God alone, for "when wisdom entereth into thine heart, and knowledge is pleasant unto thy soul, discretion shall preserve thee, and understanding shall keep thee, to deliver thee from the way of the evil man, from the man that speaketh froward things." Prov. 2:10-12

THE SPIRIT OF COUNSEL

We shall call it the Spirit of counsel, for that is what it is. Too long the world has known human counsel, which is in fact nothing more than the advice of the carnal mind. As an animal looks at all things through the eyes of an animal with the limited understanding of a beast, so fallen men with carnal minds see all things through carnal eyes and give their counsel as carnal men. They even dare to give spiritual counsel from their carnal minds, but this can only result in death. There are counseling services in every city where counsel is given for... a fee. Some of it is good; some is deplorable and bad, and often the counselor is in as great darkness as the counseled. It is nothing short of amazing to behold what the world will accept as a counselor as infants counsel the aged, unmarried instruct the married in the arts of home-making, and the childless counsel the fathers and mothers in the arts of guiding the family.

The carnal mind has nothing to offer in counsel but darkness and death, for the carnal mind is death, but the spiritual mind is life and peace. The darkness of the carnal mind becomes ever more dark and corrupt as the centuries of our fallen state increase. The counsel given by the wise men of earth brings naught but greater frustration until the hearts of men are failing them for fear and looking after the things that are coming upon the earth. The whole system that calls itself the church has rejected the counsel of God. Is it any wonder, then, that the world of sinners has done the same thing so that when we pipe there is no dancing, and when we lament, none do mourn?

But the age is very near at hand when the sons of God will reign with Him, not in rejection and sorrow, but in transcending glory. The mind of Christ shall dwell richly in all the sons of God and from that divine mind shall flow forth the counsel of the Lord. Now counsel is advice; it is the advice of the Lord. Counsel is good judgment. It is judgment taken by consultation with the Lord. The exact counsel that Jesus Christ Himself would give will be the counsel of the sons of God, the branch of the Lord, for upon them shall rest the Spirit of counsel.

Long centuries ago the apostle John looked through the telescope of divine inspiration and beheld at the end of the age a church neither hot nor cold, but lukewarm, ready to be spewed from the mouth of the Lord. He saw how rich they were in gold and silver and the increase of goods and property, and he heard them boast, "We have need of nothing." But they knew not that they were wretched and poor and miserable and blind and naked. Rev. 3:16-18. They knew only the counsel and wisdom of the natural mind, neither seeing nor comprehending their wretched estate. Hear now the counsel and wisdom of God to them, for the counsel given to them may well be the first counsel that shall be given to all the world when the sons of God begin their righteous reign. "I counsel thee to buy of Me gold tried with fire that thou mayest be clothed, that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear: and anoint thine eyes with eye salve that thou mayest see. As many as I love / rebuke and chasten." Rev. 3:18-19 My heart is filled with prayer and desire that the eyes of your understanding may be enlightened to see that that which John beheld in this great vision is in reality the condition in which all Christians live who still adhere to the miserable bondage, the wretched nakedness, and spiritual blindness of the existing church systems, for they have rejected the counsel of the Lord against themselves that they may go on in their coldness, love of money, and spiritual death.

The hour is nigh when all the world shall come under the Spirit of counsel manifested in God's sons, for God has said, "I will call the man that executeth My counsel from a far country," for there is no counsel like the counsel of God which declares the end from the beginning, and from the ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, "My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure." See Isa. 46:9-11

THE SPIRIT OF MIGHT

The nations of the earth are vainly mustering their mighty men of war. The measured tread of their armies reverberates throughout the earth. Their arsenals are filled to overflowing with weapons of unimaginable destruction, but for all this their hands hang weak and their hearts faint, for they find themselves powerless to cope with the forces of lawlessness and wickedness that rise on every side like specters from the tomb. Men have forgotten God. They do not know that nations are but dust in the palm of God's almighty hand. They fill their mouths with statements of blasphemy as they declare their feeble war against Him. But He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh; the Lord shall have them in derision.

Do not forget that God is never late. Neither is He ever found sleeping or unprepared. There are no emergencies with God, for He knows the end from the beginning. Think not in thine heart that Satan hath almost obtained the victory, for Satan has no power at all but such as is given him of God. There is no power but God. The powers that be are ordained of God. Rom. 13:1 Satan and the nations that serve him are doing only what they are permitted to do, for it is God that ruleth in the heaven and in earth setteth up and putteth down whom He will. While the nations loudly rattle their swords, vainly boasting of their secret weapons, God is secretly preparing His sons of might, for the Spirit of might shall rest upon them. The stone is being cut from the mountain without noise and without hands to smite the earthen feet of the image man has builded (Dan. 2:34) that the kingdoms of this world may become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His mighty Christ, and He shall reign forever and ever. The wonderful age that next shall dawn will know the glory of the Spirit of might as it rests upon God's holy sons. The world will know the wonder of true authority and might with wisdom, counsel, and understanding. The bruised reed He will not break, and the smoking flax He will not quench. He will reprove with equity the meek of the earth, and with the breath of His nostrils will He slay the wicked. Every yoke shall be destroyed because of the anointing, for all power in heaven and earth is given unto Him.

THE SPIRIT OF KNOWLEDGE

The knowledge of God cannot be learned in schools and universities. The knowledge derived from schools and instructors in this world is for this age only and is as lifeless and dead as the things with which it deals. But the knowledge of God is not an accumulation of dead facts, but a living reality that springs like a resurrection from the Spirit of knowledge, which is in truth a manifestation of the Holy Spirit of God. Oh, how lively things become when God gives us the Spirit of wisdom and the Spirit of understanding that we might know that counsel, might, knowledge and reverence are living things with personality proceeding forth from the indwelling presence of God's Holy Spirit.

If you find such a positive statement hard to believe, perhaps you can first believe a more negative one. When we speak of evil things, we speak of lying, adultery, whoredoms, infirmities, errors, and so forth; but the Lord does not hesitate to say that some people have lying spirits, spirits of bondage, spirits of adultery, spirits of whoredoms, spirits of error, spirits of infirmity, unclean spirits, and many others. While modern learning scoffs at all such teaching, they themselves who scoff are filled with the spirit of delusion that they should not know the truth.

I do not believe in the nonsense of demonology as practiced by some Christians, who seem to delight themselves by continually talking about demons of this and demons of that, and who continually talk of casting out demons. They are usually betrayed by their own imagination. The truth is that every truly repentant soul is delivered from every evil by the omnipotent power of the blood of Christ and the transforming power of the Holy Spirit the moment he believes. The best way to "give place to the devil" is to start talking about him. The point is, however, that since the Lord recognizes the evils above mentioned as spirits rather than mere circumstances, then we should be able to understand what is meant when God speaks of the Spirit of wisdom, the Spirit of knowledge, the Spirit of truth, or any other. We should be able to see that these are not mere human attributes, but personable beings and living realities as alive as God Himself, living things proceeding from that divine person, the Holy Spirit.

God's people are destroyed for lack of knowledge, for the workers of iniquity have no knowledge, who eat God's people as they eat bread. Psa. 53:4 But the Lord giveth wisdom; out of His mouth cometh knowledge and understanding. Prov. 2:6 The knowledge of God makes one wiser than all his enemies so that he has more understanding than all his teachers. His knowledge is high; we cannot attain unto it, but He giveth knowledge, sound wisdom, and discretion. In Him are hidden all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge that our hearts might be comforted, being knit together in love unto all riches of the full assurance of understanding to the acknowledgment of the mystery of God.

We are living in the hour when God hath a controversy with the inhabitants of the land because there is no truth, nor mercy, nor knowledge of God, but lying and swearing, killing and stealing, and committing adultery. Hosea 4:1-2 The world is filled with a knowledge that is leading it to destruction, and the people of God are chained with the shackles and death of tradition, but God is separating a people from the knowledge of the world that He might impart to them the Spirit of knowledge, for the kingdom age is at hand when the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea.

THE SPIRIT OF FEAR
The fear of the Lord has nothing to do with being afraid. The fear of the Lord is reverence for the Lord. It is profound respect mingled with awe, affection, and veneration. It is reverential trust with hatred of evil. The fear of the Lord is clean, enduring forever. Psa. 19:9 The fear of the Lord is to hate evil. Prov. 8:13. The fear of the Lord is strong confidence, and His children shall have a place of refuge. The fear of the Lord is a fountain of life to depart from the snares of death. Prov. 14:26-27 By the fear of the Lord men depart from evil (Prov. 16:6), for the fear of the Lord tendeth to life. Prov. 19:23

God has spoken of a people of whom it is said, "There is no fear of God before their eyes." Rom. 13:18 With their tongues they have used deceit, whose mouths are full of cursing and bitterness, and the way of peace they have not known. The blessed Spirit of reverence for the Lord has fled from the presence of God's people, for they seem to think nothing of light and silly talk in the presence of that which should be deemed holy. They approach God loudly and carelessly in prayer, willingly barter spiritual things for temporal gain, and quote scriptures in jest, making a mock of reverence.

The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, and the beginning of knowledge, too. God will never grant wisdom and understanding to the man whose soul is void of true reverence for God, for true reverence is true humility, and true humility places God's will above all else in the universe. "We ought to obey God rather than man" is its plea.

These are the seven Spirits of sonship that shall rest like a cloud of glory upon the sons of God. By these shall the glory and order of God's kingdom be established. Wisdom hath builded her seven pillars: wisdom, understanding, counsel, might, knowledge, reverence, and deity. These are the seven lamps of fire before the throne. These are the seven Spirits of God. Rev. 4:4-5. These are the seven eyes of the Lamb. Rev. 5:6 This is the rainbow round about God's throne.
CHAPTER ONE
THE ABRAHAMIC COVENANT

In God's dear book many wonderful things have been written which are seldom taught or even mentioned among the Christian congregations of our day. Truths, which are pointed, plain, and tremendously vital to spiritual understanding, are passed by unnoticed and unmentioned as things irrelevant and inconsequential. Promises, prophesies, covenants and facts which are vital to the age in which we live fill the pages of Holy Writ, yet they go totally ignored by professing multitudes, counted as inapplicable old wives fables and rejected out of hand without a pretext of sincere investigation. It is with regret that I myself confess that in bygone days, while still in bondage to the sectarian systems, I rejected without thorough investigation truth, which I now know to be pertinent to all spiritual growth and understanding. Like so many others, I was quick to respond with accredited answers to the questions raised, vainly imagining that such eternal verities could be disposed of by the threadbare answers of tradition.

All of God's word is intended to be understood, and though truth is usually presented in such a way that it is foolishness to the natural man and he cannot understand it, that same truth blazes as the noonday sun upon the path of him who with an open and contrite heart cries continually, "Open mine eyes that I may behold wondrous things out of Thy law." Only then do we know that the invisible things of Him from the foundation of the world are clearly seen. Truth so vital to us all has been ignored and prejudiced against by the abstruse and slanted minds of those who believe not. So plain, in fact, has God made these blessed truths that, had not scholars and churchmen turned them completely upside down and inside out, they would have been seen and recognized by the multitudes of mankind centuries ago.

In these days, when multitudes are turning away from the truth and their minds are being turned to fables, we would do well to remember that the Bible is forever the word of God. It does not simply contain the word of God; it is the word of God, and if it be believed, we will find within its sacred records all the truth necessary for us to lay firm hold on God's promises and the hopes that are clearly set before us.

The Christian church as we know it has been living in a fools' paradise, propounding pet doctrines, arguing the pros and cons of theories, but almost completely overlooking the eternal purpose of Him who from the foundations of the ages "worketh all things after the counsel of His own will." Oh, for the hour when all creation will grasp the eternal message, "From Him everything comes, by Him everything exists, and in Him everything ends!" It will be a blissful day for you, my brother, my sister, when first your soul becomes thrilled with the revelation that God, before ever the world began or ever the ages were formed, looked forth from His temple of wisdom and understanding to chart with infinite care the course and purpose of every age. With omnipotent power He guides and sustains them according to the purpose of His own will. No purpose ordained by God from the beginning can possibly go astray or be hindered by the efforts of devil or man. All comes from Him, all exists by Him, and all ends in Him.
If you in spirit will stand as "in the beginning" with your all-wise heavenly Father, you will behold the unfolding of an infinite purpose. You will see the unveiling of God's divine intention in Eden's lovely garden. Your heart will throb as you hear Him say, "The creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him, who hath subjected the same in hope." Rom. 8:20 From the lips of God you will be assured that through the anguish and night of the fall His hope was to bring to manifestation a vast family of sons of God, every one in the image of Christ. Rom. 8: 18-29 The creation itself shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious freedom of the sons of God. Verse 21. You will see, as you stand with Him, that the tragedy of Eden was not a tragedy in the sight of God, but an aionian purpose. You will see with unspeakable joy that the subjecting of the creation (verse 20) to the bondage of corruption was neither a mistake nor an accident, but the purpose of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will. You will look upon the agonies of Calvary and see, not a stark calamity, but a purpose clearly defined and ordained before the ages began - a purpose by which sin will be forever eliminated from all the universe when God's plan is complete and all creation everywhere is lifted from the thralldom of bondage, corruption, and decay into the glorious freedom of the sons of God.

If you will stand with God in the midst of the ages, you will see the immutable and unerring progress of each and every covenant He made with man and behold with wonder and admiration His faithfulness in keeping them unto a thousand generations. With the revelation of the Almighty flooding your soul you will see Him raise up evil men to oppose and resist His will even as He raised up Pharaoh that His name might be known in all the earth. Exod. 9:16. You will see Him raise up both men and nations who are destined to be His bitter opponents that the righteous might come to maturity, having fully come to the knowledge of good and evil.

It is high time that the people of God began to investigate the Bible for themselves. The word of God was written for you to read and believe. It was never intended to be interpreted for you by men who have a denominational axe to grind or a sectarian viewpoint to defend. Let God's people come out from among them and begin to search the scriptures for themselves, and God will be their Father and they will sup with Him and He with them. Let us ask the guidance of the Holy Spirit, and before we realize it we will find ourselves digging deep in a blessed gold mine of truth. Truth was intended to transform men, to make them love God and lay hold upon His eternal purposes. Truth was never intended to force mankind into the narrow confines of some sectarian prison cell. Christ Himself is the truth, the light and the way, and He came declaring that the truth would make us free. Bright is the shining of the sun, yet it is useless to seek its face if we cover our eyes with a dark veil or throw a blanket over our head. In all the ages of time no heavier veil ever existed than the veil of human tradition, by which religious men make the commandment of God of none effect. Matt. 15:6 It is only when this darkling veil is cast away from us that the divine purpose of the ages unfolds before our wondering eyes.

Upon your desk today there is or should be that book we call the Bible. This book alone reveals God's secret plan of the ages. It unfolds with unerring accuracy the mysteries of eons yet to come. It reveals the purpose of the present fearful turmoil which now on every hand encompasses the world. It points with unerring finger the way the saints must walk and tells us what the end will be of the world wide distress and tribulation that is consuming us like a fire. These enlightening discoveries will all be made by those who believe the word of God and not by those who disbelieve it. The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him and He will not disclose His mysteries to the unbelieving minds of those who hate Him. "Whosoever hath, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance: but whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken away even that that he hath." Matt. 13:12

The reader of this message does not need to be told that we are living in the closing days of this dispensation of grace. The rapidly multiplying signs, which everywhere give forth their lurid light, are shouting from the house tops that the kingdom of God is at hand. The coming of the Lord draweth nigh. The evil shadows of the great tribulation hang like a gloom all over the world. Soon, very soon, will the armies of the antichrist challenge the armies of the Son of God, whose eyes are a flame of fire and from whose mouth goes forth a sharp, two-edged sword with which He will smite the nations. With this great battle, described in Rev. 19: 11-21, the six days of man's labor and misrule will end and the kingdom of God will follow to fill the earth with righteousness for a thousand years. Rev. 20 "Of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon His kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this." Isa. 9:7
For many years I have felt that the day would come when it would be my God given task to unfold, at least in part, some of the hidden mysteries concerning God's chosen people, who are the seed of Abraham. Not many people now reading this message are fully aware that the entire Old Testament from Genesis, chapter twelve and verse one, to Malachi, chapter four and verse six, together with much of the New Testament concerns itself with that chosen people - all twelve tribes of them, who are the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. This fact in itself should be enough to demonstrate the vast importance connected with the subject. In God's holy word this chosen race is described in such endearing terms as these:

My heritage. Joel 2:3.
My servant. Isa. 41: 8.
My witnesses. Isa. 43: 10.
My called. Isa. 48: 12.
My redeemed. Isa. 43: 4.

In all the above instances the speaker and declarer is God Himself and the nation concerned is the seed of Abraham through Isaac and Jacob.

To every thinking person or any Christian with a spiritual mind and an understanding heart it must be extremely obvious that a nation spoken of in such terms as these, whose history and promise of future glory is the topic of the entire Old Testament and much of the New Testament, cannot be carelessly set aside or lightly discarded to suit the whims and fancies of blind leaders of the blind who love to spiritualize or consign to the past any truth that may upset their established tradition, and so they commit to the garbage any truth that appears to demand a greater understanding on their part. It is very clear in God's word that the Israel nations were declared and ordained by God to be the head and not the tail among the nations of the earth. Deut. 28: 13. According to the prophecies and covenants of the Old Testament, the Israel nations were to be the leading and greatest nations of the earth in the latter days, enjoying the blessings of heaven above, the earth beneath, and the wealth under the earth. They were to be a blessing to all other nations, lending to all but borrowing from none. Deut. 28:12

As God may help me, I shall endeavor to explain the purpose of God for these people, both for the present age and the ages that are yet to come. As God's inspired word opens before us, we will behold with rejoicing the unfolding of the words, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." I am fully aware that many will disagree with and even oppose the message I bring, but my sincere prayer and hope before God is that all who read these lines will become seekers after truth, unafraid to have their understanding stirred by the unfolding of the truth kept hidden through much of this present age, but ready to be revealed in the last time. May the Spirit of the Lord open the eyes of all who read to give light and understanding in the knowledge of His will.

THE ABRAHAMIC COVENANT

In the twelfth chapter of Genesis an entirely new era in God's dealings with mankind is revealed with the calling of Abram and his descendants to be a special people, a chosen nation for God's service, that through Abram and his seed all the families of the earth would be blessed. These descendants of Abram were to be a distinct and separate people unto God, peculiarly His forever. From them Christ the Saviour and Redeemer would eventually come. From the seed of Abraham - as I will show you later - the sons of God, the body of Christ, would come, and from his seed also in that glad millennial day, when "all Israel shall be saved," (Rom. 11:26), the bride of Christ will come. "To Abraham and his seed were the promises made." Gal. 3:16. Thus we must conclude that even Gentiles, believing on the Lord Jesus Christ, become the children of Abraham by faith, as it is written, "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." Gal. 3:29
"Now the Lord had said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will shew thee: And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing: And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed." Gen. 12:1-3 It would be difficult to conceive of any more sweeping and all-inclusive statement than this. Though we will not stop now to analyze its depths, in these simple but remarkable sentences we have an incredibly sweeping, far-reaching statement that will take the thousand generations of 1 Chron. 16:15-17 and Psa. 105:8 to fulfill.

(1) Get thee out of thy country.

(2) Unto a land that I will shew thee.

(3) I will make of thee a great nation.

(4) I will bless thee.

(5) I will make thy name great.

(6) Thou shalt be a blessing.

(7) I will bless him that blesseth thee and curse him that curseth thee.

(8) In thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed.

It is extremely important that we grasp the fact here and now that God's promise and covenant with Abraham is wholly, entirely, and completely unconditional. It is an indisputable fact that no choice was given to Abraham either here or in any other place, or were there any conditions attached or demanded of him. God omnipotent, immutable, eternal commanded this man Abram to get out of his country unto a land that he would later be shown, and the same immutable, eternal Father tells him what He intends to do with him and his seed after him. There were absolutely no conditions whatsoever attached. No words were ever spoken to Abram in which it was inferred that God would bring these blessings upon him in reward for faithfulness, or for works, or for anything else. Everywhere in connection with this covenant we hear the immutable words of the immutable Lord, saying, "I will shew thee. I will bless thee. I will make thee a great nation. I will bless them that bless thee. I will curse them that curse thee. In thee shall all nations of the earth be blessed." If ever a covenant was made in which God was supreme and man had nothing whatever to say, it is the covenant the Lord God Almighty made with his servant Abraham.

The all-wise and eternal God, looking with unerring accuracy through the vista of the ages, was not in the least ignorant of all the rebellion, the stiff-necked obstinacy, the idolatry and failure of the seed of Abraham, yet He and He alone made His definite choice. Though now we see through a glass darkly, in that wonderful day, when the loose ends of all the ages are tied together, we will see all things as plain and clear as God saw them in the long ago and we will rejoice in the wisdom of Him who made such an immutable covenant with Abraham and his seed forever.

How good it would be if all God's people would take time to consider who God really is. In all probability throughout your life you have honored Him as the Lord God, the Maker of all, omnipotent, immutable, omniscient, eternal, holy, righteous and good, full of compassion and longsuffering, and abounding in tender mercies, yet for all that God's people have by their tradition made this Almighty One appear to be a weak, insipid being so changeable in His ways and unwise in His purposes that one would surely think the Lord of glory to be little more than an idol of wood or stone. My friend, when you are contemplating God, you are pondering Him who is the omnipotent creator of heaven and earth, the eternal, who is the beginning and the end of all things. You are considering Him who speaks and it is done, who commands and immediately all the powers of the universe, whether good or evil, begin working together for good that His eternal will might be fulfilled. Thus then we must conclude that, when He, the all-wise, almighty, begins a good work, He will complete it, and in the end we will make the great discovery that even the most violent oppositions of Satan were part of the infinite plan whereby the Lord worked out His perfect will. For no other reason does the scripture declare that all things work together for good to them that love God. All things simply means all things, and nothing can possibly hinder or prevent omnipotence.

When men make agreements and covenants with each other, we often encounter what is commonly known as small print. Statements are made in ambiguous terms purposely intended to be deceptive. But in God's great covenant with Abram there was no fine print nor ambiguous term, neither were there any conditions demanded of him, because the man had no voice whatever in making the covenant. Abram knew nothing of the future devised for him. He was not so much as told unto what land he should go. That was to be shown to him later. But the Lord knew every detail the future would hold. He did not see the children of Abraham as an obedient people, continually loving and serving God with a pure heart, but looking down the corridor of the years, he saw a rebellious and stiff-necked people, always prone to wander away from Him, continually digressing to the worship of some other god, forever breaking the commandments of the Lord. From the beginning, before ever He made His covenant with them, He saw this people as a people who would be so rebellious against Him that they would eventually have to be torn from their beautiful land of promise to be carried to captivity and bondage among godless Gentile nations; yet for all this they were to be forever His people, His heritage, and His nation.

In the final chapters of the book of Deuteronomy Moses, the servant of the Lord, solemnly warned the nation Israel as to their calling and responsibility before God. After pronouncing upon them almost indescribable blessings that would follow their devotion to Him, he warned them of the awful desolation that awaited them for their disobedience. This is what he said: "For I know that after my death ye will utterly corrupt yourselves, and turn aside from the way I have commanded you; and evil will befall you in the latter days; because ye will do evil in the sight of the Lord, to provoke Him to anger through the work of your hands." Deut. 31:29 Yet this same Moses, even while telling them of their abominations for which they would be scattered among the nations, saw them still as the children of His immutable covenant and continued thus: "And it shall come to pass, when all these things are come upon thee, the blessing and the curse, which I have set before thee, and thou shalt call them to mind among all the nations, whither the Lord thy God hath driven thee, and shalt return unto the Lord thy God, and shalt obey His voice according to all that I command thee this day, thou and thy children, with all thine heart, and with all thy soul; that then the Lord thy God will turn thy captivity, and have compassion upon thee, and will return and gather thee from all the nations, whither the Lord thy God hath scattered thee." Deut. 30:1-3. One would certainly be inclined to suspect that God would cast off this rebellious nation that they might be forgotten before Him. But this is never so. Israel is a chosen race forever, sealed with an everlasting covenant, always bearing the judgment of their iniquities but always through God's judgment being returned to Him. With the certain knowledge that these chosen people, inheritors of the covenant made with Abraham, are forever peculiarly the Lord's, give ear to the triumphant words of the apostle Paul, sounding like a mighty fiat for ages past and ages yet unborn. "Has God cast away His people? God forbid! ...God hath not cast away His people which He foreknew." Rom. 11:1-2 Then with triumphant understanding of God's plan, Paul writes again, "If the casting away of them be the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiving of them be, but life from the dead?" Rom. 11:15

So everlasting was the covenant made with Abraham that no subsequent failure on his part or on the part of his seed at any future time could possibly annul the agreement. The only responsibility Abram had was to obey, and everything else unto the ages of the ages, as we shall see, was in the hands of the Lord. Because the covenant was made by God and not by Abram, no sin or disobedience on his part could ever possibly absolve God of His unconditional promises. Because it was God's promise and not Abram's, therefore the carrying out and fulfilling of that promise was the responsibility of God and not of Abram. This fact, I think, was proved over and over again in the later years of Abram's life. God made the plans and Abram obeyed them. When he made mistakes, the Lord corrected him, but the covenant itself was unaltered and unchanged, as immutable as before.

Henry D. Houghton has most ably pointed out that in most, if not all, human covenants there are five distinct and essential points, as follows:
(1) The date of the agreement.

(2) The parties between whom the covenant is made.

(3) The subject and scope of the covenant.

(4) The time and operation of the agreement, limited or otherwise.

(5) The signature.

It will be noticed now that all these five articles of agreement are distinctly visible in this covenant between God and Abram. Let us note them well and neither detract from them nor add to them, but let us rather accept them as they are, for that is faith.

It may be well to mention that not all the promises of the covenant are recorded in Genesis, chapter twelve. In Genesis twelve we have God's irrevocable promise to Abram, but in Genesis seventeen the terms of the covenant are laid out in greater detail. This is what it says: "And when Abram was ninety years old and nine, the Lord appeared to Abram, and said unto him, I am the Almighty God; walk before Me, and be thou perfect. And I will make My covenant between Me and thee, and will multiply thee exceedingly. And Abram fell on his face; and God talked with him, saying, As for Me, behold My covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be a father of many nations. Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram, but thy name shall be Abraham; for a father of many nations have I made thee. And I will make thee exceedingly fruitful, and I will make nations of thee, and kings shall come out of thee. And I will establish My covenant between Me and thee and thy seed after thee in their generations for and everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee. And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God." Gen. 17:1-8

Let us now apply to this statement the five essential points we have outlined above and we will see how genuine and binding the covenant really is.

First. The date of the covenant is clearly stated as being in the ninety-ninth year of Abraham, or 1898 B.C. (Usser).

Second. In verse two and verse seven the parties to the covenant are clearly stated and set out: "Between Me and thee and thy seed after thee."

Third: The subject and scope of the covenant is clearly stated in verses two, four, five, six, seven and eight. "I will multiply thee exceedingly. Thou shall be a father of many nations. I will make thee exceedingly fruitful. ...and will make nations of thee... and kings shall come out of thee. I will establish My covenant between Me and thee and thy seed after thee... to be a God unto thee. And / will give unto thee the land wherein thou art a stranger."

Fourth. The time and length of the agreement is given in verse seven. "...to thee and to thy seed in their generations for an everlasting covenant." The agreement is perpetual and endures as long as the ages endure. I will greatly enlarge on this fourth point later on.

Fifth, and perhaps most important of all, is the signature to the agreement. This is found in verse one. "I am the Almighty God." This covenant was made by God. All its promises are of and from God. The covenant is signed by God. Abram made no promises at all, nor did he sign the agreement. Therefore it is wholly unconditional in all its aspects and leans hard on the eternal faithfulness of Almighty God.

My soul sings a thousand hallelujahs at the glory of the thing, for I know that He who promised is able to perform. Salvation is not of man. The promises are not of man. The plan is not of man. The eternal purposes are not of man. It is God who is the author and the finisher, the beginning and the ending, the first and the last in every sense of the word. From Him everything comes, by Him everything exists, and in Him everything ends. Glory to Him forever and ever, unto the ages of the ages, and for eternity as well!
In the words of this wonderful covenant the Almighty God makes the irrevocable decision that from Abraham He will create and produce an entirely new race. That race will be His people and His special heritage forever that through this nation and its seed every family of the earth shall eventually be blessed. I declare without hesitation that our Lord Jesus Christ came from this race. First He was the seed of Abraham according to the flesh and declared to be the Son of God with power by the Spirit of holiness and the resurrection from the dead. Furthermore, the church had its beginning with this race on the day of Pentecost, and it is of tremendous importance that we see that the one hundred and forty-four thousand sons of God, sealed and chosen as we read in the book of Revelation, chapter 7:4-8, are from the twelve tribes of this same race. When all Israel shall be saved, as is clearly stated by Paul and Isaiah in Romans 11:26 and Isaiah 66:8, this race, the seed of Abraham, will be the principal nation of the millennial kingdom, judged by Christ and those who have followed Him. Matt. 19:28. This race, saved and washed and forever freed from sin, will be the New Jerusalem, descending from God out of heaven at the end of the millennial kingdom as a bride adorned for her husband.

"Hath God cast away his people? God forbid. God hath not cast away His people which He foreknew." Rom. 11:1-2 But their eyes at present are darkened that they may not see and their backs are bowed down for an age. Verse 10 "Have they stumbled that they might fall? God forbid: but rather through their fall salvation is come unto the Gentiles, for to provoke them to jealousy. Now if the fall of them be the riches of the world, and the diminishing of them the riches of the Gentiles; how much more their fullness! ... For if the casting away of them be the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiving of them be, but life from the dead?" Rom. 11:12, 15. "I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits; that blindness in part (not total, please note; only in part) is happened to Israel, until the fullness (full number) of the Gentiles be come in. And so all Israel shall be saved: as it is written, There shall come out of Sion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob. For this is My covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins. Concerning the gospel, they are enemies for your sakes: but as touching the election, they are beloved for the fathers' sakes." Rom. 11:25-28. (The fathers here are Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.) Please notice with care that Paul here definitely shows that their restoration is in fulfillment of the covenant made with Abraham.

From the day God made His covenant with Abraham, throughout the book of God, all through the intervening centuries to this very day and the ages yet to come, God's choice is certain and irrevocable. Certainly there has been anger, wrath, rebuke, judgment and punishment sore and terrible upon all the seed of Abraham - so much so that one might think God's mercy had departed from them for ever, but that can never be, for above all the turmoil that has resulted from their abounding iniquities God's attitude has never changed toward them and His mercy is ever extended unto them because of the certainty of a covenant made unto a thousand generations.

Wonderful as was the promise made by God to Abram at the first, I think it correct to say that here and there along the way the dear Lord added more extensive promises, which may rightfully be included in the covenant. For instance, Genesis seventeen records deeper promises than Genesis twelve, and then again, when Abraham was called upon to offer His son Isaac as a sacrifice to God and refused not to obey, the Lord adds the promise of another seed - a seed that hitherto had not been mentioned, saying, "By Myself have I sworn, saith the Lord, for because thou has done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son; that in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore: and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed My voice." Gen. 22:16-18. The Lord did not say to Abraham in this passage, "If you do this I will do this," but, "Because thou hast done this thing, I will do." Abraham had no more to do than that which he had already done. Thus I declare that no circumstances anywhere or at any time can possibly release God from His immutable promise. And who is that man anywhere in the world who is so vain as to imagine that the Almighty God has any wish to be absolved from His promise?

A most significant statement is made by the apostle Paul in the book of Hebrews, chapter six, verses thirteen to eighteen. "When God made promise to Abraham, because He could swear by no greater, He swore by Himself, saying, Surely blessing I will bless thee, and multiplying I will multiply thee. And so, after he had patiently endured, he obtained the promise. For men verily swear by the greater: and an oath for confirmation is to them an end of all strife. Wherein God, willing more abundantly to shew onto the heirs of promise the immutability of His counsel, confirmed it by an oath: that by two immutable things (God's promise and God's oath), in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us." God's promise is immutable and His oath is immutable. Thus His promise to Abraham and his seed is immutable and is confirmed by God's immutable oath. Hence the promise is made doubly sure, for He who promised and He who swore is God, who cannot lie. What I am saying here is so revolutionary in its scope that it demands a complete new understanding of the unchanging purposes of Him who swore and never repents, who declares and His word stands forever. When the great apostle Paul declared, "The gifts and callings of God are without repentance," he was speaking of God's covenant with Israel. Surely no one would be hardy enough to deny that, for he says, "As concerning the gospel, they are enemies for your sakes: but as touching the election, they are beloved for the fathers' sakes. For the gifts and calling of God are without repentance." Rom. 11:28, 29.

This wonderful covenant with Abraham and his seed forever was not only a covenant with an individual, but it was most certainly a covenant made with the nation that sprang from that one individual. That nation is Israel. That nation has twelve heads and, though Israel is but one nation, each of the twelve sons of Jacob was to become a nation in his own right, or a tribe of one nation. These Israelitish nations may be clearly defined in our day as "the head and not the tail." They are without doubt the leading nations of the earth, just as it was promised to our father Abraham that great nations would come from him and that his name would be great.

It is of utmost importance that we point out that it was not Abraham who sought out God to make a covenant with Him. It was God who sought out Abram to make a covenant with him. The covenant was sought by God, and proposed by God, and instituted by Him. The whole intention of the covenant was the inauguration of a special relationship between God and Abraham and his seed forever. Ages and ages were to pass by, but the covenant could never be annulled. Dispensations and millenniums were to wax and wane, but the covenant was to remain absolutely unaltered. Oh, what a wonderful thing that really is! How inexhaustible God's resources, wisdom and knowledge are! How unfathomable His decisions are! How untraceable His ways! Who has ever known the Lord's thoughts or advised Him? Who has advanced Him anything for which he will have to be repaid? For of Him and through Him and to Him are all things. Blessed be His name for ever more.

The whole wonderful book called the Bible is the history of Abraham's race. It does not merely mention the nation Israel, but the actual history of Abraham and his seed, both natural and spiritual, fills its inspired pages from Genesis, chapter twelve, to the last chapter of the book of Revelation. And, if I may make so bold as to say so, I am certain that beyond the millennial kingdom the seed of Abraham, by then all redeemed by the blood of Christ never to wander or sin any more, will be the blessing and light of those ages in which it is God's purpose to gather together in one all things in Christ. Eph. 1:10

In Old Testament times the making of a covenant was always considered a very serious and sacred matter. None of the parties to the covenant entered lightly into the agreement. So sacred was the covenant in the eyes of those who made it that it was often sealed by an act of death. As long as a man lives there always exists the possibility of his breaking a covenant, but after he is dead, there is no longer such possibility. It was therefore the custom in the Old Testament times, when a covenant was made between two parties, that death should be implied in the following manner. An animal was killed and the carcass divided in two. The two halves were then separated a short distance apart. The party making the covenant would then walk between the two halves of the dead animal. Thus in figure he was walking in the midst of death, and so in the presence of witnesses the covenant was made irrevocable by the symbol of death.

Now Paul, writing to the Hebrew Christians and speaking of the covenant made by Jesus Christ - that by the shedding of His blood we should be forgiven of our sins and justified in His sight - made this remarkable statement: "Where a testament (covenant) is, there must also of necessity be the death of the testator (covenanter). For a testament (covenant) is of force after men are dead: otherwise it is of no strength at all while the testator liveth. Whereupon neither the first testament (covenant) was dedicated without blood. For when Moses had spoken every precept to all the people according to the law, he took the blood of calves and of goats, with water, and scarlet wool, and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book and all the people, saying, This is the blood of the testament (covenant) which God hath enjoined unto you. Moreover he sprinkled with blood both the tabernacle, and all the vessels of the ministry. And almost all things are by the law purged with blood; and without the shedding of blood there is no remission." Heb. 9:16-22 From this passage we not only gain a better understanding of the meaning of the all-essential shedding of the blood of Jesus Christ, but we also understand more fully why death, either in actuality or in symbol, was necessary to guarantee that a covenant should be unalterable.

When the Lord made His great covenant with Abram, He made it unchangeable by doing two immutable things. First, God, who cannot lie, gave His promise to Abram. Second, because He could swear by no greater, He swore by Himself that blessing He would bless him. But, though additional witness was not needed, the Lord God Almighty, who cannot lie nor die, added the further assurance of the death symbol as follows: In Genesis, chapter fifteen and verses one to eight, we have the account of the Lord's renewing His covenant promises to Abraham and actually showing him the vast scope of the land he was to possess. In verse six we are told that Abraham believed in the Lord and He counted it to him for righteousness, but in verse eight Abraham asked the Lord this one very important question, "Lord God, whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it?" It is very apparent that the Lord considered Abraham's question to be a very logical one, and without a moment's hesitation or a word of rebuke the Lord gave him the one and only absolute answer that could be given. Behold the wonder of the following words: "And He (God) said unto him, Take Me an heifer of three years old, and a she goat of three years old, and a ram of three years old, and a turtledove and a young pigeon. And he took unto Him all these, and divided them in the midst, and laid each piece one against another: but the birds divided he not." Verses 9-10 Here we see the Lord carrying out in every detail the vital act of confirming a covenant by death. Now notice what happened. The animals were killed and the halves divided, the heifer, the goat, and the ram. The birds were not divided, but laid apart on either side. As Abraham carefully watched to see what God would do, a deep sleep fell upon him and an horror of great darkness, and he heard the voice of the Lord speaking to him. Then as he watched, "it came to pass that, when the sun went down, and it was dark, behold a smoking furnace, and a burning lamp that passed between the pieces." Verse 17 Then we are told, "In the same day the Lord made a covenant with Abram, saying, Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates," Verse 18. What was the burning lamp that passed between the sections of those slain beasts? Or should I enquire who was it? It was none other than the Lord Himself, walking amid death as the custom was, sealing His own covenant with death that it might be unalterable and it might be everlastingly sure to Abram and his seed forever.

There is no possible way by which such a covenant can be suspended. It was made to Abram and his seed forever and sealed with the blood of death, the Lord Himself walking between the divided carcasses of the beasts that were slain. We will further notice that it was the Lord and not Abram who said, "Take Me an heifer, a goat, a ram, a turtledove and a young pigeon." And it was the Lord, not Abram, who sealed the covenant by walking in the midst of death that not even the Almighty could ever make the covenant of none effect. The worth of this covenant lies in the fact that it cannot be broken. No power on earth can break it, for He has promised, He has sworn by Himself, and He has walked through the symbol of death. Man cannot change it. Unbelief cannot change it. Parents cannot change it, for each generation inherits its promise from God because the promise was made to Abram and his seed forever. Even the mighty thunderings of the law at Sinai, which was four hundred and thirty years after the covenant, could not disannul or make the promise of none effect, for God gave it to Abraham and his seed forever by His immutable promise.

THE WITNESSES TO THE COVENANT

Two little clouds one summer's day
Went flying through the sky;
They went so fast they bumped their heads,
And both began to cry.

Old Father Sun looked out and said,
"Oh, never mind, my dears;
I'll send my little fairy folk
To dry your falling tears.

One fairy came in violet,
And one in indigo;
In blue, green, yellow, orange, red
They made a pretty row.

They wiped the cloud tears all away,
And then from out the sky
Upon a line the sunbeams made
They hung their gowns to dry.

It was almost sixty years ago that our teacher, Miss Robinson, taught our grade two class to recite those pretty words. Many times as little children we had seen the beautiful rainbow, thrown like a mantle around the shoulders of a passing storm, but little did we realize that every appearance of its magnificent beauty was confirmation of the everlasting covenant which God, who cannot lie, made with His beloved servant Noah.

The history of the flood of Noah's day is not a fable to be believed by some and ridiculed by others. Evidence of its devastation is found almost everywhere on earth and people who have traveled much throughout the world testify continually that the tradition of a great flood which once inundated and ravished the earth that then was is to be found with every tribe and nation of the world. As to the pure all things are pure and to the unholy and defiled nothing is pure, so to the faithful believer all that God has spoken is true, but to the unbeliever the gloom of doubt casts its sickening shadow over all God has spoken, even making uncertain the Lord God Himself.

There is no greater certainty than that there will never be another flood. It was God who opened the windows of heaven and loosed the fountains of the mighty deep, sending upon the earth a flood to destroy the world and all its wickedness in the days of Noah, but it was the selfsame Lord who, after the fearful flood of waters was assuaged, made this covenant with Noah and his seed: "And I, behold, I establish My covenant with you, and with your seed after you; and with every living creature that is with you, of the fowl, of the cattle, and of every beast of the earth with you; from all that go out of the ark, to every beast of the earth. And I will establish My covenant with you; neither shall all flesh be cut off any more by the waters of a flood; neither shall there any more be a flood to destroy the earth. And God said, This is the token of the covenant which I make between Me and you and every living creature that is with you, for perpetual generations. I do set My bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between Me and the earth. And it shall come to pass, when I bring a cloud over the earth, that the bow shall be seen in the cloud: and I will remember My covenant, which is between Me and you and every living creature of all flesh; and the waters shall no more become a flood to destroy all flesh. And the bow shall be in the cloud; and I will look upon it, that I may remember the everlasting covenant between God and every living creature of all flesh that is upon the earth. And God said unto Noah, This is the token of the covenant, which I have established between Me and all flesh that is upon the earth." Gen. 9:9-17

It is not the covenant God made with Noah with which we wish to deal, but the covenant He made with Abraham. We refer here to the Noahic covenant only that our faith may be greatly inspired to trust the word of the living and immutable God and that we may be certain that all He has promised He will perform, even to every jot and tittle, and nothing can let or hinder His faithfulness and power. As God's covenant with Noah was unconditional, so also was His covenant with Abraham. Noah had nothing to do and nothing to say about the terms of the covenant. It was as certain and sovereign as any will that could possibly be made. Though that covenant was made with all mankind forever and with the beasts and the birds and the earth itself and though none of these had one word to say about the covenant or its terms, they can enjoy its promise and live in the knowledge that, however great a storm may threaten the world, never again will the earth or the people in it, regardless of their sin or wickedness, be destroyed by the waters of a flood. That covenant is just as certain as God is certain, and it is in His great love and mercy that year after year, storm after storm, He hangs His bow of sevenfold witness in the cloud that we may know He has not forgotten His promise or in any way altered the terms of it. Would God that all men and women, boys and girls, would look up to God when the rainbow appears in the sky and give thanks to Him whose promises never fail, for all He has promised will surely be fulfilled.

There is something entrancingly wonderful about a rainbow. It is beyond my understanding. Though its appearance in the cloud may have a simple scientific explanation that readily satisfies the unbelieving and unconcerned, when by the eye of faith and trust we look beyond its excellent beauty, we find God and see a glory that causes believers to worship at His feet. Thus did Ezekiel worship when, clothed by the glory of the Holy Spirit, he beheld a vision of God so sublime that no man has ever yet been able to fathom its depths or explain its meaning. "Above the firmament that was over their heads was the likeness of a throne, as the appearance of a sapphire stone; and upon the likeness of the throne was the likeness as the appearance of a man above upon it. And I saw as the color of amber, as the appearance of fire round about within it, from the appearance of his loins even upward, and from the appearance of his loins even downward, I saw as it were the appearance of fire, and it had brightness round about. As the appearance of the bow that is in the cloud in the day of rain, so was the appearance of the brightness round about. This was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the Lord. And when I saw it, I fell upon my face, and I heard a voice of one that spake." Ezek. 1:26-28

John the beloved was on the Isle of Patmos for the word of God and the testimony of the Lord when he was caught away in the Spirit. In spirit he saw the glory of the Lord and the fullness of Christ in both the Head and the body together. Then, in chapter four, he heard a voice like a trumpet calling to him, "Come up hither, and I will shew thee things which must be hereafter. And immediately I was in the Spirit: and, behold, a throne was set in heaven, and one sat on the throne. And he that sat was to look upon like a jasper and a sardine stone: and there was a rainbow round about the throne, in sight like unto an emerald." Rev. 4:1-3 I cannot explain the meaning of it. No doubt there are some who can, but in view of the desolation, which John was to behold from this heavenly vantage point, it is a thing of exceeding wonder that the rainbow of promise was over God's throne. The earth and its inhabitants would not be destroyed by the tribulation of water and neither will they be totally destroyed by the dreadful fires of tribulation that even now are devouring far and near among the hosts of mankind.

Again in Revelation, chapter ten, the rainbow appears. Six of the seven trumpets of the Lord had sounded and, following the first of those dreadful blasts, the third part of the trees and the grass were burned up. Following the second, a mountain burning with fire had fallen into the sea and the third part of the sea had turned to blood, and a third part of the creatures which were in the sea died, and the third part of the ships were destroyed. When the third trumpet sounded, a star fell upon the rivers and fountains of water and they became bitter, and men died of the water. The fourth angel sounded and a third part of the moon and the sun and the stars were darkened, and an angel flew through heaven proclaiming woe to the inhabitants of the earth. The fifth angel sounded and a noisome smoke appeared from the bottomless pit, and dire calamities fell upon all who had not the seal of God in their foreheads. And when the sixth angel sounded, the great river Euphrates was dried up that the way of the kings of the east might be prepared for the battle in which two hundred million men would be locked in the final conflict of the age.

But, before the seventh angel sounded, John said, "And I saw another mighty angel come down from heaven, clothed with a cloud: and a rainbow was upon his head, and his face was as it were the sun, and his feet as pillars of fire." When the seventh angel sounded, the mystery of God was to be finished for this age, and there at the close of that dread tribulation was the rainbow of God's hope and promise just as it had appeared after the fearful flood in the long, long ago. God is faithful and He cannot lie. He gives His assurance to man that he might know that beyond the dreadful storm clouds that gather on every horizon there is promise — a promise that is fulfilled in God's wonderful Christ.

We have spoken briefly of the covenant, which God made with Noah and we have seen the Almighty confirm that covenant by the sevenfold witness of the rainbow. I may be wrong, but it would appear that the seven colors of the rainbow represent the seven Spirits that are before His throne. Rev. 1:4. These are mentioned in Isa. 11:2 as the spirit of the Lord, the spirit of wisdom, the spirit of understanding, the spirit of counsel, the spirit of might, the spirit of knowledge, and the spirit of reverence, or fear. If these be the seven witnesses who notarized the agreement God Almighty made with Noah, his seed, and all the earth, then do you not think it is a most wonderful thing that the prophet Isaiah, speaking to the rebellious house of Judah on the very eve of her Babylonian captivity, raised his prophetic voice in these words, which without doubt have definite reference to God's covenant with Abraham and his seed after him? Listen to these words of promise to that wicked and rebellious generation of Israel's seed. "For a small moment have I forsaken thee; but with great mercies will I gather thee. In a little wrath I hid My face from thee for a moment; but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee; saith the Lord thy Redeemer. For this is as the waters of Noah unto Me: for as I have sworn that the waters of Noah should no more go over the earth, so have I sworn that I would not be wroth with thee, nor rebuke thee. For the mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed; but My kindness shall not depart from thee; neither shall the covenant of My peace be removed, saith the Lord that hath mercy on thee." Isa. 54: 7-10 As God has sworn that the waters of Noah shall never more go over the earth and has confirmed that covenant by the continual miracle of the rainbow, so has He sworn that His kindness shall never depart from Israel, nor can His covenant with them be annulled or broken. This, we must all admit, is an exceedingly wonderful promise and I am sure every reader will heartily agree.

Every covenant to be effective must have one or more witnesses. Thus when God made His covenant with Noah, He gave a sure, certain and unchanging witness that He would never break His promise. The rainbow every time it appears is God's unalterable signature to the agreement. Every time the storm clouds release their waters upon the earth, God's signature appears in the beauty of a rainbow to assure us that He has remembered His ancient covenant and will never flood the world again. What need has God to be reminded of His covenant? How could He who is omniscient ever forget? Yet listen to what He says regarding the sign of the rainbow: "The bow shall be seen in the cloud: and I will remember My covenant, which is between Me and you and every living creature of all flesh; and the waters shall no more become a flood to destroy all flesh. And the bow shall be in the cloud; and I will look upon it, that I may remember the everlasting covenant between God and every living creature of all flesh that is upon the earth." Gen. 9:14-16 "I will look upon it and I will remember My covenant." What wonderful words of assurance are these and what a steadfast assurance of His faithfulness!

As God has sworn that the waters of Noah shall no more go over the earth, so has He sworn that He will remember His covenant with Abraham and Israel, his seed, and that His kindness will never, ever depart from them. (Please read again Isa. 54: 8-10) When the Lord swore to Abraham that (1) he would be a great nation, (2) He (God) would bless him, (3) He would make his name great, (4) he (Abraham) would be a blessing, (5) He would bless him that blessed Abraham, (6) and curse him that cursed him, and (8) in him and in his seed should all the families of the earth be blessed, because He could swear by no greater, He swore by Himself (Heb. 6:13) that by two immutable things (God's promise and God's oath) we might have strong confidence, who have fled for refuge to lay hold on the hope that is set before us. Verse 18. Just as the Lord gave the rainbow as a witness to Noah and his seed, so also He gave an ever abiding witness to Abraham and his seed forever.

It will now be to our eternal edification to examine the eight ever present, ever abiding witnesses, which God has given to assure us that His covenant with the twelve tribes of Israel cannot and will not ever be broken. An everlasting covenant has need of everlasting witnesses, witnesses that ever live, and signatures that cannot be erased. It would not have been like God to call upon frail men to witness His agreement. It would not have seemed fit for the Eternal to have called upon Lot or Chedorlaomer or Sarah to witness the agreement, for they were only frail mortals, creatures of time that would soon pass from the horizon of all earthly activity and be no more. Men in future ages might argue as to whether such persons ever really existed, as indeed in our day they carelessly do. But when God calls upon witnesses to His everlasting covenant, He must have a more sure witness than the signatures of men. Centuries after the agreement with Abraham and his seed was made, the prophet Jeremiah told us what those everlasting witnesses were. These witnesses, though silent in their eternal spheres, shout aloud their witness every morning and hymn their message every night that God has not cast away His people whom He foreknew. The sound of their witness reaches into all the world, bearing witness to the extravagant claims of the apostle Paul that "all Israel shall be saved." Rom. 11: 26

Though God is ever faithful and all mankind should believe His word, yet, alas, alas, men do not believe Him; neither do they trust His faithfulness. I terribly fear that we shall find the greatest offenders to be those blind leaders of the blind who profess to be shepherds of God's flock and keepers of His promise. Not only are these... an offence unto themselves, but they diligently plant the seeds of doubt and unbelief in the hearts of the unsuspecting millions who listen to them. In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established, the Lord declares. But the Lord has added more than two or three witnesses as we shall see - witnesses that do not die, witnesses that do not lie, witnesses that cannot change their minds with the passage of time or the turn of events, witnesses that silently and continually declare that all is well, that God is in His heaven keeping diligent watch over His chosen nation, fulfilling His word, and carrying out His promises toward them and His purpose in them.

The ten tribes of the house of Israel had been carried away into their Assyrian captivity more than one hundred years when Jeremiah gave the prophecy I shall now quote. The two tribes of the house of Judah were on the very eve of their Babylonian captivity when the weeping prophet Jeremiah called on eight everlasting witnesses to attest God's faithfulness to His covenant; "Thus saith the Lord, which giveth the sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the moon and of the stars for a light by night, which divideth the sea when the waves thereof roar; The Lord of hosts is His name: If those ordinances depart from before Me, saith the Lord, then the seed of Israel shall also cease from being a nation before Me forever. Thus saith the Lord; If heaven above can be measured, and the foundations of the earth searched out beneath, I will also cast off all the seed of Israel for all that they have done, saith the Lord." Jer. 31:35-37 Then in Chapter 33:23 he continues with these words: "Moreover the word of the Lord came to Jeremiah, saying," Considerest thou not what this people have spoken, saying, The two families which the Lord hath chosen, He hath even cast them off? Thus they have despised My people, that they should be no more a nation before them. Thus saith the Lord; If My covenant be not with day and night, and if I have not appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth; then will I cast away the seed of Jacob, and David My servant, so that I will not take any of his seed to be the rulers over the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; for I will cause their captivity to return, and have mercy on them." Jer. 33: 23-26

Eight unimpeachable witnesses to God's covenant with His earthly people are called upon here to bear witness - the sun, the moon, the stars, the heavens, the earth, the sea, the Jay and the night. As long as these continue, the Almighty declares, so also will His covenant continue which He made with Abraham and with His seed, which Jeremiah identifies as the two families, which the Lord has chosen. Verse 24 The two families are the house of Israel, consisting of the ten tribes, and the house of Judah, consisting of the two tribes, Judah and Benjamin.

If the rainbow, appearing occasionally in the cloud was to be an everlasting witness that the earth would never more be destroyed by a flood, what shall we say of these eight ever, present witnesses that are about us, reminding us continually, both by day and by night, that His covenant with the seed of Abraham can never fail. Cast your eyes heavenward by day, O man, and you will see the fiery witness of the sun as he smiles the message: "God will never forget His covenant with His people." Lift up your eyes to behold the magnificent heavens at night, for her innumerable lights give the assurance, "The Lord has remembered His covenant with Abraham and his seed forever." Praise Him, oh ye sun and moon! Praise Him, all ye stars of light! Praise Him, oh ye heavens above, that His promise shall endure while lights do shine and be steadfast while they remain unaltered and unhindered. His promises abide unswayed and unsullied by the failures of carnal man, whose unbelief momentarily hides His face from theirs. Let him that rideth upon the sea remember forever that her mighty waves, crashing with violence upon rock and shore, call with their every rising and falling that, while her waters fill the seas, God's covenant with His people abideth sure. Let every farmer who plows the earth and every miner who digs for treasure in the bowels thereof remember the covenant of the Lord, for every plowing, each lump of coal or nugget of gold that comes from the miner's digging, bears witness with its silent voice that God's covenant with Abraham and his seed is standing sure, and while earth and things therein endure, so also will His covenant endure. Thus saith God, "While sun and moon and stars endure, my covenant shall endure." When these shall be no more, covenants will be needed no more at all.

Great is Thy faithfulness, O God, my Father!
There is no shadow of turning with Thee.
Thou changest not; Thy compassions they fail not;
As Thou hast been Thou forever wilt be.
Summer and winter and spring time and harvest,
Sun, moon, and stars in their courses above
Join with all nature in manifold witness
To Thy great faithfulness, mercy and love.

Jeremiah did not stop here, however, even with so great promises as these. His heart, though crushed beneath the load of judgment that had befallen his people, was yet overflowing with the knowledge of the faithfulness of God. Lifting up his prophetic voice with tears and triumph blending, he cried aloud this assurance: "Thus saith the Lord; If ye can break My covenant of the day, and My covenant of the night, and that there should not be day and night in their season; then may also my covenant be broken with David, My servant, that he should not have a son to reign upon his throne; and with the Levites the priests, My ministers. As the host of heaven cannot be numbered, neither the sand of the sea measured: so will I multiply the seed of David My servant, and the Levites that minister unto Me." Jer. 33: 20-23

Somewhere upon the earth today the families of God's chosen people exist, both the unbelieving house of Judah and the rebellious house of Israel. So also must exist the seed of David and his throne, reserved until He comes whose right it is to reign, and until the day comes when man has opened the earth and measured its depths, and stretched out his line to measure the expanse of the heavens, he must stop his vain imagining that God has forgotten his covenant with Israel. When the sun and the moon, the stars and the heavens and the earth and the sea are all removed, then and not until then may the covenant with Abraham and his seed be done away. Even then the covenant shall endure but, the promise being fulfilled, will have no further need of witnesses. Powers of earth, powers of heaven, and powers of hell are impotent in the light of God's promises. His promises are sure. None of His words are ambiguous. His covenants are positive, definite and reliable. All are aionian and as durable as the sun, the moon, the stars, the seas, the earth, and the heaven above.

"If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning," saith the Lord. "If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth; if I prefer not Jerusalem above my chief joy." God can never cast off His people - not for all their horrible sins, their unbelief, and their turning to other gods. His covenant to Abraham is certain and sure, and when He has brought them by the way which we humans cannot fully understand and their learning is complete, they will be re-gathered according to the word of the Lord.

Hear the word of the Lord as the great prophet Isaiah foretells the days of Israel's captivity and feel the glory of the promises and the assurance of their regathering. See how beautifully he looks beyond the shadows of the dark days that lay before them unto the blessed day when the Lord shall say of them, "Their righteousness is of Me." "Sing, O barren, thou that didst not bear; break forth into singing, and cry aloud, thou that didst not travail with child: for more are the children of the desolate than the children of the married wife, saith the Lord. Enlarge the place of thy tent, and let them stretch forth the curtains of thine habitations: spare not, lengthen thy cords and strengthen thy stakes; for thou shalt break forth on the right hand and on the left; and thy seed shall inherit the Gentiles, and make the desolate cities to be inhabited. Fear not; for thou shall not be ashamed: neither be thou confounded; for thou shalt not be put to shame; for thou shalt forget the shame of thy youth; and shall not remember the reproach of thy widowhood any more. For thy maker is thine husband; the Lord of hosts is His name; and thy Redeemer the Holy One of Israel; The God of the whole earth shall He be called. For the Lord hath called thee as a woman forsaken and grieved in spirit, and a wife of youth, when thou was refused, saith thy God. For a small moment have I forsaken thee; but with great mercies will I gather thee. In a little wrath I hid My face from thee for a moment; but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the Lord thy Redeemer. For this is as the waters of Noah unto Me: for as I have sworn that the waters of Noah should no more go over the earth; so have I sworn that I would not be wroth with thee, nor rebuke thee. For the mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed; but My kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the covenant of My peace be removed, saith the Lord that hath mercy on thee. O thou afflicted, tossed with tempest, and not comforted, behold. I will lay thy stones with fair colors, and lay thy foundations with sapphires. And I will make thy windows of agates, and thy gates of carbuncles, and all thy borders of pleasant stones. And all thy children shall be taught of the Lord; and great shall be the peace of thy children. In righteousness shalt thou be established: thou shalt be far from oppression; for thou shalt not fear; and from terror, for it shall not come near thee. Behold, they shall surely gather together, but not by Me; whosoever shall gather together against thee shall fall for thy sake. Behold, I have created the smith that bloweth the coals in the fire, and that bringethforth an instrument for his work; and I have created the waster to destroy. No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord, and their righteousness is of Me, saith the Lord."

Isa. 54: 1-17

I trust that, as my story unfolds, every devout reader will discover for himself the infinite purpose the Lord had in mind when He made such an everlasting covenant as this with Abraham His servant and Israel His heritage. We poor humans with our dull lowland ears and heavy hearts so filled with doubt and misunderstanding are inclined to think the Lord of heaven and earth could be as changeable and vacillating as we are. Men and nations, sad to say, willingly enter into solemn covenants only to forget all about them in the first moments of inconvenience. I wonder how many solemn covenants have been made and broken by men and nations since that fateful day in 1914 when Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany discarded as a "scrap of paper" his solemn agreement with England? Men and nations are seldom worthy of trust. Their solemn agreements crumble and are discarded on every hand. He whose name is faithful and true calls heaven and earth to witness that His word to men and nations is sure and changeless unto a thousand generations. Deut. 7:9

Now if in our deliberations concerning the Lord and His faithful covenant with Israel we come to the childish conclusion that the Lord was doing no more than making favorites among nations as some unwise parents do among their children, then we would have reason to question His wisdom; but when with the eye of faith we see in this relationship the unfolding of the purpose of the ages, then our spiritual eyes are enlightened and understanding floods our pathway. Who dare challenge the wise Creator if He be willing to plant the seed of universal blessing and restoration first in one man and then more abundantly to show unto his heirs the immutability of His promise by confirming it with an oath, that by those two immutable things - God's promise and God's oath - we might have strong confidence to lay hold on the promise before us? If God could possibly fail in His unconditional promise to Abraham and his seed, then who could ever trust Him? How could we be certain that His promise to us could not fail? But He is faithful who promised. Five hundred years after Abraham was dead, He renewed His oath to Abraham's seed in the Promised Land, saying, "I will never break My covenant with you."

Judges 2:1

It is through Israel - all twelve tribes of them - that all the families of the earth shall be blessed. Gen. 12:3 All the families of the earth! How vast and all-inclusive is that mighty promise! The millions; yea, billions, that have lived and died through ages and dispensations, never once having heard the name of Abraham or his seed, which is Christ, shall in eons yet unborn receive the blessing of God, for He is faithful who promised, who also will do it. I cannot believe that the Lord was lacking an eternal purpose when He made man in the beginning, for He has spoken of the restitution of all things and clearly announces a time when every knee shall bow to Christ and every creature in heaven and in earth and under the earth will be heard confessing with joy that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father. I read in God's word of a vision John saw on the Isle of Patmos, a scene wherein every creature in heaven and in earth and in the sea was heard glorifying the name of the Lord, saying, "Blessing and honor and glory and power be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne and unto the Lamb forever and ever."

Rev. 5:13 And Paul, writing by the wisdom of God, spoke of that redemption wrought by Christ, saying that God by Him has reconciled all things unto Himself. "And having made peace by the blood of His cross, by Him to reconcile all things unto Himself; by Him, I say, whether they be things in earth or things in heaven."

Col. 1:20 What a glorious plan God has designed! There is coming a season in the dispensation of the fullness of times in which our heavenly Father has decreed that He will gather together all things into His Christ (Eph. 1:10), which Christ is the seed of Abraham as I shall later show.

At this present moment blindness in part has happened unto all the twelve tribes of Israel. The house of Judah is in great blindness, for, while thousands of them know that they are the seed of Abraham and heirs of the promises of God, they have rejected their Messiah and believed not on the Lord Jesus Christ. How clearly the word of God describes their blindness and unbelief when the Holy Spirit said, "He came unto His own, and His own received Him not."

John 1:11 The house of Judah was especially His own - more, in a sense, than the ten tribes of Israel - because it was of Judah that Christ would come. It is written: "The scepter shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come,"

Gen. 49:10 Jesus Christ is the Lion of the tribe of Judah. He is the root and offspring of David (Rev. 5:5), who also was of Judah. The house of Judah should have known their Lord, but they knew Him not. "Away with such a fellow from the earth," was the malevolent cry of their unbelief. "We will not have this man to reign over us. We have no king but Caesar." "His blood be upon us and our children," they demanded; and truly His blood has been upon them and their children, but in spite of their blindness and unbelief they are still "heirs according to the promise," and the Lord has not forgotten them.

In God's holy word the house of Judah is likened unto a fig tree. Jer. 24:1-8, The Jews understood this symbol in their day as clearly as though the Lord had called them by name. The account of the cursing of the fig tree (Matt. 21:19) is vivid in the mind of every student of scripture. The story records that Jesus, being hungry and ready to eat, saw a fig tree afar off having leaves upon it, but, upon coming to the tree, He found to His surprise that there was no fruit upon it. Though the time of figs was not yet, this strange instance is explained by the simple fact that, unlike other trees, it is the nature of the fig tree to bear her fruit first and the leaves afterward. Therefore, since there were leaves, the Lord was right to expect fruit also. What a picture this is of the house of Judah! Plenty of leaves! All manner of outward show! But no fruit. The children of Abraham on the outside, but the children of the devil within! So Jesus pronounced a curse upon the fig tree, which is symbolic of the house of Judah, commonly known as the Jews, saying, "May no fruit grow on thee to the age." Matt. 21:19 (Diaglott). And when they returned and saw the tree the next day, it was dried up. In cursing the fig tree, He was symbolically cursing the house of Judah unto the age, that is to say, unto the kingdom age. It is not correct to use the word forever here as in the common version, for Judah will be restored in the kingdom. True to God's word the entire age of grace has come and gone, but nationally the Jews are as blind and fruitless as they were in that day when the Lord pronounced the curse upon them. They rejected God's Christ and God has rejected them for this entire age of grace. As a result they have wandered homeless throughout the whole earth as foretold by Jeremiah. Jer. 24:9-10 Only now are they being gathered in darkness, blindness and unbelief according to the word of the Lord, for He can never break His covenant with them.

Even the apostle Paul, who upon several occasions, clearly stated that he was a Jew, for the tribe of Benjamin belonged to the house of Judah, made the significant statement that he was as one "born out of due time." 1 Cor. 15:8 In other words it was not yet time for Judah to be reborn nationally, but because the Lord elected him to salvation, his eyes had been opened by Christ in spite of the curse that had been pronounced on the nation as a whole. This is the clearest possible evidence of the power of election.

Now the ten tribes of the house of Israel, to whom we will make only a passing reference here, have a completely different story to tell. The house of Judah, blind as they are to Christ, are very much aware that they are Israelites, of the seed of Abraham and heirs of the covenant. The house of Israel on the other hand is exactly opposite to this. They know who Christ is, for Christ is the glory of His people Israel (Matt. 2:32), but the so called lost ten tribes of the house of Israel are blind as to who they are. They have lost their own identity and imagine that they are Gentiles. Thus blindness in part afflicts them. The house of Judah is blind to God's Christ and knows Him not. The house of Israel is blind to her national identity, knowing not that they are the children of Abraham and heirs according to the promise. In short Judah knows her own identity but is blind to who Christ is. Israel knows who Christ is but is blind to her own identity.

The word of the Lord clearly shows that in the end of the age "all will know Him from the least to the greatest" and all will understand God's secret purpose for the nation, for it will come to pass that in the same place in which God said to them, "Ye are not My people," in that place shall He say unto them, "Ye are the sons of the living God." Hosea 1:10 To those who have believed in Christ Jesus our Lord the darkness is past and the true light now shineth, but it will come to pass that all shall know Him from the least to the greatest, for it is written: "And they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for they shall all know Me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord: for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more." Jer. 31:34

Christians who permit themselves to see in Israel nothing more than that handful of unbelieving Jews now returning to Palestine are allowing their spiritual minds to be blinded to one of the most important truths of the age. The Bible gives more than seventy identification marks by which we may identify the house of Israel in our day and it is a most remarkable fact that the house of Judah possesses practically none of these identifying marks. Simeon prophesied, saying that Jesus would be "a light to lighten the Gentiles and the glory of Thy (God's) people Israel." Jesus has certainly not been the glory of the Jews, so we must look elsewhere for nations who glory in Him. Ask any man in the Anglo-Saxon world, whether he be saint or sinner, and he knows who Jesus Christ is and, except in the case of some professed atheist, he will tell you plainly that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. "He shall be the glory of Thy people Israel;" said the anointed Simeon, and all over the Anglo-Saxon world every day, week after week, year after year, and century after century millions of people, both saved and unsaved, lift their voices to sing aloud.

"In the cross of Christ I glory,
Towering o'er the wrecks of time.
All the light of sacred story
Gathers round His head sublime."

And again we hear them sing:

When I survey the wondrous cross
On which the Prince of glory died,
My richest gain I count but loss
And pour contempt on all my pride.

We love to sing:

My hope is built on nothing less Than Jesus blood and righteousness;
I dare not trust the sweetest frame,
But wholly lean on Jesus' name.

On Christ the solid rock I stand;
All other ground is sinking sand.

Do you not think it is a singularly wonderful thing that all over the Anglo-Saxon world we sing:

Ye chosen seed of Israel's race,
Ye ransomed from the fall,
Hail Him who saves you by His grace
And crown Him Lord of all.

Certainly these words, though spoken in our blindness, bear witness that Christ is indeed the glory of His people Israel. Do you not think it is a most wonderful thing that all our lawyers and our statesmen sign their documents, "In the year of our Lord, nineteen hundred and such and such," and even the anti-Christian Jews among us must of necessity date their documents from Jesus Christ. Letters written by the humblest citizen in our land are dated from the birth of Christ, who is the glory of God's people, Israel.

Who we are is not the theme of my message in this Chapter. Therefore I shall speak no more of it. My whole purpose in these two Chapters has been to show that God has chosen a special race from the hosts of all mankind. These are the descendants of Abraham through his sons Isaac and Jacob. This is the seed through whom all the nations of the earth shall be blessed. They are the people through whom the promised Redeemer came. Furthermore, from these covenant people the great host of the body of Christ will come, and in that great millennial kingdom the remainder of this same people will be purified and prepared as the New Jerusalem bride of Christ. The twelve tribes of the children of Israel will be the principal peoples during the millennial kingdom. This, I think, seems clear from the words of Jesus when He said, "Verily I say unto you, That ye which have followed Me, in the regeneration (that is, the kingdom) when the Son of man shall sit upon the throne of His glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." It is during the millennial kingdom that the bride of Christ is prepared. For this reason Israel comes in for special judgment during the kingdom age, and at the end of that wonderful age the apostle John was shown the glory of the New Jerusalem bride descending from heaven, adorned for her husband.

During this present age of grace the body of Christ is being prepared. The body of Christ is composed of the sons of God. The whole creation is now groaning for their manifestation. The bride of Christ is nowhere in evidence in this present age. Only the sons of God are being prepared now. The whole millennial kingdom is for the preparation of the bride of Christ. During that marvelous age "all Israel will be saved." During the Old Testament period the Head was being prepared. During the present age of grace the body is being prepared. During the millennial kingdom Christ the bride is being prepared. The head, the body, and the bride, when united, will form one glorious Christ, male and female in one as Adam before the fall. No wonder Paul says the marriage union is symbolic of Christ and the church!

Following the preparation and presentation of the bride at the end of the millennial reign (Rev. 21:9-27) the wonder of all ages appears. The twelve gates of the New Jerusalem are swung wide open for all races of mankind to enter freely, and with the opening of those twelve gates goes forth the message never before heard in the history of the world: "The Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." Rev. 22:17. The opening of the twelve gates of the New Jerusalem bride of Christ at the beginning of the dispensation of the fullness of times and the going forth of the message, "The Spirit and the bride say, Come," will result in the restitution of all things and the fulfillment of God's covenant to Abraham, 'In thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed.'

I am well aware that what I am saying is not the thing that has been generally taught and accepted, but must truth lie forever concealed because we fear tradition? Must the eternal working of the purpose of the ages be nothing but a conundrum in our minds because of our unwillingness to see the unfolding of God's purpose in the covenant He made to Abraham, a covenant that was to endure as long as the sun and moon and stars endured, a covenant that could not fail while summer and winter, day and night, seed time and harvest and ocean still remain as witnesses to it? No! Let God be true and every man a liar. We have only to consider the nations of the earth who from time immemorial have always sat in heathen darkness and the shadow of death and we will see that the promises of the Abrahamic covenant never belonged to them nor were the promises at work among them. The time for the enlightenment of the heathen nations has not yet come and all the missionary efforts of this present age cannot convert a heathen nation to Christ. It is true that an elect number will come in from every kindred of the earth, but the time of their national enlightenment will come when the gates of the New Jerusalem bride are open wide, never to be closed again. Then and only then will the nations bring their glory and honor into that holy city and the restitution of all things will be on the way.

The purpose of God overwhelms my spirit and my soul rejoices in His unchanging purpose!

Summer and winter, spring time and harvest,
Sun, moon, and stars in their courses above,
Join with all nature in manifold witness
To Thy great faithfulness, mercy and love.
Hallelujah!

CHAPTER THREE
THY SEED WHICH IS CHRIST

When God made His immutable covenant with Abraham, He made him to know by some very definite promises that his seed would increase to be an innumerable multitude. They would become as the dust of the earth, the sand of the sea, and the stars of the heaven in numbers. The dust of the earth signifies a purely earthly seed, which was to come through Ishmael and Esau and through the offspring of Abraham's marriage to Keturah. None of these children were children of promise nor were they included in the Abrahamic covenant. When the apostle Paul wrote his letter to the Romans, he revealed a truth that had hitherto been somewhat obscure. Paul explained that the blessing of Abraham was not to come through Ishmael nor any of the sons of Keturah nor through Esau, "For," said he, "they are not all Israel which are of Israel; neither because they are the seed of Abraham are they all children; But in Isaac shall thy seed be called." Rom. 9:6-7 See also Heb. 11:18 and Gen. 21:12 Therefore we must conclude that, though the descendants of Abraham through Ishmael and the sons of Keturah have become as the dust of the earth for multitude, these nations are not to be accounted as the seed through whom God's blessing is to come upon the races and nations of the earth. I have already pointed out that three kinds of seed came from Abraham - the dust, which represents Abraham's purely earthly seed who have no part in the promise, these being the children of Ishmael, Keturah, and Esau; the sand seed, which I suggest represents the countless millions of those who have descended from the twelve tribes of Israel, all of whom are heirs of the promise made to Abraham, for the promise was "to thee and thy seed;" and beyond this again the promise, "Thy seed shall be as the stars of heaven." This is a spiritual seed and includes all those who are born again by faith in Christ Jesus whether Israelites or Gentiles or heathen, for it is written, "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise."
It was not Paul alone, of course, who signified that the blessing of God would come upon the nations through Isaac. This truth we find very early in scripture. Though Abraham had produced a son through his handmaiden Hagar (Gen. 16:15) and had actually pleaded with God to establish Ishmael as his heir, saying, "O that Ishmael might live before me," (Gen. 17:18), the Lord replied, "Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son indeed; and thou shall call his name Isaac: and I will establish My covenant with him for an everlasting covenant, and with his seed after him. And as for Ishmael, I have heard thee: Behold, I have blessed him, and will make him fruitful, and will multiply him exceedingly; twelve princes shall he beget, and I will make him a great nation. But My covenant will I establish with Isaac..." Gen. 17:18-21 This last statement is tremendously important. When Sarah, after Isaac was born, saw Ishmael mocking her son Isaac, she said to Abraham, "Cast out this bondwoman and her son: for the son of this bondwoman shall not be heir with my son, even Isaac." Gen. 21:10 This demand was very grievous to Abraham (verse 12), but the Lord said unto Abraham, "Let it not be grievous in thy sight because of the lad, and because of thy bondwoman; in all that Sarah hath said unto thee, hearken unto her voice; for in Isaac shall thy seed be called."

All these things are very significant. Indeed, they are an important allegory (Gal. 4:24). Ishmael, being born of a bondwoman, is typical of those who are under the bondage of the law and have not come into the freedom of faith and redemption in Christ Jesus. Isaac, being born of a free woman, not by works but by promise alone, is typical of those who through faith in Christ become the children of God and thus inherit the promises to Abraham. These of whatsoever race they be become heirs of God's covenant with Abraham and joint heirs with the Lord Jesus Christ. They become inheritors of every blessing of Abraham. As Abraham "believed" and it was accounted to him for righteousness, so these also believe and inherit "all things."

We must now notice how the Holy Spirit, speaking by Paul, spoke of the promise made to Abraham and his seed. In a most remarkable way Paul emphasizes one particular seed, which was to become prominent above all other. We read: "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ." Gal. 3:16

There is one particularly vital lesson that must be learned by all mankind whether they be of the seed of Abraham according to the promise or whether they be heathen, aliens from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers according to the promise. The lesson is this: Salvation is by faith unto all and upon all who believe, for there is no difference. The covenant made with Abraham was by promise, without any conditions attached. Furthermore these promises were made four hundred and thirty years before the Law of Moses was given or put into effect. Therefore the apostle gives this clear understanding of the meaning of the allegory by saying, "And this I say, that the covenant, (that is, the Abrahamic covenant), that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect. For if the inheritance be of the law, it is no more of promise: but God gave it to Abraham by promise." Gal. 3:17-18

The law is very necessary, for it portrays the nature of almighty God, and we sinful men, seeing our inability to keep it, are persuaded to flee to Christ. "By the law is the knowledge of sin." How then can a man ever come under true conviction of sin if he does not know and heed the law? The law is the very nature of God Himself. The scripture describes it as holy and just and good. O that in our day men knew that God has said, "Thou shall not steal. Thou shall not kill. Thou shall not bear false witness. Thou shall not covet. Honor thy father and thy mother." Thus the law becomes our schoolmaster (pedagogue) to bring us to Christ. The Roman pedagogue did not leach, but was a slave whose duty it was to escort the children to school. This is what the law is for - to bring us to Christ. Can any among us imagine what good effect would come upon our society if our nations and people kept even so much as one of these wonderful commands? What a tremendous drop would come in the prices of consumer goods if America kept the law, "Thou shall not steal." It is estimated that two hundred and fifty million dollars worth of grocery carts are stolen from the supermarkets each year. Add this to the other billions that are piffered by shoplifting and open robbery and we may have found one of the greatest reasons for the dreadful upswing in prices. Can we imagine the impact upon our nation if everyone kept the command, "Thou shalt not commit adultery." What a revolution would take place in the homes of the nation! What a reuniting of families, of parents and children! What an emptying of divorce courts and what peace and tranquility would follow! Can we think how blessed it would be if in this day of rebellion children knew the commandment, "Honor thy father and thy mother" and were made aware of the promise that attends this command - "that it may be well with thee and thou mayest live long in the land"? Can we begin to imagine what tranquility would result if the commandment, "Thou shalt have no other god's before Me," and "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and thy neighbor as thyself," were obeyed? These laws, beloved, are more than the commandments of the Lord. They are a revelation of God's great heart, a manifestation of His very character and nature. When the kingdom of God comes to spread its glory over all the earth in righteousness and truth, these holy laws will be the law of the kingdom, written and engraven in the hearts of all mankind. These laws in Moses' day were written on tables of stone that rebellious and carnal men might read. It does much good to read the law, but the law itself has no power to change the sinful heart. That is why Paul said, 'The law was weak through the flesh.' The great benefit comes when the law is written in our hearts. A new spirit is given to us and a new heart.

The prophet Ezekiel, even while warning of the awful calamities which were to come upon all Israel during the terrible night of their captivity, spoke of a better day - a day when they would have learned their lesson and repented of their sins. Therefore he says, "Thus saith the Lord God; I will even gather you from the people, and assemble you out of the countries where ye have been scattered, and I will give you the land of Israel. And they shall come thither, and they shall take away all the detestable things thereof and all the abominations thereof from thence. And I will give them one heart, and I will put a new spirit within you; and I will take the stony heart out of their flesh, and will give them a heart of flesh: that they may walk in My statutes, and keep Mine ordinances, and do them: and they shall be My people, and I will be their God." Ezek. 11:17-20 This great change of heart comes when we repent of our sins. This change is evidence of the new birth. It was of this that Jesus spoke when He said, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." John 3:3. Jeremiah adds much to this truth by saying, "This shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; After those days, saith the Lord, I will put My law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be My people." Jer. 31:33

The crude notion propagated by many who call themselves theologians, teaching that God has done away with the law, is not the truth or the teaching of scripture. If God ever did away with the law, He would have to do away with His own holy nature. God has not done away with the law. He fulfilled it in Jesus Christ and we are "in Him." Every man in Christ joyfully fulfills every letter of the law by the power of his new nature. The Lord by the regenerating power of the new birth transferred the law from the tables of stone to the tables of our hearts. He has taken away the nature that rebels against and hates God and His law and has given in its place the Spirit of Jesus Christ, who came to fulfill the law - every jot and tittle of it. The law of God brings sinners to Christ. Paul says this is a pedagogue to bring us to the Saviour. Gal. 3:24 The law proves to the carnal man that he can never hope to keep its precepts while he remains a natural man, unregenerate and dead in sins. The fiery law of God points with unerring finger to Jesus Christ, our Lord, who fulfilled every jot and tittle of it, as it is written, "Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled." Matt. 5:18 And Christ, having fulfilled all the law, bowed His head on Calvary's cross and cried that heaven and earth, angel and sinner might hear, 'It is finished.' The law had been perfectly kept in Him. The work of redemption from the curse was complete. Not one soul in the universe could convince Him of sin, for he had none. And now, having bowed His head in death, He sealed the new covenant with His own blood, thus making it an unbreakable covenant. By death He released His own Spirit that we who believe might freely partake of His Spirit that Christ, the giver of the law, might henceforth live in the hearts of all who believe the promise long before given to Abraham, "In thee and in thy seed shall all nations be blessed." The first true blessing of Abraham is justification by faith, for all who believe in Christ are justified from all things, from which we could not be justified by the Law of Moses. Acts 13:39 Man cannot be justified by the law of Moses because sinful man cannot keep such a holy law, but when we come to Christ in repentance and His Spirit comes into our hearts, then the law-giver Himself has come to dwell within, filling the heart with His life and joy and holiness, as it is written, "A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you; and I will take away the stony heart out of their flesh and I will give them a heart of flesh." Ezek. 36:26

"In Isaac shall thy seed be called," He said. Not "seeds" as of many, but "thy seed, which is Christ." Jesus Christ is the most important of all the seed of Abraham, because from this seed comes the true church, the sons of God, and the bride of Christ. Christ is the Redeemer of Israel and the Saviour of the world. He came unto His own and His own received Him not, but as many as received Him, to them gave He power to become... the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name: which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." John 1:12-13 Jesus Christ, our Lord, is of the seed of Abraham. With His coming into the world there comes an entirely new revelation and fresh understanding of the immutable purposes of God. With Him begins the unfolding of the promise, "Thy seed shall be as the stars of the heaven for the multitude." From the Christ seed comes the church of the living God, from whose multitudes will arise the glorified ranks of the sons of God. These in the age to come will reign with Christ in glory over all the earth. They will sit upon thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel, from whom will come the New Jerusalem bride in all her heavenly glory. We will consider the bride in a later article.

Do you see them coming, brother,
Thronging up the steeps of light
Clad in glorious, shining garments;
Blood-washed garments pure and white?
’Tis a glorious church without spot or wrinkle,
Washed in the blood of the Lamb.
’Tis a glorious church without spot or wrinkle,
Washed in the blood of the Lamb.

That Jesus Christ, who is Lord and Head of the Christ body, was of the seed of Abraham the first verse of the New Testament is quick to point out with these inspired words: 'The book of the generation of Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham.' Matt. 1:1 This first verse of the New Testament is one of the most important verses in the entire Bible, for if Jesus of Nazareth was not both son of David the king and son of Abraham, with whom God's covenant was made, then He is not the promised seed at all and could not possibly be accepted as the Christ. The evangelist Matthew was well aware that his gospel would mean less than nothing to his Jewish readers if the Jesus of whom he wrote with such exquisite detail should prove to be of other than the seed of Abraham. Upon that first verse of the New Testament hangs the proof of who Jesus actually is and even we who believe in Him would be forced to reject Him if it could be proved that He was not that very Son who was promised to Abraham, descended not through Ishmael, but through Isaac, for in saying, "In Isaac shall thy seed be called," God was speaking of one special seed and that seed was Christ.

I have always found genealogies to be dull reading and so they really are, but that does not detract one iota from their vast importance. Thus does Matthew with infinite care link by link forge the chain of Christ's genealogy from Abraham forward to Jesus, the Christ, while Luke with care just as infinite traces His genealogy through His mother Mary, who was the daughter of Heli, right back to Adam in Eden's garden, of whom it is recorded that he was the son of God. Luke 3:23-36 We may be inclined, when reading the first chapter of Matthew, to skip over verses one to seventeen as nothing but dry and almost meaningless genealogy. And we may have the same feeling about the long genealogy contained in Luke, chapter three, verses twenty-three to thirty-six, but these verses are full of inspiration and assurance. Without them we would not have known that Jesus was the seed promised in Eden's garden when after their transgression the Lord said the seed of the woman should bruise the head of the serpent. "It shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel." Gen. 3:15 Nor would we have known that Jesus was the special seed promised to our father Abraham had not both Matthew and Luke showed us in such a positive manner that Jesus the Christ was a direct descendant of these two men, David and Abraham. To Abraham was this promise made: "In thee and thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." To David it was promised: "There shall not fail thee a man on the throne of Israel." 1 Kings 2:4 It is essential that the genealogies show that the promised Christ must come from the tribe of Judah, for the patriarch Jacob prophesied on his death bed, saying, "The sCEPTer shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come; and unto him shall the gathering of the people be." Gen. 49:10 This latter prophecy, in my opinion at least, actually declares that the throne of David should continue to exist as a throne down through the church age until at last at the coming of the Lord He shall come whose right it is, and God will give it to Him.

I take great exception to those unwise and unholy statements that would attempt to make Jesus Christ to be other than an Israelite. If Jesus was not of the stock of Israel, then He must be rejected as an imposter, because He is not the promised Messiah. Furthermore, I declare with great boldness that it was not enough that He should be merely an Israelite, but He must come from one particular tribe in Israel and that tribe is the tribe of Judah. It was not sufficient that He be merely of the house of Judah, for had He been a Benjamite or a Levite, He would not have been the promised Christ. The scepter of kingship was given to Judah and to him alone. Therefore it is of great importance that Christ be of this tribe, as indeed He most definitely is.

In my opinion the statement that Jesus Christ may have been a Negro is not only erroneous; it is blasphemous. Jesus could not have been a Negro, or a Chinaman or an Indian or a Frenchman or an Englishman. He must be of the tribe of Judah and of Judah alone. Neither was Jesus a man of mixed blood, as one of America’s most famous evangelists stated. It is a matter of great concern and tragedy that after all these years the church system has been so slack in setting forth true priorities. Is it any wonder that thousands of people go astray after false Christs who spring from other races and other tribes?

The promise of the ruling scepter was given to Judah. Gen. 49:10 But the tremendously important birthright promise was given to the sons of Joseph. It is clearly written: "Now the sons of Reuben the firstborn of Israel, for he was the firstborn; but, forasmuch as he defiled his father's bed, his birthright was given unto the sons of Joseph, the son of Israel (that is, Ephraim and Manasseh), and the genealogy is not to be reckoned after the birthright. For Judah prevailed above his brethren, and of him came the chief ruler; but the birthright was Joseph's." 1. Chron. 5:1-2 Please read Jer. 31:9 where Joseph's son Ephraim is called "My firstborn." In actuality he was the youngest of them all, but God gave him the birthright. Therefore he becomes heir.

Assuring as is the record of Christ's genealogy in the books of Matthew and Luke, it must be remembered that Jesus was much more than a mere descendant of Adam, Abraham, Judah, and David. Paul declares that Jesus was "made of the seed of David according to the flesh," but that He was declared to be the Son of God with power according to the Spirit of holiness (the Holy Spirit) and by the resurrection of the dead." Rom. 1:3-4 Though we may prove that He is a true man of the Adamic race by showing that He is the seed of Adam and that He is the covenant seed by showing that He is a descendant of Abraham, that He is the true possessor of the reigning scepter promised to Judah, and that He is the promised son of David and heir to his throne who will reign over the house of Israel, Jesus Christ is something vastly more than the descendant of men. The Messiah, according to the promise, must be not only the Son of man, but the Son of God as well. This fact is brought out in various ways in Old Testament scripture, a truth too extensive to deal with at this point. Nevertheless, of the Messiah it is written: "Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call His name Immanuel" (Isa. 7:14), the meaning of which is God with us. This birth of the Son of God necessitated a virgin birth as a matter of course. Therefore it is written, "Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call His name Immanuel." Matt. 1:23. Jesus Christ was in fact and in truth both the Son of man and the Son of God.

A favorite pastime among unbelievers of all ages and of our day in particular is to try to prove that Jesus of Nazareth was nothing more than the healthy son of two normal parents named Joseph and Mary. Not only do the ungodly and unbelieving present their arguments of unbelief, but an ever increasing number of church people are willing to embrace the same error. Let the ungodly believe as they choose, but the faithful believer should be able to see that, if Jesus was not born of a virgin, then He did not come according to the prophecy of Isa. 7:14 - "Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son." If He was not born of a virgin as some suppose, then the accounts given in the gospels of Matthew and Luke, declaring emphatically that Mary was a virgin, are indeed a sordid deception, a misrepresentation, and a lie from the devil's mouth. Nothing in the New Testament is more definite and clear than the statement of the word of God declaring that Mary was a virgin when she was found to be with child of the Holy Ghost. Matt. 1:18 And we are definitely assured that Joseph knew her not until after she had brought forth her firstborn son and laid Him in a manger. Matt. 1:25 If these things are not so, then God's word cannot be depended upon as truth in anything, and if God's word cannot be trusted, then are our harbors whirlpools and all our mighty rocks are clouds.

When the apostle John wrote his gospel, he did not concern himself with the human genealogy of Jesus Christ. Matthew and Luke had already proven that fact in great detail, but John by the wisdom of God gave us an inking of His existence in the eternal realm long before Adam and Eden existed. In the following words John gives a genealogy nothing short of divine. "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God." John 1:1-2 Jesus Christ was the Son of God as well as the Son of man and the words quoted above are nothing less than His genealogy as God. The scripture continues. "All things were made by Him; and without Him was not anything made that was made. In Him was life; and the life was the light of men. And the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehended it not." Verses 3-5 The truth continues in verse 9 "That was the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world. He was in the world, and the world was made by Him, and the world knew Him not. He came unto His own, and His own received Him not. But as many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name: which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God. And the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us, (and we beheld His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth." Verses 9-14 Nothing is more certain than that He was the promised Son, the Lamb slain before the foundation of the world. He is the promised Saviour of the world and the Redeemer of God's people Israel.

If we require further evidence of His genealogy as the true Son of God, we will find it in verses one and two of John's first epistle. "That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled, of the Word of Life; (For the life was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear witness, and shew unto you that eternal life, which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us.)" 1 John 1:1-2 I would be very remiss if I did not point out here that such knowledge, faith, and assurance becomes an absolute necessity for true fellowship with God and with His blessed saints. John makes this fact abundantly clear by saying, "That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us: and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with His blessed saints. John makes this fact abundantly clear by saying, "That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us: and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with His Son Jesus Christ." Verse 3. There is not one possibility in time or eternity that we might ever become sons of God if Jesus, who is our Savior, was not Himself a Son, born not only of Mary but of God.

Genealogies are very necessary, but genealogy alone is not sufficient. There must be evidence more abundant than these if we are to have full assurance that Jesus of Nazareth was the promised Son in whom all the world would be blessed. Such evidence is convincingly given in God's word. There came a day in the long ago when from his prison cell John the Baptist sent a messenger to Jesus with this earnest plea: "Art Thou He that should come, or look we for another?" The man who had borne faithful witness that Jesus was the Lamb of God now sought new assurance in his hour of distress. In His reply to John's question our Lord made no reference to His genealogy. He made no reference to that long line of forefathers back through David, Judah, Abraham and Adam, but He made reference to something even more sure than this. We may be sure that John was aware of His genealogy, but Jesus said, "Go and tell John the blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them, and blessed is he, whosoever shall not be offended in Me." Matt. 11:5-6 Why did our Lord reply in this manner? The reason is simple. Peter spoke of the "more sure word of prophecy" (2 Pet. 1:19), and the miracles being wrought by Christ were being done in fulfillment of many prophetic scriptures given concerning Himself. The prophets long ago had spoken of the coming of the Just One, who would heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, and preach the gospel to the poor. No other man had ever appeared on the earthly scene who performed such mighty deeds or spoke with such authority and power. If the prophets have spoken such things of the coming Messiah, then it is absolutely necessary that the Messiah must fulfill those prophecies to the letter or be rejected by all. Through His life of authority and power we have abundant evidence that He did come according to the prophecies of the Old Testament, most of which were given hundreds of years before Jesus came to fulfill them. Though His genealogy could be proved beyond question, yet if He came not in exact harmony with the prophecies concerning Him, He cannot be accepted as the Messiah. Though Jesus was declared to be the Son of man by genealogy, Paul makes it plain that He was declared to be the Son of God with power (Rom. 1:4), and this according to the Spirit of holiness, guaranteed by the resurrection from the dead. Oh what a world of convincing truth is packed into those first four verses of Paul's epistle to the Romans!

Let us continue with this thought and see further how this important point is stressed by the Spirit of holiness. Our Lord at age thirty was declared to be the Lamb of God. John the Baptist, upon seeing Him, had cried aloud, "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world." John 1:29 For the Lord had said to John, "Upon whom thou shall see the Spirit descending, and remaining on Him, the same is He which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost. And I (John) saw and bear record that this is the Son of God." John 1:33-34 Jesus also and all who stood nearby at His baptism heard the voice of the Lord from heaven, proclaiming, "This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Then was Jesus led into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil, and, having overcome in all His temptations, He returned from the wilderness in the power of the Holy Spirit and entered into the synagogue at Nazareth and stood up to read the scriptures. "And there was delivered unto Him the book of the prophet Esaias. And when He had opened the book, He found the place where it was written, The Spirit of the Lord is upon Me, because He hath anointed Me to preach the gospel to the poor; He hath sent Me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord. And He closed the book, and He gave it again to the minister, and sat down. And the eyes of all them that were in the synagogue were fastened on Him. And He began to say unto them, This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears." Luke 3:16-21 See also Isaiah 61. This was the second time that Jesus had called upon the Old Testament prophecies to confirm His sonship. Never once to my knowledge did He ever make reference to His genealogy to prove His sonship or His Messiahship. In His one brief reference to Abraham He clearly stated, "Before Abraham was, I AM."

Though we may not fully know the Old Testament prophecies relating to the first coming of Jesus Christ, there are well over two hundred such prophecies, every one of which was completely fulfilled in Him, including His genealogy. Every Old Testament prophecy concerning His coming as a suffering Messiah was fulfilled to the letter in His lifetime and, this being so, there is not one possibility in a trillion that Jesus was other than the promised Redeemer or that we need to look for another. Yet had even one of those prophecies gone unfulfilled, we could not have accepted Him as the Messiah.

Perhaps the reader may not realize the import of two hundred prophecies that must be fulfilled. Two hundred prophecies that must be fulfilled give two hundred marks of identification. It is commonly known that our fingerprints differ from every other person's on earth. Yet in law six identical marks are sufficient to identify any man, since no other man in the world has the same six identical marks. You have probably heard of the law of compound probabilities. It works in this manner: Every probability added multiplies the possibility of error. For instance, if the weatherman predicts, "We will have sunshine all day," he has one chance in two of being correct - first, we may have sunshine all day, and second, we may not. If he says,' 'We will have snow in the morning and sunshiny in the afternoon," he has only one chance in four of being right. We may have sunshine and snow as he predicted. Then again we may have neither. Again we may have sunshine without snow or we may have snow without sunshine. Should he add a third probability and say we will have sunshine and snow and wind, he again multiplies his chances of being wrong, for we now have eight probabilities. (1) We may have sun, snow and wind. (2) We may have none of these. (3) We may have sun, but not wind or snow. (4) We may have snow, but not sun or wind. (5) We may have wind, but not sun or snow. (6) We may have sun and wind, but no snow. (7) We may have sun and snow, but no wind, and (8) we may have wind and snow, but no sun. Thus you see that with three probabilities there are eight possibilities of being wrong. If you add one more condition, you will find you have sixteen possibilities of being wrong. If you add a fifth probability then you have thirty-two possibilities. Add one more and you have sixty-four possibilities, and so on it goes. Thus, since there were over two hundred identification marks that had to be fulfilled in the Messiah, it would take a large computer to discover the number of possibilities of error there would be or how small would be the possibility that anyone could qualify for Messiahship who was not in fact the Messiah. The infinitesimal possibility would be less than one in many trillions.

To assure us fully that Jesus was He that should come and not another, God has given a vast array of prophecies concerning Him, all of which must of necessity be fulfilled to the letter in the coming Saviour. The Old Testament prophets, speaking by the Spirit, continued to add without hesitation one prophecy upon another with the sure knowledge that every word that God had spoken would be fulfilled to the letter. In only one chapter of the book of Isaiah (chapter 53) we have these twenty-seven conditions laid down as characteristic identification marks of the coming Messiah. (1) The unbelief of the people. "Who hath believed our report and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed?" (2) He shall grow up as a tender plant and as a root out of a dry ground. (3) He has no form or comeliness, and when we should see Him, there is no beauty that we should desire Him. (4) He is despised and rejected of men. (5) a man of sorrows and (7) acquainted with grief. (8) We hid as it were our faces from Him. (9) He was despised and we esteemed Him not. (10) He hath borne our grief and (11) carried our sorrows. (12) We did esteem Him stricken of God and afflicted. (13) He was wounded for our transgressions. (14) He was bruised for our iniquities. (15) He was oppressed and afflicted, yet He opened not His mouth. (16) He was led as a lamb to the slaughter. (17) As a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he opened not His mouth. (18) He was taken from prison and judgment, or He was deprived of just judgment. (19) Who shall declare His generation? (20) He was cut off from the land of the living. (21) For the transgression of My people was He stricken. (22) He made His grave with the wicked and (23) with the rich in His death. (24) He had done no violence, (25) neither was deceit found in His mouth. (26) It pleased the Lord to bruise Him. (27) He hath put Him to grief.

These prophecies, found in just one chapter, are but a few of the many concerning the coming of the Just One, all of which had to be fulfilled to the letter at His first coming. The remaining verses of this fifty-third chapter concern themselves with the millennial day when He shall see the travail of His soul and be satisfied. All the prophecies concerning the kingdom have yet to be fulfilled at His second coming.

There was an occasion when an Ethiopian eunuch, who had been to Jerusalem to worship, was returning home and, sitting in his carriage, he read Isaiah the prophet. The Spirit of the Lord had said to Philip, "Go near, and join thyself to this chariot." And Philip ran thither to him and heard him read the prophet Esaias. "Understandest thou what thou reddest?" Philip asked. He replied, "How can I except some man should guide me? And he desired Philip that he would come up and sit with him. The place of the scripture which he read was this, He was led as a sheep to the slaughter, and as a lamb before his shearer, so opened He not His mouth: in His humiliation His judgment was taken away: and who shall declare His generation? for His life is taken from the earth. And the eunuch answered Philip, and said, I pray thee, of whom speaketh the prophet this? of himself or of some other man? Then Philip opened his mouth, and began at the same scripture, and preached unto him Jesus." Acts 8:27-35

Oh, with what heavenly assurance can the church of the living God open its mouth and preach that this man, Jesus of Nazareth, is He who has come according to hundreds of Old Testament prophecies to redeem from sin, save a world, and restore all things to their rightful owner! We might well fill the rest of the book with prophecies such as these and show in greater detail that our Lord came to fulfill them one and all, but we must turn briefly to other things.

JESUS, THE SEED OF ABRAHAM

Now this Lord Jesus Christ, who came of the seed of Abraham through his son Isaac, is Himself a seed. Abraham was the seed from whom sprang vast multitudes as the dust of the earth, the sands of the sea, and the stars of heaven in number. But Paul, in teaching this great truth, fastens the hope of the universe on one particular seed, and that seed is Christ. This he does in Gal. 3:16 by saying, "He saith not seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ." Therefore of all the millions, perhaps billions, who have sprung from Abraham the one seed of greatest importance is Jesus Christ.

It seems a most singular thing that the word seed is used at all. Why did the Lord tell our mother Eve that the seed of the woman (her seed) would bruise the head of the serpent? Why did He use the word seed? Why did He not say that the man that should come from the woman should bruise the head of the serpent? But it was to be "thy seed," the seed of the woman. The truth is that seed is not only the product of some other life before it but seed is also that which reproduces itself and its kind many thousand fold from generation to generation. In the twelfth chapter of the gospel of John certain Greeks came to Jesus with the request, "Sirs, we would see Jesus." Philip and Andrew brought the request to Jesus, who made this strange and very remarkable reply: "The hour is come that the Son of man should be glorified. Verily, verily I say unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone: but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit." John 12: 20-24 In this passage our Lord likened Himself to a seed, a grain of wheat, which was to fall into the ground and die. He was to be planted as a seed in the earth and be raised again. Not only was He to be raised in glorification, but in centuries yet to come this seed, which was Jesus Christ, would produce a vast company of sons of God in His exact image and likeness. After the seed is implanted in the ground, the process of growth is "first the blade, then the ear, then the ear of corn in the ear." While only one seed was planted in the earth, the multitude that will appear in the time of harvest will be as the stars of heaven in number, every one bearing the image and likeness of that Christ seed which was planted in death.

It may seem to be a puzzle to some that Philip and Andrew, who came bearing the earnest request of these Greeks, "Sirs, we would see Jesus," should be given what appears to be such an oblique reply. In fact, the passage does not indicate that Jesus ever consented to have these Greeks interview Him, though of course
He may have done, but in answer to their request He made this strange affirmation, "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone: but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit." What He really was telling them is this: If they saw Jesus at that time, they would have seen only Jesus the Christ, but He knew there was more, much more to Christ than what they could now see. A multitude as the stars of heaven was to follow in His likeness, born of the same seed, raised in the same resurrection, who would at last be "sons of God" even as He is a Son of God, and these would not be merely many sons, but many sons to form one Christ, each one having the seed of life in himself.

Our Lord Jesus Christ, the seed of Abraham, appeared as the firstborn of many brethren. "For whom He did foreknow He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the firstborn among many brethren." Rom. 8:29 Weymouth in his translation of this passage says, ' 'Those He has foreknown He has also predestined to share the likeness of His Son, that He might be the Eldest in a vast family of brothers." The seed that was sown in the ground that afternoon of Calvary and its cross and which arose as a tender blade on the resurrection morning will appear in the end of the age as the full corn in the ear, and Jesus the Christ, the Lamb of Calvary, will be heard triumphantly saying, "Here am I and the sons which Thou hast given Me." Heb. 2:13 This the prophet Isaiah saw in spirit in the sad and desolate hour when the tribes of Israel were being carried away into captivity. He prophesied, saying, "Bind up the testimony, seal the law among My disciples. And I will wait upon the Lord, that hideth His face from the house of Jacob, and I will look for Him. Behold, I and the children whom the Lord hath given me are for signs and for wonders in Israel from the Lord of hosts, which dwelleth in mount Zion." Isa. 8:16-18

The phrase, "Thy seed, which is Christ," is too great and too important for the mind of man to comprehend. We must therefore diligently seek the spirit of revelation that we may know the things that are freely given us of God. It is when men try to understand with their natural minds that they conclude that others who see and understand the deeper things are blasphemers and deceivers, but when the Holy Spirit takes the things of God and reveals them unto us, then the invisible things of Him from the foundation of the world are clearly seen and we accept them and know them and make them our own.

Though the world itself could not contain the books that should be written of all that Jesus is and all He taught, it will be necessary for us now to leave this part of the truth to the holy minds of saints who believe that each one may seek the mind of Christ for the revelation by the Spirit of the deep things of God to his searching heart.

In this Chapter we have been speaking of God's first perfected and first manifested Son, Jesus of Nazareth, the Christ-Head. It is my hope now by God's help to unfold the truth concerning the Christ-Body and the Christ-Bride, Christ the Head, Christ the body, and Christ the bride. These terms may be unfamiliar to almost all the saints and I use them only with bowed head and godly fear and trembling. Holy and reverend as they are, they are in truth God's covenant to Abraham, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blest." Oh, how good it is to know that in this hour of world-wide sorrow, disorder, and distress the immutable promises and covenants of God are progressing toward their final fulfillment and from them will come that order, interdependence, and unity for which we so earnestly pray!

CHAPTER FOUR
THY SEED WHICH IS THE BODY OF CHRIST

"Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular." 1 Cor. 12:27 All natural things have spiritual counterparts. The visible things with which we are familiar, which we see about us every day, are all proclaiming some great spiritual lesson. The truth of this statement is set forth in the words of inspiration found in Rom. 1:20 "The invisible things of Him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even His eternal power and Godhead; so that they are without excuse."

Though our subject here concerns the body of Christ, which we will speak of as the Christ body, which is a great mystery, we will find much truth concerning our identification with that body by observing the human body, with which we are familiar. I have no hesitation in stating that the human physical body is the greatest and best visible portrait of the body of Christ that has ever been devised. Paul calls upon it on several occasions to unfold to the hearts of believers that far greater truth concerning the body of Christ, which is the true Christ body.

We have studied the mystery of Christ and our identification with Him, but, though we have written much concerning this and have tried to the best of our ability to explain it, we are certain to fall short in our understanding unless the Holy Spirit opens our spiritual minds and makes us see that the Head, which is Christ, and the body, which we are, together form one Christ. Here we shall call upon that which is natural and visible to explain that which is spiritual and invisible. What person among us has not seen or considered the physical form of a man? Even the blind have an understanding of this. Looking upon the physical form of man, we immediately perceive that he is composed of a head and a body. A head alone is not a man, but the head and the body together form a perfect man. It is not that makes a man. It is the head and body together that forms a man. If the body is without the head, then there is no man, and if the head is without the body, there is no man.

With all the reverence and respect of my ransomed soul I must tell you that the fullness of God's wonderful Christ does not consist of the Head alone or of the body alone, but the Head and the body together make the fullness and completeness of Christ. The saints of God have yet to discover the full spiritual meaning of the words, "Now ye are the body of Christ and members in particular." There has been far too much talk about the body but far too little understanding. Christians have seen the Head, which is Jesus Christ, not as the Head of God's Christ, but as the fullness and completeness of Him. On the other hand they have spoken of the body of Christ, not as an integral part of God's Christ, but as something separate and different like the denominational church. They have seen the body of Christ as a church full of divisions and strifes, something that God was trying to save from hell and torment, something that He would take to heaven bye and bye, but which in reality had little or no relationship to Him other than the fact of its salvation.

O my brethren, if you have seen the body of Christ as no more than this tormented denominational thing that mankind is pleased to call the church, you have fallen far short in your understanding, for even nature shows you that the body of a man and the head of a man form one man, complete and perfect in every detail. So also the head of the Christ and the body of the Christ form one Christ, perfect and complete before God. Though I have prayed earnestly that this mystery may be revealed to the hearts of believing saints, I well know that it is not the grand oration or the glib tongue, breaking with eloquence and intonation upon the curious ear, that enlightens the heart and gives understanding of spiritual things, for eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither have entered the heart of man the things which God has prepared for them that love Him; but He has revealed them to us by His Spirit, for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God. Pray, therefore, that the Holy Spirit, who was sent into the world to lead us into all truth, will teach us all things and bring all things to our remembrance. May He anoint our eyes and our hearts that we may behold wondrous things out of God's word.

When John wrote the immortal words, "The anointing which ye have received of Him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you: but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in Him," he well understood that it is quite impossible for a man to teach us any spiritual truth. Certainly a teacher may unfold the words of truth and revelation, but it is God who is light and who gives light. Only the Spirit of God can open the eyes of the blind and give them sight. As the invisible wind makes its presence known by moving the curtains of a tent or by letting us hear the sound thereof, so the Holy Spirit reveals Himself by shining His light into the dark recesses of our understanding, making us see the invisible, hear the inaudible, and comprehend the incomprehensible. "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." That verse does not mean he cannot go to heaven. It means he cannot see, he cannot understand, he cannot know or discern any spiritual thing without a spiritual birth from above. There are many people in the world who talk incessantly about the kingdom of God, but they have never seen it by the Spirit. Many others talk about sonship, but are devoid of the spirit of sonship. A spiritual birth enables us to see and hear by the Spirit of God. This is a transforming thing that brings a believer into the very image and likeness of the thing he sees.

It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing. The spirit of man may know the things of a man, but the Spirit of God alone knows the things of God. Jesus marveled that Nicodemus was a teacher in Israel and yet knew not these things, and with conviction He told him that he would never know spiritual things as long as he remained in the natural realm, striving to understand a higher realm with a natural mind. "If I have told you of earthly things, and ye believe not," He said, "how shall ye believe if I tell you of heavenly things?" It is when He, the Spirit of truth, is come that He guides us into all truth.

God's people make a serious and fatal mistake when they cling desperately to the tradition taught them at the beginning of their walk with God. When they do this, they shut the door for God to teach them anything. Their tradition at best is only a fragment of the whole. Tradition makes men into unbelievers, because it refuses to allow them to see greater light. Jesus understood this when He said, "Ye make the commandment of God of none effect by your tradition." Revelation modifies all tradition, delivering men from that which is in part and bringing them out into that which is full. "When I was a child, I thought as a child; I spoke as a child; I understood as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things. For now we see through a glass darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known." 1 Cor. 13:11-12.

The life of a Christian should be a continual progression in God, but he cannot progress without spiritual revelation, and revelation will greatly modify and often times completely break the chains of human tradition. While the boast of some men may be that they are just the same as they always were, let us rather glory in the fact that, as the light of His love grows brighter, we are being changed into that same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord.

I have digressed a little from the subject of the Christ body, but only that we may grasp the truth that spiritual things must be spiritually understood. To see a spiritual truth with the natural mind leaves the beholder unchanged and cold. Our Lord Jesus Christ was called a blasphemer when He claimed to be the Son of God, not because He had no evidence to back His claim, but because the people that surrounded Him and opposed Him so were blind leaders of the blind, held captive by the traditions of the elders, men and women who had not so much as a spark of revelation or spiritual understanding. When Jesus claimed identity with His Father in heaven, they shouted, "Ye have heard His blasphemy!" When He stated the word of truth, "Before Abraham was, I AM," they believed not, but railing against Him in wrath and envy, they took up stones to stone Him.

Do you think, therefore, that carnal Christians will understand when revelation teaches us that we are members of His body, of His flesh, and of His bones? Will our faith be accepted or believed when we say we have been made to drink of His Spirit, been baptized into His body and made partakers of the divine nature? All these statements pass as acceptable theology except when they become a burning, transforming revelation to some believing heart. Certainly we may affirm that we are the body of Christ, but when revelation reveals the truth that the members of the body of Christ are in truth part of God's Christ, then men begin to take up stones to stone us. If they do not pick stones from the ground to throw, they certainly stone us with words of discredit and unbelief.

My dearly beloved brethren, we have been made partakers of the divine nature. We have all been made to drink of His Spirit. We have by one Spirit been baptized into one body, and that one body is the Christ body. And, because by such a divine ordinance we have become members of His body, partakers of His Spirit and His life, of a truth we are members of God's glorious Christ, the fullness and completeness of Him who everywhere fills the universe with Himself.

Hear now the inspired words of Paul on this great subject as again he likens the human body to the spiritual body of Christ. "For," says he, "as the body is one, and hath many members . . . so also is Christ." Cor. 12:12. We quote the text in part to show that it is the many members of the body, together with the Head that form the complete Christ. But, to quote the entire passage, Paul says, "As the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body: so also is Christ." God's glorious Christ is not one member, but many — not the Head alone, but the Head and the body inseparably joined in one Spirit. Jesus of Nazareth is the Christ Head, but we, the members of His body, of His flesh, and of His bones, are the Christ body.

I know some will be ready to stone me for that statement; nevertheless, it is true. The age from Eden to Calvary was occupied with the preparation and presentation of Christ the Head. The age or dispensation from Pentecost to the resurrection of the just is occupied with one great, all-important work - the preparation and presentation of the Christ body. The age which we know as the millennial kingdom will be occupied by the preparation and presentation of the bride of Christ, or the Christ bride, of which I will write more fully in the next Chapter. I fearlessly declare that the work of this age of grace is not the salvation of the world, but the preparation of the sons of God to form the true church or Christ body.

We have often heard of the manifestation of the sons of God. Indeed, the word of God reveals this truth with great care and fullness, and no wonder, for the whole creation is waiting on tiptoe for their manifestation. "For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us. For the earnest expectation of the creature (that is, the whole creation) waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God. For the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him who hath subjected the same in hope. Because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God. For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now. And not only they, but ourselves also, which have the first-fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our bodies. For we have been saved by hope: but hope that is seen is not hope: for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for? But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it." Rom. 8:18, 25

The words of the above passage, quoted below from Phillips translation, are a forceful assurance to all who are laying hold on this great message. "In my opinion whatever we may have to go through now is less than nothing compared with the magnificent future God has planned for us. The whole creation is on tiptoe to see the wonderful sight of the sons of God coming into their own. The world of creation cannot as yet see reality, not because it chooses to be blind, but because in God's purpose it has been so limited - yet it has been given hope. And the hope is that in the end the whole of created life will be rescued from the tyranny of change and decay, and have its share in that magnificent liberty which can only belong to the children of God! It is plain to anyone with eyes to see that at the present time all created life groans in a sort of universal travail. And it is plain, too, that we who have a foretaste of the Spirit are in a state of painful tension, while we wait for that redemption of our bodies which will mean that at last we have realized our full sonship in Him. We are saved by this hope, but in our moments of impatience let us remember that hope always means waiting for something we haven't yet got. But if we hope for something we cannot see, then we must settle down to wait for it in patience."

What magnificent words these are, describing as they do the awaited glory of God's sons, men and women who are coming into Christ's image, the Christ likeness, to share the Christ body and the glory of Him who, through the fullness which He shall accomplish by adding to Himself these many, many sons, will fill the universe and we shall become the fullness of Him who filleth all in all. This, my beloved brethren, is the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. This is that for which Jesus travailed and, having done so, saw the travail of His soul and was satisfied, for of His fullness have we all received and grace for grace.

On a wonderful night in the long, long ago when Lot, seeing the abundant grass of the valley, had pitched his tent toward Sodom, Abraham, turning his face toward the hills, was led by God's hand out into the starlit evening. As he lifted his face toward the skies, the voice of the Lord told him to behold the stars and see if he could count them, and, knowing that Abraham could not do so, the Lord added yet one more promise to His eternal covenant - "So shall thy seed be." These uncounted stars of the heaven represent the sons of God, who are being prepared for the manifestation for which all creation groans. These are members of the Christ body, who will deliver the creation from the bondage of decay into the glorious freedom they themselves possess.

Almost two thousand years ago the apostle Paul basked in the sunshine of this very hope. Far out in the future he saw the prize which he called the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus and, upon seeing its glory, gladly unloaded all his religious tradition, stripping himself for the race to press irresistibly toward that high calling in Christ of which I write today. "What things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ," he said. "Yea, doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ, and be found in Him, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith: that I may know Him and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings, being made conformable unto His death; if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead. Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect: but I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus. Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

Phil. 3:7-14

In Christ Jesus! What a transforming expression that is! Quoted and read by countless millions, but understood, I fear, by practically none. Instead of seeing the boundless wonder and infinite meaning of the words "in Christ Jesus," we have been content to pass over them as though they were practically meaningless, little more than nice, kind sayings that should be a comfort to the people of God. But oh, let me tell you the expressions in Christ, in Christ Jesus, and 2/2 Him proclaim that we are members of His body, of His flesh, and of His bones, and that we who believe are the completeness of Him who filleth all in all. We have all been baptized into His body. We have become one with His Spirit. As He dwells in the Father, so do we dwell in Him. These expressions, and many more like them, teach beyond a shadow of a doubt that God has but one Christ and that Christ consists of many thousands of members, all joined, welded and knit together by one Spirit into one body and one Christ. We said earlier that it took God four thousand years to prepare and present that first manifested Son, Jesus Christ, who was to be the eldest Son and the Head of the whole company of sons of God. Now the Lord has been occupied for the two thousand years of the day of grace in preparing that vast company of sons who will form the body of God's Christ, that the Head and the body may be manifest at the end of this age as one Christ - "My beloved Son in whom I am well pleased."

Let the reader visualize the form of a man, standing with his feet on the earth, so tall that his head reaches the heavens above and so broad that his form fills the universe all in all. Then let him examine the scene more closely and his wondering eyes will see that this gigantic man, God's anointed Christ, is a man of many members just as the human body is one body with many members. Look closer still and you will now see that each and every member in that mighty form is an individual man, a Son of God. The Head is the man Jesus of Nazareth. The arms, the fingers, the toes, the heart, the nerves, the blood vessels - every member of Him that filleth all in all is an individual man and every man is a son of God. And, if you will look still more closely, you will see an even greater wonder, for every man, every member, every son in that whole gigantic form is in the exact image of Jesus Christ, the Head, the first begotten Son of God. O, how I hope you can grasp the picture!

It is only when we see the plan and purpose of the Lord that we begin to be changed into the likeness of what we see in the Spirit. We lay aside every weight and the sin, which doth so easily beset us. We strip for the race. We put off anger, wrath, malice, jealousy, envy, pride, foolishness, and fixing our spiritual eyes on the glory of such a goal, we run with patience the race that is set before us. Forgetting our idle traditions, we press toward the mark. We will find ourselves delivering ourselves from hindering friends and obstructing occupations. We will begin to lay aside lusts and passions and turn our eyes away from those troublesome scenes of earth that force themselves upon us and crowd out the heavenly vision from our eyes. We are changed by His Spirit from glory to glory. We see a glory afar off in truth and, believing it, we are changed into the likeness of what we see. Our hearts grasp a revelation and it transforms us. We see a vision of Christ and the glory of the body He is preparing. We realize the possibility of our attaining to that body and, seeing, we lay aside everything that would hinder us from becoming one with it.

To see what I am saying you will have to go far beyond the edge of the crowd. You will need to go beyond the circle of that tired old thing men call the church. The word church has become sorely desecrated, so much so that the picture of what the true church really is has faded away until men can see in the church nothing but million dollar temples standing on street corners or multitudes of people who dwell behind the high walls which they call denominations. But this, my friend, is not the church. This has nothing to do with His mystical body. These denominations are only man made things, little self-appointed Christs who believe that they have the truth and wisdom will die with them. I do not believe that they are divisions in the church or divisions in the body of Christ. They are something altogether aside from the true church and something different from the body of Christ. The church which Jesus called "My church" has never had a division in it. It is the habitation of God through the Spirit, the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. It is that wonderful habitation Jesus spoke of as "My Father's house", saying, "In My Father's house are many mansions." The house, which the Father is building is the true church, the mystical body of Christ. This buildings rising upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets. Jesus Christ, the first Son, is the corner stone or the cap stone of it. He is the Head of the body, the church, the head stone of the corner. All other stones are living stones (1 Pet. 2:5), built up into a spiritual house, a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God by Christ Jesus. Every living stone in the building is a living person, a son of God, coming into the image of that first Son, who is Jesus our Lord and Head.

Dearly beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims in such a high and holy calling, abstain from fleshly lusts that war against the soul. Have your conversation and manner of life honest before all men that they may by your exemplary conduct glorify God when He comes to be their judge. It is the will of God that by well doing we may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men. It is well pleasing in His sight if for your godly convictions you endure grief and suffer wrongfully, "for what glory is it if, when ye be buffetted for your faults, ye shall take it patiently? But if, when ye do well and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is acceptable with God. For even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that we should follow in His steps." 1 Pet. 2:20-21

The wilderness tabernacle, built by the instruction of the Lord, was a tabernacle made with hands. It was not intended to last forever or to be anything more than a type of the true tabernacle, which is the true church, the body of Christ. The tabernacle in the wilderness in its most minute detail was typical of the mystical body of Christ. Though it was a tabernacle of many parts, those many parts formed but one tabernacle. The temple, which God is building is a temple not made with hands. The tabernacle built by Moses and the temple built by Solomon were only temporary types of the true temple of His body, but the temple Christ is building is eternal in the heavens. It, too, has many parts and many members, yet it is but one temple, one body and one Christ.

Likewise the human body, the most perfect and commonly known of all types of the body of Christ, is one body with many members, each member having its own use and its own ministry. So do the members of the mystical body of Christ. The word of God confirms this truth in these words: "For as we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office, so we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another." Rom. 12:4-5. "Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular," Paul says. 1 Cor. 12:27 Then going into greater detail concerning the many-membered Christ, he taught the truth in these words: "For as the body is one and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body: so also is Christ." (Please notice with much care these four words: So also is Christ.) "For by (in) one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit. For the body is not one member, but many." 1 Cor. 12:12-14.

O my brethren, can you not see the glory of what he is saying? Can you not see that Paul is telling us that God's Christ is not one member, but many? Can you not see that it is the head and the many-membered body together that forms the man, and that man is God's Christ?

Need we search any further for the answer to Paul's teaching when he taught that the body, which we are is the fullness of Him who filleth all in all? Eph. 1:23. Or, as Weymouth has so eloquently translated, that "God has put all things under His feet, and has appointed Him universal and supreme Head of the church, which is His body, the completeness of Him who everywhere fills the universe with Himself." Eph. 1:23. (Weymouth). When we consider that this great temple of His body, which is now being built during this age of grace, is the fullness of Him who everywhere fills the universe with Himself, then surely our mental vision of a man so tall that he reaches from earth to heaven and so wide that he fills the earth cannot be very far from the truth as God would have us see it.

The next time we read the words "in Christ", let us meditate deeply in the Spirit that God may reveal their true meaning and not pass over them as a statement to be quoted and forgotten. Our spiritual walk is cleansed by the truth we see. When we were sinners far off from God and first heard His voice calling us, little did we realize the glory He was preparing for those who would come to know Him and love Him. The unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God. "Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminates, nor abusers of themselves with mankind (homosexuals), nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortionists, shall inherit the kingdom of God. And such were some of you: but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God." 1 Cor. 6:9-11. "Know ye not that your bodies are the members of Christ? Shall I then take the members of Christ, and make them the members of an harlot? God forbid. What? Know ye not that he which is joined to an harlot is one body? for two, saith He, shall be one flesh. But he that is joined unto the Lord is one spirit." Verses 15-17. It is very wonderful to notice here how Paul, in using these rather crude illustrations, shows beyond any question that the redeemed are in actuality and in fact members of Christ. Twice in the above quotation the apostle distinctly declares that we are members of Christ. Then in verse 19 he crowns the glorious thought with these forceful words of assurance: "What? Know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own?"

Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord. These divine promises give us no room for pride, no room for sin, nor do they give us room to exalt ourselves, but, as for me, they cause me to bow in utter humility before God. As we view these awesome facts in the light of Holy Spirit, we fall as dead men before Him while our lips hymn the gratitude that rises from our grateful hearts. Holy, holy, holy is the Lord God almighty! Blessed be He who spoke to Abraham, saying, "In thee and thy seed shall all nations of the earth be blessed."

When our eyes begin to behold the magnificent glory of the temple which God is building, the sons whom He is preparing to be members of His Christ, the sons who a few short years hence He will make manifest to the whole creation, sons who on the day of adoption will hear the voice of the Father saying of Christ, the Head and the body joined together, "This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear Him," then, seeing these things, we begin to understand why it is that the whole creation is groaning and travailing in pain, waiting for the adoption, which means that at last we have attained full sonship in Him. "In my opinion, whatever we may have to go through now is less than nothing compared with the magnificent future God has planned for us. The whole creation is on tiptoe to see the wonderful sight of the sons of God coming into their own. The world of creation cannot as yet see reality, not because it chooses to be blind, but because in God's purpose it has been so limited — yet it has been given hope. And the hope is that in the end the whole of created life will be rescued from the tyranny of change and decay, and have its share in that magnificent liberty which can only belong to the children of God!" Rom. 8:18-20 (Phillips)

Adoption in scripture was not an act by which a family adopts a fatherless child as we know it in our day. Adoption in scripture was a rite in which a father called his friends and neighbors together and in their presence bestowed upon one of his Sons recognition of his mature sonship and responsibility. We have a perfect example of such adoption given in scripture when at the baptism of Jesus the voice of God the Father proclaimed, "This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Matt. 3:17 That was God's recognition of Christ's full and mature sonship. It was this adoption proclamation that began His great ministry of deliverance. We younger sons have not as yet received our adoption, but we will do so at the time of the redemption of our bodies, which is the hour of resurrection. This is clearly stated in Rom. 8:23: "Ourselves also, which have the first fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body." The redemption of the body occurs at the resurrection of the just when the dead are raised and this corruptible puts on incorruption and this mortal immortality. 1 Cor. 15:52-53 This is the fullness of the adoption for which we groan and for which all creation sighs. Following it will come the mighty deliverance that comes after the manifestation of the sons of God. It is no wonder that we do not at present see the full functioning of the body of Christ, for a moment's consideration would tell us that the body is not yet completely formed; neither has it received the word of adoption from the Father, but when that great hour is reached, the words of Jesus will be fulfilled: "The works that I do shall ye do also; and greater works than these shall ye do, because I go to the Father." John 14:12

The Lord our God has not left us without Bible witness to the stupendous statements we have been making, as we shall now see. There comes a time when all things that are far off are brought nigh. In the fullness of time the invisible things become clearly seen. That which once we saw only by faith becomes a reality and the things for which we hoped we hope for no more, for what a man seeth why doth he yet hope for? The time must come when the vision of the seers, the proclamation of the prophets, and the hymns of the Psalmist are turned into reality. The moment comes when that which was far off on the distant horizon can be touched, it is so nigh at hand. To Abraham God promised a seed which would come to bless the whole earth, a seed through whom all who have ever seen the light of day would be blessed and delivered. We saw that seed begin in the preparation of a nation, yea, a company of nations, who, as centuries passed by, spread themselves to the north, the south, the east, and the west to shine the light of Christ and His word over all the earth; for Simeon had prophesied that Jesus would be a light to lighten the Gentiles and the glory of God's people, Israel. Our eyes beheld Jesus of Nazareth come to Bethlehem. God's holy word declares Him to be the direct seed of Abraham according to the flesh, but the Son of God with power. We saw Him proclaimed as the Son of God, "Thy seed which is Christ." Gal. 3:16

To Paul the revelation was given that he might reveal how we, the redeemed of this age, are members in particular of Christ in that we are the Christ body as He is the Christ Head, that the Head and the body together, indwelt by one Spirit, are one Christ, the temple of the Lord and the habitation of God. Paul in spirit clearly saw the day of manifestation of these younger sons of God, at which time the whole of creation would be lifted from the bondage and night of their corruption into the glorious freedom of children of God. Rom. 8:18-23

How wonderful are these things! They are far beyond our expression or the ability of the most eloquent to describe! We cannot stop here, however, for with John the beloved our eyes behold the awful fullness of these things. To John was the blessing given to stand in spirit at the end of this present age to see the incredible wonder of the fullness of Christ. The story is so familiar that we scarcely need to repeat it here, but because the truth it bears is so important, we will rehearse it again that we may be the more familiar with it.

The story begins with the apostle John's being exiled to the Isle of Patmos for the word of God and the testimony of Jesus Christ. "I John, who also am your brother and companion in tribulation, and in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ, was in the isle that is called Patmos, for the word of God and for the testimony of Jesus Christ. I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day, and heard behind me a great voice, as of a trumpet, saying, I am Alpha and Omega, the first and the last: and, What thou seest, write in a book, and send it unto the seven churches which are in Asia; unto Ephesus, and unto Smyrna, and unto Pergamos, and unto Thyatira, and unto Sardis, and unto Philadelphia, and unto Laodicea. And I turned to see the voice that spake with me. And being turned, I saw seven golden candlesticks; And in the midst of the seven candlesticks one like unto the Son of man, clothed with a garment down to the foot, and girt about the paps with a golden girdle. His head and His hairs were white like wool, as white as snow; and His eyes were as a flame of fire; and His feet like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace; and his voice as the sound of many waters. And He had in His right hand seven stars: and out of His mouth went a sharp two-edged sword: and His countenance was as the sun shineth in his strength. And when I saw Him, I fell at His feet as dead. And He laid His right hand upon me, saying unto me, Fear not; i am the first and the last: I am He that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death." Rev. 1:9-18

It is my firm conviction that, when John was lifted into the realm of the Spirit on the Lord's day, he was actually carried across the years to the close of the dispensation of grace to behold things as they will be at the end of this age. He who had been so familiar with the lonely Galilean and had walked and talked with Jesus Christ was now to behold Him in a way he had never known Him before. John, who had known Jesus as He was at first, was now to behold Him as He will be at last. His ears would hear Him say, "I am the first and the last." Long he had known Jesus the Christ, the Beginning; now he was to know Him as the End. In Galilee and Judea he had walked and talked with the lowly Alpha; now his wondering eyes were to see the Omega. Long ago he had followed Jesus to Calvary where amid its pain and bloody sweat he had seen the single corn of wheat fall into the ground and die; now his eyes were to behold the full corn in the ear, the fullness of Christ in the harvest. O my brethren, can you not see it? There is a vast difference between Christ the beginning and Christ the end. There is a universe of development between the Alpha and the Omega. The smallness of the seed cannot be compared to the greatmess of the harvest, and the voice of the lonely Galilean of the beginning cannot be compared to the voice as of many waters that is at the end.

John had seen God's beloved Son, Jesus Christ the Head of the body, but now at the end of the age he was beholding the glory of the Head joined to that vast family of sons that compose the mystical body of Christ. In spirit I seem to hear this firstborn of many brethren say, "Behold, I and the children (sons) which God hath given Me." Heb. 2:13 "Here am I, the eldest in a vast family of brothers." Rom. 8:29 (Weymouth). In the midst of the seven golden candlesticks stood one like unto the Son of man. So like Jesus was this mighty one that the likeness was indistinguishable, yet this one like unto the Son of man was so much greater now - so much so that the extent of it can only be seen by comparing the harvest with the seed, greater now as the body joined to the Head is greater than the Head.

The vision John saw displayed one clothed with a garment down to the foot with what must have been a seamless robe of righteousness and unity, indicating as nothing else could that this vast family of sons, having all partaken of one Spirit, are one Christ - "My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." The glorious Head, which is Jesus the Christ, was white like wool, as white as snow, and His eyes were like a flame of fire. See also Dan. 10:6. His feet, the other extremity of His body, the sons which are last to be born, were like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace, for judgment and the gospel of peace shall be given to them. His voice was as the sound of many waters. Many waters signify many people, for in Christ there are many sons. I know there are at least one hundred forty-four thousand, but there may be many more than that, for these may be only representative of a vastly greater throng. These one hundred forty-four thousand are all chosen from the twelve tribes of Israel, who are the seed of Abraham and heirs of the covenant God made with him.

Many years ago my wife and I attended the Warrior's Day parade in Toronto. The great grandstand held thirty thousand people. We sat for an hour or so waiting for the parade of old warriors to begin - soldiers from the Boer War, veterans from World War I, men from World War II, and one old warrior from the Northwest Rebellion of 1885. As we sat waiting, the multitudes in the grandstand conversed with each other, and while these thousands chatted, we listened. The sound of that multitude of voices was as the sound of many rushing waters like unto the pleasant roar of the great Niagara Falls as it pours its exhaustless waters into the terrible rapids below. We sat fascinated by the sound - a sound that could be described by nothing else than the sound of many waters. The musical harmony as the sound of many waters, falling upon the listening ear of the beloved John, was the myriad voices of the sons of God, all members of God's Christ, the Head and the body complete together, God's beloved Son, all speaking with one mind, all speaking with one authority. "This is My beloved Son. Hear Him!"

Our blessed Lord, when He was here on earth, gave us many beautiful illustrations of the oneness of Himself and His body. On one occasion He likened Himself and the body to a vine with fruit-bearing branches. Where may we find a greater unity than this? On another day He spoke of "My Father's house", which I am assured is none other than the body of Christ. This He likened to a house with many rooms (mansions). Likewise Paul, by the wisdom given unto him, likened the body to Christ to the many-membered human body, showing that, though the body has so many members in it and all members have a different office work, the body is but one. The hand cannot say to the foot, "I have no need of you." Nor can the eye say to the ear, "I have no need of you." Thus it shall ever be with God's glorious Christ. Though many sons form one Christ, the anointed of God, each in ages to come shall have his own office work, all in one Spirit working with that intricate harmony so wonderfully manifest in the human body, until at last through Abraham's seed, which is God's Christ, all the nations and families of the earth will be blessed. Abraham waited long years for Isaac to be born, but when Isaac was given a bride, then the great increase began. The blessing given to Rebecca was that she should be the mother of thousands of millions.

In closing this fourth chapter of the message concerning the Abrahamic covenant, perhaps it would be remiss if no mention was made of the sealing of the one hundred forty-four thousand sons of God from the twelve tribes of the children of Israel as is recorded in Rev. 7. From each of the tribes of Judah, Reuben, Gad, Asher, Naphtali, Manasses, Simeon, Levi, Issachar, Zabulon, Joseph (Ephraim), and Benjamin twelve thousand sons were sealed. The stormy winds were restrained from hurting the earth or the sea or the trees until the sealing of the sons of God in their foreheads was fully accomplished. Rev. 7:3. In my opinion the seal of God in the forehead is the perfect identification of sonship. Jesus Himself was a sealed Son of God. This He revealed by saying, "Labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for the meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give unto you: for Him hath God the Father sealed." John 6:27 In like manner these one hundred forty-four thousand who were sealed in their foreheads are the sons of God, members of the Christ body. The point I wish to make in particular concerns the Abrahamic Covenant, "In thee and thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." These one hundred forty-four thousand are all chosen from the seed of Abraham. These who are to shine as the stars of the heaven were all chosen from that earthly seed, numberless as the sands of the sea, who are the children of Abraham and the children of the covenant.
I am not intending any disrespect to the present State of Israel, which at present occupies a small portion of the land of Palestine, but we would be very misinformed, if not very ignorant, if we imagined even for a moment that this insignificant number of people represents the twelve tribes of Israel. The present State of Israel represents a small portion only of the house of Judah, but many among them are not Israelis at all, just as many in England are not Anglo-Saxons. The house of Judah consists of the tribes of Judah, Benjamin, and Levi, but the ten tribes of the house of Israel are not among the present inhabitants of the State of Israel. Neither are they Jews. The word Jew comes from the name Judah just as the name Jim is an abbreviation of James. The ten tribes of the house of Israel have become nations in the earth, even as Jacob prophesied they would when he called his sons to him and foretold their future for the last days. Gen. 44:49

In the twelfth chapter of Revelation we read of a great wonder that appeared in heaven, "a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars: and she being with child cried, travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered." The twelve stars represent the twelve tribes of Israel. The sun and moon represent Jacob and his wives. This is very clear by reading Gen. 37:9,10. Joseph in this passage had dreamed a dream in which the sun and the moon and the eleven stars (Joseph was the twelfth) bowed down and did obeisance to him. When his father Jacob heard this dream, he understood immediately what the meaning of it was, and with the harsh sound of rebuke in his voice he replied, "What is this dream that thou hast dreamed? Shall I and thy mother and thy brethren indeed come to bow down ourselves to thee to the earth? And his brethren envied him; but his father observed the saying." Here the word of God is definitely its own interpreter, teaching us that the sun and the moon and the twelve stars represent none other than the twelve tribes of the children of Israel.

The woman in the wilderness of Revelation, chapter twelve, is Israel - all twelve tribes of them, including the house of Judah and the house of Israel. In her travails she brought forth a man child - first Christ the Head Son and, secondly, the one hundred forty-four thousand sons of the Christ body. I do not say that this is the complete number, for I do not know. In the human body there are many more than one hundred forty-four thousand members; but we may say with certainty that the ranks of the sons of God are not less than this great throng. These do not include the numberless throngs of the redeemed who stand before the throne with palms in their hands. The one hundred forty-four thousand represent the sons of the Christ body.

Israel has always been a woman of the wilderness. Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob were all wilderness wanderers. After Israel departed from Egypt, they wandered for forty years in a wilderness until they entered their own land. Then the house of Israel was carried away to Assyria and were strangers in a strange land. From there they left to wander for centuries in the desolate places of Europe, moving out to the north, the south, the east and the west in exact accord with God's promise to Abraham. Gen. 28:14. Then they moved out into the uninhabited wilderness of new continents and the untamed islands of the seas, for Abraham was the heir of the world and was to be a blessing to the many nations of the world. We will not speak more of this wilderness aspect here except to say that during her wilderness journeys, while making the wilderness blossom as a rose, she had been bringing forth a man child, who will rule the whole earth in the near future with a rod of iron.

"And I looked, and lo, a Lamb stood on Mount Sion, and with Him an hundred and forty and four thousand, having His Father's name written in their foreheads. And I heard a voice from heaven as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of a great thunder: and I heard the voice of harpers, harping with their harps: And they sung as it were a new song before the throne, and before the four beasts, and the elders: and no man could learn that song but the hundred and forty and four thousand, which were redeemed from the earth. These are they, which are not defiled with women (denominations); for they are virgins. These are they, which follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth. These were redeemed from among men, being the first-fruits unto God and to the Lamb. And in their mouth was found no guile; for they are without fault before the throne of God." Rev. 14:1-5.

"The precious sons of Zion, comparable to fine gold, how are they esteemed as earthen pitchers, the work of the hands of the potter?" Lam. 4:2. But "the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away," (Isa. 35:10), because long centuries before the Lord had said to Abraham, "In thee and thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed."
INTRODUCTION TO CHAPTER FIVE

The next chapter will be a message concerning the bride of Christ. In it we will endeavor to show that, as Christ the Head and Christ the body come from the seed of Abraham, in like manner the bride of Christ, or Christ the bride, comes of the seed of Abraham. The term, Christ the bride, is doubtless unfamiliar to most of us. Indeed I have never heard the term used by any other; nevertheless the moment we grasp the significance of the statement, "For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother and be joined to his wife, and they two shall be one flesh," we grasp the vital unity between the Christ bridegroom and the Christ bride, for they two are also one in a spiritual union, of which the union of the flesh we now know as marriage can only be a frail type.

We should not deem it strange that we have not heard these truths before because God reveals truth only when the time is ripe for truth to be revealed. This Peter describes as present truth. 2 Pet. 1:12 It is also stated by Isaiah, "Behold, the former things are come to pass and new things do I declare: before they spring forth, I will tell you of them." Isa. 42:9 It is not strange therefore that practically no one has ever heard teaching concerning the bride of Christ - who she is, where she comes from, her relationship to the Bridegroom, or the magnificent purpose to which she is ordained. Should some think this to be an incorrect deduction, then one might ask himself the questions, "Who is the bride? For what purpose does Christ need a bride? What will be the glory of her ministry in the ages to come?" Upon asking ourselves these questions, we will realize that the truth concerning the bride of Christ has never been revealed nor has her existence been more than merely mentioned. It is deplorable, but true, that in our day, as in centuries past, the teaching has been that the present day church is the bride of Christ. This is a great error, which purposely hides the true bride and her ministry from our understanding.

It is necessary that all truth be revealed in its appointed time because, when truth grips our hearts and we comprehend the magnitude of God's eternal purposes, we are sanctified by the truth, for "Thy word is truth," and laying aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us, we press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

It is my earnest and continual prayer that all who read these sacred truths will be seized upon by the spirit of revelation from on high that all may see the length and breadth and depth and height of God's grace and know the love of God, which passeth knowledge, that we may know how long and wide and deep and high God's grace and love must be that we, the seed of Abraham by covenant and by faith, should be included in God's glorious Christ, the Head and the body together forming one Christ and one anointed. Jesus the first born and the many sons who follow after, being baptized into one body and one Christ, therefore being one, will hear again from heaven those same words of adoption, "This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased" This Christ in His fullness, the Head and the body in one together, will be united to the New Jerusalem bride that the last Adam in all His magnified and multiplied glory might be after the image of the first Adam before Eve, the bride, was separated from him. Thus the first man, who was of the earth earthy, is found to be a faint shadow of the last man, who is the Lord from heaven.

The entire dispensation of grace has been occupied by the ingathering and perfecting of the Christ body, or the bridegroom. The millennial age is appointed for the ingathering and perfecting of the bride of Christ, the hosts of the seed of Abraham reserved until now for that purpose. Then follows the dispensation of the fullness of times when through the twelve gates of the city all nations will enter that they might have the right to the tree of life, which is in the midst of the New Jerusalem, the city of God. The nations shall walk in the light of it and shall bring their glory and honor into it every creature in earth and in Heaven and in the sea will be heard saying, "Glory and blessing and honor to Him that sitteth upon the throne and to the Lamb for ever and ever."

THY SEED WHICH IS THE BRIDE OF CHRIST

Studying truth so vast in scope as that which we have undertaken, I frankly admit that it is difficult to find either an appropriate place to begin or a suitable place to end. As God Himself is without beginning or end, so also His eternal truth must be.
When the Lord created the animals, the birds, the beasts of the field, and all other life on earth, He made them male and female; but when He formed Adam from the dust of the ground, this creation was radically different from all others. Whereas lower forms of animal creation were made male and female separately from the beginning, man was made male and female, united in one person, and that one person was called Adam. Thus when the Lord caused every beast of the field and bird of the air to pass before Adam to be named, from all this great host of created life, the scripture clearly states, "for Adam there was not found an help-meet for him."

To provide a helpmeet and a wife for Adam the Lord did a wonderful thing. "And the Lord caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept: and He took one of his ribs, and closed up the flesh instead thereof; And the rib, which the Lord God had taken from man, made He a woman, and brought her unto the man. And Adam said, This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh: she shall be called Woman, because she was taken out of Man. Therefore shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh."

Gen. 2:21-24

To emphasize a thought, which I wish to introduce later we should remember this notable scripture: "And Adam called his wife's name Eve; because she was the mother of all living." Gen. 3:20

In 1 Cor. 11:12 Paul made this interesting statement: "For as the woman is of the man, even so is the man also by the woman: but all things of God." To the best of my understanding the meaning is this: The first woman who ever saw the light of day came forth out of man, but thenceforward forever every man who would come into the world would come by or from the woman. Herein is a most wonderful thing. None can deny the truth of it. Though the woman at first came forth from the man, yet from that day forth forever all mankind would be born of and come forth from the woman. The marvelous significance of the fact that Adam's wife was to become the mother of all living will never be fully appreciated until generations, dispensations, and ages pass in their procession and we stand at last on that great and high mountain with John, beholding the Holy City, the New Jerusalem, descending from heaven as a bride adorned for her husband, to become in truth the mother of all living. Rev. 21:9-21

Oh the unsearchable riches of Christ! Oh to perceive the irresistible unfolding of His immutable will! Oh to grasp the revelation of His purpose, the purpose that will never deviate from its original intention until at last all things return to God who gave them - not empty as they came out from God, but full of wisdom and knowledge as they will come in! Who hath known the mind of the Lord that he should instruct Him? Or who has been His counselor? For of Him and through Him and to Him are all things. Glory to His eternal name forervermore! It is not from the schools of this world's wisdom that we learn the ways of God. Eternal purposes are not unfolded by the lettered and polished scholars of this dark age. We do not discover the wisdom of the mind that is eternal by studying musty old volumes of church tradition, but we learn the purpose of the ages when in spirit we stand in Eden with the Eternal to look through His eyes down the vista of years to the end of time. Then and then only do we behold the infinite wisdom of the divine mind, the purpose of Him who worketh all things according to the counsel of His will.

"Not Athen's blooms, but those of Calvary
And Gethsemane bring the victory
That causes sinners for home to pine
And turn their backs for aye on husks of swine."

Our hearts have been thrilled and stirred beyond measure as we have mused concerning the covenant God made with Abraham. From it we have seen a nation and a company of nations rise, whose seed in our day is as numberless as the sands of the sea, a people who even in their unregenerate condition have been a blessing to all other nations on earth because they are the covenant people. From that nation we have seen the exalted Head come forth, Jesus Christ our Lord, the Son of God, the last man Adam, the seed of Abraham according to the flesh and that particular seed which we now know to be "thy seed which is Christ."

Upon a handful of Judean Jews, who were the seed of Abraham, the Holy Ghost was outpoured at Pentecost, the very beginning and foundation of the Christ body, the temple of the Lord. Then again in the Revelation John saw at the end of this age one hundred forty-four thousand sons of God of the seed of Abraham sealed in their foreheads. The sons of God in the extremity of this age complete the fullness of Christ. Wonderful as is the story of the fullness of Christ, it is by no means the end of the story we have to tell nor is it the climax of the covenant God made with Abraham. While Adam was complete as a man before Eve stood by his side, no seed of Adam could possibly have been born until God gave him a bride. Only then did the thousands of millions of... mankind begin to appear on the face of the earth. My heart sings a thousand hallelujahs when I consider the antitype of this great mystery. For six thousand years God has been bringing to fullness and completeness the last man Adam, the fullness of the Christ of God, the Head, which is God's first Son Jesus, together with the vast body of sons to follow, that Christ might stand at the end of this age in all His fullness as John beheld Him in Revelation, chapter one. "Here am I and the sons which God hath given me." Heb. 2:13 (R.V.) One Lord and one Christ, all baptized in one Spirit into one body and one Christ. Here am I, the Man Christ Jesus, the last Adam, made in God's image, created in His likeness, standing in the end of the sixth day complete in Myself as Adam stood, but with no bride and no wife by My side!

Up to this present time Christian people have had practically no understanding concerning the bride of Christ. Of her very little revelation has been given. The bride has not yet appeared on the earth. Though Adam appeared on the sixth day, Eve did not appear until after the sixth day. How long after we do not know. Adam was revealed as a son of God at the end of the sixth day, and now at the end of the sixth dispensational day since man appeared on the earth the Father has brought the sons of God to fullness. By the ministry of these sons will come forth the many membered New Jerusalem bride of Christ.

During the centuries of the church age many wonderful revivals have taken place. Multitudes of mankind have wept in repentance and contrition at the feet of the Saviour and, being begotten of Him, they rose to walk in newness of life, justified by faith in His blood, but up to the present hour all we have seen has been the gathering of the elect, the sonship company, who at the end of the age stand complete in Christ awaiting only the redemption of the body before their complete manifestation. While these multitudes were being gathered into the fold, unnumbered millions, yea, even billions, have walked in outer darkness, living and dying without even once hearing the message of salvation or ever knowing that the true God existed or that He so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believed on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life. But was not that to be expected? Most certainly it was, for had God intended to enlighten the heathen in this age, His omnipotent power could have done so ten thousand times over, opening their blind eyes and transforming their hearts in a moment of time. It was not until Eve was brought forth to stand by Adam's side that the human increase began. From that union billions have been born. Thus will it be in the end when the bride of Christ is presented to Him at the marriage of the Lamb. Then will the gates of the city be opened wide and the restitution of all the billions who once walked in darkness will begin. Never will the blessed program cease until every creature in heaven and earth and in the sea shall be heard saying, "Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb forever and ever." Rev. 5:13. Rejoice, O my soul, at the wonder of the thing!

Can we not see that all natural things have spiritual counterparts? Could God's command to Adam to multiply ever have been fulfilled had He not given Eve to be his bride? The Abrahamic covenant, which promised a seed as numberless as the stars of heaven, would have been but idle words had God not given Sarah to Abraham to be his wife. You sit today, oh man, with your children as olive plants about your table, but would they have been there at all had God not first given you a wife? But for her you would have been a dry and barren tree. Why then do we find it difficult to see the anti-type in Christ? Glorious as is our wonderful Christ in His completeness, even He would abide unproductive and alone were it not for the truth most glorious that from Himself will come forth a spiritual Eve, the bride of Christ, who in her time will be the mother of thousands of millions of reborn men, numberless as the stars of the universe.

There has been much misunderstanding concerning the sons of God and the bride. The sons of God now being prepared are the true body of Christ. They must not be confused with the bride. The sons of God compose the bridgroom. Jesus Christ with all the elect sons who have been prepared in this age constitute the bridgroom company. This is the fullness of Christ. Adam is the type; the sons of God are the antitype. Adam was first formed, then Eve. Let us not forget that order. To fulfill the type, Christ, the last Adam, is first formed in fullness, then the bride by Him. The first Adam was formed on the sixth day. The last man Adam is formed on the sixth dispensational day, the age of grace. Eve, the bride, was not formed on the sixth day. She was taken from Adam some time later. How much later I do not know. So also the bride of Christ is not formed on the sixth dispensational day. She first appears in all her glory descending from God out of heaven at the end of the millennial kingdom of God. Rev. 21:9-27 Our understanding of the whole plan of God for the reconciliation of all things becomes clearer once we understand that it is not until the woman, the bride, appears that true fruitfulness begins. If through Adam and Eve the billions of natural men have been born, then the antitype is abundantly clear that through Christ and the bride all those billions who have been born will now be born again. That is not first which is spiritual but that which is natural, and afterward that which is spiritual. Once we grasp the significance of the natural, it is not difficult to follow God's purpose through into the spiritual. The saints may learn a great lesson by noticing that all God's works, both natural and spiritual, follow a distinct pattern. For instance, everything that lives, be it a tree, an insect, an animal, a man or a son of God, grows from a seed. Again, everything in creation travels in an orbit. "Dust thou art and to dust shalt thou return." The wind blows from the north to the south and turns about and blows back to the north again. All the rivers run into the sea, yet the sea is never full. From the place whence the waters came thither they return again. The sun rises in the east and sets in the west and hastens to the place where he arose. See Eccles. 1:4-9 Again, in all forms of life God has made male and female. All living creatures are male and female and not least among them is mankind. God Himself is male and female in one. He could not be perfect if it were not so. When the Lord made Adam in His own image, Adam was both male and female in one person. Thus he remained until the Lord separated the masculine from the feminine, making Adam and Eve, man and woman, to exist separately for the purpose of procreation. Certain as this is, inspiration declares both in the Old Testament and in the New that the man and his wife, though separate, are one flesh. Indeed, it was Adam who first uttered that truth when he said, "This is now bone of my bones and flesh of my flesh: she shall be called Woman because she was taken out of Man. Therefore shall a man leave his father and mother and shall cleave unto his wife; and they shall be one flesh." Gen. 2:23-24 Paul likewise knew this truth and added, "This is a great mystery; nevertheless, I speak concerning Christ and the church." Speaking of the church, he was probably referring to that part of the ecclesia which will eventually form the bride of Christ.

Throughout the works of God the pattern is clearly visible, teaching us that the male is fruitless until the female appears. The bachelor must abide alone until he receives a bride. Then and only then the increase begins. We may be reverently assured that this same pattern exists in the spiritual realm. The sons of God, who form the body of Christ and the bridegroom, will become fully fruitful only after the bride appears and is presented to Christ. I will deal more fully with this as we proceed and then I trust we will see the universal increase, which the Word declares with such assurance. Dear reader, I ask this one question of you before we proceed further. In your meditations concerning the bride of Christ have you discovered the purpose for her existence? Or have you thought of her as something romantically meaningless? On the other hand, have you seen the bride as vitally essential to God's plan for the restitution of all things? To me it seems particularly clear that the formation of the bride of Christ is a work completely necessary to the final rebirth and reconciliation of all things. Though God's word declares with assurance that Christ "hath reconciled all things to Himself, the final fulfillment of that work must await the sacred hour when the bride of Christ is complete and ready, as I shall clearly show in the final pages of this chapter.

A BRIDE FOR ISAAC

The Bible is the Word of God. Every jot and tittle of it from Genesis to Revelation is as true as God is true. No man anywhere has ever proved any of its statements to be in error or any of its history or prophecy inaccurate. Not only is the Bible the Word of God, but it is also the most intriguing story ever written. It gives the account of creation and the fall of man. It tells of battles, of shipwrecks, of faithfulness, of murder and betrayal, and it contains without doubt the most romantic love stories ever recorded.

The complete romance of Isaac and Rebekah is a bit too long to write in detail here, but if the reader will refresh himself by reading Genesis, chapter twenty-four, he will have the beautiful account in its fullness. It will, however, be necessary to quote some of that narrative here. As you read the tale, you will become aware that Abraham is a type of God the Father, Isaac is a type of the Son, Eliezer, the servant, represents the Holy Spirit seeking the bride, and Rebekah herself is the bride.

"And Abraham was old, and well stricken in age: and the Lord had blessed Abraham in all things. And Abraham said unto his eldest servant of his house, that ruled over all he had, Put, I pray thee, thy hand under my thigh: and I will make thee swear by the Lord, the God of heaven, and the God of the earth, that thou shalt not take a wife unto my son of the daughters of the Canaanites, among whom I dwell: But thou shalt go unto my country, and to my kindred, and take a wife unto my son Isaac. And the servant said unto him, Peradventure the woman will not be willing to follow me unto this land: must I needs bring thy son again unto the land from whence thou earnest? And Abraham said unto him, Beware thou that thou bring not my son thither again. The Lord God of heaven, which took me from my father's house, and from the land of my kindred, and which spake unto me, and that sware unto me, saying, Unto thy seed will I give this land: He shall send His angel before thee, and thou shalt take a wife unto my son from thence.” Gen. 24:1-7

Reading the above passage, we will be impressed by Abraham's definite command that a bride for Isaac must under no circumstances be sought from among the Canaanites or from among any of the Gentile people. Isaac's bride was not to be a Gentile bride as so many preachers have insisted, but she was to be a girl from Abraham's kindred and from his own country. Gen. 24:4 Abraham was not a Jew, because there was no such person as a Jew until many years after Judah was born. The word Jew derives from the word Judah as Ben is an abbreviation of Benjamin. Abraham was an Hebrew. He was called a Hebrew because he was a descendant of the household of Heber or Eber. Gen. 11:14 I wish here to strongly emphasize the fact that Abraham forbad his servant to seek a bride for Isaac from among any except his own kindred. She was to be an Hebrew of Abraham's own people, for Abraham was an Hebrew. Gen. 14:13 Investigation clearly shows that Rebekah was a second cousin of Isaac or a cousin once removed as some prefer to say.

The genealogy of Abraham is given in Gen. 11:10-30 Briefly stated, starting with Shem, the son of Noah, the genealogy is Shem, Arphaxad, Salah, Eber, Peleg, Reu, Serug, Nahor, Terah; and Terah begat three sons, Abram, Nahor, and Haran. Haran, before he died, left three children - Lot (verse 27), Milcah, a daughter, and Iscah. Verse 29. Abram married his half-sister Sarah (Gen. 20:12) and Nahor married Milcah (his niece), who was his brother Haran's daughter. (Verse 29) Please remember that intermarrying with close relatives was not forbidden until after the law of Moses.

When Abraham's servant Eliezer (Gen. 15:2) went seeking a bride for Isaac, he was led by the Holy Spirit to the house of his master's brethren. Gen. 24:27 The account of the journey he took to seek a bride for Isaac is recorded in these words: “And the servant took ten camels of the camels of his master, and departed; for all the goods of his master were in his hand: and he arose, and went to Mesopotamia, unto the city of Nahor (Nahor was Abraham's brother). And he made his camels to kneel down without the city by a well of water at the time of the evening, even the time that women go out to draw water. And he said, O Lord God of my master Abraham, I pray Thee, send me good speed this day, and shew kindness unto my master Abraham. Behold, I stand here by the well of water; and the daughters of the men of the city come out to draw water: and let it come to pass, that the damsel to whom I shall say, Let down thy pitcher, I pray thee, that I may drink; and she shall say, Drink, and I will give thy camels drink also: let the same be she that Thou hast appointed for Thy servant Isaac; and thereby shall I know that thou hast shewed kindness unto my master. And it came to pass, before he had done speaking, that, behold, Rebekah came out, who was born to Bethuel, son of Milcah, the wife of Nahor, Abraham's brother, with her pitcher on her shoulder.” Gen. 24:10-15 This fifteenth verse tells us that Nahor and Milcah his wife had a son whose name was Bethuel, and Rebekah was Bethuel's daughter. Bethuel was therefore Isaac's first cousin and Rebekah was Isaac's second cousin.

I have emphasized this detail to establish the fact that Isaac's bride was not a Gentile bride, as preachers are so fond of declaring, She was an Hebrew just as certainly as Isaac was an Hebrew. Furthermore she could not have been much more closely related to Isaac than she was. This fact is important, because it is through Abraham and his seed that all other nations of the world are to be blessed. Abraham's wife was an Hebrew woman (his half-sister). Isaac's wife was also an Hebrew, and Jacob's wives, Rachel and Leah, were also Hebrew women, daughters of Laban, who himself was a son of Nahor, Abram's brother. Gen. 29:5 Now, since Rachel and Leah were the daughters of Laban, the son of Nahor, and Rebekah was the daughter of Bethuel, the son of Nahor, then Bethuel and Laban were brothers and Rachel and Leah were first cousins of Rebekah. I do not see any way to avoid this conclusion. Lot was the son of Haran, Abraham's brother. Therefore Lot was Abraham's nephew. How anyone can conclude that Rebekah was a Gentile bride in the face of this close relationship is more than I can imagine. She was definitely an Hebrew bride.

It is in Abraham and his seed that all the nations of the earth shall be blessed. We have already shown in Vol. 15 No. 3 that Jesus Christ, the Head of the body, was of the seed of Abraham according to His natural descent. In article four we showed that the body of Christ is of the seed of Abraham and heirs according to the promise. Also the one hundred forty-four thousand who were sealed in their foreheads as sons of God were chosen from the twelve tribes of the children of Israel and every one of these sons is of the seed of Abraham according to God's eternal covenant with him. It will be our joy to see presently that the greatest ingathering of all time will be accomplished when the bride of Christ is complete and has made herself ready, for in that glad and holy day all the nations will bring their glory and honor into her. Therefore it is important now to show that the bride of Christ, when she appears in all her celestial glory, will also be of the seed of Abraham. As it is with the types, so must it be with the antitypes. Just as the brides of Isaac and Jacob were of the Abrahamic family, so also will the bride of Christ be of the seed of Abraham. Again we repeat the words of the covenant: "In thee and thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

It must be clearly understood that, when God speaks of the seed of Abraham, He is speaking of all the twelve tribes of the children of Israel and not merely of the Jews, who represent only a very small section of the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, who formed the house ofJudah. Why is it that Christians universally insist that the Jewish nation, who for two thousand years has been anti-Christ in all its teaching and actions, is predestined to inherit a wonderful future glory, and at the same time insist that the other ten tribes, to whom Christ is a glory, (Luke 2:32), are washed up, rejected of God, and completely forgotten? There is something wrong with such faulty theology as that, for it is certain that far greater promises were given to the ten tribes of the house of Israel than were given to the two tribes of the house of Judah. We must conclude that these ten tribes are in the earth today, bringing forth fruit exactly as God determined before hand when Jacob called his sons and said, "Gather yourselves together, that I may tell you that which shall befall you in the last days." Gen. 49:1

The apostle Paul said, "Blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the full number of the Gentiles be come in." Now this blindness is twofold. First the house of Judah is partially blind, for while they know they are Abraham's seed, they do not know that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God and their promised Messiah. The house of Israel on the other hand is blind in exactly the opposite way, for they almost to a man know that Jesus is the Christ; yet they are totally blind as to who they are, supposing all the while that they are Gentiles when they are in fact the seed of Abraham. As this thought will be dealt with in our final chapter, we will leave it for the present with the prayer that God will open our eyes, which have suffered this blindness in part for so many years, that the house of Judah may see her Christ and the house of Israel may see her identity, her birthright and her calling.

REBEKAH'S BLESSING

The story of Rebekah, the bride of Isaac, is filled with romance and beauty. Read its narrative verse by verse and consider its progress thought by thought and you will discover a beautiful story full of types and instruction that will lead to understanding. You will see Abraham as a type of our heavenly Father, sending forth the servant, who represents the Holy Spirit, to seek out a bride for Isaac, the son. You will see the gifts with which she is adorned, the consecration she willingly made in response to the proposal, "Wilt thou go with this man," and she said, "I will go." You will hear the prophetic blessing pronounced upon her as she departed: "Thou art our sister; be thou the mother of thousands of millions, and let thy seed possess the gate of those which hate them." Gen. 24:60

I trust the reader will not forget that Rebekah is a type of the New Jerusalem bride of Christ. She just may be the only type of the bride of Christ in all the scripture. Therefore I want to greatly emphasize these words of her blessing, "Be thou the mother of thousands of millions." Gen. 24:60 Rebekah has become the mother of thousands of millions through the centuries, but the wonderful blessing extends far beyond all natural generation, reaching forward to that glad day when the bride of Christ, the New Jerusalem, Rebekah's antitype, will open her twelve gates to become the mother of all the thousands of millions who have ever existed on the earth. A thousand million is a billion, but the blessing is not to a thousand million, but to thousands of millions. Numberless billions will enter through her wide open gates to partake of the water of life, flowing freely in the midst of the city of God. They will bring their glory and honor into her and she will be the mother of them all, and God Himself will be their Father and dwell among them. "Be thou the mother of thousands of millions" is a mighty prophetic blessing to be fulfilled in its completeness only in the New Jerusalem bride. Oh the knowledge of God as He speaks from eternity to eternity! How unsearchable is His wisdom and His ways past finding out!
"And Rebekah arose, and her damsels, and they rode upon the camels, and followed the man: and the servant (who represents the Holy Spirit) took Rebekah, and went his way. And Isaac came from the way of the well Lahai-roi; for he dwelt in the south country." Gen. 24:61-62. Isaac, as you already know, is a type of Christ in this story, that fullness of Christ of which we have spoken before. Isaac came from the way of the well Lahai-roi, which means, "The well of Him that liveth and seeth me." This was the well Hagar named before the birth of Ishmael when the angel of the Lord met her in the wilderness. Gen. 16:1-14. Thou, Lord seest me. "And Isaac went out to meditate in the field at the eventide; and he lifted up his eyes, and saw, and, behold, the camels were coming. And Rebekah lifted up her eyes, and when she saw Isaac, she lighted off the camel. For she had said unto the servant, What man is this that walketh in the field to meet us? And the servant had said, It is my master: therefore she took a vail, and covered herself. And the servant told Isaac all things that he had done. And Isaac brought her into his mother Sarah's tent, and took Rebekah, and she became his wife; and he loved her; and Isaac was comforted after his mother's death." Gen. 24:63-67.

The story of Isaac abounds in beautiful types. Abraham had waited many long and weary years for the birth of his promised son. All the promises and covenants God had made with him depended entirely upon the birth of this one son. Upon the birth of Isaac depended the promise that Abraham's seed would be as the sand of the sea shore and as the stars of heaven for number. Upon his birth rested the promise, "In thee and thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." If this promised son were not born, then all the promises given and re-given through the years must fall to the ground and become utterly meaningless. But, blessed be God's faithfulness, Isaac was born and with him the promise of all things God had spoken is assured.

In the midst of the gladness this promised son had brought came the command of God that Isaac should be offered up as a sacrifice, for nothing we possess is of any value at all until it is offered in sacrifice to God. So Abraham, in obedience to God's command, took his son to offer him up for a burnt offering on one of the hills of Moriah. Gen. 22:2. (Possibly Calvary where Jesus died and where also, many believe, Adam had been buried.) Though God spared Isaac from death, in type he died, the ram caught in the thicket taking his place. Now, many years after Isaac had been received from death in a figure (Heb. 11:19), he was presented with a bride, through whom all the promises of God would be completely fulfilled. All else is but preparation for the bride, who will be the mother of thousands of millions.

There is so much to write and space seems always insufficient, but we must find place here to explain that man in himself is not complete. When God made man in the beginning, He created him male and female complete in one person, and that person was Adam. All other creatures were created male and female separately, but Adam was made male and female in one person. We cannot tell from the Genesis record how long he remained in that perfect state, but the day came when a deep sleep from God came upon him and from a part of his body, which the Bible calls a rib, the Lord formed a woman, who was presented to him as his wife. From that hour onward the man without the woman was incomplete and the woman without the man was incomplete also, and each without the other remained fruitless. Because both the male and the female are incomplete and fruitless without each other the apostle Paul in wisdom explained, "For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother and be joined to his wife, and they two shall be one flesh." Nothing proves more conclusively than this passage that the male without the female or the female without the male are both incomplete and fruitless, but when they two are joined together by the power of God, they two are one. After Paul explained this mystery, he proceeded to show how this wonder is itself a type of an even greater mystery, saying, "This is a great mystery: but I speak concerning Christ and the church." Eph. 5:32 The true church consists of the sonship company, which is the fullness of Christ in His many-membered body of sons, but the church of the millennial kingdom is the Israel bride - the bride of Christ, not a Gentile bride, but an Israelitish bride as we have before clearly shown.

The book of Hosea will always remain a dark mystery until the reader discovers that the wayward, adulterous, Baal-loving twelve tribes of the children of Israel, restored, redeemed, washed and cleansed by the blood of the Lamb, are in truth the bride of Christ. I frankly confess that, until the Spirit made it clear to my own heart that converted and restored Israel is the bride of Christ, the whole book of Hosea and most of the other prophetic books as well were a meaningless jumble that made no sense at all.
The prophet Hosea was told to go and marry two adulterous women (Hos. 1:3 and 3:1) vividly described as "a wife of whoredoms", "for the land hath committed great whoredoms in departing from the Lord." In response to this strange command Hosea took Gomer, who bore him a son, and the Lord said, "Call his named Jezreel; for yet a little while, and I will avenge the blood of Jezreel upon the house of Jehu, and will cause to cease the kingdom of the house of Israel." Hos. 1:4 (For the sequel of this story of Jezreel please read 2 Kings 10:1-14.) Then Gomer bare a daughter whom they named Lo-ruhamah, meaning unpitied (verse 6), for God said, "I will no more have mercy on the house of Israel, (that is, the ten tribes) but / will have mercy upon the house of Judah (the two tribes)."

When Gomer had weaned Lo-ruhamah, she bore a son and called his name Lo-ammi, which means "not my people," for the Lord said, "Ye are not My people and I will not be your God." Verse 9 Now read verses 10 and 11 and we will discover what the future holds for these people. "Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured or numbered: and it shall come to pass, that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not My people, there it shall be said unto them, Ye are the sons of the living God. Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israel be gathered together, and appoint themselves one head, and they shall come up out of the land: for great shall be the day of Jezreel."

To me it is a most wonderful thing to hear the Lord in one verse condemn these people to the most awful judgment, utterly forsaking them, then in the next verse prove that they are still His beloved people by extending to them the most remarkable and unconditional promises. The day will come, indeed, when the house of Israel and the house of Judah will appoint themselves one head, and that head will be Christ, and Israel - all twelve tribes of them - will become the bride of Christ.

Please notice further that in verse 10 the Lord distinctly says that it is during the time of their rejection that they will become as numberless as the sands of the sea. Furthermore, in the very place where the Lord had said, "Ye are not MY people," there shall they be called the sons of the living God.

It is a disconcerting conundrum to me to find that, when some anthropologist discovers a nomadic tribe of savages whom he foolishly imagines has some relationship to the lost ten tribes of Israel, all the Christians rejoice and hail his vain notion as a great discovery, though no such prophecy of miserable destitution was ever made of Israel. But, when the claim is made and backed with abundant scriptural evidence that these ten tribes are now a multitude in the earth as difficult to number as the sands of the sea and that they are the head and not the tail among nations and a blessing to all other peoples, having expanded to the north and south and east and west, then the claimant is regarded as a fanatic and a fool even though his claims are soundly based on the Word of God. The very fact that Simeon prophesied that Jesus Christ would be the glory of His people Israel (that is, the ten tribes of the house of Israel) should be enough to identify as Israel those nations who honor Christ as Lord. Since the one hundred forty-four thousand sons of God are chosen from the twelve tribes of Israel, and the bride is Israel, then the matter of who Israel is ceases to be a thing of paltry importance, but a thing of utmost concern, for the word of God still rings loud in our ears, "In thee and thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." All blessing to all other nations must come through the seed of Abraham or not at all. Christ the Head, Christ the body, and Christ the bride must come of the seed of Abraham; otherwise the covenant is void.

Now in Hosea, chapter two, the story of Gomer continues. Please read it carefully, bearing these thoughts in mind. Much of the chapter is taken up with the corrective steps to be taken against the adulterous woman Israel. God will strip her naked (verse 3), make her a wilderness, set her in a dry land, slay her with thirst, hedge her about with thorns, make a wall that she shall not find her paths (verse 6) "She shall follow after her lovers, but shall not overtake them; she shall seek them, but shall not find them: then shall she say, I will go and return to my first husband; for then was it better with me than now." Verse 7. Her first husband is the Lord. We interrupt the chain of thought here to say that right in our day this same Israel is seeking lovers among the nations, but cannot find them. Britain goes awhoring after the nations in the Common Market, but the whole world knows she doesn't belong there. She is a square plug in a round hole. The more she embraces them the more they reject her. The whole Anglo-Saxon world joins in with the United Nations, going awhoring after Russia and China, but all the reward they get is to pay the bills and be kicked in the face by those they try to help or defend. But the day will come at the end of this age when they will say, "I will return to my first husband, for then it was better with me than now."
Has the Lord forgotten His covenant people? By no means! Listen to what He says: "Behold, I will allure her, and bring her into the wilderness (cf. Rev. 12:14), and speak comfortably unto her. And I will give her, her vineyards from thence, and the valley of Achor for a door of hope: and she shall sing there as in the days of her youth, and as in the day when she came up out of the land of Egypt." Verses 14-15 Now comes the most wonderful verse of all! "And it shall be in that day, saith the Lord, that thou shalt call me Ishi (that is, my husband); and shall call me no more Baali (my lord)." Verse 16 Then follows verse 19: "And I will betroth thee unto Me forever; yea, I will betroth thee unto Me in righteousness, and in judgment, and in loving kindness, and in mercies. I will even betroth thee unto Me in faithfulness: and thou shalt know the Lord. And it shall come to pass in that day, I will hear, saith the Lord, I will hear the heavens, and they shall hear the earth; and the earth shall hear the corn, and the wine, and the oil; and they shall hear Jezreel. And I will sow her unto Me in the earth; and I will have mercy upon her that had not obtained mercy; and I will say to them which are not My people, Thou art My people; and they shall say, Thou art my God." Hosea 2:19-23

The prophecy of Hosea was written principally to the ten tribes of the house of Israel, but as Israel and Judah are both of the seed of Abraham, it was essential that the prophet speak also of them. This he did, saying, "The Lord hath also a controversy with Judah, and will punish Jacob according to his ways; according to his doings will He recompense him." Hos. 12:2 The punishment of Judah has been very severe all through this past age. Great blindness and distress have been upon them, first, because of their disobedience and whoredoms and, above all else, because of their rejection of their Messiah, Jesus Christ. Judah above all others should have known that Shiloh, the Redeemer, would come through him, but "Who," said God, "is so blind as My servant?" We must not forget, however, that Judah's rejection of Christ and their present blindness was all part and parcel of the great aionian purpose ordained by God from the beginning. Until mankind is able to see that before all things God stands omniscient, immutable, almighty and eternal, they will fall far short in understanding, blundering along in the outer darkness of unbelief.

In the light of these few verses from Hosea the whole book with its curses, its promises and blessings, begins to unravel and unfold until at last we see the adulterous and repudiated wife of Jehovah return to her faithful Lord to become the repentant, restored, purified and prepared bride of Christ. The reader will discover to his delight that this line of thought pervades the messages of the prophets Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel. All the prophets concentrate heavily on this line of thought. All foresaw both the house of Judah and the house of Israel carried away into captivity. All foresaw their whoredoms among the nations and all rejoiced in the knowledge of their final restoration. It is a beautiful though tragic story with a wonderful end, if indeed it can be said that there is an end at all. In every book of the Old Testament and almost every book of the New Testament Israel is always "God's people", whether abiding in obedience in the promised land or scattered in disobedience to the four corners of the earth. Always they are His chosen seed. Always amid their curse and judgment He blesses them, and always foremost is the final purpose to bring them to perfection that in the ages to come all nations who know not God will come to the blessedness of that knowledge through the seed of Abraham.

In the twenty-third chapter of Ezekiel we read the parable of Aholah and Aholibah, daughters of one mother who committed whoredom in Egypt. Verse 4 says, "Thus were their names; Samaria is Aholah, and Jerusalem is Aholibah." Jerusalem, of course, was the capital city of the House of Judah and Samaria was the capital city of the house of Israel. Both of these women (nations) played the harlot, Aholah going after the Assyrians and being eventually carried away by them, while Aholibah went after the Babylonians (verses 22, 23) and eventually was carried away captive by them. But always somewhere in the prophecy is the evidence of cleansing, repentance, a return, for God has not cast away His people which He foreknew; but in the place where He said, "Ye are not My people," there shall they be called the sons of the living God.

We stated before that Israel has always been a woman of the wilderness. As the multitudes of her people outgrew their surroundings, they moved out into the wilderness of new continents, making the land blossom and produce abundantly. Even those Jews who this century returned to the land of Israel after an absence of eighteen centuries found it to be a burning, unproductive wilderness. But today one flying across the country can see in an instant the boundaries between Israel and the Arab lands, because the Arab side is desert and the Israel side is a desert blossoming as a rose.
The end of the age is at hand. The dispensation which Paul calls the dispensation of the grace of God will soon be history. Not that grace will be history, but the dispensation will be passed away. When this age is complete, Christ in His body will also be complete. The trumpet will sound and the "in Christ" will rise first. Jesus Christ the Head will appear with all the sons whom God has given Him, as revealed to John in Rev. 1:9-18. With the defeat of the armies of the Antichrist the Son of God will begin His reign of righteousness. He will take the kingdom and that long awaited day of glory, spoken of by all the prophets, will have come. The wilderness and the solitary place will be glad of them and the desert shall blossom as a rose.

Have you considered how great was the truth Jesus uttered when He said, "Ye which have followed Me, in the regeneration when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of His glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel?" Matt. 19:28. Judging the twelve tribes of the children of Israel! To what purpose will God in that wonderful age set His anointed sons to judge the twelve tribes of Israel? His purpose is to pursue to its ultimate fulfillment that original promise He made to Abraham: " In thee and thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." From Israel He has already perfected Christ the Head. From Israel He has perfected Christ the body, and through judgment of this same Israel in the kingdom He will perfect Christ the bride, that she who once languished as the repudiated wife will henceforth call Him, "my husband." Hos. 2:16.

John on the Isle of Patmos, beholding these glories in the Spirit, wrote: "There came unto me one of the seven angels which had the seven vials full of the seven last plagues, and talked with me, saying, Come hither, I will shew thee the bride, the Lamb's wife. And he carried me away in the spirit to a great and high mountain, and shewed me that great city, the Holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God, having the glory of God: and her light was like unto a stone most precious, even like a jasper stone, clear as crystal; and had a wall great and high, and had twelve gates, and at the gates twelve angels, and names written thereon, which are the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel:" Rev. 21:9-12 Can any picture show more clearly or words explain more definitely than these that the Bride of Christ is the twelve tribes of the children of Israel? Just as the sons of God, the one hundred forty-four thousand, are chosen from the twelve tribes of Israel, so also the bride is the twelve tribes of Israel. The sons of God are the Temple of the Lord, but the bride of Christ is the city of the Lord. The body of Christ is a temple not made with hands in which every stone is living stone, a person, a son of God. The same truth applies to the glorious holy city, the bride of Christ. It is not a metropolis as some evidently imagine, but every gate and wall and foundation in it is a living stone, persons and tribes blood-washed and redeemed, all of the seed of Abraham. The walls of the city were of jasper and the city was pure gold. Gold in scripture is symbolic of God and all that is priceless and precious. The gold of the city was like unto clear glass. "And the foundations of the wall of the city were garnished with all manner of precious stones. The first foundation was jasper; the second, sapphire; the third, a chalcedony; the fourth, an emerald; the fifth, a sardonyx; the sixth, sardius; the seventh, chrysolite; the eighth, beryl; the ninth, a topaz; the tenth, a chrysoprasus; the eleventh, a jacinth; the twelfth, an amethyst. (These same twelve stones represented the tribes of Israel in the breastplate of the high priest.) And the twelve gates were twelve pearls; every several gate was of one pearl: and the street of the city was pure gold, as it were transparent glass. And I saw no temple therein: for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it. And the city had no need thereof: for the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it; for the glory of the Lord did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof. And the nations of them that are saved shall walk in the light of it: and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honor into it. And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day: for there shall be no night there. And they shall bring the glory and honor of the nations into it. And there shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie; but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life." Rev. 21:19-27

We see here the bride, redeemed Israel, adorned and prepared for her husband. It is not until the bride is joined to her husband that the Last Adam is complete, male and female in one Spirit as the first Adam was male and female in one flesh. When the bride appears, then the increase begins. When she is perfected, we hear the sweet strains of a new message, never heard before in all the history of the world. "The Spirit and the bride say, Come." Hitherto the Spirit of Christ has invited the elect to come. Henceforth the glorious New Jerusalem bride will join with Christ, saying, "Come," to all the nations of the world, and the restitution of all things will begin. The twelve gates of the city will be opened by day and never closed, for there is no night there. In response to the message, "Come," proclaimed by the Spirit and the bride, the nations in glad procession will bring their glory and honor into the city, a procession which will never cease until every man who has ever lived or died has come in through the gates of the city back to God from whence he came.

No book could ever be written that could fully describe the glory of this thing. Only the Holy Spirit can carry us away and reveal it to our hearts. The resurrection of the dead will take place in which the millions and billions who never heard that God had a Son will hearken with awe to this beautiful bride of Christ speaking by the Spirit to all nations, saying, "Come." And come they will - by the billions - for the restitution of all things, spoken of by all the prophets since the world began, is the purpose for that final age, the dispensation of the fullness of times. Of the dispensation of the fullness of times Paul triumphantly wrote these immortal words: "Having made known unto us the mystery of His will, according to His good pleasure which He hath purposed in Himself: that in the dispensation of the fullness of times He might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth, even in Him: In whom also we have obtained an inheritance, being predestinated according to the purpose of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will." Eph. 1:9-10 This great final gathering of all things into Christ will come to pass because centuries before the Lord made a covenant with Abraham that was to embrace His purpose for all time and eternity. "In thee and thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

I have sought in vain through the works of man to find if any had a spiritual understanding of the Holy City, the New Jerusalem bride of Christ, but alas, all seem intent upon calculating the expanse of the city in cubic miles as though it were nothing more than a huge metropolis slightly more wonderful than those at present on earth. One speaker pictured the New Jerusalem as a twelve-story hotel. Another waxed eloquent about the size of the mansion each inhabitant would possess, replete with space for lawns and fountains and other such childish nonsense. Until our spiritual minds are able to grasp the truth that the body of Christ is the temple of God and that every room or mansion in that temple is a living son of God, a literal habitation for God through the Spirit, and until we understand that the stones of that building are all living stones as Christ Jesus Himself is a living stone, we have understood nothing at all. The temple of God is the body of Christ. The temple of God, indeed, is Christ in all His fullness — the Head and all the many members of the body joined by one Spirit and baptized into one glorious body. Did not Paul, because of the indolent understanding of his listeners, demand in amazement, "What? Know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you?" 1 Cor. 6:19 Oh may the Spirit of God make this a living truth in our hearts! This is the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. This is "My Father's house of many mansions" in which He prepares a place for every one who by faith has become a son of God. This is what John meant when he said, "As many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name: which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." John 1:12-13 This is the body of the Christ. This is the habitation of God. This is the temple of the Lord.

If we will seek God in prayer and ask the Father in heaven for revelation, the Holy Spirit will take the things of God and show them unto us, and we will rejoice in the blessedness of the understanding He gives. If our spiritual minds can grasp the truth concerning the temple of God, then it will be much easier to understand why the bride of Christ is described as the Holy City, the New Jerusalem. In the glory of that wonderful age to come man has no need of houses to dwell in. God does not dwell in temples made with hands. These are only figures of the true. The Holy City, the New Jerusalem, is the bride of Christ, magnificent in glory and indescribable in beauty, and the bride of Christ is the Holy City. The glory of this truth overwhelms me! Knowing neither where to begin nor where to end, I stumble in words as one whose breath through amazement has been taken away.

See with me the increasing tempo of glory in heaven and earth when the announcement is made, "His wife hath made herself ready." John, lost in spirit at the wonder of the thing, saw the four and twenty elders and the four beasts fall down and worship God that sat on the throne saying, "Alleluia!" "And a voice came out of the throne, saying, Praise our God, all ye His servants, and ye that fear Him, both small and great. And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying Alleluia: for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth. Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to Him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and His wife hath made herself ready. And to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white: for the fine linen is the righteousness of the saints. And He saith unto me, Write, Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb. And he saith unto me, These are the true sayings of God." Rev. 19:5-9

Is it not a marvelous thing to discover that immediately following the announcement, "His wife hath made herself ready," in verse 11 we see "heaven opened, and behold a white horse: and He that sat upon him was called Faithful and True, and in righteousness He doth judge and make war. His eyes were as a flame of fire, and on His head were many crowns; and He had a name written, that no man knew, but He Himself. And he was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood: and His name is called the Word of God. And the armies, which were in heaven followed Him upon white horses, clothed in fine linen, white and clean. And out of His mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it He should smite the nations: and He shall rule them with a rod of iron: and He treadeth the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God. And He hath on His vesture and on His thigh a name written, KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS."

Following the revelation of the coming Christ and the announcement that the bride has made herself ready, an angel came to John saying, "Come hither, and I will shew thee the bride, the Lamb's wife. And he carried me away in the spirit to a great and high mountain, and shewed me that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God." Rev. 21:9,19 John saw her myriad ranks of "thousands of millions" descending from heaven, a living reflection of the blessing given to Rebekah forty centuries before - "Be thou the mother of thousands of millions." And thousands of millions there will be in that New Jerusalem bride of Christ - all the seed of Abraham, clad in fine linen, for fine linen is the righteousness of the saints. On a great and high mountain John stood, beholding the unspeakable wonder of the Holy Jerusalem descending from God out of heaven, having the glory of God; and her light was like unto a stone most precious, even like a jasper stone, clear as crystal. "Having the glory of God," the word declares, "and her light was like unto a stone most precious." We read in Rev. 4:3 that John beheld the throne of God, and Him that sat upon it was to look upon like a jasper and a sardine stone. This same manifestation of God's glory is now seen in the bride, for as the sun lights up the heavens, so the glory of God is the light of the bride, and the city had no need of the sun, neither the moon to shine in it, for the glory of God did lighten it and the Lamb is the light thereof.

"Thou art our sister: be thou the mother of thousands of millions," were the words of blessing that fell upon the beautiful Rebekah long ago, and the mother of thousands of millions she became, but this sweet and humble girl, the bride of Isaac, so beautiful to behold, was but a frail and fading type of that bride which was to come, when billions of her progeny would be manifested as the heavenly bride of Christ. Now henceforth the nations of them that are saved shall walk in the light of it, and kings of the earth do bring their glory and honor into it. Now shall the salvation of God be manifest to the nations of earth, who hitherto walked in darkness and the shadow of death. Henceforth walking in the light of the Holy City, they shall be called the nations of them, which are saved. Rev. 21:24 In grand procession forever and ever they bring their glory and honor into it, and the gates shall not be shut at all by day and there is no night there. Each of the twelve gates of that city are wide enough for a whole regiment to march in abreast. And they shall bring the glory and honor of the nations into it and there shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever loveth or maketh a lie. As Rebekah, the bride of Isaac, became the mother of thousands of millions, so shall the New Jerusalem bride of Christ become the mother of the billions who henceforth will enter her pearly gates.

Do you see them coming, brother,
Thronging up the steeps of light,
Clad in glorious, shining garments,
Blood washed garments pure and white?

Israel, the future bride of Christ, has been described in many ways in scripture. She is seen as a woman in the wilderness, (Rev. 12:6), after whom the serpent cast floods of water that she should be carried away of the flood. Then she is pictured as "having a wall great and high, having twelve gates" or portals through which the billions of the heathen nations shall pass to their reconciliation with God, for long ago Paul proclaimed that God had reconciled all things to Himself. Col. 1:20, 21

With these blessed thoughts in mind, let us muse in spirit with Solomon as long ago he beheld the glory of the bride. "Who is this," he asks, "that cometh up from the wilderness, leaning upon her beloved? I raised thee up
Then Solomon in his song of the bride continued: "We have a little sister, and she hath no breasts: what shall we do for our sister in the day she shall be spoken for?" The breasts are for nourishment and sustenance of babies, but throughout all the centuries of her existence this little sister, Israel, has been a woman without breasts. I am distressed to tell you that the church system, like Israel, has fed her people on the skimpiest supply of diluted milk until they are utterly impoverished as far as the knowledge of God and His purpose is concerned. Week after week they are bored with the same childish sermons they have heard since their infancy. They never grow, because this woman has no breasts to feed them. This wilderness woman is to be the bride of Christ, and she has been spoken for. Hence Solomon asks in great concern, "What shall we do for our sister in the day she shall be spoken for?" The reply from heaven is this: "If she be a wall, and she is a wall, for John saw her with a wall great and high, Rev. 21:12, we will build upon her a palace of silver: and if she be a door (and she is a door, for John beheld in her twelve gates through which the nations would bring their glory and honor), we will enclose her with boards of cedar." This rising to maturity is the purpose for which she is fed in the wilderness. After this the bride speaks out loud and clear with her voice of many waters (Rev. 19:6). In her triumph she declares, "I am a wall, and my breasts like towers." No longer is this a woman of the wilderness, scarcely able to sustain herself, for now upon her wall rise palaces of silver (redemption), which she describes as "breasts like towers." The nations of them that are saved will walk in the light of her and the Kings of the earth will bring their glory and honor into her. Song of Solomon 8:5-10

"How beautiful are thy feet with shoes, O prince's daughter! The joints of thy thighs are like jewels, the work of the hands of a cunning workman. Thy navel is like a round goblet, which wanteth not liquor: thy belly is like a heap of wheat set about with lilies. Thy two breasts are like young roes that are twins. Thy neck is as a tower of ivory; thine eyes like the fish pools in Heshbon, by the gate of Bath-rabbim: thy nose is as the tower of Lebanon, which looketh toward Damascus. Thine head upon thee is like Carmel, and the hair of thine head like purple; the king is held in the galleries. How fair and how pleasant art thou, O love, for delights! This thy stature is like to a palm tree, and thy breasts to a cluster of grapes. I said, I will go up to the palm tree, I will take hold of the boughs thereof: now also thy breasts shall be as clusters of the vine, and the smell of thy nose like apples; and the roof of thy mouth like the best wine for my beloved, that goeth down sweetly, causing the lips of those that are asleep to speak. I am my beloved's, and his desire is toward me. Come, my beloved, let us go forth into the field; let us lodge in the villages. Let us get up early to the vineyards; let us see if the vine flourish, for our sister in the day she shall be spoken for?" The reply from heaven is this: "If she be a wall, (and she is a wall, for John saw her with a wall great and high, Rev. 21:12), we will build upon her a palace of silver: and if she be a door, for John beheld in her twelve gates through which the nations would bring their glory and honor), we will enclose her with boards of cedar." This rising to maturity is the purpose for which she is fed in the wilderness. After this the bride speaks out loud and clear with her voice of many waters (Rev. 19:6). In her triumph she declares, "I am a wall, and my breasts like towers." No longer is this a woman of the wilderness, scarcely able to sustain herself, for now upon her wall rise palaces of silver (redemption), which she describes as "breasts like towers." The nations of them that are saved will walk in the light of her and the Kings of the earth will bring their glory and honor into her. Song of Solomon 8:5-10

"For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother and shall be joined to his wife, and they two shall be one flesh. This is a great mystery; but I speak concerning Christ and the church." Eph. 5:32. The marriage of a man to a woman is a union in which the partners become one flesh. This is a precious type of the marriage of the sons of God to the bride by which they are joined forever in one Spirit. The marriage of the Christ to His New Jerusalem bride is the signal for the restitution of all things. Then will the Spirit and the bride say, "Come," and the nations will enter through the gates that they may partake of the river of life and the leaves of the tree that are for the healing of the nations. With this celestial fullness of the bride of Christ the promised seed of Abraham is complete - Christ the Head, Christ the body, and Christ the bride. This is the seed through whom all nations and families of the earth are to be blessed. When the holy New Jerusalem bride appears in all her glory, the Lord God Almighty will be the temple thereof. From His exalted throne in her midst the water of life will ever flow and the ever, green tree of life, bearing its twelve manner of fruits, will flourish on either side of the river for the healing of the nations who hitherto walked in darkness and the shadow of death. Then shall her twelve gates be opened, and never shall they be closed by day, and there is no night there. Then shall the... holy voice of the bride, speaking by the Spirit of God, say to the billions who until now have never heard that God has a Son or that He died to save them all, "Come, for all things are now ready. Come to the marriage supper of the Lamb! Come through the gates into the city! Come and partake freely of the water of life! Let him that is athirst come, and whosoever will, let him come and take of the water of life freely. Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy, and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price!" And come they will by the millions and by the billions, bringing the glory and honor of the nations into the beautiful city of God. And the nations of them that are saved will walk in the light of it and there shall be no night there.

"And he shewed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, Proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb. In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bear twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations. And there shall be no more curse: but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it; and His servants shall serve Him: and they shall see His face; and His name shall be in their foreheads. And there shall be no night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord God giveth them light: and they shall reign for ever and ever." Rev. 22:1-5

With the opening of the gates of the New Jerusalem the restitution of all things will have begun where Christ is Lord of all. "For He must reign till He hath put all enemies under His feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death. For He hath put all things under His feet. But when He saith all things are put under Him (Christ), it is manifest that He (God) is exalted who did put all things under Him. And when all things shall be subdued unto Him, then shall the Son also Himself be subject unto Him that put all things under Him, that God may be all in all." I Cor. 15: 25-28

Oh the victory of those blessed covenant words, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed!" The covenant made to Abraham so many centuries ago will have been fulfilled and the restitution of all things accomplished. A devout understanding of the eternal purposes of God stands as a mighty bulwark to our faith. He who is faithful and true speaks aforetime His words of prophetic wisdom. Never does He retrieve His statements. Never does He break His covenants or retrace His steps. Well He knows that all things are working together for good. None can stay His hand or say to Him, "What doest thou?" Through mists and rain, through cold and heat, through peace and war, through good and evil His eternal purposes move irresistibly forward to their predestined conclusions and that without let or hindrance till at last all men shall know that every defiant voice lifted against Him and every mailed fist that resisted His will was only part of the eternal program to make His name known in the earth.

Centuries ago, in Psalm twenty-two, King David spoke with a bursting heart the Psalm of the crucifixion. This he followed with the Psalm of the good shepherd. (Psa. 23). Then, lifting his prophetic vision to the distant horizons of the coming age of the restitution of all things, he beheld that city that hath foundations, the Holy City, the New Jerusalem. Then from his anointed lips the song of glory and redemption burst forth:

"Lift up your heads, O ye gates; And be ye lifted up, ye everlasting doors; And the King of glory shall come in. Who is this King of Glory? The Lord strong and mighty, the Lord mighty in battle. Lift up your heads, O ye gates; Even lift them up, ye everlasting doors; And the King of Glory shall come in, Who is this King of Glory? The Lord of hosts, He is the King of Glory. Selah.

Psa. 24:7-10.
And the gates shall never close To that city foursquare,

Where life's crystal river flows
And there is no night there.
God shall wipe away all tears;
There's no death, no pain, nor fears,
And they count not time by years,
For there is no night there.

CHAPTER SIX
THE NUMBERLESS MILLIONS OF THE COVENANT WHERE ARE THEY TODAY?

For many years I preached that the fall of man in Eden's lovely garden was a tragedy of incomparable magnitude, an error that had, in fact, uprooted and destroyed the whole plan and purpose of God for man. But one blessed day of revelation the Holy Spirit opened my eyes and showed me that with God there are no mistakes, errors, or unknowns, but only purposes. The fall of man in Eden's lovely garden was neither a mistake nor a tragedy, but a design carefully planned in the wisdom of Him whose mind is infallible and whose arm is almighty, for said Paul, "The creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him who hath subjected the same in hope." Rom. 8:20 As I recovered somewhat from the shock of such a revelation, the Holy Spirit through the intervening years has unfolded before the wondering eyes of my understanding the glory embraced in that hope so deeply conceived in the heart of God.

For more than twenty years I preached the Romish doctrine of the eternal damnation of sinners, that merciless dogma which made no allowance for the fact that eight hundred million Chinese now living and half a billion Indians, with myriads of other heathen, have never once heard that God had a Son who came to seek and to save that which was lost. According to the merciless theory I then held, all these were doomed to the fury of eternal torment, the distressing fact of their ignorance making no difference, even though the Word of God said it did. O what joy and relief came to my heart one day, as I read Eph. 1:10, to hear the Spirit declare that in the dispensation of the fullness of times, God would gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven and which are in earth, even in Him!

What a blessed and thrilling revelation it has been to have the Spirit unfold the wonders of His aionian covenant with Abraham! Here we see the Lord with one man, and him as good as dead, give birth to a nation through whom He will bring forth the fullness of His Christ - first, Christ the Head, then Christ the Body, and finally Christ, the New Jerusalem bride, upon whose lofty gates are emblazoned the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel, and upon whose foundations are inscribed the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb. That city for which Abraham looked is a city formed of Christ people, which has no need of the sun, nor the moon, nor the light of any candle, for the Lord God is the light thereof. Through those open gates no evil thing will ever enter. Within its precincts stands no temple made with hands, for the Lord God and the Lamb are the temple of it. Description is far beyond me! Its fame escapes me! Methinks we can but belittle its exalted glory by our frail attempt to describe it. It will abide forever and through those wide gates that never close the nations of them that are saved will pass until God has gathered together in one all things in heaven, in earth, and under the earth.

Now since it is through God's covenant people, Israel, that Christ, the Saviour of the world, has come, and since it is principally from these people that the glorious ranks of the church are formed, as we pointed out in chapter four, and since all Gentile believers become the seed of Abraham through faith, and since the one hundred and forty-four thousand sons of God are sealed from the twelve tribes of the children of Israel, and since those twelve tribes, all redeemed, restored, and saved, will form the bride of Christ, the Holy City, through which all other nations will partake of the water of life, then surely it should be to the interest and benefit of every reader to search out and discover as nearly as possible who these covenant people are with whom the Eternal made an everlasting covenant that cannot be revoked while sun and moon and stars still glide in their courses, and while earth abides and day and night, winter and summer, springtime and harvest do not fail.

God hath not cast away His people, whom He foreknew. Rom. 11:2 "Have they stumbled that they should fall? God forbid: but rather through their fall salvation is come to the Gentiles, for to provoke them to jealousy. Now if the fall of them be the riches of the world, and the diminishing of them the riches of the Gentiles; how much more their fullness?" Rom. 11:11-12 "For if the casting away of them be the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiving of them be, but life from the dead?" Rom. 11:15 Christians should spend hours of meditation in the ninth, tenth, and eleventh chapters of Romans. These are key chapters that unlock the door to the whole plan of God and the understanding of them is a refreshing revelation.

It is a great mistake to imagine that God has altered course in midstream, changed His intention, cast off His people, broken His covenant with Abraham, and substituted the church in place of Israel in the hope that it would accomplish what Israel failed to do. Until we can see that the whole program with all the people involved is part and parcel of one eternal purpose, we have missed even the rudiments of spiritual understanding. God has neither cast off His people nor changed His purposes in any degree. Who could trust Him if He were not immutable? The New Testament church with its very elect throng is but one integral part of that original covenant, "In thee and thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." The restitution of all things is the final intention of God.

It is impossible to rightly grasp the fullness of this truth until we clearly observe the important distinction between the two houses of Israel - the house of Judah and the house of Israel. Until we grasp this fact, we will always remain in darkness, because the promises given to each house were different one from the other, and unless we distinguish between them, we will always grope in a deepening fog of confusion.

Almost universally among church people we find the erroneous understanding which teaches that Israel is the Jew and only the Jew. This is a gross error, which can only produce confusion and unbelief. It is true that many who call themselves Jews are Israelites, yet these Jews represent only a very small part of the house of Judah, and none of them - and I repeat, none of them - belong to the house of Israel. Until the searcher learns that the house of Judah and the house of Israel are two distinct and separate parts of one nation, each having different callings and different promises, he can never hope to understand their separate callings in the world today or embrace the verities of the covenant God made with them.

Until the end of the reign of king Solomon, the twelve tribes of the children of Israel composed one nation under God. Immediately following king Solomon's death, because of his oppressive taxation, the ten tribes rebelled against the house of David, forming a completely separate nation, thenceforth known as the house of Israel. These ten tribes crowned as their king the wicked, idolatrous Jereboam, who made Israel to sin. The tribe of Judah, along with the tribe of Benjamin and much of the priestly tribe of Levi, remained faithful to the house of David (that is, the Davidic line of kings) and from that day until now they have been known as the house of Judah. This important distinction is recognized everywhere throughout scripture, and our failure to understand it will confuse us greatly as to the calling of each nation. Tom Paine became an atheist and lost his soul because it was very evident to him that the Jew did not and never could possess the promises given to Israel. Like thousands of others he failed to see this simple, but important, distinction between the two houses of Israel. This above all else was the cause of his unbelief. Henceforth throughout scripture where mention is made of the house of Judah, the reference is to Judah and Benjamin, the two tribes of the southern confederacy; but where mention is made of the house of Israel, the reference is to the ten tribes of the northern confederacy. This distinction never varies throughout the entire Bible. It should be easy, therefore, to understand that the future of these two Israelitish nations could be as diverse as that of China and Spain.

Ephraim, the younger son of Joseph, was given the birthright and placed by God as the first born. Jer. 31:9. Because of this the ten tribes of the house of Israel are sometimes referred to as Ephraim, Ezek. 37:16, and occasionally as Joseph. Ezek. 37:19. But neither of these terms ever applies to the house of Judah. This thought is borne out frequently in the book of Hosea. The house of Judah is mentioned thirty-seven times in the Old Testament and once in the New Testament. The house of Israel is mentioned approximately ninety-four times in the Old Testament and four times in the New. The fact that the house of Judah and the house of Israel were actually mentioned separately several times before the death of Solomon should add weight to the thought that the Lord had ordained their separation. See 2 Sam. 21:8.

It is interesting and important to note that, after the house of Israel rebelled against the house of David and became a separate nation, king Rehoboam of the house of David raised an army, intending to force the rebellious house of Israel back into subjection to himself. After the battle preparations were made, however, Shemaiah, the prophet, forbade him to fight with them. In 1 Kings 12:19-24 the details of the rebellion and the reason for it are given in the following words: “So Israel rebelled against the house of David unto this day. And it came to pass, when all Israel heard that Jeroboam was come again, that they sent and called him unto the congregation, and made him king over all Israel: there was none that followed the house of David, but the tribe of Judah only (and Benjamin, verse 21). And when Rehoboam was come to Jerusalem, he assembled all the house of Judah, with the tribe of Benjamin, an hundred and fourscore thousand chosen men, which were warriors, to fight against the house of Israel, to bring the kingdom again to Rehoboam the son of Solomon. But the word of God came unto Shemaiah the man of God, saying, Speak unto Rehoboam, the son of Solomon, king of Judah, and unto all the house of Judah and Benjamin, and the remnant of the people, saying, Thus saith the Lord, Ye shall not go up, nor fight against your brethren the children of Israel: return every man to his house; for this thing is from Me.” In other words, this seemingly tragic division between the house of Israel and the house of Judah was after all ordained of God, because in His eternal purposes these two brother nations were to inherit entirely different and distinct callings in their mission of blessing to all the nations and families of the earth. The division of the twelve tribes of Israel into two kingdoms - the house of Judah and the house of Israel - was not the work of the devil, as the ignorant would suspect. This seeming calamity was just one more of God's mysterious ways by which His wonders are performed, but everything remains within the framework of the Abrahamic covenant.

In the forty-eighth and forty-ninth chapters of Genesis Jacob by prophecy outlined the future of all his twelve sons, emphasizing especially their place of greatness in the last days, that is, in our days. The possession of a birthright, in scripture, is a very important thing, because through the birthright comes the principal blessing of the entire family. In Gen. 48:13-22 we read the account of Jacob's blessing the two sons of Joseph, Ephraim and Manasseh. In the prophetic blessing Ephraim, the younger, was set before Manasseh, the elder. Ephraim was to become a company (or commonwealth) of nations and Manasseh was to become a great nation. Verse 19 “And he (Jacob) blessed them that day, saying, In thee shall Israel bless, saying, God make thee as Ephraim and as Manasseh: and he set Ephraim before Manasseh.” That is to say, Jacob made Ephraim the firstborn and heir of the blessings of the firstborn son. This is God's doing and not man's. The prophet Jeremiah definitely states that Ephraim is the firstborn. Jer. 31:9. Ephraim and Manasseh are the two branches of Joseph, which are said to "run over the wall." Gen. 49:22. Upon their heads fell all the wonderful blessings of their father Joseph, given in such detail in Gen. 49:22-26. These blessings were to prevail to the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills. Verse 26. Ephraim became the head and often the name of the ten tribes of the house of Israel; therefore, his blessings fall upon the whole house of Israel.

We are blind readers indeed if we have not already noticed that none of the blessings of greatness and nationhood, given to the sons of Joseph, fit the Jews in any sense of the word. The royal scepter was given to Judah, as it is written. "The scepter shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come," (Gen. 49:10) but the birthright, with all the world-wide blessing it entailed, was given to the sons of Joseph. Regarding Judah’s scepter, it is of great interest to note that every nation in Europe that has a lion on its coat of arms can trace its royalty to Judah.

I am aware, as the reader must be, that the fullness of these promises have been realized only in part. Of the house of Judah Christ came as the suffering rejected Messiah, but He will come again as King of kings and Lord of lords to take the throne of David, which will be waiting for Him, "for unto Him shall the gathering of the people be." Gen. 49:10. Though the nations of the house of Israel are at present the leading nations of the world, only an elect company is being chosen from among them to form the Christ body of sons, but the day will come when all Israel shall be saved (Rom. 11:26), and shall be all righteous. Then the stick of Judah and the stick of Israel will become one in the hand of God, (Ezek. 37:16-19), and they, again united, will become the New Jerusalem bride of Christ.

Israel has always been "stiff-necked and uncircumcised in heart and ears" (Acts 7:51) and ever stubborn and rebellious, but God has never broken His covenant with them nor forgotten His agreement with Abraham. It was through the stubbornness and rebellion of the house of Israel that the nation was overrun and carried away captive to the land of Assyria in the year 721 B.C. The story is told in detail in 2 Kings, chapter 17. Though it is not generally realized, it is true that at this time a large part of the house of Judah was also carried away captive to Assyria with the house of Israel. Other portions of Judah, principally Jerusalem, remained in Palestine for another one hundred thirty-four years, then, through their evil, they were carried away to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar in the years 588 and 587 B.C. There they remained for seventy years, after which forty thousand of them returned to Palestine and rebuilt Jerusalem and the temple in the days of Nehemiah and Ezra. It is from this remnant of forty thousand that the present day Jews are descended. The word Jew is an abbreviation for Judah, as Joe is an abbreviation for Joseph.

From the time of the captivity of the house of Israel in 721 B.C. unto this day, the ten tribes, to whom God made such wonderful promises, have been known as the lost tribes of the house of Israel. Jesus referred to them as the lost sheep of the house of Israel. But they are not lost! God would not be God if they were not at this very moment fulfilling every detail of His covenant with them even though they be blind in part to their own identity. How pitifully strange it is that, when someone imagines he has discovered Israel in some primitive nation such as the North American Indians or perhaps a half-savage tribe in Africa or central Asia, all the Christians hail this as some remarkable discovery, but let it be asserted that Israel is found, not among primitive tribes, but among the leading nations of the earth as God said they would be, then at once indignation and anger are aroused and friends become enemies. Yet did not God say that Israel should be the head and not the tail? Deut. 28:13. Did God not say that Abraham’s seed would be great and their name great? Why then should we not look for them at the "head" and not at the "tail?" Why should we not find them among the "great" and not among the small and insignificant?

The following story may be fictitious, but the truth it exemplifies is irrefutable, demonstrating as it does the great importance of identification marks. (Though the finger prints of every person on earth differ from all others, in British law six identical marks are sufficient to identify a criminal as separate from all others on earth.)

A family in England suffered the great misfortune of losing a baby boy by kidnapping. The police were immediately put on the track of the child, but in spite of the most intensive search no trace of the missing boy was found. Weeks increased into months and months grew into many years. Finally all hope of finding the child was abandoned and, except for the heartbreaking memories the parents endured, the tragedy was forgotten. Twenty years had passed when one day a ray of hope dawned that set the hearts of the parents bounding with expectation. A letter had arrived from a lawyer in Spain telling of an old gypsy woman who had just passed away. To ease her troubled conscience as she lay dying, she had confessed that the young man who had passed for many years as her son was not her son at all, but was a boy she had stolen as a baby from England many years before and from the very county in which the bereaved family lived. Did the lady think, questioned the lawyer, that this young man could be her son? If so, could she give any marks of identification by, which he could be positively identified? Almost beside herself with anticipation, the mother wired back the following marks of identification:

(1) A birthmark the size of a cherry on the back of the neck.
(2) A double birthmark one inch long on the middle of the back.
(3) A scar on the outside of the left leg, half an inch in length.
(4) A scar over the right ear, half an inch in length.

Immediately a wire was returned from Spain, saying that all the marks had been found, and the woman with her husband left at once to see for themselves, but, upon arriving in Spain and seeing the young man, their hearts sank in despair. The young man was not at all what they expected to see. He was tall of stature, speaking fluently in a foreign language. He was a gypsy. He had gypsy manners, gypsy language, and wore gypsy clothes. Concealing her disappointment, the mother asked to see the scar over the right ear, and, seeing it, hope again sprang up in her heart. She turned down his sock and looked for the scar on his left leg and found it exactly where she knew it to be. With feverish excitement she looked at the back of his neck and there to her amazement and joy was the birthmark the size of a cherry. Scarcely able to contain herself, she made the big fellow strip off his shirt, and there, plainly visible, was the double birthmark on his back. Upon seeing it, all doubt vanished from her mind. This tall, sun-tanned young man with gypsy bearings could be none other than her long lost boy. Flinging her arms about him in utter joy, she kissed him repeatedly and claimed him as her long lost son. Do you not think you would have done the same thing? Is there a possibility in all the world that this boy was not her lost son? I do not think there is. Yet I am certain that had three of those marks been present and only one missing, then, indeed, he would not have been her son.

Now here is a lost son. He does not know who he is. He does not know from what country he came, nor exactly how he came to be where he is. He does not remember his parents. His language and customs are completely foreign, and yet his identification marks prove beyond any possibility of doubt that he is indeed the long lost son, who was carried away by a gypsy as Israel was carried away by the Assyrian. If such certainty of identification can be made through four definite marks of identification, then I invite the reader to follow me through thirteen marks of identification, and let us see if we can discover this lost house of Israel, to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises.

Throughout the pages of Holy Scripture, by prophecy and type, our Lord Jesus Christ has been given some one hundred seventy-five marks of identification. If indeed He is the Christ, then all marks of identification must be fulfilled in Him that all pretenders to His office may be ashamed. It is impossible within our limited scope to examine more than one small segment of truth in our search for the lost sheep of the house of Israel. Books without number have been written on the subject, each one adding point to point, fact to fact, history to history, prophecy to prophecy, and tradition to tradition, each in some way helping to identify the people who are the ten lost tribes of the house of Israel, the number of whom is as the sand of the sea. Because of the vastness of the material available, it is impossible for me in so small a space to give more than the tiniest smattering of truth. We will therefore leave history to the historians while we search briefly for these people through their marks of identification as laid down for our instruction in the infallible word of truth. Personally I cannot imagine how such an honest search could be considered a waste of time, for surely it must be of great importance that we should identify this house of Israel, to whom pertaineth the adoption, the glory, the covenants, the law, the service of God, and the promises; through whom Christ came, through whom the sons of God come, through whom the bride of Christ comes, and through whom, when all are blood-washed and redeemed, the final restitution of all things will come. By far the greatest promises lie out before us.

Lest I should leave the reader in doubt, I will state first my personal belief in this matter; then through only one line of reasoning (Israel's identification marks) I will tell you why I believe it. These reasons are being stated because the subject is a Bible truth and is, therefore, of great importance. I have no quarrel with any man who does not see as I do and trust that those who do not see as I do will refrain from quarrelling with me. A sincere study of the scriptures reveals at least seventy marks of identification, which place the identity of the house of Israel beyond doubt. Other nations may have one or two of these marks, but only the house of Israel will have them all. Because of this fact and many other investigations, I have come to firmly believe that the Anglo-Saxon peoples of the world represent the greater part of the house of Israel, together with a portion of the house of Judah. These include the Anglo-Saxon people of the British Isles and the far flung British, commonwealth of nations. They include the "great nation", the United States of America, as well as Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland, part of Belgium, and many of the Germanic people, together with the Israelitish remnants scattered throughout European countries. Let us remember always, as we progress, never to confuse the house of Judah with the house of Israel or to make the mistake of thinking that the modern Jew is Israel. The modern Jew is only a very small segment of the house of Judah. They are Israelites, but are not of the house of Israel.

Before proceeding with the identification marks of the house of Israel, the following observation should be in order. Speaking of Israel, the apostle Paul made this very revealing remark: "In Isaac shall thy seed be called." See Rom. 9:7, Heb. 11:18, and Gen. 21:12. As there are no vowels in Hebrew, the proper name Isaac is pronounced SAK or Saac. Thus Isaac's sons would be called Saksons or Saxons. The custom of creating surnames by adding the word son to a given name is commonly practiced to this day in the Scandinavian countries. By way of example we might cite such names as Jacobson, Abrahamson, Israelson, Johnson, Isaacson, from which last comes the name Saxon, or Isaac's sons. One sage has wisely remarked that a reference to a Scandinavian telephone directory is enough to assure one that they are Israelites.
Of the seventy marks of identification we have space to deal with only thirteen in this writing.

Number 1. Israel was to be a great nation. "And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee. . . ." Gen. 12:2 "Seeing that Abraham shall surely become a great and mighty nation..." Gen. 18:18 There are only perhaps a score of nations in all the world that could be called great, chief among whom would be the United States, Great Britain and her world-wide commonwealth, France, Germany, Russia, China, Italy, Spain, and a few others. We will mention this point later, but the reader will have observed how this one identifying mark - a great nation — has already eliminated all of the nations of the world except a mere handful, and most certainly it has eliminated the Jew, for never at any time in history has the Jew been a great nation, and surely no one would be hardy enough to contend that the present Jewish state in Palestine is a great nation.

Number 2. "I will make thy name great." Gen. 12:2. It is not generally known that the Lord had said that Israel was to be called by a new name. This is definitely stated by the prophet Isaiah in these words: "And the Gentiles shall see thy righteousness, and all kings thy glory: and thou shalt be called by a new name, which the mouth of the Lord shall name." Isa. 62:2 While we do not wish to be unnecessarily dogmatic about this point, because it is God's word and therefore not to be contradicted, it is worthy of our consideration that (1) Isaiah had said, "Thou shalt be called by a new name." and (2) that the Lord had told Abraham, "I will make thy name great." At any rate, we are faced with the indisputable truth that in all the world today there is but one nation that is called great and that one nation is Great Britain. Furthermore it is certain that among the great nations of the earth Great Britain is the only one, which has the word great included in its name. We do not read of Great Russia, Great China, Great France, or any other.

This name, Great Britain, becomes even more significant when we learn that the Hebrew word bereth or bryth means covenant and the word ish means man. Thus the compound word British must mean covenant man and the word Britain means covenant land. The only people in the world with whom God made a covenant was Israel. In the name, Great Britain, we have the fulfillment of Gen. 12:1 - "I will make thy name great," - and in the name British we are assured that these are the covenant people, dwelling in a new and covenant land, Britain, which we will consider under the next proposition.

Number 3. Israel was to have a new homeland. After Israel was firmly established in the land of Canaan and the great king David had subdued her enemies round about, David purposed to build a magnificent temple of worship for the Lord. God was not displeased with this plan, but He sent Nathan the prophet to David with this strange but enlightening message: "I will appoint a place for My people Israel and I will plant them, that they may dwell in a place of their own, and move no more; neither shall the children of wickedness afflict them any more as beforetime." 2 Sam. 7:10 This planting in a place from which they would not move any more could not possibly have referred to Palestine for the simple reason that all the twelve tribes of Israel did move from thence when they were carried captive into Assyria and Babylon. See also 1 Chron. 17:9 Though the Lord allowed Solomon to build the temple and the nation of Israel to rise to tremendous heights of blessing and achievement under his reign, the scripture is very clear that immediately following Solomon's death the nation was divided in two (1 Kings 12) and later, because of abounding iniquity, was carried away captive, the house of Israel and part of Judah to Assyria (2 Kings 17 and 2 Kings 18: 13), then later the remainder of the house of Judah to captivity in Babylon. (2 Kings 25). Of these latter; only forty-two thousand, three hundred sixty ever returned to Palestine.

The ten tribes of the house of Israel grew mightily in numbers during their captivity in Assyria. Please read the significant passage Hosea 1:10. The renowned Jewish historian, Josephus, writing in A.D. 70, gave us this historic record. "The ten tribes are beyond the Euphrates until now and are an immense multitude, not to be estimated by numbers." To this statement of Josephus the prophecy of Zechariah is in total agreement: "They of Ephraim shall be as a mighty man... and they shall increase as they have increased." Zech. 10:7-8 Israel has always been noted for a rapid increase. When we realize that the seventy souls who went down to Egypt with Jacob emerged after two hundred and fifteen years of the rigors of slavery as a nation two and one half million strong, it is not hard to believe that this same people during the four hundred and ninety years of prosperity in Palestine had multiplied many times. The renowned evangelist, F. F. Bosworth, states that they had probably increased to forty or fifty million by the time of the captivity. It is no wonder that Josephus, writing almost seven hundred years later, described the ten tribes as an immense multitude not to be numbered. This testimony of Josephus is also in exact accord with the promise given by the Lord to Abraham - that his seed would be as the sand of the sea and the stars of heaven for multitude.

Zechariah, writing two hundred years after the captivity of the house of Israel, makes this subtle prediction of their emergence from captivity as they made their way from Asia Minor toward their appointed place in the west: "I will sow them among the people: and they shall remember Me in far countries; and they shall live with their children and turn again. I will bring them again also out of the land of Egypt, and gather them out of Assyria; and I will bring them into the land of Gilead and Lebanon; and place shall not be found for them. And he shall pass through the sea (possibly the Mediterranean or Black Sea) with affliction, and shall smite the waves of the sea, and all the deeps of the river shall dry up: and the pride of Assyria shall be brought down, and the scepter of Egypt shall depart away. And I will strengthen them in the Lord; and they shall walk up and down in His name, saith the Lord." Zech. 10:9-12 This scripture definitely shows that, when Israel left her Assyrian captivity, she journeyed west, for all these places are west of Assyria. This is also in exact accord with the statement in Hosea 12:1 "Ephraim (which is another name for the house of Israel) followeth after the east wind." It goes without saying that an east wind blows toward the west and anyone following the east wind is certainly journeying toward the west. Thus did Ephraim, when he left Assyria, follow the east wind on his journey across Europe toward the British Isles.

Furthermore this is in total agreement with the prophecy given in the apocryphal book of Second Esdras. The Esdras of the Apocrypha is the same man as the Ezra of the Bible. In second Esdras we read this very definite statement concerning the way by which the ten tribes left the land of Assyria: "And whereas thou sawest that he gathered a peaceable multitude unto him; those are the ten tribes, which were carried away prisoners out of their own land in the time of Osea the king, whom Salmanasar the king of Assyria led away captive, and he carried them over the waters, and so they came into another land. But they took this counsel among themselves, that they would leave the multitude of the heathen, and go forth into a further country, where never mankind dwelt, that they might there keep their statutes, which they never kept in their own land. And they entered the Euphrates by the narrow passages of the river (going west). For the most High then showed signs for them, and held still the flood, till they were passed over. For through that country (Europe) there was a great way to go, namely, of a year and a half: and the same region is called Arsareth. Then dwelt they there until the latter time..." 2 Esdras 13:30; 46. Arsareth is the territory to the west of the Black Sea. Surely, if we can believe Josephus, we should be able to believe this prophecy of the godly Esdras!

The latter time, referred to here by Esdras, must mean the end of the dispensation of law rather than the end of the present dispensation. The first epistle of Peter, written about A.D. 60, was addressed to the strangers who were at that time scattered through Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia. A glance at a Bible atlas will show that these countries are all in southern Europe and the region of the Black Sea. The epistle of James was addressed to the twelve tribes scattered abroad and undoubtedly took in a much greater territory than that named by Peter. Likewise our Lord Jesus, after He had called His twelve apostles and given them power, sent them forth and commanded them to go to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. Matt. 10:6. Jeremiah 50:4-6 says that both the house of Israel and the house of Judah are lost sheep. It is evident that our Lord sent the twelve apostles on a very long journey and that He did not go with them. We may be sure that after His resurrection the twelve apostles continued in this command, because Jesus had said, "Ye shall not have gone over all the cities of Israel until the Son of man be come." Matt 10:23 Well did Jesus know that even then Israel was as numberless as the sand of the sea and her cities were scattered far and wide beyond Palestine.

I shall not hide the fact from those who seek for light and understanding that the smug, cosy, cut and dried teachings of the church system have blinded our eyes to ninety percent of the glorious revelation of truth awaiting those who search it out. The absurd notion that the handful of subjugated Jews who dwelt in Palestine in Jesus' day embraced the numberless millions of both the house of Judah and the house of Israel is as ridiculous as to imagine that all Americans live in New Mexico.

Though we dare not investigate the thought now, there is abundant evidence to show that even in Solomon's day the vast increase of Israel's population, finding Palestine far too small, was expanding out and colonizing all along the shores of the Mediterranean and into Iberia, which is modern Spain, crossing the Dardanelles into Europe where they are referred to by Roman writers as Cimmerians, Gauls, and Senones. Senones were men of the tribe of Simeon. The possession of the tribes of Simeon and Dan was cut off from the other eight tribes of the house of Israel when the nation was divided, and there is good reason to believe that thousands of these men had left Palestine long before the Assyrian captivity and had made their way both by land and by sea to the coasts and isles of the west. Roman writers speak of Cimmerians who, coming from the Black or Cimmerian Sea, roamed over Europe for centuries. The Cimmerians were Israelites. It is a Latin named derived from the Hebrew Chemarim. The name of the Crimea is derived from this source.

Every person who has read the Bible has certainly read this passage concerning the sea-faring activities of Solomon's day: "All king Solomon's drinking vessels were of gold, and all the vessels of the house of the forest of Lebanon were of pure gold... for the king had at sea a navy of Tharshish with the navy of Hiram: once in three years came the navy of Tharshish, bringing gold, and silver, ivory, and apes, and peacocks. So king Solomon exceeded all the kings of the earth for riches and for wisdom." 1 Kings 10:21-23 All the earth sought Solomon. They brought every man his present. This one passage shows clearly that Solomon's navy sailed the seas and made regular trips to Tharshish (Britain) one thousand years before Christ. Israelitish people have always been seafaring people and tremendous colonizers, as God said they would be, extending to the north and south and east and west, inhabiting the desolate places of the earth and making them blossom as a rose. Does anyone imagine that Solomon, who exceeded all men both before and after him in wisdom, was so dull witted that he could not build a navy to exploit the riches of England and Ireland and begin the colonization of those islands? He most certainly did. But I will go one step further and say that, almost one hundred years before the reign of Solomon began, Israelitish people had already begun to colonize the British Isles. The old British Chronicles gives the name of one, Brutus, as the first king of England, beginning his reign in 1103 B.C. He was therefore a contemporary of King Saul of Israel. David and Solomon, kings of Israel, were descended directly from Judah's son Pharez, and Brutus of England was directly descended from Judah's son Zarah, the twin brother of Pharez. Seventy-three kings are listed in the old British Chronicles, covering the period from 1103 B.C. to 35 A.D.

It is not true that, when Caesar came to England, he found painted savages inhabiting the island. That is just wishful thinking, for never in history has a tribe of white savages been discovered. The kind of people who could build Stonehenge and the Avebury Circle must have been possessed of the Wisdom of Solomon. It would be extremely difficult for modern engineers to duplicate such a remarkable feat. Strabo, the Greek geographer, writing in 29 B.C., describes the Briton of his time in these words: "He came, not clad in skins like a Scythian, but with a bow in his hand, a quiver hanging from his shoulder, a plaid wrapped around his body, a gilded belt encircling his loins, and trousers reaching from the waist down to the soles of his feet. He was easy in address, agreeable in conversation, active in dispatch, and secret in management of great affairs; quick in judging of present accuracies, and ready to take his part in sudden emergency; provident withal in guarding against futurity; diligent in the quest of wisdom; fond of friendships, trusting very little to fortune, yet having the entire confidence of others, and trusted with everything for his prudence. He spoke Greek with fluency and you would have thought he had been bred up in Lyceum and conversant all his life with the Academy at Athens." If this is the testimony of a Greek, speaking in 29 B.C., then anyone who can imagine such a man as a painted savage has a vivid imagination, indeed.

The great truth missed by almost all is that a large portion of the house of Israel had already moved into the British Isles centuries before the Assyrian captivity began, and that captivity affected only that part of the ten tribes who still remained in Palestine. After their captivity of several hundred years was ended, they also began moving toward their brethren who already were in the British Isles and the coasts of Europe, Holland, Denmark, Norway and Sweden. The sudden appearance of the fair-skinned, highly cultured Etruscans in northern Italy about the year 700 B.C. would certainly indicate that these were Israelites who had left Palestine en masse rather than be captured by the Assyrians. A very interesting account of these people is contained in the National Geographic Magazine publication, Greece and Rome, beginning on page 250.

Though the Bible does not speak in detail of the vast efforts of colonization carried on by Israel, it does speak definitely of their moving to the north and south and east and west, inhabiting the isles and desolate places of the earth. In the excellent work, Tracing Our Ancestors, by Frederick Haberman, he makes this remarkable statement: "At the very time the Lord made promise to David, about 1040 B.C., 'I will appoint a place for My people Israel, and will plant them, that they may dwell in a place of their own,' (2 Sam. 7:10), that promise was being executed. In fact, sixty years before the promise was made, Brutus (a descendant of the royal line of Judah through his son, Zarah) had arrived in the isles of the west in 1100 B.C. and had named them BRITH AIN, the covenant land. Until this day the only name in the Hebrew for Britain is Ai-Ha-im, the isles of the west, Ai or Hy being the origin of isle. In earlier days the Isle of Iona was called the Hy of Iona.

We pointed out before that Israel, during the five hundred years of their sojourn in Palestine, increased by many millions, and during those five hundred prosperous years they left Palestine to settle in distant lands. They left, family after family, boat load after boat load, for their far off western colonies just as centuries later English, Irish, Dutch, Norwegian, and many others left Europe to find new homes in America, and with no better ships than they had in Solomon's day. After five centuries of such emigration there were still over five million in Palestine at the time of the captivity. Many times this number, however, had already left the country and were therefore not affected by the captivity at all. It is evident that a constant traffic between Israel and her colonies in the west had been in progress for centuries, and Solomon's navies roamed all over the known world. A. D. Eldud, a Jewish historian of the ninth century B.C., wrote: "In Jereboam's time (970-900 B.C.) the tribe of Dan, being unwilling to shed their brethren's blood, took a resolve to leave the country." Moses prophesied of Dan in these words: "Dan is a lion's whelp; he shall leap from Bashan." Deut. 33:22. What did Moses mean? Well, Dan did leap from Bashan and leave the country, and the tribe of Dan appears in the Irish Chronicles, Tuatha de Danaan, which means The Tribe of Dan. The Irish Chronicles tell us that the landing of the tribe of Dan in Ireland was opposed by the inhabitants, but in the ensuing battle the Danaan (Danites) were victorious. But, finding that the inhabitants spoke a language similar to their own, peace was made by which it was agreed that the Danaan would occupy the northern part of Ireland, called Eldh - now Ulster. A. B. Grimaldi, quoting an early Jewish rabbi, states that the early Irish were men of the tribe of Ephraim who left Egypt before the exodus. To this the Book of Jasher (chapter 75) agrees, though it appears that most of those who left were slain in battle with the Philistines.

At Loughguir, near Limerick, and elsewhere in Ireland, there are today ancient stone circles, consisting of twelve stones, one large stone in the center and eleven smaller ones standing in a bowing attitude around it. Irish antiquaries tell us that those circles perpetuate the dream of Joseph as recorded in Genesis, Chapter 37, in which Joseph dreamed that the eleven sheaves of his brethren did obeisance to his sheaf.

There is voluminous literature in existence, which indicates that up to the end of the eighteenth century the scholars of Britain knew that their people descended from the sea-going Hebrew-Phoenicians and from the Anglo-Saxons, who came from the shores of Summerland on the Black Sea. But since the nineteenth century the trend of thought has been to follow the scepticism of Voltaire, Thomas Paine, and the German school of higher critics.

The Scottish Declaration of Independence of the year 1320 A.D., a much prized national archive attested to by Robert the Bruce's barons in parliament, asserts that the more ancient portion of the Scottish nation came first from Scythia by way of Spain. Scythia lies to the north of the Black Sea and is, of course, in the vicinity of Israel's Assyrian captivity and was without doubt the route they traveled in their journey to the western isles. The wonderful romance of the arrival of the Israelitish tribes in the British Isles at different times and from different directions, some by land and some by sea, is beautifully portrayed by the Bard of Erin, Sir Thomas More, in these lines:

They came from a land beyond the sea,
And now o'er the western main
Set sail in their good ships gallantly
From the sunny land of Spain.
"Oh where's the land we've seen in dreams,
Our destined home or grave?"
Thus sang they as by the morning's beams
They swept the Atlantic wave.
And, lo, where afar o'er the ocean shines
A sparkle of radiant green,
As though in that deep lay emerald mines
Whose light through the waves was seen.
"'Tis Innisfail! 'Tis Innisfail!" (Beautiful Isle)
Rings o'er the echoing sea,
While, bending to heaven, the warriors hail
That home of the brave and free.
Then turned they unto the eastern wave,
Where now their Day God's eye
A look of such sunny omen gave
As lighted up sea and sky.
Nor frown was seen through sky or sea,
No tear o'er leaf or sod,
When first on that isle of destiny
Our great forefathers trod.

Surely in all these things we can hear the ringing voice of Isaiah, the prophet, as he speaks to the covenant people in the isles afar off! "Listen, O isles, unto me, and hearken, ye people, from far; The Lord hath called me from the womb; from the bowels of my mother hath He made mention of my name. And He hath made my mouth like a sharp sword; in the shadow of His hand hath He hid me, and made me a polished shaft; in His quiver hath He hid me; and said unto me, Thou art My servant, O Israel, in whom I will be glorified." Isa. 49:1-3. Please notice that in verse three the people of the isles are called Israel.

Notice again that in Isa. 51:4, 5 Isaiah speaks to God's people Israel in the isles. "Hearken unto Me, My people; and give ear unto Me, O My nation: For a law shall proceed from Me, and I will make My judgment to rest for a light of the people. My righteousness is near; My salvation is gone forth, and Mine arms shall judge the people; the isles shall wait upon Me, and on Mine arm shall they trust."

Number 4 Israel was to be exceedingly fruitful and very populous. See Gen. 28:14; 49:22,26; Isa. 27:6; Num. 23:10; Hosea 1:10. The increase of the Saxon race is nothing short of phenomenal. National statistics show that Russia doubles her population every one hundred and forty years. Spain doubles in one hundred and forty-two years, France in one hundred and fifty years, and Turkey in five hundred and fifty-five years, but England doubles her population every forty-five years, and the United States doubles her population every twenty-five years. Is it any wonder the prophet said, "Thou hast increased the nation, O Lord, Thou hast increased the nation . . . Thou hadst removed it far unto all the ends of the earth." Isa. 26:15 Nothing could be more true than this, since the sun never sets on the British Commonwealth or the Anglo-Saxon peoples of the earth. Of Joseph Moses spoke, saying, "His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the horns of unicorns: with them he shall push the people together to the ends of the earth: and they are the ten thousands of Ephraim (Great Britain), and they are the thousands of Manasseh." (Undoubtedly the United States). Deut. 33:17 To see a true picture of the future blessings and fruitfulness of the tribes of Israel, please read for yourself the wonderful account given in Deuteronomy, chapter 33.

Number 5. Israel was to be the first among the nations and to spread abroad to the north and south and east and west. Gen. 28:14 and Isa. 43:5,6. Abraham and his seed were to be the heirs of the whole earth. The British Commonwealth is a free association of sovereign, independent states and embraces the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, India, Pakistan, Ceylon, Gambia, Ghana, Malaysia, Nigeria, Sierra Leone, Tanganyika, Zanzibar, Trinidad and Tobago, Uganda, Kenya, Malta, Zambia, together with some fifty dependencies including Antigua, Bahamas, Barbados, Bermuda, British Guyana, Honduras, Solomon Islands, Virgin Islands, Fiji, Gibraltar, Ellice Islands, Grenada, Hong Kong, New Hebrides, St. Lucia, St. Vincent, The Seychelles, Rhodesia, Tonga, and many others too numerous to mention here. This vast list does not, of course, include the United States of America, which, like South Africa, is a separate Israel nation that at the present time represents the greatest single concentration of Anglo-Saxon, Israelitish people on earth. It can be shown beyond any reasonable doubt that the two sons of Joseph, Ephraim and Manasseh, have become the two great brother nations of the earth. The United States of America, the great nation, and Great Britain, the company of nations, strictly in accord with the prophecy of Jacob (Gen. 48:16-19) and Joseph's blessings (Gen. 49:22-26), fall to his sons Ephraim and Manasseh. When the patriarch Jacob blessed the two sons of Joseph, as recorded in Genesis, chapters 48 and 49, he said that Ephraim would become a multitude (that is, a commonwealth) of nations and that Manasseh would become a great nation. See also Gen. 35:11. In Eph. 2:12 Paul speaks of Israel as a commonwealth. In all the world today there is only one commonwealth of nations, and that is the British Commonwealth of nations, which is a world wide community of English speaking nations. Not only is Britain the only Commonwealth of Nations, but it is a fact that no other Commonwealth of Nations has ever existed in history. No previous empire was a commonwealth of free nations. Furthermore, this Commonwealth of Nations is very distinguished in that we have a brother nation who is a great nation, and that big, brother nation is the United States of America. It is significant that on the beautiful Peace Arch standing on the Canadian-United States border at Blaine, Washington, the following inscriptions are found: On the Canadian side are the significant words; BRETHREN DWELLING TOGETHER IN UNITY, and on the United States side the equally significant inscription, CHILDREN OF A COMMON MOTHER. Nothing could be more correct than this, for Ephraim and Manasseh were indeed the children of a common mother, and that mother was Joseph's wife (Gen. 46:20) the daughter of the prince of On. (The Hebrew word kohen may be rendered either priest or prince - see Young's Concordance. I do not believe that Joseph's wife was an Egyptian, as some suppose, but a daughter of the prince of On. Egypt in Joseph's day was ruled by Hyksos Dynasty, which was Syrian and therefore Semitic, not Egyptian.)

If we are convinced that Ephraim became a company of nations, or a commonwealth, then certainly we must be correct in saying that Manasseh has become a great nation. The United States is without doubt the greatest individual nation ever to exist on the earth. Her greatness is not in numbers or in military power alone, but in every form of useful industry, production, and ingenuity she is definitely a leader. Her wealth is beyond belief. Her resourcefulness knows no bounds. Her helpfulness and beneficence is of world wide renown. Any nation in distress can depend upon her aid. Her missionaries are known all over the earth. Her Bible Societies have translated and given the Word of God to millions. The American-Canadian border, almost four thousand miles long, is unfortified. Why would brethren, dwelling together in unity, need to fortify their borders? In two world wars the Anglo-Saxon nations have delivered Europe from tyrants and the countries thus delivered were immediately returned to their rightful owners while our enemies were given billions of dollars in aid to help them recover from their losses. Russia or China may be great nations in power and population, but what light has China given to the world or where are the Russian missionaries or Bible Societies, or wherein do they minister to the poor and needy of the earth? We hear of no philanthropic acts or oppressed nations being set free by them. Thus, while Ephraim England has become a world wide commonwealth, Manasseh, his brother, has become the greatest nation on earth.

I am sure that every sincere student of scripture and prophecy must realize that that greatness prophesied to the brothers Ephraim and Manasseh is fulfilled to the letter in the two great brother nations, the United States of America and the Anglo-Saxon people of the British Commonwealth. Indeed, all the fabulous promises of blessing so freely given to Joseph (Deut. 33:13-17) were to find their fulfillment in his two sons, the ten thousands of Ephraim and the thousands of Manasseh. "Joseph is a fruitful bough . . . whose branches run over the wall . . . His bow abode in strength, and the arms of his hands were made strong by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob; (from thence (Jacob) is the shepherd, the stone of Israel:) Even by the God of thy Father, who shall help thee; and by the Almighty, who shall bless thee with the blessings of heaven above, blessings of the deep that lieth under, blessings of the breasts, and of the womb. The blessings of thy father have prevailed above the blessings of my progenitors unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills: they shall be on the head of Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren." Gen. 49:22-26

Any thinking person must surely know that the Saxon nations have been and still are the recipients of all these blessings of heaven and earth and the wealth that lies under the earth. Why then should students of scripture waste their valuable time searching for Israel among the primitive and poverty-stricken tribes and nations when God's word declares that His covenant people are to be the leading nations of the world and this is especially so in the last day. Gen. 49:1.

The great American industrialist, Henry Ford, Sr., wrote the following remarkable words, which seem so fitting here that I must quote them. "The fathers of our nation were men of the Anglo-Saxon-Celtic race. The men who came from Europe with civilization in their blood and in their destiny; the men who crossed the Atlantic and set up civilization on a bleak and rock-bound coast; the men who drove north to Alaska and West to California; the men who opened the tropics and subdued the Arctic's; the men who mastered the African veldt; the men who peopled Australia and seized the gates of the world at Suez, Gibraltar, and Panama; men who have given government and livelihood to every people and an ideal to every century. They got neither their God nor their religion from Judah, nor their ruling speech nor their creative genius. They are the ruling people, chosen through the centuries to master the world by building it better and better and not by breaking it down."

To enlarge upon the abundance of information at our disposal would be merely to quickly run out of space. I will therefore confine myself to a few more of Israel's identification marks and trust that the reader will search out the scripture for himself.

Number 6. Israel's throne and nation was to continue forever, and not disappear with the captivity of the house of Judah. 2 Sam. 7:16, 24,29. 1 Chron. 17:21-24. Jer. 31:35-40. The method by which the royal seed was transferred to the isles of the west is one of the marvels of the ages.

Number 7. Israel's home was to be north and west of Palestine. Isa. 49:12 and Jer. 3:18. These passages speak of Israel returning to Palestine from the north and the west at the end of this age. The British Isles lie in a straight line north-west of Palestine. Though the oft-mentioned isles were to be the home of Israel until they had renewed their strength, ( Isa. 41:1), we must not forget that Abraham and his seed were the heirs of the whole world. "When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance, when he separated the sons of Adam, he set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel." Deut. 31:8. All history has proved that, when Israel needed more territory, the aboriginal people had their borders adjusted to accommodate the need. See also Exod. 34:23-24

Number 8. Israel was to have many colonies. Gen. 17:4, 6, 16; 35:11; 48:19

Number 9. Israel, after expanding from her new home, was to lose a colony of her children, and then expand again into new realms. Isa. 49:20 This is obviously a prophecy of the American War of Independence, at which time the thirteen New England states were separated from the main body of Israel that Manasseh might become a great nation separate from Ephraim. But after this separation the expansion continued until the commonwealth embraced the vast regions of Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and islands and territories too numerous to mention.

Number 10. Israel shall reign over many nations, but none shall rule over her, and shall lend to many, but not borrow. Deut. 15:6

Number 11. Israel was to possess the gates of her enemies. Gen. 22:17 There are certain strategic places in the world that can correctly be termed gates. These gates through which the commerce of the world passes are Gibraltar, Hong Kong, Aden, Suez, the Panama Canal, Cape Horn and the Cape of Good Hope. All these strategic gates have for many years been controlled by the British Commonwealth or the United States of America, and Suez since 1967 has been controlled by the State of Israel now in Palestine.

Number 12. Israel was to have a new covenant. Jer. 31:31-34 This new covenant found the beginning of its fulfillment in the born again believers of the Christian church, when God began to write His law on the fleshly tables of their hearts. Gentile nations were not excluded from the blessedness, but the new covenant was made with Israel.

Number 13. Israel was to be a people glorying in Christ. This thirteenth mark is one of very great importance. Though the Jew has always been an enemy of Christ and as a people has maintained her anti-Christ attitude for two thousand years, the exact opposite is true of the house of Israel, for Jesus Christ was to be "the glory of Thy people Israel." This fact was stated in the most unmistakable terms by the anointed Simeon, when he prophesied that Jesus would be "a light to lighten the Gentiles and the glory of Thy people Israel." Luke 2:29-32 It is clearly evident here that Israel does not refer to the anti-Christian Jew, but to the house of Israel, for the Jew has never honored Christ. Though the mass of Anglo-Saxon nations are only nominally Christian, throughout all their nations Jesus Christ is honored as the Son of God and the Saviour of the world.
denominations, worldly as they may be, preach that Jesus is the Saviour of the world. Congregations fulfill Simeon's prophecy in such beautiful songs as

"In the cross of Christ I glory,
Towering o'er the wrecks of time.
All the light of sacred story
Gathers 'round the head sublime."

And unknowingly they confess their Israelitish identity as they fervently sing,

"Ye chosen seed of Israel's race,
Ye ransomed from the fall,
Hail Him who saves you by His grace
And crown Him Lord of all."

With many other such magnificent hymns do these people testify that Christ is the glory of His people Israel. Every man on our streets knows who Jesus is and every lawyer, be he Jew or Mohammedan, must date his documents by the year of our Lord.

Though we have written at some length concerning Britain and the United States and their relationship to Ephraim and Manasseh, the story of the house of Israel has scarcely begun. It is a tremendous revelation to follow the exploits of other Israelitish nations such as the Danes - or more correctly, the Dans - the Dutch, the Norwegians, and the Swedes. The Norwegian Vikings are known to have roamed far and wide over the oceans of the earth, reaching America some six hundred years before the arrival of Columbus. According to Landnamobok, eighty-four per cent of the Icelandic colonizers came from Norway, three per cent from Sweden, and twelve per cent from the British Isles. The Vikings flew the wolf banner on all their ships. The wolf was the banner of Benjamin and it is reasonable to believe that the tribe of Benjamin is strongly represented in Norway. "Benjamin shall ravin as a wolf: in the morning he shall devour the prey, and at evening he shall divide the spoil." Gen. 49:27 How accurate this prophecy has been! Sweden (South Dan) and Denmark (Dansmark) are evidently of the tribe of Dan. Dan has the custom of naming his conquests after himself, and by this method it is easy to see his serpent's trail all across Europe and into the British Isles. There are no vowels in the Hebrew language; therefore Dan is spelled Dn. Consequently Dan may be spelled Dan, or Don, or Den, or Din, or Dun, and, when a place name includes this syllable, it is reasonable to believe that Dan, or Dn, was there. Bible examples of this custom are found in Joshua 19:47, where Dan captured Leshem and changed the name to Dan, and again in Judges 18:11-12, where the Danites changed Mahaneh to Mahanehdan. Again, when they captured Laish, they changed the name of the city to Dan. The path Dan took across Europe is traceable in the following place names - Jordan, Dardanelles, Macedonia, the Danube, the Dneiper, the Dneister, and the Don. Professor Totten says: "There is no grander theme upon the scrolls of history than the story of the struggle of the Anglo-Saxons westward. The very streams of Europe mark their resting places and the root of nearly all the ancient names (Dan and Don) recall the sacred stream, the Jordan, from whose banks so far away the exiles set out." The naming of these places serves to trace these wanderers like a trail. The Danube, the Dneiper, the Dneister, the Danau, the Danin, the Danast, the Danari, the Danez, the Vdon, the Eridon, and many others right down to the Dans and Denmark, the very word Scandnavia encompasses the name of Dan.

Should some think this to be unsound reasoning, would they not concede that the numerous cities and places in New England bearing English names would certainly indicate that early settlers of New England came from England? Those states abound with such names as Norfolk, Portsmouth, Wilmington, Hampton, Gloucester, Dover, Aberdeen, York, Lancaster, Reading and many others. Is there not plenty of evidence that Pennsylvania was settled by the Dutch and that Louisiana and Quebec were settled by the French? This is sound reasoning and a fact of history. This being so, would we not agree that Ireland, England, and Scotland must have had a strong representation of Danites, since the country abounds with such names as Danslough, Dan Sower, Dan Monism, Dwndalke, Dwndrum, Donegal, Dwnglow, Londonderry; Dwngarven and Dunsmore (meaning more Dans). Dan shall judge his people. Gen. 48:16. In Irish dunn means judge. In Scotland and England there is also an abundance of Dans, Dons, and Dins, such as Dundee, Dunkirk, Dunbar, Dunraven.
And the name Dan lies hidden in both the capital cities, London and Edinborough. The house of Israel under Jeroboam became idolatrous worshippers of Baal, and because of this the Israelites attached the name of Baal to many places in Palestine, such as Baal-Peor, Baal-Hazor, Baal Zephon, Mt. Baalah, Baal-Gad and others. If these are the same people who migrated to the isles of the west, then it is most significant that the name of Baal is found in many places in Ireland, such as Baal-y-bai, Baal-y-Gowan, Baal-y-Nahinsh, Baal-y-Castel, Baal-Moni, Baal-y-Ner, Baal-y-Garai, Baal-y-Nah and many others.

There is far too much evidence to sort through here, but surely the thirteen identification marks we have given should serve to identify these Israel nations and separate them from all others even as the scars and birthmarks identified the gypsy boy at the beginning of our story. Furthermore, we will all agree that the marks of identification I have given from the Bible do not apply in any degree to the other great nations of the earth, such as China, Russia, or Japan, but they apply only to the Anglo-Saxon peoples and in particular to Ephraim and Manasseh, the two sons of Joseph - Ephraim the commonwealth and Manasseh the great nation. The enormous wealth, power, world-wide influence and blessing of these two great brother nations bring vividly to our minds the words spoken by Jacob as he blessed Ephraim and Manasseh, saying, "In thee shall Israel bless, saying, God make thee as Ephraim and Manasseh." Gen. 48:20 Joseph, because he was separate (or separated) from his brethren (Gen. 49:26), was given a double portion in Israel. Henceforth the tribe of Joseph was to become two branches, Ephraim the first born and therefore head of the tribes, and Manasseh the thirteenth, but both enjoying the blessing of Joseph to the fullest possible extent. Thus the tribes were Ephraim, Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah, Zebulun, Issachar, Dan, Gad, Asher, Naphtali, Benjamin, and Manasseh.

The heraldry of any nation is an extremely important thing, for in heraldic symbols the history and principles which surround the origin and destiny of the nation are emblazoned for all to read. Benjamin Jonson, in the following verse, gives voice to his truth.

"Was not all the knowledge
Of the Egyptians writ in mystic symbols?
Speak not the scriptures oft in parables?
Are not the choicest fables of the poets
That were the fountains and first springs of wisdom Wrapped in perplexed allegories?"

Heraldry is a parabolic language. Jesus, the greatest of all teachers, taught the people in parables. Those among His listeners who understood the symbols also understood the parable. When Joseph told Jacob that in his dream the sun and the moon and the eleven stars bowed down to him, Jacob was quick to grasp the symbols and understood exactly what they meant. The Great Seal of the United States, seen on every dollar bill, is replete with significant heraldry. I trust I will not be misunderstood when I say that in my opinion practically every symbol in this undoubtedly inspired work of art depicts as nothing else can the origin of the United States of America. It will probably be noticed at once how prominent is the number thirteen. Manasseh was the thirteenth tribe. There are thirteen stars, thirteen stripes, thirteen arrows in the eagle's left claw, thirteen olive leaves and thirteen olive berries in its right claw, Written on the scroll fluttering from the eagle's beak is the inscription with thirteen letters, "E PLURIBUS UNUM," meaning, ONE OUT OF MANY. This nation is not only the thirteenth tribe, but it is as well the great gathering place of all thirteen tribes. Thus the significance of E Pluribus Unum.

It will be noticed that the thirteen stars are set in a glory cloud above the eagle's head, that the eagle's wings are spread, and that it is facing toward the west, which is the continual direction of all Israelitish migrations. For the sake of brevity we shall state that the thirteen stars represent the thirteen tribes of Israel, of which tribes Manasseh himself is the thirteenth. The glory cloud in which the stars are set represents the glory cloud that led Israel all through the wilderness journey, covering and protecting them from all enemies, guiding them through the trackless future, (Psa. 105:39; Num. 10:34; Exod. 14:19-20), sheltering them from the heat by day and the frost by night, standing between them and their enemies, and directing them in all their wanderings.

The eagle itself is always associated with the heraldry of Israel. Ezek. 17:3-5 It is one of the loftiest of scriptural emblems. Her courage and farsightedness is stated in Job 39:28-30 Her swiftness is alluded to in Deut. 28:49
The remarkable phenomenon of the renewal of its youth is mentioned by David. Psa. 103:5 The likeness of one of the beasts about the throne was the likeness of an eagle. Rev. 4:7 The eagle was the standard of the camp of Dan, which included Asher, Dan, and Naphtali. "He bore them on eagles’ wings" (Exod. 19:4) is the symbolism used to represent the escape of Israel from bondage to freedom. The eagle is not a bird of carrion and is not a menace to smaller birds. This, I think, is not only an excellent symbol of Israel, but that part of Israel which is the United States of America. No small nation need fear her and she is the defense of all her community. As Shakespeare said most impressively, "The eagle suffers little birds to sing."

The olive branch, upon which cluster thirteen berries and thirteen leaves, is also a symbol of Israel, who is referred to in scripture as an olive tree. Jeremiah 11:16 says, "The Lord called thy name, A green olive tree," and Paul in his warning to the Gentiles speaks of Israel as an olive tree. Rom. 11:17-24 It is most significant that the dexter talon holds the olive branch with its thirteen olive berries and its thirteen leaves, the symbol of peace, but the sinister talon holds the thirteen arrows of war. Israel, when she went against a city in battle, was commanded to follow these instructions. "When thou comest nigh unto a city to fight against it, then proclaim peace unto it... and if it will make no peace with thee, but will make war against thee, then thou shall besiege it." Deut. 20:10-12 First the enemy is offered the olive branch of peace and, if this is refused, then comes the arrows of war. The arrow had a special place in the heraldry of Manasseh, since he is Joseph's son, for unto Joseph the Lord had said, "His bow abode in strength and the arms of his hands were made strong by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob." Gen, 49:24 Well might we ask what all these thirteen's represent if they do not represent the thirteen tribes of Israel, of which Manasseh was the thirteenth tribe.

The Great Seal of the United States is the only seal that has both an obverse and a reverse side. The reverse side of the seal is a pyramid with thirteen courses of masonry. Floating above the pyramid is the capstone or chief corner stone surrounded by a glory cloud. In the midst of the stone, watching over the nation, is the great, all-seeing eye of God, indicating most explicitly the long-standing mottoes of America. ONE NATION UNDER GOD and IN GOD WE TRUST. As the capstone of the Great Egyptian Pyramid is missing, because it was rejected by its builders, so in the Great Seal the capstone is not yet in its place. It must remain in glory above until Christ, the chief corner stone, comes to take His place at the head of His covenant people and the Head of His true church, which is His body. Why should a pyramid find prominence on the Great Seal of the United States? There are no pyramids in America. Surely this wonder of heraldry reminds us, not of America, but of Egypt, the land were Manasseh and Ephraim his brother were born. The thirteen courses of masonry represent not only the thirteen original American colonies, but the fact that Manasseh himself is the thirteenth tribe and also the gathering place of all thirteen of the tribes of Israel. The whole display is nothing short of an inspirational marvel. Little did the men who designed it realize how much inspiration they enjoyed.

Looking still further, we find the reverse side displays the thirteen-lettered inscription, ANNUIIT COEPTIS, meaning, HE HATH PROSPERED OUR BEGINNINGS, which truth applies not only to the United States, but to the Israel nations as a whole. At the bottom of the reverse side are the beautifully significant words, NOVUS ORDO SECLORUM, meaning THE NEW ORDER OF THE AGES. These words are more prophetic than historic, because they speak of an age to come when the Head Stone of the corner takes His rightful place. Then in Israel, the seed of Abraham, all the nations of the world will be blessed. Surely a Bible reading saint in a far distant land, having never heard of the United States of America, would, upon seeing these symbols, proclaim. "These are the emblems of Israel!"

As the double-sided Great Seal of the United States magnificently displays the Israelitish ancestry of that nation, the tribe of Manasseh in particular, no less forcefully does the British COAT OF ARMS display the Israelitish ancestry of Britain, the tribe of Ephraim in particular.

When Israel camped in the wilderness, they camped beneath four standards. On the north side was the Camp of Dan, consisting of Asher, Dan, and Naphtali. Their standard was the eagle. To the east was the camp of Judah, consisting of Is-sachar, Judah, and Zebulun. Their standard was the lion. To the south was the camp of Reuben, consisting of Gad, Reuben, and Simeon. Their standard was a man. To the west was the camp of Ephraim, consisting of Manasseh, Ephraim, and Benjamin. Their standard was the ox, or unicorn. See Numbers chapter 2. The prophet Ezekiel received a great vision of God which he describes in these words: "As for the likeness of their faces, they four had the face of a man, and the face of a lion on the right side: and they four had the face of an ox on the left side; they four also had the face of an eagle."

Ezek. 1:10 Now, reading this remarkable passage, could anyone possibly doubt that the man, the lion, the ox, and the eagle seen by Ezekiel were in some vital way connected with the twelve tribes of Israel, whose camp emblems were the man, the lion, the ox, and the eagle? No reasonable, thinking person could possibly conceive that these emblems of heraldry apply to any other than the nation Israel!

With this thought in mind we notice that nothing in the heraldry of the British Coat of Arms is English, but everything is Israelitish. On the dexter side of the Coat of Arms is the rampant lion with a crown upon his head, representing England.

Is it not a fact that the lion is Israelitish rather than English? This king of beasts is the emblem of Judah (Gen. 49:9) and wears the crown because God said, "The scepter shall not depart from Judah nor a lawgiver from between his feet until Shiloh come." On the sinister side stands the unicorn, representing Scotland. Is it not also a fact that the unicorn is the personal emblem of the tribe of Ephraim? Deut. 33:17 Its prominence bears witness that England is the new home of Ephraim, to whom the promise was given that he would become a company, or commonwealth, of nations, pushing the people together to the ends of the earth. Most certainly Ephraim England has been and still is the mother country to the entire commonwealth, or company of nations.

In the lower dexter corner may be seen the harp of David, representing Ireland. But what connection has Ireland with a harp? For two thousand years Ireland had no other emblem than the harp. Irish tradition still insists that Tamar Tephi, daughter of Zedekiah of the seed of David, arrived in Ireland with the prophet Jeremiah about the time of the Babylonian captivity and was married to Eochaidh, who was of the seed of Zarah, the son of Judah, thus uniting the seed of Zarah-Judah with the seed of Pharez-Judah. From the union of Tamar Tephi of the Judah-Pharez line with Eochaidh, the prince of the scarlet thread of the Judah-Zarah line (see Gen. chapter 48) sprang the long list of Irish overlords who for one thousand years were crowned upon the Stone of Scone (now in the British Coronation chair) and wielded the sceptre of Judah over the whole of Ireland. It has been stated that every nation in Europe, which has a lion in its coat of arms can trace its royalty back to Zarah, the son of Judah. In the midst of the Great Shield may be found the figures of seven lions. I cannot tell what such heraldry can possibly represent unless it represents the young lions of the British Commonwealth.

In the beautiful crown may be seen a diadem of twelve precious stones. It is more than coincidence that these twelve stones in the British crown are the same twelve stones that are found in the breastplate of the Israelitish high priest, namely, a sardius, a topaz, a carbuncle, an emerald, a sapphire, a diamond, an agate, an amethyst, a beryl, an onyx, and a jasper. See Exod. 28:17-20 These are the same as the foundations of the Holy City, (Rev. 21:19-21), though five of the stones have a different name here. Above the crown, barely seen in the picture, is the orb, representing the entire earth, and upon the orb is the cross, indicating the day when the Christ of the cross will take the throne of David and reign over the world. Above the crown may be seen another lion, not the rampant lion of Judah, but a standing lion with a crown on his head, representing the house of David, to whom the Lord swore, saying, "Thus saith the Lord; David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel." Jer. 33:17 Please note that the reference here is to the house of Israel rather than the house of Judah. Beautifully engraved below the shield are the words DIEU ET MON DROIT, meaning GOD AND MY RIGHT, and on the device surrounding the shield are the very significant words, HONI SOIT QUI MAL Y PENSE, meaning literally, SHAME ON HIM WHO THINKS EVIL OF IT.

Dieu et mon droit (or God and my right)! To what right do these words refer? It was Ephraim, the "firstborn", (Jer. 31:9), who received the birthright and all the blessing of heaven and earth and seas. How much more significant then are the words, HONI SOIT QUI MAL Y PENSE, which literally mean, SHAME ON HIM WHO THINKS EVIL OF IT. What other meaning can we find than this: God has given the birthright to Ephraim, and shame on him who thinks otherwise. "Dieu et mon droit" and "Honi soit qui mal y pense."

I have touched all too briefly on the magnificent heraldry in the British Coat of Arms, every item of which is deep rooted in the heraldry of Israel, bearing little or no significance to England apart from her connections with the seed of Abraham. Space will not permit me to speak of the significance of the Stone of Scone, which rests in the coronation chair and whose history dates back to the captivity of Judah, nor of the orb and the scepter, nor the fact that the British monarchs are anointed with oil at their coronation, compounded from the same properties as that used to anoint the kings of Israel. Nor can I tell of the magnificent west window of Westminster Abbey, bearing the figures of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the twelve patriarchs, and Moses, under which every British monarch passes on his way to coronation.

We must now close this all too brief message on the Abrahamic covenant. It is my earnest prayer that those who have read this humble effort will realize that for many years our eyes have gazed upon truth that shouts aloud of our Israelitish heritage, though our eyes have been closed and our ears stopped because blindness in part has happened to us. These great nations, so richly blessed with blessings temporal and blessings spiritual, are the descendants of that great man to whom God swore, saying, "In thee and thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." These are the people who have become as numberless as the stars, through whom Christ came, through whom the body of Christ has come, and who, when their repentance and cleansing is complete, will be the New Jerusalem bride of Christ, and through her twelve gates will enter the countless billions of human kind, billions who hitherto never knew that God had a Son, or a body of sons, or a bride. The endless billions of earth will enter through those holy gates into the city of God that they might be partakers of the Tree of Life. At the beginning of his journey Abraham looked for a city that had foundations, whose builder and maker is God. Heb. 11:10 He shall see that city in all her magnificent glory with her twelve glittering foundations and her twelve pearly gates opened wide, never to close. Then shall her charming voice, joined in sweet harmony with the Spirit, speak to every creature in the universe, saying, "Come! Come, take of the water of life freely, without money and without price. Let him that heareth say, Come; and let him that is athirst come; and whosoever will let him come and take of the water of life freely." "I, Jesus, have sent Mine angel to testify unto you these things. I am the root and the offspring of David and the bright and morning star." Even so, come, Lord Jesus! Amen!

APPENDIX.

In a writing of this nature there is such a vast wealth of material from which truth should be gathered that the effort at best is very limited in scope. Many subjects upon which I have touched should have been more fully developed, but for want of space in so small a booklet it was necessary to strictly limit each one. Much more history should have been explored to show how the royal lines of Pharez and Zarah, the two sons of Judah, were united about the time of the captivity of the house of Judah, from which union the British royal family is descended. Queen Victoria of England paid three hundred thousand pounds to have her genealogy traced. This genealogy, tracing her ancestry back to King David of Israel, now hangs worked in tapestry in the great hall of Windsor Castle and may be seen by any visitor when the Queen is not in residence.

The existing church has for centuries vainly endeavored to make the world wide promises of God for the house of Israel fit the Jewish people and, finding this impossible, many have turned skeptics and unbelievers. The Jew cannot possibly fulfill the world wide promises given to the house of Israel. The Jew himself would be the first to admit that from the manger of Bethlehem until now his whole attitude has been anti-Christ. How then could the promise made of Jesus, "He shall be the glory of Thy people Israel," be made applicable to them?

Among the many promises concerning the whole house of Israel and all their world wide power there is one special prophecy that has to do with the moment in which we live. It is this: "... and when he shall have accomplished to scatter the power of the holy people, all these things shall be finished." Dan. 12:7 The present crumbling of the British Commonwealth and Empire, together with the dreadful weakening of the power of the United States of America, is definitely foretold in scripture and is one the principal signs that we are at the end of the age when all things shall be finished.

If the reader will glance at a map of the world, he will notice that in our day the only nations of the world that are yet free from the dominion of tyrants are the Israel nations and those vitally connected with them, such as France and Germany, many of whose people are also of Israelitish stock.

I have dealt with the great covenant God made with Abraham because the Bible deals solely with the seed of Abraham from Genesis, chapter twelve, to the last chapters of Revelation. Therefore we should readily receive that no man can properly understand the plans and purposes of God nor the great prophetic utterances of the Old and New Testaments until he can see that Israel is God's elect, through whom all nations are to be blessed. God has not cast away His people, which He foreknew, but the sun, the moon, the stars, the heaven, the earth, the seasons, and day and night still testify that God remembers His ancient covenant, "In thee and thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." Slowly but surely from the covenant seed comes Christ the Head, Christ the Body, and Christ the bride, the Holy City, the New Jerusalem, through whose lofty gates all nations will pass to partake of the tree of life in the midst of the city.

How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord, Is laid for your faith in His excellent Word! What more can He say than to you He hath said, To you who refuge to Jesus have fled?
INTRODUCTION

I do not wish to over-emphasize the importance of this article, or the truth it contains, but I am constrained to say that these truths are of immense importance because they are foundational. Upon their firm footing rests the whole superstructure of God's plan of the ages. If we cannot see how in the very beginning God created man for the specific purpose of ruling the universe, and to have dominion over all the vast sidereal with its infinite space and multi-billion galaxies, then we have missed the heart of God's intention completely and we become doomed to spend our lives in the idle pettifogging of the Romish and Protestant systems, which give neither reason for man's existence nor cause for his humiliation and fiery testings in the realm of death. Even redemption, full and complete as it is and in spite of its infinite cost, will fail to reconcile and save more than one percent of all creation, if the fruitless interpretations of the Babylonish system are to be believed.

How different does all this appear when our hearts grasp the understanding that before all things, back of all things, beneath all things, and above all things is the majesty of God's eternal intention and the immutability of His purpose to make man in the image of Himself - infinite in wisdom, perfect in understanding, faultless in counsel, almighty in power, unchangeable in purpose, glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, unswerving in faithfulness, and doing the wonders of God throughout the universe as sons of God and members of His family, man complete in God's image and likeness.

The answer to the eternal question, "What is man that Thou art mindful of him," is twofold, because the question is two-fold. What is man? The answer by example is JESUS CHRIST highly exalted, His name being above every name. He is the first man and the last man. He is the beginning of the creation of God and He is the end of the creation of God. We are His younger brothers, all members of the same family, first of men and secondly sons of God. What He is we are becoming, to which the scripture clearly attests, saying, "As He is, so are we in this world." I John 4:17 Every creature, whether of beasts or birds or fish or any plant or insect, brings forth seed after his kind, and shall it be different with God? Shall He not bring forth after His kind? Shall not he who is begotten of God be as son of God and a member of His family? Did not Jesus settle the contention forever when He said, "If He called them gods unto whom the word of God came, and the scripture cannot be broken, say ye of Him whom the Father hath sanctified and sent into the world, Thou blasphemest, because I said I am the Son of God?" John 10:35-36 Jesus Christ was the Son of God, and we, too, are sons of God because we are members of the family of God.

The first part of the question is, "What is man?" The second part of the question is, "That Thou art mindful of him?" Or, "What hast Thou in mind for man?" The answer is that man will be given dominion, when his perfection comes and his Christ-likeness is complete, over fish, over birds, and over the beasts and creeping things of the earth. Gen. 1:26. The fish represent the things beneath. The birds represent the things in the heavens above. The beasts and creeping things represent things on the earth. That is what God decreed in the beginning, and that is His immutable intention now and in the ages to come - man in God's image, ruler and lord of the universe. - G.R.H.
"The people that do know their God shall be strong, and do exploits. And they that understand among the people shall instruct many: ...And some of them of understanding shall fall, to try them, and to purge, and to make them white, even to the time of the end..." Dan 11:32, 35 "And there shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time: and at that time Thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book ...And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever... Many shall be purified, and made white, and tried; but the wicked shall do wickedly: and none of the wicked shall understand", but the wise shall understand." Dan. 12:1, 3, 10. I have quoted these scriptures from the book of Daniel that we might be assured that in the last days there will stand up a people who know their God, and, because of their knowledge of Him, (hey will be strong and do exploits.

We are living in days of incredible wickedness. Crime and violence abound in such enormous proportion that no equal can be found except the inexhaustible evil that cursed the earth in the days of Noah, when wickedness was so great in the earth that every imagination and thought of men's hearts was only evil continually. Even Sodom was less evil by reason of her ignorance and her lack of truth and light, but the wickedness of our day is committed in the face of light and in spite of it. Well did our blessed Lord say, "Woe to thee, Chorazin! woe unto thee Bethsaida! for if the mighty works, which were done in you, had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago in sackcloth and ashes," Matt. 11:21. "It shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrha in the Day of Judgment, than for that city!" Matt. 10:15.

There is little need at present to take great pains to prove I that we are now living in the closing days of this age. That reality seems to have been breathed into the very atmosphere that surrounds us until mankind has become aware of an impending something, which they do not understand. But the wise shall understand, and they who know their God will be strong and do exploits.

My purpose in writing this article, is to consider three great aspects of the eternal purpose of God - first, creation; secondly, redemption, and thirdly, the restitution of all things. My purpose will be to show that creation, redemption, and restitution are all priceless threads forming the warp and woof of the seamless robe of eternal purpose. They cannot be understood separately because together they display the infinite pattern of the ages.

It is not until the eyes of our understanding become enlightened by the Holy Ghost that we begin to see God and hear Him declaring the end from the beginning, calling the things that are not as though they were. It is little wonder that our heavenly Father should know the end from the beginning, because He is the end and He is the beginning. The little boy, peeping through a knothole in the high board fence, sees the parading hosts only as the procession passes before his restricted vision, but the eternal Father from His throne on high sees the marshaled host from the beginning to the end. The little boy knows not what the parade is all about, neither does he bear any responsibility for it. He knows not whence it comes nor whither it goes, but the eternal Father Himself, the Author and Finisher of it all, smiles in the knowledge that He, who has begun a good work, will faithfully perform it until every original intention has been fulfilled and every portion of His immutable will has been accomplished.

O that men might know the Lord, for, when they do, the dark shadows of their unbelief disperse before the rising of the sun of righteousness and the turmoil that fills the heart untutored by divine wisdom ceases from its restless raging as the knowledge of His faithfulness whispers, "Peace, he still." Our gracious heavenly Father has deemed it good to hide His boundless understanding from the wise and prudent men of this age, and has cast the darkling cloud of unbelief over the minds of (hem who vainly imagine that God and His truth can be known and dissected by the pryings of the natural mind. Let the theologians invent their dead theories if they will, but as surely as a living dog is better than a dead lion, so one man with an experience in God is better than ten thousand who seem to have an indisputable argument. "O that I might know Him," sighed Paul, and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings, being made conformable unto His death; if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead." Phil. 3:10-11
That we may better know God and that the eyes of our understanding might be enlightened, I wish to present briefly five elementary but basic truths that concern our heavenly Father. These truths should enlighten every believer to fill his heart and transform his mind with the majesty of God. I am not only afraid, but sure, that to most people God is little more than an idol to adorn a shelf - someone who needs to be protected and coddled lest His very name should disappear from the face of the earth. I once visited the San Fernando Mission in California and, being somewhat a lover of history, I greatly enjoyed the visit. But never shall I forget the two grotesque images that stood on either side of the altar, one bearing the inscription, God the Father, and the other the inscription, God the Son. No one who knows God could condone the sight of such a blasphemous thing as that, yet this very thought fills the minds of multitudes. To millions of Christians God is a sort of convenience. He is someone to be sought in times of trouble, sickness, or death, but the rest of the time, when there is no need or distress, He is somewhat of a hindering influence that should be kept in the background lest He hinder the works of our flesh. But the wise shall understand, and they that know their God shall be strong and do exploits.

FIVE ATTRIBUTES OF GOD

An attribute is that which is attributed to a person or thing. It is a property or a quality. Therefore, when we say God is love, love is understood to be an attribute of God. It is a quality and property of Himself. It is part of Him. Just as sweetness is a quality of honey and bitterness a quality of herbs, so love is a quality and therefore an attribute of God. He cannot be God without it. He neither endeavors to manifest it nor searches to find it, for it is part and parcel of Himself. "Love is of God, little children, and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in Him. By this shall all men know that ye are My disciples, if ye have love one to another."

1. Omniscience. Now wisdom is the principle thing, we are told; therefore get wisdom, and with all thy getting, get understanding. This being so, we will begin with the attribute of omniscience, for omniscience concerns wisdom, knowledge, and understanding. God is omniscient. By this we mean that all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge, whether in heaven or earth, abide forever in Him. There is nothing that He does not know and there is nothing that He does not understand. God knows all things. His wisdom and knowledge, His ways and His judgments, are unsearchable. He knows and understands all things in nature, in science, in astronomy - everything concerning the heavens above and the earth beneath. He knows all history, whither written or unwritten, and He sees with unerring accuracy all the events of the endless future. All are purposed and designed by His infinite mind. He knows all things of man, the purpose of his being and the end in view for him. He knows what man will do and ordains the end that will be accomplished in his doing it. "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable are His judgments, and His ways past finding out!"  Rom. 11:33

I dare not attempt more than a sketchy outline of the limitless truth concerning the attributes of God. Nevertheless, because the Spirit has impressed me to make His name glorious to those who read, I will endeavor to show briefly some of the truth the scriptures teach concerning His attributes and leave the remainder to be revealed to the reader as the Holy Spirit illumines the truth to every heart.

As David was carried away in the Spirit to the mountain peaks of understanding, his soul caught a fleeting glimpse of the omniscience of God, and his spirit, thrilling with the greatness of God's glory and power, burst forth with these revealing words: "Great is our Lord, and of great power: His understanding is infinite."  Psa. 147:5 That which is infinite is so great as to be immeasurable and unbounded. It is limitless, inexhaustible, all-embracing and perfect. It is only when men and women are carried away into the glory of His eternal greatness that they begin to comprehend the infinite. The understanding of the perfect and upright Job searched infinitely beyond his own pain and suffering, yea, and his own wisdom also, when he boggled the imaginations of his earthly-minded adversaries with the amazing query, "Dost thou know the balancing of the clouds, the wondrous works of Him which is perfect in knowledge?"  Job 37:16 And the beloved John, who had seen the glories of the mount of transfiguration and felt the sublime exultation of the Isle of Patmos, wrote to God's dear people to say, "If our heart condemn us, God is greater than our heart, and knoweth nil things."  1 John 3:20

Hear now the inspiration of prophets and sages, the apostles and God's only begotten Son, as they tell us in words indisputable that our heavenly Father is omniscient. "The eyes of the Lord are in every place, beholding the evil and the good."  Prov. 15:3 "He telleth the number of the stars; He calleth them all by their names."  Psa. 147:5
From the scriptures quoted above we can arrive at only one conclusion. God is omniscient. There is nothing He does not know. All His works are done in wisdom and understanding, for He knoweth the end from the beginning. Nay, we can say much more than this, for He who cannot lie has faithfully declared that He is both the end and the beginning. These inspired utterances prove above all else that God's wisdom is perfect, extending to the balance of the clouds, the names of numberless stars, the thoughts and intents of the human heart, and the number of hairs of one's head; and even the death of a tiny bird does not pass without His notice. He considers all the works of men, and ponders all their goings. He hears every word of the human tongue and knows the thoughts and imaginations of the human heart. Furthermore, the apostle clearly states that God thoroughly knows every detail of His own work, for saith he, "Known unto God are all His works from the beginning of the world."

Acts 15:18 Our own election is according to the foreknowledge of God, for "whom He Ad foreknow, He did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son." Not only is this true, but He also tells us with great clearness that He is well aware of all things which are to come to pass in the ages yet unborn. With this knowledge Paul wrote in Eph. 1:9-12: "Having made known unto us the mystery of His will, according to His good pleasure which He hath purposed in Himself: that in the dispensation of the fullness of times He might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are in earth; even in Him. In whom also we have obtained an inheritance, being predestinated according to the purpose of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will." With what unwavering faithfulness has the word of the Lord declared, "In whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge." Col. 2:3 To this sublime statement our hearts echo and re-echo the words of the apostle Paul: "How inexhaustible God's resources, wisdom and knowledge are! How unfathomable His decisions are, and how untraceable His ways! Who has ever known the Lord's thoughts, or advised Him? Or who has advanced anything to Him, for which He will have to be repaid? For from Him everything comes; through Him everything exists; and in Him everything ends! Glory to Him forever! Amen." Romans 11:33-36 (Goodspeed)

2. Omnipotence. That we may understand in a greater way the extent of God's glory, and that our hearts may be prepared for the truth I wish to bring, we will be greatly helped by a perfect assurance that God our Father is omnipotent. Omnipotence simply means unlimited or universal power; almighty power. The Holy Scriptures abound with proof of God's almighty power. We cannot use them all, but the few passages we have space to use will show with great clearness that our Father and Lord is all powerful and in every respect omnipotent. There is nothing He cannot do; neither is there anything beyond the reach of His power. Men and angels and every element of the universe are subject to His authority, and Satan himself, to whom so many mistakenly attribute great strength, has no power at all except that which is permitted by the Lord Himself for the accomplishment of some divine intention.

"With God all things are possible" were the words of God's first begotten Son (Matt. 19:26), who during the days of His sojourn on the earth manifested the glory of God and on many occasions displayed the omnipotent power that was at His command. He who could enter a room though doors were locked against every intruder can with the same ease pass a camel through the eye of a needle if He wills, or enter the fast closed door of the human heart whenever it pleases His blessed will. With God all things are possible.

Centuries ago Abraham and Sarah were waiting for the son whom God had promised many years before. The sands of time with alarming speed were running through the hour-glass of their lives. They were both old and well stricken in years. The spring had gone from their step as it had gone from their lives, and gloomy beyond words was the knowledge of them both that "it had ceased to be with Sarah after the manner of women." Genesis 18:11 And when the Lord appeared to them to renew His promise, saying, "I will certainly return unto thee according to the time of life, and, lo, Sarah thy wife shall have a son," Sarah could not refrain from laughing within herself. But the Lord demanded, "Wherefore did Sarah laugh, saying, Shall I of a surety bear a child, which am old? Is anything too hard for the Lord?” Gen. 18:13-14 Our solemn reply must always be a sober and reverent no, for with men many things are impossible, but with God all things are possible.

See with what words of omnipotence the Almighty sweeps away doubt and fear from our timid hearts declaring and declaring again that all things are made by Him, all things are upheld by Him, and all things live and move by Him. "By the word of the Lord were the heavens made, and all the host of them by the breath of His mouth. He gathereth the waters of the sea together as an heap: He layeth up the depths in storehouses. Let all the earth fear the Lord: let all the inhabitants of the world stand in awe of Him. For He spake, and it was done; He commanded, and it stood fast." "The Lord hath His way in the whirlwind and in the storm, and the clouds are the dust of His feet. He rebuketh thesea and maketh it dry, and drieth up all the rivers... The mountains quake at Him, and the hills melt, and the earth is burned at His presence, yea, the world, and all that dwell therein. Who can stand before His indignation"! And who can abide in the fierceness of His anger? His fury is poured out like fire, and the rocks are thrown down by Him.” Nahum 1:3-6

"By the word of the Lord were the heavens made and all the host of them by the breath of His mouth.” Psa. 33:6 Angels and principalities and powers are subject to Him. Col. 3:15. Demons are cast out by the word of His mouth, and Satan himself is completely limited to the word of God's permission as we see so clearly demonstrated in God's dealings with Job. Job 1:12 and 2:6. And who better than Job, after God's dealings with him were complete, was able to say, "I know that Thou canst do everything, and no thought can be with holden from Thee." Job. 42:2

How sublime are these mighty statements of God's omnipotence that fall like manna from the sanctified lips of the redeemed when compared to the paltry humbug called evolution as taught to our children in schools in the name of science. They would have us believe that man evolved from some lower form of life that somehow chanced to be and that our limbs and oilier faculties developed as necessity required them as our manner of living changed. If this be so, I would surely think that presently men may be born with smoke stacks on their heads!

Once I was a polliwog beginning to begin:
Then I was a froggie with my tail tucked in!
Then I was a monkey up a banyan tree;
Then I was a man with a big D.D.
A polliwog, a froggie, a monkey, and a man;

Glory be to nature for her wondrous plan! Stupid as is this silly ditty, who can deny that it contains in essence the obnoxious humbug that is being taught to our little boys and girls in grade school and our adolescents in high school and university? There is no denying the truth of that is there? How different from this science, falsely so called (1 Tim. 6:20), is the wonderful utterance of inspiration, "By the word of the Lord were the heavens made and all the host of them by the breath of His mouth." "By Him were all things created that are in heaven and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by Him, and for Him: and He is before all things, and by Him all things consist." Col. 1:16-17

Never allow your understanding to be confined by the limitations of human power or might, for with God all things are possible. "Let there be light," He commands, and there is light. "Let the waters be divided," He decreed, and the waters divided. "Let the seas swarm with life." He cries, and living things appear in the oceans from the microscopic plankton to the mighty blue whale, whose head is as large as an elephant, whose heart is the size of an ox, whose weight is one hundred and thirty tons, and who esteemeth iron as straw and brass as rotten wood. God speaks, and birds fly through the heavens. He hisses and the hornets come. From His finger tips worlds glide forth in their orbits, and mighty stars as numerous as the sands of the sea circle forever in their courses with the sweet precision of a mighty dynamo. "Canst thou bind the sweet influences of Pleiades, or loose the bands of Orion?” the Lord demands.

"Canst thou lift up thy voice to the clouds, that abundance of water may cover thee? Canst thou send lightnings, that they may go, and say unto thee, Here we are?” Job 38:31, 34, 35 So declares eternal wisdom concerning the omnipotence of our God, who speaks and worlds obey, who commands and the heavens give audience. Let our hearts be well assured of all these things, for the knowledge that God is both omniscient and omnipotent will dissolve our every doubt and fear.

The Saviour can solve every problem,
    The tangles of life can undo;
There is nothing too hard for Jesus;
There is nothing that He cannot do.

3. Immutability. "I am the Lord, I change not" was the word of God by the prophet Malachi. Mal. 3:6. Though we may write whole books and carefully considered manuscripts to teach the immutability of God, and though we may show from many scriptures that the Lord is changeless, we cannot with ten thousand words say more clearly that God is immutable than is stated here in these seven words of inspiration, "I am the Lord; I change not." Wonderful as it is to know that God is omnipotent and has all power, and blessed as is the assurance that He is omniscient and knows all things, this would give us little comfort if our hearts once lacked the blessed assurance that the Lord we love and serve is also unchanging. What wretchedness would fill our minds if we were cursed with the thought that God could someday change His mind or alter His eternal purposes or turn about in His course! I can think of nothing that would throw my faith into such confusion as the thought that God might change, but with what assurance we pursue the eternal goal when we hear His blessed voice saying clearly, "I am the Lord; I change not."

When I read this statement - I am the Lord - my own mind was caught away to two separate and very significant instances recorded in the word of God. When Moses stood unshod before the burning bush, hearing the awesome instructions of the Holy One of Israel, his poor human heart trembled as the angel, who was the Lord Himself, spoke to him, for Moses had turned aside to see the strange sight of a bush that burned and was not consumed. Exod. 3:1-4. The Lord called to him from the bush, and said, "Moses, Moses. And he said, Here am I. And He said, Draw not nigh hither: put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground. Moreover He said, I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob." Verse 6 Then, as the weight of God's ordination seemed to numb his very mind, poor trembling Moses, hoping to find an exit from the great commission the Lord had given him, inquired in dread, "Behold, when I come unto the children of Israel, and shall say (into them, The God of your fathers hath sent me unto you; then I hey shall say to me, What is His name? What shall I say unto them? And God said unto Moses, I AM THAT I AM: and He said. Thus shall thou say unto the children of Israel, I AM hath sent me unto you." Exod. 3:13-14

The Lord has many names, every one of which is a revelation of Himself. We dare not turn aside here to feast in these green pastures lest we fail to return to the subject we are considering, but of all the names the Lord has taken to Himself none portrays His immutability and His absolute changelessness to such a degree as does this name I AM. What He was when He appeared to Abraham He still was when He came to Isaac, and what He was when He appeared to Isaac He also was when He manifested Himself to Jacob. And now, as Moses bows his head and heart before the Lord, he finds Him to be still the same unchanged I AM in that present moment as He was centuries before. Can we not hear the prophet echoing the fact of His immutability in the scripture we have quoted above, "I AM the Lord; I change not?"

It was centuries later that our Lord Jesus Christ stood in the midst of the unbelieving Jews to tell them, "Your father Abraham rejoiced to see My day; and he saw it, and was glad. I hen said the Jews unto Him, Thou art not yet fifty years old, and hast Thou seen Abraham? Jesus said unto them, Verily verily, I say unto you, Before Abraham was, I AM." John 8:56-58 How truly have the saints been singing.

Yesterday, today, and forever
    Jesus is the same.
All may change, but Jesus never!
    Glory to his name.

"Remember the former things of old," said the prophet Isaiah, "for I AM God, and there is none else; I AM God, and there is none like Me, declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all My pleasure." Isa. 46:9-10 Again speaking of the immutable purpose of the Lord, this same Isaiah wrote: "This is the purpose that is purposed upon the whole earth: and this is the hand that is stretched out upon all the nations. For the Lord of hosts hath purposed, and who shall disannul it? And His hand is stretched out, and who shall turn it back?" Isa. 14:26-27

"Of old hast Thou laid the foundation of the earth: and the heavens are the work of Thy hands. They shall perish, but Thou shalt endure: yea, all of them shall wax old like a garment, as a vessel shalt Thou change them, and they shall be changed. But Thou art the same, and Thy years have no end." Psa. 102:25-27

God is immutable. He cannot change. All His purposes shall stand. Every purpose that ever came from His divine mind is progressive, growing larger and more glorious as the plan unfolds, but all this endless expansion was decreed by Him in the beginning and all He decreed must certainly come to pass. Let not mankind vainly imagine that the Lord of heaven and earth faints and grows weary of His task or that He ever changes His mind or alters His course. We hear the voice of the harlot system trying to persuade the people that Christianity must be made adaptable to the changing times so that it will relate to the progress of the people. Mankind, they tell us, must be liberated from the old morality to embrace the new morality. O foolish man, will you never learn that all your attempts to liberate yourself bring you nothing but greater bondage in the end? He whom the Son sets free is free indeed, and none other is free. See what devilish bondage has come to those who have tried to practice what some have dared to name the new morality. The so-called new morality is nothing more or less than the old immorality that has cursed us from the beginning. They have dressed this ravening wolf in sheep's clothing to make it appear acceptable. Behold what havoc it has wrought upon mankind in broken homes, diseased bodies, confused and unstable children, to say nothing at all of the attendant torrent of dings that are destroying the minds of vast numbers of the rising generation, rendering them unfit to ever take their place as men and women should. The dreadful conditions in the world today come as a harvest from the noxious seed of self-expression that was sown by foolish professors half a century ago, and now today the world is being ruled by the offspring of those men who never once felt the rod of correction. Because those in authority learned no discipline, they know not how to deal with criminals who break the law and destroy the peace and safety of our land. Thus we have come to the painful and unenviable position of seeing law-abiding people hiding behind locked doors while those criminals who should be incarcerated roam at large murdering, looting, raping and robbing whenever and whosoever they please. But mankind, with all his demand for Change, will find in the end that, though men may sin at will, God has not changed His attitude toward sin, since He is immutable and has appointed a day when every man shall be tried according to the deeds done in the body, and his punishment or reward will be according to his works whether they be good or had.

Let all those who love God rejoice that the Lord of hosts has said, "I AM the Lord; I change not." God is immutable. Every purpose He has decreed is in the process of being fulfilled. "Do not err, my beloved brethren. Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the 1'iitlu'r of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning," James 1:16-17

4. Faithfulness. "Confidence in an unfaithful man in time of trouble is like a broken tooth, and a foot out of joint." Prov. 25:19 It matters not how much such a man swears to be faithful; he will always let you down. You cannot trust a drunkard with money to buy the baby's milk. He will come staggering home without it, thinking he has done the right thing. "That which is crooked cannot be made straight: and that which is wanting cannot be numbered." Eccles. 1:15 There is no possible way by which a man could have faith in God if God Himself were unfaithful. It is therefore of great necessity that our hearts embrace with fervent joy the assurance that God is faithful. Much more than this it is essential to know that faithfulness is as surely an attribute of God as is omnipotence, omniscience or immutability.

My purpose here in writing briefly concerning the faithfulness of God is that the elect who live in this very evil day should have a lasting assurance that every divine purpose will be fulfilled and is being fulfilled in exactly the same manner as Omniscience decreed before the ages began, and that everything He has said will be done and all He decreed will come to pass. Not one jot or one tittle of all that has been spoken by the law, the prophets, or the apostles will fail until all is fulfilled. "If we believe not, yet He abideth faithful: He cannot deny Himself." 2 Tim. 2:13 Even in this dreadful hour of unbelief when man in his incredible carnality does not like to retain God in his knowledge, the Lord abides faithful and true both to those who against hope believe in hope (Rom. 4:18) and to those who never believe at all. Even these defiant doubters, though He will sorely wound them, will learn at last that faithful are the wounds of a friend, but the kisses of an enemy are deceitful. Prov. 27:6

When saints were exhorted to "holdfast the profession of their faith," they were given the assurance that they might do so without wavering because "faithful is He who promised." Heb. 10:23 The faithfulness of God is manifested in that He never fails to keep His promise. He may tarry for centuries or even millenniums and the time appointed for the fulfillment of His promises may be long (Dan. 10:1), yet the word spoken is always true and will always be fulfilled in God's time. "For the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end it shall speak, and not lie: though it tarry, wait for it; because it will surely mine, it will not tarry." Heb. 2:3

"It is the glory of God to conceal a thing: but the honor of kings is to search out a matter." Prov. 25:2 Often, if not always, God's purposes are concealed beneath the dark and stormy clouds of bewildering circumstances, all of which seem to be working against the promises of God, making their fulfillment appear impossible. Prophecy is spoken, yet nothing immediately comes to pass. Promises are given and months drift into years and years drag into centuries, yet the promise remains unfulfilled. The Lord speaks to Abram, saying, "In thee and in thy seed shall all nations of the world be blessed," and, having thus spoken, He straightway shuts up Sarah's womb that she cannot bear a child at all. And when Abram is old and his wife well past the age when children can be born, the Lord calls him aside and changes his name from Abram, which means high father, to Abraham, which means the father of many nations. Gen. 17:5 Still no son appears; then at last, when every human hope was gone forever, the one son of promise is born, but only one. No multitude, no seed as numerous as the stars or as numberless as the sands or countless as the dust but just one child of promise - Isaac. Even when the second generation had come and gone, there was still only one son of promise - Jacob, of whose seed in the third generation there were only twelve, yet God is faithful and the promise is sure. Because He made it, it cannot fail. God is faithful. He is not only faithful, but immutable; not only immutable, but omnipotent; not only omnipotent, but all-wise. Thus in our day, four thousand years after the promise was given, we see the seed of Abraham as numberless. Abraham has three kinds of seed - the dust (Gen. 13:16), fulfilled in Ishmael and the Arabs; the sand (Gen. 22:17), fulfilled in Jacob and the children of Israel; the stars (Gen. 15:5), fulfilled in Isaac through Jesus Christ. Rom. 9:7; Heb. 11:17-19 All of these are innumerable.

"It is the Lord's mercies that we are not consumed," wrote Jeremiah the prophet, "because His compassions fail not. They are new every morning. Great is Thy faithfulness." Lam. 3:22-23 Neither centuries nor millenniums of time have any bearing on the faithfulness of God except to prove it to the end. What He has said will surely come to pass. It has only to wait until the appointed time arrives. Later in this study we will be considering that great edict of creation, "Let us make man in our image and after our likeness." and we will see how these prophetic words are coming to pass slowly and steadily through the ages in exactly the manner the Creator decreed. When the Lord said, "Let us make man in our image and after our likeness," His unerring wisdom was reaching forward, spanning thousands of years. Four thousand years were to come and go before the first begotten Son, the Saviour of all mankind, was presented faultless and in the image of God, made perfect by the things He suffered. Few knew that another two thousand years would pass away before the first fruit company, the body of Christ and the brothers of Jesus, would be presented faultless before the presence of His glory with exceeding joy (Jude 24), and faultless before the throne. Rev. 14:5 Every day it appears that man is becoming more unlike God, and so he is; yet He abides faithful who promised. Even in the very midst of man's unbelief and turmoil the mighty fiat sounds forth, declaring in the face of all unbelief, "By Him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by Him, and for Him: and He is before all things, and by Him all things consist. And He is the head of the body, the church; who is the beginning, the firstborn from the dead: that in all things He might have the preeminence. For it pleased the Father that in Him should all fullness dwell; and having made peace through the blood of His cross, by Him to reconcile all things unto Himself; by Him, I say, whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven. And you, that were sometime alienated and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now hath He reconciled in the body of His flesh through death, to present you holy and unblamable and unreproveable in His sight." Col. 1:16-22 Though the work of reconciliation takes millenniums of time to be accomplished, yet, because He is faithful and cannot fail, it is stated as though already accomplished. "God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation." 2 Cor. 5:19 "For ever, O Lord, Thy word is settled in heaven." Psa. 119:89
In the eleventh chapter of the book of Hebrews the testimony is given of what Paul is pleased to describe as a great cloud of witnesses. Heb. 12:1 We are told of the wonderful things that were accomplished by faith in the faithful promises of God, and the reading of this account has caused many a saint to greatly rejoice in his God. Yet this eleventh chapter, which so vividly describes the mighty exploits of faith, ends on a note that seems to be almost off key when we are told that these all died in faith, not having received the promises. Verse 13. Surely one would think that he who died without seeing the result of his faith must either have had no faith at all or, worse still, have felt that the God he trusted had proved unfaithful. But should it be thought a thing impossible that God should raise the dead? Why do so many accept the truth of the resurrection of the dead, yet fail to see that it is by the resurrection that the faithfulness of God will bring to pass the greater part of all His aionian promises? Thus, when the Spirit says, "These all died in faith, not having received the promises," the word is quickly added, "God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." Verses 39, 40 Should it be deemed a thing impossible that God would raise the dead? Should it be thought strange that the fullness of God's promise should wait until the resurrection morning? What act could better declare that it is God, faithful and eternal, who is doing the work? None of God's promises are ever completely fulfilled until the time of the resurrection whether the promise be to the just or to the unjust. As man says, "I will do so and so," not knowing what a day will bring forth, so the faithful God, the author and finisher of our faith, counts a thousand years as one day and a thousand years as yesterday when it is past.

"Forever, O Lord, Thy word is settled in heaven. Thy faithfulness is unto all generations." Psa. 119:89-90

5. Omnipresence. God is present everywhere. "In Him we live, and move, and have our being" was the word of the apostle Paul. Acts 17:28 It is most wonderful to learn of God's almighty power and to discover that all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge dwell in Him. It is blessed beyond expression to know that He is immutable and does not change His course nor alter His mind to suit the whims of a changing world. Our hearts rejoice in the knowledge that He is faithful, that God is love and all who dwell in love dwell in Him. Our hearts are overwhelmed by the greatness, the goodness, the power, the faithfulness, and the loving kindness of Him who is the author and the finisher of our faith.

There is yet one other attribute that for the good of this article we must briefly consider. It is the attribute of omnipresence. Many people, if not all of us, have at some time felt ourselves to be forsaken of God. Even our Lord Jesus Christ ended those fearful moments on the cross with the terrible, earth-shaking, heaven-rending cry, "My God, My God, why hast Thou forsaken me?" But, though for a moment it was necessary that the great omnipresent Father should withdraw all manifest presence from the Redeemer, in response to the agonizing cry of His beloved Son His omnipresence was manifested in a most unmistakable way by the terrible quaking of the earth, the awesome rending of the rocks, and, perhaps most miraculous and significant of all, by the rending in twain of the veil in the temple from top to bottom. The graves, too, of men long dead were opened in preparation for their coming forth on the morning of His resurrection. No! The omnipresent God had not gone away. He was close enough to hear the prayer of His beloved Son and near enough to receive the spirit of Him who committed Himself into His hands.

I have listened with wonder to the testimonies of some of God's most holy saints who told how to all outward appearance and inward witness God had withdrawn His presence from them for eighteen and twenty years; but they found in the end that He had been with them all the time, carefully watching, carefully guiding every foot-step and jealously guarding them as His choice treasure. You ask me, "Why does the Lord do things like that?" My answer is, "I do not know." Only omniscience, full of understanding and infinite in patience, can know what manner of vessel He is forming for His glory. The thing then for my faith to grasp is simply this: God is ever present and present everywhere.

"Such knowledge is too wonderful for me; it is high, I cannot attain unto it. Whither shall I go from Thy Spirit? or whither shall I flee from Thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, Thou art there: if 1 make my bed in hell, behold, Thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; even there shall Thy hand lead me, and Thy right hand shall hold me. If I say, Surely the darkness will cover me; even the night shall be light about me. Yea, the darkness hideth not from Thee; but the night shineth as the day: the darkness and the light are both alike to Thee. For Thou hast possessed my reins: Thou hast covered me in my mother's womb." Psa. 139:6-13 "When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee: when thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned: neither shall the flame kindle upon thee." Isa. 43:2 "Because thou hast made the Lord, which is my refuge, even the most High, thy habitation; there shall no evil befall thee, neither shall any plague come nigh thy dwelling." Psa. 91:9-10 With these and many other faithful promises does the omnipresent Father assure His children that He is always with them. Whether it be in life or in death, heaven or hell, fire or water, lion's den or fish's belly, He is a very present help in trouble and is not far from any of us, for in Him we live and move and have our being. Yea, even from the lips of the Master Himself these words still sound through the meadows of our soul, "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the age."

We shall not attempt at present to explore those scriptures, which show that God is eternal, having neither beginning of days nor end of life. Nor shall we speak of His attribute of holiness, for I think that is much too great a task for a man who was born in sin and shapen in iniquity. I, at least, feel incapable at the moment of saying more than this: He is glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, doing wonders. Exod. 15:11 Perhaps some other day we can ravish our souls in the greatness of His attributes of love, loving kindness, and tender mercy.

The devout reader, considering the truth written in this article, may have wondered why I should take so much space here to write concerning the attributes of God since our subject is "Creation, Redemption, and the Restitution of All Things". My explanation for this is very simple. Since these subjects are so vast in their scope, eternal in their import, and incapable of being carried out by any but God Himself, it is of unspeakable value that we be assured how great and powerful, how wise and immutable is our God, who doeth all these things. How unchangeable are His ways, how Omniscient His mind, how faithful His intention, and how ever present He is to carry out every detail of His infinite purpose! Let those bow down who will before the little "church God" of human theology, but let those whose hearts have been opened to grasp the truth that the heaven of heavens cannot contain Him worship that same God who in the beginning of the ages proclaimed the unalterable decree, "Let us make man in our image and after our likeness, and let us give him dominion." Know then that He, the Almighty, who is possessor of all these attributes, who spreadeth out the heavens with a span and hangeth the earth on nothing, is abundantly able to carry out His infinite intention. Neither shall one jot or one tittle fail of anything until all be fulfilled. Nothing can stay His hand. None can alter His will. No power can resist His purpose.

CREATION

It was our purpose in the first part of this article to so magnify and exalt the greatness of God's power and the infinite perfection of His wisdom and understanding that all who would read the remaining pages might clearly understand that He, because of His omnipotence, worketh all things after the counsel of His own will. Eph. 1:11. There is nothing that He does not know. There is nothing that He cannot do. There is no place where He does not dwell. His Spirit filleth all in all and with Him there is no variableness, neither shadow of turning. "Of His own will begat He us..." (James 1:18) and "He doeth according to His will in the army of heaven." Dan. 4:35 He Himself is the Spirit of wisdom and understanding, the Spirit of counsel and might, the Spirit of knowledge and the fear of the Lord. Isa. 11:2

In His eternal omnipotence we live and move and have our being. It is with Him we have to do. Therefore I charge all those who read these truths to earnestly consider that our heavenly Father, all powerful and all wise, full of grace and truth, is not the enemy of mankind, but their gracious and faithful Creator. "Wherefore let them that suffer according to the will of God commit the keeping of their souls to Him in well doing, as unto a faithful Creator." 1 Pet. 4:19 From this passage it may be clearly seen that the work of creation did not stop with Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden, but the work of creation is even now in progress. Therefore we who now live are admonished to yield ourselves to the faithful Creator. Let him that readeth understand that at this very moment he is in the process of being created by the skilful hand of the master Craftsman. Step by step the Holy Spirit is moving upon him to bring him into the image of Him who once in ages past proclaimed, "Let us make man in our image and after our likeness." If any man be in Christ, he is a new creation, for "the first man is of the earth, earthy; but the new man is the Lord from heaven. And as we have borne the image of the earthly, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly." 1 Cor: 15:47-49
Many centuries ago Job uttered an inspired statement as he sat among the dust and ashes of his awful grief and pain: "If a man die, shall he live again? All the days of my appointed times will I wait, till my change come. Thou shall call and I will answer Thee; Thou wilt have a desire to the work of Thine hands." Job 14:14-15 If a man die shall he live again? Of course he will, because death and resurrection are part of the plan devised by God to make man in His own image. That is why Jesus, who Himself was raised from the dead, was able to say, "I am the resurrection and the life," and "because I live, ye shall live also."

In the passage quoted above, however, Job spoke of more than a resurrection. He made reference to an appointed time of waiting, through which we must pass until our change come. That appointed period of waiting is the time during which the work of creation is proceeding. It is the long, long night of waiting until our fondest dreams come true, but there is not one experience that is unnecessary, not one precious moment that is wasted. All things are working together to fulfill the eternal purpose of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will that we should be to the praise of His glory who were the first to fix our hopes in Christ. Dread not this long, long night of waiting. Dread not the rigors of this difficult school of experience. It is God Himself who has ordained that we should proceed this way, and, when He has tried us, we shall come forth as pure gold. Yea, we shall come forth in the likeness of Him who at this very moment is in the process of creating us in His image.

The last statement made here by Job is the most significant for our study now. "Thou wilt have a desire to the work of Thine hands." Once we recognize that man is the work of God's hands and that He has a special desire toward that work, then we can know that infinite wisdom, limitless understanding, unending faithfulness and almighty power cannot fail or be discouraged until that work and purpose is carried triumphantly to its perfect final and ultimate conclusion. We are the workmanship of God's hands. The eternal has no mere passing interest in this handicraft. It is His one absorbing, consuming devotion in this present age of grace! If we might enquire of the eternal Father to know His principal work and interest throughout all these generations since Adam, He would not tell us that His time was occupied in creating worlds and stars, suns and moons or angels of light. He would say to us, "Ye are God's workmanship. You are the work of My hands. This is the work that I desire to accomplish, for I have a desire to the work of My hands." O that saints and sinners alike could learn and embrace this truth, for then would life and death, pain, tribulation and sorrow be recognized as fashioning tools in the skilful hands of an all wise Creator, who has a desire to the work of His own hands, the work of creating man in His own image! By His own special skill His work will be perfect and in His own likeness when it is finished. "Why should there be tribulation?" some trembling soul may ask. To this the kindly Creator replies, "Tribulation worketh patience; and patience, experience; and experience, hope; and hope maketh not ashamed; because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us." Rom. 5:3-5 O dear reader, can you not see from this that God is love, and he who would have the love of God shed abroad in his heart must first yield himself to the painful, refining tools of tribulation, patience and experience that he at last may be as perfect in God's image as was Jesus Christ, that first perfected Son of Adam?

The Father has a desire to the work of His hands, and I am thankful to be one small part of the work of His hands. He is like a craftsman so intent upon the work he is doing that the hours slip by like minutes and a thousand years are as yesterday when it is past. I have a little workshop in the basement of our home in which I make all manner of things. Often I have seen the hours slip by almost like minutes because my mind was absorbed in the thing I was doing. What I was creating was paltry indeed, sometimes even useless and soon forgotten, but the work of God's hands is a creation as eternal as God Himself, and by that creation, when it is completed, He will govern the universe in righteousness. So taken up is He with the work of His hands that a thousand years is as one day and whole millenium as yesterday when it is past.

This work of creation, which God is so faithfully doing cannot all be done at once, but it is accomplished one piece at a time. He first took upon Himself to make one man, but that one man though bearing the likeness and image of God, was not by any means the finished product God had in mind. The man God formed from the dust of the earth was in God's image only as the unfinished potter's clay is in the image of the finished ceramic that will take its place on the rich man's mantelpiece after the terrible fire has baked it into a vessel of beauty, usefulness and excellence. Our all wise Lord does but one work at a time. He formed one man of the dust of the earth. He made him a natural man of the earth earthy, but the work of creation was not finished. The work of creation continues steadily through the ages of time until that which at first bore only the image of the earthy now bears the image of the heavenly and that which was of the earth earthy is at last the Lord from heaven when creation's work is complete. 1 Cor. 15:48-49

Each man, we are told, comes into this resurrection glory in his own order. 1 Cor. 15:23 The first to be made and completed and finished in God's image is Jesus Christ, our Lord, He is the beginning of the creation of God. Rev. 3:14 If He is the beginning of the creation of God, then He is not only the beginning of the new creation, but He is of necessity the beginning of the old creation as well. Just as we once bore the image of the earthy and through God's grace we are beginning to bear the image of the heavenly, so also did that first begotten Son once bear the image of the earthy, and, though He were a Son, yet learned He obedience through the things He suffered, and He, being made perfect, became the Author of eternal salvation to all them that obey Him, being called of God an high priest after the order of Melchisedec. Heb. 5:8-10

O that men could lay aside their paltry little philosophies, their blinding religious traditions, their little "church God" and the heavy chains of their human theology that they might really see into the heart and mind of our heavenly Father! Then would they embrace what Jesus intended them to understand when He said, "I am the first and I am the last." "I am the Alpha and the Omega." "I am the beginning and the end." Does divine wisdom not assure us that, since He is the first and He is the last, then wherein so ever He is the first He must of necessity be the last also? Is it not equally true that whereas He is the Alpha He must also be the Omega? "Certainly," you reply. "These things are indisputably true." Now let us follow the truth we read that we might see some of the hidden meaning and understand its end, for how can we avoid the conclusion that the opposite of this is also true? I mean to say that wherever He is the Omega then He must be the Alpha. If He is the end of anything, then He must be the beginning of it also, and, if He is the last, then He must of necessity be the first. Would you not deem it true, if He is the first and the last, He must also be the last and the first? Can we not see then how significant it is that Paul by inspiration plainly said that Jesus was the last Adam? Not the second Adam as so many are prone to say, but the last Adam. Thus He divulges a secret kept hidden from the foundation of the world. The last must also be the first. So the first man Adam made his appearance as a living soul, but the last man Adam, made perfect by partaking of all the suffering and temptation that other men have endured, was made a life giving Spirit, to be presented in the end of the age, perfect and able to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself. O with what new and wonderful significance does the proclamation of Jesus Christ now echo through the corridors of our spirits as we hear Him saying, "I am the first and I am the last. I am the beginning; I am the end. I am He that liveth and was dead and am alive forevemore, and hold the keys of death and of hell." Blessed be His name forevemore!

We are talking about creation now. We are showing that God meant all that was in His heart when He said, "Let us make man in our image and after our likeness." See with what care Luke in his gospel gives a faithful record of the genealogy of Jesus Christ, the last Adam, tracing His forefathers name by name, step by step, from Heli (who was Joseph's father-in-law and Mary's father) back to the Garden of Eden and to the first man Adam, saying, "... which was the son of Seth, which was the son of Adam, which was the son of God." Luke 3:38

I often apologize to my Lord for the fearful deadness of my own understanding. How I regret the years I have followed the tradition of men, which in the final analysis is tradition we inherited from Rome! Why do we read scriptures that convey whole realms of truth only to brush them aside in fear that a little investigation of them might upset some of the petty theories that have blinded us so long? Why, I confess with shame that I often catch myself in the act of doing that very thing! Let us then hear the word of God and, hearing it, we will be changed into that same image of Jesus Christ. Hearing we are beholding, and beholding we are being transformed. 2 Cor. 3:18

"That was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual." 1 Cor. 15:46

Hear, then, and understand the words of Him who speaks with the voice of many waters, declaring, "I am the first and I am the last." Rev. 1:17 Hear Him, I say, as by the lips of the apostle Paul He says, "The first man Adam was made a living soul: the last Adam was made a quickening (life giving) spirit." 1 Cor. 15:45 Should we think it is a thing impossible that the Son of God should have been manifest in the first Adam, since the Spirit has plainly said that Adam was the son of God? Ah, yes, you say, but Adam transgressed the command of God: and to this I agree in part only, for there is a passage of scripture in the New Testament which, though kept obscure, throws tremendous light upon the thought that is before our minds. When Paul was writing his instructions to Timothy regarding the conduct of the church, he made this most remarkable and enlightening statement, every word of which I believe. Hear well what he said: "I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence. For Adam was first formed, then Eve. And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived was in the transgression." 1 Tim. 2:12-14 Paul did not make this statement because he was a woman hater and this truth should never be used to condemn Eve or any other woman. The truth is, however, that Eve was taken from the flesh and bone of Adam and made separate from him in order that the transgression should be accomplished. "For the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him who hath subjected the same in hope. Rom. 8:20 The transgression is not a mistake! It is part of the plan of creation, and God's great redemption is also a part of that same plan of creation.

Observe, then, how the scripture clearly states that Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived was in the transgression. What then shall we say about the man? The truth must be that, if he was not deceived, then he entered into the transgression with his eyes wide open, because he knew and thoroughly understood God's plan - that God through temptation, suffering, and death would eventually present the finished product, man in the image of God. Have you not read and have you not wondered with great amazement at the scripture, which says, "For He hath made Him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him?" 2 Cor. 5:21 Did Jesus want to be made sin for us or did He yield Himself to it, understanding full well what the purpose of God was? No one dare say that Jesus was a sinner; yet He became sin for us. Adam, too, being not deceived, entered into the transgression because he foreknew and understood that it was the purpose of God that the whole creation should be lowered into the realm of death. He was not acting in defiance of God, but yielding himself in submission to the purpose of the ages.

Paul, writing the deepest of church truth to the Ephesian congregation, made these remarkable statements: "The husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church: and He is the saviour of the body. Therefore as the church is subject to Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in everything." Eph. 5:23-24 Let those who will look only at the surface meaning here. The hidden meaning is this: As Christ is the head of the body, the church, so A Jam was the head of Eve; and as Christ is the Saviour of His body, the church, so Adam was the saviour of his body, Eve. The Emphatic Diaglott reads thus: "Husbands, love your wives even as the Anointed One loves the congregation, and delivered Himself up on her behalf." Eph. 5:25 (Diaglott) Note those words: "Delivered Himself up on her behalf." Because of the love of the first Adam for Eve, his own body, and because he understood how the divine purpose was to be worked out, he was not deceived, and he delivered himself up for her who is the mother of us all and became the forerunner of Him, Christ, who delivered Himself up for us all. As in the first Adam all die, so in the last Adam shall all be made alive. The word all in the second case is as all-inclusive as the all in the first place. How beautifully in the light of these things has the scripture said, "For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin!" Heb. 4:15

God did not need to make man at all, but, when He proclaimed His intentions to make man in His own image and after His likeness, all the sons of God in heaven entered into the plan. Job spoke of a day when the "morning stars" sang together, and the sons of God shouted for joy. Sons of God are the morning stars. Jesus said, "I am the bright and morning star," and far away in the depths of my spirit I have a very real sense that you and I were also there. We were sons of God even then, but nothing of the dimension we shall be when the ages have rolled by and the plan is complete, for we will be like the Prince Captain of our salvation. Of Him it is written that He was made perfect through suffering, and, being made perfect, He became the Author of aionian salvation, called of God an high priest after the order of Melchisedec.

The things that I am writing are difficult to say and hard to be understood, and they who are unlearned and unstable will probably wrest them to their own destruction. Paul found this distressing lack of understanding when he wrote to the Hebrews concerning the priesthood of Melchisedec. It would not be difficult to fill the remainder of these pages with truth concerning that most remarkable priesthood but our minds today are often as dull of hearing as they were then, for, after two milleniums have passed away, men who should be teachers of the mysteries of God must still, I regret to say, be fed with milk and not with strong meat. It is pitifully true that what men believe to be strong meat is, in fact, very diluted milk!

To those who can receive it the following words of the apostle Paul will give help and light, but let us not try to evade their true meaning just to make them acceptable to our old theology. Let us rather change our theology to suit the clear teaching of the word of the Lord. Introducing his explanation of the priesthood of Melchisedec, Paul said, "So also Christ glorified not Himself to be made an high priest; but He (the Father) that said unto Him, Thou art my son, today have I begotten Thee. As He saith also in another place, Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec. Who in the days of His flesh (He is still speaking of Melchisedec) offered up prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears unto Him that was able to save Him from death." Heb. 5:5-7  The Emphatic Diaglott says, "Out of death," and that is certainly correct. I have stated many times in these writings that death is not the grave or the coffin. Death is this whole realm in which we have existed ever since the transgression in Eden. Melchisedec understood that fact far better that I do and He prayed to God to be delivered from it: and God delivered Him not from the grave, but out of death and the realm of death altogether.

Now this Melchisedec was without father, without mother, without beginning of days nor end of life. Search how we may, I think we must conclude that there is really only one man who ever lived on earth who fits that description, and he is the first man Adam. But this Melchisedec was more than that - much, much more! He was made like unto the Son of God, and he abides a priest continually, or perpetually. Heb. 7:3  Furthermore, he is called the King of Salem, which means King of peace, and his name, Melchisedec, means King of righteousness. Who alone fulfills this marvelous description but that last Adam, unto whom the Lord sware and will not repent, saying, "Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec. By so much was Jesus made a surety of a better testament." Heb. 7:21-22. "This man, because He continueth ever, hath an unchangeable priesthood. Wherefore He is able to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by Him, seeing He ever liveth to make intercession for them. For such an high priest became us, who is holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, and made higher than the heavens; who needeth not daily, as those high priests, to offer up sacrifice, first for His own sins, and then for the people's: for this He did once, when He offered up Himself. For the law maketh men high priests which have infirmity; but the word of the oath, which was since the law. maketh the Son (high priest), who is consecrated for evermore." Heb. 7:24-28

Not many hours before Jesus departed out of this world, He lifted up His eyes to heaven in prayer. The words He uttered form without doubt the most remarkable prayer ever offered, but they were more - much more - than just a prayer. Those words revealed some of the deepest and most sacred truth of the whole life and ministry of the Son of God. "I have glorified Thee on the earth," he said. "I have finished the work which Thou gavest Me to do. And now, O Father, glorify Thou Me with Thine own self with the glory which I had with Thee before the world was." John 17:4-5  The fact that Jesus, God's beloved Son, had laid aside His heavenly glory that He might become a man and be made perfect through suffering is truth that has been accepted for centuries. Both you and I thoroughly agree that He did lay aside His heavenly glory to enter His God-given ministry and calling, but few people have ever given serious thought as to when and at what time He laid aside that glory. In the solemn prayer quoted is a very revealing statement, a truth hitherto known only to Himself and the Father, as He prays that the glory might be restored to Him that was His "before the world was." From this statement we must conclude that Jesus did not lay aside His glory when He came to the manger of Bethlehem. He laid it aside before the world began, while yet the earth was without form and void and darkness was upon the face of the deep — before ever there was a garden of Eden or a first Adam in it. It was before the world began that this blessed elder brother, this one that was anointed of God for the task, laid aside His heavenly glory and entered into the realm of death according to the purpose of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will. For this reason He prayed, saying, "Glorify Thou Me ... with the glory which I had with Thee before the world wax." John 17:5

I think this understanding will give much greater meaning to Paul's inspired description of the seven steps of humility that were taken by the Son of God as He laid aside that glory before the foundation of the world that He might lead all mankind through the valley of the shadow of death into the image of God. Listen with reverence as we here recite the seven steps He took as given by the apostle Paul. "Let this mind be in you. which was also in Christ Jesus: who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: but

(1) made Himself of no reputation,
(2) took upon Him the form of a servant,
(3) was made in the likeness of men, and
(4) being found in fashion as a man,
(5) He humbled Himself, and
(6) became obedient unto death (the whole realm and curse of death),
(7) even the death of the cross." Phil. 2:5-8.

This last step was accomplished when He appeared in the end of the age to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself. It was then He became obedient, even to the death of the cross. These were the seven steps taken by our blessed Lord as He laid aside the glory that He had with the Father, and this laying aside of His glory occurred before the world was.

But now, after ages had passed, lifting up His eyes to heaven, He began His humble prayer with these revealing words: "Father, the hour is come," What hour was this to which He so reverently referred? This was the hour appointed by God before the foundation of the world. This was the hour for which all creation had groaned; yea, and this was the hour for which He Himself had waited, in which for the joy that was set before Him He would endure the cross and despise its shame, knowing that thereafter He would be seated at the right hand of the majesty on high, henceforth expecting till even His enemies be made His footstool. This was the hour in which the glory He had laid aside before the world was and before His long ministry began would be restored to Him now that His work was complete. This is the glory that John beheld in part as on lonely Patmos He saw one like unto the Son of man standing among the seven golden candlesticks, saying, "I am the Alpha and the Omega (the first and the last)... He who is and was and is to be - the Ruler of all." Rev. 1:8

(Weymouth) "His head and His hair were white, like white wool — as white as snow; and His eyes were like a flame of fire. His feet were like silver-bronze when it is white-hot in a furnace; and His voice was as the sound of many waters. In His right hand He held seven stars, and a sharp, two-edged sword was seen coming from His mouth; and His face was like the sun shining in its full power. When I saw Him, I fell at His feet as if dead. But He laid His hand upon me and said, "Do not be afraid: I am the First and the Last, and the ever-living One. I died; but I am now alive for evermore, and I have the keys of the gates of death and of Hades." Rev. 1:14-19

(Weymouth)

"I am the first and the last," said the anointed One, God's first Son made perfect, who through suffering and the whole realm of death learned obedience. Wherefore God has restored His glory - the glory that He had before the world began, before He became the first born of every creature (Col. 1:15), before He became the beginning of the creation of God. Rev. 3:14 Could we be wrong in saying that the glory God gave Him in the end was greater than the glory He had in the beginning? Is not this the truth that Paul was telling us when he said, "Wherefore God hath highly exalted Him and given Him a name which is above every name?" He who said "I am the first and the last," was much more exalted as the last than He was as the first. And so also shall it be with you, my brother, my sister, when the purpose of God is complete, for you who came out from God as a very little son at first to suffer the humiliation of temptation and death will at last be presented faultless before the throne of His glory with exceeding joy.

As I write these glorious things, I cannot but remember what I was at first when I was sinking deep in sin,

Far from the peaceful shore;
Very deeply stained within Sinking to rise no more.
But the Master of the sea
Heard my despairing cry;
From the waters lifted me.
Now safe am I.

What we were at first and what we are at last are very different things: For the first man is of the earth earthy, but the last man is the Lord from heaven. "And the glory which Thou gavest Me I have given them: that they may be one even as We are one: I in them, and Thou in Me that they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that Thou hast sent Me, and hast loved them as Thou hast loved Me. Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given Me, be with Me where I am; that they may behold My glory, which Thou hast given Me: for Thou lovest Me before the foundation of the world." John 17:22-24

As long as we remain bound hand and foot by the Babylon system, our spiritual understanding will never expand beyond the weak and beggarly traditions of that system. It is when we "go unto Him without the camp" that we begin to realize our relationship to Him. It is when we open the door to invite Him in that He communes with us. Then He breaks the bread of life to us and our eyes are opened to "see Him as He is." The revelation of the Lord to our longing hearts sanctifies the soul. The greatness of His infinite purpose for all creation sets aflame the love of God in our hearts until every breath we breathe is a fervent prayer, saying, "Thy will be done! Thy will be done!"

While men and women remain bound by their church tradition, truth kept secret from the foundation of the world remains hidden to them. They read, but perceive nothing. Eyes they have, but they see not. Ears they have, but they hear not. Hearts they have, but they do not understand. Indeed, they close their eyes lest they should see and stop their ears lest they should hear! My experience with the average Christian has disclosed the painful fact that Christians do not want to see, neither do they want to hear, lest they should see and hear and understand and should receive healing from the Lord. But let us not be as they are. Let us rather request that the eyes of our understanding may be enlightened that we may know the hope His call inspires and that the path of the just may be as a shining light that shineth more and more until the day is full.

Many names are given to Jesus, the Son of God. They are far too numerous to begin to name them here, but every one of them conveys much more than a name. They are really titles, signifying some eternal truth. Jesus is a human name; it signifies that He is a true man. Christ means the anointed. Immanuel means God with us. Thus we might consider the one hundred or more titles given to Him in the word of God. No title is used so frequently by the Lord Himself as the title Son of man. The name Jesus is used more times, but not by the Lord Himself. In the four gospels the title Son of man is used by Jesus with reference to Himself at least seventy-one times. Again I say that this is not merely a name. It is a title of great significance. The title Son of man signifies as nothing else can that our Lord Jesus Christ, who is the Son of God, has a very definite and special relationship to the entire human race. He is the beginning of it and the end of it, the Father of it and the Redeemer of it. That, I think, must be the true meaning of that remarkable passage found in Isaiah 9:6-7, part of which has puzzled so many people. "For unto us a child is born, and unto us a Son is given: and the government shall be upon His shoulder: and His name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, The Mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon His kingdom, to order it and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this." This passage speaks of none other than the Lord Jesus Christ. Every word in it signifies this. The term everlasting or aionian Father definitely connects Him with the entire human race and makes Him, not only the Saviour of us all, but the Father of us all as well.

There was a certain day in the ministry of Jesus when first the Herodians, then the Sadducees, and finally the Pharisees pooled all their resources to try to entangle Him in His talk. The Herodians asked a tricky question about the tribute money. The Sadducees, who did not believe in the resurrection, tried to confound Him concerning the woman who outlived her seven husbands. When the Pharisees were gathered together against Him, Jesus asked them a simple but very revealing question. This was the question: "What think ye of Christ? whose Son is He? They say unto Him, The son of David. He saith unto them. How then doth David in spirit call Him Lord, saying, The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit Thou on My right hand, till I make Thine enemies Thy footstool? If David then call Him Lord, how is He (Christ) his son? And no man was able to answer Him a word, neither durst any man from that day forth ask Him any more questions." Matt. 22:41-46
Let us not pass by this question in ignorance as did the Pharisees. What does the saying really mean? "The Lord said unto my Lord!" There can be no doubt whatsoever that Christ was the Son of David, but since David in spirit called him Lord, then He which is the first and the last must be David's father just as surely as He is David's son. The question dumbfounded and completely confounded the Pharisees, and it will dumbfound you, too, until you see that David descended from the first Adam, but the last Adam descended from David. Why should we who confess that God can raise the dead find it impossible to believe that the first shall be last and the last shall be first, or that the first man Adam was made a living soul, while the last Adam was made a quickening Spirit? "I am the first and the last. I am He that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive for evermore." Should we think it impossible that he who was at first a living soul should be at last a life-giving Spirit? The genealogy given in the third chapter of Luke's gospel, verses 23 to 31, shows beyond question that our Lord Jesus (the last Adam) was, by natural descent, the son of David. But verses 32 to 38 show beyond question that David was the direct descendant of the first Adam who was the son of God, so that Christ is both David's son and David's Lord.

We are all familiar with the account of the conversation between Jesus and Nicodemus and of our Lord's teaching concerning the necessity of the new birth, but we may have missed some of the significant things that were said. We are, I fear, like Africans walking aimlessly on diamonds, not knowing they are of any value. Let us pray for the spirit of understanding to understand the relationship of Jesus the Christ to the whole human race. "If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe if I tell you of heavenly things? No man hath ascended up to heaven, but (except) He that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven." John 3:12-13 The long standing idea among Christians has been that Jesus became the Son of man when He came to Bethlehem, born of Mary, but, if I read this scripture aright, Jesus is saying that He already was the Son of man before ever He came to Bethlehem, and to add greatly to the strength of this He made a much stronger statement a little later on. Many of His disciples had turned their backs on Him because they could not accept His teaching, saying, "This is a hard saying; who can hear it?" But when Jesus knew in Himself that His disciples murmured at it, He said unto them, "Doth this offend you? What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where He was before?" John 6:61-62 Let us get that straight! "What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where He was before?" I do not know how we can avoid the conclusion that Jesus is telling us that He already was the Son of man before He came down to the manger of Bethlehem. Thus he establishes beyond human understanding and beyond question His vital relationship to the entire human family in every sense of the word. And "now once in the end of the world hath He appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself, and as it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment, so Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for Him shall He appear the second time without sin unto salvation." Heb. 9:26-28

"We have not an high priest who cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities: but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." "What is man that Thou art mindful of him?" the Psalmist asks. The answer to the question, "What is man?" is this: Man is Jesus Christ made perfect through suffering, who, though He was rich before the world began, for our sakes became poor that we through His poverty might be made rich. Jesus is the finished product - man in God's own image, who has been through all the process including all the temptations and trials as the first Adam, having experienced nine hundred and sixty years in the valley of death; but, being made perfect. He became the author of eternal salvation to every one who believes, being made a high priest forever after the order of Melchisedec. The scripture distinctly declares that Jesus, though a Son, learned obedience through the things He suffered, and, being made perfect, He became the author of eternal salvation. Heb. 5:8-9 I have always found it difficult to believe that He was made perfect after He came to Bethlehem. His suffering and perfection came before Bethlehem, it is very plain that, when He came, He was presented to the world, not as one immature and needing to be perfected, but as the "Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world," God's "beloved Son" in whom He was well pleased, appearing now in the end of the age to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself.

"Let us make man in our image and after our likeness," was the proclamation of the Lord, and having so proclaimed His intention, the Father set in motion a plan that would span thousands of years before the first Son of man, the first begotten Son of God, would be presented perfected and faultless as the Captain of our... salvation and the Redeemer of us all. Then, after perfecting the first Son, other thousands of years would roll by while "He who had begun a good work in us" is performing it right up until the day of Christ, which is still in the future. Phil. 1:6 This scripture shows beyond any possibility of contradiction that saints who died millenniums ago are still in the process of being perfected. He who began a good work in them long ago is still performing it and will continue to perform it until the day of Christ, when He shall present every man faultless before the throne of His glory with exceeding joy.

O that men might see the whole plan of creation as a celestial harmony, hymning its beautiful song from the gates of the Garden of Eden to the gates of the new heavens and the new earth and spreading its glorious wings in loving care from the moment God said, "Let us make man in our image," until that wonderful day when all things are subdued unto Him. Then shall the Son be subject to Him (the Father) who put all things under Him. For He must reign until He has put all enemies under His feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death, for He hath put all things under His feet. God's determination to create man in his own image was no mere passing fancy. It is the purpose of the ages, and, when that purpose is complete, the ages will be no more, for time as we have known it will vanish away and we will be found to be inhabitants of the eternal realm. There shall be no night there, neither the light of the sun, for the Lord God giveth them light. All mankind will be in the image of God.

The things I have written are hard to be understood, but shall truth remain forever silent because we fear to proclaim its infinite worth? Must thoughts, placed within our hearts by the Holy Spirit, perish in the womb because we fear the traditions of men or because there is much about them that we ourselves cannot fully understand? Our gracious heavenly Father knoweth best how to accomplish His eternal purpose. Who therefore among His creatures may lift his voice to say to Him that made him, "Why hast Thou made me thus?" Hath not the potter power over the clay? Thus in creation I hear Him say, "Let us make man in our image and after our likeness," and, having so said, with skilful fingers He formed man from the clay, and, having formed him and made him alive with the breath of God, He placed His workmanship in the fire as a potter does his vessel that through suffering and death tribulation might work patience, and patience experience, and experience hope, that through these fires we, being perfect and entire, might be presented spotless before the throne of his glory with exceeding joy.

This then is God's work of creation - first to perfect the Prince Redeemer, the first begotten Son, the apostle and high priest of our confession, and the head of the body of Christ. Having completed this, He next must bring to perfection the sons of God who are the completeness and fullness of the body of Christ and, when their creation and perfection is complete, then the bride must make herself ready, and she, too, having come to the fullness of Christ, shall open her twelve gates that the nations may bring their glory and honor into her. Then it will be universally seen that God is in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them.

God is still in His work of creation, bringing every son of the first Adam into the image of the last Adam, which is the image of God. He is still adding to the body those whom He is perfecting. That which is corruptible is putting on incorruption. That which is mortal is putting on immortality. That which was sown in weakness is being raised in power. That which was of the earth earthy shall be revealed as the Lord from heaven. Very soon the work of creating man in the image of God will be complete and the voice of God will proclaim of the whole body of Christ, "This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased."

"In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. And the earth was without form and void. . . . And God said, Let there be light: and there was light." Gen. 1:1-3 Three great divisions of time are clearly seen in these opening sentences of the Bible: (1) In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth, (2) and the earth was without form and void, and (3) and God said, "Let there be light; and there was light."

There is no way by which man can compute the timeless-ness of the past. Man does not know God's works of old nor the boundless fecundity of His creative mind, but of this we may be certain: the Almighty did not begin His work of creation with the six days of labor recorded in the Genesis record. This fact He seems to indicate clearly as though with an apparent sweep of His great hand He points to the far flung heavens, the planets, the stars, and the great sidereal, saying, "In the beginning God created them all." How distant that creation was no human mind can ever tell because we at present are dwelling in the realm of time. Here everything is limited by the rising of the sun and the going down thereof. How, then, can He who inhabits eternity, unshackled by the crippling bondages of the thing men call time, explain things eternal to creatures who know only that which passes away? God's people owe neither heed nor homage to any so-called science that by its lying wonders would aspire to prove the Genesis record wrong. Scientists are creatures confined by the bondages of time, but God in the timeless-ness of eternity was creating creations for His glory.

If the world were filled with endless light, as it was "in the beginning." and if there were no sun to rise and set, but only the light which He Himself is, how could man measure time? There would be none. And if no sentence of death had been passed upon him, how could he number the days of his life or by what means could it be said that he was old? But the mystery of His divine wisdom brought about some great cataclysm that caused the earth to be filled with darkness and all the teeming life that then was to be destroyed. The relics of ancient dinosaurs and many forms of life from those previous creations are with us today. Even creatures that appear to be man-like were creatures that existed in the vast realms of time before the earth became without form and void and darkness hung its gloomy mantle upon all the face of the deep.

When the judgment of darkness had fulfilled its divine purpose, there came at last the wonderful hour for the earth to be regenerated in preparation for that race of men who throughout the centuries and millennia of time would be made in the image of God. How great a space endured between the time when the earth became without form and void and the Spirit of God once more moved upon the face of the waters I dare not attempt to say; for I do not know. God has hidden all these secrets from the wise and prudent of this world notwithstanding their most recent methods of computing time by atomic radiation. Surely the Lord must laugh at the wisdom of this world and say afresh in His heart of love, "The wisdom of man is foolishness with God," and you, too, dear reader, reading the paragraph I have just written, will surely sigh as you see how in my endeavor to explain eternal things I am so hopelessly plagued by expressions of time such as days and years and space. This cannot be helped, I suppose, since we are as yet but creatures of time. Our change will have to wait until that glad morning when there will be no need of sun to shine by day nor the moon by night, for the Lord God giveth them light, and there is no night there. That, praise God, is the eternal realm.

Do not be deceived by the exploits of geologists and anthropologists who hope by their diggings and excavations to find evidence that man existed long before Adam, neither be deceived by any lying evidence that would seem to prove that man evolved from some lesser creature. Personally I do not believe that any human relic has ever been found that pre-dated Adam; nevertheless, if such as been discovered or in the future should be found, rest assured that it belonged to some previous creation and is unrelated to the Adamic creation. The very words of scripture, "Let us make man in our image," to my mind at least construes the thought that some creation akin to man existed long before Adam. Adam, however, is different in this respect: He is a new creation, not merely man, but man in God's image. (I have written more particularly concerning this in the article Six Days Shall Thou Labor, available upon request.)

MAN IN GOD’S IMAGE

On the sixth day the Lord said, "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth. So God created man in His own image, in the image of God created He him..." Gen. 1:26-27

When the Lord said, "Let us make man in our image," He was speaking not only of Adam, the first man. His mighty edict included the entire human race, which included every descendant of Adam from Adam himself to the very last man who shall be born of his family. I am a son of Adam, and so also are most of those who read this article. I believe there is a considerable mass of evidence in scripture to show that the Negro is a special creation for a special purpose and is not a member of the Adamic creation. All creatures from the beginning were to be produced kind after his kind. Gen. 1:24-25 It is genetically impossible for a white man to father a black man. However much we may squirm to rid ourselves of this fact, the truth of it will always remain. I do not have time nor space to consider the wisdom of this plan at present, but for this reason the mixing of races is an abomination in the sight of God. It defies the original purpose of the Creator and all who disobey will bear their judgment. God has made of one (not one blood as in the King James Version, but of one, i.e. Himself) all nations to dwell on the earth, and He has appointed the bounds of their habitation. See Acts 17:26. As long as we stay within the bounds of our habitation, all is well. It is when we cross our own bounds into the realm of others that all our trouble begins.

"Let us make man in our image" is the word of God. Gen. 1:26 This decree includes all mankind from the Garden of Eden to the end of the world. The teaching, which leaves the impression that the Lord made the first man in His own image and after His likeness, and when He had put breath in Him and placed him in Eden, the work was finished, is both childish and very misleading. It leaves us in the unenviable position of having to believe that Satan is wiser and more subtle than the Omniscient Himself. It leaves us believing the lie that God was tricked by a creature of inferior wisdom. Yea, such a thought denies all the truth we taught in Chapter one, showing that God is omniscient, omnipotent, immutable, omnipresent, and faithful. The idea that such as He could be outsmarted and outwitted by such a one as Satan is both repugnant to the soul and contradictory to the truth. Nevertheless this childish nonsense has been upheld as truth by the church system for centuries, and even today is rigidly adhered to by millions of Christians. I do not hesitate to declare such thought to be filled with error, for how can He who is all mighty be weaker than another or the loser in the greatest work ever undertaken by His omnipotent hand or designed by His omniscient mind?

What then are we to conclude, since we know that both the transgression and the fall of man are facts that cannot be denied? Are we to say, as so many have done, that this was something God did not anticipate? Are we to say that this fall was an unexpected eventuality? Or shall we believe as Paul taught us to believe when he displayed the wisdom of God by plainly declaring, "For the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him (the Almighty) who hath subjected the same in hope." Rom. 8:20 Paul was teaching us here that Adam, though made in God's image, had yet a long and toilsome journey to walk through the vanity of the valley of death and through the rigors of a hard and difficult school before he would be complete in God's image and tried, tested, and ready to take the dominion promised him in Gen. 1:16-17

I fearlessly declare that the fall of man was part of the plan of creation and altogether essential to the process of bringing man into the image of God. The first step in making man in God's image following man's actual creation from the dust of the ground, the first step in perfecting him in the image of God, was to lower him into the awful realm of death by means of his own transgression. Thence from the shadowy realms of death, full of wisdom attained from its suffering, He would redeem him to present him at last faultless before the throne of His glory with exceeding joy. Jude 24.

As we consider this truth, we should especially notice two most significant statements. First, "Let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, etc..." Gen. 1:26 This statement, which seems so simple is a shadow of things to come. It is a well concealed prophecy displaying to the spiritual mind the vast extent of man's authority in that coming day when, perfect in God's image, he is presented faultless, tested, and ready to receive dominion. First "Let them have dominion over the fish," said God; that is to say, "Let us give him dominion over all things under the earth." Second, "Let them have dominion over the fowl that fly in the heavens," - that is to say, "Let us give him dominion over the things in the realm of the heavens. Third, "Let them have dominion over the cattle and creeping things." - that is to say, "Let us give him dominion over the earth and all things thereon." See now how David takes up the parable to greatly enlarge upon this thought. Considering what God has in mind for man, he says, "When I consider Thy heavens, the work of Thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which Thou hast ordained; What is man, that Thou art mindful of him? And the son of man that Thou visitest him? For Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honor. Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of Thy hands; Thou hast put all things under his feet: all sheep and oxen, yea, and the beasts of the field; the fowl of the air, and the fish of the sea, and whatsoever passeth through the paths of the seas." Psa. 8:3-8

Yet again in Hebrews 2:5-8 the Holy Spirit greatly enlarges on this vital truth of God's intention for man, first stated in Gen. 1:26-27 Here the apostle says, "For unto the angels hath He not put in subjection the world (the inhabited earth) to come, whereof we speak. But one in a certain place (Psa. 8:3-8) testified, saying, How poor a creature is man, and yet Thou dost remember him, and a son of man, and yet Thou dost come to him! Thou hast made him for a little while lower than the angels; with glory and honor Thou hast crowned him, and hast set him over the works of Thy hands. Thou hast put everything in subjection under his feet. For this subjecting of the universe to man implies the leaving of nothing not subject to him. But we do not as yet see the universe subject to him. But we do see Him who was made for a little while lower than the angels - even Jesus (the first perfected Son) - because of His suffering of death crowned with glory and honor, that by God’s grace He might taste death for every man.” \textbf{Heb. 2:5-9} Weymouth. As we read these words of inspiration, it is plain to see just what the Lord had in mind when He said, “Let us make man in our image, and let them have dominion…” The dominion that would be his after he was perfected through the dreadful sufferings of death was to extend, not merely over fishes and beasts and birds, but over those things which they foreshadowed, i.e., things beneath the earth, things upon the earth, and things in the vast universe reaching to the sun and the moon and the stars, angels, principalities, and powers being made subject to him. \textbf{Col. 2:10}

The second point we must notice concerning Paul’s inspired statement in \textbf{Rom. 8:18-21} is that, when he said, “The creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him (the omniscient God)…” he also very clearly gave the reason for God’s expectation from the whole mass of His creation in these words: “I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us. For the earnest expectation of the creature (creation) waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God… because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God.” Paul is saying here that the whole of creation from the fishes of the sea to the angels on high and from the earth itself to the most distant star are all waiting like patient, groaning sufferers for the hour when man’s preparation is full and complete. Yea, they are standing on tiptoe to see the wonderful sight of God’s finished, completed and mature sons coming into their own - the image of that first Son who was presented perfect before God two thousand years ago.

When man was lowered into the realm of death, all the rest of earth’s creation was similarly lowered with him. All the birds, the beasts, and the fishes of the sea were lowered into bondage to complement the fallen estate of man. There they will remain in their lowly bondage until the work of the Creator is complete and the finished product in God’s image stands faultless before the throne of His glory. All natural gifts that are in the world today are actually spiritual gifts that have been lowered to the realm of fallen man. The great musicians that have delighted the ears of men are using God-given gifts that are now as far beneath what they originally were as earth is far beneath the heavens. Singers with gifts like Caruso, beautiful as their voices are, will be found beyond compare when they are delivered from the bondage of corruption, and, when they are lifted to the sublime heights of their resurrection, they will sing more gloriously than the angels sing. How can we account for the talents of Thomas Edison, Einstein, or ten thousand others if we cannot see that these men, though fallen, are still possessors of frail fragments of the omniscient mind? It must be so, and it is so, but the day will come when these fallen gifts will be raised, not only to their former glory, but to an exalted glory even as with our blessed Saviour, who, after laying aside the glory that He had with the Father before the world began, was made in the likeness of men, and, after humbling Himself and becoming obedient unto the uttermost in death, even the cross, was highly exalted and given a name which is above every name, that in the name of Jesus every knee should bow and every tongue should confess of things in heaven, and things on earth, and things under the earth, even as typified by the birds, the beasts, and the fishes that swim in the sea in that blessed parable of Genesis 1:26-27.

How our hearts praise Thee, O Almighty Father, for such infinite purpose, for as Thy Son came forth from God to enter willingly into the lowly sufferings of earth and death that He might through the goodness of God be given a name which is above every name, so we, Thy younger sons, have come forth from Thy presence to follow in His train that we, too, after suffering awhile, being made white through the blood of Thy everlasting covenant and being purged by the refining fires of the Holy Spirit, should in our time and order be presented faultless in the image of God to receive from Thy gracious hand the commission that Thou didst ordain on that momentous day in which the morning stars sang together and the sons of God shouted for joy when they heard Thy immutable word, saying, “Let us make man in our image and after our likeness, and let them have dominion…” And we, O Lord, in our own turn went forth from Thy presence into the realm where the dead know not anything that we at last, through suffering death and sorrow and through the glory of Thy redeeming grace, should return after many days, as bread cast upon the water, perfect and complete and mature in the image, the likeness, and the glory of Him who loveth all. Who is like unto Thee, O Lord, who speaks, and it is done; who purposes, and the ages bring it to pass; who commands and all the forces of the universe rush forward to fulfill Thy holy will? What thoughts can compare with Thine own? Shall not we now bring glory to Thy name since Thou hast revealed Thine intention to our hearts? Can we longer find rest and comfort in the lusts of the flesh or the desires of the human mind? Can we who have shared Thy eternal secret find hope or comfort in riches or in lands? "Nay, world, I turn away, though thou seem fair and good. Thy friendly, outstretched hand is stained with Jesus' blood." For the joy that is set before us, even the hope of Thy eternal likeness, we gladly endure the cross, despising any and every shame, that we may be seated with Thee in Thy likeness. This is Thy hope, O Thou Creator, the joy of Thy created ones, and the earnest expectation of every creature.

How easy it should be for the devout mind to understand that the Lord God has a desire to the work of His hands, a purpose which cannot be upset or thwarted! How easy it should be for the devout mind to understand that the high exaltation of the Lord Jesus Christ became His eternal reward, because He willingly yielded Himself to the great humiliation of being made in the form of man to become a partaker of death and to go beyond the common death to one of sacrifice for all, even the death of the cross! The great truth that I pray may grip your hearts, my brethren, is simply this: God is making man in His own image and after His exact likeness. He never intended to do this by simply forming a man of dust and breathing into his nostrils the breath of life, but He brings about this perfect image and likeness by taking the mortal man He has made and lowering him into the realm of transgression, death, and suffering, together with every imaginable test and trial that the fall can bring upon him. All this is part of his creation and perfection. Then, when man has by experience learned all the ramifications of transgression and the dreadful consequences of it, even to death itself, comes the other side of his redemption, the redemptive process by which he is lifted to be seated on the throne with that first perfected Son of man, Jesus Christ our Lord.

All of this mighty redemption, I repeat and repeat again, is part of the work of creation. You who read this article are at this moment of your lowly estate in the process of being created. All things that are happening to you now, whether they be good or evil, are for your eternal good. They are all working together for your good, changing the heart, renewing the mind, enlightening the eyes, filling with life eternal. Everything, I say, everywhere is working without let or hindrance toward that one eternal purpose of making man in God's image. This is God's way. There is no other way. The iron may grumble and fuss as the blasting heat of the furnace dissolves it. It may splutter and hiss as it is taken from the fire and plunged into the icy water to be tempered, but all this is part of the process that brings the perfection required. The clay dug from yonder pit may resent the actions of the potter upon it — the intricate preparation, the whirling of the wheel, the baking in the fiery oven — but, when it is finished at last, it is a thing of beauty and great usefulness. We must further add that neither the iron in the forge nor the clay on the potter's wheel had any choice as to their being there. They were chosen by the skilful craftsman to be formed into vessels that pleased him. Thus saith the Lord of you, my oven — but, when it is finished at last, it is a thing of beauty and great usefulness. We must further add that

Isa. 45:9. "Hath not the potter power over the clay, of the same lump to make one vessel unto honor, and another unto dishonor?" Rom. 9:21. The sovereignty of God is seen to be divinely supreme throughout the pages of Holy Scripture. Even the gathering together of nations and kings of the earth against God's Christ was ordained by the Lord Himself as we shall see in the words that follow. "The kings of the earth stood up, and the rulers were gathered together against the Lord, and against His Christ. For of a truth against Thy holy child Jesus, whom Thou hast anointed, both Herod and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles and the people of Israel, were gathered together, for to do whatsoever Thy hand and Thy counsel determined before to be done." Acts 4:26-28 Do not these verses clearly show that God is sovereign in all these things? Do they not assure us that we are the clay and He is the potter? Do they not plainly declare that He is both the Author and Finisher of our faith and of our entire sons/up and final perfection in His linage and likeness? Once your spiritual mind is able to grasp the truth that it is God who ruleth all, then your very existence will take on new dimension. Your tribulation will be recognized as but a light affliction ordained by Him. Daily working for you a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, as you look not at the things that are seen, but at the things which are not seen; for the things that are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal. 2 Cor. 4:18. What man, wathering in the consuming heat of the fiery furnace of his affliction, can understand that naught but his shackles are being removed, but not one hair of his head is being singed? What man, receiving stripes, can know that the devastating stripes themselves are becoming the marks of the Lord Jesus”? How pitifully few of the masses of mankind, now walking in weariness through the valley of the shadow of death, really know that "Thou art with me!" Let me repeat a truth I have stated many times before! Death is not the grave. Death begins in the cradle and ends in the grave. This whole experience which men call life is the death that was promised to Adam in the day of his transgression. There is much scripture to substantiate this truth. This whole realm from the cradle to the grave is the valley of the shadow of death, yet all through this dim valley of outer darkness the Lord is with us, leading us by the hand, supporting us with the staff, feeding us betimes in green pastures, refreshing our souls at the gushing streams of the water of life, and anointing our heads with the oil of the Spirit; and in the knowledge and glory of it all our cup runneth over.

"Let us make man in our image," said the Lord, and in saying so He spoke not of one man only, but of all mankind, even every far off son of Adam’s race. Through the valley of the shadow of death, through death itself, through correction and just punishment and tribulation, through hell and the grave, through the resurrection of the just and the unjust Heleads man steadily toward that distant goal of which He spoke, saying, "Let us make man in our image and after our likeness." Even our Lord Jesus Christ, the redeemer and reconciler of things in heaven and things in earth, walked this way before us as the first born of every creature. He, too, was made perfect through the things He suffered, and, being made perfect. He became the author of eternal salvation unto all who obey Him. Heb. 5:8.9. This word of inspiration is most certainly declaring that the Father perfected the Redeemer and made Him faultless, proving Him by all manner of suffering, and, raising Him from the dead, He presented Him as the spotless Lamb of God, the Saviour of the world and the giver of life, even the life of God. Therefore whosoever believeth in Him is justified from all things and whosoever believeth in Him shall not perish, but have the life of the ages. Of His own will begat He us by the word of truth that we should be a kind of firstfruits of His creatures. James 1:18

When a child of God obeys the Lord and comes out of the confusion of the established church system, then the path of the just begins to shine more and more upon him. The eyes of his understanding begin to open to see the hope of his calling and the riches of God's inheritance in the saints. Indeed, so vast does the unfolding of truth become that our minds are staggered by the greatness of it all! We seem like men walking from continent to continent through the depths of the mighty ocean. It is the wisdom of our gracious Father in heaven to hide certain truth from us in our infancy that He might cause their rays to shine more gloriously upon us in his appointed time. By this shall all men learn that the Omnipresent is with us even in the darkness and shadow of death. Should we make our bed in hell, He is there, and while we are ascending into heaven. He is there. How wonderful are Thy works, O Lord, and Thy ways past finding out!

There are many thousands of people who do not like to believe that all things are of God. 2 Cor. 5:18 They much prefer to believe, as the harlot system has taught them, that in the beginning God made man perfect. Then Satan came in and destroyed the work of God's hands and so degraded the darling of His creation that the Lord Almighty Himself was hard put to the test to discover some way to rescue the man He had made from the clutches of the devil. Those who hold this view often do so because they imagine that to hold any other view would make God responsible for the transgression and fall of the man He had made, and, not knowing that "through death He would destroy the power of death," they think that such a thing could not be. They prefer to believe that the almighty, omniscient, and omnipresent God was in some manner tricked by a creature vastly inferior in wisdom and power, making this inferior creature responsible for man's fall, instead of believing that "all things are of God." They prefer to believe that God's will can be thwarted and disannulled, but, if this be so, how then are we to believe the scripture which plainly tells us that "the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him who hath subjected the same in hope?" Rom. 8:20 If you prefer to believe that God's will was thwarted by Satan in the Garden of Eden, then I ask if you have ever considered the jeopardy into which such doctrine would lead you. If God's will could be thwarted even once, could it not be thwarted again? If Satan was able to enter the Garden of Eden in spite of God's omnipresence and regardless of His omnipotence, may he not in some like manner enter that paradise which is yet to come? If Satan was able to get the better of God once, should it be thought impossible that he may do so again, for God is not more omnipotent now that he was in the Garden of Eden? You see where all such reasoning leads you. Indeed, it jeopardizes our whole future, making our foundation shaky, uncertain, and disappointing. If, on the other hand, you see the fall of man as part of the plan of creation, and the redemption of man as also an integral part of the creation, then all the many pieces of the puzzle begin to fall into the proper place to form the master portrait showing how man comes into the image of God. Then and only then do our rejoicing minds grasp the truth that all things, absolutely all things, are of God. Then with Paul we breathe the words, "For though there be that are called gods, whether in heaven or in earth... but to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in Him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we in him. Howbeit there is not in every man that knowledge..." I Cor. 8:5-7 We should be quick to remember that predestination with all its intricacies was established before the ages began, and for that reason the apostle says that by it we obtained our inheritance in Christ, "Being predestined according to the purpose of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will." Eph. 1:11

I would not be surprised if some of the compatriots of Isaiah may have thought he was speaking blasphemy when by the Holy Spirit he said, "I form the light, and create darkness: I make peace, and create evil. I the Lord do till these things." Isa. 45:7 Evil is not always sin, you know. War is evil and famine is evil, and the Lord sends them both. Why should puny man attempt to shield God from the responsibility He Himself has taken? If He says He creates peace, then believe Him. If He says He creates evil, then believe that, too. Do you remember how they brought the blind man to Jesus, and, as the poor fellow stood there, the disciples said to Jesus, "Master, who did sin, this man or his parents, that he should be born blind?" Jesus replied, "Neither hath this man sinned, nor his parents: but that the works of God should be made manifest in him." John 9:2-3 So through the evil of blindness the glory of God was manifested in the end. Did not the Lord say to Pharaoh, that wicked man of rebellion against all that was of God, "Even for this same purpose have I raised thee, that I might show my power in thee, and that My name might be declared throughout all the earth?"

Rom. 9:17 The infinite wisdom of God's mind cannot be ascertained by these carnal little heads of ours. We must banish our childish theology and bring our minds into harmony with the mind of Christ. We must begin to peer through the mighty telescope of God's wisdom as it looks through the tragedy of the fall to the glories of the ages to come when every creature which is in heaven and on earth under the earth and such as are in the sea shall be heard, saying, "Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever." Rev. 5:13

The things we have stated above, though at first seemingly incredible and difficult to believe because of the traditions of the past, become clear and understandable the moment we see that the fall of man is part of the work of creation. How clearly we can see that the work of creation is still in progress as we consider the words of Peter, who comforted the suffering saints with these words: "Wherefore let them that suffer according to the will of God commit the keeping of their souls to Him in well doing, as unto a faithful Creator." 1 Pet. 4:19 I suppose we have often read this beautiful passage, but missed the true significance of what He said. Peter did not lack the knowledge that our redemption is part and parcel of the work of creation, and with this knowledge he exhorts all who are walking through difficult places of trial to commit the keeping of their souls to Him as unto a faithful Creator. He is our Creator now just as surely as He was in the beginning. If any man be in Christ, he is a new creation, the work of the Creator. Think it not strange that the work of creation still continues; yea, it will continue until every son of Adam has come into the image of God.

It is very necessary that we be able to see that the new creation comes forth out of the old. The same body that was nailed to the accursed tree is the body that came forth from the tomb and ascended into heaven. The same little body that lies in the cradle is the body that will lie in the tomb, and the body that lies in the tomb is the body that will rise transformed and incorruptible in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye at the resurrection of the just. The first man is of the earth earthy; the second man is the Lord from heaven. "Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual." 1 Cor. 15:46 "It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption: it is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power; it is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body." 1 Cor. 15:42-44 abolishing the first creation. He is creating it! He is changing it! He is transforming it just as He decreed when He announced the plan, "Let us make man in our image and after our likeness." The first step was to make the man from the lowly dust. The next step was to let him fall and through transgression to lower him into the realm of death that he might learn obedience by the things he suffered and that through death he might destroy both death and him who had the power of it. For this reason it is written, "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death."

REDEMPTION

Redemption is the third step in the creation of man in God's image. The natural mind with all its human understanding is a barren wilderness. "The things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God." I Cor. 2:11
The more the natural man tries to probe into spiritual mysteries the more mysterious they become until the human mind becomes a veritable bog of misunderstanding and an ugly quagmire of unbelief. The investigations of the natural mind are responsible for all the unbelief and self-will in the world today. Man cannot understand God; therefore he vainly declares, "There is no God." The human mind cannot comprehend the mysteries of creation; therefore it tries to persuade itself that creation is not creation at all, but a process of evolution, stretching out over untold billions of years, finally evolving into what we now see today. The proponents of this ridiculous theory do not really try to explain why creation is not evolving now, nor do they attempt to explain why there are no intermediate stages with us now.

I always revel in the words of Mr. Etheridge, a foremost expert of the vast British Museum of Natural History, who, when asked by Professor Post, a scientific gentleman from Syria, to show him in that great museum some of the proofs of Darwin's theory of evolution, astonished his visitor by replying, "In all this great museum there is not a particle of evidence of transmutation of species. It is not founded on observation and facts. All the talk of the antiquity of man is of the same value. There is no such thing as fossil man. I have read all their books and they make no impression. This museum is full of proofs of the utter falsity of such views."

The true reason why men try so hard to rule God out of creation, if not out of existence, is found in the words of the apostle Paul, who wrote, "Even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind, to do those things which are not convenient." Rom. 1:28
The universities and pulpits of the land are today filled with professors who are of this sort, men with reprobate minds scoffing at God, scoffing at His power of creation and substituting their own vain theories, which in the end will do naught but bring the judgment of God upon them. The scripture is still in the Bible and it still remains the word of God, warning these perverted unbelievers that they shall give an account to God on the Day of Judgment for every idle word they have spoken. Matt. 12:36 They will have the whole terrible period of the second death to repent of their blasphemies, and the awful refining power of the lake of fire to purge them of their wickedness until they, like all others in heaven, on earth, and under the earth, bow the knee to confess to the glory of God that Christ is both Lord of all and the Creator of all.

The readers of this message will surely be aware that in the minds of most people the work of redemption had nothing whatsoever to do with the work of creation. The general opinion is that God created man in His own image and after His likeness, but Satan slipped in unnoticed by the omnipresent One and with one cunning act of deception destroyed the very foundation of God's beautiful plan, casting the broken pieces at His feet. Then they picture the almighty God, as though in some form of panic, holding a hasty conference with the angels in heaven to devise a scheme whereby He might partially redeem the awful situation and at least save some of the broken pieces from eternal destruction, even though the greater mass of His creation must be hopelessly lost forever. I do not think I am overemphasizing the utter stupidity of this position - not by one hair's breadth - even though I may be guilty of oversimplifying it. Needless to say, I do not believe these jejune claims and I make all haste to reject them entirely. That one attribute of God's omnipresence gives the lie to all such fallacy, not to mention God's omnipotence and the inscrutable glory of His omniscience.

Redemption is not an afterthought of God by which He hopes to salvage a few broken bits of His creation. Redemption is part and parcel of the plan of creation. If the fall of man is part of the creation, as we have proved it to be, then the redemption of the fallen creation must also be part of the same plan that issued forth from the fathomless depths of His inscrutable mind. If Paul was speaking the truth when he wrote, "The creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him (or by the will of Him) who subjected the same in hope," then the fall of man must certainly be part of the plan of the Creator. Since this is so, we need not be amazed to find that redemption is no afterthought of God, but part of the original plan. Jesus Christ is the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world. Rev. 13:8 For what possible purpose was the blessed redemptive Lamb slain before the world began if redemption itself were not part of the plan of creation? We love to quote John 3:16. It is possibly the best, known verse in all the Bible. Yet what does it tell us when it says, "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son?" Does not Rev. 13:8 make it very plain that the actual giving of that Son was before the world began and before the garden was planted eastward in Eden? Certainly the agonies of the cross were endured only two thousand years ago, but the actual giving of the redemptive Lamb took place before the world began. It was then, before the world began, He laid aside His glory. (See John 17:5). God does not dwell in the realm of time. He inhabits the eternal realm; therefore He speaks of things, which to us as yet are not as though they were things of the past, for with Him they are already accomplished.

We humans are always saying silly things! How often we recite the story of our salvation in the terms of happenstance! We happened to read a certain tract. We happened to listen to a certain preacher, or we happened to be passing by and heard a certain man preach the gospel. Indeed, all these things played their part in the plan of our personal redemption, but be it known to everyone that they did not merely happen. All such things are ordained before the world began. There is a time to be born, and there is also a time to be born again, and, when that time comes, all the powers of evil cannot let or hinder it in any way.

Hear what the scripture says about the choice of God's saints, and it will be very clear that there is nothing left to chance or happenstance. "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ: according as He hath chosen us in Him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before Him in love: having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to Himself, according to the good pleasure of His will." Eph. 1:3-5. Predestination goes hand in hand with foreknowledge, and our being called unto God at any particular time is the result of these. Thus it reads, "Whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son... Whom He did predestinate, them He also called: and whom He called, them He also justified: and whom He justified, them He also glorified." Rom. 8:29-30 Peter, according to the wisdom given to him, wrote to tell us, "Ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers, but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot: who was verily foreordained before the foundation of the world, but was manifest in these last times for you." 1 Pet, 1:18-20 Thus from these scriptures it is clear that the plan of redemption was laid out in its fulness before ever creation began. It was not completed just in case man should fall, but because the fall of man and His redemption from sin was part of the process by which he would come into God's image and live in the eternal realm as a creation of experience and knowledge, completely redeemed, completely purified, completely justified, and completely incapable of sin forever more. Is it any wonder that Paul, exulting in such a plan as this, cried out in ecstasy, "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth. Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea rather, is risen again..." Rom. 8:33, 34

Redemption and creation walk hand in hand through all the pilgrim journey from Eden to the new heaven and the new earth. Christ is undoubtedly the redeemer; and so it is written, "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creation." Is that not creation? Is not Paul here connecting the new creation with redemption? Can there be any doubt about that? Is not this new creation the completion of the original creation, as Paul taught by saying, "That was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual?" 1 Cor. 15:46. And again, "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order..." 1 Cor. 15:22-23 The scripture is very explicit in saying that we are God's workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them. Eph. 2:10

"...He which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ." Phil. 1:6 If I understand this scripture correctly, Paul is telling us that the work of creation is by no means finished, but that good work is going on in us right now during all our daily struggles, and it will continue to progress not only throughout our lives in this age, but right up until the day of Jesus Christ. Again Paul says, "Who shall also confirm you unto the end, that ye may be blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ." 1 Cor. 1:8 Briefly stated, the day of Christ is the day of His coming, but we will not try to consider that now. Our main thought is that this creative work, this being brought into the image of God, continues from the gates of Eden to the gates of Paradise. It includes in one that which is of the earth earthy and that which is at last the Lord from heaven.

It will be a great blessing to every saint of God when he sees by the Holy Spirit that, just as surely as our creation in the first Adam was a creative act of God, so our creation in Christ, the last Adam, is a creative act of God. God the Father is sovereign in each of them. There can be no question about it. The useless and slavish tradition concerning man's free will is a myth, concocted by the carnal mind. Our minds are greatly enlightened when we understand that we are God's workmanship, and not our own. We are created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them. We are God's workmanship, and He will have a desire to the work of His own hands. He doeth His will in the army of heaven and among the inhabitants of the earth, and none can stay His hand or say unto Him, "What doest Thou?" See Dan. 4:34-35 "The Lord of hosts hath sworn, saying, Surely as I have thought, so shall it come to pass; and as I have purposed, so shall it stand... For the Lord of hosts hath purposed, and who shall disannul it? And His hand is stretched out, and who shall turn his back?" Isa. 14:24,27

I do not hesitate to say to the glory of our almighty God that all things are of Him. When He uttered the command, "Let us make man in our image and after our likeness," His searching eye beheld all the work of His hands from the original natural creation through the Garden of Eden, the temptation, the transgression, the valley of the shadow of death, the great redemption, and the resurrection to the transformation and final presenting to Himself of a glorious church without spot or wrinkle or any such thing, but holy and without blemish. So has the Spirit in one great prophetic sweep explained: "Whom he did foreknow. He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the firstborn among many brethren. Moreover whom He did predestinate, them He also called: and whom He called, them He also justified: and whom He justified, them He also glorified." Rom. 8:29-30 If any passage of scripture every traced the history of man from his original creation to his glorification in the image of God, surely this is that scripture. And, when at last the work of creating man in God's image is completed, then and then only will commence that latter part of the great edict - "Let them have dominion." I know not how many ages will roll past before all is complete, but I suppose that eternity itself will not be too long to complete the restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began.

"The same day came to Him the Sadducees, which say there is no resurrection, and asked Him, saying, Master, Moses said, If a man die, having no children, his brother shall marry his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother. Now there were with us seven brethren: and the first, when he had married a wife, deceased, and having no issue, left his wife unto his brother. Likewise the second also, and the third, unto the seventh. And last of all the woman died also. Therefore in the resurrection whose wife shall she be of the seven? For they all had her. Jesus answered and said unto them, Ye do err, not knowing the scriptures, nor the power of God. For in the resurrection they neither marry nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God in heaven." Matt. 22:23-30

The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them because they are spiritually discerned. We poor human beings are forever building and fortifying our doctrinal viewpoints upon the basis of the little we know, the emptiness of our spiritual understanding. I suppose if things were judged only on the shaky ground of human understanding then our conclusions would sometimes be right, but that, too, is doubtful. The theologians of our day certainly had their counterpart in the Sadducees and Pharisees of long ago. These men, because of their human reasoning and their carnal deductions, had completely discarded any hope of a resurrection upon the basis of the impossibility and the impracticability of the belief that God could raise the dead. As far as they were concerned, there were no holes in the garment of their theology, and the case they had built against the possibility of a literal resurrection was to their earthly minds like bullet-proof armor.
Knowing therefore that Jesus taught the resurrection of the dead and that He Himself had claimed to be the resurrection, they confidently approached Him with what seemed to them an unanswerable question, as stated in the passage we have just quoted above. First they rehearsed the command of Moses concerning the obligation placed upon a man under the law to raise up seed to his brother. Then they averred how, in obedience to this command, all seven brothers in succession had married the oft-widowed woman, but all in turn had failed to raise up seed unto their brother. Therefore, since none of them had more claim upon her than the other, whose wife would she be in the resurrection? To their natural minds this seemed to be an indisputable case against the hope of any future resurrection, but their faulty, human deductions, like so many reasonings of men, falls far short in understanding, for the weakness of God is stronger than man and the foolishness of God is wiser than man. Therefore, replying to their question, our Lord said, "You do greatly err." "To err is human," some sage has said, and no truer word was ever spoken. Jesus faithfully showed them that their particular error was based upon two cardinal points. Firstly, they erred because they did not know the scripture; secondly, they erred because they did not know and understand the power of God. Upon this basis of wisdom and power the difficulty that to them had seemed insurmountable was explained with the greatest simplicity, "For" said Jesus, "in the resurrection they neither marry nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God in heaven." Here He shows how the power of God is interjected into the realm of the impossible. With God all things are possible simply because He understands His own purpose and creation, all things being designed to carry out His blessed will.

After having explained how the resurrection is accomplished by the power of God, Jesus proceeded to demonstrate to them how obscure texts of scripture, that pass completely unnoticed by the many who read, spring into newness of life, bringing light and understanding from their darkness and obscurity, when the Holy Spirit breathes His breath upon them. "Have ye not read that which was spoken unto you by God," He questioned, "saying, I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob? God is not the God of the dead, but of the living." Matt. 22:31-32 When the multitude heard this, they were astonished at His doctrine. How wonderful was this answer of truth from the scripture! If you will read the remainder of the chapter, you will clearly see how such seemingly obscure passages of truth open whole realms of spiritual understanding to every seeking and searching heart.

Though Jesus with masterful skill proved beyond any doubt that there would be a resurrection of the dead, we need not imagine that He convinced these doubting Sadducees nor were they converted from their error. They continued just as stubborn as they had ever been, still insisting that there could be no resurrection, neither angel nor spirit. Surely these men must have been well nigh atheists. In any case they were still active and still resisting the truth when Paul, in danger from the multitude, knowing the crowd was partly Pharisees and partly Sadducees, cried out in a word of wisdom that saved his life, "I am a Pharisee... of the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question." Acts 23:6 This statement caused such dissension between them that he had to be rescued from them. "Ye therefore do greatly err." Mark 12:27 Christianity is floundering in ever increasing error, very largely because God's people are lacking in these two necessary things, spoken of by Jesus Christ: first, not knowing the scriptures, and, second, not knowing the power of God. Whenever you find two scriptures that seem to set forth conflicting views, there is always a simple explanation, and, if we will diligently enquire of the Lord, He will give us a definite answer. Human understanding is almost always prone to seize upon one side of a statement and will cling to that with the grip of death, refusing to even investigate or seek the wisdom of God to harmonize the truth. Worldly wise men are forever saying that the Bible contradicts itself. They show, for example, how the four evangelists each give a different account of the superscription that was written in Greek and Latin and Hebrew upon the cross of Jesus. It is true, of course that the accounts do differ. Matthew says the writing was, "This is Jesus, the King of the Jews," while Mark says, "The King of the Jews." Luke says, "This is the King of the Jews," and John says, "Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews." Certainly one might smugly say that these seeming differences prove there was no inspiration in these four statements, but the truth of the matter is simply that the whole Bible, unlike all other books, is written upon the principle of line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little. Therefore, when you add all the parts together, you have the complete story as it reads in full, "This is Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews." Each man was telling the part which impressed him most and which was most useful to the people to whom he wrote. Have you ever known a case where two people gave an identical account of an accident, an earthquake, or a fire? Certainly not! They always emphasize the incident that impressed them most while other important happenings passed almost unnoticed. It is not until all the parts are added together that we have a true understanding of what really happened.

The further removed I am from the Babylon system, and by this I definitely mean the existing church system with all its vaunted orthodoxy, the more I am convinced that for the most part all its teachings are inside out, upside down, and backward. The systems place the responsibility for the fall of man squarely on the shoulders of man. The Bible places the responsibility for the fall squarely on the shoulders of the Creator, as is so clearly stated in the words of inspiration we have frequently quoted: "The creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him (God) who hath subjected the same in hope." Rom. 8:20 There is an abundance of scripture throughout the word of God that clearly demonstrates that we are God's workmanship, that the Lord has a desire to the work of His hands, that He who has begun a good work in us will perform it unto the day of Christ, that the Lamb of God was slain before the foundation of the word, and that every preparation was made by the Creator for the completion of His work - and this not only for a few, but for the whole mass of mankind. It is written, "Therefore as by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life. For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous." Rom. 5:18-19

We must repeat and reiterate with all the emphasis possible that man is God's workmanship. We must never for a moment lose sight of the words of the original edict, "Let us make man in our image and after our likeness." We must never entertain the damning doubt that would lead us to imagine that the immutable Lord has changed His original plan or His purpose, but we must embrace with much certainty the indisputable truth that everything that has transpired from Eden until now and everything that will transpire in the days yet to come has in the wisdom of God been planned for the carrying out of His original intention to make man in His own image and likeness. Therefore all things are working together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purpose, even as the scripture has plainly declared. Rom. 8:28

Let us henceforth begin to see things as God sees them. Let us stand with Him in the height of His holy mountain, viewing the end from the beginning. Say not that He who has placed us in the furnace of affliction has done so in wrath to destroy us, for such vain thought is not the truth. Yield yourself rather unto Him as unto a faithful Creator. "Remember the former things of old: for I am God, and there is none else; I am God, and there is none like Me, declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all My pleasure." Isa.46:9-10

When for the first time in your life the Holy Spirit begins to reveal the immutable plan of God, a vast transforming change commences to take place in your understanding. The rough places become smooth. The difficult, mysterious things become simple, as the blind are led by a way which they knew not. Recently a trivial incident occurred that taught me afresh how different things appear when we see them through the eyes of God. There is a large sport shop in our town, which is always busy and alive with customers. One day I walked into this store, and for once it was empty of patrons and I was the only customer. The owner, a Jew by nation, whom I have known for twenty-five years, engaged me in conversation concerning the recent edict of the Roman church which exonerated the Jews from responsibility for the crucifixion of Christ. A few days ago, he told me, a certain man had come into his store and said, "Well, - I suppose you feel good now that the Pope has decided you are not guilty of crucifying Christ!" To this my friend replied, "It doesn't make any difference to me. All the harm is done now." I could not help but feel some indignation because of the blindness and stupidity of the man's statement, and so I replied, "It is stupidity to blame the Jews for crucifying Christ. Listen to what the scripture says." "And when they heard that, they lifted up their voices to God with one accord, and said, Lord, thou art God, which hast made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all that in them is: who by the mouth of Thy servant David hast said, Why did the heathen rage, and the people imagine vain things? The kings of the earth stood up, and the rulers were gathered together against the Lord, and against His Christ. For of a truth against Thy holy child Jesus, whom Thou hast anointed, both Herod and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel, were gathered together, for to do whatsoever Thy hand and Thy counsel determined before to be done." Acts 4:24-28 When I had ended the quotation, I noticed his eyes were moist, and he said with conviction, "It seems as though it was pre-determined, doesn't it?" "Yes," I replied, "that is exactly the way it is."
O the grief and frustration we encounter by not knowing that God is supreme and that He doeth all His will in the army of heaven! There is no one who can withstand Him or alter His course! All things were created by Him, and for His will they are and were created. "I form the light, and create darkness: I make peace, and create evil. I the Lord do all these things." Isa. 45:7 He worketh all things after the counsel of His will and, in doing so, He is slowly but surely bringing to pass His original edict, "Let us make man in our image." "The Lord of hosts has sworn, saying, Surely as I have thought, so shall it come to pass; and as I have purposed, so shall it stand: For the Lord of hosts has purposed, and who shall disannul it? And His hand is stretched out, and who shall turn it back?" Isa. 14:24, 27

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS

When Peter stood up to preach before the wondering crowd who were eye witnesses of the healing of the lame man at the beautiful gate of the temple, he told his hearers in no uncertain tones, "Ye denied the Holy One and the Just, and desired a murderer to be granted unto you; and killed the Prince of life, whom God hath raised from the dead..." Acts 3:14-15 But, after having said this, he consoled them with these wonderful words: "And now, brethren, I wot that through ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers. But those things, which God before had showed by the mouth of all His prophets, that Christ should suffer, He hath so fulfilled. Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; and He shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: Whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began." Acts 3:17-21 Peter's statement speaks clearly of the times of the restitution of all things. Restitution, according to the best English usage, means the act of restoring something that has been taken away or lost; the act of making good or rendering an equivalent as for loss or injury. (Funk and Wagnall's Dictionary) This is in exact harmony with the Greek work temuriak, which means restoration.

Some will no doubt reply to this by stating, as many do, that Peter was not promising that God would restore everything, but only those things of which the prophets had spoken. I wish, however, to show as clearly as possible that the grammatical construction of this sentence declares the exact opposite to be the truth. I mean that Peter was actually saying that all the prophets from the beginning of the world had prophesied that there would be a restoration of all things and that the restoration would indeed be universal and would include all things. You will notice that in the scripture quoted (Acts 3:21, King James Version) there is a comma after the word things. This comma indicates that the clause following - "which God hath spoken by the mouth of His holy prophets since the world began" - is what is known as a nonrestrictive clause. A nonrestrictive clause is one, which can be omitted without changing or destroying the meaning of the principal clause or main statement. (See Mastering Effective English by Tressler-Lewis, Revised Edition, Pages 545-546.) It simply adds further information. Now read the scripture, omitting the clause in question, and you will find the meaning is clearly stated and nothing of the sense is destroyed. If this clause were modifying the word things, it would be restrictive and no comma would be used.

To this agree the words of many scholarly translators, a few of whom I will quote here for the benefit and understanding of all who read.

"That the Lord may send Jesus, your long-decreed Christ, who must be kept in heaven till the period of the great Restoration. Ages ago God spoke of this by the lips of His holy prophets." Moffatt

"Heaven must receive Him until those times of which God has spoken from the earliest ages through the lips of His holy prophets - the times of the restitution of all things." Weymouth

"He must remain in heaven till the time for the universal reformation of which God told in ancient times by the lips of His holy prophets." Goodspeed

"Whom it behooveth heaven, indeed, to receive till times of a restitution of all things, which God spake through the mouth of all His holy prophets from the age." Young's literal.

TREASURES OF TRUTH, Volume 28, Creation, Redemption, and Restitution of All Things [George R. Hawtin] ~ BOOK

We could easily fill the page with the words of many other translators, but I think the above is sufficient to testify that this is the true meaning of the words of Peter and that he was teaching us and all who have ears to hear the Spirit's voice that there is coming a time of universal restitution and reconciliation in which all things will be restored, whether they be things in heaven, things in earth, or things under the earth.

It should be very evident to us all that, if the scripture says that all the prophets spoke of the restitution of all things, then there should be some evidence that they did. Though we have neither space nor ability to peruse all the inspired teaching of the prophets concerning that coming age of blessedness and restoration, it is time well spent to notice it at least in part. Isaiah above all others seems to have been given the great prophecies of restoration and they are so extensive that they seem to touch life and creation in every phase. To me it is a most significant and wonderful thing to notice how the prophets, while prophesying terrible doom on the unbelieving and rebellious people, suddenly break off their message to revel in the coming glory. A good example of this is found in the thirty-ninth chapter of Isaiah, in which the prophet tells of Judah's coming captivity in Babylon. Then he breaks forth with these revealing words of consolation: "Comfort ye, comfort ye My people, saith your God. Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her, that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned: for she hath received of the Lord's hand double for all her sins. The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God. Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill made low: and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain: and the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." Isa. 40:1-5

"The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them; and the desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose. It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice even with joy and singing: the glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it, and the excellency of Carmel and Sharon, they shall see the glory of the Lord, and the excellency of our God. Strengthen ye the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees. Say to them that are of a fearful heart, Be strong, fear not: behold, your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompense; He will come and save you. Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing: for in the wilderness shall waters break out, and streams in the desert. And the parched ground shall become a pool, and the thirsty land springs of water: in the habitation of dragons, where each lay, shall be grass with reeds and rushes." Isa. 35:1-7 With many such statements of restoration and restitution does Isaiah picture the glory of those coming times as he speaks of the restoration of nations, of Israelites, of Gentiles, of rugged land and barren places as well as wonderful physical restoration, which undoubtedly prefigures the coming state of incorruption and immortality.

Surely Daniel was carried in spirit far into the times of restoration when he said, "I saw in the night visions, and, behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought Him near before Him. And there was given Him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve Him: His dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and His kingdom that which shall not be destroyed." Dan. 7:13-14

Great as are these prophecies, they are limited by man's ability or inability to understand them. Like so many statements of scripture, they are really only shadows of things to come. See Col. 2:17 where Paul shows that meat and drink, holy days, new moons and Sabbaths are in reality shadows of things to come. A shadow is caused when a body or some object obscures the light. It is not the shadow that is important, but the body that made the shadow. That is why Paul says here that new moons and feasts and holy days are shadows, but the body is Christ. All these things foreshadow the day when He will be all and in all, and when He will be our Sabbath of rest, our holy day and our meat and drink.

We have already noted how the simple statement of Gen. 1:26 - "Let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth" - is really a foreshadowing of the day when God shall put all things under the feet of man, who is being created in His own image. It seems only normal that the prophets of the Old Testament were largely confined to prophecies concerning Israel and her coming restoration, yet their prophecies reach out to the Gentile nations and proclaim that all flesh shall see the glory of the Lord. Wonderful and glorious as are the prophecies and shadows of the Old Testament, it is not until we begin to see the vastly extended and infinitely brighter light of the New Testament that the picture of the complete reconciliation of the universe begins to unfold before our wondering eyes.

The inability of God's people to understand and accept the restitution of all things, which was spoken of by all the prophets since the world began, may be traced to three great faults in our traditional teaching. Firstly, very, very few people are familiar with the truth that there is a coming age which the Bible names the dispensation of the fullness of times (Eph. 1:10), and that that age above all others has been specially set aside for the work of reconciling all things in heaven and in earth and bringing all things into Christ. The age, as I will point out presently, is the age of the ages. It is the greatest age of all ages and is the time in which the Almighty God brings to completion the unfailing word spoken before time began, “Let us make man in our image and after our likeness.” A bruised reed shall He not break, and the smoking flax shall he not quench: He shall bring forth judgment unto truth. He shall not fail nor be discouraged, till He have set judgment in the earth: and the isles shall wait for His law.” Isa. 42:3-4 Secondly, God's people fail to see the final restitution of all things because they also fail to see the greatness of the work of Christ and the all-inclusive faith which God the Father has in that marvelous work of redemption. Thirdly, and perhaps most important of all, is the failure of God's people to see that all things are of God, that He is working all things according to the counsel of His own will. Nothing has ever gone wrong with the merciful purpose of God. Once these three truths become clear to the spiritual mind of a devout child of God, then the mysteries of the ages disperse like mists before the rising sun and all the parts of the puzzle begin to fall into their appointed place to form a perfect blueprint of the progression of God's purpose through the ages.

Though I have dealt with this third proposition many times in the past, and more especially in my book According to the Purpose (available without cost upon request), because of its great importance we shall consider it briefly in these pages also. When we are considering the works of God, we must reverently call to mind that we are not dealing with one whose power and might is only slightly greater than our own. God is not such an one as ourselves. "Know ye that the Lord He is God: it is He that hath made us, and not we ourselves. We are His people and the sheep of His pasture." Psa. 100:3 The Lord He is God! He hath set His throne in the heavens and His kingdom ruleth over all. When we are speaking of God, we are not speaking of an angel, or a seraphim, glorious in wisdom and knowledge as such may be, but we are speaking of Him who created such celestial beings as these, granting them some small measure of His own wisdom and power. We are speaking of Him who is omnipotent, omniscient, immutable, omnipresent, eternal, full of loving kindness and tender mercies, who will not always chide nor be angry forever. He is the one who sees the end from the beginning.

Yea, much greater still, He is the end and He is the beginning. He it is whose inscrutable wisdom laid the foundations of the earth and hung it upon nothing. Job 26:7 He is the Father of lights. With Him there is no variableness, neither shadow of turning. By His own will begat He us that we should be a kind of firstfruits of His creatures. And we know very well that firstfruits is an assurance of an abundant harvest to come.

Not only did He lay the foundation of the earth in wisdom but He ordained the ages in His understanding, appointing to each age some particular blessedness to be fulfilled in its order as the divine intention progressed. (This was pointed out in the article The Six Water Pots of Stone, available upon request.) He, who in wisdom laid the foundation of the earth, is almighty in His power and ability to carry out the glory of His own purpose. No power in the universe can let or hinder Him. Satan has no power at all except by divine consent and permission, as may be clearly seen in the story of God's dealings with Job. When Satan was permitted by the Lord to tempt Job and destroy all that pertained to him, it was for Job's own betterment and eternal good this was done, and I do not think I am overstepping or demanding too much of the type when I say that the whole story of Job becomes an allegory of the entire human family, whom God in His wisdom has lowered into the realms of death to be cruelly afflicted of the devil. From his hand we suffer great pain and tribulation through our lack of understanding, but, when calamity has been completed and every earthly stronghold and carnal argument has vanished away, then comes the revelation of God Himself and of His perfect will; and, following that, the restitution of all things, yea, double all things. Job 42:10 "I have heard of Thee by the hearing of the ear;" cried Job, "but now mine eye seeth Thee. Wherefore I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes." Job. 42:5-6 And so shall it be with all men and all their frail arguments in the end. They will at last see the Lord and, seeing Him and understanding His purpose, they will abhor the flesh and the world and themselves and will repent. Then from the coldness of their death and the darkness of their understanding shall come light and wisdom and truth, that the latter end may be much more glorious than it was in Eden in the beginning.

Jesus is all this poor world needs today.
Blindly they strive, for sin darkens the way.
O, to draw back the grim curtains of night!
One glimpse of Jesus and all will be bright.

How can He who is omniscient, omnipotent, and immutable ever fail in His purpose? Why, my brother, my sister, it is blasphemous to imagine that such a thing could possibly be!

I do not believe that the Bible anywhere teaches that man is a free moral agent. That teaching is a figment of the imagination of the harlot church system. In fact, the Bible teaches the exact opposite. It tells us, "It is not of him that willeth or of him that runneth, but of God that showeth mercy." Rom. 9:16 Someone will ask, "Will God save men eventually against their will?" The answer is! He will have no need to do that, for all men will be one hundred percent willing when God reveals Himself to them. Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. We have only to consider the case of Saul of Tarsus to understand the miraculous power of the Lord to change the leopard's spots and melt the heart of stone. No man was ever more hateful toward Christ than was Saul of Tarsus, yet, when his turn came to see the light, he changed in an instant, crying out in fear and trembling and with bitter repentance, "Who art Thou, Lord?" and "What wilt Thou have me to do?" It is God that controls the will, and He turns the hearts of mighty and rebellious kings as easily as He turns the water courses. Even in the case of Pharaoh the Lord Himself took the responsibility for the hardening of his heart. Had He not done so, Pharaoh would have yielded long before he did. The truth is that Pharaoh's hard heart was not hard enough to accomplish the difficult task the Lord had appointed for him, so the Lord undertook to harden his heart on six occasions until all His plan and will was accomplished through him.

There is an overwhelming desire in my heart that God's dear people might know that God is God, glorious in power, fearful in praises, doing wonders. I long with a great longing that His people will repent of ever having believed the insipid and useless traditions that make the almighty God seem to be a victim of the will of His own creation. It is my opinion that most of the theology of the church system is insipid humbug that seeks to render the almighty God impotent by robbing Him of His omnipotence. It teaches that God gave His Son that all the world through Him might be saved and then renders His sacrifice hopeless by leaving ninety-nine percent of all His creatures in the hands of the devil for all eternity. Such a doctrine as that belittles the power and wisdom of God and does despite to the Spirit of grace, the atoning work of Christ, and the precious blood that He shed so that the world through Him might be saved.

Now our second proposition was that Christians fail to see the restitution of all things because they fail to see the greatness of the work of Christ. The apostle John remarked that, if all the books were written that should be written, the world itself would not contain them. Therefore we know before we start that it would be completely impossible to do more than probe the fringes of the greatness and completeness of the work of Christ, and to exhaust that ocean of its truth is beyond the power of even the most inspired pen. Nevertheless, there are one or two points, which should be made clear. These, I regret to say, I have never seen mentioned by sermon or writing in all the years of my life.

The book of Romans is a most remarkable book, and I think I cannot be far astray in saying that all Paul's other epistles are sermons enlarging on texts from this book. This remarkable book shows the progression of the plan of God from Alpha to Omega, from beginning to end, from Eden to Eden, from paradise lost to paradise regained, and from the fall of man in the beginning to the manifestation of the sons of God in the end. Chapter one brings the whole world under condemnation. Chapter two condemns the Jew. Chapter three shows how both Jews and Gentiles are justified only by faith, and chapter four proves that this is so.
five, with its key expression "much more" repeated five times, shows with the greatest possible clearness that everything that was lost in Adam has been regained, and much more, in Christ, as the writer so clearly states in verse 18: "Therefore as by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life." Chapter six manifests the complete identity of the believer with Jesus Christ in death, burial, and resurrection life. Chapter seven sees the believer delivered from the power of the carnal nature. Chapter eight is the very heart of the whole epistle — so much so that I am tempted to say that it is the heart of the whole Bible and the very heart of all Christian experience from the time the believer begins to walk in the Spirit until he emerges as a manifested son of God, inseparable from Jesus Christ. We do not have space here to mention the themes of the remaining eight chapters, but we trust this brief synopsis may aid us in our understanding of the whole.

Now after Paul, in chapters one and two, has brought all mankind under condemnation and the guilt of sin, he proceeds to unfold God's one true method of justification. Having said in chapter three, verse 20, "Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in His sight, for by the law is the knowledge of sin," he says in verses 24, 25, and 26, "Being justified freely by His grace through the redemption that is in Christ; whom God has set forth to be a propitiation through faith in His blood, to declare His righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God; to declare, I say, at this time His righteousness: that He might be just, and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus." The word propitiate means to appease, to soothe, and to conciliate. When Paul says, therefore, that God has set forth Christ to be a propitiation, the great question that must be answered is this: Whom is Christ propitiating? Whom is He appeasing? Whom is He soothing? Whom is He conciliating? Is this propitiation for His benefit? Or is it for the sinner's benefit? Is God trying to conciliate Himself or is He conciliating the sinner? You know as well as I do that the church system has always erroneously taught that it is God who must be propitiated, conciliated and soothed, but I want you to know that such teaching is utter rubbish and the brashest sort of nonsense. It springs from that Romish tradition that likens God the Father to a fearful and offended despot, spoiling for the blood of the offenders, and it makes Christ to be the one who pleads with God on behalf of the victim until the Father is consoled and conciliated. The following words from a hymn show how deeply engrained this error really is:

"Five bleeding wounds He bears Received on Calvary;
They pour effectual prayers, They strongly plead for me.
Forgive him, O forgive, they cry,
Nor let the ransomed sinner die."
"The Father hears Him pray, His dear anointed One:
He cannot turn away The presence of His son.
"My God is reconciled;
His pardoning voice I hear," etc.

The opposite of all this is the truth. It was God the Father who so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son. He did not give that Son as a propitiation for Himself or to appease His own wrath. He gave Him for you and He gave Him for me. He did not die that I might live, as is so commonly taught. He died that He might give His life to me. And to this truth the scripture endlessly attests. All sermons and songs that picture God as a God of wrath who must be appeased by the cruel death and bloody sweat of His Son are heathenish and should be discarded from our shelves, because they form the wrong picture entirely.

God hath set forth His Son, Jesus Christ, to be a propitiation through faith in His blood. The idea that God would set forth His Son to propitiate and appease Himself is exceedingly absurd. There is not one scintilla of evidence in all the Bible that would hint that God would ever need to be reconciled to man. It is man who needs to be reconciled, not God. It is man who needs to be propitiated, not God. God does not need to be reconciled, because He knows what the plan is. He understands why the fall came. He takes the responsibility for the act of subjecting the creature to vanity, and He also shoulders the responsibility of raising that creature to a greater glory than he could possibly have had, had there been no fall at all. Therefore, He has given His perfect Son, in whom is life and from whom comes all life, as a propitiation that through His death on the cross He might give His life to all mankind, as it is written: "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit." Life can only be released by death; and that first and foremost, above all other, is the reason God gave His Son, who to give us life became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Our heavenly Father, full of all grace and truth, does not have to be reconciled to man. He does not have to be propitiated, appeased, soothed, or conciliated. He gave His Son willingly, not only for our pardon, but also to reconcile the man and dispose the man to His loving favor that He might deliver him from sin and death. All this was done as part of His original intention to make man in His own image and likeness. The death of the Son of God was the ultimate wickedness and the blackest crime that sin was able to commit. Sin can reach no deeper depth than the murder of God's Son, but God's intention was that He through death would destroy him who had the power of death, that is, the devil, and deliver them (all of us) who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage, so that what sin hoped would be the ultimate triumph proved to be its own destruction. The death the great Redeemer died heralded the wonderful day when death and sin will be abolished from the universe and there will be a new heaven and a new earth, wherein dwelleth only righteousness.

The erroneous notion that God must be propitiated and reconciled to man has given rise to all those Romish doctrines such as prayers for the dead, intercession through the virgin Mary, prayers to the saints, purgatory, indulgences, penance, and a host of other unscriptural errors, all of which make God the Father to be a grudging despot who needs to be placated continually and whose reluctant mercy may diminish or increase as more or less is done to conciliate Him. All such doctrine is hateful and does despite to the true spirit of grace and the infinite love of our kind heavenly Father.

Let us notice one thing further. Paul, writing that wonderful twenty-fifth verse, says, "Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in His blood..." Now who is it that Paul says has faith in the blood of Christ? I know that all theology and past teaching will oppose me, but the truth is simply this: It was God the Father who had faith in His Son and in His blood, and because of that faith in the blood of His Son, He openly declared His righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, that is to say, all the sins of the world from Adam to the cross, and undoubtedly for the ages ahead. The life is in the blood. Do not forget that cardinal truth. So great was God's faith in the life blood of His Son that was released by crucifixion and death that He declared the remission of all the sins of the past, making Christ the justifier of all who believe in Him. This surely is the meaning of the text, "To declare, I say, at this time His righteousness: that He might be just, and the justifier of Him which believeth in Jesus." Rom. 8:26

So, then, we see from this that it was God who gave Christ as a propitiation and that that propitiation was given to propitiate man, not God. Furthermore it was God Himself who had faith in the blood of His Son that through Him all the world will be saved. There can be no question about that; and, when this truth is revealed to us, then our own faith rises up and we too have faith in that mighty atonement, and we are justified and at the same time cleansed and made righteous in the sight of God.

See how thoroughly the truth concerning the faith of God is confirmed by verse three, which says, "For what if some did not believe? Shall their unbelief make the faith of God without effect? God forbid: yea, let God be true, but every man a liar; as it is written, That Thou mightest be justified in Thy sayings and mightest overcome when Thou art judged." Rom. 3:3-4 Thus these verses clearly teach that it is God who propitiates man, and it is God first of all who has faith in the blood of Christ for man's justification. What a tremendous thing it is to know that by one stroke of faith in the blood of His Son, Jesus Christ, God the Father remitted the sins of the past, which includes all the generations before the cross, and that Christ after His death, according to the faithful word of the apostle Peter, went in the Spirit and preached to the spirits in prison, which had been disobedient when once the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah while the ark was being prepared! See 1 Pet. 3:18-21. And what did He preach to these long-departed souls? Well, 1 Peter 4:6 certainly answers that question! By it we are informed, "For this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit..." The gospel was preached to them, informing them of the death of God's Son, who was given as a propitiation and a reconciliation for them, and that God had faith in the blood of His Son to deliver them from the bondage of corruption into the glorious freedom of the sons of God. Shall our unbelief make the faith of God without effect? Certainly not! If we believe not, yet He abides faithful. He cannot deny Himself. God's plan goes on just the same, and He will bring all men to faith, each in his own order and in his own appointed time. Does my unbelief make your faith of none effect? No! Certainly not! Much less then shall the unbelief of the world or the unbelief of God's own children annul God's faith in the great propitiation of His Son or make it of none effect.

More and more I am compelled to say that we are God's workmanship, created in Christ Jesus. He doeth His will in the army of heaven and none can resist His intention. None can hinder His cause. Therefore, when we do but faintly glimpse the immutable purpose of God, we can see that the Father, before ever time began or sin blighted our way, laid down the plan in every detail for the restitution of all things.

Lastly, let us consider briefly that great age which the word of God describes as the dispensation of the fullness of times. Eph. 1:10. Time is not eternity. There are many times and many dispensations, but there is only one eternity. Eternity does not begin; neither does it end, but times, dispensations, and ages all have beginnings and all have ends. It is wrong to assert that, when time ends, eternity will begin, because eternity has no beginning. Neither did it end when time began, as so many charts indicate. Ages have their place in eternity in the same way that minutes have their place in years, except that years end and eternity does not. Therefore it is very important that we make a clear distinction between ages, which belong to time, and eternity, which is timeless. It is more important still that we, in our study of the Bible, search out diligently those passages, which refer to time and those, which refer to eternity. In making this search, I strongly recommend that wherever possible the searcher avail himself of a good, exhaustive concordance such as Young's Analytical or Strong's, available at almost any good book store. Both of these give the correct meaning of every Greek and Hebrew word in the Bible. I also highly recommend the use of the Emphatic Diaglott, which emphasizes emphatic word translation rather than any beauty of style.

It is most regrettable that many Bible translators have been careless in their translation of words that concern the ages. The common thought seems to have been that any age following this present age must be identical with eternity, which, of course, is gross error, and we get ourselves into all manner of confusion by thinking that such is the case. For instance, according to the King James Version Jesus, speaking of the blasphemy of the Holy Ghost is clearly quoted as saying, "He that blasphemeth the Holy Ghost hath never forgiveness." Mark 3:29. Because of this faulty rendering we have concocted the fallacious notion of an unpardonable sin. But the Emphatic Diaglott translates the passage correctly thus: "Whoever may blaspheme the Holy Spirit has no forgiveness to the age, but is exposed to aionian (age lasting) judgment." The word referred to here is the millennial age. Likewise also the passage in Matt. 12:32: "...Whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come." The word world here, as the margin of your Bible will probably indicate, is translated from the Greek word aion, which means age or some indefinite time. See also Young's Concordance. Hence the translation should be, "It shall not be forgiven him, neither in this age nor in the coming age." Diaglott. Jesus was born in the age of law. Therefore, when He spoke of this age, He was speaking of the age of law, the age to come being the age of grace in which we now live. Our problem concerning the ages will be cleared up if we remember the following simple facts. The Greek noun aion, which literally means an age, or an indefinite period of time, (Young), has been translated into the following fifteen different words and phrases in the King James Version of the New Testament: age (2), beginning of the world (2), course (1), world (32), eternal (2), world began (1), forever (27), for evermore (2), ever (1), while the world standeth (1), for ever and ever (1), for ever and ever (20), for evermore (1), never (7), world without end (1). Along with this the adjective aionios is translated eternal 42 times, everlasting (25), and for evermore (1). Yet all these words, which you may look up in your own concordance and at your leisure, come from one original word, aion, which means age and should be so translated.

Anything and everything that has to do with an age or a dispensation has to do with time and therefore has both a beginning and an end. That which is eternal has nothing whatever to do with time, because that which is eternal is timeless. Eternity cannot be described as endless time, because there is no such element as time in eternity. It may come as a great surprise to most readers to learn that the Bible does not use any word that is equivalent to our English word eternal. All God's dealings with man concern ages, dispensations, and times. It is not until Christ delivers up a perfect universe to the Father that time will be no more, and there will be no need of the sun to rule by day nor of the moon by night, for the Lord God giveth them light. Where there is neither day nor night there is no time. That is the eternal realm. In that realm there is not only no more time, but a complete absence of things that belong to time - no pain, no crying, no tears, no more hell, no more lake of fire, no more judgment, and no more death, for all the former things will have run their course of duty and will have passed away. All will be perfect in God's universe. All will be reconciled and all will be restored.

There are yet at least two great ages to come, first, the kingdom age, which in scripture is often referred to as the age, and following this there comes the age of the ages, which in Eph. 1:10 is named the dispensation of the fullness of times. Our failure to recognize God's workings in that wonderful age of the fullness of times is the reason so many thousands of God's good people fail to see the restitution of all things.

Reading from the King James Version, Eph. 3:21 reads thus: "Unto Him be glory in the church by Jesus Christ throughout all ages, world without end. Amen." Now since the word world here is translated from the Greek aion, it can hardly be called a good translation - simply because the word world is translated from aion (age), and an age cannot be without end. The Emphatic Daiglott renders the passage correctly by saying, "to Him be glory in the congregation by Jesus Christ to all the generations of the age of the ages." This, of course, conveys the correct meaning. This age of the ages, which is identical with the dispensation of the fullness of times, embraces some very important teaching simply by reason of its name. First of all let us notice that it is the age of the ages. I am not at all sure how many ages there have been in the past. There could have been countless ages for aught I know. I do know, however, that ages existed before Adam. There was a great age from Adam to the flood and another great age from the flood to the resurrection of Christ. The age of grace or the church age, of which we are now a part, runs from the resurrection to the setting up of the kingdom. The kingdom age, next in order, will last at least one thousand years. Rev. 20:4. Then follows the age of the ages, or the dispensation of the fullness of times. The term age of the ages identifies this age as the greatest of all the ages. No age, not even the kingdom age, can be compared to it. Just as the Song of Solomon is the song of songs, that is, the greatest of all songs, and as the holy of holies is the holiest of all, so the age of the ages is the greatest age of all the ages, far surpassing even the millennial kingdom in its power and glory, its revelation of God, and its wonderful reconciliation and restitution. Men today use such terms as "the greatest day of my life," "our finest hour," or the "day of days." It is in this same sense that our almighty Father speaks of the dispensation of the fullness of times as the age of the ages.

As we read Eph. 3:21 from the Emphatic Diaglott, it may have escaped our notice that the text says, "To Him be glory in the congregation by Jesus Christ to all the generations of the age of the ages." The expression, "to all the generations of the age of the ages" gives us some slight conception of just how long a period of time the age of the ages may be. In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established, and I think it is of singular interest that twice the inspired writers of scripture made clear reference to a thousand generations. "Know ye therefore that the Lord Thy God, He is God, the faithful God, which keepeth covenant and mercy with them that love Him and keep His commandments to a thousand generations." Deut. 7:9 And again, "Be ye mindful always of His covenant: the word which He commanded to a thousand generations." 1 Chron: 16:15 These mighty statements of truth are not mere picturesque florishes. These are statements intended to tell us truth that belongs to the whole plan of redemption. As yet I have not found any man able to say accurately just how many years are encompassed by one generation, but, supposing it to be such a small number as forty, a thousand generations would comprise forty thousand years from the time God gave His covenants to Abraham until the end of the dispensation of the fullness of times. I am not trying to say or guess how long a period of time is indicated by these thousand generations, but we may be certain that it was to them that Paul was referring when he wrote, "To Him be glory in the church throughout all generations of the age of the ages." Can you not see that God has allotted almost infinite time to His Christ and the glorified church to accomplish the purpose of the redemption and the reconciliation of all things?

There is yet one more truth I would like to present concerning this age of the ages. That truth concerns the name of the age, the dispensation of the fullness of times. Eph. 1:10. Now all ages have to do with time and times, but there comes an hour eventually when time has reached its fullness. When all other ages have run their course, then we have come at last to the fullness of times. Time is full, time is complete, and time shall be nor more. At the consummation of the fullness of all time the purpose of God, laid down in the edict, "Let us make man in our image and after our likeness," is complete, and time shall be nor more. The dispensation of the fullness of times is the eighth dispensation. The dispensations of innocence, conscience, human government, promise, law, grace and the kingdom - these seven - will have run their course and all will end in judgment, but the dispensation of the fullness of times is the eighth dispensation, and it will conclude all former things. It will end death, judgment, pain and tears, and its final act will be the delivering up of a perfect kingdom to the Father of all. Then time will have reached its fullness and will be nor more.

The number eight in scripture is the number of new beginnings. That is why the dispensation of the fullness of times is the eighth dispensation. If the first day of a month falls on a Sunday, then the eighth day of the month is also a Sunday, as you will see in the months of April and July, 1973. So, if the first day of man's time was in Eden, then the fullness of time, the eighth day, brings us back to Eden again, not in the weakness of the first Adam, but in the strength and imperishable life of the last Adam.

Let us notice the extent of the promises made for the age of the ages, for I think in so doing our hearts will be assured that that age is indeed the age above all other ages. Nothing can be compared to it. Even the blessed millennial kingdom has some rebellion in it and ends with the armies of Satan gathering together against the camp of the saints. But not this age of the ages!

Paul's epistle to the Ephesians is a very wonderful book. Above all other of Paul's writings it manifests God's purpose in calling and perfecting the church. Those foolish people who in their willful and petulant ignorance dare to say, "If God is going to save everyone, why need I bother?" really do not deserve either recognition or an answer. Since my eyes have caught a glimpse of the supernal glory of the work of reconciliation and my ears have heard the word of Christ saying that He has committed to us the word of reconciliation, my heart responds with the greatest eagerness, and, laying aside every earthly weight, I grasp with joy the hope that is set before me. My hope has made me like Elisha, who would not let his master out of his sight lest he miss the double portion in store for him. Let the foolish delight themselves in their God-rejection and idle words, for God has said, "Him that is filthy, let him be filthy still, and he that is unholy, let him be unholy still." The lake of fire that burns with refining brimstone is reserved for their purging throughout the generations of the age of the ages, but let us, who are of the light lay hold on the promise that is set before us, for herein is the refining, the finishing of our faith.

So Paul wrote to the Ephesians to lay the plan of God before them in the hope of quickening their step and increasing their faith in God's purpose. Turning their eyes to their ministry in the age of the ages, he wrote, "Having made known unto us the mystery of His will, according to His good pleasure which He hath purposed in Himself: that in the dispensation of the fullness of times He might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in Him: In whom also we have obtained an inheritance, being predestinated according to the purpose of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will: that we should be to the praise of His glory, who first trusted in Christ." Eph. 1:9-12 Is that promise not reason enough for going all out that we may attain, since we have been predestined to such a glory as this? This is the hope that consumes my life and all my waking hours, and beside it all else is the grossest and lowest vanity. Stir yourself in repentance and in prayer and consecration, ye worldly-minded, wealth-seeking souls, for what shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul or be cast away to endure the lake of fire and brimstone until his refining comes? Is it any wonder that Paul said, "I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ, and be found in Him, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith." Phil. 3:8-9 It is when we begin to see the plan of God that we willingly lay aside every weight and the sin that does so easily beset us. It is when we see the plan of God that all things begin to make sense, and then and then alone does our walk with Him become something real and worthwhile.

Now I want you to pay particular attention to what God says regarding the mighty work of the age of the ages, the dispensation of the fullness of times. In it we are promised that He will gather together in one all things in Jesus Christ, both which are in heaven and which are on earth, even in Him. Eph. 1:10 I don't know how the Christian who disbelieves God's power to restore all things is going to explain this mighty statement. Even blind unbelief can find no explanation for it, for there is no way around it. This is a clear statement of reconciliation, definitely declaring that during the dispensation of the fullness of times all things are to be gathered into His Son, Jesus Christ. The statement is unconditional. There are no conditions attached in any way, shape or form. It is an edict of the Almighty, and it is saying with the greatest power and simplicity that He intends to restore absolutely everything and gather it all into the Prince Redeemer, Jesus Christ, whether it be things in heaven or things on earth.

The dispensation of the fullness of times is the age of the ages. It is the greatest age of all time, and with its end time shall be no more. The dispensation of the fullness of times is the day of God. The present day with all its corruption is the day of man. The millennium kingdom is the day of the Lord. 2 Pet. 3:10 The dispensation of the fullness of times is the day of God in which all things are made new and we, according to His promise, look for new heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness. 2 Pet. 3:13

Because this final age is the dispensation of the fullness of times, we know that it belongs to time. Because it is the age of the ages, we know that ages have not yet passed away. Many things are to be accomplished in that age that are at present far beyond our comprehension. In it the Lord has declared, "Behold, I make all things new." Rev. 21:5 Before its end every knee shall have bowed and every tongue will have confessed that Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father. In it the old heavens and the old earth pass away and a new heaven and a new earth take their place. All the havoc caused by ages and dispensations of man's evil reign will be cleared away and blotted out as things are made new.

The end of this present age of grace will be marked by the resurrection of the just. Rev. 20:17 They will reign with Christ over all the earth for a period of at least one thousand years. Few scriptures are more specific as to length of time than this, in which the term one thousand years is used six times. First Satan is bound for one thousand years, at which time the reign of the saints for a thousand years begins. In Rev. 21:5 we are distinctly told that the rest of the dead did not live again until the thousand years were finished. No unbeliever has part in the first resurrection. Then at the end of the thousand years all the rest of the dead, both small and great, are raised to stand before God to be justly judged before the great white throne, and whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire, which is the second death. Rev. 20:11-15

I do not wish to over-emphasize the importance of this article or the truth it contains, but I am constrained to say that these truths are of immense importance because they are foundational. Upon their firm footing rests the whole superstructure of God's plan of the ages. If we cannot see how in the very beginning God created man for the specific purpose of ruling the universe, and to have dominion over all the vast sidereal with its infinite space and multi-billion galaxies, then we have missed the heart of God's intention completely and we become doomed to spend our lives in the idle pettifogging of the Romish and Protestant systems, which give neither reason for man's existence nor cause for his humiliation and fiery testings in the realm of death. Even redemption, full and complete as it is and in spite of its infinite cost, will fail to reconcile and save more than one percent of all creation, if the fruitless interpretations of the Babylonish system are to be believed.

How different does all this appear when our hearts grasp the understanding that before all things, back of all things, beneath all things, and above all things is the majesty of God's eternal intention and the immutability of His purpose to make man in the image of Himself - infinite in wisdom, perfect in understanding, faultless in counsel, almighty in power, unchangeable in purpose, glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, unswerving in faithfulness, and doing the wonders of God throughout the universe as sons of God and members of His family, man complete in God's image and likeness.

The answer to the eternal question, "What is man that Thou art mindful of him," is two fold, because the question is two-fold. What is man! The answer by example is JESUS CHRIST highly exalted, His name being above every name. He is the first man and the last man. He is the beginning of the creation of God and He is the end of the creation of God. We are His younger brothers, all members of the same family, first being sons of men and secondly sons of God. What He is we are becoming, to which the scripture clearly attests, saying, "As He is, so are we in this world." 1 John 4:17 Every creature, whether of beasts or birds or fish or any plant or insect, brings forth seed after his kind, and shall it be different with God? Shall He not bring forth after His kind? Shall not be who is begotten of God be a son of God and a member of His family? Did not Jesus settle the contention forever when He said, "If He called them gods unto whom the word of God came, and the scripture cannot be broken, say ye of Him whom the Father hath sanctified and sent into the world, Thou blasphemest, because I said I am the Son of God?” John 10:35-36 Jesus Christ was the Son of God, and we, too, are sons of God because we are members of the family of God.

The first part of the question is, "What is man?" The second part of the question is, "That Thou art mindful of him?" Or, "What hast Thou in mind for man?" The answer is that man will be given dominion, when his perfection comes and his Christ-likeness is complete, over fish, over birds, and over the beasts and creeping things of the earth. Gen. 1:26 The fish represent the things beneath. The birds represent the things in the heavens above. The beasts and creeping things represent things on the earth. That is what God decreed in the beginning, and that is His immutable intention now and in the ages to come - man in God's image, ruler and lord of the universe.

The teaching concerning the lake of fire does not appear anywhere in scripture except in the book of Revelation where it is spoken of in the following scriptures: Rev. 19:20, 20:10, 20:13-15, and 21:8 This last scripture definitely states, "but the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death." There should be no question remaining as to the certainty of this lake of fire; neither should there be any doubt as to the awful consequence of having to be cast into it. These scriptures with their dreadful foreboding should be a fearful warning to all unthinking and foolish people who, because of their love for the baser things, have dared to ask why we should serve God now if we are all going to be saved eventually. Such people have no love for God, and they manifest by what they say that their professed serving of God is only a pretense, arising - not from any true love for Him - but from fear of punishment. It is not thus with those who truly love God, for they serve not from fear, but from pure love and devotion.

Because of the gross misunderstanding of almost all people concerning the lake of fire, I would like to make the following observations: First, to show the meaning of fire and brimstone, and, second, to show that the lake of fire is the second death.

In my study of the lake of fire and brimstone I was very much helped and impressed by the understanding given by Charles H. Pridgeon, M.A., and because of the excellency of his work I would like to quote several paragraphs in full, knowing that my own ability falls far short of his. The following paragraphs are from his excellent work, Is Hell Eternal.

"The lake of fire and brimstone signifies a fire burning with brimstone. The word brimstone, or sulphur, defines the character of the fire.

"The word theion (Greek), translated brimstone, is exactly the same word theion, which means divine. Sulphur, or brimstone, was sacred to the deity among the ancient Greeks, and was used to fumigate, to purify, and to cleanse and to consecrate to the deity; for this purpose they burned it in their incense... The verb derived from theion is theioo, which means to hallow, to make divine, or to dedicate to a god. (See Liddell and Scott Greek English Lexicon, 1897 Edition.)

"To any Greek, or to any trained in the Greek language, a lake of fire and brimstone would mean a lake of divine purification. The idea of judgment need not be excluded. Divine purification and divine consecration are the plain meaning in ancient Greek. In the ordinary explanation this fundamental meaning of the word is entirely left out, and nothing but eternal torment is associated with it.

"The word torment needs study. In the New Testament the same word is used of one "sick of the palsy, grievously tormented." (Matt. 8:6) It is used of the disciples' ship in Galilee, and is translated "tossed with the waves" (Matt. 14:24) It is translated by the word toiling in Mark 6:48. It is translated by the word vexed in speaking of Lot. (2 Pet. 2:8). It is translated by a word that means birth-pains (Rev. 12:2). In other scriptures it is translated by the word torment or tormented. The original idea of the verb is "to put to the test by rubbing on a touchstone." Then it means, "to question by applying some test or torture to discover whether true or not."
I realize that the above quotation covers the subject very briefly, but how can we put the ocean of eternal truth into the cup of our human understanding? If there is to be "restitution of all things, and the scripture is very clear on this issue, and if it be true that Christ has already "reconciled all things to Himself," as the scripture clearly says He has (Col. 1:20), then there must be a way by which all truth falls into perfect harmony. We do ourselves much injury when we seize upon every scripture, which proclaims the reconciliation of all things, but carefully avoid all scripture, which speaks of the fearful judgment of the wicked. Yet even greater harm is done when people insist upon taking the other point of view, as almost the entire church system has done for centuries, emphasizing only those scriptures which seem to teach the unending doom of those unfortunate creatures who never once heard that God had a Son and skillfully avoiding every direct statement of scripture which indicates that God has reconciled all things to Himself, and that every knee shall bow and every tongue confess to God of things in heaven and things in earth and under the earth. There is always a place of harmony if we look for it, and it is not usually difficult to find. Otherwise we will be forced onto that untenable ground of having to say that the Bible contradicts itself - which, of course, it never does.

I have already pointed out that the Greek word aion has been translated into fifteen different English words and phrases, many of which - such as eternal, everlasting, and forever and ever - convey the wrong meaning entirely. Any thinking person should clearly see that if you translate the word aion, which means an age by the word eternal, which has nothing to do with time, you immediately get the wrong idea. The same thing applies when the word aion is translated by the word world. It is incorrect and brings nothing but confusion. There is a great deal of difference between the expression. "He shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever," and the expression, "He shall be tormented day and night unto the age of the ages." For ever and ever has no end. The age of the ages does have an end, and its end will see every knee bowing and every tongue confessing that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father. Phil. 2:10-11; Rom. 14:10-11. The first expression forebodes complete hopelessness for billions and makes the faith of God of none effect. The second expression, which is completely correct, not only offers hope but expresses the ultimate fulfillment of the purpose which was purposed in Christ Jesus before the world began or before the ages were formed.

Everyone who considers himself a student of God's word should familiarize himself with the facts I have mentioned above. Purchase a good concordance such as Young's or Strong's and learn how to use it. Also get a good Greek-English lexicon such as the Emphatic Diaglott so that you can check these things out for yourself. Then you will not have to depend on what I or some other human being has to say about it. The fifty scholarly men who sat for ten years, translating the King James Version of the Bible, produced a magnificent work. We cannot speak too highly of it, and I sincerely doubt that any other work of translation has ever remotely equaled its style and beauty; but with a task so great as theirs it is no small wonder to discover that a few inconsistencies in translation crept in. Many Christians fail to realize that no translation of the Holy Scripture is inspired. Only the original writings by the apostles and the prophets were inspired. Since, then, the original writing was done in Hebrew for the Old Testament and Greek for the New Testament, all translating into the multitudes of other languages has had to be done by learned scholars of Greek and Hebrew, and these for the most part have done a masterful work.

No other book that ever was written can be compared to the Bible, which is the word of God. Because the Bible is a spiritual book, it has very little appeal to the natural mind. This wonderful book of God does not unfold its mysteries to the careless reader. Its parables were not written to make spiritual truth clear to the simple and careless. Parables were not given that a child could understand, as we have been taught in the past. Parables were written for exactly the opposite reason. Do you not remember that on one occasion, when
This wonderful book is literally packed full of mysteries, parables, types, shadows, and allegories, which are only unfolded by the Holy Spirit when it is in the best interests of God's infinite purpose to unfold them. It has been a thing of endless delight and surpassing joy to me to have made the discovery that the Bible itself and everything in it is a parable, setting forth by many means the intention of the all-wise, all-powerful, unchanging Lord. As these wonderful truths fall into place before the eyes of my spirit, each one in its turn signifies the immutable purpose of God, who, after having made a man of the clay, undertook to lower the work of His hands into the fiery realm of death for His own edification, His good, His learning and His understanding. Then comes the restoration of the creation, not merely to what it was originally, but to an exaltation so high that our minds completely fail to grasp its supernal eminence. Even the life and experience of our blessed Redeemer becomes a parable of the truth of restoration, for He, who was in the form of God and thought it not robbery to be equal with God, humbled Himself to take upon Himself the form of a man, and, being found in fashion as a man, He became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Wherefore God hath highly exalted Him and given Him a name, which is above every name, that in the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven and things in earth, and that every tongue should confess that He is Lord to the glory of God the Father. Can we not see here how the Son was first lowered into death and then highly exalted? Have we failed to perceive that "us He is, so are we in this world!" Is it too much for us to believe the parable set forth here, pressing forward in faith that we may attain the prize that is set before us as we look unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith, who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross and despised the shame and is set down at the right hand of the majesty on high! Is not this the "excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus our Lord," for whom we have suffered the loss of all things and do count them but dung that we may win Christ and be found in Him without spot or blemish? So if the life of our Lord becomes a parable and a type, how much more shall lesser things!

We have already considered how Adam's dominion over the fish beneath the earth, the animals on the earth, and the birds above the earth was a prophetic foreshadow of man's eventual glory as judge and ruler of the universe under God's authority and with the mind of Christ. Furthermore in His saying, "Let us make man in our image and after our likeness," He was saying that this was His unchanging intention, not only for Adam, but for mankind as a whole. The first man was presented faultless two thousand years ago, and His beautiful perfection is a pledge and guarantee that before the age of the ages has run its course all men will be presented faultless before the throne of His glory with exceeding joy. It cannot be otherwise, for we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor that He by the grace of God should taste death for every man. And He, tasting this death, for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross and despised the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the majesty on high, henceforth expecting until His enemies be made His footstool, or a resting place for His feet.

Paul gave us a remarkable clue to these great mysteries when He explained that the whole national existence of Israel was a parable or an allegory teaching great spiritual things. "These things happened unto them for ensamples: and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world (ages) are come," he said. I Cor. 10:11 You know the history of Israel as well as I do. You have read of their beginnings, their rebellion against God and their punishments, and how some of them have been scattered among all nations while other of their tribes have become mighty nations in the earth, though they are so blind that the vast majority of their people have completely lost sight of their national identity. Shall we believe that all these people will be cast away and lost forever? Or shall we let our faith embrace the immutable promise of God, as Paul has said, "Hath God cast away His people? God forbid... God hath not cast away His people which He foreknew." Rom. 11:1-2 Then by his pertinent question and its positive answer the apostle explains the mystery of their being cast away, for he says, "If the casting away of them be the reconciling of the world what shall the receiving of them be, but life from the dead?” Rom. 11:15. Someone will say, “I cannot understand this mystery,” and I confess I cannot understand it either, but shall my unbelief make the faith of God of none effect? God forbid. Rom. 3:3. “But I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits; that blindness in part is happened to Israel (all Israel) until the fullness of the Gentiles (nations) be come in. And so shall all Israel be saved.” Rom. 11:25. Well, what do you think of that? Shall we not say that God is true though every man be a liar? In the light of such fathomless wisdom is it any great wonder that the apostle breaks off in the midst of his explanation to burst forth into heavenly praise crying, “O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable are His judgments, and His ways past finding out! For who hath known the mind of the Lord? Or who hath been His counselor? Or who hath first given to Him, and it shall be recompensed to him again? For of Him, and through Him and to Him, are all things: to whom be glory forever. Amen.” Rom. 11:33.

Can we now open the eyes of our understanding to behold the parable from the life of Job? Notice how this perfect and upright man, who feared God and stayed clear of every evil, was delivered into the hand of the enemy that through his dreadful experience in the valley of the shadow of death he might come forth refined by its fire and brimstone. Was it not the torment and tribulation of this first death that delivered his soul from all his carnal arguments and set him free from every last remaining trace of self-righteousness, until from out the fire and brimstone of his experience — yea, the fiery trial that was to try him — he came forth as gold tried in the fire with shining face and glorified vision, crying, “I have heard of Thee by the hearing of the ear: but now mine eye seeth Thee. Wherefore I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes.” Job 42:5-6. Certainly we can see all these things, but let us notice still further how this man, who lost all things when he was lowered into such a fearful death, a loss that included both his riches and his family, had all restored when the fire had devoured his corruption — and not only restored, but restored double in all things until he was much richer and exceedingly more famous and influential than he had ever been before. Shall we not see in this story a parable of the history of all mankind from the time man was lowered into this realm of death, passing through the fiery furnace of affliction into the image of God and the restitution of all things? Let us not be like those adamant folk who, because of their impenetrable hardness, seeing, see not and hearing, hear not, neither do they understand, but let us see with our eyes and hear with our ears and understand with our hearts and lay hold of the promise of restoration that is clearly set before us.

What shall we say of Nebuchadnezzar, who through God’s decree left his high estate and was lowered into the realm of the beasts and was given a beastly mind? There in the degrading realm of beasts he remained until he learned that God is all in all. Then, when seven times had passed over him, his humiliation and repentance were complete, the glory of his kingdom was restored to him and he, walking in harmony with God, commanded all men everywhere to fear and tremble before the God of heaven. In my book, The Mind of Christ, (free upon request), I have gone into greater detail to show that the experience of this man was a parable of the experience of all mankind from the time of their transgression and humiliation until the exceeding glory of that day when all will possess the mind of Christ and all will be fully restored.

I suppose I could fill whole volumes with the unfolding of these blessed things, but I shall now leave the parables, the types, the shadows and prophecies of the Old Testament to speak of Jesus Christ our Lord and show how His life and ministry was a prophecy, a parable, a living witness and testimony of the restitution of all things. Hear Him as He reads this scripture: "The Spirit of the Lord is upon Me, because He hath anointed Me to preach the gospel to the poor; He hath sent Me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord." Luke 4:18, 19. The acceptable year of the Lord is nothing less than the kingdom of God, that millennial kingdom for which all creation groans. The day of the vengeance of our God (Isa. 61:2) I believe to be identical with the dispensation of the fullness of times, the age of the ages, in which the Lord through the fiery judgment of the second death will gather into Himself everything in heaven and in earth. Eph. 1:10.

Our Lord Jesus Christ did not attempt to heal every diseased person during His brief ministry on earth; neither did He deliver every captive nor restore sight to all the eyes that were blind. He did not set at liberty all that were bruised, nor did He heal all that were broken-hearted. It was never God's intention that all the ills of earth should be cured during the short period of His first advent. The ministry of Jesus, wonderful and remarkable as it was, was only to be a beginning, a foreshadowing and an ensample of that mighty work of restoration, reserved for the kingdom age, which will be completed when the body of Christ is complete. The truth that His earthly ministry was only the beginning seems to be taught in the words spoken of the miracle performed at the wedding in Cana of Galilee, "This beginning of miracles did Jesus and manifested forth His glory," (John 2:11), and is certainly confirmed by Luke's words, "All that Jesus began to do and teach." Acts. 1:1

There was a day when the disciples came to Jesus with the question, "Why then say the scribes that Elias must first come? And Jesus answered and said unto them, Elias truly shall first come, and restore all things. But I say unto you that Elias is come already, and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed. Likewise also shall the Son of man suffer of them." Matt. 17:10-12 Then they understood that He spoke of John the Baptist, but I am not so sure that this was His final meaning. At any rate the restoration was not to be completed then. His ministry was to be only a foreshadow of the restoration of all things, which, though begun in some small degree then, would not be completed until the age of the ages. In my meditations before God I have become convinced that the mighty signs and wonders wrought by the hand of our Lord Jesus Christ were not wrought entirely for the sake of those few tormented people who were healed and delivered from their afflictions, but this manifestation of His glory was intended to be a literal and living witness, a life full of prophetic acts foreshadowing the kingdom of God and the final dispensation of the fullness of times that will complete the restoration of all things. The gospel Jesus was preaching was not the gospel of grace. It was the gospel of the kingdom of God and His mighty works were a foreshadow of that acceptable day of the Lord. Luke 4:19. The acceptable day of the Lord is the kingdom day. As the vision on the Mount of Transfiguration was a miniature fore view of the kingdom of God (Matt. 16:28), so the entire ministry of Jesus Christ was a foreshadow of the extent and fullness of all the mighty wonders that are reserved for that wonderful Sabbath day which is to come.

It would be quite impossible for us here and now to trace the full glory which each act in His mighty ministry foreshadowed, yet be it known that each and every wonder of His life from the miraculous draught of wine at the wedding feast in Cana of Galilee to the healing of the ear of the centurion's servant tells us some new story of the wonders that are to be when He is King of kings and Lord of lords in the ages yet to come. The changing of water to wine at the wedding feast portrays the difference between our present realm of death and that wonderful realm of life when He has taken His bride, the New Jerusalem, and that age of the ages begins. However, to avoid any doubt as to my meaning, we will consider just a few events in the life of Jesus that clearly demonstrate how His whole life and ministry was a prophetic foreshadow of the acceptable day of the Lord, which is the kingdom age of one thousand years. We will certainly not try to cover all the events, but if you will think each one out for yourself in the Spirit and with the mind of Christ, you will uncover a whole realm of truth hitherto hidden from your eyes.

Among the first of the works Jesus did was His calling of the twelve disciples. This is a very important and significant thing. These men were chosen to minister with Him and were given power over all manner of sickness and disease and over demons. The common thought prevalent in our day is the notion that the main purpose of this present age of grace is the conversion of the world and the salvation of as many as possible. The real truth is that this entire age has been set aside in the wisdom of God to "take out a people for His name." Acts 15:14, According to James this is in harmony with the prophecies of the Old Testament. These people who are now being "taken out" from the mass of mankind are a people being prepared to reign with Christ in the kingdom of God, and they will be used in that wonderful ministry of destroying the works of the devil. Therefore, when Jesus in this age of grace speaks to the heart of any man or woman, saying, "Follow Me," it is an extremely important event. I am not saying that all who are thus called will be chosen, for "many are called, but few are chosen" (Matt. 22:14), and those who are finally with Him are "called, chosen and faithful." Rev. 17:14 Only those who lay aside their own minds and become possessed of the mind of Christ will have any hope of reigning in His kingdom. The carnally minded, though they are believers and though they be saved, will not reign with Christ in that wonderful kingdom. No carnality will reign with Him. Only those whom the scripture speaks of as "in Christ" will reign with Him; and I shall add that the term in Christ excludes most of the professing Christians. While some will have an abundant entrance (2 Pet. 1:11), others will be saved "so as by fire" (1 Cor. 3:15) Let us neither forget nor neglect these things, but let us lay aside every weight and the sin which does so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith, who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despised the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the majesty on high.

In the Gospel of Mark the mighty works of Jesus are recorded in quick succession. Immediately after He called His disciples, Jesus is seen entering the synagogue, and there He taught a doctrine that astonished the people. Mark 1:21 Let me say that if ever the truth is told in our modern synagogues, those steeple houses that men speak of as churches, the people who hear will be astonished. They will either accept the message as wonderful and life-giving or else they will brand the preacher as an heretic, a false prophet, or a nut and cast him out. What Jesus taught He taught with authority (Mark 1:22), and authority in teaching is something the people are not accustomed to. What a watered-down gospel the poor people have been compelled to hear decade after tiresome decade, and century after weary century! The wicked thought now prevalent in the minds of preachers is to give the people what they want. They do not give them what they need as shepherds should do, but they prophesy falsely, and the people love to have it so. Jer. 5:31

The next great thing of note was the discovery that right in the synagogue there was a man possessed with an unclean spirit, and he cried out, saying, "Let us alone; what have we to do with Thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth. Art Thou come to destroy us? I know Thee who Thou art, the Holy One of God." Mark 1:24 Now I wonder who that man was who was possessed with an unclean spirit? I dare not be certain, but I will tell you who he may have been and who he probably was. He was probably the leader of the synagogue. Are you horrified at my suggestion? Well, you need not be, for I have on my desk at this moment a large picture of a preacher with a reverse collar and all the regalia of a minister, marching with a crowd of homosexuals, all replete with signs and banners, agitating for public acceptance and recognition. Do you know what Moses said of homosexuals? He said they should be cut off from among the people. Lev. 18:22-29 Yet in our day these abominable demon-possessed people are being ordained as ministers of the gospel! If Jesus walked into their congregation today, He would have no choice but to cast the devil out of them, for all homosexuals and lesbians are sodomites and possessed with an unclean spirit.

There are other devils in the church system besides this one. There are false prophets, covetous, boasters, men who do not believe in the resurrection, the blood of Christ, the Holy Spirit, or regeneration. The Roman system from start to finish is a "do it yourself religion. I do not hesitate to say that all who are rubbing shoulders with it and glorying in ecumenism and the charisma of the whole evil business are coming under the control of Satan and the power of devils working miracles. Rev. 16:13, 14 Have you never read this scripture? "Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird." Rev. 18:2

Following the casting out of the unclean spirit, Mark tells of the healing of the fever. Mark 1:29-31 The whole church system and the entire world system is in a dreadful burning fever. Men's hearts are failing them for fear and for looking after the things that are coming upon the earth, for even the powers of the heavens are being shaken. Nations are rising against nations, kingdoms against kingdoms, states against states, provinces against provinces, husbands against wives, children against parents, man against the elements, the floods, the earthquakes. The sea, the land, and the air groan because of the awful pollution. The whole creation is in a ferment. But Jesus, the Prince of Peace, took the fevered woman by the hand, and the fever left her. So it will be when the kingdom shall come and the saints shall reign. The fever will be gone and hushed will be all the vain strivings of sinful men.

Following the account of all these works of power comes the announcement of the healing of all that were sick. Mark 1:32

At even, when the sun did set,
The sick, O Lord, around Thee lay;
O with what divers pains they met,
And with what joy they went away!

This mighty manifestation of His power was also a foreshadow of that coming day when all who dwell in the light of His throne will be free from the sorrows of the past; for there shall be no more sickness, no more pain, nor sorrow nor death nor sighing. Neither shall there be any more tears, for the former things are passed away.
Rev. 21:4  Our Lord Jesus Christ, when He healed the sick who came to Him, was not making an effort to cure the world that then was of all sickness and disease. Had that been His intention, He would not have ceased until His work was done. Because He came preaching the kingdom of God, He was demonstrating the glory and the power of that coming kingdom and showing us the wealth of its glory by doing for the few what will be done for the all when the light of His kingdom shall cover all the earth as the waters now fill the sea.

Thy kingdom come!
Thy will be done in earth!
Even as it is done in heaven!

Then in Mark 1:40-45 we have the account of the healing of the leper. Leprosy is always considered to be typical of sin. It is a disease in the blood. It is a fearful, wasting disease that has always forced men to live separate from all society. This disease was always considered incurable by human means. Leprosy is a physical type of inbred sin. Poor mankind in his blindness vainly hopes for a remedy, but there is no healing medicine for that which has rotted the flesh away. Only Jesus Christ can heal the wasted body or soul. All our efforts at self-reformation are useless, for they leave the soul even as it was. The blood of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, cleanses from all sin, and there is no other remedy either in heaven above or in earth beneath; neither is there any other name given among men whereby we must be saved.

So Jesus cleansed the leper. His divine power alone could cleanse the filth away. What heart is so vile that He cannot cleanse it? In that coming age, when the knowledge of the Lord fills the earth as the waters cover the sea, the multitude of the nations will walk the highway to Jerusalem where His throne abides, for "in that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem for sin and for uncleanness." Zech. 13:1 "And the Lord shall be king over all the earth: in that day there shall be one Lord, and His name one." Zech. 14:9 "And it shall come to pass, that every one that is left of all the nations which came against Jerusalem shall even go up from year to year to worship the King, the Lord of hosts, and to keep the feast of tabernacles." Zech. 14:16 "In that day there shall be upon the bells of the horses, HOLINESS UNTO THE LORD; ...yea, every pot in Jerusalem and in Judah shall be holiness unto the Lord of hosts..." Zech. 14:20, 21

Jesus paid it all!
All to Him I owe.
Sin had left a crimson stain;
He washed it white as snow.

Now consider the healing of the palsied man, who had control neither of his limbs nor of his actions. How truly this poor afflicted fellow typified the mass of mankind in our day who "do not know what makes them stumble]" But Jesus knew that at the base of his uncontrollable self and the hopeless shaking of his limbs lay sin yet unforgiven; and when the sin was gone, the sickness, too, was soon remedied. What demonstration of Christ's power could show more forcefully than this that He who has power over palsy has power to forgive sin and cleanse mankind of its crimson stain? Thus shall it be in the kingdom of God where the whole mass of mankind is concerned, for the leaves of the tree, which He Himself is, are for the healing of all nations that inhabit the earth.

The Jews were always greatly offended when Jesus healed the sick, fed the hungry, or did any manner of good on the Sabbath day. It seems to me He often chose that hallowed day above all others to work His wonders. He did not do it, I assure you, to rouse their anger, but to demonstrate with power that, when the millennial Sabbath finally comes, it will be a blessed day of deliverance from all the evil of the previous six days of man's misrule. "Six days shall thou labor," saith the Lord, "and do all thy work; but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work..." Exod. 20:9, 10 The six thousand years or the six dispensations that have passed away since Adam - these have been man's six days of labor, and what a tragic mess, what a mass of confusion and disorder has followed his rule! But the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord. The seventh day, the seventh dispensation, is the kingdom of God. The seventh day is God's day. It is the kingdom of God. In it man will labor no more. God will loose the thirsty ox from the stall and lead him away to the watering. Christ is Lord of the Sabbath, and in that day He will deliver the captives, recover the... sight of the blind, set at liberty the bruised, for that is the acceptable year of the Lord. He will show that the Son of man is Lord also of the Sabbath day.

In that day "the stone which the builders refused is become the head stone of the corner. This is the Lord's doing; it is marvelous in our eyes. This is the day which the Lord hath made; (Allelujah!) we will rejoice and be glad in it." Ps. 118:22-24 "Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb shall sing: for in the wilderness shall waters break out, and streams in the desert. And the parched ground shall become a pool, and the thirsty land springs of water: ...And the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." Isa. 35:5-7, 10

And what shall I say of the healing of the poor man with the withered hand, which infirmity had rendered him powerless to work for either himself or His Lord? And what shall we say of the power that healed him or of the significance of the fact that it was done on the Sabbath day? Mark 3:1-5. What of the new relationship we read of in Mark 3:31-35, which sets aside the bonds of the flesh and makes all who do God's will His brothers and sisters? Or of the healing of the maniac of Gadara who sat clothed and in his right mind? Mark 5:1-15. Is he not a parable of the insanity and ruthless power of man today? We have read of the feeding of the five thousand, not from bread in store, but from the wonder of His blessing, and of the stilling of the troubled sea, which must be likened to the turmoil of our nations, and of how He rebuked the wind, the restless spirit, that troubled them so. If the reader will diligently search into all these things, the Lord will reveal to his heart how great a gospel Jesus Christ came to preach when He came in the power of the Spirit to preach the gospel of the kingdom and to display in parables, in mighty sayings, and in mighty deeds that glory which will fill the earth when that which was first preached as a gospel shall become the established authority and rule of all the earth. He, who was at first but the lonely Galilean, shall in that day stand tall and mighty among His many brethren to establish the acceptable day of the Lord in all the earth.

Jesus shall reign where'er the sun,
Doth his successive journeys run;
His kingdom spread from shore to shore
Till moons shall wax and wane no more.

From north and south the people meet
To lay their trophies at His feet,
While western empires own their Lord
And savage tribes attend His word.

Such were the teachings of Jesus Christ and I shall not hesitate to say that His whole life and ministry was a mighty, though miniature, display of the glory and power of the kingdom, which He preached. It was a beautiful parable of His coming reign with the saints.

The second point I wish to consider is the subject of the second death. Failure to understand the second death hinders the full view of the restitution of all things. In my article From Death to Life, Vol: 10, No. 9, I carefully pointed out that it is impossible for one to understand what the second death is until he understands what the first death is. (I would strongly urge every reader to re-read the article mentioned above. If you do not have it in your possession, it will be sent to you gladly upon request). The truth, briefly stated, however, is this: Adam in the beginning was warned of God, "In the day that thou eatest thereof (of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil) thou shall surely die." Gen. 2:17 The fatal truth is that in the self-same day he ate the fruit, in the same day he died, both spiritually and physically. We are wrong when we affirm that he died spiritually the same day, but lived physically nine hundred and sixty years. Our whole trouble is that we have not learned what death is. That thing which God calls death is the self-same thing we have been erroneously calling life. But let us see how the scripture will help our understanding of this matter.

Paul, writing to Christians born of the Spirit, said, "If Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin; but the Spirit is life because of righteousness." Rom. 8:10 Previous to their conversion both the spirit and the body were dead, as is clearly stated in Eph. 2:1: "You hath He quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins."
But now that the spirit has partaken of the resurrection life of Christ, only the body remains dead. "Ye are dead," says Paul, "and your life is hid with Christ in God." Again, "If the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in you." Rom. 8:11 Jesus, too, definitely spoke of man's present condition as death. When the young man requested, "Let me first go and bury my father," He replied, "Let the dead bury their dead, but follow thou Me." By this statement He was indicating that the men who carried the coffin were as dead as the man that was in it. Paul also, speaking of the pleasure loving, who above all others believe they are enjoying life to the full, wrote to show that what the pleasure loving mistakenly hail as life is, in fact, naught but death, for said he, "She that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth." 1 Tim. 5:6

From these statements of Holy Scripture we must confidently affirm that the very element which man mistakenly believes is life is in fact that which from the beginning God has spoken of as death - the death that was promised when He said, "In the day thou eatest thereof thou shall surely die." Therefore our whole present existence from the cradle to the grave is the first death. Everything in it and about it is death and the grave is only the final consummation of the death experience. When David wrote, "Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death," he was speaking, not of some brief illness before he was taken to the cemetery, but of his whole earthly journey, which is in truth a valley where death is everywhere. Though we, for want of a better expression, speak of our earthly pilgrimage as life, the real truth is that what we are now experiencing is in fact in truth the first death, and this I have proved in no uncertain manner in my book 'From Death to Life.' If we have a clear understanding of what the first death is, then we can easily grasp what the second death would be. The believer enters into life by the resurrection unto life; but the unbeliever will also be resurrected, not to life but to aionian judgment or the second death. And I shall add with much emphasis that the second death, which follows the resurrection of the unjust, will be much more severe than the first death, through which the world is now passing. Even in this life, which is really the first death, men suffer fiery trials that are to try them, and we are told that it is through much tribulation we enter the kingdom of God. The Bible is packed full of evidence that confirms that this first death is replete with fiery trials both for those who believe and those who do not.

We have read with reverent awe of the blessed saints who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the violence of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, and turned to flight the armies of the aliens; women received their dead, raised to life again, and others were tortured, not accepting deliverance that they might obtain a better resurrection. Heb. 11:32-35 And all this fiery trial that was to try them belonged to the realm of the first death. How much more severe, then, shall be those fiery trials, which God's word describes as a lake burning with fire and brimstone - which is the second death! We have noted above that the word brimstone, translated from the Greek theion (Rev. 21:8), means divine fire, and it should be so understood. The word fire in Rev. 20:10, 14, 15 and 21:8 is translated from the Greek word pur and is exactly the same word as used in Acts 2:3 where it is stated, "There appeared unto them cloven tongues like unto fire." That fire is divine fire to judge, to cleanse, purge and purify until every knee has bowed, every tongue has confessed, and every garment has been made white in the blood of the Lamb.

O how good it would be if God's dear people would only seek to understand that the omniscient Father is preparing every man in his own order! In each and every age He seeks to accomplish some definite purpose, and, having accomplished it, He moves on to the next. In this present age He is calling out an elect people for His name. These people are being perfected as sons of God. At the end of this age Jesus Christ will no longer be the lonely man of Galilee, but the firstborn of many brethren, as it is written, "Behold I and the children (sons) which God hath given Me." Heb. 2:13 During the coming age, which is the millennial kingdom, God will perfect the bride, and at the consummation of that wonderful age of righteousness the bride of Christ, the New Jerusalem, will be seen descending from God out of heaven as a bride adorned for her husband. Rev. 21:9-27 It is easy to see the marvelous procession of His eternal purpose. When the New Jerusalem bride is united in marriage with the sons of God, then (and certainly it is no wonder) will begin the age of the ages, the dispensation of the fullness of times. It will begin with the resurrection of all the dead of all ages who were not raised in the first resurrection. Rev. 20:1-6 They will be judged and their second death experience of fire and brimstone will begin. But the gates of the Holy City, the New Jerusalem, shall never be shut day or night.
throughout all the age of the ages. The nations shall walk in the light of it and the people shall bring their glory and honor into it. Both the Spirit and the Bride will be saying, "Come," and whosoever will may take of the water of life freely.

Before that age is over (I am not sure how long a time it will be), every knee in heaven and in earth and under the earth will have bowed to Christ and every tongue will have confessed to God that He is Lord to the glory of God. Phil. 2:10 The name of Jesus signifies much more than is implied by the simple use of the name in speech. According to the Hebrew idiom it signifies "in the very nature of Jesus", and as no man can say that Jesus is Lord but by the Holy Ghost (1 Cor. 12:3), we know that there will be no hypocritical confession nor will there be any confession by compulsion, but a true confession of Christ by every creature in the universe and that to the glory of God the Father.

As I have concentrated upon the message Creation, Redemption, and the Restitution of All Things, I am well aware that I have barely scratched the surface of any of these momentous truths, but may the eternal God give us ever increasing understanding in the knowledge of His will and purpose that we may see in part what was in His infinite mind when He said in the beginning, "Let us make man in our image and after our likeness, and let them have dominion..." God was in Christ, reconciling the world to Himself, and He has committed unto us the word of reconciliation. "But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the firstfruits of them that slept. For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But very man in his own order: Christ the firstfruits; afterward they that are Christ's at His coming. Then cometh the end, when He shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when He shall have put down all rule and all authority and power. For He must reign, till He hath put all enemies under His feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death. For He hath put all things under His feet. But when He saith all things are put under Him, it is manifest that He is excepted, which did put all things under Him. And when all things shall be subdued unto Him (Christ), then shall the Son also Himself be subject unto Him (the Father) that did put all things under Him, that God may be all in all." 1Cor. 15:20-28

"O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable are His judgments, and His ways past finding out!" Rom. 11:33 "For from Him every thing comes; through Him everything exists; and in Him everything ends! Glory to Him forever! Amen," Rom. 11:36 (Goodspeed)
THE MYSTERY OF SUFFERING

Of all the mysteries that have perplexed the people of God throughout the ages none has proved to be more disconcerting to the saints than the mystery of suffering. The question, "Why do the righteous suffer," has at some time baffled the mind of every saint until the depths of its enigma have hung like a shadow over the brightness of their experience in Christ. Why, so often, do the wicked prosper, flourishing like the green bay tree, while righteous men perish and no man layeth it to heart? How often have we heard Christians testify through blinding tears that crowded over their sight that all went well with them and care was but a feather while they lived for the trivial things of this swiftly passing world, but after they were converted to Christ and began their heavenward journey, trial and affliction beset them! Tribulation and anguish like ravenous beasts crowded their pathway, making their lot hard and their way difficult and treacherous.

The failure to understand the mystery of suffering must in great part be laid at the door of those blind leaders of the blind who have glibly taught the people that, after a sinner comes to Christ, all will be glory from that day forward. Henceforth he will always wear a happy smile and live in the wonderful assurance that all is well with his soul and the knowledge that, should he die at any moment, he will go straight through the pearly gates into heaven. While this in a manner of speaking may be true after he learns to understand God's ways, be warned that anyone who imagines he can be a victorious Christian without ever fighting fierce and bloody battles is certainly an armchair philosopher to say the least.

All over the land today — alas, alas — we hear the radio preachers persuading the trusting and ignorant people that the saints of God should have the best of everything. They should have perfect health for their bodies, instant healing whenever they need it. They should have the best of salaries, live in the finest of homes, drive the most expensive cars. Why, they will even bless our purses for five dollars and assure us that, if we give them ten dollars, we will get one hundred in return! Then, glory be, after these flower-bed Christians have spent their lives in luxury, they will be taken to heaven to spend eternity doing nothing, and if tribulation should come while they are still on earth, they will be immediately raptured to escape it. Let those who will teach these absurdities and imbecilic inconsistencies and let those who will believe them, but I hear the voice of the blessed Galilean ringing clear above all other voices, saying, "He that saveth his life shall lose it, and he that loseth his life for My sake shall find it." I hear Him warn His beloved saints in these awesome words, "In the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." To the rich He says, "Sell that ye have, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come, take up thy cross, and follow Me." Never once in all His life did Jesus or His apostles ever dangle glittering prizes before the eyes of the people, but always prominent in His statements the cross was seen, casting its ominous shadow across the pathway of His beloved saints.

At the beginning of this subject I felt it necessary to make a few interrogations and observations. Why has the whole world from the beginning of time been filled with the groans of suffering? Why must people suffer tribulation, anguish, misunderstanding, envy, malignity, sickness, pain, war, terror, bereavements, death, and a thousand tragedies far too numerous to mention until the whole creation with every created thing is heard groaning in pain and anguish waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of the body? We may not think it difficult to understand the suffering of the godless and the wicked, because their own wickedness chastises them and is a judgment unto them, becoming betimes a burning hell of indignation. But, mystery of mysteries, the same tribulation suffered by the world is often endured by the people of God, and to this Peter soberly attests when he writes, "Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour: whom resist steadfast in the faith, knowing that the same afflictions are accomplished in your brethren that are in the world." 1 Pet. 5:8,9.

The shallow understanding of the church system and the unwise teaching of its hireling ministry are the basic causes of the gross ignorance among the people concerning the refining, purifying fires of suffering. As long as people are kept ignorant of the eternal purposes of God, they will always remain ignorant of the eternal blessing of their sufferings with Christ. If Christians understand no more than the common thought that they are saved now to be taken to heaven later on to spend their eternity playing harps and shouting "Hallelujah" in the bliss of a dreamy "isle of somewhere", then indeed there would be little purpose in suffering in this present age at all, for even if saints were no worse off for their suffering, they would be no better either. But when God, through infinite grace, reveals to the saint that it is His marvelous intention and purpose that all eternity will be occupied in a mighty master plan of restitution and restoration in which sons of God, who through trial, suffering, and fierce temptation have come into the image of Jesus Christ, will reign with Him in the perfection of wisdom, the fullness of understanding, the beauty of justice and the omnipotence of power, every son having the mind of God and needing not to ask questions about anything, but having perfect knowledge, justice and equity to carry out the intricate and infinite will of God, then all our tribulation becomes pregnant with meaning. Among that holy, omnipotent company of sons there will be no carnal minds, no dissensions, no inharmonious notes in all their ranks, but with justice shall they judge the meek of the earth and with equity shall they rule the nations until all things everywhere are subdued unto Christ and Christ shall present a perfect kingdom to the Father.

It will not be earth alone that will come under the reign of these blessed sons of God, but all the celestial universe which everywhere at this moment is a chaotic, rock-strewn mass of waste. These void vastnesses, even as the earth upon which we dwell, will partake together of the universal restoration. So great will be the rehabilitation that eternity itself will not be too long for the mighty program which God's inspired word foreshadowed in the words of David: "When I consider Thy heavens, the work of Thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which Thou hast ordained; what is man, that Thou art mindful of him? And the son of man, that Thou visitest him?" Psa. 8:3,4. And again: "It is not to angels that God has assigned the sovereignty of that coming world of which we speak. But, as we know, a psalmist has exclaimed, "How poor a creature is man, and yet Thou dost remember him, and a son of man, and yet Thou dost come to him! Thou hast made him for a little while lower than the angels; with glory and honor Thou hast crowned him, and hast set him over the work of Thy hands. Thou hast put everything in subjection under his feet. For this subjecting of the universe to man implies the leaving nothing not subject to him. But we do not as yet see the universe subject to him." Heb. 2:5-9. (Wey-mouth).

Now since such glories are in store for the saints of God, can any man longer question why our kind heavenly Father should be at such pains to bring His sons to perfection? Is it not right that He should choose any method He deems necessary to transform His sons from corrupt and carnal creatures of dust and clay to beings of heavenly light and understanding? Would anyone dare to imagine that any of the leaders of this present world system would be found fit candidates for the work of the restitution of all things? If we at this moment can lift up our eyes to God and there comprehend the infinite purpose He had in His mind when He created us in the beginning, then for the first time in our lives we will begin to understand the purpose of suffering, of trial, of tribulation and pain. If we can see no more hope in His calling than that we should die some day and go to heaven and there do nothing more forever than to sit on cloud nine and play a harp, then it is little wonder that suffering and tribulation are a conundrum and a wretched nuisance to us now. But, if we can grasp the cardinal truth first declared by God Himself in Gen. 1:26 — "Let Us make man (Adam) in Our image, and after Our likeness, and let them have dominion ..." — then we will understand why the Lord takes such infinite care to bring His sons to perfection. Do you think for one moment that in those coming ages of blessedness and restoration the kingdom will be left to other people! I trow not. The kingdom and the dispensation of the fullness of times, which is to follow, will be given into the hands of God's choicest sons — saints fully grown, perfected through suffering, matured through trial, far beyond the reach of corruption and decay, far above the realm of greed and selfishness or any such thing. If this perfection should be lacking in even one saint, then in some future day or in some future age a wicked one might arise as one did in the past, saying in his heart, "I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars (sons) of God: I will sit also upon the mount of the congregation, in the sides of the north: I will ascend above the heights of the clouds; I will be like the most High." Isa. 14:12,14.

No, my suffering brother and sister! This scene shall never be repeated because here and now in this world our wise and heavenly Father is perfecting through suffering a race of twice born men, who in every respect are becoming like Jesus Christ, their Master, "Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: but made Himself of no reputation, and took upon Him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men: and being found in fashion as a man, He humbled Himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." Phil. 2:6-8. And He, having been made perfect through suffering, was highly exalted and given a name which is above every name, that in the name of Jesus every knee should bow of things in heaven and things in earth and things under the earth. If you will re-read my little book, According to the Purpose, your eyes will catch a fresh vision of God's eternal purpose and plan for the Adamic man He is making in His likeness.

Through the valley of death into the realm of life and joy is God's way to sonship, and the secret of "glorying in tribulation" is to understand the eternal purpose of trial. He who has his eye on the glorious result of his suffering and sees the perfection toward which God is moving him and the end grand and glorious will not kick against God's methods of making that perfection a reality, even though he should sweat great drops of blood in the trying process. Even a worldly person might glory in the severest trials if by such trials he could be assured that he would reach some high or lofty position of power and wealth. He would not glory in suffering for suffering's sake, but in the hope that by this means he might attain his end.

Did not Paul set forth this principle when he said, "And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. Now they do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we an incorruptible." 1 Cor. 9:25. Is it not true that athletes in their various fields of endeavor always master their own bodies and bring them into subjection? Do boxers striving to obtain world titles allow themselves to become fat, lazy gluttons? No, indeed they do not! Do long distance runners attain world renown by spending their days in idleness and ease? No, they do not! They spend hours and days in often agonizing preparation. Yet theirs at best is only a corruptible crown, which within days will fade as a leaf and be forgotten.

If, then, these men strive so hard to gain a few pounds of hard muscle in their efforts to obtain a fading crown, what shall we say of those saints whom God is preparing to become the lords and rulers of the universe? Shall not they be led through trials, temptations, sufferings, tribulations, sickness, pain and death or any other circumstance known to God by which He might perfect the work of sonship He has begun? Should it seem an unthinkable thing that saints, realizing the glorious end of their suffering, should begin to glory in tribulation? Surely Paul must have reached this state of blessedness when he wrote, "Therefore I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christ's sake: for when I am weak, then am I strong." Can we possibly imagine Paul making a statement like that if his spiritual mind were unable to grasp the far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory these sufferings were working for him? No, he could not have done so, for Paul was like all other men. In the natural he shrank from infirmities, but when he saw that through these very weaknesses and distresses the all-wise Lord was making him strong, then he gloried in them, even as we also will do the moment we see beyond the distress of our pain and tribulation into the glory our sufferings are working in us.

Nothing I can write or say on this subject of suffering can produce anything like the understanding the word of God will give as the Holy Spirit reveals His truths to our hearts. Let us then take special notice of some of the statements given by inspiration for our learning and eternal good. Peter was the apostle to whom Jesus said, "Feed My sheep," and of all the Bible writers I have not found any more capable of feeding the soul and spirit than this man Peter. Paul was the most logical of writers. James seems to be the most practical; but Peter is a feeder of the sheep, filling his epistles with blessed food for the soul of man.
In the first epistle, chapter four and verse one, he uncovers in the simplest fashion the first and most elementary purpose of Christian suffering. First he sets forth the sufferings of Christ and asks that we have the same mind as our blessed Lord. Then he discloses the most basic reason for suffering in the most beautiful but forceful terms. "Forasmuch then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind: for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin; that he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God."

Now when a man or woman comes to Christ and believes on His name, that person is undoubtedly saved. Christ has redeemed him. He has put His Spirit within him and the believer is "begotten of God." If he has thoroughly believed in Christ, then he is thoroughly saved. But I need hardly remind you that from the moment of his salvation onward the Lord requires a steady growth in grace. Whether Christians like the expression or not is no concern of mine, but the truth is that from that moment forward the newly saved man must work out his salvation with fear and trembling (Phil. 2:12), knowing that it is God that worketh in him to will and to do His good pleasure. If that new-born Christian does as ninety-five per cent of all Christians do, saying in his heart, "I am saved. I am ready for heaven. I will just wait until I die or until the Lord comes and then enter into rest," that man will go along in the doldrums of Christian experience for the rest of his days, never becoming a mature son of God. No new revelation will brighten his life. No new understanding will enlighten his mind. After fifty years of such a life he will find he has not advanced in understanding nor matured in spiritual stature. I have heard preachers discourage their people from reaching out unto God with words such as these: "We are saved. We have received the baptism of the Spirit. We believe in divine healing, and we are waiting for the coming of the Lord. There is no more than this." Ah, my brother, you have not yet touched the fringe! There are mighty oceans of experience before you that no man has ever yet explored. There are unspeakable things unlawful for a man to utter. 2 Cor. 12:2.

Once upon a time, so the fairy tale goes, there was a frog who lived in a well. He was happy with his surroundings and was quite sure he possessed all the water there was in the world. When one day he was told of lakes and rivers outside, he would not believe. Neither did he pay any attention when others described the mighty oceans that lay at the river's end. "Oh, no," he said. "That is all nonsense and there is no truth in it. I have lived here for years. There is no water other than this and this is good enough for me."

Poor, foolish little fellow he was, but not nearly as foolish as those self-satisfied Christians who make no attempt to add to their faith that list of Christian graces which Peter so beautifully enumerates in these words of wisdom: "And beside this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity. For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he has purged from his old sins. Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall: for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the: everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." 2. Pet. 1:5-11. Surely we can see from these words that the Holy Spirit intends to do an almost endless work of refining in the life of every believer as with infinite care He prepares His saints to reign with Christ on His throne.

You may dislike to hear it, my brothers and sisters, but the church system in our day is full of Christians who, though they believe in Christ, walk almost entirely after the flesh. They live in the spiritual predicament in which Paul found himself when he wrote the seventh chapter of Romans. They live on the low spiritual plane where the flesh lusts against the Spirit and the Spirit against the flesh, and these two are so contrary the one to the other that they can never do the things they would. More and more in these last days the church system manifests the seventeen works of the flesh. The more we see of these modern revivals with their card signing and handshakes, along with their lightness and flippant familiarity, the more prevalent do these works of the flesh become. "Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these: Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time..." past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." Gal. 5:19-21. All these works of the flesh are found among Christians who live not after the Spirit, but mind the things of the physical body, which is the flesh.

With these precepts in mind we will have a better foundation from which to understand the words of Peter quoted above. "Forasmuch then as Christ hath suffered in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind: for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin." I am not sure that I can satisfactorily explain just why or how it is that he who has suffered in the flesh has ceased from sin, but I am sure that those saints who have been buffeted during their lives with much suffering will understand better than I am able to explain how it happens that he who suffers in the flesh finds the flesh with all its enormous propensities for sin begin to fall off and lose its power, "for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin." Suffering has a marvelous sanctifying and cleansing power. Its power to bring saints to maturity is boundless to say the least. There are many, many ways by which Christians suffer, and if we find space, we may enumerate some of them, but let us begin with physical suffering as it concerns sickness and pain.

You are probably aware of the fact that, while men and women remain healthy and strong and able to boast that they have never known a day of sickness, they are inclined to lean far more on their paltry natural strength than upon the power and health of God. To them the flesh is strong and will never know any need. We become like the Egyptians, who put their trust in horses and chariots and not in the Spirit of God, knowing not that their horses are flesh and not spirit. But, when suddenly this strong tree of the flesh is smitten, as was the case with the boasting Nebuchadnezzar, and without warning this tower of human strength is struck down in utter helplessness and we find ourselves tormented with unaccustomed pain and beset with incredible physical weakness until perhaps we are unable to swallow even water, and, being unable to rise, we must be waited upon hand and foot by others until in our forlorn distress and weakness we begin to feel that we may die, then for the first time in our lives we are brought face to face with the weakness and unprofitableness of the flesh. Only a week previously all things in the world loomed large and looked worthwhile, but now they are poor fading leaves, so temporal, so weak, so insecure that now they hold no glamour at all. There in the valley of pain and misery, we begin to cease from the lusts that create sin to lay hold rather on the things that are eternal and can never fade away. In our weakness and infirmity our minds begin to travel beyond the veil of the flesh, beyond the realm of the natural, and beyond the domain of the physical and the passing to lay hold on things, which are spirit and abide forever. The spirit so long obscured by the flesh now reaches far beyond the dominion of decay to the meadows where flowers never fade, beyond the mortal to the immortal and beyond the corruptible to the incorruptible. In his distress and pain the sufferer knows full well that, if God in grace should restore him to health again, he henceforth will hold with a slackened grip the earthly things that appeared so big and precious heretofore, "for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin."

What I have said may come as a surprise to those who have never known illness of any kind, but the words I speak will be as showers upon mown grass to those who have passed through the experience. I give my personal testimony to say that I am most thankful to God for a long life of good and vibrant health, scarcely ever knowing what it is to be sick or tired, but thrice in my life I have been struck down to experience for a season something of the misery of pain and the wearying weakness of the flesh. Let me testify further to say that always in those times of weakness and misery the things of the natural realm faded into nothingness and insignificance while the things of the Spirit became strong and important. It was then above all other times that the weakness and unprofitableness of the flesh became increasingly evident. Then and there it was made abundantly clear that the flesh profiteth nothing and the things of the flesh profit nothing. In such times as these, though one had thrilled to earth's vain pleasure, it profited nothing now, and though one were a millionaire, his money could not help him now, for money buys things only for the flesh. But the things of the Spirit, which hitherto had been somewhat carelessly shoved aside, were those that now became strong, altogether worthwhile and eternal. With these things in mind we begin to see afresh the blessing of suffering and we understand aright what the wise apostle meant when he said, "He that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin, that he should no longer spend the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God."

Though we have mentioned first the possibility of physical suffering through illness, physical suffering is by no means the greatest of all suffering. I suppose there may be ten thousand different avenues through which God's people suffer and, though I shall not attempt to mention more than a few of them, I am sure that the Lord will make real to every reader the blessing of the particular kind of suffering God will use to bring about the kind of perfection each alone must have. Do you not think it is a most remarkable achievement just to gain the knowledge that "he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin"? What a blessing it is to know that our suffering has not been purposeless, but is accomplishing something great and eternal in causing us to see the weakness and unprofitableness of the flesh and of every temporal and natural thing!

No man on earth can foretell by what door suffering will enter nor down which pathway his stealthy feet will tread, as the poet said so well:

"I was standing by my window yester-morning
Without a thought of sorrow or of care,
When I saw the postman coming up the pathway
With such a merry tune and jolly air.
He rang the bell and whistled as he waited;
Then he said, 'Good morning to you, Jack!'
But he little knew the sorrow that he brought me"

When he handed me a letter edged in black." How suddenly and unexpectedly tragedy falls across our pathway! But if our understanding is right and our faith good before God, each and every trial and affliction that arises in our lives will serve to wean us away from the flesh and cause us to lay hold upon the things of the Spirit. As we bear about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, the life of the Lord Jesus is made manifest in our mortal flesh. Compare 2. Cor. 4:10.

The moment we fall into suffering, affliction, tribulation, failure in business, loss of friends or any such trial, there will never lack a host of Job's comforters who will seize upon the opportunity to show us that our sufferings have come upon us because God is displeased with our lives and is punishing us for our wrong doing. Never lend an ear to such unlearned, unenlightened and ignorant people! Rather call to mind the words of our Lord Jesus Christ: "In the world ye shall have tribulation; but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world." Remember our blessed Lord, who knew no sin, who, "when He was reviled, reviled not again. When He suffered, He threatened not, but committed Himself to Him that judgeth righteously, who His own self bore our sins in His own body on the tree."

In a meditation on a subject of such far-reaching potential as that of Christian suffering one can do little more than introduce the truth. It will be an immeasurable blessing for all who suffer tribulation of any sort if they will take their Bible concordance and follow through scripture the themes of suffering, tribulation, affliction, temptation and trial. They will be both surprised and gratified by what they discover and what they will learn. I guarantee that those who are willing to let the word of God speak for itself will develop an entirely different attitude and understanding toward suffering in all its dimensions once they begin to see the eternal weight of glory their trial is working in them for the benefit of the ages to come.

The Apostle Paul was a giant in spiritual experience; yet for all that he was constantly amazed and distressed by the endless trials, temptations and afflictions that like parasites and unwelcome guests crowded into his pathway. So troublesome, hateful and distressing were these afflictions to him that he describes them as a "thorn in the flesh". Anyone who has endured the painful misery of a thorn in his flesh that continually pricked and jabbed at every movement of the body, or a particle in the eye that tormented to distraction, may understand the abhorrence Paul felt toward these constant and detestable buffetings, which he endured all his life. In the eleventh chapter of second Corinthians, after relating the account of his sufferings at the hands of spurious apostles and false brethren, he proceeds to tell of the violence he suffered throughout his ministry. "In labors more abundant, in stripes above measure, in prisons more frequent, in deaths oft. Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one. Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, a night and a day have I been in the deep; in journeyings often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils of mine own counymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren; in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness. Besides those things that are without, that which cometh upon me daily, the care of all the churches. Who is weak, and I am not weak? Who is offended and I burn not? If I must needs glory, I will glory of the things which concern mine infirmities." 2 Cor. 11:23-30. These together with a long list of other sufferings endured by Paul continually were undoubtedly the "buffetings" he referred to as "a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet me, lest I should be exalted above measure through the abundance of the revelations." See 2 Cor. 12:7.

Do not suppose for one moment that Paul was not concerned or distressed by all these tribulations. They were just as fierce a lion in his path or as weighty a millstone about his neck as they would be to you or to me. Crushed and devastated he sought the Lord in his distress three times, earnestly requesting the removal of these afflictions. "For this thing I besought the Lord thrice, that it might depart from me." Verse 8. No doubt he reasoned how much better and how much more efficiently he could do his work if he were free from the continual, violent and unreasonable opposition arising from the Jews and false brethren, how much more effective his ministry would be without the continual weariness of body, the perils of the wilderness and of the city, and the disgusting beatings with the lash and with the rod and the constant danger of being stoned or thrown into jail. It would have been so much easier, so he thought, if all had gone smoothly and everybody had been amiable toward him and he had been a hero, well spoken of by all. For this reason he earnestly sought the Lord twice, and still there was no change or relief from his suffering. Then in his desperation he sought the Lord a third time that these distressing tribulations and sufferings would depart from him. To his amazement the Lord spoke to his heart and the message He gave was not the message he expected, but this: "My grace is sufficient for thee: for My strength is made perfect in weakness." Verse 9. What an incredible revelation that was! Who but Christ could have revealed a truth such as that? This not only explained the purpose of his own suffering but also made clear the mystery of the sufferings of the prophets of old, so vividly described in Hebrews, chapter eleven. It explained how even Jesus Christ Himself was made perfect through suffering and it showed in most eloquent terms the enigma of the suffering of saints throughout the entire church age, and, if we can believe it, it throws abundant illumination also on our own sufferings.

When the Lord by this revelation opened the eyes of Paul to see the true purpose and the absolute necessity of his tribulation and the sufferings of every other saint as well, his lips were opened to speak forth the most blessed confession of his heart, a confession which seems to be one of the most remarkable expressions of spiritual consolation and comprehension ever spoken. Listen to him as he utters these words of understanding: "Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me. Therefore I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christ's sake: for when I am weak, then am I strong." Some men glory in visions and others in revelation, but Paul, who had more of these than they all, said, "... Of myself I will not glory, but in mine infirmities." 2 Cor. 12:5.

Long centuries ago the disconsolate Jacob moaned over the distressing tribulations that beset his way. He seemed to have lost two sons and now the prospect loomed large that he would lose another. His sorrow and heartache, he feared, would bring his gray head with sorrow to the grave. In his inconsolable misery, he wailed out the woes of his heart in these disconsolate words: "Me have ye bereaved of my children: Joseph is not, and Simeon is not, and ye will take Benjamin away: all these things are against me" Gen. 42:36. Poor, broken-hearted old man from whom the kind hand of God's guidance was hidden! How closely does his lamentation resemble the complaint of thousands of saints in our day, who, knowing nothing of the wonder working power of tribulation, fiery trial and affliction, think their God has departed from them and they are doomed to perish in despair. Oh, the difference the light of understanding brings to our grief stricken hearts! Poor Jacob in his desolate dejection wailed out the woeful words, "All these things are against me!" But Paul in the light of what he had learned through his own tribulations victoriously cried, "All things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purpose." Rom. 8:28.

Notice now what wonders are wrought by the suffering God in His grace has permitted to perfect us and how step by step that very suffering leads us to the most excellent of all things. Jacob once saw a ladder reaching from earth to heaven upon which angels ascended and descended. Paul in spirit saw another beautiful ladder whose shining steps rose one above the other in their ascent to the realms of God. In Romans, chapter five, he writes, "We glory in tribulations also; knowing that tribulation worketh patience; and patience, experience; and experience, hope; and hope maketh not ashamed; because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us." Rom. 5:3-5. If these be not ladder rungs from the lowly realm of the flesh to the more excellent way of the Spirit where the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts, then I know not what these may be. Tribulation leads to patience; patience leads to experience; experience leads to hope; and hope makes not ashamed because there the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts. Each rung in this ladder rises in a giant step toward the plateau of mature sonship.

We cannot now consider each step at length. Let us notice, however, that tribulation worketh patience. Now we see what a wonderful advance this is, for James has bidden us to "let patience have her perfect work" that we may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing. Oh, suffering brother or sister! Is it not a giant upward step to discover that our tribulation works patience and that, when patience has completed her perfecting work, we stand before God, perfect and entire, wanting nothing! Why, in my opinion, this one promise alone would be worth a lifetime of suffering. Surely such a triumph as this would be unattainable any other way! I suppose it was in the knowledge that tribulation works patience that Paul taught us to be patient in tribulation. If we are patient in tribulation, then patience can have her perfect work. If this should take a lifetime, surely that would be immaterial. Only this morning I made my complaint to God, saying, "Lord, there are so many things I don't understand!" But no sooner had I uttered the words and waited briefly for a reply than the Lord spoke to my heart and said, "There are so many things you do not need to understand." So, if you question why your affliction besets you all your life, leave it in the hands of God. He alone knows how much firing and tempering you need that patience may have her perfect work, making you perfect and entire, wanting nothing.

Now patience worketh experience. I cannot overestimate the extreme value of experience. After fifty years of serving the Lord I am thoroughly convinced that nothing is ever fully learned but by experience. Talk as we may about suffering, tribulation or any subject we wish, our words will be little more than idle philosophy until the Lord has caused us to walk with Him through the valleys of death, the paths of tribulation, the place of betrayal by false brethren, the unreasonableness of unfilial children, the despair of paternal neglect, and a thousand other stormy seas. Those who have suffered with Him understand by reason of their experience.

Experience, once it is attained, leads to hope. I should like to write a book on hope, but let me say that hope always precedes real faith. Never, never be ashamed of hope. It is the hope of salvation that first brings sinners to the feet of Jesus. It was hope that made the little woman with the issue of blood push her way through the crushing throng to touch the hem of Christ's garment. It was hope that made the blind men shout, "Thou Son of David, have mercy on us!" It was hope that made the father of the demoniac cry, "If Thou canst do anything, have mercy on us and help us!" It was hope that made the men tear the tiling from the roof to get the palsied man to Jesus. It was hope that made the impotent man lie for thirty-eight years by the pool of Uethesda. Hope maketh not ashamed. Hope cares not what enemies think. It steps right over the heads of unbelieving men. It causes the love of God to spring up in the troubled breast. Paul even ventures to say that we are saved by hope. Rom. 8:24.

Hope is one of the three virtues that abide forever. "Now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity." 1 Cor. 13:13. It was hope that brought our forefathers to this new world. It is in hope that we labor, plant our fields, and do our work. It is through hope that Abraham believed in hope. The light of hope is the first step toward real faith and hope that maketh not ashamed places our feet in those Elysian Fields where, glory of glories, the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts. Blessed and wonderful as these things are, we must never forget the lowly root from which these glories sprang I he root of suffering where tribulation worked patience, and patience worked experience, and experience worked hope; and hope makes not ashamed because the love of God is being mightily shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost. How often I have heard Christians say, "We need more love." Well, love, my friend, is a spiritual thing. It is a grace that comes by the indwelling presence of Jesus Christ. It cannot be manufactured, possessed or shown apart from Him. It has its roots in tribulation. No tribulation no patience, no experience, no hope and no love.

Let no man be moved by these afflictions, for "yourselves know that we are appointed thereunto." 1 Thess. 3:3. "We ourselves glory in the churches of God for your patience and faith in all your persecutions and tribulations which ye endure: which is a manifest token of the righteous judgment of God, that ye may be accounted worthy of the kingdom of God, for which ye also suffer." 2 Thess. 1:4, 5. What marvelous words are these!
However much we are afflicted in this vale of affliction, or however much we suffer in this valley of the shadow of death, or however fierce our tribulation in these burning fiery furnaces, be consoled by remembering this: Our affliction is light indeed compared to the glory it is producing. "For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal."

CHAPTER TWO
THE FRUIT OF SUFFERING

The Apostle Paul wrote a fatherly and confidential letter to his spiritual son Timothy. The illustrious apostle had known long years of experience in the faith. Times without number he had discovered that men were seldom loved because they were godly, but all too often they were persecuted for righteousness' sake, even as our Lord Jesus Christ had warned His disciples. Timothy was a man of God with an honorable background of godliness, but compared to Paul he was yet a youth in experience, though it is believed by some that he was at least forty years old when Paul wrote his epistles to him.

Paul had much truth to impart to this young man, not the least of which was the important fact that "all who will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." "Thou hast fully known my doctrine, manner of life, purpose, faith, longsuffering, charity, patience, persecutions, afflictions, which came to me at Antioch, at Iconium, at Lystra; what persecutions I endured: but out of them all the Lord delivered me. Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution. But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived." 2 Tim. 3; 10-13.

Recently I received a letter from a sister in Missouri in which she makes this well-considered and thoughtful statement: "I find myself so often having to explain to people the 'why' of (heir sufferings. I know of almost no one who has come out unto I he Lord who has not been attacked by parents, friends, and people whom they love. This is what hurts. We can suffer hurt from strangers and it means nothing; but from close relatives and friends it hurts. The Lord led me through many coals of fire until it nearly took my life. I literally almost died from a broken heart more times than one and through it all I learned the reasons; and when I knew what God was doing, not to me but for me, I could rejoice and see the results. God showed me that the mulish emotions hurt. Jealousy, revenge, unforgiveness, pride, selfishness in any form were a cancer that had to go and that, when these were wounded, they must be wounded to death. In other words, they must suffer until they no longer exist. Also I learned that we can let, that is, permit, them to go and thus shorten our sufferings or we can stubbornly continue to lick our wounds and continue to suffer. These things are difficult to get across to someone who is wounded."

To such a statement of truth as this we assent with a hearty amen, firstly because such understanding is born of experience and secondly because these words bear witness to the truth. Many thousands who ponder these precepts can attest to the agonizing sufferings they have endured because people they loved more dearly than their own souls have well nigh killed them by breaking their hearts through their maliciousness, malignity, indifference, unbelief, ungodliness, unthankfulness and misrepresentation. But, brother, sister, I urge you to learn this superlative fact: The suffering you endure is killing only those things in you that God has decreed must die. Perhaps it is personal pride that is hurting and giving so much pain. Had all gone well on your behalf, all men would have said you were blessed of God, but because in the eyes of friend or foe you suffer while men of lesser consecration exult in prosperity and well-being, both friend and foe gather as Job's comforters to condemn you. But they do not know this magnificent truth: "Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom He receiveth." It may be that God intended that some subtle unbelief should perish from our hearts, for it is often true that, though we have committed our lives, our plans, and our children to God, we are betimes inclined to get ourselves into a state of bewilderment and unbelief, completely forgetting that the Lord has promised to keep that which was committed to Him, whether it be our children, our lives, or the daily affairs that concern our existence here on earth.
Some time ago a dear brother confided to me some of his family problems. It seemed he had one son who was causing him much concern and distress. One day, as he earnestly sought the Lord concerning his son, the Spirit halted him in the midst of his intercession to speak directly to his heart, and this is the manner in which the Lord spoke to him: "Never mind your son. I am not interested in him just now. I am interested in you." So the dear lather ceased from his worrying over the actions of his son to put his confidence in the Lord and give ear to what the Spirit would have him learn. Brother, Sister, if we could only learn, and that right early, that it is for our sake and our eternal good and sonship that these sufferings fall upon us, we could release the problem that causes such distress, commit the matter to God, and see the Lord's face shining as a sun of consolation through our bitter tears. We would then have learned the lesson we needed to know, it may be patience or forgiveness or longsuffering or to cease from unbelief or some sin. There is no way we humans can tell what glory the Lord has accomplished through our suffering, but know this: Our light affliction, cruel as was its power to crucify the flesh, enduring but for a moment, worked for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory and we like Job, of whom we wrote before, have come to see the glory of God in a new way, and, seeing Him, we have been changed more into His likeness, for our Father has added to us double of His goodness and glory.

Thirty years ago my wife and I endured one of the most disconcerting tribulations of our lives. Not only had our life's work been swept away through the envy and malice of conniving men, but lies and misrepresentations were circulated from coast to coast with what at least appeared to be the hope of bringing us into perpetual disrepute. In the midst of this tribulation one good sister, who had read the evil reports, said to me, "Why don't you write an article and give them back as good as you got?" But the Spirit had told me to keep silent, and so I replied, "Sister, if I did that, I would be as bad as they are." Learn to relinquish your woes, dear brethren. Do not hold on to them or in any way justify yourself. Your sufferings are of God. Therefore let them go. Commit them into the hands of Him who said, "Vengeance is Mine; I will repay, saith the Lord." "Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink; for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head. Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." Rom. 12:20, 21. In your suffering commit the keeping of your souls unto Him as unto a faithful Creator.

You will discover that time is a great leveler. It has a way of bringing down the mighty from their high seats. Time has a way of bringing out the truth. It has a habit of burying in the dust those who were your tormentors. For a little moment it may seem better to be the persecutor than the persecuted, the scoffer than the scoffed, the afflicter than the afflicted, the reviler than the reviled, the scourger rather than the scourged, but it is God who is with His people. One like the Son of God will stand in the fire with you as He walked in the furnace with Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego. The angel of the Lord was in the lions' den with Daniel. He is there now with you, too. The Lord shook loose the bonds of Paul and Silas. A mighty angel smote Peter on his side and led him forth from his chains and imprisonment. The angel of the Lord is breaking your bonds, too. One man is a majority when God is with him and all the hosts of the world are a miserable minority when God is not on their part.

Fear not; I am with thee! O be not afraid!
For I am thy God; I will still give thee aid.
I'll strengthen thee, help thee, and cause thee to stand, Upheld by My gracious, omnipotent hand.

"All that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." 2 Tim. 3:12. The spirit of Christianity is so opposite to the spirit of the world that he who gives himself up entirely to God, making the Holy Scriptures the rule of his life and action, will be always more or less reviled and persecuted for righteousness' sake. If the Christian gives no quarter to vice and iniquity, we may be sure that vice and iniquity will give no quarter to him either. Beware when all men speak well of you, for, if they do, you are compromising with sin somewhere. Otherwise they would not be so friendly toward you. While "evil men and seducers wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived, continue thou in the things which thou hast learned and hast been assured of, knowing of whom thou hast learned them; and that from a child thou hast known the holy scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus." 2 Tim. 3:13-15.
It has always been a source of amazement to Christians to discover that their godliness and well-doing is often times the basic cause of their suffering. People seldom love you because you have done them good. It is hard to deny the fact that there is a strange basic tendency in humanity that often causes mankind to resent the good that has been done to them and return evil in its place. This strange evil tendency can be clearly seen even on an international plane, as, for instance, is seen in the oft repeated unkindness and ill-disposed spitefulness of France toward the Anglo-Saxon world, who twice in the last century has rescued them from their enemies. Very early in life I learned that friends could not be won by doing them favors, for they, alas, soon begin to expect the favors and show resentment if they are not forthcoming. Many thousands of parents are making the same mistake with their children. They lavish every imaginable gift and kindness upon them and in return receive neither thanks, appreciation, or love. Does not the scripture speak thus of Christ, who "came unto His own, and His own received Him not." They resented His kindness and mercy and, I though He came to deliver them, in essence they cried, "We will not have this man to rule over us. So they rejected Him and hanged Him on a tree, though not one of them could find fault in Him at all or convince Him of any sin. If a man therefore in good conscience toward God endure grief, suffering wrongfully, let him take heart and be of good courage, for if, when you do well and suffer for it, you take it patiently, this is acceptable with God. "For what glory is it if, when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye take it patiently?" Almost any reasonable person is aware that our faults need to be corrected, but if our good is evil spoken of and we receive it with patience and understanding, this is acceptable with God. When people dislike you, they will find fault with the way you hold your spoon, but if they like you, they will overlook almost any fault.

"The eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and His ears are open unto their prayers: but the face of the Lord is against them that do evil. And who is he that will harm you, if ye be followers of that which is good? But and if ye suffer for righteousness' sake, happy are ye: and be not afraid of their (error, neither be troubled; but sanctify the Lord God in your hearts: and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear: having a good conscience; that, whereas they speak evil of you, as of evildoers, they may be ashamed that falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ. For it is better, if the will of God be so, that ye suffer for well doing than for evil doing. For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit."

Suffering of any kind, rightly accepted and understood, always works death to the flesh, but life to the spirit. Through suffering the things of the corrupt and carnal mind perish and die, but the things that are of the Spirit increase and grow. The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, goodness, gentleness, faithfulness, meekness and temperance. All these things grow and increase under fiery trial, affliction, suffering and temptation. Conversely, the works of the flesh, which are these; adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulation, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings and such like, are cut off and perish from the lives of those who are under affliction. I do not think we can emphasize too strongly that suffering for righteousness' sake is a God sent purifier, putting to death all corrupt and carnal tendencies while being at the same moment a prolific fertilizer to all graces of the Spirit. Since every son of God must be brought to perfection before the blessed day of their adoption and manifestation, let us then with great willingness yield ourselves to the refining fires of the Spirit, knowing that in all things it is God who worketh in us both to will and to do His good pleasure.

To suffer for righteousness' sake is the honor and happiness of Christians. To suffer for the cause of truth, a good conscience or any part of Christian duty is a great honor. The delight of it is greater than the torment, the honor much more than the disgrace, and the gain much more than the loss. God's people have no reason to be afraid of the threats and rage of their enemies, because their enemies are God's enemies. His face is against them. His power is above them. They are objects of His curse and can do nothing to His children but by His permission. Instead of being terrified by the fear of men, we should sanctify the Lord God in our hearts and let Him be our fear and dread as I lie prophet Isaiah stated (8:13) or as Jesus said, "Be not afraid of them that kill the body, and after that have no more that they can do. But I shall forewarn you whom ye shall fear: Fear Him (that is, God) which after He hath killed hath power to cast you into hell; yea, I say unto you, fear Him." Luke 12: 4, 5.
The more we fear God, the less we fear men. Therefore a sense of all God's divine perfection is a perfect antidote against the fear of man or any suffering he can inflict upon us. To understand the perfect ways of God is a great fortress against all despondency in any manner of suffering, trial or tribulation. If we know that with God and with them that love Him all things absolutely all things — are working together for our good whether we understand it or not, then is not this a mighty bulwark to our faith? Does it not make us say, "I can do all things, be all things, and suffer all things for Christ's sake and for the sake of the wonderful good He is working out in our lives"? All confession of our faith before men ought to be made with meekness and modesty in the fear of God.

How good it would be if every saint could learn early in his Christian experience that his life is as clay in the hands of the potter to be molded, not according to his likes and dislikes, but according to the design of the potter. From the time of our it-generation until the day we stand before the Lord complete and perfect there will never be a day in which the Lord will rest from His marvelous work of grace and sonship. This work must continue unabated until we stand complete in Him. If we submit ourselves to the fashioning of His skilful hands, we will be vessels unto honor and praise and glory in His presence, but if we squirm and struggle and resist, we may not be found perfect in the day of His coming. It is very, very easy for Christians to sing:

"Have Thine own way, Lord; have Thine own way.
Thou art the Potter; I am the clay.
Mold me and make me after Thy will,
While I am waiting yielded and still.

It is easy to sing that beautiful verse of song, but the test of our sincerity will be revealed when the Spirit of the Lord begins in earnest to break us, melt us, and mold us after His will. How will we react when He begins to wash the rocks and corruption out of the clay of our lives by the Spirit of judgment and the Spirit of burning? What will we do when the Potter begins to make the clay pliable by beating out and crushing the material, which must be removed before our vessel can be molded at all? How will we react when He places us upon the wheels and, without asking our permission, begins to mold us into the vessels of His choice — not the vessels of our own choice? And what will we say when the vessel He has molded is placed upon the slab and pushed into the roaring furnace for the final fiery process of tempering before it is presented to Him in perfection?

All these molding processes speak of suffering, pain and tribulation, and every one of them is designed by God to rid us of all unnecessary and detrimental things, while on the other hand adding to us those graces of the Spirit that must be manifested in the lives of the saints of God. Listen to the beloved Peter as he unfolds the wonderful process by which we become partakers of the divine nature, thus securing an abundant entrance into the kingdom of God, and by which also we escape the lust and corruption that is in the world. Give careful audience to what he says, for it is weighty and true. "According as His divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of Him that hath called us to glory and virtue: Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust. And beside this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity. For if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall: for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." 2 Pet. 1:3-11.

Is not this another spiritual ladder by which we rise from the lowly earth of our carnal selves to the vaulted skies of sonship unt identity with Jesus Christ? We read over these productive passages much too quickly and with far too little thought and consideration of their weightiness. Enough truth lies in the fertile field of these few verses to keep us pondering for months to come. Add to your faith virtue. Of virtue Funk and Wagnall's dictionary has this to say: "It is the quality of moral righteousness or excellence; rectitude. The practice of moral duties and the abstinence from immorality and vice; a life devoted to virtue; sexual purity; chastity." particular type of moral excellence, especially one of those considered to be of special importance in philosophical or religious doctrine." A few ill the synonyms of this word are — goodness, morality, rectitude and righteousness. Let the Holy Spirit add these virtues to your faith while you shun the repugnant filth and corruption offered by this Sodom-like age.

To virtue we are exhorted to add knowledge — not the knowledge of the world that puffs up, but the knowledge of God I hat gives understanding. The knowledge of the holy (one) gives understanding. Prov. 9:10. The fear of the Lord is the beginning ill knowledge. Prov. 1:7. He that loveth instruction loveth knowledge, but fools despise knowledge and instruction. "Wisdom is the principal thing," said the wise man; "therefore get wisdom, but with all thy getting get understanding." First to our faith we add virtue and then to our virtue we add knowledge. Here we are brought in contact with the mind of Christ. Casting off the carnal mind with its human way of looking at things, we begin to let the mind of Christ dwell within us. Then to knowledge we are to add temperance. Be temperate in all things as the scriptures tell us. Temperance appears to me to be the very first rung in the ladder leading to the fullness of the nine graces of I he Spirit, thus: temperance, meekness, faithfulness, goodness, gentleness, longsuffering, peace, joy, and love. Love is the Ultimate. It is not something we can turn on at will and show, as so many Christians imagine. It is a grace of the Holy Spirit, which either we possess because of His indwelling or we do not possess. Love is the more excellent way. It is a virtue of God. Love is never given as a gift to any man. It comes as a result of the Christ dwelling and living His life in our hearts. Love is a fruit of God's Spirit. It cannot be separated from the Spirit. It is the highest and most sublime of all spiritual virtues. Even true faith worketh by love. Gal. 5:6.

To temperance Peter exhorts us to add patience. Call to remembrance here that "tribulation worketh patience." Lest we forget that suffering is the true theme of our study, let me remind you that Paul teaches us to rejoice in hope, be patient in tribulation, and continue instant in prayer, Oh brothers and sisters, how impatient we become in our tribulation! How we chafe in our sufferings, so often demanding instant relief! And, if in sickness we are unable to get quick relief and healing from the Lord, how quickly we forget to be instant in prayer to go running instead to the doctor to get him to do what the Lord delayed to do! Should our suffering come from another source, we seek the help of the arm of flesh to deliver us from the tribulation into which the Lord has brought us for our betterment. The time has certainly come for us to present our bodies a living sacrifice upon the altar — not a dead sacrifice, but a living sacrifice, placing ourselves upon the altar as Isaac did, fearless of the knife that was intended to destroy his natural life.

Abraham, in offering his son, knew that God was able to raise him from the dead, not in the likeness of his old self, but in newness of life after the Spirit. This kind of sacrifice is our reasonable service. Rom. 12:1. "Be not conformed to this world," said Paul, "but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God." How wonderfully these scriptures lead us step by step in Christian experience until at last we stand in the likeness of Christ, possessing the renewed mind, which is the mind of Christ.

To patience we are to add godliness. 1 Pet. 1:6. "Godliness is profitable unto all things," said Paul (1 Tim. 4:8), but "bodily exercise profiteth little." Therefore in verse 7 he exhorts us to exercise ourselves unto godliness. Most men suppose that gain is godliness, but the Holy Spirit teaches us that godliness with contentment is great gain. Others have a form of godliness, but totally deny the power of it, but Paul instructs the saints to lead a quiet life in all godliness. 1 Tim. 2:2. The mystery of godliness is perhaps the greatest of all mysteries. 1 Tim. 3:16. The mighty mystery of godliness is seen in that God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit by His resurrection from the dead. Christ was seen of angels and of men for forty days after His resurrection after which He was received up into heaven from whence He poured forth His glorious Spirit of power. The sacred mystery that God was manifest in the flesh continues to this very hour and is manifest anew each and every time Jesus Christ our Lord comes into the life of a sinner to transform him into a child of God. When the creator made the first Adam, the dust of the earth was made flesh, but when Jesus Christ, the last Adam, appeared, the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us. Can we wonder that the apostle exclaimed, "Great is the mystery of godliness!" Believers become Godlike, not by trying to be so, but by letting Christ live His life in their mortal flesh that it be "not I. but Christ." He gives to us the mind of Christ that we may be transformed by the renewing of the mind. The three English words transformed (Rom. 12:2), changed (2 Cor. 3:18), and transfigured (Matt. 17:2) are all translated from the Greek word metamorphoo, from which comes our English word metamorphosis, which means to change from one form or substance to another. To be changed thus is the beginning of the resurrection. Why do we wonder, then, that the Spirit exhorts us to add godliness, or God-likeness, to the virtue of patience?

To godliness we are to add brotherly kindness. “His merciful kindness is great toward us,” the Psalmist said (117:2), and “let the righteous smite me (this could be suffering): it shall be a kindness.” Psa. 141:5. To be kind is to be gentle and considerate in behavior, good hearted and benign. A kind act is a manifestation of good heartedness. Therefore the scripture urges, lie ye kind one to another, tender hearted, forgiving one another even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.” The loving kindness of God is shed abroad in all the world. It is manifested toward those who love Him and to those who know nothing of Him. Even when He smites or wounds, it is done in kindness. It shall be an excellent oil. Saints should never engage in any act for which they will afterwards be sorry. Neither should they ever repay evil for evil, knowing that the evil they have received and the tribulation they endured are part of that suffering sent by God for their eternal benefit.

To brotherly kindness add love. The love of God is always the highest rung in the ladder. I know it is true that all God's works are done in love. Love never dies, but abides forever. God is love and the end of all godliness is that we should be like Him. It was God who so loved the world that He gave His Son, and the good apostle tells us, “Herein is love; not that we loved God, but that He loved us and gave Himself for us.”

I have enlarged somewhat on these precious virtues that we may be the more aware that suffering in whatsoever form it comes is for the definite purpose of bringing the saints to maturity in all that is Godlike and of decreasing all that is natural and of the first Adam. “Forasmuch then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind: for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin; that he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God.” 1 Pet. 4:1,2. "For even hereunto are ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example that ye should follow in His steps: who did no sin, neither was guile found in His mouth: who, when He was reviled, reviled not again: when He suffered, He threatened not; but committed Himself to Him that judgeth righteously." 1 Pet. 2:21-23.

In this beautiful passage Christ Jesus is set forth as the example for all to follow. "He committed Himself to God, who judgeth righteously." This principle is of utmost importance in all tribulation and affliction. We need not defend ourselves. God will take care of our foes. When He was reviled, He reviled not again. When He suffered, He threatened not. He stood as a lamb dumb before her shearsers and answered nothing. Man in his reviling could say what he pleased, think as he pleased and judge as he pleased, but Jesus Christ rested in the assurance that God, the judge of all, was fully aware of all the truth. Therefore with humility and confidence He committed Himself to Him that judges righteously. What a lesson for sons to learn! Oh that suffering saints would learn to commit the keeping of their souls to God! Cease from your own arguments and the striving to defend yourself and let Him be your mighty rock and Impregnable defense. Cease from trying either to convince your enemies or to convince God and remember rather the word of wisdom spoken by Peter: "Wherefore let them that suffer according to the will of God commit the keeping of their souls to him in well doing, as unto a faithful Creator." 1 Pet. 4:19.

Three outstanding truths are immediately evident in this verse. First, our sufferings are usually according to the will of God. Secondly, the faithful Creator is at work in our sufferings, hinging us into the image of Christ; and, thirdly, we should learn to take our hands off the whole affair and commit all into the hands of the faithful Creator. Then will “the God of all grace, who hath called us unto His eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after that ye have suffered a while, make you perfect, establish, lengthen, settle you.” 1 Pet. 5:10.

One of the most famous utterances ever made by the apostle Paul is found in Phil. 3:10-14. It is really a prayer. "That I may know Him, and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings, being made conformable unto His death; if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead. Not us though I had already attained, either were already perfect: but I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus." We cannot here launch into a lengthy exposition of this beautiful scripture, but it is plain to see that high above all other desires was the longing to know Him mill in doing so to experience the power of His resurrection and to be made conformable to His death in the hope of attaining the resurrection out from among the dead. Well did this man of God know, however, that all this hinged on one thing — the fellowship of His sufferings. Without that there could be no vital experience of true conformity to Christ's death. Without conformity to His death there could be no resurrection from among the dead ones. After the sufferings of his life Paul knew he had reached the experience that could be identified as death. Having entered into fellowship with Christ in suffering, he had become partaker of His death and burial. Nothing pertaining to the natural realm mattered a straw to him any more. "I have a desire to depart and be with Christ, which is far better," he said; and on another occasion, "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand." No more did he hold tenaciously to this realm of death and darkness. In his identification with Christ he had died all the death it was possible to die. Henceforth resurrection and life were before him. He was attaining resurrection from among the dead ones who existed round about him — attaining it while he still walked on this earth among men. While the dead buried their dead, he was following Christ to life. To attain incorruption or immortality without death is impossible, but we can attain conformity to His death and identification with Him in it while we still walk in this world of dead men.

Even our Lord Jesus Christ "learned obedience by the things He suffered, and, being made perfect, He became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey Him." Heb. 5:8,9. "For it became Him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings." Heb. 2:10. It must be noticed here how consistently Paul connects perfection with suffering, not only in the two passages quoted here, but in most of the passages we have studied. Even in Verse 9 this same thought appears. "We see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor." The crowning with glory and honor came after the suffering and not without it nor before it. The whole realm from the cradle to the grave is the realm of death — not life, and in it all creation groans and groans in the agonies of the death experience. But "our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal." 2 Cor. 4:17,18. "Take, my brethren, the prophets," says James, "who have spoken in the name of the Lord, for an example of suffering, affliction, and of patience. Behold, we count them happy which endure. Ye have heard of the patience of Job, and have seen the end of the Lord that the Lord is very pitiful, and of tender mercy. James 5; 10,11. Would you not say that the end of the Lord here mentioned refers to Job's perfection through suffering?

We should direct our thoughts to yet another consideration. In Col. 1:24 Paul made a statement, which cannot be understood except by the help of the Lord. Speaking of himself as a minister of the gospel (verse 23), he says, "Who now rejoice in my sufferings for you, and fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh for His body's sake, which is the church." I am sure that neither Paul nor anyone else could have added aught to the sufferings of Christ, for they were complete, God had witnessed the travail of His soul and was satisfied. But Paul, being a member of the body of Christ, was wise enough to see that a full amount of suffering and affliction had been allotted to each member of the body of Christ and that suffering was not yet full, but must continue until all the sons are presented in perfection. On the day that Ananias was sent to lay hands on Paul after his memorable conversion, the Lord said, "I will show him how great things he must suffer for My name's sake." Acts 9:16. To this Paul attested when he said, "The Holy Ghost witnesseth in every city, saying that bonds and afflictions abide me." Acts 20:23. Until these were fully accomplished, he knew he had not yet fulfilled the full extent of his own suffering.

He was not, however, mindful only of his own sufferings. Paul well knew that he was a true member of the mystical body of Christ. For years he had taught that Christ's body was composed of many saints, all of whom, like Christ the head, must be perfected through suffering. There is no way of avoiding the conclusion that all the sons of God, members of the Christ body, must come to perfection by being chastened as sons. For what son is he whom the father chasteneth not? If, therefore, we receive not chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are we bastards and not sons (see Heb. 12:7,8); that is to say, we are illegitimate sons, not real sons. In the modern church system there are, I fear, many bastards. Many, many are loudly claiming sonship who refuse to take up the cross of suffering that they might be made conformable unto Christ's death.
Paul was showing here that Christ the body must be perfected through identification with Christ in His humiliation just as Christ the head was perfected through suffering. There can be no difference. Paul knew, as you and I should also know, that our sufferings are not only bringing eternal benefit to us personally, but they are bringing eternal benefit to the whole spiritual body of Christ. Did not Paul say, "And whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it; or one member be honored, all the members are honored with it"? 1 Cor. 12:26. Can the hand be crushed and the whole body not feel the distress and pain? If a foreign particle is in the eye, will not the whole body feel the pain and will not every member strive to bring relief to the afflicted member? Therefore of a truth, when one member suffers, all suffer; when one member rejoices, all rejoice. The sufferings of Paul helped to fill up and complete the full complement of sufferings of the universal body, but to no greater extent than your sufferings and mine serve to perfect the body by filling up the full amount of its sufferings, that the body of sons in entirety may be presented faultless before the throne of His glory with exceeding joy.

The suffering of the church must never be considered a matter for great depression and sadness. It was for the joy that was set before Him that Jesus Christ endured the cross, despised the shame, and is now set down at the right hand of the majesty on high. Paul, because he understood the wonderful work his own sufferings were accomplishing, said, "Therefore, I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christ's sake: for when I am weak, then am I strong," and again, as we have just read, "who now rejoice in my sufferings." It is not the grief and pain the saints enjoy, but their cause for rejoicing is in seeing the invisible glory that is being accomplished both in them and in the entire Christ body. We, like Him, see the travails of our souls and are satisfied.

Brethren, I deplore the vain twaddle that is being preached today concerning the abundant life. From coast to coast preachers are saying the very opposite to what I am saying here. They unashamedly tell people that any kind of suffering is unnecessary. In fact, they say it is a sign of God's disfavor. They persuade the Christians that they should have the finest and best of all the good things the world has to offer — the best of jobs, the highest salaries, the finest homes, the choicest automobiles, good and luxurious furniture and an abundance of all the amenities of life. My brethren, this is not the abundant life of which Jesus spoke when He said, "I am come that ye might have life, and have it more abundantly." The abundant life consists not of temporal things. If God has favored you with them, then you may accept them, but do not deceive yourself by thinking that these temporal things are the abundant life. Job possessed all these things for which men seek, but his abundant life in Christ came when all these things were swept away. Then and not until then his eye saw the Lord. Earthly possessions are bondages and chains that tie men to this present world system, and if we set our hearts upon these uncertain riches, they will ruin us. Was it not earthly possessions that kept the rich young ruler from coming to Christ? Was it not earthly possessions that caused the rich man to say, "I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and all my goods. And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry." But the Lord answered and said, "Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee."

As we rapidly approach the end of this age and tribulation looms larger by the hour, as we see the financial systems collapsing and money becoming worthless and losing its meaning, as we see one worlders aiming at a world government, a world money system, and a world religion, as we see that Babylon has fallen and become the hold of every unclean and hateful thing, it is time we began to look at life as it really is and the future as it will be. It is time we learned to say with Paul, "I have learned in whatsoever state I am to be content," and cease from our love of this world's goods.

We could scarcely close this study with more fitting words than those written by Paul to the troubled Thessalonians: "We ourselves glory in you in the churches of God for your patience and faith in all your persecutions and tribulations that ye endure: which is a manifest token of the righteous judgment of God, that ye may be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, for which ye also suffer ... And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with His mighty angels."

His purposes will ripen fast,
Unfolding every hour.
The bud may have a bitter taste,
But sweet will be the flower.
Judge not the Lord by feeble sense,
But trust Him for His grace;
Behind a frowning providence
He hides a smiling face.

SUFFERING TRIBULATION

The word of God tells us in unmistakable terms that the final days of this age of grace are to be fraught with great tribulation, and that tribulation, if we err not in understanding, will be of a kind such as the world has never before known. All previous ages have ended their course with judgment and calamity. The Edenic age, the age of innocence, ended with man's transgression and his subsequent expulsion from Eden. The age of conscience ended with the devastating flood, whose raging waters swept practically all life from the face of the earth. The age of human government ended with the tower of Babel, the catastrophic confusion of tongues and the dispersion of the people. The age of promise ended with God's chosen people, the covenant seed of Abraham, in bondage and slavery and devastating judgments against Egypt. The age of law ended with the crucifixion of Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory. The age of grace in which we now live will end with great tribulation, the coming of the Lord, and the judgment of the nations. Even the blessed millennial kingdom, for which all creation has waited and prayed from time immemorial, will end with one final insurrection when Satan is loosed from his prison to gather the unbelieving nations in one last rebellion against the government of Christ. Rev. 20:7-10. In the light of these indisputable facts it is no great wonder that this age, which is the end of man's iniquitous rule, will also end with great tribulation.

Without the crucible of tribulation and suffering it is almost impossible to know a true disciple from a false one. The world is full of fair weather Christians and professors, people who "go along for the ride" or because it is the popular thing to do. I am making no mistake when I tell you that religion in general and evangelical Christianity in particular is harboring many money-hungry pulpit orators who are nothing but pretenders. They give glowing testimonies of what Christ has done in their lives, yet they go right on with their Hollywood acting and their shows in the night clubs of Reno and Las Vegas. Many of their professions arise, I fear, from the wealth they accrue rather than from a sincere change of heart. Being no true testimony to godliness, they cause others to follow their pernicious example. They popularize such sacred truths as the new birth and thus by evil usage ruin its true message. They degrade the high and holy word love, bringing it down to the level of illicit sex so that, when the word is used in its proper context, it is misunderstood.

Our Lord Jesus plainly told us that these fair weather Christians were like seed planted in stony places, which have no root in themselves but endure for a while; but when tribulation and persecution arise from the word, by and by they are offended. Matt. 13:21. Again they are likened unto men who received seed among the thorns, for, though they hear the word, yet the cares of this world and the deceitfulness of riches and the lusts of other things entering in choke the word and it becomes unfruitful. From Matt. 13:21, which I have quoted, our Lord has made it very clear that tribulation is a fiery trial sent by God to test true discipleship, that the professor who has no root in Christ will under trial be revealed for what he really is, but the saint who is genuinely grounded in Christ will be greatly established by trial and, being thereby purified, will shine forth in the image of Christ.

I cannot speak too forcefully concerning the necessity of a genuine, good and steadfast experience in Christ Jesus by which the believer is completely separated from the world by the new birth. The sinner, coming to Christ, must repent of all his former sins and completely turn away from them. He must receive Jesus Christ into his life as his Lord and Saviour and he must willingly and eternally commit the keeping of his soul and his future into the faithful care of Christ. "As many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe in His name: which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of man, but of God." John 1:12,13. A man who has so thoroughly received Christ as is here indicated will discover that his old life has passed away and his entire outlook has become new. He will discover that he himself has become a new creature in Christ, yea, a new creation. He will find that the sins he once loved he now hates and the things he once hated he now loves.

First believe is the message of the New Testament. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." The word saved is a correct New Testament expression and to be saved is a positive New Testament experience. We find the term saved repeated over and over again both by Christ and by His apostles as they preached a salvation that can be experienced by all who believe. Compare Acts 2:47; 4:12; 16:30,31.

One of the greatest mistakes a young Christian can make is to imagine that, after he has repented of his sin and given his life to Christ, from that time forward all will be pleasant sailing, fair weather and calm seas. A Christian can make no greater mistake than this. All will not be easy nor will all be fair weather. He must remember at least two important precepts, first, that the new life he has entered upon is a spiritual walk in a spiritual realm, and second, that the world in which he dwells is a natural world in a completely corrupt and carnal realm. He will soon discover how incredibly true are the words of scripture. "The flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary the one to the other: so that ye cannot do the things that ye would." Gal. 5:17. He will discover to his consternation that the people who once were his friends and buddies are now no longer friends, but tend to avoid him, hoping that he will avoid them also. His life is now being lived on an entirely different plane. He will soon begin to understand what Jesus meant when He said, "In the world ye shall have tribulation; but be of good cheer: I have overcome the world."

Secondly a young Christian must learn — and the sooner the better — that the new and beautiful life he has now embraced has not yet reached the fullness that the Lord intends it to be. The promise of God is: "As many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God." The Lord will be satisfied with nothing less than this. When one first receives Christ as his Saviour, he is a child of God, but he is an immature baby son like new, born babes in the natural realm. 1 Peter 2:2. He is beautiful and a cause for rejoicing among the angels of heaven, but, my young Christian brother or sister, "It doth not yet appear what you shall be." 1 John 3:2. God's intention is that you through trial, temptation, suffering affliction and tribulation will grow into the full maturity of God's sons. You will become a son of God even as Jesus Christ, your elder brother, is a Son of God. Adoption in scripture bears the meaning of full mature sonship through being born into the family of God. When the voice of God spoke from heaven at the baptism of Jesus, saying, "This is My beloved Son in whom I am well pleased," Matt. 3:17, that was adoption. Before that time Jesus was known as Jesus of Nazareth, but after this divine pronouncement He is Jesus the Christ, the anointed Son of God. It is true He was the Son of God from the manger of Bethlehem, but not the mature anointed Christ, not the Son by the rite of adoption. Henceforth the command of God is, "Hear Him! I am well pleased in Him. Whatever He says is right. Do it." Whatever He speaks is the mind of God. Whatever He says He has already received of the Father.

Wonderful as is this fact in the life of our Lord Jesus Christ, I say without hesitation that this same adoption is God's highest intention for all who repent and believe on His name. It is His divine will that His newborn baby sons should progress from spiritual infancy to maturity and adoption as sons. The mind of God the Father dwelt in the Lord Jesus Christ. That is why all His judgments and all His works were right and well pleasing to the Father. For this reason Jesus our Lord was never found in error or fault. That is why at the end of His life He could fearlessly demand, "Which of you convinceth Me of sin?" But, saint of God, here is good news for you. The great apostle Paul wrote to the saints, saying, "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus." The mind that was in Christ was the Father's mind, and this is the mind He exhorts us to have dwelling in us.

The unspeakable importance of the mind of Christ dwelling in His sons will be better understood when we realize that in His kingdom, when the sons of God reign, none of them will need to ask the opinion of another or even confer with others, for all will have one mind and that one mind will be the mind of Christ. Therefore the judgment of the sons of God will be the judgment of Christ. My hand and my foot are governed by one mind. Neither does the foot need to ask the opinion of the nose or ear, because the foot also is governed by one mind even as they. So likewise in the body of sons, which is the true body of Christ. Each son will have the mind of Christ dwelling in Him and no man need ever say, "Know the Lord" for all will know Him from the least to the greatest. All will have His mind, His perfect wisdom and understanding.

With such glories as these in store for God's elect dare any man in any way deny our God freedom of purpose in bringing about such blessedness? Since our Lord Jesus Christ was made perfect through suffering, should it be deemed a thing incredible, unusual or unlikely that our kind heavenly Father should use the same proven method to produce perfection in all His sons? Should it seem strange that inspiration should proclaim, "If we suffer, we shall also reign with Him; if we deny Him, He will also deny us"? 2 Tim. 2:12. I may err in my understanding of this statement, "If we deny Him, He will deny us," but it seems clear that if we deny or refuse to suffer with Christ, then we will be denied the right to reign with Him. Thus, if we deny Him, He will deny us.

Saints who are enduring suffering, affliction and tribulation must learn to lift up their heads and their hearts in worship and begin to glory in their tribulations as evident tokens of the love of God toward them. Instead of moaning and complaining about our pains, our rejection and the betrayals we have endured, and the friends and relatives who have turned aside and spoken evil of us and persecuted us, we should find occasion to rejoice that at least some of the sufferings of Christ are manifest in us. Saints must learn that through patience and longsuffering they will see God's plan accomplished in them. It was after the Lord had revealed to Paul that Christ's strength was made perfect in Paul's weakness that he was able to say, "Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me. Therefore, I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christ's sake: for when I am weak, then am I strong." 2 Cor. 12:9,10. "If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye; for the spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you." 1 Pet. 4:14.

Spiritual maturity brought Paul to the place where he was able to say, "I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us. For the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God." Rom. 8:18,19. These verses deserve hours of meditation. Would to God that all the Lord's people had such spiritual understanding that they might see clearly how those wretched, uncomfortable tribulations that seem to be spoiling their lives are in reality producing the glory. The glory of God is the image of Christ. Yea, further, it is the mind of Christ and the likeness of Christ.

In the land of Uz there dwelt a man whose name was Job. He was no baby saint, for one no less than God Himself had given testimony that Job was a perfect and an upright man, one that feared God and eschewed evil. God had blessed this man with great wealth and a large family. He had seven sons and three daughters. He owned seven thousand sheep, three thousand camels, five hundred yoke of oxen, and five hundred she-asses. His household was very great with many hired servants so that this man was the greatest of all the men of the east.

Though Job was wealthy in temporal things, rich in spiritual things and proclaimed perfect by the Lord Himself, he was perfect only on the level or plane where he stood. A tiny baby is often proclaimed perfect by the adoring parents and friends who stand and admire him, but, though he is a perfect baby, he is not a perfect man. There must follow years of growth and tedious years of learning before manhood comes. The child must learn to read and write and be subjected to all manner of discipline. He must learn obedience, often by the rod of correction. He must learn kindness, patience, longsuffering, gentleness, and thoughtfulness. He must be instructed in manners and good morals. Life is an endless education even in the natural realm. That maturity can come only by the bitter, chilling experiences of life.

Job was a perfect man on the plane where he was, but the place where he was, was not the realm the Lord had in mind for him. His admiring God intended to bring him to the perfection of maturity. His heavenly Father had more in mind for him than plenty of sheep and camels and asses, a fine home and a devoted family. He had sonship in mind. Well the Lord knew that His sons were produced, not by luxury and ease, but by suffering and affliction. Has He not said, "Whom the Lord loveth, He chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom He receiveth"? Heb. 12:6. Has He not said, "If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons; for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not? But if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then you are bastards, and not sons"? Heb. 12:7,8. Good and upright as Job was and prosperous in all the things of a natural world, this man had not yet been tried by fire as sons of God must be. Hitherto the Lord had prospered him and all had gone his way. Even Satan spoke the truth when he said, "Doth Job fear God for nought? . .. Thou hast blessed the work of his hands, and his substance is increased in the land." This was actually true. There are, to be sure, many thousands of Christians who will serve God when the weather is fair and the going is good, but when tribulation or affliction strike them, immediately they are offended and imagine the Lord is being unmerciful and unkind. Well do I remember speaking to a disconsolate man who was undergoing great trial. His heart had become very bitter in his experience and he had been churlish and ill-tempered toward God. After pouring his griefs and sorrows into my ears with grouchiness and self-pity, half sobbing he blurted out these words: "I may be a very bad man, but I don't deserve all this!" Well, my friend, if we take the unlearned and poverty-stricken attitude that God is punishing us, then maybe we don't deserve it, but if in the wisdom of God we see that He is perfecting and maturing us as sons, then we will take pleasure in His loving kindness and tender mercy toward us. Which would seem to be preferable — that one should be the richest man in all the east as Job was or that he should become a mature son of God? Make no mistake in this, for had it not been for the sufferings of Job, we would not have heard of him at all. All his wealth would long ago have vanished and his body left to moulder in the dust, but because of his sufferings his sonship was magnified and in his flesh he shall see God. Job 19:25. His name has entered the annals of history with Noah and Daniel as one of the three most righteous men who ever lived. Ezek. 14:14,20. Furthermore, his example of suffering and patience is one of the greatest inspirations in the history of saints.

"Doth Job fear God for nought?" Satan asked, and his challenge was a legitimate one. Therefore the Lord, though He knew all things, decided to put His beloved saint to the fiery test, not for Satan's sake nor to prove aught to him, but for Job's sake. "Put forth thy hand and touch all that he hath," said Satan, "and he will curse Thee to Thy face." So the Lord let down the barriers, the gates and the fences and allowed his beloved servant to be tried in a furnace of sevenfold heat. No one knows by what pathway tribulation may come or through what door temptation may enter, but since all things are in God's hands, He is able to move the world with ease if it be in His interest and the welfare of His people that he should do so.

With lightning swiftness the misfortunes fell as tribulation and affliction sorely smote this man of God. The first messenger came, shouting, "The Sabeans fell upon them (the oxen and asses), and took them away." In a moment of time his thousand oxen and five hundred asses were lost to him. While the first messenger was yet speaking, the second came running and crying, "The fire of God is fallen from heaven, and hath burned up the sheep, and the servants, and consumed them." And while the second was yet speaking, the third messenger came crying, "The Chaldeans made out three bands, and fell upon the camels, and have carried them away, yea, and slain the servants with the edge of the sword, and I only am escaped alone to tell thee." But, woe of all woes, while he was yet speaking, the fourth messenger came running in terror, shouting. "Thy sons and thy daughters were eating and drinking wine in their elder brother's house: and, behold, there came a great wind from the wilderness, and smote the four corners of the house, and it fell upon the young men, and they are dead; and I only am escaped to tell thee." Job 1:15-19. Thus in one tragic day all Job's earthly wealth and glory had vanished as a mist before the rising sun. But did Job curse God for all this calamity? Was he a fair weather saint without spiritual understanding? No, indeed! He rent his mantle, shaved his head and, falling upon the ground, he worshipped God with the unmistakable words of piety, "Naked came I out of my mother's womb and naked shalI return thither: the Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord. In all this Job sinned not, nor charged God foolishly." Job. 1:21, 22.

Casually reading the story of such dire calamity, we may miss entirely the incredible devastation of it all. It is no light thing for a man to find the efforts of a life time brutally swept away in a moment. A man remarked to me recently after his house had been burned to the ground, "It is a strange feeling to awake in the morning to find that you do not have even a toothbrush." One would surely think that the loss of camels, sheep, oxen and asses, together with servants, houses and children would have been sufficient calamity, affliction and suffering to prove a man's fidelity and manifest his relationship to his Lord, but such was not to be the case.

"Skin for skin," scoffed the unrelenting Satan; "All that a man hath will he give for his life. But put forth Thine hand now, and touch his bone and his flesh, and he will curse Thee to Thy face." Job 2:4,5. The first part of his statement is true enough. A man will give all for his life. But the other part was not yet proven. Though the Lord is not interested in proving anything to the devil, he is intensely interested in trying with fire all those sons He is bringing to perfection. The torture test must be given to them all that there shall be no feeble one among their tribes. So Satan, the minister of evil, went forth from the presence of the Lord and smote the man of God with sore boils from head to foot till in the desperation of his illness he lay among the ashes and scraped himself for relief with a broken potsherd.
The story of Job's altercations with his comforters, who came to convince him of his disfavor with God, is well known and need not be repeated here. Let it be known to all of us that Job's afflictions were not of Satan, as so many are ready to declare, but they were of God. Oh that the Lord's faithful people would learn that important lesson! Don't blame your trouble on the devil. He is powerless to touch you except by divine permission. It is God that worketh in you both to will and to do His good pleasure. It is God who is making good men better. It is God who is perfecting His saints in the furnace of fiery trials. The great Potter above is applying fire to His vessels to make them fit for the Master's use.

Recently I stood in a factory where pottery was made. There I saw shelf after shelf of beautiful pottery ready to be sold. But in a back room I found an equal number of beautiful vessels that had just been molded. They were green, scarcely dry and not nearly ready for sale. Girls and men were painting them and preparing them for the oven where they would be tempered in great heat and fire, without which they were completely unfit for sale or for use. So it is with you, my brother. To all outward appearance you may be a most beautiful vessel, as Job also appeared, but it is not until after the fire has been applied and the terrific heat endured that the vessel is tempered, tried by fire and proven fit for God's use in the government of the world.

Man because of his ignorance is always involved in stupidity. How often young men and women who appear to be smart and promising Christians are taken and thrust into the public ministry! But they, poor things, are untried mortar. They have never been proven by fire. They have plenty of zest and 4.— zeal, but of the refining power of trial and affliction they know nothing at all. So often they go forth to teach people twice their age and with ten times their spiritual experience. It is a sad and pitiful thing!

When the kingdom of God is finally set up on the earth, there will be no untried mortar in its government. There will be no green potter's vessels. There will be no juveniles. Those who enter into His glory will be tried vessels, broken, melted, molded and tested in the fire of affliction. "O fools and slow of heart to believe," spoke Jesus to His disconsolate companions on the dusty road to Emmaus, "Ought not Christ to have suffered and entered into His glory?" Is not that the right way? Is it not scriptural that all should be tried by fire? Is it not the way the Lord has promised? Is not suffering the way of faith? Of course it is! Did not Abel, Enoch, Noah and Abraham, Sara and Isaac, Jacob, Joseph and Moses all suffer fiery afflictions? And are not these well-tempered saints now exalted to view by God Himself as the great and shining examples of faith? Most certainly they are! "And what shall I more say? For the time would fail me to tell of Gideon, and of Barak, and of Samson, and of Jephthae; of David also, and Samuel, and of the prophets: who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths' of lions, quenched the violence of the fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens. Women received their dead raised to life again: and others were tortured, not accepting deliverance, that they might obtain a better resurrection: And others had trials of cruel mockings and scourgings, yea, moreover of bonds and imprisonment: They were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword; they wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented; of whom the world was not worthy: They wandered in deserts, and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth. And these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise: God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." Heb. 11:32-40.

Dare we imagine that these so sorely tried were not suffering? The next time we talk about faith, let us remember that those who are undergoing such fiery trials in the present evil world are admired by God as men and women of faith much more than those who are always glorying in signs and wonders and miracles of healing. Not only must God's people learn to live by faith, but it is very possible that before long they may be called upon to die by faith also.

Thus it was with poor brother Job. All hell had broken loose upon this righteous and faithful man. His possessions were gone. His servants were gone. His cattle, his family, and his dwelling place were as though they had never been. And now he was desperately ill, tormented with pain, and without even a bed to sleep on he lies down in the dust and ashes of what once was his beautiful home to listen to the disquieting arguments... of his friends, monotonously attempting by lengthy speeches to stultify him and prove that his present despair was the result of his own sin and disfavor with God. Desperate, disquieting and disturbing were their irritating speeches, calculated to add greater fire to his almost unendurable affliction.

I do not know how many days their debate continued. Perhaps that does not matter now, but such miserable comforters as these are always at hand, ready to attest that those who have entered the furnace of affliction have been bad examples as Christians or that they harbor secret sins and so are deserving of punishment. Unless the Lord Himself has convicted them of sin by His Spirit, sufferers should pay no attention whatever to them. "If our heart condemn us not, then have we confidence before God." 1 John 3:21. I suppose, that, if Job was in error at all, it was that he sought to justify himself and took time to prove his miserable comforters wrong. One of the most difficult lessons to be learned in life is to let people think and say what they please while we commit all things to God and leave them in His hands. Even our Lord Jesus Christ was evil spoken of, so we may be certain it will be no great wonder if our sincerest intentions and our best labors are subject to misrepresentation and evil surmisings by men of corrupt minds.

After Job's friends had all been silenced and Job himself had no more that he could say, then at long last it was time for the all wise God to speak. You are going to discover, my brethren that the Spirit of the Lord will never argue with you. Never! Neither will He utter a word while you are making good and setting forth all your arguments of righteousness. It is after you have finished airing all your woes, complaining of your griefs, and setting forth your protestations about the injustices you are suffering that He speaks; and when He begins to speak, your spirit, soul and body cry out as did Job. "I have uttered that I understood not; things too wonderful for me, which I knew not." Job 42:3. So it was with Job that, when he had finished speaking, the Lord answered him out of the whirlwind. The first words divine wisdom uttered were enough to shrivel the soul of any man and stultify all his arguments and protestations into insignificance and oblivion. "Who is this that darkeneth counsel by words without knowledge!" demanded the Lord. "Gird up thy loins like a man; for I will demand of thee, and answer thou Me." Job 38:2,3.

If the reader at this point will take time to read the next four chapters of the book of Job, chapters 38 through 41, he will find a series of some forty questions, which the Lord posed to Job. All of these were far beyond his understanding and for none of them could he find an answer. Only two or three of these can be answered by the science of our day. These questions were asked of Job to convince him of the faultless greatness of God's wisdom on the one hand and thus the insignificance and lack of man's understanding on the other. Thus it was that, after the Lord ceased from His questioning, Job saw both himself and God in an entirely new light. He saw himself as ignorant, unworthy, vile, unclean and full of repentance. Job 42:6. Now he knew the Lord to be the possessor of all the wisdom of the universe. Now Job knew that all his former life without this intimate knowledge was nothing but vanity. His riches were worthless. His possessions were as the grass in the field. Even his family, his home and his servants were little more than status symbols in a world of vanity. All these temporal things he had seen day after day. His eye was familiar with them all, but God in His glory he had not seen. With the ear he had heard of Him as a deity afar off, but his eye had never beheld His supernal glory nor had any vision transformed him. It is when we see God as He is, in whatsoever way He chooses to reveal Himself, that our lives are transformed by repentance and our minds are renewed by His Spirit.

When at last the enquiring voice of the Lord has fallen silent, Job, breathless and astonished but transformed by the experience, asks of himself the burning question, "Who is this that hideth counsel without knowledge? Therefore have I uttered that I understood not; things too wonderful for me, which I knew not." Then, lifting his soul to God, he prays, "Hear, I beseech Thee, and I will speak: I will demand of Thee, and declare Thou unto me. I have heard of Thee by the hearing of the ear: but now mine eye seeth Thee. Wherefore I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes." Job 42:3-6.

"Now mine eye seeth Thee!" Oh, what a tremendous advance in spiritual experience it is when our eyes turn from things earthly and temporal to begin to see the Lord! I do not speak of seeing Him with mortal eyes, but God in peculiar and wonderful ways reveals Himself to His saints by His Holy Spirit until even the deep things of God are revealed to our hearts. A man cannot truly love God until he has begun to see by the Spirit at least some of His infinite greatness. Many years I served the Lord, yea, and loved Him, too, but it was not until He began to open to my searching heart some of the secrets of His infinite mind and the marvels of His eternal purpose that I truly began to love and appreciate Him more than human mind can imagine. As long as my spirit was bound by earthly ways of looking at things and blinded by the human philosophies of the church system, there was always an unreality, if not an ungodlikeness about spiritual things, but when the Lord revealed to my searching heart His infinite purpose in creation, His purpose in the fall of man, His wisdom in permitting human suffering, and the universal extent of His redemption in Christ our Lord, then in wonder and amazement as never before my innermost being was saying, "I have heard of Thee with the hearing of the ear, but now mine eye seeth Thee!" Then I began to abhor my own human way of looking at things and the uncleanness of the philosophies of many other men. Then I saw how the whole world and the entire church system are full of the vanity of human notions. Truly spoke the great apostle when he said, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him. But God hath revealed them unto us by His Spirit; for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God." 1 Cor. 2:9, 10

Now I know for certain that, had it not been for the betrayal, the envy, and misrepresentation of brethren who for years had been my closest friends, the Lord could not have brought me to this place of understanding where He could reveal to my heart such eternal purposes. And now that so many years have passed since those sad days of suffering and betrayal and I can see the glories that have accrued through those adversities, I rejoice in God's great wisdom and freely forgive those pitiful men who thought they were doing God a service by throwing their stones and propagating their evil surmisings. Let God be praised, my brother, my sister, in whatsoever sufferings God calls upon you to endure whether it be sickness, betrayal, or loss of temporal things or whether you severely suffer at the hands of those from whom you should be receiving the utmost love, appreciation and kindness. No one can cause you more suffering that those you dearly love and who should dearly love you.

The magnificent end of Job's fierce temptation and the fiery trial of suffering he endured was manifest in that his eye now saw the Lord. It was after God's blessing, disguised as tragedies, fell upon him that he uttered those immortal words, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that He shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God: whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another... . " Job 19:25-27. Little did he realize as he made that statement that the fierce sufferings he was enduring were already bringing about that unspeakably wonderful revelation his heart so earnestly craved.

How good it would be, dear saint of God, if you and I could see at this moment that God's Redeemer, who in the latter days shall stand upon the earth, is in truth Christ in His bodily fullness! For this is the fullness of Christ — not the blessed Nazarene Himself alone, but Christ the Head together with that many-membered body, which is the manifested sons of God. The vision John saw, recorded in Rev. 1:10-18, is the vision of the fullness of the Redeemer, who shall stand in the latter days upon the earth, Christ the blessed Head and Christ the body made one. This is the fullness of Christ. "Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular." "For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body; so also is Christ. For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free: and have been all made to drink into one Spirit." 1 Cor. 12:27; 12, 13.

Oh that saints might grasp the blessedness of this sublime truth as Job in his misery and desolation was permitted to see it! Then our heaviest affliction would be a light affliction. Then our most devastating tribulation would become a cause for rejoicing and the debilitating weakness of our worst infirmity would become a pleasure. Mourn no more because of your grief, O child of God. Do not seek the arm of flesh to gain relief from your sorrow, but look rather to the glory of the work that is being done in you. "O fools and slow of heart to believe ... ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into His glory?" O fools and slow of heart to believe, ought not we likewise to suffer to enter into our glory? It is not our suffering that saves our souls. Jesus Christ did that on the accursed tree. Our suffering is a refining fire to bring our gold to perfection since tribulation works patience, and patience experience, and experience hope, and hope makes not ashamed because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy ghost, which is given unto us.
"Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you: But rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when His glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy. If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye, for the spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you: on their part He is evil spoken of, but on your part He is glorified. (Consider what a wonderful thing is here revealed.) But let none of you suffer as a murderer, or as a thief, or as an evildoer, or as a busybody in other men's matters. Yet if any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God on this behalf. For the time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God: and if it first begin at us, what shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God? And if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear? Wherefore let them that suffer according to the will of God commit the keeping of their souls to Him in well doing, as unto a faithful Creator." 1 Pet. 4:12-19.

"The trial of your faith is much more precious than gold that perisheth." 1 Pet. 1:7. Surely this is the lesson learned by Job, and this is the lesson being learned by us as we see our earthly dependencies passing away and withering as grass before our eyes. The real reason for the refining of our faith as gold is refined is seen in this: "That it might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ," verse 7, and that we might receive the end of our faith, even the salvation of our souls. Verse 9. All flesh is as grass, so what matters if it suffers and dies? "He that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin, that he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God." 1 Pet. 4:1. All flesh is as grass, which today is in the field and tomorrow is cast into the burning oven. All the glory of man, no matter how great it may be, is as the flower of grass. The grass withereth and the flower thereof fadeth away, but the word of the Lord is eternal and cannot perish. Let us therefore put our prerogatives where they truly belong, setting not our hearts on the fleeting things of a natural world, but on abiding things which are eternal and cannot pass away, for "he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin, that he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God."

In his translation of 1 John 2:15-17 J. B. Phillips gives this most beautiful rendering: "Never give your hearts to this world nor to any of the things in it. A man cannot love the Father and love the world at the same time. For the whole world-system, based as it is on men's primitive desires, their greedy ambitions and the glamour of all they think splendid, is not derived from the Father at all, but from the world itself. The world and all its passionate desires will one day disappear. But the man who is following God's will is part of the permanent and cannot die."

SUFFERING PERSECUTION

The mystery of the suffering of the righteous has its own mysterious way of filling the pages of Holy Scripture. Its bloody path, like a scarlet thread, weaves its way from cover to cover of God's book. "Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted?" demanded Stephen of his adversaries; "And they have slain them which shewed before of the coming of the Just One; of whom ye have been now the betrayers and murderers; who have received the law by the disposition of angels, and have not kept it." Acts 7:52, 53. And even while Stephen charged them and their forefathers with such unrelenting tyranny against all that was righteous, good and true, his own persecutors were gathering up stones to cast at him and kill him. "But he, being full of the Holy Ghost, looked up steadfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God, and said, Behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of man standing on the right hand of God." But they, whose fathers had killed the prophets before them, now enraged by the truth they heard, "stopped their ears, and ran upon him with one accord, and cast him out of the city, and stoned him; and the witnesses laid down their clothes at a young man's feet, whose name was Saul. And they stoned Stephen, calling upon God, and saying, Lord Jesus, receive my spirit. And he kneeled down, and cried with a loud voice, Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. And when he had said this, he fell asleep." Acts 7:54-60.

Thus another saintly son of God in the long and honorable list of martyrs graduated from this realm of tears where carnal minds and corrupt hearts are unable to receive the things of the Spirit of God. Thus, leaving this realm of death behind, he joined those immortal ones who in the face of death by fire and sword gained the crown of life above. In his final moments in this realm of death the saintly Stephen, looking into heaven, saw an indescribable scene of glory, for Jesus Christ had arisen from His seat at God's right hand to welcome this brother and companion in tribulation into the eternal rest of his everlasting home.

It is much easier, I am sure, to speak about martyrdom and persecution than it is to endure it. Nevertheless, He giveth more grace, more patience and faith in all our persecutions and tribulations that we endure and unto the feeble He increaseth strength. Because we are coming very close to the end of the age, and because both Jesus Christ and His apostles warned us of perilous times that were to come at the end of the age, when brother would expose brother to magistrates, parents would deliver their godly children to death and children would betray their parents, I feel it is right to add this fourth chapter dealing with the subject of persecution that, when these things begin to come our way to cleanse a people as grossly involved in the world as Lot was involved in Sodom, a people, careless and at ease in Zion, whom the scripture describes as lukewarm and ready to be spewed out of the mouth of God, we may not be amazed, but ready to face our tribulations and overcome them, being found victorious in the field.

Many things that concern the end of the age the Spirit of the Lord has purposely hidden in darkness. I am of the opinion that no man alive knows the exact sequence of events as they will follow each other as this age draws to a close. For many years the church has accepted the rapture theory, which teaches the sudden departure of all Christians by way of translation out of the world, thus to escape all tribulation and persecution that is coming upon the earth in the last days. This is, indeed, a very comfortable, placid kind of teaching, but it rather reminds me of the words of Paul when he said, "When they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape." Christians in the western world who put their confidence in this theory should take time to contemplate the fiendish persecutions that have taken place in the U.S.S.R. during the last fifty years. Let us not forget that it is estimated that as many saints have been destroyed in our day in the land of darkness and unbelief as were destroyed in the Roman Inquisition of the middle ages. Let us remember the fierce trials of Christians in China and North Korea and the bloody nightmare that is overtaking Christians at the present moment in Africa as Communist hordes press toward these last two bastions of freedom, Rhodesia and South Africa, aided and abetted by the gifts and swords of the western world. Shall all these saints bear the cruel nightmare of pain and torture and we alone escape? Though we may well hope that thus it would be, the possibility that we may escape is remote indeed.

As Jesus drew nearer the day of the cross, He began to reveal to His disciples what great suffering lay before Him. It is significant to note the time when He began to do this. Our Lord often interrogated His disciples and His questions were prepared in such a way that the answer might be impressed more indelibly upon their minds. Thus on this occasion Jesus asked, "Whom do men say that I the Son of man am? And they said, Some say that Thou art John the Baptist: some, Elias; and others, Jeremiahs, or one of the prophets. He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am? And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Matt. 16:13-16.

Notice that immediately following this remarkable declaration, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," it is stated in verse 21, "From that time forth began Jesus to shew unto His disciples, how that He must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and be raised again the third day." The marvelous declaration of sonship does not seem to be compatible with the awesome thought of persecution and the declaration that He is the Son of the living God would not appear to be in good harmony with cruel suffering at the hands of weak and wicked men, finally to be killed by them; but always remember and never forget that suffering and sonship walk hand in hand. The words of Jesus were foreign to the ears of Peter, and very distasteful, too. He was unable to harmonize these seeming contradictions of thought, so he took Jesus and began to rebuke Him for His words, saying, "Be it far from Thee, Lord: this shall not be unto Thee." Verse 22.

It should not be difficult in the least for us to understand Peter's attitude and the amazement he must have felt upon hearing this strange announcement, and I fear that Christians who have their hearts set on a rapture, by whose doors they will escape all tribulation, persecution and death, will be the first to take issue with me or with anyone else who would dare to warn them that dreadful, purging fires of persecution may soon come upon a church at ease in Zion, a church that is lukewarm, increased in goods, having need of nothing in the natural realm and believing they have need of nothing in the spiritual realm, a system that, while talking about sonship and rulership in the kingdom of God, knows not that it is wretched and miserable and poor and blind and naked. Yea, they will take issue with me as Peter took issue with Jesus. Is this lukewarm church going to be raptured that she may never see sorrow? Is this corrupt thing going to suddenly find itself carried away to heaven out of all tribulation while others fight to gain the prize and sail through bloody seas? While some resist unto blood, striving against sin, shall this lame, lukewarm, self-centered and self-satisfied child of Laodicea escape the cleansing fires of persecution? Nay! "Thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked: I counsel thee to buy of Me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eyesalve, that thou mayest see. As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten; be zealous therefore, and repent."

Peter could not conceive that suffering could be on the agenda for a son of God, much less THE Son of God.
John the Baptist could not understand why he should be called upon to baptize Jesus in water, but Jesus answered him, "Suffer it to be so now, for thus it cometh us to fulfill all righteousness." Then he suffered Him. Many strange things cross our path in the process of fulfilling all righteousness, and certainly suffering and persecution are foremost among them. Therefore we should arm ourselves with understanding that we be not alarmed or amazed when afflictions crush the soul and waves of trouble roll, for these things must surely be.

I am not a prophet, and at the present time I know of no true prophet in all the world, the claims made by some notwithstanding. But Christians should not need any special brand of understanding to be able to see that even at this moment dreadful storm clouds hang in threatening array over all the world. Because of the curse of the so-called Women's Liberation Movement the homes of the nation are falling apart. Children -motherless, fatherless, and often homeless - become disobedient, ungovernable, lawless and criminal. Because authority has vanished from the homes, the law of the land becomes an unworkable impossibility. Therefore robbery, vigilence, rape, kidnapping and murder abound in the open. The police are helpless because the law will not stand behind them. Governments are falling apart because they are run by godless, grafting men. Government no longer governs, but interferes with every business of its citizens. Drugs are in common usage. Morals are almost non-existent. Schools are fast becoming mad houses of revolution rather than institutions of learning.
The foundation of any nation is the family, and when that unit is destroyed, the nation will fall into decay.
Though that which I have mentioned is but an infinitesimal drop in the huge bucket of corruption, let it be known that none of these calamities have come upon us by accident. They were all planned and schemed by those evil men who control the wealth of the world that they, after having brought mankind to poverty and corruption, might take over the government of all nations in the desolating completeness of an antichrist reign.

Have you not noticed that the Rockefellers, the Kissingers, the Kennedys, the Morgans and the Rothschilds are all one worlders? The time is at hand when one will arise whom the scripture calls a Beast and an Antichrist:, speaking great things and blasphemies against God. Power will be given to him to continue forty and two months. He will open his mouth in blasphemy against God to blaspheme His name and His tabernacle (that is, the body of Christ, or the saints) and them that dwell in heaven. "And it was given unto him to make war with the saints, and to overcome them: and power was given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations. And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world." Rev. 13:5-10. "And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth by means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of beast; saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast which had the wound by a sword, and did live. And he had power to give life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak, and cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed. And he causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads: and that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name." Rev. 13:13-17.

All these things are now in preparation. Evil men and seducers in the governments of the world favor criminals, aid, abet and assist communism, import into the land heathen cultures whose non-Christian people become teachers of our children, often instructing them in the way of a people who know not God. All these things are intentionally done by one worlders, whose avowed ambition is to destroy Christianity and with it the Anglo-Saxon races of the world. I wonder in passing how many people have noticed that it is the Anglo-Saxon nations of the world who are the Protestant nations. Against these great Anglo-Saxon Protestant nations in particular the Antichrist spirit is rising all over the earth.

The things foretold by Jesus regarding His own suffering, persecution and death all came to pass just as He had stated. He was betrayed by the Judas kiss and seized by the mob sent to take Him as though He was a common criminal. His trial before Herod, Caiaphas and Pilate was a mockery, just as many trials in our day are becoming a mockery in which the just are condemned and punished and the criminals often go free. He was subjected to ridicule, cruel mockings and scourging, and finally to Roman capital punishment on the accursed tree. Well spoke the prophet Isaiah, saying, "He made His grave with the wicked, and with the rich in His death; because He had done no violence, neither was any deceit in His mouth." Isa. 53:9

Good men and women are not persecuted because they are bad or evil or violent, but rather because they are not bad, not evil and not violent, for the devil hates all that God is and all that God appears in His people. "The servant is not above his lord," said Jesus. "If they have persecuted Me, they will also persecute you." John 15:20. "If they have called the master of the house Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of his household?" Matt. 10:25.

Tied closely to the predictions of His own sufferings and death were His predictions of suffering and persecution of those believers who would follow Him and be His disciples. As early as the occasion of the sermon on the mount Jesus began to warn His disciples of persecutions that would arise in days to come in words such as these: "Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for My sake. Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven: for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you." Matt. 5:10-12.

The saints of God are sure to wonder why the saying is always true, "In the world ye shall have tribulation." Why are good men always persecuted for their righteousness while evil men are honored? The answer lies in the long established fact that the realm of the flesh and the realm of the Spirit are diametrically opposed to each other. The flesh and they who dwell therein hate the Spirit and all who make their home in the spiritual realm. The flesh lusts against the Spirit, because these are contrary the one to the other. The flesh loves the corrupt and beggarly things of this passing world while the Spirit rejoices in the things that are eternal. Cain, who was of that wicked one, hated Abel because his own deeds were evil and his brother's deeds were righteous.

There does not have to be a reason behind persecution. That which we have stated above is reason enough. One man hates another because his own deeds are evil and his brother's deeds are righteous. Righteousness has to do with that which is right; evil has to do with that which is wrong. People who are wrong always hate to believe they are wrong even though they know they are, for what evil man can justify his evil? Does not even nature itself teach, "Thou shall not steal"? Does conscience not rebuke the man who takes the name of God in vain? If the adulterer feels no guilt for his adultery, why then does he seek to hide his deed? The drunkard knows only too well that he is held captive by a cruel and devilish taskmaster; therefore his corrupt nature despises those that are free. For this reason he often seeks to bring others into his own dire bondage and captivity to evil. The freedom and purity of the saints is a continual rebuke to the ungodly. It is a rebuke that they hate, because it contradicts all that they are. It is like a mirror held before their eyes, revealing their sin - a mirror they would gladly destroy that they would no longer see their evil reflection therein. They are not unlike the very ugly African tribesman who, never before having seen his face in a mirror, seized it and smashed it to pieces.

Thus did Cain hate Abel because his own deeds were evil and his brother's deeds were righteous. He could not have known how evil his deeds were had he not seen them in the light of his brother's goodness. Therefore, not unlike the ugly tribesman, he lifted up his weapon and murdered his brother that he might continue in his evil with none to convict him. But guilt cannot be destroyed by effacing the light that reveals it. In murdering his brother, Cain extinguished the light of a tiny candle only to find himself face to face with the sun, for in his distress he found himself listening to the voice of his own creator, and the terrible words he heard were these: "Where is Abel, thy brother?" "I know not," he lied. "Am I my brother's keeper?" But we cannot lie to God; neither can we hedge for long. "His eyes behold, His eyelids try the children of men." Psa. 11:4. Then the Lord in awesome voice demanded, "What hast thou done? The voice of thy brother's blood (life) crieth unto Me from the ground, and now thou art cursed from the earth, which has opened her mouth to receive thy brother's blood." See Genesis 4:1-15.

The slaying of Abel because his deeds were righteous was the beginning of that awful persecution against the godly which would continue from the blood of Abel to the blood of Zacharias, whom they slew between the temple and the altar. Our Lord Jesus Christ, remarking upon this very thing, declared, "Behold, I send unto you prophets, and wise men, and scribes: and some of them ye shall kill and crucify; and some of them shall ye scourge in your synagogues, and persecute them from city to city: that upon you may come all the righteous blood shed upon the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel unto the blood of Zacharias son of Barachias, whom ye slew between the temple and the altar. Verily I say unto you, All these things shall come upon this generation." Matt. 23:34-36.

Persecution did not end, however, with the shedding of the blood of Zacharias. It was to continue right down to the end of this present age until Jesus should come to reign in righteousness as King of kings and Lord of lords. The Apostle Paul vividly described the persecution complex of the Jews against all that is righteous when he said to the saints at Thessalonica, "For ye also have suffered like things of your own countrymen, even as they have of the Jews: who both killed the Lord Jesus, and their own prophets, and have persecuted us; and they please not God, and are contrary to all men: forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles that they might be saved." 1 Thess. 2:14-16.

It is always an amazement to God's people to find that their good is evil spoken of and to discover that their righteous deeds are misinterpreted and maligned. One would certainly have thought that men would rejoice when Jesus raised Lazarus from the dead, but the truth is they hated Him for it. Listen to their wicked reasonings as the chief priests and Pharisees were gathered together after this mighty miracle. "What do we? for this man doeth many miracles. If we let Him thus alone, all men will believe in Him: and the Romans shall come and take away both our place and our nation." John 11:47,48. And from that moment on they never ceased in their design to take Him and put Him to death. These were the same evil men who persecuted Jesus for loosing a woman from her infirmity on the Sabbath day and for opening the eyes of a man who was born blind. These are they who hated Him without a cause.

So through all the ages it is clear that Cain hated Abel because his deeds were righteous. Joseph's brothers hated him because his father loved him. Esau hated Jacob because of the blessing. Saul hated David because he knew God had chosen him to be king. And thus through the march of time the flesh lusts against the Spirit and the Spirit against the flesh, and these are contrary the one to the other, so that we cannot do the things we should. They that are in the flesh cannot please God. They never have pleased Him and they never will. Therefore it must be concluded that persecution and affliction are bound to come, but woe to him by whom they come.

Persecutions, according to the accounts of scripture together with the records of church history, range all the way from verbal abuse, tauntings and contradictions to physical abuse, imprisonment, violence and death. The verbal abuse endured by our Lord is evident in many passages of the New Testament. They rebuked Him for the miracles He performed, oftentimes on the Sabbath day. They accused Him of having a devil and declared that He cast out devils by Beelzebub, the prince of devils. The prominence given these tauntings and abuses in the gospels would indicate that they must have been an almost daily occurrence that continued to the dreadful hours of the cross, where they taunted, "If Thou be the Christ, come down from the cross," and "He saved others; Himself He cannot save."

How easy it is for men to rest assured in their awful ignorance! "Search and look," they snorted in confidence, "for out of Galilee ariseth no prophet." But those foolish men did not trouble themselves to discover that Jesus had not come from Galilee at all, but from Bethlehem of Judea. "Now we know that Thou hast a devil," they jeered, and when they found they could not substantiate their evil claim, they took up stones to cast at Him.
This verbal abuse of God's saints has continued in all ages. It was only shortly after Pentecost that the disciples were arrested and threatened, Acts 4:17, and commanded to speak no more in the name of Jesus Christ. But Peter and John answered them, saying, "Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye. For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard. So when they had further threatened them, they let them go ..." Acts 4:19-21. The life of the apostle Paul was continually beset by the contradicting and blaspheming of the Jews. One only has to read the Acts of the Apostles to become aware of their constant persecution of the truth. Nor did this verbal abuse cease with the end of the apostolic age. It has continued all down through the church age and will continue until the days of man's labor and confusion are ended.

If tauntings and sneerings and threatenings were the only kinds of persecution suffered by righteous men, it would be a small matter indeed, but the enemies of righteousness do not cease their persecutions with harsh and bitter words, but continue with physical suffering which is often times much more horrible than death itself. "The time cometh," said Jesus, "when he that killeth you will think he doeth God a service." When wicked men imagine they are doing God a service by murdering His saints, then this would seem to be the cruellest and worst element of persecution. It is terrible enough when persecution arises from the wickedness of the wicked, but when persecution proceeds from those who are supposed to know the way of righteousness, then nothing can be more evil or devastating than this. But it is true that persecution comes from Pharisees, priests, high priests, doctors of the law and scribes. It comes from popes and cardinals and inquisitors as often as from heathen emperors and Communist dictators.

When the disciples were first called before the council of the Jews, they were threatened, but the next time they were called, they were beaten, Acts 5:40, and their enemies, thinking this physical torture would end the matter, let them go. But their threats and violence took on an even uglier form when the disciples continued to preach Christ and the resurrection. The signs and wonders wrought by the disciples were so manifest that they brought the sick into the streets and laid them on beds and couches that at least the shadow of Peter passing by might overshadow some of them. There came also a multitude out of the cities around about unto Jerusalem, bringing the sick and those that were vexed with unclean spirits, and they were healed every one. Acts 5:15,16. These marvelous works of God were by no means pleasing to the jealous and envious religious leaders, nor did they repent and turn to God, but instead, being filled with indignation (verse 17) at what had happened, they laid their hands on the apostles and put them in the common prison. Verse 18. But, praise be to God, the angel of the Lord opened the prison doors and brought them forth, commanding them to go and speak in the temple the words of "this life." Verse 20.

Beatings and imprisonment did not stop these men of God from carrying out their anointed work, but, alas, their persecutions did not stop with beatings and imprisonment. They grew instead to greater violence in the murder of Stephen, that mighty deacon, whose eloquent sermon and subsequent martyrdom are recorded in Acts, chapter 7. The sermon preached by Stephen on the day of his martyrdom is in my opinion one of the masterpieces of the ages. In it he shows the dealings of God with His chosen people, forcefully demonstrating how both God and His prophets have been rejected by them in all ages, and, having proved his case against them, he cried, "Ye stiff-necked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost: as your fathers did, so do ye. Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted? And they have slain them which shewed before of the coming of the Just One; of whom ye have been now the betrayers and murderers: who have received the law by the disposition of angels, and have not kept it." Acts 7:51-53. When they heard these truths, they were cut to the heart and, instead of repenting, they "gnashed on him with their teeth," But Stephen, being full of the Holy Ghost, looked up steadfastly into heaven and saw the glory of God and Jesus standing on the right hand of the Father. "Then they cried out with a loud voice, and stopped their ears, and ran upon him with one accord, and cast him out of the city, and stoned him: and the witnesses laid down their clothes at a young man's feet, whose name was Saul" and Stephen, calling upon God and saying, "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit," kneeled down and cried with a loud voice, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge." And when he had said this, he fell asleep. Acts 7:54-60.

How well it has been said, "The blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church." The words of Stephen fell not in idleness upon the ears of the young man, Saul. Though in rage and hate he breathed out threatenings and slaughter against the saints of God, Acts chapter 9, and persecuted them unto strange cities, the Holy Ghost had begun his dealings with this cock-sure, overly confident zealot. As he journeyed to Damascus on his dreadful mission of destruction, armed with letters of arrest from the high priest, at midday a light brighter than the sun shone upon him and he, falling to the ground, heard a voice speaking to him, saying, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me?" To this in wonder and amazement he replied, "Who art Thou, Lord?" And the Lord in mercy answered, "I am Jesus whom thou persecutest; it is hard for thee to kick against the pricks." Acts 9:4-5.
Saul's conscience had been pricking and goading him ever since he heard that remarkable sermon of truth preached by Stephen, but now the Spirit of the Lord was bringing the truth home by the power of the Holy Ghost. It is true that no man comes to Christ except the Father draw him, but it is also true that "all that the Father giveth Me shall come to Me." Paul, being a vessel chosen from the foundation of the world and having now met with Jesus Christ, heard the call to repentance and was saved by the life blood of the Christ he had hated and despised.

It is a thing of wonder that the Lord had said to Ananias, "Go thy way: for he is a chosen vessel unto Me, to bear My name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel: for I will show him how great things he must suffer for My name's sake." Acts 9:15. Thus Saul the persecutor became Paul the saint and Paul the persecuted. I know of no man in the history of the church who suffered greater affliction for the cause of Christ than he. By his own testimony he said, "Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one. Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, a night and a day have I been in the deep; in journeyings often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren; in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness. Besides those things that are without, that which cometh upon me daily, the care of all the churches. Who is weak, and I am not weak? who is offended, and I burn not? If I must needs glory, I will glory of the things that concern mine infirmities." 2 Cor.
11:34-39.

What shall we say of the saints of the Old Testament, "who stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens. ... And others had trial of cruel mockings and scourgings, yea, moreover of bonds and imprisonments: They were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword; they wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented (of whom the world was not worthy). They wandered in deserts, and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth. And these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise." Heb. 11:33-39.

In His message to the angel of the church of Smyrna, Jesus Christ said, "I know thy works, and tribulation, and poverty (but thou art rich), and I know the blasphemy of them which say they are Jews, and are not, but are the synagogue of Satan. Fear none of those things which thou shall suffer: behold, the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried; and ye shall have tribulation ten days: be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." Rev. 2:9, 10.

There can be no doubt that the Lord was warning the church and forearming them with the knowledge that great persecution was about to burst upon them. It is evident from the clear statement of Christ — "Thou shall have tribulation ten days" — that this was a prophecy concerning the ten dreadful persecutions that would be suffered by the Christians under the pagan Roman Empire. As emperor after emperor succeeded to the Roman throne, the persecution against the Christians grew ever more fierce until at one time in the city of Alexandria alone it was estimated that as many as eighty Christians a day suffered martyrdom. In the midst of these sorrowful conditions, the persecution under the Roman emperor Diocletian began. This savage and wanton tyrant had already occupied the throne for nineteen years and during that time had associated three others with him in government, Maximian, Galerius, and Constantius Chlorus, the father of Constantine the Great.

Galerius, who hated the Christians, was the emperor's son-in-law and exercised a fatal influence over him. He persuaded the emperor Diocletian that Christianity was opposed to the best interests of the people and that the way to revive the former glories of the empire was to strike at the roots of that obnoxious religion and destroy it utterly. The better to attain his ends he procured the assistance of heathen priests and teachers of philosophy, who by their word and influence quickly converted the emperor to their views.
Four edicts against the church were issued. The first required the destruction of all churches and sacred writings; the second, that those belonging to the clerical order should be apprehended and imprisoned; third, that none should be liberated unless they consented to sacrifice; and fourth, that Christians of every condition in all quarters of the empire should either sacrifice and return to the worship of the gods or die. When this edict appeared in Nicomedia, it was torn down by an indignant Christian — an act of zeal for which he had to pay dearly though he bore the tortures inflicted upon him with Christian fortitude. He was roasted alive over a slow fire.

Shortly after this a conflagration broke out at the emperor's palace and the Christians were blamed for the act. Thus violence and persecution increased against them. The officers of the household, inmates of the palace, were exposed to the most cruel tortures in the presence of Diocletian. Many were executed. Many were burned alive. Others were bound in boats with stones about their necks, rowed into the lake and thrown into the water. Diocletian at last grew weary of the awful work and resigned the reins of the empire to Maximian, who immediately followed the evil example of his predecessor. It would be impossible here to speak of more than a few of the martyrs whose names are associated with this persecution, for their ranks must have swelled by thousands during those miserable years. The Christians of Egypt suffered martyrdom by multitudes, as many as from sixty to eighty a day, but still the work of Christ grew and multiplied. Martyrs being led away to die often left several new converts to take their place. Romanus, a deacon of Antioch, when threatened with torture, exclaimed, "Thy sentence, O emperor, I joyfully embrace. I refuse not to be sacrificed for my brethren, and that by as cruel a means as thou canst invent." When the executioner hesitated in his awful work because the victim was of noble parentage, Romanus said, "Not the blood of my progenitors, but Christian profession, makes me noble," and when he had received many wounds in his face, he exclaimed, "I thank thee, O captain, that thou hast opened unto me many mouths with which I may preach my Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ."

Another, a maid of thirteen, the daughter of a nobleman of Emerita, praised God in the midst of torture, saying, "Behold, O Lord, I will not forget Thee. What a pleasant thing it is for those, O Christ, that remember Thy triumphs and attain to these high dignities!" Another, as the flames were wrapping around her, exclaimed, "Grow weary, my sisters, of your lives led in darkness and be in love with Christ, my God, my Redeemer, and my Comforter, who is the true light of the world. May the Spirit of God persuade you that there is a world to come in which worshippers of idols and devils shall be tormented perpetually and the servants of the most high God shall be eternally crowned." This was the faithful testimony of a lady of wealth, Julietta by name.

Contrast such glorious victories of the martyrs with the miserable ends of the great persecutors of Christianity. Nero, Diocletian, Commodus, Maximian, and Aurelian were assassinated. Hadrian died in agony, crying, "How miserable to seek death and not to find it!" Decius, cut off from retreat during an ambuscade, perished miserably and his flesh became the prey of vultures and wild beasts. Valerian, being taken prisoner by Sapor, king of Persia, was used as a stool by that monarch to assist in mounting his horse, and after seven years of this insult his eyes were put out and he was flayed alive. The body of Maximian the second was slowly consumed by an eternal fire and Galerius, that demon prince of persecutors, was smitten with a loathsome disease which kept him in continual torment for the space of a year, and, like his prototypes, Herod and Antiochus Epiphanes, he was eaten of worms and died.

It will not be possible here to speak of the dire and terrible persecutions of the true church during the dark ages. No longer was the persecution the work of pagan Rome but of the tradition ridden popes of the Roman Church. As pope after pope of Rome sat in the temple of God, opposing and exalting himself above all that is called God or is worshipped, showing himself that he is God, 2 Thess. 2:4, fierce persecutions were carried out against the saints, persecutions even more terrible and far reaching than those endured under the pagan Roman empire. I am writing these things to show that violent persecution always has been a very large and terrible part of Christian suffering and worst of all is the knowledge that most persecutions have arisen from men who are bound by church systems instead of Christ and are zealous for church traditions rather than the purity of truth.

In my opinion it is wrong to attempt to bring from scripture any interpretation that would seem to exempt the church from tribulation or persecution in the last days. Many Chinese Christians were ill prepared for the grievous persecutions that have befallen them in recent years simply because missionaries from the west had promised them that they would be raptured before any tribulation or persecution broke out. But the evil days of persecution came in spite of their promises and the church in China has gone through the furnace of affliction, suffering and death. The same dreadful thing is happening even today in ever increasing fury in Russia, Roumania, Bulgaria and many other countries. These suffering saints know full well that they will not be raptured before tribulation comes. Persecution in ever increasing fury is raising its ugly head in Africa as country after country falls beneath the heel of communist dictators. It is extremely unfortunate that the majority of preachers in North America emphatically affirm that the church here will never face persecution. They, too, promise a rapture as a means of escape from all tribulation, but let us open our eyes to the indisputable fact that all about us evil men and seducers, both in the church system and outside it, are waxing and worse, both deceiving others and being deceived themselves.

Our present government in Canada is in my opinion the greatest calamity that has overtaken our country. The prime minister himself has stated that a ship needs only be turned three degrees off course to destroy it, and this has been craftily done without the people's understanding what is happening. Are we so foolish as to think that the leaders of Great Britain and the United States of America do not know that Communism is taking over Africa and that Cuban troops, armed with Russian weapons, are in many strategic countries? Certainly they know these things, and to hide from the public their approval of them they waste their time condemning the few last strongholds of Christianity on the African continent — South Africa and Rhodesia.

The church system, too, abounds with false teachers, false pastors, false evangelists, false prophets, and false doctrines. All these systems are putting forth great efforts to unite with one another and with Rome. Have we forgotten that in the end of the age all the world will wonder after the Beast (the antichrist)? Are we unaware that to the Beast will be given a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies, as saith the scripture, "And there was given unto him a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies; and power was given unto him to continue forty and two months. And he opened his mouth in blasphemy against God, to blaspheme His name, and His tabernacle, and them that dwell in heaven. And it was given unto him to make war with the saints, and to overcome them: and power was given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations. And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world. If any man have an ear, let him hear." Rev. 15:5-9.

When the scripture says that a false prophet shall arise, doing great wonders insomuch that he causes fire to come down from heaven in the sight of men, and causes all both small and great to receive a mark in their right hand or in their forehead that no man might buy or sell save he that had the mark of the Beast or the number of his name (verses 13, 16, 17), does this not indicate great deception that is coming upon the earth and great persecution against all that is righteous and all that clings to truth? Let us then not be content to sit at ease in Zion, assuring ourselves that none of these things will come upon us and that we will never know sorrow, for this vain attitude may lead us into the most unpleasant surprise of our lives. Tragically such incredible, indescribable persecution is taking place all the time in communist countries. Christian leaders are arrested and their rights are totally disregarded. They are then shut up in prison and subjected to all kinds of physical, psychological, and medical tortures. It is not my intention to try to frighten the people of God, but rather to warn us all that the denial of civil rights is already appearing in the western world and the time may very well come when they who resist the world system will be imprisoned without appeal to suffer any indignity that evil and godless men may choose to inflict upon them.

It would seem to be an exercise in futility to write at such length of persecution if we could not see the purpose of God in it. Like all else in the plan of God eternal blessings and heavenly rewards lie beyond its perilous wave. The apostle Paul knew what it was to be a persecutor, but after his conversion to Christ he knew what it was to be sorely tried and in the end persecuted unto death. He was beaten, stoned, lashed, imprisoned, and finally executed, but he had as much to say of the benefits accrued through persecution and tribulation as about any other subject. Writing to the Philippian saints, he urged this precious instruction upon them: "For unto you it is given in the behalf of Christ, not only to believe on Him, but also to suffer for His sake. Phil. 1:29. "He that is faithful unto death shall be given a crown of life," said Jesus, and Paul comforted the Thessalonians with these words: "To you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with His mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." 2 Thess. 1:7,8. Thus persecution becomes an enormous reward to the saint of God as well as a pronouncement of doom upon the wicked who trouble us.

To the Thessalonians Paul wrote, "We ourselves glory in you in the churches of God for your patience and faith in all your persecutions and tribulations that ye endure: which is a manifest token of the righteous judgment of God, that ye may be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, for which ye also suffer." 2 Thess. 1:4,5. As heaven is higher than the earth, so are God's ways higher than our ways and His thoughts than our thoughts, and here in this passage Paul declares that suffering and persecution prove the saints to be worthy of the kingdom for which they suffer.

The Hebrew Christians of the first century were undergoing great persecution and tribulation, perhaps more than many others, because of the opposition of that Jewish synagogue of Satan, which say they are Jews and are not. Rev. 2:9. To the Hebrews in their trials the apostle wrote, "But call to remembrance the former days, in which, after ye were illuminated, ye endured a great fight of afflictions; and partly, whilst ye became companions of them that were so used. For ye had compassion of me in my bonds, and took joyfully the spoiling of your goods, knowing in yourselves that ye have in heaven a better and an enduring substance." Heb. 10:32-34. In every case persecution sharpens the vision and whets the appetite for things eternal, while at the same time it slackens desire for all that is earthly and all that pertains to this present evil system. Surely Peter was teaching us this very thing when he said, "He that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin; that he no longer should live the rest of his life in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God." 1 Pet. 4:1,2. It was this same Peter who told us, "The trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ." 1 Pet. 1:7.

Notice further how persecution fills the spirit with a sense of blessedness, for said Peter, "If ye suffer for righteousness sake, happy are ye (or, blessed are ye): and be not afraid of their terror, neither be troubled; but sanctify the Lord God in your hearts: and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear." 1 Pet. 3:14,15. Then, continuing his exhortation to the suffering, Peter wrote these words, every one of which demand our fervent attention, "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you: but rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when His glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy. If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye; for the spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you: on their part He is evil spoken of, but on your part He is glorified." 1 Pet. 4:12-14. Peter here teaches two great lessons concerning suffering and persecution, first, that our faith is made perfect through suffering and, second, that those who suffer are filled with a sense of heavenly blessedness in that they are accounted worthy to suffer for His name.

The study of Christian suffering opens an entirely new realm in the life of every saint. I do not believe it is right for Christians to develop a persecution complex and be forever mulling over their woes and tribulations. People who are inclined to be forever airing their griefs are certain to lose the blessedness that should be theirs. They should not think it strange that such fiery trial has come upon them, but rather count it all joy when they fall into diverse temptations (trials), knowing that their tribulations are a trial of faith that in the end will prove much more valuable than precious gold, though it be tried with fire, that it might be found unto honor and glory at the appearing of Christ. Persecution can never separate us from the love of God, but rather will serve to bind us closer to Him, for said Paul, "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? As it is written, For Thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter. Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through Him that loved us." Rom. 8:35-37.

"Take, my brethren, the prophets, who have spoken in the name of the Lord, for an example of suffering, affliction, and of patience. Behold, we count them happy which endure." James 5:10,11. Amen.
This little book is not intended to be an exhaustive study of the Epistle to the Hebrews, but only an attempt to glean some of the fathomless truth contained in four of its chapters: Chapters 1, 2, 3, and 11. An exhaustive study of that which is totally inexhaustible is an impossibility. Could we put the ocean into a teacup, then might we hope to exhaust God's word. If we can but unlock the door to this vast treasure house of our Father's illimitable supply, we will not have entirely failed.

When the apostle states that the Lord Jesus Christ is the brightness of God's glory and the express image of His person, how may mortal man, whose eyes have never beheld such brightness or such express image, describe or comprehend Him? The noble and inspired attempts of Ezekiel to portray the vision he saw in chapter one of his book, or of Isaiah in chapter six of his book, or of Daniel in chapter seven of his, leave them as well as ourselves awe struck and amazed, despairing the inability of earthly similarities to explain the majesty of celestial revelation. Simon Peter, with his friends James and John, did not attempt to relate the story of the transfiguration, that left them as dead men. The story is told by Matthew, a man who was not actually on the scene when it happened. Nor could John explain the effulgent glory of the revelation of the fullness of Christ, which he saw in his Patmos vision, except by the use of earthly similarities. In the light of these sublime and heavenly revelations we may for the present find it necessary to follow the example of Paul, who, after being caught up into the third heaven, declared, "I saw unspeakable things that are unlawful for a man to utter." Surely the dullest mind should be able to understand that that which is indescribable cannot be described and that which is unspeakable cannot be spoken.

The author of the book of Hebrews draws telling contrasts between the prophets, by whom God in times past spoke to our fathers, and His Son, by whom He is speaking in these last days. He demonstrates the inferiority of the earthly priesthood of Aaron as compared to that celestial priesthood of Jesus Christ, God's Son. In like manner, by revealing the glory and holiness and power of the angels, he makes them seem almost insignificant in the light of the glory and majesty of the Son of God, He being the creator and they the created, they the ministering servants and He the Lord of all. These comparisons, however, are not made merely for the sake of comparing, but to demonstrate the glory God has prepared for man, in that he, who was made a little lower than the angels, will be crowned with honor and glory and set over the works of God's hands, including the angels. Such is God's mind for man, and unto such glory He will bring him.
In studying the word of God, it is best to read the entire book through as one would read a story book. In this way the seeking heart becomes acquainted with the divine intention. The book of Genesis, which begins with man in the garden of Eden, ends with a man in a coffin in Egypt; but that book which is the Bible begins with man in the garden of Eden, and ends with man glorified and in God's likeness, reigning with Christ in the New Jerusalem, angels and authorities and powers made subject to him as is foreshadowed in Genesis 1:26-27. A spotty, intermittent, here and there scanning of the Bible distorts the truth, as also do the traditions of the church system. Those who read the last chapter of a book before reading the first cannot hope to know what mysteries lie between.

He who plants an acorn in the good earth today will have to wait many years to see the towering oak of tomorrow, and I think the book of Hebrews sows all the seed that mortals can grasp of that magnificent glory laid up for man in Christ in that wonderful, glad tomorrow He has so faithfully promised to those who love Him.

The Author

CHAPTER ONE
OUR SO GREAT SALVATION

The book of Hebrews in its relationship to man is without doubt one of the most awe-inspiring, marvelous and concerted revelations of God's eternal plan, His aim, intent and objective; His design, purpose and goal; His resolution, target and determination that has ever been entrusted to mankind. To the carnal mind and the unspiritual this astonishing revelation of divine intention has very little meaning at all. The carnal mind is an earthbound, unspiritual enemy of God. The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; neither can he know them because they are spiritually discerned. The dead, uninspired natural mind finds it impossible to grasp or discern anything at all beyond those paltry earth-bound things which belong to the realm of the natural. But he that is spiritual, into whose heart the light of the Spirit has shined, judges all things and is not subject to nor shackled by the bondages of corruption or the outer darkness of a debased and sinful carnal mind. To him the heavens begin to open. The eyes of the spirit, once fast closed, now begin to see the invisible things of the eternal realm. His dull, lowland ears, which hitherto were accustomed only to the confused noises and inharmonious sounds of earth, are now unstopped to hear the sweet harmonies of the eternal realm. To his spiritual ear is added an understanding heart that the heavenly things once clouded in the foggy mists of the natural mind are now clearly understood and radiantly seen.

Jacob, the son of Isaac, at the end of a long, weary day fleeing from his father's home to the far away land of his uncle Laban, lay down on the earth to sleep, his head on a pillow of stone. Jacob, the son of peace-loving Isaac, was a man who regarded spiritual things. He was not totally a man of the earth as was his brother, Esau. To Jacob there were things far more important than hunting deer, enjoying the chase and eating the savory meat at the end of the day. His soul even in youth was instinctively reaching out for the promises of God. Like his grandfather, Abraham, his eyes betimes caught glimpses of that eternal city that hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God. In the deep recesses of his heart he knew that, if the birthright belonged to him instead of his brother Esau, it would be his seed whose names would eventually adorn the twelve gates of the New Jerusalem. Nor would they merely adorn those gates, but they would be the gates by which nations hitherto not called would bring their glory and honor into that holy and radiant city.

As he thought on these things, all the treasures of earth became dross and every earthly glory faded into insignificance as the gentle rays of heavenly light broke betimes through the misty shrouds of the natural mind. The birthright his elder brother neglected and even despised was to Jacob a pearl of great price. With all his heart he desired it - yea, coveted it - and, when at a time appointed by God his brother Esau arrived home from his hunting tired, weary and empty-handed, his belly ravenous for food, Jacob offered to trade him a good, hot stew for the birthright he craved and his brother despised. "I am at the point of death," said Esau, "and what good will this birthright do me when I am dead?" Thus without further consideration he lightly traded that which is eternal for a momentary thing, a fleshly appetite that would receive a momentary reprieve but which on each tomorrow would lust again to be satisfied.

In all fairness to Esau I must say that it may have been that he was at the point of death. The historian, Jasher, twice mentioned in scripture, states that Esau had that very day endured a wrathful and bloody confrontation. with his hated rival, the great hunter Nimrod, with several of his men, whom he had defeated in a furious combat. Thus there may have been much more truth in his words, "I am at the point to die", than at first meets the eye. But Esau knew not the truth, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the world and lose his own soul?"

The maintenance of the natural life was to him all that mattered. In this he is far from alone. The world is full and running over with men and women who never see beyond the temporal joys of this present life. "She that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth." That which is natural and passing is to her the only thing that is real. "This is my life," she boasts, "and I am going to live it." Alas, the blindness of the carnal mind does not let them see that this is not life at all, but a state, which the word of truth calls death. It is a mist, which the wind driveth away, a dream in the night that by morning is forgotten, a shaft flying swiftly through the air, leaving no trace that it ever passed by. So are the pleasures and lusts of this present world. How truly has inspiration said, "Meats for the belly and the belly for meats, but God shall destroy both it and them."

Thus with all the sorrows of earth clinging like dust to the care-laden mind of the young man, Jacob, hoping he had put some distance between himself and his angry brother Esau, he lay down beneath the stars to rest. There comes, however, a time in the life of all the elect of God when that inward something, the voice of the Holy Spirit, whispers, "You're a stranger here", and an altar of heavenly experience arises that will forever stand between the past and that which is to be. From the unhewed altar of sacrifice there arises a ladder reaching from the lowly earth to the vaulted skies, even to the throne of God - a ladder whereupon ministering angels ascend and descend upon the sons of God, a stairway of mediation between God and man, which stairway is none other than Jesus Christ, the Son of the Blessed. He it was who said to the adoring Nathaniel, whose bursting heart had just confessed, "Thou art the Son of God; Thou art the King of Israel", "Henceforth thou shall see heaven open and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man."

The ladder Jacob saw was the ladder Jesus is. Can we wonder then that the careworn and fearful Jacob, awakening from his restless dreaming, cried out in utter amazement, "How dreadful is this place! This is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven. And Jacob rose up early in the morning, and took the stone that he had put for his pillow, and set it up for a pillar, and poured oil upon the top of it." Gen. 28:17-18 Here he made his covenant with God and here his life was forever changed - a change ever increasing from glory to glory until it attains the image and likeness of Christ, our Lord.

No man can see God and live; neither can any man see God and die, but henceforth that man of vision lives not the life of the world with its momentary lusts and pleasures, but a new life in Christ, a life that has no end, a walk that becomes the path of the just that shineth more and more until the day is full. It is a life that will blossom into the radiance of the kingdom day and bloom forevermore in that garden of immortality, the dispensation of the fullness of times. Its gladsome morning will dawn with visions of that which eye hath not seen. Its heavenly harmonies awaken the spirit to that which ear hath not heard, and its exalted wisdom whispers that which hath not hitherto entered into the heart of man.

My ransomed soul thrills with the harmonies of heaven that charm the spiritual ear and in my dim mind truth leaps for joy as the babe once leaped within the womb of Elizabeth when the voice of the mother of Jesus fell on her ear. "What ailed thee, O thou sea, that thou fleddest? Thou Jordan, that thou wast driven back? Ye mountains, that ye skipped like rams; and ye little hills, like lambs? Tremble, thou earth, at the presence of the Lord, at the presence of the God of Jacob; which turned the rock into a standing water, the flint into a fountain of waters." Psa. 114:5-8 Thus to him whose eyes are anointed with heavenly eyesalve, whose heart is possessed of the Spirit of understanding, this wonderful epistle to the Hebrews becomes a wine of revelation that "goeth down sweetly, causing the lips of those that are asleep to speak." S. of S. 7:9

We need enter into no fruitless debate as to who the writer of the book of Hebrews may be. If for some reason our all wise heavenly Father should have hidden the identity of His servant, what would that matter? The knowledge that the Holy Spirit inspired this sacred book is sufficient and, because He did, it is a river of living water flowing from the very heart of the eternal throne. It has always been a heaviness of spirit to me to find so many of that breed who call themselves ministers and doctors of divinity who are willing to waste endless years trying to settle minor details that have no bearing whatsoever on the truth while the truth itself is left hidden in the mine. Let us then leave the rudimentary first principles, as this book in chapter six instructs us, to set our hearts on discovering the pearls of great price that lie buried in this splendid mine of truth.
No other book in the Bible begins with the word God. The Hebrews needed no elementary teaching concerning His existence. The introduction immediately lifts us from the bondage of earth's turmoil and the fruitless strivings of men to a realm of revelation and acquaintance with the design and intention of God for man. Should anyone imagine that God has no purpose for man, he needs only to grasp the revelation contained in this book and he will soon understand that everything in this whole age is a gracious manifestation of our heavenly Father's merciful purpose - that He might lift man into Himself and prepare him for the greatest and most glorious task that eternity affords.

It is true that the theme of the book of Hebrews is better things. But I fear that many of us have never discovered why the wisdom of God designed to show that Jesus Christ was a greater prophet than the prophets before Him, a greater messenger than the angels of heaven, a greater priest than the priests of Aaron, a greater builder than Moses and a more perfect tabernacle than his and that His grace would bring a better rest than that of the law, that the new covenant was better than the old, and the blood of Christ was better blood than the blood of Old Testament sacrifices.

Thus the epistle begins: "God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by His Son." These august, stately and dignified words manifest magnificently the love of God toward mankind in that the Holy Spirit through millenniums of time and a great diversity of channels has been speaking to man, giving him a revelation of His will and the vastness of the Father's purpose for him. The revelation of God's plan for man does not in fact begin with the New Testament, though it is greatly expanded there. That revelation begins to unfold in the first chapters of Genesis. Throughout the entire Old Testament era at sundry times and in divers manners God has been steadily unfolding the secret locked up in His mind when the fiat sounded forth in the beginning: "Let Us make man in Our image and after Our likeness, and let Us give him dominion." The New Testament becomes an unfolding of the Old Testament, as any diligent student of scripture must surely notice.

The builder of a house has more honor than the house and it is certainly true that the author of a book has much more honor than his amanuensis. So also He that speaks from heaven has more honor than he who is spoken to on earth. The prophets spoke the word that was spoken to them, but Christ is Himself the Word, bearing greater authority and power to confirm than prophets or angels, types or prefigures or any other thing. Therefore the word, or the epistle, begins, "God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake unto our fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by His Son, whom He hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds; (or, planned the ages)." An awe-inspiring sense of reverence steals over our spirits as we consider the greatness of God's Son and the boundless love of God toward mankind that in the end of an age He sent the greatest authority in the universe to enlighten man and confirm to them all that the prophets have spoken and throw ever increasing light on the purpose of the ages and man's involvement in it.

What a regret it is that we today, like those Jews of old, reject the messengers who come from God with tidings and slay the truth as they slew Him, whose very name is Truth! Those who were bidden to come to the wedding, Luke 14:18-21, found many excuses why they should not come. One pled the business excuse, for said he, "I have bought five yoke of oxen and must go to prove them." Another had the pleasure excuse, for he had bought land and must go to see it. Another had the family excuse, that we so often hear, for he had married a wife and therefore he could not come. Oh, where has our reverence for God taken its soulless flight in all these things? Let us take heed and be warned, for all such earth-minded people go immediately into outer darkness, there to grovel away their earthly pilgrimage playing church and playing religion, doing their business and enjoying their pleasure and to appear at last before the judgment seat of Christ with naught but wood, hay and stubble in their hands, while those who have heard the joyful sound and have heeded the voice of the Son of God declare plainly that they seek a country, and if they had been mindful of that country from whence they came out, they might have had opportunity to have returned, but now they seek a better country, that is, an heavenly; wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God, for He has prepared for them a city. Heb. 11:14. The moment Abraham caught a glimpse of the city that has foundations, he cared not a straw for the riches of earth God had bestowed upon him, but willingly he spent the rest of his life in tents and tabernacles that unhampered and unhindered he might steadfastly advance toward that New Jerusalem city, which alone among cities has foundations and whose builder and maker is God. That holy city stands on twelve foundations and through its twelve pearly gates all nations of earth will pass on their way to the crystal river of the water of life.

Christ is the appointed heir of all things. Heb. 1:2 I am entirely incapable of unfolding the extent of such an all encompassing, all embracing, heavenly inheritance, but, as these thoughts unfold in the pages to come, we will understand it more fully. We will see, I trust, why it is so important that mankind, who is now in such low estate, should be able to grasp what it means to us all that Christ, God's perfect man, Christ, the Head of the body, the house not made with hands, should be heir of all things. It is true, dear saint, it is true that "as He is, so are we in this world." What He is we through Him are becoming. If ever a mystery was entrusted to man's understanding that is it. He is the first born of many brethren. He is the captain of our salvation, and He is bringing many sons to glory. Heb. 2:10 Had Esau known that such an inheritance was part of his birthright, it is difficult to believe that even he, earthly minded as he was, could have despised it. Let Christians therefore search their hearts lest, a promise being left us of entering in, any of us should come short of it.

Is it any wonder that Hosea lamented, "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge". The prophets prophesy falsely and the people love to have it so. Jer. 5:30-31 No man in all the Anglo-Saxon world need be destroyed for lack of knowledge, but, if we would have the knowledge of God, there is one thing first and foremost that we must do and that is obey God and forsake that Babylon which is the present church system.
Then the Holy Spirit will be our teacher and we will learn more of Him in days than we would learn of man in years. What a blessed inheritance for the saints lies in the exhortation of Paul, "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty". Obey that precept first; then in meekness ask the Holy Spirit to unfold the word of God to your heart and you will be amazed by two things: First, how much truth will flood into your soul and, second, how much of the truth He reveals to you will be opposite to that which the Babylon system has taught you. Next the writer tells us that Christ, who is heir of all things, is also the author designer of the ages. Verse 2. He is not speaking here of the world, but rather of the aions or ages. Every age and every dispensation has its own distinctive purpose and is in itself a definite unfolding of the eternal purpose of God. (See Treasures of Truth, Volume 22, Chapter 2.) The dispensations of the past were never failures, as the preachers are so fond of saying, They were the unfolding of God's merciful purpose, a mighty heavenly illumination of what innocence, conscience, human government, promise, law, grace and the kingdom of God will be when innocence is not ignorance, but wisdom from experience; when conscience is not defiled, but pure; human government is not of the carnal mind, but of the mind of Christ; law is not written on tables of stone, but on the fleshly tables of the heart; when grace is not straightened, but abounding. The truths of these dispensations will be seen in their fullness in that kingdom of God that shall never be destroyed. It was the Son of God who formed the ages and it will be the Son of God with His younger brothers who will fill the world with His wisdom and understanding, counsel and might, knowledge and reverence.

THE BRIGHTNESS OF HIS GLORY

The Son of God is here said to be the brightness of God's glory. He is the effulgence of God's glory, the light, the beam, the gleam, the noontide, the light of day, the dazzling splendor, the radiance. Were we to exhaust the thousands of adjectives that beautify and embellish the English language, we would still find ourselves groping for words to express what brilliant fullness the brightness of God's glory would envision. Those few blessed saints who, being caught away in spirit, have caught a glimpse of God's glory always found themselves fumbling for words; to express what their eyes beheld. The brightness of God's glory is so far beyond what tongue can tell or words can frame that it becomes "unlawful to utter" what the vision has disclosed of the inheritance of the saints in lights, for words can do naught but minimize the more excellent glory of that which our vision has seen.

Moses spoke face to face with God and, though after the encounter his face shone with the brightness of God's glory, he made no effort to explain or describe what he saw. Here now the words of Ezekiel as he struggles to describe the likeness of the glory of the Lord. He grasps at such terms as a whirlwind, a great cloud, a fire enfolding itself, a brightness as the color of amber, burning coals of fire, (verse 13), the appearance of lamps, the appearance of a flash of lightning, (verse 14), the color of terrible crystal, (verse 22), the appearance of a sapphire stone, (verse 26). Then in verse 28 he says, "This was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the Lord." Ezek. 1 It certainly is a most magnificent description, but the brightness of God's glory surpassed his imagination and power of expression. It is no wonder that the apostle Paul left out any description of what he saw by simply stating, "I heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for a man to utter."

The first chapter of Ezekiel is far beyond my power to explain, yet for many years I have had an inner conviction that Ezekiel was actually seeing the Father bringing forth His Son, or should we say His sons, out of the glory of Himself. If we meditate in reverence and awe on the second verse of chapter one, we will see that out of the whirlwind of Himself, out of the enfolding fire, out of the brightness that was about it all, out of the amber and the midst of the fire a "likeness" is appearing — "the brightness of His glory and the express image of His person."

I need scarcely remind you that the four faces that developed as they came forth — the face of a man, the face of a lion, the face of an ox and the face of an eagle, verse 10 — represent the exact manner in which Jesus Christ, the Son of God, is presented to the world in the four Gospels. Matthew presents Jesus Christ as the Lion, the King, yea, the King of kings and Lord of lords. The first positive sentence of his gospel leaves no doubt of that; "Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham". Matt. 1:1. He was the Son of David because the promise of kingship was given to Him, 2 Sam. 7:12-18, and the son of Abraham because in his seed all the nations of the earth were to be blessed. Gen. 15:18. The Gospel of Mark is the gospel of the ox, the servant and the sacrifice. "The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many." Mark 10:45. The Gospel of Luke is the gospel of the man, the Son of man, the perfect man. Luke in chapter three passes through the long line of human ancestry right back to the first Adam. In true accord with the wonders of inspiration the genealogy given in the Gospel of Luke is not that of Joseph, but of Mary, his wife, who was the daughter of Heli. Joseph in our terms was not the son, but the son-in-law, of Heli, but the genealogy is that of Mary. The Father of Jesus was not Joseph, but God. For this reason Luke states the fact in these words: Jesus being, as was supposed, the son of Joseph. Luke 3:23

The Gospel of John presents Christ as the eagle, the Son of God. His sublime and holy words of introduction are these: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God." What mysteries are hidden in these words! What unbroken secrets locked in their depths! What treasures of truth passed over so lightly by mankind for centuries!

The first glorious being that came forth in Ezekiel's vision was that "firstborn of every creature", the Son of God Himself. The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. Let us therefore refuse to make any attempt to analyze such holy things with the natural mind, for it is an enemy of God, but let us approach in reverent stillness before our Maker that the truth and the brightness of His glory may through His matchless goodness seep into the inner recesses of our spirit. Searching hearts will resolutely turn aside from human tradition and carnal reasoning and in the fear of the Lord let the Holy Spirit be their teacher. Then light and understanding will be theirs and the knowledge of the Holy will be their portion.

We would, however, deprive ourselves of infinite treasure should we refrain from investigating the vision Ezekiel saw. Out of the radiant brightness of God's glory, out of the effulgence and enfolding fire, there came forth that fourfold representation of the Son of God, the appearance of the likeness of the glory of God. Ezek. 1:28 It is a thing of surpassing wonder that the lion, the man, the ox and the eagle were the camp emblems of the twelve tribes of Israel. The camp to the east of the tabernacle in the wilderness was the camp of Judah, Num. 2:3, consisting of the tribes of Judah, Issachar and Zebulun. The emblem of the camp of Judah was appropriately the lion. The sceptre shall not depart from Judah nor a lawgiver from between his feet until Shiloh come (He is the Lion of the tribe of Judah) and unto Him shall the gathering of the people be. Gen. 49:10

To the south of the tabernacle was the camp of Reuben, composed of the three tribes Reuben, Simeon and Gad. Their emblem was a man. Num. 2:10 To the west was the camp of Ephraim, consisting of Ephraim, Manasseh and Benjamin. Their emblem was the ox. To the north was the camp of Dan, consisting of Dan, Asher and Naphtali. Their emblem was the eagle. Surely the searching heart can see that the same beautiful emblems that in Ezekiel's vision portrayed that first begotten Son of God, as seen in the four gospels, are used also to designate the four camps of the children of Israel, from which twelve tribes the multitude of the sons of God are to come. Rom. 9:4-5

I am well aware that any statement which even hints that the sons of God, the members of the body of Christ, are to come from the twelve tribes of the children of Israel immediately stirs up fierce resistance in the hearts of Christians, because they have been led to believe that God discarded the covenant people, Israel, and substituted what they call spiritual Israel, a term that is not found in the word of God. We are being asked to believe that all the journeys, the callings, the covenants and the promises given to the seed of Abraham, that were to endure as long as the sun and moon, summer and winter, seed time and harvest endure, were to be lightly thrown aside. Are we to believe that the only purpose in God's calling this vast host, these armies of the living God, 1 Sam. 17:27, was that He might bring His only begotten Son into the world? If you are of that persuasion, then I would implore you to open your heart and read the forceful statement of the apostle Paul concerning this chosen nation which he made in his epistle to the Romans in these words: "I have great heaviness and continual sorrow in my heart, for I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh; who are Israelites; to whom pertaineth the adoption (that is, the sonship), and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the services of God, and the promises; whose are the fathers, and of whom concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed forever. Amen." Rom. 9:2-5 This is a potent message and, if you look at it carefully with an open heart, you will see that adoption, which means full sonship, belongs to Israel. This I say, however. God is God. He is both almighty and all wise and can, when He chooses, call anyone to sonship if it is His predetermined purpose, but the promise of sonship is to the seed of Abraham through Isaac, through whom came Jacob, the man who obtained both the birthright and the blessing from God. We may try all we wish to bring in our substitutes and pray with tears as Abraham did, "O that Ishmael might live before Thee!" But the Lord replied, "Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son indeed; and thou shall call his name Isaac: and I will establish My covenant with him for an everlasting covenant and with his seed after him." Gen. 17:18-19 It would be difficult for any of us to believe that the one hundred and forty-four thousand who were sealed were without reasonable doubt sons of God, and certainly no one on earth can deny that the one hundred and forty-four thousand were Israelites, twelve thousand from each tribe.

It is a source of amazement to me to discover that millions of Christians try their best to emphasize the unimportance of the ten tribes of the house of Israel, who as nations accept Christ as the Saviour of the world, yet these same people defend the Jew as God's chosen people and try to tell the world that these people, whom Paul correctly describes as "having killed the Lord Jesus, and their own prophets, and have persecuted us; and they please not God, and are contrary to all men; forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles that they might be saved, to fill up their sins always: for the wrath is come upon them to the uttermost", 1 Thess. 2:14-16, are indeed God's chosen people. This is a very vital and apt description of what the Jews were in the days of Christ and what they still are today. There has been no change in their attitude, no repentance and no conversion. For Christians to imagine that the people who have glorified Christ for two thousand years and have proclaimed His gospel to the four corners of the earth will suddenly become subject to and ruled over by a people who have killed the prophets of the Old Testament and killed the Christ of the New Testament, who please not God and are contrary to all men, is foolhardy madness. They who are faithful in the age of grace are they who will reign with Christ in the kingdom age. This is truth taught by our blessed Lord. As time passes and evidence accumulates on every hand, I am more and more convinced that the Jew is neither what he professes to be nor what the church system imagines him to be.

Our blessed Lord taught us, saying, "He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much." He taught us that those who suffer with Him would reign with Him, and he who by his faithfulness gained ten talents in the age of grace would reign over ten cities in the kingdom of God. If Paul by the inspiration of the Holy Spirit said that the adoption (that is, sonship), the glory, the covenants, the giving of the law, the service of God and the promises belong to the twelve tribes of Israel, who am I and who are you to say that it is not so? If Paul says the fathers (that is, all the patriarchs) and all the prophets were from Israel and that even Jesus Christ as concerning the flesh came from Israel, how dare anyone affirm that it is not so or try to substitute some man-conceived spiritual Israel to take its place? Furthermore, I affirm that it is true that not only does the adoption belong to Israel and the sons of God, like Jesus Christ the first Son, come from the seed of Abraham, but the bride of Christ, who is the New Jerusalem, also comes from this same seed of Abraham. He it is who in his wandering saw the New Jerusalem; the only city in the universe that has foundations, whose builder and maker is God. He saw that the twelve apostles, who also came from the seed of Abraham, would be its glorious foundation and that the twelve tribes who would eventually spring from his loins would become the twelve gates to that magnificent and heavenly city into which eventually every nation on earth will come to bring their glory and honor and enter its pearly gates to drink of the crystal pure water of life and eat of the eternal food of the tree of life, which is flourishing on either side of its crystal river. It is a glorious and wonderful picture, a hope beyond compare, if we refrain from spoiling it by our human tradition. Why should it be thought impossible that God should raise the dead or why should it be thought incredible that God would choose the seed of Abraham that in his seed after him all the other families of the earth should be blessed? It is His plan. He made it and He will carry it out to its fullness.

Having said that Christ is the brightness of God's glory, the Holy Spirit now asserts that He is the express image of His person. "Let Us make man in Our image," the great Elohim said in the beginning; and out of the enfolding fire, the whirlwind, the terrible crystal - words which struggle to describe the ineffable One - there came forth a living creature having the face of an eagle, the face of a lion, the face of a man and the face of an ox: The face of an eagle because He is the Son of God; the face of a lion because He is the King of kings and Lord of lords; the face of a man because He is the Son of man, an inherent constituent of the human race, the firstborn of every creature; the face of an ox because He is the sacrifice for sin and the Redeemer of Israel and the Saviour of the world, one who came as the heavenly servant of all mankind. Thou grand ineffable mystery, Thy wonderful majesty overwhelms my soul! Well do we know, Thou blessed One, that it is Thine unalterable intention that at last Thine eternal decree - let Us make man in Our image and after Our likeness - is being fulfilled. Open our eyes that we may know how far the words so simply stated in this epistle reach beyond all human understanding. Grant that we might see the purpose unfold in its fullness rather than in the indistinct fragments that appear to the natural mind. May our failing eyes behold a better country, that is, an heavenly, that Elohim Himself may be our God and Jesus Christ unashamed to call us His brethren.

The things which eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither have entered the heart of man, must be revealed to us by His Spirit. I have no wisdom to describe how the Son of God can be the image of the Father, but I know that I shall be like Him when I see Him as He is; and, though now for a time we see Him not, yet believing we rejoice in the knowledge that the little we do see is working an unspeakable transformation as we, beholding the glory of the Lord, are being changed into that same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord. 2 Cor. 3:18

The Son of God, who made the world and all things therein, is further said to uphold all things by the word of His power. Heb. 1:3 This sublime statement of power can do no less than leave us with the understanding that God Almighty is in control of all things. Not only does He rule in the heavens, but even now in this dark hour of the world's midnight He is in control of the earth. What could better say that His mighty arm upholds all things than the fathomless wisdom by which He declares the end of all things from their beginning? We are so inclined to be unsettled and greatly troubled about the way the world is drifting. God's people betimes work themselves into a frenzy of unbelief in their efforts to turn things around and make them go the way the natural man thinks they ought to go. Preachers try to "turn the tide". They fight against the antichrist system, which even a blind man should see is rising in awesome power as men and nations "wonder after the beast" - that same beast who received the deadly wound in the days of Martin Luther, but whose deadly wound has since been healed. Amid all the vain striving to make a better world even God's people forget that these present calamities were foretold long ago. By His infinite wisdom He sees the end from the beginning. He described with intricate accuracy the wars, the pests, the famines and diseases that now fill the world with increasing catastrophe and woe. God's word is much more up to date than tonight's newspaper. Vividly does it describe the tribulations that signify the end of this age and herald the dawn of the kingdom of God, and if we will look in faith and understanding, we will see what good these fiery trials are working for those who are suffering from them while they learn the fullness of the knowledge of both good and evil.

God is in control of the world and He is in control of the people in it. He raises up whom He will and debases whom He will. He upholds His word, His covenants, His servants, His glory, His promises and His people so that no weapon that is formed against them can ever hope to prosper. Which of all the wicked devices of evil men has ever been successful in obliterating the word of God? The Bible, which by government and papal decree was prohibited, burned and destroyed, flourishes today in millions of homes and in numberless hearts and is sold on the counter of the dime store. The martyrs, who in time past were burned, tormented, tortured and slain, now look down from the skies to see untold millions standing in triumph where once they stood and died. When the last effort has been made to destroy God and to wipe out the name of Christ from the earth, He will be seen standing in multiplied millions of His saints of earth and coming in power and glory upon the clouds of heaven. He upholds all things by the word of His power. Nations, however mighty in their day, can no longer stand once the Almighty has decreed their fall. All the armaments on earth will fail to save them. No purpose can stand when he is not with it. Except the Lord keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain. God, and He alone, upholds all things by the omnipotent word of His power.

The Holy Spirit, having manifested the glory of Christ in creation in that by Him all things were made and without Him was nothing made, and that He is the effulgence of God's glory and the express image of His person, upholding the universe by the word of His power, now in verse three assures us that, having purged us from our sins, He is now seated at the right hand of the Majesty on high, awaiting the triumphant day when all things will be subdued unto Himself.

Crown Him with many crowns,
The Lord upon His throne.
Hark how the heavenly anthem drowns
All music but its own!
Arise, my soul, and sing
Of Him who died for thee,
And crown Him as thy matchless King
For all eternity.

CHAPTER TWO
THE GLORY OF THE SON OF GOD

The glory of the Son of God exceeds that of angels. The writer of the book of Hebrews in demonstrating that the glory of the Son was greater than the glory of angels is by no means attempting to belittle the ministry of angels, but, having spoken of the power and wisdom of the angels, he then shows how great must be the glory of the Son if His glory and power so far exceeds that of angels. Angels, which are great in glory and might, are created beings. 2 Pet. 2:11 "For in Him were all things created in heaven and upon earth, things visible and things invisible, whether they be thrones or dominions or principalities or powers, all things were created through Him and unto Him." Col. 1:16 Revised Version. The revealing fact that angels, glorious in power and wisdom, were themselves created both by and for the Son of God manifests as little else can how great and glorious He, the Creator, must be. The reverent soul, standing with awe and fear before such majesty, finds himself speaking with bated breath as he bows in homage and adoring contemplation before the divine majesty of the Son of God, who is seated at the right hand of the majesty on High.

Angels, shining and resplendent as they are, are ministering spirits created and sent forth to minister to those who are the heirs of salvation. The blessed and powerful ministry of angels is abundantly manifest throughout the Holy Scriptures. They excel in wisdom and strength. 2 Pet. 2:11 They are celestial beings beyond the power of human description as may be seen by studying such revealing passages as Matt. 28:2,3; Rev. 10:1; Dan. 10:6; and many, many others. Angels appeared to Abraham in the lonesomeness of his wilderness wandering. It was they who brought the message of the birth of Isaac to the aged man and his wife. Angels appeared to just Lot to deliver him from the sordid wickedness of Sodom. Angels appeared to Elijah and fed him when he fled from the face of the wicked Jezebel. A mighty host of angels appeared at Dothan to protect Elisha when the Syrians sent an army to take him. 2 Kings 6 These heavenly beings were with Daniel in the den of lions. It was a mighty angel who brought tidings to Zacharias in the temple, to the Virgin Mary and again to Joseph. At the time of our Lord's temptation in the wilderness angels came to strengthen Him. Angels delivered Peter from the prison and appeared to Paul during the fearful storm on the voyage to Rome. And in the twentieth century, too, as in all other times men and women and children have on occasion been visited by the angels of the Lord.
The scripture states clearly that angels are glorious in power and might and the word of God bears witness to their wisdom, their power and their might. The vast all-conquering Assyrian army was encamped before the walls of Jerusalem and the people reduced to utter starvation until Hezekiah, the king, called upon the Lord and the prophet Isaiah prophesied the deliverance of the city. That very night the angel of the Lord passed over the Assyrian hosts and those who were spared until the morning found 185,000 men and their horses slain. How eloquently the poet described the scene when he wrote:

The Assyrian came down like the wolf on the fold,
And his cohts were gleaming with purple and gold,
And the sheen of their spears was like stars on the sea
Where the blue wave rolls nightly on deep Galilee.

Like leaves of the forest when summer is green
That host with their banners at sunset were seen;
Like leaves of the forest when autumn hath blown,
That host on the morrow lay withered and strewn;

For the angel of death spread his wings on the blast,
And breathed in the face of the foe as he passed;
And the eyes of the sleepers waxed deadly and chill,
And their hearts but once heaved and forever grew still.

And there lay the steed with his nostril all wide,
But through it there rolled not the breath of his pride.
And the foam of his gasping lay white on the turf,
And cold as the spray of the rock-beating surf.

And there lay the rider, distorted and pale,
With the dew on his brow, and the rust on his mail;
And the tents were all silent, the banners alone,
The lances unlifted, the trumpet unblown.

And the widows of Asshur are loud in their wail;
And the idols are broke in the temple of Baal;
And the might of the Gentile, unsmote by the sword,
Hath melted like snow in the glance of the Lord!

Our purpose here in emphasizing the power and glory of angels, as was also the purpose of the author of Hebrews, is that we might show that the Son is much greater than they. This the apostle goes about to prove in the following manner: In saying that the Son of God is greater than the angels, the writer points up four distinct ways in which the Son of God is greater than they. First, by inheritance He hath a more excellent name than they. Second, unto which of the angels hath He ever said, "Thou art My Son?" Third, He has never said to them, "This day have I begotten thee." Fourth, when he bringeth His first begotten into the world, He saith, "Let all the angels of God worship Him." These four statements emphasize as nothing else can the indisputable wisdom of divine reasoning. They leave no room for debate as to the superiority of the Son of God over angels, who were created both by Him and for Him, and, with the exception of the Almighty Himself, are the most powerful, glorious and radiant of all His creatures.

Now as to the statement, "He hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they," the understanding is not easily grasped, for, while as God's only begotten Son He became heir of all things, it appears from Phil. 2:9, ("wherefore God hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a name that is above every name: that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father) that the Son of God by His devotion actually attained His most marvelous inheritance. Because He, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God but made Himself of no reputation and took upon Him the form of a servant and was made in the likeness of men and, being found in fashion as a man, He humbled Himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross, Phil. 2:5-8, therefore, or for this reason, the Father exalted Him and gave Him a name above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow.

He is seated at the right hand of the Majesty on high in everlasting glory to be associated with the supreme Majesty of the universe. In eastern countries the throne was reserved for the king himself. Next to him at his right hand was the second ruler and at his left the third. How wonderfully in accord is this with Paul's statement, "For He must reign till He hath put all enemies under His feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death. For He hath put all things under His feet. But when He saith all things are put under Him, it is manifest that He is excepted, which did put all things under Him. And when all things shall be subdued unto Him, then shall the Son also Himself be subject unto Him that put all things under Him, that God may be all in all." 1

Cor. 15:25-28 What a glorious inheritance He has attained in that He has purged the sins of the universe, will put all enemies under His feet, including the last enemy death - the first death and the second death - and, having restored and reconciled the whole universe, will Himself become willingly subject to the Father, that God may be all in all! Oh what a sublime and heavenly wonder it all is! Let those who will, despairing souls that they are, preach the doom and gloom of a lost creation, but I am sure that He who picked up the fragments that were discarded after the multitude had been fed with the loaves and fishes. He who sought the one last sheep until He found it and nestled it down with the ninety and nine, He who swept the house until He found the lost coin, will never, you may assuredly and safely believe, lose anything in all His universe; but He will subdue it and purge it and present it faultless before the throne of His glory with exceeding joy. That, O child of God, is His inheritance.

Unto which of the angels said He at any time, "Thou art My Son; this day have I begotten thee"? I would not want to take upon myself to say what is meant by "this day have I begotten thee," as no scripture is of private interpretation. It may refer to the coming of the Saviour through the Virgin Mary, for that which was begotten of her was by the Holy Ghost. Then in His resurrection He is called the first begotten from the dead. This all is divinely and sublimely true, yet I am moved to believe, as we pointed out in chapter one, that the awe-inspiring sight which Ezekiel saw was nothing less than God the Father begetting a Son from the glory of Himself. Furthermore, from the four faces - the eagle, the lion, the man and the ox - we are led to believe that another representation is of necessity here - that of the chosen people through whom the great family of sons were to come in the image and likeness of the first begotten Son. As the die leaves its image and likeness impressed upon the wax, so Christ leaves the image and likeness of Himself upon His sons, as the Father has left His image upon Christ. It is all too wonderful for me! It is high; I cannot attain unto it. O the depths of the riches of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable are His judgments and His ways past finding out! "For who hath known the mind of the Lord? Or who hath been His counselor? Or who hath first given to Him, and it shall be recompensed unto him again? For of Him, and through Him, and to Him are all things: to whom be glory forever. Amen." Rom. 11:34-36

To which of the angels said He at any time, "I will be to Him a Father and He shall be to Me a Son?" This is a direct quotation from Psa. 2:7. "I will declare the decree: The Lord hath said unto Me, Thou art My Son; this day have I begotten Thee." But unto the Son He saith, "Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever: a sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of Thy kingdom. Thou hast loved righteousness, and hated iniquity; therefore God, even Thy God, hath anointed Thee with the oil of gladness above Thy fellows. And, Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the works of Thy hands: Thy shall perish, but Thou remainest; and they all shall wax old as doth a garment; and as a vesture shall Thou fold them up, and they shall be changed: but Thou art the same, and Thy years shall not fail." Heb. 1:8-12 What a wonder of inspiration this really is - that the Father should prove the superiority of His Son above all beings created or made in such a manner as this, that, while exalting the Son to the throne of God, He never in the least belittles, disparages, minimizes or underrates the greatness of angels nor the power of their ministry.

The first part of this passage is taken from Psalm 45:6-7 This beautiful Psalm of King David is given to the exaltation of the illustrious King of the kingdom, which is to come. "My heart is inditing a good matter: I speak of the things which I have made touching the king: my tongue is the pen of a ready writer. Thou art fairer than the children of men: grace is poured forever and ever: the sceptre of Thy kingdom is a right sceptre. Thou lovest righteousness, and hatest wickedness: therefore God, Thy God, hath anointed Thee with the oil of gladness above Thy fellows." Verses 6-7

"Thy throne, O God!" These exalted words were spoken of the Son of God. He is of the family of God in the same way that Gabriel and Michael are of the order of angels. Whatever our understanding of Christ may be, or in whatsoever manner we picture Him, He is God. It is valueless for man to attempt to describe what God is like, because He is really not like anything we know. Those who have seen God in vision find themselves, even with the help of inspiration, completely unable to explain what they saw. It was good that Ezekiel attempted to describe what he saw in his vision, for it is most enlightening as we have seen. Yet he, being bewildered by the sight, is forced to use expressions that leave the reader dazedly wondering. "As the color of amber"; verse 4 "They had the likeness of a man"; verse 5 "They sparkled like burnished brass"; verse 7 "Like the appearance of coals of fire"; verse 13 "Like the appearance of lamps"; verse 13 "As the appearance of a flash of lightning"; verse 14 "As it were a wheel in the middle of a wheel"; verse 16 The whole chapter is given to describing that which is indescribable, that which in reality is not completely like anything we know. Our Lord Jesus Christ, after His resurrection, appeared in different forms and even before His crucifixion He appeared in different ways. The woman of Samaria took Him to be a Jew. When the veil was removed at the transfiguration, it is stated that His face did shine "as the sun" and His garment was "white as the light". These comparative similarities were the best descriptions the seers could give. Daniel also attempts to give expression to what he saw in his vision of the Son of God. "His body was like the beryl, and His face as the appearance of lightning, His eyes as lamps of fire, His arms and His feet like in color to polished brass, and the voice of His words like the voice of a multitude." Dan. 10:6

One would be led to believe that in all such passages as these even inspiration finds no suitable words, at least in any human tongue, to describe these indescribables. His body was like the beryl. Funk and Wagnall's English Dictionary describe the beryl as being a "vitreous green, light blue, yellow, pink or white silicate of aluminum and beryllium crystallizing in a hexagonal system. The aquamarine and emerald are varieties of beryl used as gems." Would you not say that one would need to see the beryl shining and flashing in all these colors to have any idea what the prophet actually saw? Vitreous pertains to glass and the light green, light blue, yellow, pink or white was the prophet's description of the body of the heavenly being he saw. His face appeared as lightning, His eyes as lamps of fire, His feet like polished brass and His words like the voice of a multitude.

The similarity of the vision of Daniel to that of the apostle John is so remarkable that it must be assumed that they were actually beholding the same glorious person, the Son of God Himself; but from the words of John especially we conclude that both Daniel and John were seeing, not the Christ of Galilee, despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, but the fullness of Christ as He shall appear in His mystical body at the end of this present age, united with the great family of glorified sons all prepared through grace and suffering and ready to take the throne of the kingdom of God to reign in ineffable glory for the age. Marvelous as are the likenesses given by revelation, they are couched in such magnificent terms that divine revelation can proceed for ages revealing just what those likenesses describe. What Daniel describes as the voice of a multitude, John describes as the sound of many waters. Waters in scripture signify peoples and tongues and nations. Rev. 17:15

Daniel spoke of a multitude and John adds in his revelation, "A multitude that no man can number". I have mentioned in previous writings that my wife and I once attended the Warrior's Day Parade in Toronto. In the one grandstand alone were thirty thousand people. As they waited for the parade to begin, they chatted together, and, as we listened to the hum, the distant thunder, the rising and falling, the rumble and the indistinguishable mumble of their voices, we could best describe the sound as the voice of many waters. The sound was like Niagara Falls. No sound is more quieting to the spirit than the sound of running water. Nothing is more healing to the troubled or weary mind. That wondrous voice of the fullness of Christ will one day quiet the troubled universe and bring God's cosmos out of the dreadful chaos into which six thousand years of man's laborious government has brought us all.

THE GLORY OF THE THRONE
The throne of David was intended to be an eternal throne from the beginning. The Almighty never renews His intentions nor His purposes. They are all yea and amen and will stand forever. Poor, feeble man is always having to alter courses and change his plans because he has no power to bring them to pass, but the Almighty never changes His purposes. He is all wise in their conception and all powerful to carry them to the fullness of conclusion. To David the Lord promised, "David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel." Jeremiah 33:17 Nor will a man ever be lacking to occupy that throne until that day when the King of kings and Lord of lords takes the kingdom to reign. Thus saith the prophet Isaiah, "Upon the throne of David to order and establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even forever." Isa. 9:7 Every reader would do well to notice these words: "Then Solomon sat upon the throne of the Lord ..." 1 Chron. 29:23

The things our Lord initiates in smallness and weakness grow from glory to glory and from strength to strength. The insignificant throne of David in the petty city of Jerusalem, set to rule over a small people, will be at last the greatest throne on earth, for it is the throne of the Lord. It will swallow up all others. It will rule a more excellent realm than David's with wisdom far exceeding that of Solomon. It will rule a converted and regenerated Israel. It will bring all nations of earth under its happy dominion. Nothing of evil known throughout the past six thousand years will hold power or sway in that realm of light. That enduring throne, which is forever, or unto the ages of the ages, will rise yet one step higher when the bride of Christ, the New Jerusalem, is joined in marriage to the glorified body of Christ, the sons of God. Then the throne of God will be in it. Thus Isaiah prophesied in these words: "For unto us a child is born, unto us a Son is given: and the government shall be upon His shoulder: and His name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon His kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever." Isa. 9:6-7 The same promise was given at the annunciation of the birth of Jesus. Luke 1:32-33 He shall be great and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto Him the throne of His father David; and He shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of His kingdom there shall be no end." The wonder of such a statement literally staggers, astonishes and dumbfounds the mind! Then Christ, the Son of David, will sit upon the throne of the Lord throughout the kingdom age and on through the dispensation of the fullness of times when everything in heaven and earth will be gathered into Christ, Eph. 1:9-10; when at last all nations have brought their glory and honor into the New Jerusalem and everything in the universe kneels at the feet of this blessed King of kings and Lord of lords; when all things everywhere shall be subdued unto Him. Then shall the Son in all His supernal greatness, together with the sons He calls His brothers, members of the Christ body, become subject to the unspeakable, ineffable majesty of the throne of the Father that God may be all in all. 1 Cor. 15:24-25. The Father's throne is high above every throne and every name that can be named in this world or in worlds to come, far above all principality or might, dominion or power.

"All and in all" is a blessed statement that far surpasses human comprehension. It would seem that the heavenly Father is telling us of a day that is coming when God will be in everything and everything everywhere will be in Him. We will have to admit that even in this hour of sin and darkness all created life, whether things alive or things dead, things animate or things inanimate, all things, absolutely all things, live and move and have their being in Him. "From Him everything comes; through Him everything exists; and in Him everything ends." Rom. 11:36 (Goodspeed). If He takes away their breath, they die. If He breathes upon them, they live. If He commands, they obey. If He calls, they respond. But what an unspeakable wonder it will be when the mountains and the hills, once thought inanimate, break forth into singing and the trees of the field clap their hands! Isa. 55:12

The next phase of David's throne is the coming of Shiloh. Gen. 49:10 As Joseph was made known to his brethren on the second occasion he met them, Acts 7:13, so will the now exalted Christ, who has been given a name which is above every name, at His second coming make Himself known, not only to His brethren, the seed of Abraham, but to every nation far and wide. Zechariah saw the triumphant day when "one shall say unto Him, What are these wounds in Thy hands? Then shall He answer, Those with which I was wounded in the house of My friends." Zech. 13:6 He saw the day come when "His feet shall stand upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem", Zech. 14:4, and proclaimed, "And the Lord shall be king over all the earth; in that day shall there be one Lord, and His name one." Zech. 14:9 Zechariah saw the punishment of those nations who refused to accept Him as King and Lord. He saw that amid all the glory of the kingdom reign with all its unspeakable blessings there would be a ruling sceptre, a rod of iron, for those who refused to accept His majesty and authority. Then said the prophet, "And it shall come to pass that everyone that is left of all the nations which came against Jerusalem shall go up from year to year to worship the King, the Lord of hosts, and to keep the feast of tabernacles. And it shall be that whoso will not come up of all the families of the earth unto Jerusalem to worship the King, the Lord of hosts, even upon them shall be no rain. And if the family of Egypt go not up, and come not, that have no rain; there shall be the plague, wherewith the Lord will smite the heathen that come not up to keep the feast of tabernacles. This shall be the punishment of Egypt, and the punishment of all nations that come not up to keep the feast of tabernacles." Zech. 14:16-19 We may assure our hearts, therefore, that the sublime calmness, peace and glory of the kingdom age will never be shattered by disobedient or unruly nations; neither will it ever be marred by the ungodly or profane, the unbridled or intractable, the fractious or perverse. In that kingdom of love all will be peace.

In that day of glory and majesty, upon the King who sits on the throne shall rest the Spirit of the Lord, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord... With righteousness shall He judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth; and He shall smite the earth with the rod of His mouth, and with the breath of His lips shall He slay the wicked. And righteousness shall be the girdle of His loins, and faithfulness the girdle of His reins. The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the falling together; and a little child shall lead them. The cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together; and the lion shall eat straw like the ox. And the suckling child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand in the cockatrice' den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all My holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea. See Isaiah, chapters 11 and 35

The prophets of old, Isaiah in particular, so magnify the kingdom and the glory of its King upon His throne that one is completely carried away and left speechless, beholding the wonder and the happy estate of all who rest beneath the sheltering shekinah that overshadows His exalted throne. In that day every valley shall be exalted. Every mountain and hill shall be made low. The crooked shall be made straight and the rough places plain. The glory of the Lord shall be revealed and all flesh shall see it together, for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it. Amid all the bluster, the threatening and the judgment repeated over and over in the book of Isaiah, the reader cannot fail to be carried off into the realm of the celestial as the mighty prophet interrupts his pronouncements of woe against the disobedient to speak of a better day when all sorrow and all carnality, all inborn perverseness of spirit, all wars and rumors of wars, all plagues, frosts, dearth and floods, and every disease known to mankind will be wiped out for ever; when "instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree." Isa. 55:13 Therefore "sing, O barren, thou that didst not bear; break forth into singing, and cry aloud, thou that didst not travail with child: for more are the children of the desolate than the children of the married wife, saith the Lord." Isa. 54:1 "And they shall call them, The holy people, The redeemed of the Lord: and thou shalt be called, Sought out, A city not forsaken." Isa. 62:12

Thus through a glass darkly do the prophets and seers depict the more excellent glory of His throne - the throne of which the writer of Hebrews exulted, "Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever." Thus for the one thousand year reign of the kingdom of God it shall be; but this, dearly beloved reader, is only the beginning of that throne and the majesty of that wonderful Shiloh, who is to be revealed when He comes the second time. Paul in his epistle to the Ephesians gently but boldly drew aside the veil of secrecy that for ages had covered that throne and the majesty of that wonderful Shiloh, who is to be revealed when He comes the second time. Paul in his epistle to the Ephesians gently but boldly drew aside the veil of secrecy that for ages had covered
In that age of the ages the New Jerusalem, the bride of Christ, will be glorified in all the earth. Her twelve pearly gates will be opened wide and never, ever closed, for there is no night there. The throne of God will be in it. It was of this throne our writer spoke when he exulted, "Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever", or, to the ages of the ages. Forth from that throne of blessing will flow the river of the water of life as John saw it flowing. On either side of the crystal river blooms the eternal tree of life, bearing the twelve manner of fruits, of which we cannot now speak in particular. Then shall the nations of earth, whosoever they be, come flooding to bring their glory and honor into the city, wonder that will never, never cease until that day when everything in heaven and in earth has tasted the glory of redemption and God, the everlasting Father, is all and in all. See the marvelous truth in Rev. 21 and 22.

"Thy throne, O God!" Heb. 1:8 I am sure it would be no great task to fill this whole book with truth concerning that exalted throne, but let us take heed to this: The King who reigns on that throne is here said to be God. Our heavenly Father does not use titles lightly. One word falling from His lips of truth fills the world with understanding. The Jews of long ago might have cried, "Blasphemy," at the slightest suggestion from Christ that He was in any sense God, but here the Father Himself, exalted far above heaven and earth, the Father, who once spoke with thunder voice from heaven, "This is My beloved Son in whom I am well pleased", now speaks for all creation to hear, saying of Christ, "Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever."

Please do not present to me your humanistic arguments about trinities and unities. Cast aside the traditions of men who know not their right hand from their left, who imagine they understand the mystery of godliness, who divide the saints and organize new denominations on what they believe, or, rather, imagine. Let the Holy Spirit still the troubled waves of human imagination. Listen only to the words He speaks. Then, and only then, will you find the knowledge of the Holy and a divine understanding will fill your soul with peace. We will never be able to explain the mystery of God. The prophets could not do it. The apostles could not do it. And our Lord Jesus Christ never tried to do it. It was He who said, "No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, He hath declared Him."

But then that only begotten Son, sending the Holy Spirit into the heart of the apostle, spoke of this same Jesus, saying, "Thy throne, O God." He is God, beloved friend! The Father has said it is so. One could compose pages of facts to prove that He is God, but I am inclined to believe that attempts on the part of the created to prove that his creator exists is a subtle form of unbelief bordering on blasphemy and idolatry. The idolater fashions a god for himself whether that god be of wood or stone or some other fruit of his imagination, but he who makes an idol always fashions his god in the likeness of himself. If he be cruel, the god he fashions is cruel. If he is grotesque, the idol he makes will be grotesque. "Thou thoughtest that I was such an one as thyself is the Lord's rebuke to the wicked man. Psa. 50:21 "When they knew God, they glorified Him not as God, but became vain in their imaginations and their foolish heart was darkened. Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools, and changed the glory of the uncorruptible God into an image like to corruptible man, and to birds, and four-footed beasts, and creeping things." Whatever they fancied, in that image their god was formed.

"Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever." Heb. 1:8 The throne is a symbol of sovereign power and dignity. The throne of Christ, which was entrusted to the house of David, Jer. 33:17, was to be held by David and his royal seed as tenants until Shiloh comes, or, as it is so beautifully stated by Jacob in his prophecy to Judah, "The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet until Shiloh come; and unto Him shall the gathering of the people be." Gen. 49:10

We have a beautiful account of the throne of the Lord in Psalm 89. Read it with diligence and prayer and you will see many promises and pictures of what the throne of the Lord will be. If we insist on ignoring the truth that the eventual kingdom throne of Christ springs from the throne of David, we will find ourselves in all manner of misunderstanding, but if we see that the throne of David is in reality the throne of Christ, not in corruption as it existed for centuries under blind and ignorant tenants in the days of the kings of Israel, but in the incorruption, the immortality and the glory of the ages to come, then we will be reading prophecy rather than history.

Notice these marvelous words of instruction: "I will sing of the mercies of the Lord for ever: with my mouth will I make known Thy faithfulness to all generations, for I have said, Mercy shall be built up for ever: Thy faithfulness shalt Thou establish in the very heavens. I have made a covenant with My chosen. I have sworn unto David, My servant, Thy seed will I establish for ever, and build up thy throne to all generations. Selah."

Psa. 89:1-4 May I remark here that the word selah, which is a call for meditation, loosely translated into English means approximately, "Just think of that!" Selah is really intended to be a sort of adoring exclamation as though one was awed almost to unbelief at the glory of what was spoken - the expression one might use upon hearing or perceiving the incredible. Then the Psalmist continues his exultation of the throne in these words: The heavens shall praise Thy wonders, O Lord: Thy faithfulness also in the congregation of the saints."

The statements made in Psalm 89 certainly call forth from our astonished hearts that adoring word of contemplation, Selah. Give heed to the outburst of revelation that runs all through this kingdom Psalm, revealing what that throne will be. "The heavens shall praise Thy wonders: Thy faithfulness also in the congregation of the saints. For who in heaven can be compared unto the Lord? Who among the sons of the mighty can be likened unto the Lord?" Verses 5-6. "Thou rulest the raging of the sea: when the waves thereof arise, Thou stillest them." Verse 9. Now apply the word sea to the nations of the world, for that is what is meant. Zechariah proclaimed that the Lord will be King over all the earth. Zech. 14:9 The Lord's reign, however, is not restricted to the earth only, but "the heavens are Thine, the earth also is Thine: as for the world and the fullness thereof, Thou hast founded them." Verse 11

After outlining the vast extent and dominion of His throne, David next proceeds to describe the government that will flow forth like a healing river of life from that throne. "Justice and judgment are the habitation of Thy throne: mercy and truth shall go before Thy face. Blessed is the people that know the joyful sound: they shall walk, O Lord, in the light of Thy countenance. In Thy name shall they rejoice all the day: and in Thy righteousness shall they be exalted." Verses 14-16. Then, after stating the many other blessings of the throne from verses 17 to 33, the exaltation of it, the glory of it, the defense of it, the holy anointing oil for the King, the subjugation of all foes of the kingdom - the Psalmist declares the certainty that the throne and the covenant are for ever in the words, "My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of My lips. Once have I sworn by My holiness that I will not lie unto David. His seed shall endure forever, and his throne as the sun before Me. It shall be established as the moon, and as a faithful witness in heaven. Selah." Verses 34-37

In the light of these things can we wonder that the writer of Hebrews, filled with glory and inspiration, breathed forth in his writing these magnificent words: "Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever: a sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of Thy kingdom. Thou hast loved righteousness and hated iniquity: therefore God, even Thy God, hath anointed Thee with the oil of gladness above Thy fellows. And, Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the works of Thine hands; they shall perish; but Thou remainest: and they all shall wax old as doth a garment; and as a vesture shall Thou fold them up, and they shall be changed. But Thou art the same, and Thy years shall not fail." Heb. 1:8-12

Every clause in that superlative statement requires our earnest consideration. The throne of David that began in smallness and rejection has now become the throne of Christ and of the world. Jesus Christ is the Shiloh who was to come. All the kings of the house of Judah from David to the present day held it as tenants or regents until "He should come whose right it is to reign, and I will give it to Him." Ezek. 21:27

The sure mercies of David, Isa. 55:3, were the promises given to David - that his throne would abide for ever and that his seed, which is Christ, would eventually take the throne which was rightfully His.

Joseph was the second ruler in Egypt because he was in reality occupying the throne for Pharaoh. For many years scholars thought there was no such king as Belshazzar, since he is not listed among the kings of Babylon, until it was later discovered that Belshazzar ruled as regent for his father, Nabonidus. For this reason Daniel was called the third ruler, Nabonidus being first ruler, Belshazzar the second and Daniel the third. Thus all rulers occupying the throne of the Lord, which springs from the throne of David, occupy it as tenants and regents until Shiloh come, whose right it is to reign. Should there be any doubt in the mind of the reader concerning this fact, let us take notice of the words of Isaiah, who, speaking of the throne, made this extraordinary statement: "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this." Isa. 9:6-7 Then the prophet ends the statement with these remarkable words: "The Lord sent a word unto Jacob, and it lighted upon Israel." Verse 8 SELAH!
Concerning this statement, Isa. 9:6-8, I must remark that, until the devout, searching soul is able to see that every great thing begins with something very small, that oaks begin with acorns, worlds begin with atoms, the things which are seen are made of things which do not appear, nations spring from individuals like you and me - as the scripture says of Abraham, "Therefore sprang there of one, and him as good as dead, as many as the stars of heaven for multitude and the sand which is by the seashore innumerable - until we are able to see this fact and accept it, we will not be able to grasp the ineffable truth that the throne of Christ had its beginning in the insignificant throne of David, which in turn sprang from the covenant given to Abraham. Until our minds grasp the meaning of those words, "The Lord sent a word unto Jacob, and it lighted upon Israel", the significance of these facts and even of the throne of Christ will remain a mystery beyond our comprehension. Would you not say that our Lord made a most significant statement when He said, "Ye which have followed Me, in the regeneration when the Son of man shall sit on the throne of His glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel"? Matt. 19:28 To me it is unutterably sad that the vast multitude of Christians have lost sight of the covenants and the promises and the glory abounding in the scripture until we have lost all direction and do not even know who we are or where we are going.

Among the words of the mighty archangel Gabriel, spoken to the Virgin Mary, we find this enlightening statement: "And the angel said unto her, Fear not, Mary: for thou hast found favor with God. And, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call His name JESUS. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God will give unto Him the throne of His father David: and He shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of His kingdom there shall be no end." Luke 1:30-33 Let us believe, then, that the throne, spoken of as Thy throne, is indeed the throne of David. Just as corruptible man advances from glory to glory, from mortality to incorruption to immortality, so also does the throne of David advance in glory until it becomes the throne of Christ. The wonderful law of progressive continuity runs like a silver cord of revelation through scripture. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption. It is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory. It is sown in weakness; it is raised in power. It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body. 1 Cor. 15:42-44 Thus it is with the throne.

The throne of the Lord is here said to be forever and ever. I do not think this passage was intended to mean that the throne is eternal, but, as some translations say, "unto the age of the age" and others, "the eon of the eon". The Emphatic Diaglott has it "the age of the ages", which means the same thing, while others use the expression, "to the consummation of the age." We need not take time to quibble about such things. Their secrets will unfold at the proper time. The throne of Christ will undoubtedly continue until that day of days when the last enemy of Christ has been subdued. "Then cometh the end, when He shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father: when He shall have put down all rule and all authority and power. For He must reign until He hath put all enemies under His feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death. For He hath put all things under His (that is, Christ) feet. But when He saith all things are put under Him, it is manifest that He (the Father) is exalted, which did put all things under Him. And when all things shall be subdued unto Him, then shall the Son also Himself be subject unto Him (the Father) that put all things under Him, that God may be all in all." 1 Cor. 15:24-28.

Whether the throne continues until the end of the kingdom age or to the end of the dispensation of the fullness of times will be revealed in its time. My personal thought is that it will of necessity continue until the end of that marvelous age of the ages, the dispensation of the fullness of times, simply because at the end of the millennial kingdom there are still enemies, Rev. 20:7-10, and again because of the secret Paul discloses that God has made "known unto us the mystery (secret) of His will, according to His good pleasure which He hath purposed in Himself: that in the dispensation of the fullness of times He might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in Him." Eph. 1:9-10

At this present moment and all through the ages the Lord has been raising up and preparing a people, baptizing them into the Christ body, 1 Cor. 12:13, "that in the ages to come He might show the exceeding riches of His grace in His kindness toward us through Christ Jesus." Eph. 2:7 It is plain to see from this statement that it will be those who in this age have been made partakers of His grace who will be called upon to demonstrate the marvelous grace of God in the dispensation of the fullness of times. This manifestation of the grace of God is to include principalities and powers in heavenly places, according to the eternal purpose.
He purposed in Christ. This is the mystery that has been kept secret, "that now unto principalities and powers in heavenly places might be made known by the church the manifold wisdom of God, according to the eternal purpose which He purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord." Eph. 3:10-11

It is no vain or idle imagination that all must be subdued unto Him, everything in heaven and in earth and under the earth. ALL! Everything! Everybody! Every principality and power that Christ may be all and in all - everything in Him and He in everything. Nothing less than this could satisfy grace that is infinite and power that is omnipotent.

The truth concerning the throne of His glory fills the reverent soul with awe. May God pardon my lack of understanding, for I must confess that such things are too great for me. They are high; I cannot attain unto them. But in closing this all too brief perusal of "Thy throne", I stagger for words or adjectives that could remotely describe the awesome magnificence of it all. Daniel, a man dearly beloved, having caught a glimpse of the throne, said, "I was grieved in my spirit in the midst of my body, and the visions of my head troubled me." Dan. 7:15. This is how the beloved prophet described what he saw. "I beheld till the thrones were cast down (that is, the thrones of earth) and the Ancient of days did sit, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of His head like the pure wool: His throne was like the fiery flame, and His wheels as burning fire. A fiery stream issued and came forth from before Him: thousand thousands ministered unto Him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before Him: The judgment was set, and the books were opened." Dan. 7:9-10

Undoubtedly Daniel was seeing the great white throne even as John beheld it in the Revelation. Rev. 20:11-15

"I saw in the night visions, and, behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought Him near before Him." Compare Rev. 1:13 This one like the Son of man must indeed be the Christ body in fullness. "And there was given Him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages should serve Him; His dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and His kingdom that which shall not be destroyed". Dan. 7:13-14 Then, that we might see the connection between one like the Son of man and the saints, the vision goes on to say, "But the saints of the most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever." With these passages the devout reader should study Rev. 1:1-18 and Rev. 20:11-15

O that the saints of the Lord might see what is meant by being "in Christ", a member of His body, of His flesh and of His bones! If God's people would but take time to wait on the Lord with fasting, confession and meditation, the paltry flesh pots of earth would soon begin to fade out of existence in the light of the eternal throne and the eternal City. Then those who are called would become those who are chosen, and those who are chosen would become those who are faithful, as it is said, "Those who are with Him are called and chosen and faithful."

"Wherefore, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the Apostle and High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus: who was faithful to Him that appointed Him, as also Moses was faithful in all his house. For this man (Christ) was counted worthy of more glory than Moses, inasmuch as he who hath builded the house hath more honor than the house. The house referred to here is the "house not made with hands", John 14:2, which is the household of faith, Gal. 6:10, which in turn is the mystical body of Christ, one like the Son of man.

CHAPTER FOUR
THE SCEPTRE

After speaking of the throne, the message continues. "A sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of Thy kingdom." Heb. 1:8. The sceptre is the wand carried by kings as the badge of sovereignty or command, spoken of in Rev. 19:15 as the rod of iron. You will notice the use of Aaron's rod in the miracles of Egypt during the great contest between Moses and Pharaoh. This rod, or sceptre, was the mark of authority, the authority given to Moses and Aaron by the Lord Himself. When this sceptre of authority was used at the command of God, there was no power in either Egypt or nature itself that could stand before it. It was the sceptre of authority that divided the Red Sea when Moses held it over the waters and the waters divided. In Israel's battle with Amalek, Moses held the rod of God, which was Aaron's rod, in his hand, and needless to say, the battle was won. Exod. 17:9
There is a most enlightening story concerning the rod (sceptre) of Aaron recorded in Numbers 16 and 17. All Israel had rebelled against the authority of Moses and Aaron; therefore Moses took a rod from each of the twelve tribes and laid them up before the ark of the testimony. The following morning the rod of Aaron had blossomed and brought forth almonds in a single night. Thus did the Lord signify who in Israel had divine authority. The rod of Aaron, that had budded, was laid up before the Ark of the Covenant as a testimony against all future rebels who would dare to speak against the authority of God. The sudden consuming plague was so terrible that in a few moments fourteen thousand, seven hundred of the rebellious people perished before Aaron was able to make atonement for them. The dead rod that budded and bloomed and bore fruit in one night is a superb type of Christ in His resurrection. The resurrection of Christ from the dead is the greatest single proof ever given by God of the authority of His Son. Christ Himself is the Rod of God. He is the firstfruit of the resurrection, the firstfruit of all who slept, the firstborn of every creature and the mighty sceptre of authority. In the glory of the kingdom age our Lord will rule with a rod of iron - a rod authority. A wonderful example of that authority in action may be seen by reading Zech. 14:9-21 There will be no rebellion in the kingdom and none will be tolerated. Why should there be rebellion when all is righteous government with the perfection of peace and equity - a thing never known on the earth since man in his sorrow departed from Eden?

The sceptre of His throne is the sceptre of righteousness. Some of the translators prefer the word uprightness and others, rectitude. Righteousness is the quality of being right. All will be right in that wonderful day. The kingdom of God is the time of setting things right. Things have always been wrong since the dark hour of the fall. What is there really right in the present governments of the world? Can you imagine anything so wrong as to see great nations mint money at their own expense, hand the money to a private banking concern like the Federal Reserve or the Bank of England and then borrow their money back again with interest? Yet this has been the system, the Babylon system, ever since Israel rejected the Lord and asked for a king that they might be like the other nations about them. Samuel warned them that, if they had any king but the Lord, he would take their sons for his army, take their daughters for confectionaries and cooks, take their fields, their vineyards and olive trees. He would take the tenth of their seed and vineyards for his officers. He would take their menservants and their maidservants. He would take their goodliest young men. He would take their asses, take the tenth of their sheep and vineyards for his officers. And they would cry out in that day because of their king which they had chosen, and the Lord would not hear them. 1 Sam. 8:11-18

If we will compare these words with the present methods of governments everywhere on earth, it will be clear that Samuel was right. Personal bankruptcies are piling up at an alarming rate and national debts are bringing the nations to utter ruin, while idiotic leaders put the nations in ever increasing bondage by imagining they can borrow themselves out of their problems. The hour is at hand when the rich men of the earth will howl and weep when their vast riches are totally corrupted, their luxurious garments moth eaten, their gold and silver cankered, and the rust and dust of their ill-gotten gain is a witness against them. James 5:1-6 Isaiah spoke of a day of reckoning when the idols of silver and gold, idols that represent earth's fading flower of wealth, will be so worthless that they will cast them to the moles and the bats and flee to the mountains for refuge. Isa. 2:19-21 Every reader of these lines must know how the value of money has shrunk compared to its original value. In the late nineteenth century Canada built a transcontinental railway for $63,000,000, but today it takes that much to build a bridge or a hockey arena. The day is fast coming when the prophecy of James will be a reality and the rich, who have grown fat by robbing the poor through their usury, will weep and howl for the miseries that have come upon them. Lord haste the day!

The sceptre of the Lord will be a right sceptre. It will be all righteousness, uprightness and rectitude. "Righteousness shall be the girdle of His loins and faithfulness the girdle of His reins." Isa. 11:5 "The spirit of the Lord shall rest upon Him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord; and shall make Him of quick understanding in the fear of the Lord: and He shall not judge after the sight of His eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of His ears: but with righteousness shall He judge the poor, and reprove with equity the meek of the earth: and He will smite the earth with the rod of His mouth, and with the breath of His lips shall He slay the wicked." Isa. 11:2-4 In that day nothing shall hurt nor destroy in all God's holy mountain, for the knowledge of the Lord will fill the earth as the waters cover the sea.
These are but a very few of the evidences of the uprightness, the rectitude, the righteousness, the honesty and fair play, the justice, impartiality and trustworthiness, the veracity and singleness of heart of the wonderful sceptre of His reign. "The sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of Thy kingdom." How the populace will rejoice in that day when the armies of earth beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks, never to learn the arts of war and oppression any more; when the weak shall be strong, the lame shall leap, the bear will be gentle and the lion will be tame, and the wolf will lie down with the lamb; when the beast from the wild will be led by the child, and I shall be changed from the creature that I am!

"The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet until Shiloh come, and unto Him shall the gathering of the people be." "Thou hast loved righteousness hated iniquity; therefore God, even Thy God, hath anointed Thee with the oil of gladness above Thy fellows."

The world has seen six thousand years of such unrighteous government, so much unscrupulous underhandedness and double talk, so many broken promises, so much disregard for truth, so much cunning conniving, so much corrupt upholding of wickedness by a law, so much money spent to protect the imagined rights of criminals in the name of justice, until people have lost faith in governments and the largess so freely offered at election time. The righteous man droops and fades in the earth. A member of the American CIA was recently quoted as saying that, if people knew what was going on behind the scenes, many of them would commit suicide. We mention these ever increasing evils, not because we enjoy the putrid odors of earth's sewer of corruption, but rather that we might see the contrast of the kingdom that is soon to be when righteousness will be the royal sceptre and righteousness and truth the girdle of His loins. "Upon the wicked He shall rain snares, fire and brimstone, and an horrible tempest: this shall be the portion of their cup. For the righteous Lord loveth righteousness: His countenance doth behold the upright." Psa. 11:7 "The word of the Lord is truth; and all His works are done in truth. He loveth righteousness and judgment: the earth is full of the goodness of the Lord." Psa. 33:4-5 "Know that the Lord hath set apart him that is godly for Himself: the Lord will hear when I call upon Him. Stand in awe, and sin not: commune with your own heart upon your bed, and be still. Offer the sacrifices of righteousness, and put your trust in the Lord." Psa. 4:3-5

In Psa. 15 the Psalmist questions the Lord, "Lord, who shall abide in Thy tabernacle? Who shall dwell in Thy holy hill?" Then in answer to his own question he replies, "He that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart." Verses 1-2 "Righteousness and judgment are the habitation of His throne. A fire goeth before Him, and burneth up His enemies round about. His lightnings enlightened the world." Psa. 97:2-4 "The heavens declare His righteousness, and all the people shall see His glory." Psa. 97:6 "With righteousness shall He judge the poor, and reprove with equity the meek of the earth: and He shall smite the earth with the rod (sceptre) of His mouth, and with the breath of His lips shall He slay the wicked. And righteousness shall be the girdle of His loins, and faithfulness the girdle of His reins. The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the falling together; and a little child shall lead them." Isa. 11:4-6 "He leadeth me in paths of righteousness for His name's sake." Psa. 23:3 "Behold My servant, whom I uphold; Mine elect in whom My soul delighteth; I have put My spirit upon Him; He shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles. He shall not cry, nor lift up, nor cause His voice to be heard in the street. A bruised reed shall He not break, and the smoking flax shall He not quench: He shall bring forth judgment unto truth. He shall not fail nor be discouraged, till He have set judgment in the earth: and the isles shall wait for His law. I the Lord have called Thee in righteousness and will hold Thine hand..." Isa. 42:1-6 In the light of all these blessed kingdom promises, shining as the rays of dawn and scattering and dispelling the gloomy darkness of the earth, what can be better spoken than that which the Holy Spirit has said, "A sceptre of righteousness (the sceptre of right) is the sceptre of Thy kingdom?"

In the days when our blessed Lord, clothed in humanity, walked as the Son of man among us, He entered into a synagogue and stood up to read. Finding a place in Isaiah the prophet, He hushed the awed congregation with these magnificent words of exaltation: "The Spirit of the Lord is upon Me; because the Lord hath anointed Me to preach the gospel to the poor: He hath sent Me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord." Luke 4:18-19, (From Isaiah 61:1-2) When the great Redeemer came, He daily demonstrated the righteousness and power of the kingdom of God in every act of His life. The healing of the withered, the halt, the lame, the blind, the deaf, the dumb and the maimed; the casting out of devils, the judgment of the unbelieving and ungodly, the manifestation of His mercy and kindness toward publicans and harlots and other sinners and even the repentant thief upon the cross are every one demonstrations in miniature form of what His sceptre of righteousness will be in the wonderful kingdom day. In that age there will be no halt, there will be no dumb, neither will there be any blind. Then the lame man will leap as the hart, the tongue of the dumb shall sing, and He will lead the blind by a way they knew not, for the eyes of the blind shall be opened and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped.

Let us meditate further on the symbolic and spiritual implication of all these healings. It is not the purpose of Christ to heal all the sick and infirm in this age. This greater fullness is for the age to come. But in that kingdom day he who is dumb in understanding will have his mind opened to the glory of truth. He who is withered in experience will live in the fullness of the blessing of Christ. The blind, whose minds have long been closed to spiritual truth and whose souls have never thrilled to the revelation of the Lord, will in that day with open face behold the glory of the Lord and proclaim the way of truth.

Is it not significant that Babylon has become an habitation of devils and the hold of every foul spirit and the cage of every unclean and hateful bird? I am sure it is most significant that the second miracle Jesus performed was the casting out of a devil that possessed a man in the synagogue. If God's people could see how that harlot thing that everywhere is thought to be the church has become a hold of devils and a haven for every unclean and hateful bird, they would understand why the Holy Spirit in our day is calling to the elect, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her sins nor receive of her plagues." Jesus, at the beginning of His kingdom ministry, entered into the synagogue and cast forth a devil from one possessed, and for aught we know that one possessed may have been the leader of the synagogue and perhaps the rabbi himself. It is the leaders of the church system who are causing the people to err and they shall receive the greater condemnation. They lead the people in the paths of error. Thinking gain is godliness, they grasp for money instead of dispensing truth, robbing widow's houses and for a pretense making long prayers and pretending to speak the word of faith for all manner of miracles that never happen. These things are not confined to the steeple houses alone. They also thrive daily on radio and television, and, even though it is manifestly a fake and a fraud, the people love to have it so. But Jesus cast the devil out of the synagogue, possibly the last place he was thought to be, and in the kingdom day Satan will be bound a thousand years and shall not go forth to deceive and tempt the nations of earth.

The withered in spiritual experience will be made whole as will the lame, who cannot walk with God. Those bund and unable to see the light of truth will understand. Those deaf to the voice of the Spirit will hear, and a world, whom Satan has bound, will be delivered. The horse upon which the King of righteousness rides is a white horse. The throne upon which He sits is a white throne. The garments He wears are fine linen, white and clean, for fine linen is the righteousness of the saints. The hair of His head is white like wool. His throne is white and all His government is right and righteousness. The throne of iniquity establishes wickedness by a law. They make acceptable that which God abhors, such as sodomy, drunkenness, abortion and evolution. All these evils God has cursed, yet the evil governments of the world established them by law.

The City has no need of the sun, neither the moon to shine in it, for the glory of the Lord did lighten it, and the kings of the earth bring their glory and honor into it. The gates of it shall not be shut at all by day; and there is no night there. There the leaves of the tree are for the healing of the nations. The tree is the Lord. The leaves are the saints. As He said in another place, "I am the vine; ye are the branches." And there will be no more curse, for the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it. His servants shall serve Him. Thousand thousands ministered unto Him and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before Him. And they shall see His face and His name shall be in their foreheads.

The message is far too telling, glorious and overwhelming for us to continue further. No wonder the master of the feast at Cana said to the governor, "Thou hast saved the best wine until now!" How my glad heart leaps for joy in contemplation of this reign of glory! In the light of it the paltry treasures of earth fizzle into nothingness. I exhort you, Christian brethren, "Lay hold on life." Fall in love with the eternal. Loosen your grip on the passing things of time and sense. "Wherefore," cried the prophet, "do you spend money for that which is not bread, and your labor for that which satisfieth not? Hearken diligently unto me, and eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness. Incline your ear, and come unto me: hear, and your soul shall live..."
Isa. 55:2-3

Why do God's people strive so for a better standard of earthly living, pushing themselves into all manner of distressing circumstances, worry and debt, when they could pass their lives enjoying the blessing of heaven, growing in grace and in the knowledge of the Lord? It is good that we be not slothful in business, but fervent in spirit, serving the Lord. It is also right that we be not slothful in spirit nor dilatory in our quest for spiritual things. Let us not leave this world empty of the knowledge of God. May we instead be able to say as Paul once did, "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight; I have finished my course; I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love His appearing."

A crown of righteousness, Paul said. The throne of Christ is the throne of righteousness. The saints who wear the crown of righteousness will reign with Him in the righteousness of His throne. The Lord is not waiting until some far off day to prepare us to reign. We are being crowned with righteousness now. The crown is not a golden tiara placed upon the head. The crown is what we really are. Just as virtue is said to be a woman's crown, so the crown of righteousness and glory that fadeth not away is in reality what we are. So also the crown of life that fadeth not away is the life of the resurrected Christ we are given here. It may not, however, be seen until that blessed day to come. But Paul said, "Lay hold on eternal life", and then added later, "That they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate; laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life." 1 Tim. 6:12, 19

The law of Moses, which is in reality the law of God, speaks righteousness in every word. Examine it thoroughly from Exodus, chapter 20, and see if you can find anything in it that does not savor of absolute righteousness. The Lord our God was not content that such a law as this should be confined to a table of stone. He has transferred it from the hard face of a rock to the tables of the redeemed heart. Here the spirit of man answers to the law of God as face reflects face in a mirror. The law need tell me no more, "Thou shall love the Lord thy God with all thy heart", because I do love the Lord with all my heart. I love Him in the day. I love Him in the night. I love Him in trial. I love Him in times of great joy and in the hour when sorrows like sea billows roll over me. And, if you, my brother or sister, are walking in His Spirit, you may search the law of Moses and your glad heart will leap for joy in response to all it says. The man who insists that God has abolished His law is merely looking for it in the wrong place. Look no more on cold tables of stone, but to the tables of the redeemed heart and you will find it written there by the finger of God. The law that God first wrote upon an unheown stone is the same law that will be administered from His righteous throne and it will judge the world in uprightness in the dispensations yet unborn.

CHAPTER FIVE
THE OIL OF GLADNESS

A sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of His kingdom. He has loved righteousness and hated iniquity. Therefore God has anointed Him with the oil of gladness above His fellows. The anointing oil is symbolic of the Holy Spirit. It is the oil that makes the face to shine with the light of God. The fruit of the Spirit - love, joy, peace, longsuffering, goodness, gentleness, faithfulness, meekness and temperance - grows from its evergreen tree. When the high priest, Aaron, was anointed, a specially prepared anointing oil was poured upon his head. It was poured upon him in the profusion David describes in Psa. 133:2 "It is like the precious ointment upon the head, that ran down upon the beard, even Aaron's beard, that went down to the skirts of his garments." The ointment spoken of here was anointing oil and is translated oil in other manuscripts. The word ointment comes from the word anoint. "He anointeth my head with oil; my cup runneth over." Moses was given the prescription for the anointing oil. Exod. 30:23-33 "Take thou unto thee principal spices, of pure myrrh five hundred shekels, and of sweet cinnamon half so much, even two hundred and fifty shekels, and of sweet calamus two hundred and fifty shekels, and of cassia five hundred shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary, and of oil olive an hin. And thou shall make it an oil of holy ointment, an ointment compound after the art of the apothecary: it shall be an holy anointing oil." This precious anointing oil, which is symbolic of the Holy Spirit, was used to consecrate all the furniture and vessels of the sanctuary, which holy vessels represent ourselves who are the vessels of that more perfect tabernacle, the mystical body of Christ. (For reference see Acts 9:15; 2 Tim. 2:21; Rom. 9:23.) The precious oil was also poured upon the head of Aaron, the high priest, verse 30, but was forbidden to be used upon strangers or for any common use. Verses 3233. A beautiful reference to the anointing of Christ is made by David in Psa. 45:8. "All Thy garments smell of myrrh, and aloes, and cassia, out of the ivory palaces, whereby they have made Thee glad." From the symbolic anointing of kings and priests comes the anointing of Christ. "Wherefore God, even Thy God, hath anointed Thee with the oil of gladness above Thy fellows." Christ, being a better priest than Aaron and a better king than David, was anointed with a better anointing than they. He was both anointed and filled with the oil of gladness - the Holy Spirit, of whom He said, "The Spirit of the Lord is upon Me, because He hath anointed Me..." Luke 4:18

The anointing of Aaron, precious as it was, was only typical. We have already noted that Christ was greater than Moses or Aaron. He is High Priest of an order far superior to that of Aaron. He is made after the order of Melchisedec, who was a priest, not after the order of a carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life - a vast difference, knowing as we do that the letter of the law can only kill, while the Spirit of the law gives life. The order of Aaron is earthly and carnal; the order of Melchisedec is heavenly and spiritual. As heaven is higher than the earth, so are His ways higher than our ways. For this reason Jesus of Nazareth, the only begotten son of God, was anointed with the better anointing of the Holy Spirit in a greater house and a greater ministry.

The holy anointing oil with which Jesus was anointed was the oil of the Holy Spirit. The description of that holy anointing is given for our edification by Matthew in these revealing words: "Then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan unto John to be baptized of him. But John forbad Him, saying, I have need to be baptized of Thee, and comest Thou to me? And Jesus answering said unto him, Suffer it to be so now: for thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness. Then he suffered Him. And Jesus, when He was baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and, lo, the heavens were opened unto Him, and He saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon Him: and, lo, a voice from heaven, saying, This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Matt. 3:13-17

The anointing of Aaron or David may have changed them very little, but the anointing of the Holy Spirit is a transforming reality, making the anointed one with the anointing.

I shall not be dogmatic in my statements here, but in my opinion it was the anointing of the Holy Spirit that designated Jesus as the Christ. The title Christ means anointed one, and how beautifully that sacred title Christ is in accord with Peter's words following the outpouring of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost, when one hundred and twenty were anointed with the oil of gladness above their fellows - "thy fellows" evidently referring to the priests of Aaron's order. Thus Peter spoke: "How God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost and power; who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed by the devil; for God was with Him," Acts. 10:38

Jesus Himself referred to the baptism of the Holy Spirit which He received as the anointing when He stood up in the synagogue at Nazareth and read the words of Isaiah: "The Spirit of the Lord is upon Me, because He hath anointed Me to preach the gospel to the poor; He hath sent Me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord." Then, having closed the book and given it back to the minister, He began to say unto them, "This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears."

The anointing Jesus received was the anointing of God. All the works that followed the anointing of Jesus were the works of God. Our Lord Himself proclaimed that His works were the works of the Father. It is unnecessary for us to fill pages with detailed accounts of His wonderful works. We can read them better in the four Gospels. But we must never neglect our Lord's promise that we also should receive power from on high after the Holy Spirit, the anointing, should come upon us. This verily was true in the lives of the apostles, for there were few mighty works performed by Jesus that were not also done by those who had received the precious anointing of His Holy Spirit at Pentecost.

God gave not the Spirit by measure unto Christ, though at present He does give the Spirit by measure unto us. Well might one ask why we do not today see the mighty out-pouring of the anointing oil of the Holy Spirit as they did at Pentecost. It is because the early rain spoken of by Joel the prophet is over and gone. "The flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land."

Song of S. 2:11-12 Summer time has come; the fruit is ripening on the tree. "Arise, my love, and come away."

Verse 13 But a latter rain, the harvest rain, is yet to come, and it will come when the body of Christ is complete and the many sons of God are ready for their manifestation and the fullness of the Lord's anointing without measure. Then will come the day of which our Lord spoke, saying, "The works that I do shall ye do also; and greater works than these shall ye do, because I go to the Father." John 14:12 It is coming at the time appointed as sure as the promise of God is true. The anointing oil of the Holy Spirit that fell like a dove upon Jesus of Nazareth wrought the greatest change the world has ever known, but the day is at hand for the anointing to be poured forth without measure upon the sons of God. The latter will far exceed the former, for it will be poured upon a vast family of begotten sons God.

Our divine and wonderful Christ stood at the Feast of Tabernacles in Jerusalem and cried, "If any man thirst, let him come unto Me, and drink. He that believeth on Me, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. This spake He of the Spirit, which they that believe on Him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given, because that Jesus was not yet glorified." John 7:37-39 Should I try further to speak of the wonder of that glorious, heavenly anointing which is soon to be poured upon the sons of God, I would, I fear, do more to detract from its magnificent glory that I would add to it. This is the anointing oil of gladness with which Christ was anointed above His fellows.

During the long centuries of the past two millenniums, the world has seen some mighty outpourings of the Holy Spirit as the almighty Father has anointed some human vessel through whom He has poured "the oil of gladness" upon the people, yet, mighty as some of these visitations have been, they were but showers upon the earth. My personal opinion is that there will not be another great outpouring in this present age. The next great outpouring of the oil of gladness will come when the fully redeemed and glorified sons of God are anointed to launch the glory of the millennial age. Surely this was the burden of Paul's message in Romans, chapter 8, when he said, "For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now. And not only they, but ourselves also, which have the firstfruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan with ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body." Rom. 8:22-23 All the mighty works and teachings of Jesus concerned the kingdom age. The entire age of grace is a period of time set aside for the preparation of the sons of God, not for the conversion of the world as is generally imagined. During this time those who are predestined to adoption (sonship) are being called "according to the good pleasure of His will, to the praise of the glory of His grace, wherein He hath made us accepted in the beloved." Eph. 1:5-6 The beloved, of course, is Jesus Christ, and those who are called, chosen and faithful are the accepted. They are the "in Christ" people and the true body of Christ. They are members in particular of His great spiritual body, the sons of God. During this age He begins to make known to them the mystery of His will. Therefore we should "give the more earnest heed" to the truth we are now considering lest we, like our forefathers in the wilderness, should "let them slip". Heb. 2:1 These are sacred and eternal truths and, if we approach them lightly or glibly, we will be blinded and receive nothing from the Lord. "Take thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place thou standest is holy ground", and the truth we are faced with is high, exalted and holy. Israel long ago was instructed that they should not go up to the altar of the Lord by steps, lest they should display their nakedness. Exod. 20:26 The proper approach to God is by humility - not by climbing. He who approaches the Father in repentance and humility will find himself being lifted by His everlasting arms into the realm of His choice. There can be no barging in where angels fear to tread.

"Be still; just now be still.
There comes a presence very calm and sweet.
White are the sandals on His noiseless feet.
It is the Comforter whom Jesus sent
To teach thee what the words He uttered meant.
The longing, searching spirit He doth fill
If you would hear His message, "Dear soul, be still."

Moses, standing in the glory of God's presence, in reverence removed the shoes from off his feet. Elijah wrapped his mantle about his face and stood with bowed head to listen while the Almighty spoke. Job abhorred himself when he saw the glory of the Lord, and angels, greater in power and might, covered their faces and feet with their wings, crying, "Holy, holy, holy is the Lord God of hosts! The whole earth is full of His glory." Daniel was so moved by the glory he saw that he was sick certain days, and even blustering Peter cried out upon seeing the miraculous drought of fishes, "Depart from me, O Lord, for I am a sinful man." Likewise the elders on high and the four living creatures about the throne fell down before Him, casting their crowns at His feet and crying, "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honor, and glory, and blessing. And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne and unto the Lamb for ever and ever. And the four beasts said, Amen. And the four and twenty elders fell down and worshipped Him that liveth for ever and ever." Rev. 4:11-14

When our Lord Jesus Christ began His ministry, one of His first acts was to drive the money changers out of the house of the Lord. And, should He come today, one of His first acts would be to drive out all these money grabbing preachers who clutter His air waves with their atrocious garbage. They claim to preach the gospel, but their gospel is money, money, and more money, while any attempt to preach a sermon becomes a sort of diving board from which they plunge into the real message - the need of more money. The wicked Tetzel, who sold indulgences in the middle ages and by which he raised endless millions for the Roman Catholic treasury, a feather from the wing of Gabriel, a piece of wood from the cross, and on one occasion the chemise of the virgin Mary, wicked as he was and proficient in deceiving the people as he was, could not hold a candle to some of the modern Protestant money mongers, who rob widow's houses and for a pretense make long prayers to accomplish every imaginable self-gratifying project. But they will receive the greater condemnation of which Paul so aptly spoke.

Dear saint of God, if we are to attain the prize of sonship, we will not be able to ride the church merry-go-round or go joy riding with the multitudes. Few cases in history ever show that it is safe or right to follow the multitudes. They are swayed by every clever talker and every wind of doctrine. They are an easy target for the sleight of men and the cunning craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive. If we are going to walk with Christ, hear His voice and follow Him, we will need to walk with Him alone. The giddy throng, which today cries, "Hosanna! Blessed is the Son of David that cometh in the name of the Lord", tomorrow will cry, "Away with Him! Crucify Him! Crucify Him! It is not fit for such a fellow to live." To a greater or lesser degree I have discovered that this is an accurate picture of the capricious instability of the vacillating throng; but we are made partakers of Christ only if we hold the beginning of our faith steadfast unto the end.

The beloved apostle John wrote much concerning the anointing of the Holy Spirit both in his gospel and in his epistles. In his gospel he recorded the Saviour's words, "Nevertheless I tell you the truth. "It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send Him unto you. And when He is come, He will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment; of sin, because they believe not on Me; of righteousness, because I go to My Father, and ye see Me no more; of judgment, because the prince of this world is judged. I have many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now. Howbeit when He, the Spirit of truth, is come, He will guide you into all truth: for He shall not speak of Himself, but whatsoever He shall hear, that shall He speak: and He will show you things to come. He shall glorify Me: for He shall receive of Mine, and shall show it unto you." John 16:7-14 Then later he wrote in his epistle these wonderful words of instruction: "The anointing which ye have received of Him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you: but as the same anointing teaches you all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it has taught you, ye shall abide in Him." 1 John 2:27

With great reverence and respect I shall say that it is the anointing that makes Jesus to be God's Christ, the anointed one, and with just as great respect I say it is the anointing of the Holy Spirit that makes you and me members in particular of the body of Christ, for the Spirit has said, "By (or in) one Spirit are we all baptized into one body (the body of Christ)." 1 Cor. 12:13 "As many of you as have been baptized unto Christ have put on Christ." Gal. 3:27

THE DIVINE INTENTION IN SONSHIP

As our hearts have been absorbed in reverent meditation concerning the greatness, the majesty, the glory and power of the Son of God, we may have found ourselves wondering just what purpose the Holy Spirit had in mind in revealing these wonders to the saints. Our kind heavenly Father never indulges in unnecessary revelation. Only in cases of vital necessity does the Lord enter into or give details. He is truth, and faith believes and accepts all that He says without question and without prying into things too great for our understanding. The Genesis record begins with this statement of fact: "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." No word is offered to explain who God is, where He came from or when He came. No effort is made to show how He created the heavens and the earth or from what He created them. Faith accepts His statement without question. As it is written, they that believe do enter into rest. All the stupidity of evolution and the ridiculous theories concerning the age of the universe emanates from man's gross unbelief in the veracity of what God has said. Sad but true, the world has now come to the place where the incredible theory of evolution, which at its best is a totally unproved theory, is taught as fact in our schools and universities to gullible students who know not the word of God. The evolution of the earth, the evolution of man, the evolution of birds, the evolution of planets and the evolution of everything is so drummed into the minds of students that the big lie is accepted as truth. Even Darwin himself and such men as Einstein had to admit that the wonder of the human eye makes evolution absolutely impossible. Only creation can explain such a marvel of design. While man passes his time with his idle theories, the Lord makes no self defense or explanation, knowing as He does that blind unbelief is sure to err, but faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. One scientist has remarked that, if a tornado could pass over a junk yard and a 747 aircraft come out of the wreckage, then might evolution and the Big Bang theory be true.

During the many hours of meditation and study in the book of Hebrews, I have become convinced that, as important as all Bible writings are, this book written to the Hebrews, the descendants of Abraham, is a special revelation right from the mind of our Father in heaven that is intended above all else to reveal the place the sons of God have in the great eternal plan of the ages to come. The question, "What is man that Thou art mindful of him, or the son of man that Thou visitest him", becomes the predominating theme of this wonderful unfolding of the wisdom of God. Blessed saints, elect according to the foreknowledge of God, upon grasping in their inspired minds the unfolding truth here revealed to them, begin to count all earth's vanities but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus, their Lord. To them, like Abraham, earth's fleeting moments are as well lived in a tent as in a palace, because of the heavenly city toward which they press.

Millenniums ago Sarah by faith received strength to conceive seed and was delivered of a child when she was past age. "Therefore sprang there even of one and him as good as dead, so many as the stars of the sky for multitude and as the sand which is by the seashore innumerable. These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth. For they that say such things declare plainly that they seek a country. And truly, if they had been mindful of that country from which they came out, they might have had opportunity to have returned. But now they desire a better country, that is, an heavenly: wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God: for He hath prepared for them a city." Heb. 11:11-16 Here four great principles of faith are vividly laid before us: first, having seen the promises afar off; second, they were persuaded of them; third, they embraced them; and fourth, they confessed them. Verily we can say in truth that all who see the promises and are persuaded of them, embrace and confess them, willingly testify to God and all mankind that they are in reality strangers and pilgrims in the earth. I love the words of the poet who wrote:

For a wise and glorious purpose
Thou hast made us here on earth
And withheld the recollection
Of our former place and birth.
But at times that inward something Whispers, "You're a stranger here",
And I feel that I have wandered

From a more exalted sphere.

Eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither hath entered into the heart of man, the things that God hath prepared for them that love Him; but when He begins to reveal those wonders by His Spirit, then, as the poet said,

My richest gain I count but loss
And pour contempt on all my pride.
And again,

All the vain things that charmed me most
I sacrifice them to His blood.

The moment Abraham beheld afar off the glory of the New Jerusalem, the city of foundations, never again could he become interested or involved in any vanity of earth. When Lot's herdsmen argued about the pasture, Abraham said, "The land is before you. If you choose the right, I will go to the left. If you choose the left, I will go to the right." He cared no more for the rich plains of Jordan than Jesus cared when Satan offered Him all the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them. Once the eye has caught a glimpse of the unspeakable glories God has prepared for those who love Him, nothing matters but the hope of entering into them.

Now the second chapter of Hebrews and all that follows in the entire book is based upon the mighty truth stated in chapter I. We must not miss the pertinent point if we are going to understand the wonderful message of the book. Let us notice then how this is brought to our attention in verses 1-4 "Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip. For if the word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward; how shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation: which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard Him; God also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to His own will?" Heb. 2:1-4 Notice in particular these words: "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?" It is extremely unfortunate that this vital verse has been used almost exclusively as a text for evangelistic meetings, as though the message was directed to sinners. The "we" referred to here has really nothing to do with sinners. The mighty man of God, whoever he may have been who wrote the book of Hebrews, included himself in the pronoun we. Furthermore he included every other saint who is part of God's highest calling. The whole book of Hebrews from beginning to end is written to believers, not sinners. Furthermore, all the references to the priesthood, to Melchisedec, to Moses, the tabernacle and the laws and ordinances prove that it was written, as the title of the book clearly shows, to God's chosen people, because for the present at least it concerns them above all others.

This so great salvation of which the apostle speaks in chapter two is a direct reference to all the high and holy statements in chapter I. Now I shall tell you a sacred, almost frightening thing that must be received with humility and reverence if we are going to understand the book. It is this, "You are the body of Christ and members in particular." Christ Jesus, God's first born Son, is the glorious Head and you are the glorious body. Such things are too wonderful for me. They are high. I cannot attain to them, but I believe them, because the Spirit and the word declare them to be true. Now with head bowed in reverence we must confess that, if Christ is in us and we are in Christ, and He is the Head and we are the body, then the Head and the body together are the fullness of Christ. This is God's Christ. Thus it is then, beloved of the Lord, that all the marvelous, ineffable wonders spoken of Christ in the first chapter of Hebrews refer not only to the glorious Head, but to the glorious body, the saints of the Most High, as well.

I know these things are hard to believe and I am very glad they are. Well do we know that some will call them blasphemy. Such truths are not for the ears of the light and frivolous. They are not for the pompous and proud, not for the careless and indifferent, not for the humanist who wants to make himself God, not for the arrogant, who seek to rule over men like a tyrant; but blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted. Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth. Blessed are they that do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled. Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy. Blessed are they that are persecuted for righteousness' sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Matt. 8:3-10 He will not walk with the proud or the scornful. Humble thyself to walk with God.

Back to their tasks the crowd had gone
And He was left alone
Save for a little company
Whom He could call his own.
What use was there for restless crowds?
That worldly, giddy throng
Could listen to the music,
But never hear the song.

Can you grasp the fact that the Holy Spirit, when speaking of the Son, made this incredible statement, "Who, being the brightness of His glory and the express image of His person"? Can you see that this is part of that "so great salvation" which we have been neglecting for centuries and did not even know was ours. Yes, it is true. Unquestionably true. That is why the apostle asks, "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?" This is the salvation of which he spoke. The childish idea that all there is to salvation is for a sinner to believe and be saved from sin and eventually, when life is past, to go to heaven and play a harp is not even fit for a baby to learn. Many years ago when I was a very young man, a rather amusing incident occurred that afterward left a deep impression upon me. My brother Philip and I attended a prayer meeting in which the presence of Christ was wonderfully real. As we sat with others afterward to fellowship, my brother jubilantly remarked, "It is great to have salvation." Sitting in the group was an elderly Russian gentleman who, upon hearing the remark, smiled and in very broken English replied, "Saved, brudder, but not salvation." The remark amused us at the time because in our immaturity we saw justification and salvation as one and the same thing. But as the years went by, I began to see the truth of what the old gentleman had said, for, while to be saved is indeed a part of salvation, it is by no means complete salvation. In fact, it is nothing more than the entrance to the vast realm of the heavenlies. To be justified by faith is the first essential to entering into the "so great salvation." "Whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate... Whom He did predestinate, them He also called: and whom He called, them He also justified and whom He justified, them He also glorified." Rom. 8:29-30 So we see why it is that Paul said to the saved, "Now is our salvation nearer than when we believed." Salvation advances from God's foreknowledge through predestination, calling, justification, sanctification, adoption, membership of the sons in the body of Christ, glorification, and eventually the throne of His glory.

Let no Christian imagine that the careless and neglectful will ever be granted a place in His throne. Hear rather the solemn words of our blessed Saviour: "Ye are they which have continued with Me in My temptations. And I appoint unto you a kingdom, as My Father hath appointed unto Me; that ye may eat and drink at My table in My kingdom, and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel." Luke 22:28-30 All this blessedness is included in our salvation, and with fervent hope I pray that we may now see the utmost gravity of the inspired words: "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?"

Since the message of the body of Christ came into prominence after 1948, a few people with understanding and reverence and a mixed multitude with neither understanding nor reverence have been talking about being "in the body". The prosperity of this present world system is not the prosperity spoken of by the apostle John, who wrote, "I wish above all things that thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth." The Lord has no objection to one's being wealthy, if his wealth came without his setting his heart upon it. But the moment God's people begin to love the world, the love of the Father is not in them. The idolatrous notion that Christians should have the best of everything the world has to offer is not the teaching of the prophets, the apostles or of Christ. Paul through the wisdom given to him made these potent and beautiful observations: "Godliness with contentment is great gain. For we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out. And having food and raiment, let us be content. But they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition. For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows. But thou, O man of God, flee these things: and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness. Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, whereto thou art also called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses." 1 Tim. 6:6-12

The "so great salvation" we are discussing is much too sacred to be proclaimed by the proud and scornful, the careless, the flippant or the profane, nor is it a theme for the unholy. My soul burns with the anger of God when sodomites and adulterers, the unholy and profane, dare to imagine that they have part or lot in the body of Christ or the inheritance of the Lord. "He that is unjust, let him be unjust still, and he that is filthy, let him be filthy still." Their reprobate minds never learn that they bear the curse of the Almighty, and, if God's law was now enforced in our land, they would be put to death even as would the murderers and man slayers. 1 Tim.
1:9,10 I write this warning word lest any should be inclined to think it possible that they could partake of this so great salvation without "laying aside every weight and the sin that doth so easily beset" them. Let us then make sure we "give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip, for if the word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward; how shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?"

These solemn words, immediately following the conclusion of chapter I, prove beyond a doubt that the "so great salvation" here proclaimed includes the sacred statements spoken in chapter I. If we can see the oneness of the saints, the sons of God, with their Lord, and if we can understand that the sons of God are the true body of Christ, partakers of the divine nature and members of the God family, then it may be easier for us all to reverently understand how the following words apply to the saints, the brothers of our Lord Jesus Christ.
"Unto the Son He saith, Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever: a sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of Thy kingdom. Thou hast loved righteousness, and hated iniquity: therefore God, even Thy God, hath anointed Thee with the oil of gladness above Thy fellows." Upon hearing such sublime truth as this, can we wonder at the joyous outburst from the lips of Paul, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him. But God hath revealed them unto us by His Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God." 1 Cor. 2:9-10 Without revelation we can never see this secret, spoken by Jesus, It is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given.

Unto which of the angels did the Father ever say, "Thou art My Son; this day have I begotten Thee"? Such blessed words were never spoken to angels. Or again, when did He ever say to angels, "I will be to Him a Father and He shall be to Me a Son"? Heb. 1:6 Or again, when did He ever say to angels, "Sit on My right hand until I make Thine enemies Thy foot stool"? Verse 13 Or yet again, "Let all the angels of God worship Him"? Verse 6 It is with a feeling of utmost awe that I make bold to say that these glories are included in our
"so great salvation", that great salvation "which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord and was confirmed unto us by them that heard Him; God also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to His own will." The mighty display of the power of God in Christ and through Christ shows that they were partakers of the Holy Spirit and were immersed by the Holy Spirit into the body of Christ and into the family of God.

We put far too little emphasis upon the fact that our Lord, upon coming into the world, was the only begotten Son of God, but still less do we stress the wonderful fact that we, too, are begotten of God unto a living hope.
With awe and godly fear I feel it is right to proclaim the truth that our heavenly Father now has more than one begotten son. Since the triumph of Calvary God has a great family of begotten sons, of whom our Lord Jesus Christ was the first begotten, the Head and the oldest Son of the family, as it is written, "Behold, I and the children which God has given Me." He is the first born of many brethren, many brothers, many begotten and many born. We who were enemies of God became servants, then friends, then brethren. "For it became Him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through suffering."

May the Holy Spirit remove the darkling shadows from our eyes that we may see what is the hope of His calling and what the glory of the riches of His inheritance in the saints. "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when He shall appear, we shall be like Him; for we shall see Him as He is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as He is pure." 1 John 3:2-3. What an ineffable, unspeakable wonder it all is!

The beloved apostle John wrote of Christ, "He was in the world, and the world was made by Him, and the world knew Him not. He came unto His own, and His own received Him not. But as many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name: which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." John 1:10-13 Hundreds of years before John spoke these words of blessing and hope, the prophet Obadiah spoke of a day when "saviours" would come up on mount Zion to judge the mount of Esau (the flesh) and the kingdom shall be the Lord's. Obadiah 21 "Saviours," the prophet said. "Saviours", for there shall be many sons in the great Christ body. Oh the magnitude of this "sogreat salvation!"
Father in heaven, may the eyes of our understanding be enlightened that we may behold what is the hope of His calling and what the riches of the glory of His inheritance in the saints and what is the exceeding greatness of His power to usward who believe, according to the working of His mighty power which He wrought in Christ when He raised Him from the dead.

If God's people will fast and pray that God will unfold the secrets of His kingdom to our searching hearts, He will certainly do it.

If thou wouldst have the dear Saviour from heaven
Walk by thy side from the morn till the even,
There is a rule that each day you must follow;
Humble thyself to walk with God.
Just as a stream finds a bed that is lowly,
So Jesus walks with the pure and the holy.
Cast out thy pride and in heartfelt contrition
Humble thyself to walk with God.
Humble thyself and the Lord will draw near thee;
Humble thyself and His presence shall cheer thee.
He will not walk with the proud and the scornful;
Humble thyself to walk with God.

It is good that the Spirit of God should rebuke and warn us, lest we should neglect so great salvation or be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin. But "today if ye will hear His voice, harden not your hearts, as in the day of provocation, in the day of temptation in the wilderness; when your fathers tempted Me, proved Me, and saw My works forty years. Wherefore I was grieved with that generation, and said, They do alway err in their heart; and they have not known My ways. So I swera in My  wrath, they shall not enter into My rest. Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God." Heb. 3:7-12

It is very necessary that we lay hold on all these glorious realities with utmost humility and awe, lest by any means through some carnal familiarity with them an even more carnal contempt should arise, or lest we, like Esau, were to despise our birthright for some mess of pottage and rise to go our way, not knowing that we had thrown away the pearl of greatest price, and lose it for ever.

Having said these things, let us now further pursue the greatness of the salvation taught us here that we may firmly lay hold on the prize our God has set before us.

CHAPTER SEVEN

THE DIVINE INTENTION FOR MAN

"Unto the angels hath He not put in subjection the world to come, whereof we speak, but one in a certain place (Psa. 8:4) testified, saying, What is man, that Thou art mindful of Him? Or the son of man that Thou visitest him? Thou madest him a little lower than the angels; Thou crownedst him with glory and honor, and didst set him over the works of Thy hands: Thou hast put all things under his feet..." Heb. 2:5-8

Every diligent searcher for truth must become aware as quickly as possible of his utter dependence upon the Holy Spirit for revelation and understanding of all truth. The secrets of the Lord cannot be learned without the anointing of the Holy Spirit. It is impossible. Truth learned under the Spirit's anointing and inspiration becomes an integral part of the one to whom the secret is revealed. "What man knoweth the things of a man save the spirit of man that is in him? Even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God. The Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God."

A simple, honest prayer for guidance will bear great fruit in understanding. The world is overloaded with dead, dry theologians in whose hearts the light of revelation never shines. Theirs is the realm of musty old volumes of head knowledge - wisdom that is foolishness with God. They have never learned the difference between the oldness of the letter and the newness of the Spirit. All scripture is given by inspiration of God. 2 Tim 2:6 "There is (also) a spirit in man: and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding." Job 32:8
We are inclined to say that one can learn more truth in a minute with the anointing of the Spirit than in a year without it, but the truth is that we can learn nothing at all that is spiritual without the Holy Spirit. No! Not in ten thousand years. The apostle John wrote, saying, "The anointing which ye have received of Him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you: but as the same anointing teacheth you all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in Him." The Holy Spirit quickens the understanding. No longer do we judge by the sight of the eyes or the hearing of the ears, but in righteousness do we judge the poor and reprove with equity the meek of the earth.

In chapter one we have seen that our Lord, being the Son of God, is superior to angels. He, who for the suffering of death was made a little lower than the angels, became man in the truest sense of the word. He who was in the form of God and thought it not robbery to be equal with God made Himself of no reputation, took upon Him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men; and, being found in fashion as a man, He humbled Himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Wherefore God hath highly exalted Him and given Him a name that is above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth, and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father. Phil. 2:5-11 Our Lord wonderfully demonstrated here that the way up is down. The way to exaltation is the way of humility and the cross. It is inherent in the Adamic nature that man should exalt self, but him who chooses the path of humility God will exalt. The words spoken by Isaiah and addressed to Lucifer, son of the morning, are usually thought to be addressed to Satan, and indeed they may well be, but in my opinion they are addressed to man. I know of no good reason for believing that Lucifer is Satan or that Satan is Lucifer. Neither know I of any reason for thinking that Satan was the son of the morning, seeing he was a murderer from the beginning and abode not in the truth. But in reading the passage, you will notice that everything spoken to Lucifer can be properly applied to man. "How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning! How art thou cut down to the ground, which didst weaken the nations!" Isa. 14:12 Are not these statements true of man? Is man not fallen? Did he not fall from the heavenly realm? Did his fall not weaken the nations? We can see from verse 13 that man is contemplating everything mentioned in the verse. "Thou hast said in thy heart, I will ascend into heaven." Is that not what the multi-million dollar space program is all about - the moon rockets, the Mars rockets, the Saturn rockets and the anticipated space stations and colonies on the moon? "I will exalt my throne above the stars of God." The atheistic idea that man is his own God, the evolutionist's crude notion that man evolved and was not created, the communist hope of abolishing the idea of God from the earth are all man's evil thoughts. "I will ascend above the height of the clouds." Is not man doing this every day? "I will be like the Most High." I have read in science journals statements that foresee the day when man will be able to create living cells, and when he can, they say, man will truly be God.

The wickedness of man is great in the earth and his fallen nature is just as wicked as that attributed to Lucifer. Whether Lucifer refers to man or Satan may not be certain, but to accept that these solemn words apply to fallen man is of far greater value to you and me than to vaguely apply them to the devil and thus escape a true picture of what the Adamic man really is at heart.

Our Lord Jesus took seven giant steps in descending from the throne of God to the death of the cross. Though He was rich, yet for our sakes He became poor, that we through His poverty might be made rich. Because of such unspeakable humility, the Father was so delighted with His son that He highly exalted Him, giving Him a name that is above every name that at His name every creature in heaven, in earth, or under the earth should bow in worship before Him. Phil. 2:5-11 Let us keep this truth clearly in mind, as it has great bearing upon our next consideration.

"For unto the angels hath He not put in subjection the world to come, whereof we speak. But one in certain place testified, saying, What is man, that Thou art mindful of him? or the son of man, that Thou visitest him? Thou madest him a little lower than the angels; Thou crownedst him with glory and honor, and didst set him over the works of Thy hands: Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet. For in that He put all in subjection under him, He left nothing that is not put under him. But now we see not yet all things put under him. But we see Jesus..." Heb. 2:5-9 The meaning of this text is made even more vivid in this translation by the learned Richard Weymouth: "It is not to angels that God has assigned the sovereignty of that coming world of which we speak. But, as you know, a psalmist has exclaimed, "How poor a creature is man, and yet Thou dost remember him, and a son of man, and yet thou dost come to him! Thou hast made him for a little while lower than the angels; with glory and honor Thou hast crowned him, and has set him over the works of Thy hands. Thou hast put everything in subjection under his feet." (Psa. 8:4-6) "For this subjecting of the universe to man implies the leaving of nothing not subject to him. But we do not as yet see the universe subject to him. But we do see Him who was made for a little while lower than the angels - even Jesus - because of His suffering of death crowned with glory and honor, that by God's grace He might taste death for every man." Heb. 2:5-9 (Weymouth)

Surely, dear reader, if we have the mind of Christ at all, we should be able to see that these verses reveal more about our "so great salvation" than perhaps all others. The wording here is in the most definite and striking terms imaginable. They show in the most unmistakable, emphatic manner the purpose and calling of the Adamic man. Here the greatness of God's eternal purpose for man is wonderfully revealed. How unutterably sad it is that generation after generation has passed with these marvelous truths staring us in the face, yet going unnoticed by man, to whom they were written. We have been like jungle savages treading upon precious gems without even noticing that they were pretty. While priests have been swinging their incense and chanting their hail Marys and preachers have been eloquently condemning ninety-nine percent of the world to eternal flames and damnation, these marvelous revelations have lain like treasures hid in a field or buried in graves for none to see.

At long last the time of unveiling has come. It is time for the elect to grasp the eternal purposes and lay hold on those promises that had their beginning in Genesis and will culminate with the sons of God seated with our wonderful Christ and elder brother to control the spheres and govern the universe of our God. The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom and the knowledge of the Holy is understanding, and I must say that I know of nothing anywhere that produces such sincere, reverential fear of God as does the revelation of God's purpose for man. Brother or sister, if these things are inclined to make you strut and throw out your chest in pride, then you have the wrong spirit. Yours is the pride of life rather than godly fear. Rather, the very thought of such glories should make both man and angels and heaven fall in adoration before Him. It is a delight to know that the synonyms of the word reverence are these: deep respect, esteem, regard, honor, deference, veneration, admiration, adoration, devotion, worship; awe, fear, devoutness, piety, observance, genuflection and prostration. These blessed attributes are entirely contrary to the Luciferian spirit, "I will ascend; I will exalt; I will sit upon the mount; I will ascend above the heights; I will be like the Most High." Cf. Isa. 14:13

Let us remember that the proud shall be made low, but he who humbles himself shall be exalted. To the poor in spirit belongs the kingdom of God, and the meek shall inherit the earth. It was only today that the Spirit brought to my attention that the passage, "that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father", Phil. 2:10-11, is immediately followed by "work out your own salvation with fear and trembling." Verse 12 These words should be enough to induce reverence and godly fear in any of us. The understanding that the saints are members of the Christ is even more cause for fear, also that this "so great salvation" is to be worked out in fear and trembling. Surely those of the spirit of pride and arrogance will be cast down and narrowly looked upon in the judgment. Isa. 14:15-16

The entire Bible is the story of man, not only the history of the past, but the unfolding of the future. That wonderful unfolding begins like a tiny seed that grows into a tree and fills the universe, or, as Paul says, "filleth all in all." Eph. 1:23 In that long gone day God said, "Let Us make man in Our image, after Our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth." Gen. 1:26 Here the seed of the great tree that was one day to fill the universe is being planted in a remote garden, even the Garden of Eden. Man was not to be given dominion over everything everywhere all at once. Like a child playing with building blocks, he was first given dominion over very little things - the fish of the sea, the birds of the air, the beasts and the creeping things and over the earth. Yet this was the beginning, and when man has learned to be faithful in these things and learns to accomplish them in the wisdom of God, he will be given higher things and greater responsibility. Though mankind in general has not been faithful in any of these things, amid the turmoil and confusion of his misgovernment the all-seeing eye of the Lord has been choosing out men and women who are faithful in these things. And, if we will study the course of history, we will find people who have been faithful in much and in little in government over cities and over realms. We will find people who have been faithful in watching over the fish of the sea to preserve them and over the cattle of the field and even reptiles. Others have been faithful over the birds of the air and the plants and trees and forests. In all these things they may have fought a losing battle, but the loss they suffer only proves their faithfulness. In every imaginable walk of life we will find some elect people who have been faithful. It is required of stewards that a man be found faithful.

When the Lord said, "Let Us make man in Our image, and after Our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth", He was uttering a sort of parabolic prophecy. First He tells us what kind of man is going to be given this government and authority. It is the man who has come into God's image - not the carnal and corrupt who have for so many centuries cursed the world with greed, thirst for power, and incredible corruption. Week after week reports seep through of the millions and often billions of dollars unscrupulous leaders have snatched from an ignorant and gullible public. We hear of golden Cadillacs in Asia Minor, five million dollar golden bathtubs in Nigeria, and like corruption by pompous leaders on a most incredible scale world wide. Almost every war in history has been started to satisfy the greed and lust for power of some despot, king or dictator. The fascination with evil throws good into the shade and the whirlwind of desire corrupts the simple heart. But it is not to men who lust for worldly glory that the government of the earth will be given. It will be to those who have come into the image and likeness of God, as He said: "Let Us make man in Our image and after Our likeness; and let Us give him dominion." The making of man in the image of God was never intended to be a one-week project. That task was to be spread over a long period of seven thousand years or more, during which time the Lord would be choosing and calling men and women in whose hearts He had placed the great desire to come into His image and to have the mind of Christ and His name in their foreheads. Throughout the ages He has been preparing those elect amid the corruption of the earth, setting them aside unto Himself and permitting them to die in faith, not having received the promises, but, having seen them afar off, they were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims in the earth.

Joseph was probably the most outstanding ruler in the history of the world. He was a man who foresaw the future and who sought the mind of the Lord in all his government. Wisdom was with this virtuous man when he was sold into Egypt, and he was kept from sin. The mind of the Lord was with him in the dungeon and was with him in his chains. Wisdom procured for him a kingdom and authority over his despotic rulers, exposing the liars that traduced him and giving him everlasting honor. Daniel, too, was a man beloved of the Lord and a ruler who ruled in wisdom, foretelling accurately the events of his day and predicting with exactitude the course of millenniums yet to come. David was a man after God's own heart, and though he was beset with bloodshed and wars on every hand, yet he ruled faithfully and well and gave his kingdom to a wise son, who reigned in peace after him. All through the ages the Lord has been electing and calling saints and setting them aside to await the day of resurrection, when as one great body of Christ, with God's first begotten Son as their Head, they will take the government, first, of the world and then of the universe and reign for ever and ever.

In this prophetic verse, Gen. 1:26, we are told that man in God's image was to be given authority over the fowls of the air, the beasts and cattle, and the fish in the sea. The significance is that the beasts and cattle represent things on earth. The fish represent things beneath and in the deeps. The birds represent the things in the heavenlies. John in his revelation at Patmos heard "every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, saying, Blessing and honor, and power, be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever." Rev. 5:13 This triumphant portraiture of universal victory and glory must certainly be the fulfillment of that which had its seed thought in Gen. 1:26 Such a triumph for the universality of Christ's redemption boggles the mind and staggers even our faith.

David continues the glad refrain in his beautiful Psalm of worship and praises. "O Lord our Lord, how excellent is Thy name in all the earth! who hast set Thy glory above the heavens. Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings hast Thou ordained strength because of Thine enemies, that Thou mightest still the enemy and the avenger. When I consider Thy heavens, the work of Thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which Thou hast ordained; what is man, that Thou art mindful of him? and the son of man that Thou visitest him? For Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honor. Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of Thy hands; Thou hast put all things under his feet: all sheep and oxen, yea, and the beasts of the field; the fowl of the air, and the fish of the sea, and whatsoever passes through the paths of the seas. O Lord our Lord, how excellent is Thy name in all the earth!" Psa. 8

One can easily grasp the connection between the statement in Gen. 1:26 and the inspired statement of David in this Psalm. In both passages the thought is crystal clear that it is the Lord's intention to bring man into God's image and then to give him dominion over all the earth. But then, too, it is very evident that David in spirit was beginning to wonder about the heavenly realms as well, the sun and the moon and the stars and what is man's connection with them. What, he wonders, has God in mind for man in this exalted heavenly realm? "What is man that Thou art mindful of him?" he asks. "What hast Thou in mind for him?" The moment we become aware of the Lord's intention for man, we find it no great puzzle as to why He made man and exerted such effort to perfect him. I believe I am right in saying that what David was really asking was not "what is man that Thou art mindful of him", as though man was scarcely worthy of a second thought from God, but "what have you in mind for man", the creature who is the main subject of the entire Genesis story. The soul-stirring truth is that God has much in mind for man - very, very much - and David in this eighth Psalm is just beginning to grasp the enormity of the Father's intention for His sons - which intention involves not only the earth, but the heavens as well. That man was made from the dust of the earth does not mean that the Lord has only second or third thoughts concerning him. Far be that from the truth. The truth is that in all the past six thousand years man has been the very apple of God's eye and the chief object of His creation, and he is now in the schooling of the Most High, learning and coming to the full knowledge of all that is good and all that is evil, and that experientially, that he might govern the spheres in absolute righteousness in the ages to come.

"Listen, then, king, and understand; Rulers of remotest lands take warning. Hear this, ye who have thousands under your rule, Who boast of your hordes of subjects, For power is a gift to you from the Lord; Sovereignty is from the Most High. He Himself will probe your acts And scrutinize your intentions If as administrators of His kingdom You have not governed justly, Nor obeyed the law, Nor behaved as God would have you behave.

He will fall on you swiftly and terribly. Ruthless judgment is reserved for the high and mighty. The lowly will be compassionately pardoned; The mighty will be mightily punished, For the Lord of all does not cower before personages. He does not stand in awe of greatness Since He Himself made small and great And provides for all alike.

Yes, despots, my words are for you. That you may learn what wisdom is and not transgress; For they who observe holy things holily Will be adjudged holy, And, accepting instruction from them, Will find their defense in them. Look forward, therefore, to my words; Yearn for them and they will instruct you."
Now as David in Psalm 8 takes Genesis 1:26 as a text for his Psalm, so Paul, writing in Heb. 2:5-8, uses Psalm 8 as a basis for his yet larger understanding of the question, "What is man that Thou art mindful of him?" Earlier in this chapter we quoted this passage from Weymouth's translation, but we may all be edified by the words of Edgar Goodspeed's translation also, which to my mind emphasizes the true meaning of the sentence, "What is man that Thou art mindful of him." Goodspeed puts it this way: "What is man? for you to think of him; or any man? for you to care for him." Then he continues: "You made him for a little while inferior to the angels; yet you have crowned him with glory and honor, and you have put him in charge of the works of your hands! You have put everything under his feet! In thus making everything subject to man, God left nothing that is not subject to him. But we do not as yet see everything made subject to him, but we do see Jesus, who was made for a little while inferior to angels, crowned with glory and honor because He suffered death, so that by the favor of God He might taste the bitterness of death on behalf of every human being." Heb. 2:6-9 (Goodspeed)

The infinite truth here staggers the imagination and leaves one dumbfounded. That God should have had such a purpose and intention in mind from before ever the world began would without the faith of God be beyond belief. Divine inspiration has a remarkable way of putting the ocean into a teacup. I know of no words, sentences, paragraphs or even books that could tell us better what God has in mind for man than the simple, illuminating, all-inclusive statement, "Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet." And again: "For in that He put all things under him, He left nothing that is not put under him." This is where faith really operates, because these superlative statements are far beyond the comprehension and almost beyond the belief of man. There will probably be many people who read these lines who will readily reject them, but that is not in the least surprising, for if faith fails from the heart, how else are we to grasp these things? Has not the word of God already told us that "faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen!" Let us never cast a truth aside because we cannot understand it or because it is too high for us. Only today a young man wrote me to say, "I cannot understand all you write, but it feeds my soul and witnesses to my spirit." Well, that is really all we need. If we can believe what is incredible to the natural mind, then we join that company who saw the promises afar off, were persuaded of them, embraced them, confessed them and will eventually attain them.

That the Father has chosen to put all things under the feet of man who has come into God's image cannot be questioned. God has declared it to be so and has sent the message to us for faith to accept at face value. A reader of the book of Hebrews would need to be extremely casual and careless could he read the book without noticing the author's tremendous appeals to faith in the veracity of all God has spoken and his constant warnings against unbelief. If 1 Cor. 13 is the great love chapter of the Bible, then certainly Hebrews 11 is the great faith chapter. Easy as it would be to launch into an examination of the faith taught in the book of Hebrews, we will leave that blessing for a following chapter, but for the present, suffice it to say that, when God declares as truth that which to man is incredible and impossible, it is for man to believe what divine wisdom says and absolutely refuse to doubt the almighty power and wisdom of God no matter how much his faith would tremble. Woe to us all, the church system has presented to the world an imbecilic God without purpose, without plan, without wisdom and without power.

Man, desolate, sinful and fallen as he is, even now to a limited degree can be seen as ruler over the things of earth. Even now the fear of man and the dread of him is upon every creature on earth. Being raised on a farm in the long ago, I have never lost interest in the wonderful things we enjoyed there. It was therefore not surprising that I recently found myself watching a show of draft horses, beautiful great beasts, some of them weighing almost a ton, matching their pulling power against each other. The thing that impressed me even more than their strength was how these powerful creatures, capable of pulling a man about as though he were a wisp of hay, or picking him up with their teeth or trampling him under foot, instead obeyed man's every whim and desire. Well may we wonder why a great, five ton elephant will allow itself to be tamed and trained and commanded by man. Is it not that God has put the fear of man upon all creatures? Is it not that even here and now, while man is still fallen and still sinful, the Almighty has left with him dominion and authority over the beasts and the things in the sea, causing even the great killer whales to obey man's command? Many tales are readily available of injured animals and birds that have come seeking the superior help and knowledge of man, bowing down to them for help and deliverance from their pain and distress.
In saying "Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet", the author further enforces the truth by these words: "For in that He put all in subjection under him, He left nothing that is not put under him." "He left nothing" is a very inclusive statement, to be sure. Nothing means not anything; not something; no part, piece or element: nonexistent and non-extant; no thing; the cipher zero. The divine answer to the problem, "What is man that Thou are mindful of him", is answered in this: "Thou hast left nothing not put under him."

If this, then, is God's intention, why, we ask, do we see almost the exact opposite at the present time - man at the mercy of the elements, swallowed by disease, crushed by wars, impoverished by frosts, hail and tornadoes, oppressed by evil spirits, wearied and pained by numberless diseases of the body, the soul and the mind? Why do we see him going down to utter defeat and passing away in sorrow as a fleeting shadow in the night or as something that never has been? Why is man so soon cut down and his life said to be as a mist that the wind driveth away? Why is he condemned to slave for his very existence and to earn his bread by the sweat of his face? Why does his every effort to rid himself of toil only serve to bring him more burden and more labor? Man's labor saving devices, good as they may be, have served to bring him other labor. He spends a lifetime as a slave to finance companies and banks, paying for automobiles, deep freezes, washing machines, electric stoves, beautiful homes and a thousand other gadgets that are supposed to save him labor and hardship and make life much more pleasant; but in the end he finds himself a bond slave for life to the money lenders until first he and then his wife are forced to go to work to make more money to pay for the things they have bought to make life happier and easier. The result of this greed for things and wealth is broken homes by the multiplied millions and a rash of thankless, delinquent children, because the women have forsaken their God-given calling to run after the will-o-the-wisp of possessing more and more things - things to be left behind when life is over.

So the great apostle says, "But now we see not yet all things put under him." And indeed we do not. Instead we see quite the opposite - careworn man, struggling and laboring with weary face and a huge, unbearable burden of debt on his back. No, indeed! We do not yet see all things put under him.

In God's dear book mankind is like the sea,
   A moving, restless mass of weary men.
Accomplishments are but the fantasies of time.
   Empires, like waves, rise but to fall again.
And through the passing of bygone years
   'Mid idle boastings of a man-made calm,
The braggart's words, like nature's thunder voice,
   Have only been the heralds of the storm.

Lest we faint beneath our oppressing burden, lest our eyes behold only the dreary, treeless, windswept wastes before us and we cry in our weariness,

   So faint am I, these tottering feet
   No more my feeble frame can bear.
   My sinking heart forgets to beat
   And drifting snows my tomb prepare,

Look up, O man! Look up, O saint! Look up and you will see something and someone. Yea, you will see Jesus, the mighty forerunner, the glorious apostle and high priest of our profession. You will see Him - God's first manifested Son, the One who was tempted in all points as we are, the One who bowed His back to the smiting, the One who as a man of sorrows was acquainted with grief, the One who was despised and rejected of men, the One who, like us, was a worm and no man, a reproach of men and despised of all the people; yes, He who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death: the One who tasted death for every man.

Look up! Look up and you will see Him seated in the heavenlies. You will see Jesus, who once was made "a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor, that He by the grace of God should taste death for every man. For it became Him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings. For both He that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified are all one: for which cause He is not ashamed to call them brethren." Heb. 2:9-11
If we are going to see the triumph of God's purpose for man, it is essential that we lift our eyes away from the bondage, sorrow and night of these present ages and look unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith. Look up, dear friend, look up! He has taken His seat far above all principalities and powers and might and dominion and every name that is named, not only in this age, but in the ages which are to come. Christ Jesus is the first Son to attain that exalted glory and now from His throne on high He beckons His many younger brothers. He bids them bear the pain and travail of their cross. He bids them be made perfect through the things they suffer, whatever those sufferings may be.

This whole death realm is a realm of suffering from the cradle to the grave, yet by it the Lord works a sanctifying purpose that only He can understand. Ask no more, "Why me?" or "Why this and why that?" Or "Why me instead of someone else?" Commit the keeping of your soul unto God in well doing as unto a faithful Creator and you will find in the end that the rugged, rock strewn way of the cross is the path that leads to your crowning day.

Almost two thousand years ago the mighty Stephen stood up to proclaim the word of the Lord. He, together with other ministers of his day, had suffered great tribulation and fierce persecution, but now, filled with the Holy Ghost, he wrought mighty signs and wonders among the people. But those perennial haters of Christ arose from the synagogues with their endless disputes, and, when they could neither resist his word nor the power of his works, they suborned (bribed) men to charge that they had heard him speak blasphemy against Moses and against God. "And they stirred up the people, and the elders, and the scribes, and came upon him, and caught him, and brought him to the council, and set up false witnesses, which said, This man ceaseth not to speak blasphemous words against this holy place and the law: for we have heard him say that this Jesus of Nazareth shall destroy this place, and shall change the customs which Moses delivered unto us." And amid all their wicked accusations they saw his face as it had been the face of an angel.

Then, after Stephen had preached one of the mightiest sermons ever recorded, his adversaries were cut to the heart, and they gnashed on him with their teeth; but he, being full of the Holy Ghost, looked up steadfastly into heaven and beheld the glory of God, and Jesus, his elder brother, standing on the right hand of God the Father, and said, "Behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of man standing on the right hand of God. Then they cried out with a loud voice, and stopped their ears, and ran upon him with one accord, and cast him out of the city, and stoned him... and he kneeled down, and cried with a loud voice, Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. And when he had said this, he fell asleep." Acts 7:54-58, 60

Thus Stephen, when his trials and sufferings were over, saw the heavens opened and the Son of God standing on the right hand of the Father's throne. He saw Jesus, who once was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor; that He by the grace of God should taste death for every man." Heb. 2:9 Thus did Stephen see Him crowned with glory and honor, not sitting, but standing to receive another brother, another son, to the Father's right hand. Tears of joy dampen my eyes and fill my heart with praise as the comforting words of Paul come whispering through the centuries - a brother in Christ who had suffered more than most of us can imagine - saying, "For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." 2 Cor. 4:17 And again: "I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us." Rom. 8:18 What a mighty triumph it all is! O saint of God, do not whine and moan because of your afflictions and sufferings. Do you not know that "he who hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin, that he should no longer spend his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God?"

The saintly Paul, nearing his journey's end, had occasion to say to the Corinthians, "Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one. Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, a night and a day have I been in the deep; in journeyings often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils of mine own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren; in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness. Beside those things that are without, that which cometh upon me daily, the care of all the churches." 2 Cor. 11:24-28 These are tribulations, if ever tribulation was suffered by any man; but these dreadful afflictions which he endured are the fulfillment of the prophetic word to the young Saul

TREASURES OF TRUTH, Volume 30, Our So Great Salvation [George R. Hawtin] ~ BOOK 37 of Tarsus, for Jesus had said to Ananias, "Arise, and go into the street which is called Straight, and enquire in the house of Judas for one called Saul, of Tarsus: for, behold, he prayeth, and hath seen in a vision a man named Ananias coming in, and putting his hand on him, that he might receive his sight. Then Ananias answered, Lord, I have heard by many of this man, how much evil he hath done to Thy saints at Jerusalem:
and here he hath authority from the chief priests to bind all that call on Thy name. But the Lord said unto him, Go thy way: for he is a chosen vessel unto Me, to bear My name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel: for I will show him how great things he must suffer for My sake. And Ananias went his way, and entered into the house; and putting his hands on him, said, Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way as thou earnest, hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight, and be filled with the Holy Ghost. And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales, and he received sight forthwith, and arose, and was baptized." Acts 9:11-18 It was a marvelous conversion and a transforming experience for a man who had caused so much suffering and affliction among the disciples of the Lord, but the words that we want to notice here are these: "I will show him how great things he must suffer for My name's sake." Verse 16 Suffer he did with terrible and incredible sufferings, of which he later said, "For which cause we faint not; but though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day. For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen; for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal." 2 Cor. 4:16-18 The things, which are seen at present are the afflictions, but the thing which is not seen is the eternal weight of glory our afflictions are laying up for us. It is written, "We must through much tribulation enter the kingdom of heaven." Tribulation separates the men from the boys, the grain from the tares, and the sons of God from armchair philosophers and all pretenders, for "if thou faint in the day of adversity, thy strength is small." Prov. 24:10 No man is going to be carried to God's throne on "flowery beds of ease, while others fight to win the prize and sail through bloody seas." If the captain was made perfect through suffering, Heb. 2:10, then those He is bringing into His image and glory will certainly be perfected in the same way. Why else would Paul have said to Timothy, "Thou therefore endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ." 2 Tim. 2:3

In the light of the truth we are now studying so many things take on new meaning. Notice, for instance, 2 Tim.
4:1 "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at His appearing and His kingdom." Here it is clear that the sons of God are to judge the living and the dead, and judge angels as well. Is it unreasonable, then, that we should now be called upon to prove ourselves before God by reproving, rebuking, and exhorting with all long suffering and doctrine, verse 2, to watch in all things, endure affliction and make full proof of our ministry, whatever it may be? Verse 3 For Paul said, "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love His appearing." Verse 6-8

"I am now ready to be offered," he said. He did not call his demise dying, but being offered. Thus, according to church history, this son of God, after all his refining in the fires of affliction, was led out of a Roman jail to be offered. Laying his aged and noble head upon the block, there was a swish of a Roman sword and his spirit, being released from its prison of clay, was received by Christ into everlasting habitations.

(Note: Time will not permit us to further pursue the purpose of suffering, but much help will be received by reading The Mystery of Suffering, Volume 29 of Treasures of Truth, available by request.)

The apostle now continues with these words: "For both He who sanctifies and those whom He is sanctifying have all one Father; and for this reason He is not ashamed to speak of them as His brothers; as when He says: I will proclaim Thy name to My brothers: in the midst of the congregation will I hymn Thy praises. (Psa.
22:22). And again, I will be one whose trust reposes in God. (Psa. 18:2) And again, Here am I, and here are the children God has given Me. (Isa. 8:18) Heb. 2:11-13 (Weymouth). The actual wonder of these scriptures can only be received if the reader will quietly meditate upon them before God, requesting illumination from heaven to unlock the mighty secret contained in these words. What does it mean to you that God should say that Christ, who sanctifies, and the sons He is sanctifying through suffering all have the same Father?
Brethren, that is an incredible statement, but it is true. Have faith to believe its staggering portent, for the Father has declared it to be so. I have no power to enlarge upon it. I have only God-given faith to believe it is so. Having disclosed this wonderful truth that we all (Christ and ourselves) have one Father, which certainly constitutes us as the brothers of Christ, the apostle continues: "I will declare Thy name unto my brethren; in the midst of the congregation will I sing praise unto Thee." (Quoted from Psalms 22:22) And again, "Behold, I and the children which God hath given Me." Hebrews 2:13 In all these scriptures our Father in heaven testifies that we are His sons, and he who has the Spirit of sonship responds, "Abba, Father."

Abba Father, the Spirit of sonship cries;
Tis deep calling unto deep.
Far, far beyond the scope of natural man lies
The sons' great eternal prize.

Naught but the Spirit of sonship
Can take the veil away;
Naught but deep calling to deep
Will bring in God's new day.

Night and day must the cry go forth
From deep down within,
Cleansing, purifying, changing till
I am fashioned just like Him.

Then in all His glorious fulness
I shall come.
Deep will call to deep, Abba Father,
I am Your son! Father, I am Your son!

CHAPTER EIGHT
THE TRIUMPH OF FAITH

"Our eyes are holden that we cannot see things that stare us in the face until the hour arrives that the mind is ripened. Then we behold them, and the time when we saw them not is like a dream."

Emerson.

We will find ourselves concluding that such a supernal wonder as sonship, the majesty of our calling, and the power and glory of our "so great salvation" as it is presented in the book of Hebrews could be believed, accepted and attained only by faith. For this reason the author of the book continually holds before our eyes the necessity and the wonder of a God-given faith in the veracity of all that God has spoken. It should matter naught to any of us whether or not we can understand what has been presented to us by the word and by the Spirit. The thing of supreme and utmost importance is that we believe what God has said. All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and there is nothing that so delights the heart of the Father as to see faith arise in His people; but nothing is so displeasing to Him as blind unbelief. Should I write forever, I could not say more about faith than that taught us in chapter eleven of this remarkable book; therefore with few comments we will take time and space to quote it all. The more one studies it, the deeper its depths appear and the more remarkable its statements become.

We will notice, as we read these things together, that each and every person mentioned in the chapter believed God regarding something which the Holy Spirit had placed within his heart, but whether these saints appeared to believe for much or little matters nothing. The only thing any of us need do in life is have faith to be or do whatsoever the Holy Spirit leads us to do, for "as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God."
The apostle begins the chapter with these words: "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." That faith IS substance and that faith IS evidence is truth beyond the power of mortal man to describe or explain. All scripture is given by the inspiration of God; therefore, all scripture must of necessity be revealed and explained to us by the inspiration of the Holy Spirit. Things that draw an absolute blank to the dark, untutored, natural mind and are quite beyond the power of explanation or understanding begin to unfold as the mind begins to take its refuge in God and look to Him to explain the unexplainable. The natural man never has been able to receive the things of the Spirit of God, because they are spiritually discerned. The glittering gem of truth, that all our lives lay hidden to the darkened, natural mind as dead and unfeeling as a stone, becomes a "living stone", radiant with color and fire when the glory of His sunlight gleams upon it. Then what once was all darkness shines with rays of celestial light and spiritual understanding. As man is spirit, soul, and body, so also is truth. The body is easily seen and felt and touched by natural man, because it is natural. The soul is not so easily discerned or described. Because it has a vital connection with the visible blood and the invisible mind, it evades all attempts to be truly understood. The spirit, however, is completely invisible and a mystery to the natural mind. That man is spirit is beyond question. The spirit is the life of the body while man lives and the death of the body when it departs. As the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead. Even an atheist speaks of a corpse from which the spirit has departed as "the remains". Thus, though the spirit cannot be seen, touched, or analyzed, the fact of its existence is indubitable and absolutely beyond question. Faith is, indeed, substance.

So also it is with truth. There is that outward parable that any school boy or even a heathen can understand. Then there comes a second and deeper meaning that man somehow sees with his head, but does not grasp with his heart. Finally there comes that deeper meaning that only the spirit can comprehend. First the shell; then the kernel; then the germ of life. Truth is like the tabernacle in the wilderness. First, the outer court, where all may enter, known as the court of the Gentiles, or the nations; second, an inner chamber, a holy place, where only priests who deal with holy things may enter while others stand without.

Then there is the innermost chamber, the holiest of all, into which the high priest alone may enter. It is a place alight with the shekinah, the light of God, a realm of spiritual mystery and divine understanding. It is the realm of the heavens where only citizens of that celestial realm speak its language and hear its rapturous voices. Well meaning critics often write to me, hoping to acquaint me with my errors, but, sadly, there is no answer one can give them, because their eye hath not yet seen, nor their ear heard, neither has it entered their hearts, the thing that God has spoken to my heart. Thus it seems wisest not to reply at all. It is as Paul once said, "After the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers." Acts 24:14 There are three realms of mystery contained in the following sentence of truth. "Great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels... received up into glory." So it is with all truth - I repeat, all truth.

So, faith IS the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things the natural eye cannot see. By it the elders - that is, the patriarchs - received a good report. Through faith we understand the worlds were formed - yea, and the ages were framed - by the word of God, so that things, which are seen were made from things unseen. A glorious mystery, is it not? Yet men of science have proved beyond question that all the visible worlds and the visible celestial bodies were formed of invisible atoms, so that things that are seen were made of things, which are not seen. It is where the eye of the natural man ends that the eye of faith begins. Thus, having given to faith the most precise elucidation possible for mortal man to receive, the apostle then proceeds to name a long series of faithful persons who were brought to the gateway of perfection through faith. In like manner we ourselves, though not mentioned in Holy Writ, are coming to perfection even as they, that they without us should not be made perfect.

ABEL

Verse 4. By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts (offerings), and by it he being dead yet speaketh." Have you ever wondered how Abel knew his offering was accepted and Cain knew his was rejected? The answer is this: Whenever the Lord accepts an offering, He always consumes it with fire from heaven. We can see this truth manifested in the offerings of the tabernacle in the wilderness. Lev. 9:24. All the offerings were consumed with... heavenly fire. We can see it in the offering of Manoah, Judges 13:1-20, the offering of Elijah, 1 Kings 18:25-38, and the offering of Solomon. 2 Chron. 7:1-3 When we read that Nadab and Abihu offered strange fire before the Lord, Num. 3:4, the strange fire they offered was natural fire such as one would light with a match. It may be clearly seen from this that the worship of the natural man is not acceptable to God. Thus when Abel offered the lamb to God as the Lord had instructed him, the fire of the Lord consumed it. But, when Cain offered an offering contrary to the instruction of the Lord, it remained on the altar, but not consumed. Cain was so enraged that his brother's offering was received and his was not that he slew his brother, an outrage which evil men have practiced against the saints for millenniums of time. They slew the prophets and the apostles. They slew Jesus Christ and hanged Him on a tree; and they have slain martyrs in every age, not because these saints had done any wickedness, but because God had accepted them and the rage of Satan against them knew no end. In a greater and more wonderful manner the living sacrifice of the one hundred and twenty saints who offered themselves to God at Pentecost was consumed by the fire that fell from heaven on that glorious Pentecostal morning. From the moment the fire touched them, they were transformed into spiritual men and women such as the world had never known. In the light of this fire that fell upon them we see as never before the heavenly significance of the words of Paul, "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." Rom. 12:1 We may be well assured that such living sacrifice of ourselves will be accepted and consumed by the fire, which God is.

ENOCHE

Verse 5. "By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death." Abel had faith and was martyred. Enoch was given faith that he should not see death at all. He was not seen again, for God had translated him, "for before his translation he had this testimony, that he pleasing God". And without faith it is impossible to please Him. It is necessary that we see that true faith consists wholly in following the will of God. Carry out, therefore, that which God places in your heart. Regard neither the ideas of mortal men nor the deception of the devil. Turn your life over to the will of God and He will consume your sacrifice. That faith may lead you to death as it did with Abel or it may lead you to translation as it did with Enoch, but it is said of the one as it was said of the other that what they did was by faith. Your ear will hear well-meaning people say, "With your talents you should be doing this for God", or "With your experience you should be doing that". Turn a deaf ear to all the protestations of well-meaning people and listen rather to the voice of the Holy Spirit, saying, "This is the way; walk ye in it."

NOAH

Verse 7. "By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house; by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith." Noah was given neither faith to die nor faith to be translated, but to be saved when others were lost, to be preserved through the most unimaginable tribulation through faith, while a whole world of unbelieving men were drowned. We feel dismay when some modern flood or tidal wave snatches away a few people, but in Noah's day the world was drowned and life buried beneath the flood's unrelenting wave. Noah in that day of calamity was told to do something, which never before had been done. Foolish? Stupid? Silly? Insane? Fanatical? Use whatever demeaning adjective you wish, but he did what he did because what he did was by faith. Your ear will hear well-meaning people say, "With your talents you should be doing this for God", or "With your experience you should be doing that". Turn a deaf ear to all the protestations of well-meaning people and listen rather to the voice of the Holy Spirit, saying, "This is the way; walk ye in it."

Many warnings could be written here, but we need never worry about where the journey is going to end. All we need to do is start walking down the path He has put us on. Recognize first of all that you are in God’s will right now. Many times, as you journey, you will think you have reached your goal only to find later that you have been led far, far beyond your fondest hopes and dreams. So it came to pass that Noah, who had faith simply to build an ark to save his household, discovered that the faith he manifested made him an heir of the righteousness, which is by faith. Heb. 11:7 Once we place our feet on the pathway of God, eternity alone will reveal its consummation.

ABRAHAM

Verse 8. By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed: and he went out, not knowing whither he went. By faith he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise: for he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." There are some remarkable statements here. "Not knowing whither he went", he sojourned in the land of promise as in a strange country, and he looked for a city, which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God.

Abraham was not being led in the way of Abel, Enoch or Noah. He was being led in the way of Abraham. He was not led to do what they had done. He was being led to do as God had ordained for him to do. He was told to go out, but he was not shown where his journey would take him. He saw the start of the road, but not the finish. Each step and each day he must be directed by the Lord. If we start from where we are and here raise our altar to God, and place ourselves on that altar as living sacrifices, the Lord will receive our living sacrifice as an offering holy and acceptable unto Himself. Then walk in Him, "looking unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith", and throughout the journey of life we will be led of His Spirit. It must have been wonderful to walk with God as Abraham did, but what we are never told is how often he must have wondered where all this long, long journey was taking him. Well did this man of faith know the bitterness of disappointment and discouragement, just as we have done. Even he was a man of like passions as we are, but faith is a walk and the Lord told him, "Walk before Me and be perfect." Gen. 17:1 And that, my friend, is really what perfection is. Be less concerned about what you are and look ahead to what you are becoming. We see the scaffolding and the clutter of the building. He sees the shining temple in all the glory of its completeness.

The promised land to him was a strange country, but in his believing heart he knew there was another country, even an heavenly, far beyond that earthly Canaan to which he was now going. He was a man of wealth in sheep and cattle, for the Lord had mightily prospered him, but in the farness of his vision he saw there was an eternal city, a city not made with hands, a city that had foundations, a city the like of which no man on earth could ever possibly imagine. In the remoteness of his time he was seeing the New Jerusalem, the same city of glory John saw in his Patmos vision hundreds of years later. By faith he knew, though yet he was childless, that the seed that would come from his own body would actually be that holy city. He knew in spirit that the twelve tribes who would spring from his loins would be the gates of the New Jerusalem and he saw that of his seed the twelve foundations would be laid. He must have thought that he would reach it in his life time and in hope of this he refused to build himself any permanent dwelling place on earth, but spent his whole pilgrimage dwelling in tents or tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise. I, too, am an heir of that same promise, and millions more besides, for not to Abraham alone was the promise made, but to his seed as well. Therefore keep small things small, dear friend of God. Never set your heart on mansions of earth, but lay up for yourselves treasures in the heavenlies where moth and rust do not corrupt and thieves do not break through or steal; for where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.

SARAH

Verse 11. In the midst of the exhilarating talk about the faith of Abraham, the thought turns quickly to his wife, Sarah. "By faith also Sarah herself received strength to conceive seed, and was delivered of a child when she was past age, because she judged Him faithful who had promised. Therefore sprang there even of one, and him as good as dead, so many as the stars of the sky in multitude, and as the sand which is by the sea shore innumerable." Just think of that! The Lord had not told Sarah to do some spectacular thing, to build an ark as Noah, or to go on a journey as Abraham, but He had told her that in her old age she was to bear a baby, a child of promise. She did no great and marvelous work, but she "judged Him faithful who had promised." There was nothing spectacular or unusual about giving birth to a baby. Thousands of women had done that before she did, but this was to be a child of promise, a proper child, a child through whom all the promises of God to Abraham would be brought to pass in ages yet unborn. "In Isaac shall thy seed be called." So from the womb of this barren woman sprang a multitude that could no more be numbered than can the sand that swarms the sea shore or the stars that throng the heavens. Of the hosts of her descendants it is written, "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth. For they that say such things declare plainly that they seek a country. And truly, if they had been mindful of that country from whence they came out, they might have had opportunity to have returned. But now they desire a better country, that is, an heavenly: wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God; for He hath prepared for them a city."

Heb. 11:13-16

These five great elements of faith mentioned in the passage quoted were manifest in the lives of her descendants: (1) not having received the promises; (2) having seen them afar off; (3) they were persuaded of them; (4) they embraced them; and (5) they confessed that they, like Abraham, were strangers and pilgrims on the earth. O what a glorious walk! O what a magnificent vision - to see, to be persuaded, to embrace the promise, and confess to God, to man, and especially to ourselves that we are strangers and pilgrims seeking a city whose builder and maker is God!

I am a stranger here within a foreign land;
My home is faraway upon a golden strand.
Ambassador to be in realms beyond the sea,
I’m here on business for my King.

"By faith Abraham (verse 17), when he was tried, offered up Isaac: and he that had received the promises offered up his only begotten son. Of whom it was said, That in Isaac shall thy seed be called: accounting that God was able to raise him up, even from the dead; from whence also he received him in a figure." The act of offering up Isaac was perhaps the crowning act of faith in the life of Abraham, the friend of God. I shall not dwell at any length here except to say that long experience has taught me that it is usual to find that the moment we hold the long awaited promise in our arms, we will be required to offer that dearly loved promise unto the Lord. When at last the long looked for prize is in our possession and we feel that the end to which we have pressed for a life time is now ours, we will hear the Lord asking us to place that also on the altar of sacrifice. More than once, yes, more than twice has this happened in my own life. The accomplishments of faith must be offered up, ascending like incense as a sweet savor to God.

If you have a thing, release it.
If it conies back to you, it is yours.
If it does not, it never was.

A song's not a song till you sing it;
A bell's not a bell till you ring it.
The love in your heart was not put there to stay;
Love isn't love till you give it away.

Thus did Abraham offer up Isaac, his only begotten son, and in offering him up, he received in return, not only Isaac back again, but so many descendants as the stars for multitude and the sand by the sea shore innumerable.

ISAAC

Verse 20. "By faith Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau concerning things to come." That is all the apostle said of Isaac. It does not seem to be much, but if you read the blessing Isaac pronounced that day, you will see that its mercies reach even to you. "And his (Jacob’s) father Isaac said unto him, Come near now, and kiss me, my son. And he came near, and kissed him: and he smelled the smell of his raiment, and blessed him, and said, See, the smell of my son is as the smell of a field which the Lord hath blessed: Therefore God give thee of the dew of heaven, and the fatness of the earth, and plenty of corn and wine: Let people serve thee, and nations bow down to thee: be lord over thy brethren, and let thy mother's sons bow down to thee: cursed be every one that curseth thee, and blessed be he that blesseth thee.”

Gen. 27:26-29
The Patriarch Isaac lived a very quiet and peaceful life as compared to that of either Abraham, his father, or Jacob, his son; but the blessing he gave by faith that day endures unto this day, giving oil and wine in abundance, blessing those who bless and cursing those who curse. If during the course of a life lived for God all that is required of a man is that he pronounced some blessing on another that is sufficient in God's sight. It is neither how much we do nor say nor accomplish that counts for anything. It is doing that which is the mind and will of God for us, for such things were ordained before the foundation of the world.

JACOB

Verse 21. "By faith Jacob, when he was dying, blessed both the sons of Joseph: and worshipped, leaning upon the top of his staff." In my mind's eye I visualize this ancient patriarch, bowed down through the toil and hardship of many weary years. Gen. 47:9 Long ago he had abandoned all hope of ever seeing Joseph again, but now he rejoiced that he had seen both Joseph and his children. Now, laying his hands upon the heads of his little grandchildren, he adopted them as his own sons and placed them among the tribes of Israel, Gen. 48:5-22, pronouncing the blessing upon them - the blessings recorded in verses 5-22.

We may wonder why Jacob at the end of his blessing bowed his ancient head as he leaned upon his staff and broke forth in worship to God. Perhaps the words of his own wonderful prophecy overwhelmed him, for the glorious future laid up in store for these two little boys was revealed in the prophetic blessing he gave. Ephraim was to become a company of nations, a commonwealth as revealed by Paul in Eph. 2:12, and his brother, Manasseh, was to become a great nation, while both of them together were to be a blessing to the whole world. Thus Jacob, being overcome by the sheer glory of the prophecy and its wonderful revelation of the future, leaned upon his staff in praise and worship to God. Great are God's marvels in the earth - that He should preserve Joseph from all his enemies, raise him up to sit in a throne, and give him two sons, who were to become the chiefest of all the tribes of Israel. Well has the Holy Spirit spoken, "By faith Jacob, when he was dying, blessed both the sons of Joseph, and worshipped, leaning on the top of his staff."

In all the history of the world there has been only one Commonwealth of Nations. That commonwealth is the British Commonwealth. It is indeed a company of independent nations, each with its own government, but all having one common throne. Such was the prophecy given to Ephraim. To Manasseh the prophetic word was spoken that he should become a great people. Gen. 48:19 We know of no individual nation that has ever attained the greatness of the United States of America. These two - the commonwealth and the great nation - are blood brothers with the same color of skin, both speaking the same language, both democracies and both a blessing to the world. These prophecies were given to be fulfilled in the last days. Gen. 49:1 Every word spoken concerning these two boys in Gen. 49 has been and is being fulfilled to the last letter. And Jacob, seeing the teeming multitudes that would spring from these two sons of Joseph and remembering that he had never expected to see Joseph alive nor any of his seed, bowed himself upon his staff and worshipped the God of such marvels and miracles. (For further understanding on this subject please request our book, 'The Abrahamic Covenant.')

I beseech you not to be as those unbelievers who are willing to defend their traditions, even if it be at the expense of truth. Has any truth been gladly accepted in the face of tradition? Paul once said of the tradition-ridden Jews, "Who both killed the Lord Jesus and their own prophets and have persecuted us. They please not God and are contrary to all men." 1 Thess. 2:15 "We can easily forgive a child for being afraid of the dark. The tragedy of life is when men are afraid of the light."

When it was first reported that a man had transmitted his voice over a wire, the reporter was arrested and one newspaper carried this editorial: "Well informed people know that it is impossible to transmit the human voice over wires as may be done with dots and dashes of the Morse Code and, were it possible to do so, the thing would have no practical value. The authorities who apprehended this criminal are to be congratulated, and it is hoped his punishment will be prompt and fitting that it may serve as an example to other conscienceless schemers who enrich themselves at the expense of their fellow creatures." Again, the reporter who reported that the Wright brothers had flown a heavier than air craft was fired without investigation. Galileo was condemned to lifelong house arrest for saying the earth was not the center of the universe. Refuse to be like... these people who reject truth without investigation. Be rather like the Bereans, who searched the scripture daily to see if these things were so. Acts. 17:11 A clear understanding of the truth concerning Israel throws tremendous light on the entire Bible, because every book from Genesis, chapter 12, to Revelation concerns itself with the seed of Abraham through Isaac and Israel. This, I think, cannot be denied. And Jacob, seeing the vast extent of his blessing, worshipped God, leaning on the top of his staff.

JOSEPH

Verse 22. "By faith Joseph, when he died, made mention of the departing of the children of Israel; and gave commandment concerning his bones." Joseph, the saint of God, foresaw the day when the seventy souls who had come to Egypt years before would march in triumph out of that land of bondage, a mighty host of more than two million people; and he commanded that, when they went forth, they should take his bones ahead of them to be buried in the promised land. Whether or not Joseph foresaw Israel's coming bondage and slavery in Egypt the word of God does not disclose, but he did know that deliverance from Egypt was coming in the end. He well knew the promises God had given to his fathers and he did not intend that even his decaying bones would be left behind in that land of sin, but commanded that they be carried out when the hosts of Israel left the country, thence to be buried in the land of Canaan. May God give us all a heart like that. We are citizens of an heavenly realm. We are strangers in this foreign land. I for one do not want even my bones to remain in this realm of curse and travail, but, please God, may they arise in the resurrection of the just, changed and immortal and filled with the life that raised Jesus from the dead that this promise may be fulfilled: "This corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory." 1 Cor. 15:53-54

Such is the glorious promise we embrace. Let us therefore, even as they, lay hold upon it, that it may be our joy and crown eternally; for the promise is "to thee and to thy children and to those who are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call."

MOSES

Verse 23. "By faith Moses, when he was born, was hid three months of his parents, because they saw he was a proper child; and they were not afraid of the king's commandment." Here in this verse we have a bold act of faith by a commonplace pair of very ordinary people of the tribe of Levi. Their act was a bold one and is not to be taken lightly. They lived in a day when disobedience to the command of a king could have meant any kind of punishment his royal willfulness might have devised.

Refusing to cast their child into the river, they hid him, because they saw he was a "proper child". Some Bible translators use the word beautiful instead of proper, but the word leaves much to be desired. He probably was a beautiful child. What mother does not think her baby beautiful? My opinion is they saw this child was a child of destiny. As the parents of John the Baptist had witness borne to them that the son God was about to give them was a child of destiny, so also the parents of Moses knew that their child was not born to be thrown in the river, but under God's hand to be the emancipator of the whole Israelite nation. Because of this knowledge they knew that God would protect both themselves and the child, and their faith made them unafraid of the king's commandment.

Thus it came to pass, as recorded in Exodus, chapter 2, that, when the child was too old to be longer hidden, they put him in a basket among the reeds of the river. He was rescued by no less a person than the daughter of Pharaoh, who took him home and unwittingly hired the child's mother to nurse him. Thus by the wisdom of God Pharaoh himself nurtured in his own palace him who was to deliver Israel from Pharaoh's bondage. Exod. 2:1-10 Who can read such a story as this without knowing that God moves in mysterious ways His wonders to perform?

According to the Book of Jasher Moses, who was carefully trained in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, became a very worthy general in Pharaoh's armies. Hence through the grace of God he was well trained in the art of commanding large crowds of people and well prepared, even in the natural, to be the shepherd of the hosts of Israel. Seldom do we think, when we are responsible for some insignificant act of faith, that we are making history that will abide forever - simple acts like that of Mary Magdalene, who poured the precious ointment upon the head of Christ. Though rebuked by the unbelieving, she was told by the Saviour that her beautiful act of faith would be told throughout the ages. She anointed Christ for His burial, without which there would be no resurrection either for Him or for us.

In addition to these things I am moved to make this solemn statement. Five times now in the history of Israel has Satan moved to perpetrate genocide against the people of God. Pharaoh in the days of Moses ordered first the midwives and then the people themselves to destroy all the male children by casting them into the river. Exod. 1:15, 22 Then again in the days of the wicked Haman it was ordered that all Jews should be killed. Esther 3:8-15 This wicked design was also averted by the hand of the Lord. Then king Herod, at the time of the birth of Jesus, gave command to destroy all male babies from two years old and under, a decree which was carried out, but failed in its purpose. Once again Adolph Hitler sought to destroy the Jews by his "final solution". Now once again in our day the most devilish device of all has gripped the people. In the last few years alone literally millions of white babies have been destroyed by abortion. Concerning this modern evil I shall not comment except to say that each time such an evil persists, we may look for the hand of the enemy in his effort to prevent the birth of some "proper child" or child of destiny. So it was in the days of Moses and so it was in the days of Jesus, and who can tell what son of God he is hoping to destroy at the present time?

Of this Moses, who grew up in the house of Pharaoh, it is next written: "By faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter; choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt: for he had respect unto the recompense of the reward." Heb. 11:24-26. Such drastic and faithful decisions God's people are often called upon to make, decisions that are to affect us for time and eternity. The rich, young ruler, who came to Jesus desiring to know the way of eternal life, was no doubt desirous of knowing the way, but when our Lord told him to go and sell all that he had and give it to the poor, and to come, take up his cross and follow Him, he went away sad because he had great possessions. How thankful we all should be that Moses took the opposite course, counting the sufferings of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt! If God's people today are willing to lay down their dearest treasures because their cross and their walk with Christ demands it, be assured of this: the Lord will never be your debtor. You will ever find our Saviour's promise to be true.

"There is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for My sake and the gospel's, but he shall receive an hundredfold now in this time, houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions; and in the world to come eternal life." Mark 10:29-30 This promise I have proved to be true. May every reader of these lines have the grace and courage of faith to esteem the sufferings of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt. The reward is very great. Let us therefore have respect unto it lest it be lost.

"By faith he forsook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king: for he endured as seeing Him who is invisible." Those who have taken upon themselves to esteem the reproaches of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt will also find that they are called upon to forsake Egypt in its entirety. By Egypt we mean the world and the realm of sin, the flesh and the devil. The king was wrath indeed, but Moses feared him not, because he endured as seeing Him who is invisible. Decisions of this kind can never be understood by people of the earthly realm, because their eyes are blind to eternal things. Their eyes cannot see the invisible. Their ears are not tuned to the celestial realm. Their souls cannot feel the moving and the inspiration of the Spirit of God. Blessed is the man whose eyes behold "unspeakable things," whose ears have heard the joyful sound, and whose spirit has heard the words of the Spirit of God, "This is the way; walk ye in it." It was Emerson who said, "Our eyes are holden that we cannot see the things that stare us in the face until the hour arrives when the mind is ripened. Then we behold them, and the time when we saw them not is like a dream." I like these strange words, written by Harvey Shahon: "Only a fool walks on the edge of a cliff; only the man who has walked there knows what is behind. Only the man who has walked there can see where no man has been. And where no man has been is where some men must go." Had not Moses had respect unto the recompense of reward and endured as seeing Him who is invisible, we would never have read of that celestial day when he stood with the Son of God on the mount of transfiguration, discussing with Christ the death which "He should accomplish at Jerusalem," a death that was to be the very life of the world. He had respect unto the recompense of reward, and what a reward it turned out to be; and the half has never yet been told.

Through faith he kept the Passover, and the sprinkling of blood, lest He that destroyed the firstborn should touch them." Those Israelites dwelling in Egypt were just as much in danger of the angel of death that was to pass over Egypt that night as any of the Egyptians were, but the blood of the Passover lamb, which was a foreshadowing of the blood of the Lamb of God, was to be sprinkled upon the two door posts and upon the lintel above the door. The promise to them was, "When I see the blood, I will pass over you." Ridiculous, I suppose, to the natural mind, but an act of faith to those who believe, the result being that, when morning broke, not one person was dead in all the houses of Israel, but in the house of every Egyptian the firstborn had been slain. Let those laugh the laugh of unbelief who will, but by faith and faith alone in the blood of Christ are we delivered from death. His is the blood of eternal life and no death can come nigh unto it.

"By faith they passed through the Red Sea as by dry land; which the Egyptians assaying to do were drowned."

JOSHUA

"By faith the walls of Jericho fell down, after they were compassed about seven days." The falling down of the walls of Jericho was by no means the only act of faith attributed to Joshua. His certainty of victory was assured because the captain of the hosts of the Lord had instructed him as to what he must do. Thus the account reads: "And it came to pass, when Joshua was by Jericho, that he lifted up his eyes and looked, and, behold, there stood a man over against him with his sword drawn in his hand: and Joshua went unto him, and said unto him, Art thou for us, or for our adversaries? And he said, Nay, but as captain of the host of the Lord am I now come. And Joshua fell on his face to the earth, and did worship, and said unto him, What saith my lord unto his servant? And the captain of the Lord's host said unto Joshua, Loose thy shoe from off thy foot; for the place whereon thou standest is holy. And Joshua did so." Josh. 5:13-15

Faith cannot operate until God is involved. I have come to believe that faith can never function independently of the command and will of the Lord. Any man among us can do the works of Moses, of Joshua, or of Elijah if the Lord first reveals His will to us as He did to them. How great is our need, therefore, to walk and be led by the Spirit of God!

RAHAB

"By faith the harlot Rahab perished not with them that believed not," We know little more of her other than that she was an harlot. She comes unexpectedly upon the scene, but salvation does not run in human blood; neither is man justified except by faith. He that believeth is justified from all things. Only by grace through faith are we saved. To assure us of this Paul wrote, "Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness. Now to him that worketh is the reward not reckoned of grace, but of debt. But to him that worketh not, but believeth on Him that justifieth the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteousness." Rom. 4:3-5. We should observe that Rahab was not believing for salvation, but she believed God and knew for certain that it was the Lord's intention to take the city. Therefore she chose to take her stand in faith toward God rather than to cast her lot with the unbelieving. Thus was she reckoned righteous. The scarlet thread, which in obedience to instructions she hung in her window, must without doubt foreshadow the blood of Christ. Heb. 9:19,20 would indicate this. "For when Moses had spoken every precept to all the people according to the law, he took the blood of calves and of goats, with water, and scarlet wool, and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book, and all the people, saying, This is the blood of the testament (covenant) which God hath enjoined unto you." That scarlet thread of blood runs from the Garden of Eden to the exalted throne, where the redeemed sing the hymn, "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive honor, and power, and glory, and blessing."

Through faith Rahab perished not with them that believed not. Not only did she not perish; she became one of the progenitors of the Lord Jesus Christ and is one of only five women mentioned in His human genealogy - Rahab, Ruth, Tamar, Bathsheba and Mary.

OTHER HEROES OF FAITH
The apostle, having now enumerated these many who were triumphant through simple faith and realizing that there is far too great a cloud of witnesses to consider them individually, takes time only to name a few more, asking, "What shall I more say? for the time would fail me to tell of Gideon (the man who with three hundred chosen men put to flight the innumerable armies of the Midianites), and of Barak (who defeated Sisera with his nine hundred chariots of iron), and of Samson (whose exploits of faith are too numerous to mention), and of Jephthae (who smote the hosts of the children of Ammon); of David also (who slew Goliath, the enemy of the hosts of the Lord), and Samuel and of the prophets: who through faith subdued kingdoms, (as David did), wrought righteousness (as Abraham), obtained promises (as Hannah did), stopped the mouths of lions (as Daniel), quenched the violence of the sword (as Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego), escaped the edge of the sword (as David and many others), out of weakness were made strong (as Deborah), waxed valiant in fight (as David's mighty men), turned to flight the armies of the aliens (as did Jonathon). Women received their dead raised to life again (as did the widow of Serepta), others were tortured, not accepting deliverance (as was Jeremiah), that they might obtain a better resurrection: and others had trial of cruel mockings and scourings, yea, moreover of bonds and imprisonments; They were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword: they wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented; of whom the world was not worthy. They wandered in deserts, and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth. And these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise; God having reserved some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." Heb. 11:32-40

Considering all the glorious, divine and august things written in this book concerning our "so great salvation", we ask ourselves afresh, "How shall we escape if we neglect it?" In these tremendous days when Almighty God is shaping the governors of the world to come, preparing them as sons of God to reign with Him, since "we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God." And should we be wearied and faint in our minds, let us consider Him who endured such contradiction of sinners against Himself, who is now at the right hand of God exalted, angels, principalities and powers made subject to Him.

The work is solemn; therefore do no trifle.
The task is difficult; therefore do not relax.
The opportunity is brief; therefore do not delay.
The path is narrow; therefore do not wander.
The prize is glorious; therefore do not faint.
CHAPTER ONE
WHERE DWELLEST THOU?

"Again the next day after, John stood and two of his disciples; and, looking upon Jesus as He walked, he saith, Behold the Lamb of God! And the two disciples heard him speak, and they followed Jesus. And Jesus turned and saw them following, and saith unto them, What seek ye? And they said unto Him, Rabbi, where dwellest Thou? He saith unto them, Come and see. They came and saw where He dwelt, and abode with Him that day; for it was about the tenth hour. One of the disciples who heard John speak was Andrew, Simon Peter's brother." John 1:35-40

"It is the glory of God to conceal a thing, but the honor of kings to search out a matter." Prov. 25:2 It has always pleased the Lord to shroud the deep things of God in mystery and to cover them as with a cloud of glory. The worthless things and base are usually the most evident. The lewd and sordid things lie about us on every hand seeking like promiscuous women the attention of every passerby, but the rich and deep treasures God has hidden. Never are they accidentally found by the careless or indifferent, but by those who diligently search for them. "If thou criest after knowledge and liftest up thy voice for understanding; if thou seekest her as silver and searchest for her as for hid treasure, then shalt thou understand the fear of the Lord, and the knowledge of God." Prov. 2:4-5

For years the simple story recorded above has intrigued my mind with its mystery. "Master, where dwellest Thou?" they asked, and He replied, "Come and see." They followed Him and abode with Him that day. But the story ends there. No hint was given of where they went or where they stayed. Some glad day perhaps the story will be told, and, when it is, may God grant that we shall be among the happy throng who hears it that we may learn where He dwells who said, "Foxes have holes and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of man hath not where to lay His head." He had neither house or cave, nest or hole in this world, yet He took these humble men to show them where He dwelt.

There is a place where sons of God may ever dwell all the while they tread this vale of tears below. It is the secret place of the Most High where saints abide beneath the shadow of the Almighty. Psa. 91:1

Centuries ago Moses sought in prayer that he might see God's glory. "And he said, I beseech Thee, shew me Thy glory. And He said, I will make My goodness pass before thee, and I will proclaim the name of the Lord before thee, and will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, and will shew mercy on whom I will shew mercy. And He said, Thou canst not see My face: for there shall no man see Me, and live. And the Lord said, Behold, there is a place by Me, and thou shalt stand upon a rock: And it shall come to pass, while My glory pas-seth by, that I will put thee in a clift of the rock, and I will cover thee with My hand while I pass by." Exod. 33:18-22

Was it such a place as this that Jesus dwelt? Was it here that Andrew, with the other disciple, stood? This we may not know for sure, but it was here that Jesus lived, ever abiding beneath the shadow of the Almighty where earthly moorings have been slipped and men commune face to face with God. "There is a place by Me," said God to Moses. ”There is a secret place of the Most High,” said the Psalmist David. ”I go to prepare a place for you," said Jesus. Paul added his faithful testimony in these words: ”If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit,” and John declared, ”He that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God.” 1 John 4:16

Now the Lord dwelleth not in temples made with hands. No building was ever more carefully prepared than Solomon’s temple. No house was more elegantly beautiful, no temple more costly, and none so filled with the glory of God. Yet ”the Lord dwelleth not in temples made with hands.” He who inhabits heaven as His throne and makes earth a footstool for His feet has said, ”What house will ye build Me or what is the place of My rest?” Acts 7:48-50

God has never delighted Himself in extravagant buildings of brick and stone. Silver and gold and precious stones are never a satisfaction to Him. They gladden the hearts of men and are a source of pride and satisfaction to them, for men know not the truth, neither do they remember that all such things soon pass away. Frail, blind man with his little trowel and wheelbarrow, his brick and mortar and stone, erects a lofty edifice and calls it the house of the Lord, but he hears not the voice of the Lord, saying, ”The Lord dwelleth not in temples made of stone”, nor does he know that man himself is ordained to be the habitation of God through the Spirit.

We have come to the most sublime of all truths. It has been necessary to write about many subjects in the past, all of which have been but a preparation for the things that are yet before us. It is only normal that our hearts should rejoice that the heavens are to be opened or that the mind of Christ should dwell in men. It is right to be glad that the glory of the kingdom of God is soon to shed its healing rays upon the earth, dispelling the mists, dividing the light from the darkness, that a whole world of benighted men may walk in the light of the Lord until under all the great eternal heavens there is order, interdependence, and unity. I would rather be a door-keeper in the house of the Lord on that day than to dwell forever in the tents of wickedness and worldly satisfaction.

Have we in our desire to reign with Him forgotten that ”if we suffer, we shall reign, and if we deny Him, He will deny us”? Have we forgotten the words of Jesus which He spoke, saying, ”Ye that have followed Me, in the regeneration when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of His glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel!” Do we know what it means to follow Jesus? Do we know what it means to drink His cup and be baptized with His baptism? Or are we just proselytes who adhere to certain doctrines and dogmas, but are not disciples at all?

The deeper things of God are reserved for those who follow Him through Gethsemane, stand with Him in Pilate’s hall, bear His cross all along the Via Dolorosa of their lives, die with Him at Calvary, rise with Him from among the dead, ascend with Him into heavenly places, and live with Him far above all principality and power and dominion, not only in this age but in the age to come. These, verily, are the ones who will reign with Him on Mount Zion, bearing in their foreheads the fiery name of the eternal Father.

In my heart I believe that, when those two disciples left Jesus on that memorable day, they knew as few men have ever known where Christ dwelleth both now and in the ages to come. Full well they then knew that the dwelling place of Christ was in the Father, and the dwelling place of the Father was in the Son, but the truth that sealed their lips was this: the Father who dwelt in the Son and the Son who dwelt in the Father were together to make their abode with men, dwelling with them and dwelling in them that God should be their God and they should be His people. It was three years later that Jesus prayed, ”Father, I will that they also, whom Thou hast given Me, be with Me where I am; that they may behold My glory.” John 17:24. Where I am! Not where I will be, but where I am. He was referring neither to heaven nor to earth, but to the abiding place of sons of God. That is where He was, that is where He is, and that is where we are quickly to come.

It has been a joy to many hearts to read this scripture, given with divine inspiration by St. Paul, ”Therefore we are always confident, knowing that, whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord: …We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body and to be present with the Lord.” 2 Cor. 5:6-7

The generally accepted interpretation of this scripture is that, as long as we live here on earth in the body, we are absent from the Lord, but, when we die and go to heaven, we will be absent from the body and present with the Lord. There is usually a surface meaning to every scripture, but always beneath the surface crust a deeper, richer layer of precious truth will be found. Prospectors find the evidence of gold on the surface of the ground, but the gold itself usually lies buried deep in the mine. The interpretation of this beautiful scripture that suggests that we are to look forward to death that we might go to be with the Lord is certainly a most juvenile interpretation. It is the grade one of spiritual understanding.

Well did the apostle Paul know that the vast mass of humanity was "at home" only in the realm of the body. They belonged entirely to an earthly realm where things are visible, audible, and touchable. Their minds seldom mounted higher than things physical, and, when for a few moments they did rise to walk upon a spiritual plane, they were not really at home there, but waited for the moment when they could lapse back to the natural and normal, for that is where they were at home. So, while men are at home in the body, they are always absent from the Lord, absent from the spiritual world of true reality. Heaven is closed to them. Their minds dwell in the realm where men buy and sell, plant and build, marry and are given in marriage. They dwell in a realm of eating and drinking, of finding pleasure for the body, amusing their minds with the silly things of the world, absorbing, listening to, or looking at some fictitious thing that serves only to amuse the natural man, keeping his heart away from the realm of eternal reality.

Paul knew that there was another and better realm entirely opposite to the one we have described. It is the realm where men have gained the victory over the body (the flesh) and its passing world of imagination and delusion. It is the realm where we dwell with the Lord and have our home with Him. We no longer find ourselves at home with the things that amuse ordinary Christians, things, which belong to this life, this earthly realm, this plane of the fleshy body, but we find ourselves at home with Him. Being thus absent from the body, we are present with the Lord, and, being at home with the Lord, we are no longer at home with the body and the passing things that concern its realm.

These are the days of the appearing of the Son of man, and, as it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the days of the Son of man. In those days they were only at home in the things that concerned the physical realm. They ate, they drank, they bought, they sold, they married and gave in marriage until the godly Noah entered into the ark and the flood came and destroyed them, and the whole realm in which they were at home. Likewise also, as it was in the days of Lot, the people ate and drank, bought and sold, planted and builted, but, the same day that Lot went out of Sodom, fire and brimstone fell upon them and took them all away. They were occupied only with the business and the affairs of this world. They were at home in this realm and desired none other. The exact parallel is in the earth today in these, the days of the coming of the Son of man. The craze for building, planting, reaping, marrying, and making money goes on apace both in the world at large and in the professing church. The church system has built more buildings in the last twenty years than in previous centuries, and all the while they do these things, devilish apostasy creeps like a plague over the earth, and the Spirit of the Lord has departed from the threshold of the temple they build.

Amidst the milling masses who are at home in the body God always maintains a witness who is at home with the Lord. Always somewhere he has His Enoch who walks with God, His Noah who is righteous in his generation, His Abraham who is a friend of God, His Moses who speaks face to face with God, His Elijah who defies the prophets of Baal, His Hebrew children who bow not the knee to the Babylonian image, His Daniel who never ceases to pray, His Paul who knows the glories of the third heaven, and His John who was in the Spirit on the day of the Lord. The men of Noah's day were busying themselves with the passing things that belong to the realm of the body. They knew where to go for fun. They knew how to make money. They knew where to go to see violence. They knew where to seek corruption, and I doubt not that they were as full of religion as the people of our day. But there was one lonely man who was never found partaking of their passing show, for he was not at home in a physical world. In spirit his feet roamed the elysian fields of the heavenly realm. While others listened to the lingo jingo of earth, his ear was tuned to a melody sweeter than psalm. As the harsh noises of earth faded from his ear, the eternal voice that calls men from the dead and speaks worlds into being fell with the harmony of heaven upon him, enlightening his soul in things to come. We may well suppose he was looked upon as a mystical old fool. His preaching and his warnings fell upon deaf ears and were not believed. He was not at home among them. He was at home with the Lord. When therefore judgment fell and tribulation poured its floods upon the earth, because he had walked in the instruction of the Lord, he was delivered while others were overthrown. "As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the day of the coming of the Son of man."
There is a bewildering paradox in the world today. Never have we seen better times on the one hand, and never have we seen worse times on the other. While there is more wealth to buy everything the body can crave, there is more unhappiness, quarrels, broken homes, broken hearts, broken bodies, half-orphaned children, violence and discontent than the world has ever known. It is infallibly true that, while men are at home in the body, they are absent from the Lord.

When we speak of the days of Noah, we usually think of the wickedness of the earth, but let us not forget that amid all the ungodliness of that day there was also a righteous man. So also in the days of the coming of the Son of man there will be found a righteous company, a manchild, who will be caught up to God's throne, one who like Noah will be at home with the Lord. It is from such that earth's deliverance will come. Every dispensation is of great importance, and men and women should always hold the things of God in reverence, but it should be evident to us all that there never was a more important hour than now. If runners fall out of the race at the beginning, that is bad enough, but if they fall out after they have borne the burden and heat of the day only a few yards from the finish line and glorious prize, that is indeed a tragedy. Paul, the wise and good apostle, once said, "They that run in a race run all (all run), but one receiveth the prize; so run that ye may attain." Millions have started in the race; thousands are still running, but there are few who are running to win. It was the same Paul who said, "I keep my body under and bring it into subjection, lest, after I have preached to others. I myself should be a castaway." He knew only too well how easy it was to be at home in the body, and thus be out of fellowship with the Lord or absent from the Lord. Therefore he took steps to bring the body into subjection to the Spirit so that the Spirit always had the mastery. "I run the race with determination," he said, "I am no shadow boxer, I really fight! I am my body's sternest master, for fear that when I have preached to others, I should myself be disqualified." 1 Cor. 9:27 (Phillips translation)

The corruptible body is the sternest enemy of the Spirit and it must be brought into complete subjection to the Spirit before we will ever find ourselves at home with the Lord. The physical, corruptible body of flesh fills us with passions and desires and all manner of fears, and leads us into much foolishness. It is truth that with the body as our master we can never concentrate on any spiritual thing for long, for it will crowd into our thoughts, filling us with passions and desires. All wars come directly or indirectly from the pursuit of wealth, and as wealth can only be bestowed upon the body, the body therefore is the cause of all the wars of history, even as the apostle James so aptly stated. "From whence come wars and fighting among you? Come they not from your lusts which war in your members? Ye lust and have not; ye kill and desire to have and cannot obtain." Jas. 4:1-2 The carnal mind is the mind motivated by the carnal, which is the flesh or the body. The spiritual mind is the mind that is motivated by the Spirit of God. That is the truth, pure and simple. For centuries preachers have preached sermons on the carnal mind, always failing to see just what it was or to identify it. The carnal mind is the mind that seeks only to satisfy the whims and fancies of the physical body of corruptible flesh. It is therefore the eternal enemy of the Spirit, for the flesh seeks the corruptible and passing things, but the Spirit longs for the incorruptible and the eternal. From this it is plain for any man to see that, if we live after the flesh, we will die, but, if we through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body (the flesh), we shall live.

It is not possible to have pure wisdom or pure knowledge as long as we are at home in the body, for it will always drag our minds away into the realm of the unreal, filling us with some physical lust, some desire for food, or perhaps clouding our minds with sleepiness. It was the flesh that caused the disciples to fall asleep in that most tryusting of all hours in Gethsemane. Even though the Lord had exhorted them to watch and pray, He came back from His lonely vigil of agony to find them sleeping. And, when He woke them, He asked, "Could ye not watch with Me one hour? The spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak." How many million times has this same tragic scene been repeated? The Spirit has called us to watching, but the flesh has dragged our souls away to some fruitless and barren field for the sake of its own physical comfort.

We come nearest to Christ and all eternal things in those hours when we can leave the body behind and have it in complete subjection to the Spirit. If we are ever to gain the mind of Christ and all the pure wisdom that belongs to Him, we must cease from intercourse with the corruptible body of flesh that we be no longer defiled by its nature. Must we of necessity die to accomplish this? By no means, for when at last the worthlessness of the flesh and the entire physical realm is revealed to us, we will then be able to follow the instruction of the Holy Spirit as He said through Paul, "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service, and be not conformed to the world, but be transformed by the renewing of the mind." Romans 12:1-2 It is right here that one passes from the carnal mind to the mind of Christ. Never allow anyone to deceive you into thinking that the mind of Christ can be attained by going to a church altar or by asking someone to lay hands on you for prayer. There must come a time of personal revelation, a time of crucifixion, a time of reckoning ourselves dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God. Until we can see by the Holy Spirit the worthlessness of all things corruptible, we cannot hope to attain to a true life in the Spirit, for, if we live after the flesh (the body), we shall die; but, if we through the Spirit do mortify (kill, crucify) the deeds of the body, we shall live.

It would do us all a world of good to take an inventory to see how many unnecessary pursuits fill our lives every day. If our thought life could be flashed upon a screen at the end of a twenty-four hour day, I fear we would be both surprised and disturbed to see how much time we wasted in thinking of the things that concern a physical, passing realm, but how little time we spent in the glory realm of the mind of Christ. Many of those who make great claims of power and sonship would see how readily, easily, and happily they forsook the place of prayer to spend idle hours watching scenes of earth's vanity and fiction, filling their minds with corruption and violence and things that belong to the lower nature. Yes, indeed, many would be ashamed, if they could watch a film of their day, to see how Christ and all eternal things were shoved quickly and unceremoniously into the scullery while the corrupt and earthly graced the parlor of their homes and the sanctuary of their lives. Where our treasure is, there will our hearts be also. Being at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord. It is not the hours we spend in a church building that count, though we go there thrice every day. The question is, how often are the doors of the inner sanctuary of our heart opened to the gentle knocking of the Son of God as with whispered voice He says, "If you will open the door, I will come in and sup with you and fellowship with you and reveal Myself unto you, and ye shall be the sons and daughters of the Most High." That is what counts, and that is where victory and sonship is found. That gentle knocking may come at midnight or midday. It may come at two or three o'clock in the morning, but if we will cast off the laziness and sleepiness of the body and rise and open the door, He will come in, bringing the fragrance of heaven into the inner sanctuary of our heart, and after that sweet presence there is no room to spare for the base, the worldly, and the profane. But if our mind has become so preoccupied with the silly things and nonsense of the world that we cannot hear the sweet cadence of His voice, let us not deceive ourselves with claims of spirituality, much less claims of sonship and of the mind of Christ. Let us compare the time we spend in His presence opening our hearts to the realities of the eternal realm with the fruitless hours that are spent indulging in things that add neither jot nor tittle to our communion with God, and we will then see the reason for our stalemate in spiritual growth and manifestation. While we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord, and when perchance for a moment such an one enters into God's presence, because he is not really at home there, he immediately lapses back into the foolish things that belong to an unregenerate world, because that is where he is at home.

The dwelling place of a son of God is in the Father and the dwelling place of the Father is in the sons. The natural mind cannot understand such a truth as this, for it has become so bogged down with its human ways of looking at things that it discards everything that is beyond the realm of its petty comprehension. How the Father can dwell in the Son and the Son can dwell in the Father the wisest man on earth cannot explain, but to an understanding born of revelation from above it is not only possible, but that true sonship could be anything else is impossible.

The night of the last supper was one of the most momentous hours of all history. The washing of the disciples' feet, the foretelling of the betrayal, and the forewarning of Peter's denial had caused such consternation within the hearts of the disciples that even the strengthening words, "Let not your hearts be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in Me", could scarce allay their fears. Perhaps our minds have been so occupied with the events, which filled that night that we have forgotten the things that Jesus said. At the moment Judas Iscariot departed from their midst, Jesus uttered this most significant statement: "Now is the Son of man glorified and God is glorified in Him. If God be glorified in Him, God shall also glorify Him (the Son) in Himself, and shall straightway glorify Him." John 13:31-32 I never enjoy trying to see pictures where no picture exists, but it is plain for us all to see that, as long as the Judas nature is present, the glory of God's purpose is never revealed. Judas is not only the son of perdition, but he is also a son of the flesh. His true nature was portrayed one night in the house of Simon the leper when the woman poured the precious ointment upon the head of Christ. "Why was not this ointment sold for three hundred pence and the money given to the poor," he asked, but he was not thinking of the poor. He was thinking of himself, for the story says, "Not that he cared for the poor, but because he was a thief and had the bag." The money he stole from the bag was squirreled away for the satisfaction of his own flesh at a later day. How often have we seen carnal men use these seemingly lofty ideals for their own ends, not that they really care for the orphans, the widows, the heathen or the poor, but because they have found a gold mine in the bag. When the Judas nature goes out the door of our lives and our spirits are purged from the things that belong to the carnal mind, then God is glorified in Christ and Christ is glorified in us and He will straightway glorify us. As long as the heart is more concerned with the earth and the fleeting pleasures of the bag than with the riches of God in Christ, we can never hope to dwell in Him. But when all earth's voices become foreign to our ears, when all her harmonies become a discord, all her riches, poverty, and her sweet perfumes, a stench, then it is that we find ourselves at home with the Lord and He is glorified in us.

"Now is the Son of man glorified, and God is glorified in Him. If God be glorified in Him (the Son), He shall glorify Him (the Son) in Himself, and shall straightway glorify Him." The greatest truths of God are always simply stated and easily understood by those who love to walk the fields of God and who are at home with the Lord. But do not be deceived, for, though God's truths are clearly seen by all who, like Abraham, walk in friendship with God, sitting with Him in heavenly places, they are veiled to those Christians who, like righteous Lot, walk after the flesh, sitting in the very gates of Sodom. It is not where we dwell in the natural that counts, but where our spirit dwells.

Two men looked through prison bars.
One saw mud; the other saw stars.

Many a sermon has been preached on glorification, and I suppose most of them have missed the mark, but in the above text the Lord Jesus Christ gave us the eternal truth about our glorification: "If God be glorified in Him, God shall glorify Him in Himself." The moment God is given the throne of our life and is glorified in His sons, at that very moment, straightway, we begin to dwell in God and glorification begins its work within us. The world of believers is far too willing to proclaim with the lips, "I surrender all." How readily Christians raise their hands in seeming consecration to loudly sing, "All to Jesus I surrender," or "Take my silver and my gold. Not a mite do I withhold." But even while they sing, they are hiding some Babylonish garment in the tent of their lives, together with the silver and gold of the Lord's tithes, calming their consciences meanwhile by persuading themselves that tithing belongs to a past age. I do not know how people who by faith are the children of Abraham can refuse to do what Abraham did.

There is a vast need of bitter and heartfelt repentance among the people who name the name of the Lord. But it will never come while we are here and there, listening to the sermons of preachers who have themselves forsaken the right way of the Lord, running greedily in the error of Balaam for gain. They have lost all sense of true values, thinking that gain is godliness. "From such turn away." We will not find our dwelling place in God amid the excitement and noise of a big meeting or listening to all manner of fantastic oratory, stock sermons, stock subjects and stock jokes, for those who seek Him thus are depending not on God to reveal Himself to them, but they are leaning on the arm of human flesh and human wisdom, hoping that by some chance they will miraculously receive a crumb from the Lord's table.

In solemn truth we may search the Bible through or the world over and we will not find a man who has ever attained any great glory in God unless he attained it in the secret of God's presence where the world with all her distracting influence was shut away. Those who walk with God as Enoch did know no man after the flesh. They are not concerned with the pedigree of men. They care not who they are, what their title is, where they came from, or what their standing is. They have one desire. They must see Christ, and they want no part in anything or with anybody who dims the glory of that vision.

Not Athen's blooms, but those of Calvary
And Gethsemane bring the victory
That causes prodigals for home to pine,
And turn their backs for aye on husks of swine.
It is not polished sermons, shining pews and beautiful choirs we need, but if God is glorified in a man, He will straightway glorify that man in Himself.

Have you ever wondered why it is that the Lord will send Elijah before the great and notable day of the Lord? It is because the conditions of Elijah's day will re-exist in our day, and verily they do exist already, for many who speak in the name of the Lord have never heard from the Lord, and those who prophesy in the name of the Lord prophesy out of their own heads. Seldom, indeed, it is that aught they say ever comes to pass. There is in existence today a national and international form of worship more sordid than the worship of Baal in that, though it draws nigh to Christ with its lips, its heart is far from Him. It prophesies, but God has not spoken. It prays, but God does not hear. It leaps on the altar, but the fire of God is not present. But Elijah, the man who dwelt in God, is coming and before the dreadful fire of his God the system of Babylon will fall. See Rev. 11:3-5. At the last gathering of Christ with His disciples before His crucifixion, He told them many things they did not understand. "Whither I go," He said, "thou canst not follow Me now, but thou shalt follow Me afterwards." John 13:36. Peter replied, "Why cannot I follow Thee now? I will lay down my life for Thy sake." One of the saddest mistakes a Christian can make is to overestimate his consecration to God only to find in a time of testing that he did not nearly measure up to what he hoped and professed. I for one thoroughly believe that Peter meant exactly what he said. He was perfectly willing to lay down his life for Christ. Death would not have daunted him in the least if the occasion had arisen. Indeed, in great love and daring he drew his sword when his Lord was in danger, ready, single-handedly to defend Him against a multitude with swords and staves. Strangely enough he was willing to let the world know at that moment that he was a disciple and follower of Christ. There is, however, a difference between the natural daring that inspires men to lay down their lives for a cause and the depths of a spiritual experience of the love of God that causes them to follow Him where other men cannot go. "Whither I go, thou canst not follow Me now." Jesus knew only too well that the zeal and fire that would cause Peter to draw his sword to fight to his last drop of blood was also the zeal that would droop and faint in the furnace of simple confession, causing him to curse and swear, saying, "I tell you I know not the man", and later still in the wilderness of patient endurance his zeal again faltered till he said, "I go a-fishing".

"Whither I go, thou canst not follow Me now," said Jesus. He was going into God, back to the realm from which He came. Even three years of being with Him night and day had not prepared the disciples to follow Him into that sacred realm. Seeing miracles could not suffice for spiritual experience. Performing miracles themselves had not prepared them to follow Him there. Even the mount of transfiguration had not wrought the change in them, for they were still not ready to follow Him where He was going.

Now he that dwells in love dwells in God and God dwells in him. It was not for lack of zeal that the disciples could not follow Christ in this last step into God, for they had zeal and to spare, but what they lacked was the love of God. I have come to hate the expression we so often hear among Christians as they exhort one another thus: "Show love, brother!" Or "manifest love!" and a dozen other such expressions. We might as well try to take blood out of a stone as to try to manifest the love of God out of a heart where He does not dwell. It is impossible to manifest love where love is not, and it is impossible to fail to manifest love where love is. Love is not something like ill-will or a pleasant nature that we can manifest or not manifest. Love is God. He that dwells in God dwells in love and he who dwells in love dwells in God. The love of God is not something we try to show as we would a diamond ring. Love is not even what we are. Love is what God is, and as He dwells in us, that is what we are. It is as impossible to have God without love as it is to have fire without heat. It cannot be. As heat and light are the manifestations of fire, so the light of love is the manifestation of the indwelling Christ.

Long centuries ago three broken-hearted widows stood weeping in the land of Moab. To Ruth, Naomi, and Oprah it seemed the sun of hope had set forever behind the dark horizon of despair. To Naomi there was naught to do but leave her two daughters-in-law in Moab where they belonged while she sadly retraced her steps to the land of Israel. So "she kissed them: and they lifted up their voice and wept. And they said unto her, Surely we will return with thee unto thy people. And Naomi said, Turn again, my daughters; why will ye go with me? Are there yet any more sons in my womb, that they may be your husbands? And they lifted up their voice and wept again, and Oprah kissed her mother-in-law; but Ruth clave unto her. And Ruth said, Entreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee; for whither thou goest, I will go. Where thou lodgest, I will lodge; Thy people shall be my people, thy God, my God; where thou diest, I will die, and there will I be buried: The Lord do so to me and more also if aught but death part thee and me. So they went until they came to..."
Bethlehem." Ruth 1:10-19. I do not see much difference between the words of Ruth and the words of Peter, but Ruth was ready to follow from the love of God that burned within. Peter was not yet ready to follow, but Jesus said, "Thou shalt follow Me afterwards."

The true church is the habitation of God. Eph. 2:22 It is God's holy temple, built of living stones. Every stone is an individual person in whom God dwells, and every stone an individual person who dwells in God. This and this alone is the true church, the true body of Christ. The visible systems, everywhere misnamed the church, are not the true church at all. Man sees a visible system and calls it the church, but God dwells in the peaceful habitation of the human heart that has crowned Him King. His love is shed abroad in them because He dwells in them and they dwell in Him.

The words of Christ to Peter, "Whither I go thou canst not follow Me now," could be re-said to millions of zealous believers today who in their zeal for a cause are as zealous for the cause of Christ as politicians are zealous for the cause of a state. But it is not zeal for the cause of Christ that is needed, for, though the zeal of His house has eaten us up, Christ may still be but an infant in the manager of our hearts. Zeal neither brings Christ to dwell in us nor causes us to dwell in Him. When will men stop seeking things and start seeking the Lord? What good is a spiritual gift if the Giver is absent? What value is wisdom apart from the Giver of all wisdom? Adam and Eve sought to know good and evil by wisdom apart from God, but had they sought to have their lives filled with Him, wisdom would have dwelt in them, and no knowledge would have been withheld from them. If the people of God today would cease from their fruitless search for the spectacular and miraculous in religion, turning a deaf ear to the advertising of unscrupulous men who love to promote themselves, if they would forget about physical healings, spiritual gifts and revivals and begin to turn the knob of their prayer closet door, seeking not that God would do this or that, but seeking to enter into harmony with the mind of Him who worketh all things according to the counsel of His will, then all the world would know that God dwelt in them and they in Him. God does not do what we ask Him to do. He does what we ask Him according to His will. Let us cease then from seeking things. Let us seek God that He might fashion our lives according to His eternal wisdom.

Well did the Saviour know that more than zeal was needed in Peter. He needed the indwelling Christ and the love that flowed like a river from His presence. Peter's glittering human zeal would fade before morning, leaving him to thrice deny that he even knew who Jesus was. It was not zeal that Jesus required when by the shore of the lake He thrice repeated the question, "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou Me?" And Peter, calling to mind his thrice repeated denial, was grieved that Jesus said to him the third time, "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou Me?" "Lord," he replied, "Thou knowest all things. Thou knowest that I love Thee." We cannot hope for much more than zeal in Simon, son of Jonas. The indwelling Christ alone can make him Simon, the son of God, for the love of God is made perfect in all in whom He dwells.

King David of Israel was one of the most remarkable characters the world has ever known. Deep beneath the rugged exterior of his life was a saintly man after God's own heart. He had found it necessary to leave behind the shallow emptiness of the Jewish worship of his day while other men by the thousands offered their many sacrifices and performed their daily rituals with little or no growth in God. David could no longer enter into their forms and ceremonies. His spirit had reached far beyond the dispensation of law in which he lived to lay hold of an experience in God reserved for an age yet unborn. Perhaps it was as he watched the endless procession of people on the way to the sacrifice or saw the smoke of their offerings ascend from within the tabernacle walls that he looked up to God with tear-stained face and said, "Thou desirest not sacrifice, else would I give it: Thou delightest not in burnt offerings. The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit; a broken and a contrite heart, 0 God, Thou wilt not despise." Psa. 51:16-17

It was David who sang of the secret place of the Most High where men should abide under the shadow of the Almighty. Psa. 91 There is no value in trying to imagine that we dwell there. We cannot get there by imagination or resolve. We come there by continually seeking to Hue in His presence, listen to His voice, and love His will. Our heart no longer cries for the spectacular things that amuse the multitude in religious realms, but it forever breathes out the secret longing of the Holy Spirit within, "Whither Thou goest, I will go; where Thou lodgest, I will lodge: Thy people shall be my people and Thy God, my God." The attitude of heart of all who would dwell in His presence is magnificently stated in the meditation of Solomon; "By night upon my bed I sought Him whom my soul loveth: I sought Him, but I found Him not. I will arise now and go through the city in the streets, and in the broad ways will I seek him whom my soul loveth. I sought Him and I found Him not. The watchman that goeth about the city found me: to whom I said, "Saw ye Him whom my soul loveth?" It was but a little that I passed from them, but I found Him whom my soul loveth." S.O.S. 3:1-4 Those who thus seek God must seek Him for themselves, for no one is going to know whom we seek or tell us where we will find Him - not even the watchman, for we must pass beyond them also. But all who seek shall surely find, and to those who knock the door shall be opened.

Oh, what peace we often forfeit because we seek peace instead of seeking the Prince of Peace! What poverty we often endure because we seek riches instead of seeking Him! What pain and sickness men suffer because they seek healing instead of seeking the fountain of life! When will we ever learn the secret of these words: "For of Him are ye in Christ Jesus, whom God hath made unto us wisdom and righteousness, sanctification and redemption." Everything, my friend, is in Jesus, and Jesus is everything.

Every need His hand supplying, Every good in Him I see; On His strength divine relying He is all in all to me.

Dwelling in God was the theme of Christ's teaching the night of His betrayal. John chapters 13 to 17 "If I wash thee not thou hast no part in Me." John 13:8 The breaking of bread taught them to partake of Him. In His conversation with Philip He asked, "Believeth thou that I am in the Father and the Father in Me? The words that I speak unto you I speak not of Myself, but the Father that dwelleth in Me, He doeth the works." John 14:10 He taught them of the coming of Holy Spirit, of whom He said, "I will pray the Father and He will give you another comforter that He may abide with you forever, even the Spirit of truth whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth Him not, neither knoweth Him, but ye know Him, for He dwelleth with you and shall be in you." Verse 17 Then He taught them of the vine and the branches, saying, "Abide in Me and I in you; As the branch cannot bear fruit except it abide in the vine, no more can ye except ye abide in Me." John 15:4 The whole of chapter 16 was spoken to teach the mighty illumination that comes by the indwelling Holy Ghost, who will guide us into all truth, taking the things of God and showing them unto us and revealing things to come. But the grand climax came in His closing prayer. Chapter 17 "That they may be one, as Thou, Father, art in Me and I in Thee, that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

It is not enough for us to know about these truths and to make them part of our theology. The "D Day" and the "H Hour" has come when they must become our experience, and we must possess them. The blessed Christ who has been viewed historically must be formed within us. We poor mortals can never live the life He lived, so the grace of God has decreed that He should dwell within us and we should dwell in Him. We are to become here and now the habitation of God through the Spirit. For thus saith the Lord, "I will dwell in them and walk in them and I shall be their God and they shall be My people." 2 Cor. 6:16 That is where God dwells. The habitation of Almighty God is in His people, dwelling in them and walking in them, being their God and they being His people. As the dwelling place of God is in His people, so the dwelling place of His people is in their God. It was of this that David sang in the words of this Psalm: "Because thou hast made the Lord which is my refuge, even the Most High, thy habitation, there shall no evil befall thee, neither shall any plague come nigh thy dwelling." 2 Cor. 6:16 Of a certainty I know that the dead theology of yesteryear can become living and real today. You say, "I always knew that God dwelt in His people." Yes, of course you did. But did you live as though you knew it? Did you talk as though you knew it? Did you act as though you knew it? Did you commune with Him as though you knew it? Or do you rise each morning to rush about your daily tasks neglectful of prayer, devoid of meditation, heedless of His word, without seeking guidance, intent only on business and the affairs of this passing age? God cannot abide in us while we are thus.

Of a truth I know that men and women in any walk of life can begin to practice the very presence of Christ. By this I mean that we can live as Jesus lived, who did always those things that pleased the Father. He did not do the things He thought would be pleasing to God. He pleased the Father by doing only the things, which the Spirit of the Father instructed Him to do. In like manner we also can follow His steps, doing only those things, which are given us of the Father, that sonship may begin to manifest itself within us. If we will cease trying to puzzle our way out of our problems by trusting in human wisdom, and instead ask God for His wisdom, He will give us His wisdom, and thus shall the mind of Christ begin to dwell in us and operate in us. If God dwells in His people, then we must begin to live with that knowledge foremost in our hearts, depending no more on our old selves. Where grace is needed for any trial, we must steadfastly draw upon His grace. Where patience is needed, it must flow forth from Him, for patience and longsuffering are the fruits of His Spirit within. Where life and health are needed, we must draw upon the life and power of the resurrection, which He is, and which through Him dwells within us, that the Spirit of Him who raised Jesus from the dead should quicken our mortal body by His Spirit that dwelleth in us. We must know that Christ Himself from His riches in glory is the supplier of all our need. Apart from Him we are worthy of nothing. With Him we are the possessor of all things. Seek His will while crucifying your own. Let His mind dwell in you while casting out your own. Recognize His hand in all the affairs of your life. It is in all such who practice His presence that Christ lives and moves and has His being, and all such live and move and have their being in Him.

Centuries ago King Solomon in his search for God sighed out these plaintive words: "Tell me, Oh thou whom my soul loveth, where thou feedest, where thou makest thy flock to rest at noon." S.O.S. 1:7 Then like echoes from the distant mountains the answer falls. "I will dwell in them and walk in them, and I will be their God and they shall be My people."

"And I heard a voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and He shall dwell with them, and they shall be His people, and God Himself shall be with them and be their God." Rev. 21:3

CHAPTER TWO
THE PASSING AND THE PERMANENT

In our journey from the natural to the spiritual realm we are continually beset with dangers and pitfalls. For every gain we make it seems there can be many losses, and every triumph can bring its defeats. It is for these reasons that it may be very profitable for us to consider things as they are, and to solicit God's help that we might see ourselves as He sees us. We cannot repeat too often the great fundamental fact that every fresh degree of light, which shines upon our pathway must of necessity, bring a corresponding repentance. If you will pause long enough to meditate on the following statement, you will likely decide it is true: "Things that seemed spiritual in our yesterdays seem to be only natural in our today's and will seem carnal in our tomorrows." If that is not our testimony, then we may well begin to fear whether we are making any real progress in God at all. But if our testimony should prove opposite to this, so that things which were carnal in our yesterdays are accepted as part of our spiritual life today, then we are in a bad way indeed, for, if I build again the things that I destroyed, I make myself a transgressor.

It would be profitable here to go over a few of the warnings that are constantly repeated in the word of the Lord. Always remember that the Bible is God's word. Every word of it was given by revelation. Not only thoughts were inspired of God, but the words as well. All Scripture is given by inspiration of God and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works. 2 Tim. 3:16 The scriptures are able to make you wise unto salvation through faith, which is in Christ Jesus. Verse 15

Notice the testimony of the scripture to "word" inspiration. "The Spirit of the Lord spake by me and His word was in my tongue." 2 Sam. 23:2. "Hear, oh heavens, and give ear, oh earth, for the Lord hath spoken." Isa. 1:3

"Behold I have put my words in thy mouth." Jer. 1:9

"Thou shalt speak my words unto them". Eze. 2:7 and 3:4

"David himself said by the Holy Ghost" Mark 12:36

While I could multiply such passages as these, it is perhaps unnecessary, yet for your study you might refer to such other passages as follows: John 19:24, Matt. 2:5, Matt. 5:18, John 10:35, Luke 24:25, 44. The references of Jesus to the scriptures were always calculated to give the utmost confidence and trust, saying, "Ye search the scriptures because in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of Me."
And again, that heaven and earth should pass away but the word of the Lord would not pass away, neither would a jot or tittle fail until all was fulfilled.

The Bible abounds on every hand with useful and practical instructions for our guidance in every day life. It covers every phase of life from birth to immortality. It uncovers every sin and work of the flesh. It shows in detail the purpose of God for all time. It unfolds the paths of righteousness and truth to all who will walk in them. By taking heed to it young men cleanse their ways. It displays the glories that await those who walk in righteousness and the dire peril of those who walk in evil. Psalm 119 is the longest chapter in the Bible containing one hundred seventy-six verses. Only three of these verses (121, 122 and 132) fail to mention the word of God by calling it judgments, statutes, precepts, testimonies, word, or some kindred name. "The judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether, more to be desired than gold, yea, than much fine gold; sweeter also than honey and the honeycomb, moreover by them is thy servant warned; and in keeping of them is great reward." Psa. 119:9-11

Now to come back to our original thought - to go over the oft repeated warnings contained in the word of God. "Let us therefore fear lest a promise being left us of entering into His rest, any of you should seem to come short of it". Heb. 4:1 There is always a tendency for God's people to grow weary with the journey and fail to enter into the rest God has promised us. We sometimes console ourselves and excuse our apathy by saying we should not get over anxious about ourselves and get ahead of God. Of course, we should not get ahead of God. We will have a difficult time doing that, for we cannot enter into anything He has not revealed to us. The moment, however, He reveals a truth, an experience, or a height to us, it is time to strip for the race and get moving. Paul did not calm the people by telling them not to get over anxious. He told them to fear lest they miss it.

I have been amazed of late at the number of instructions given in the word of God about this very thing. Let us listen to a few of them. "Let us there fear lest a promise being left us of entering into His rest, any of you should seem to come short of it." Heb. 4:1 "Let us labor, therefore, to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief." Heb. 4:11 "They that run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize. So run that ye may attain." Cor. 9:24-26 "Run with patience the race that is set before us." Heb. 12:1 "I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God." Phil. 3:12, 16 "Ye did run well; who did hinder you?" Gal. 5:7 "Take heed lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God."

None of these warnings give us any reason to rest on our oars. Labor is labor wherever you find it, and there is always toil and hard work connected with it, often disappointment and work that has to be done several times over. There are always those who would like to "sit at ease in Zion," but the path of the will of God lies by the way of Gethsemane and Golgotha, both being places of awful travail that will cost us all far more than we possess. I know of a truth that there will be no reward for those who do not labor to enter in. The spirit of ease that has settled over us will have to be dispelled or the losses will be great and irretrievable. Jesus taught us to "strive to enter in at the gate," for, He said, the gate is straight and the way narrow and only few would find it. I was thinking of the words of the Greek poet who wrote:

Vice there is in abundance,
And easy to find,
For the way to it is smooth,
And lies very near.
But before the Temple of Virtue,
The immortal gods have placed Labor.
And the way to it is long and steep
And at the commencement rough,
But once the traveler has reached the summit, it is easy,
However difficult it was at first.

Everything that is worthy and valuable is filled with labor, and the road to it always lies through the mountains of difficulty and never through the plains of ease. We may wish we could rest, and indeed we shall at last, but before rest comes work and travail, for we must labor to enter into His rest.
The apostle Paul on one momentous occasion was carried by the Spirit into the third heaven. God in sovereignty reached down and picked him up (whether in the body or out of it he did not know) and carried him into the celestial realm, the third heaven. He never did repeat any of the things he saw there, but so great and glorious were the visions of that holy hour that he found it unlawful to utter its secrets to ordinary men, and he died without disclosing them to anyone. His vision in the Spirit must have at least equaled the glories of the mount of transfiguration, which Peter briefly describes as the power and coming of Christ, which they saw when they were with Him in the holy mount. But because Paul had gone into that holy of holies through the sovereignty of God, he was not allowed to remain there, but was brought back to his former condition. He never could forget the glories he had seen. Therefore, to attain them as an eternal prize, he spent the rest of his earthly life pressing toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus; running that he might attain; fighting not as those that beat the air; keeping his body (flesh) under and bringing it into subjection, wrestling flesh and blood and principalities and powers; and finally, having fought a good fight, there was laid up for him a crown of righteousness, and not for him only, but for all those who love the appearing of Christ.

It seems to me that our journey to the celestial could be more accurately described as a run rather than a walk. "So run that ye may attain," Paul says, and again, "Let us run with patience the race that is set before us." Running is never an easy matter. It takes every ounce of energy that we possess. Those who engage in this sport strip off every possible article of clothing, and carry nothing with them. There is no idleness or sitting at ease. They are out to win. Runners in this life obtain only a corruptible crown, but runners of the race we speak of obtain an incorruptible crown. Here, only one receives the prize, but there many may receive it.

Many years ago, when I was a child, a number of long distance runners ran a race from San Francisco to New York. They were running thirty and forty miles a day. I still remember following the newspapers every day for the report on their progress. They encountered many difficulties along the way. Some dropped out almost every day. Some could not stand the pace; others developed sore feet. The runners were constantly bothered by motorists who pulled alongside and tried to question them as they ran. About the half way mark one runner was standing out above all the others. He was a Finlander, whose name was Gavuzzi. By the time they had reached the three-quarter mark, it seemed there was no chance of anyone’s overtaking him. I can still remember the pictures of his unshaven face and the appearance of his sinewy body. But just about here trouble began to overtake him. He developed severe toothache and after several more days he was forced to drop out, and another who was not so swift but had more endurance took the prize. Running, you see, is not just a matter of walking up to the grandstand to get your prize. It is a thing that requires stripping, patience, endurance, as well as speed.

Paul spoke of the Galatians who did run well for a time but were hindered. That is ever our trouble. We do very well for a time, but the cares of this age and the deceitfulness of riches and the desire for other things enter in and choke us, and we become unfruitful and drop out of the race altogether. Let us labor to enter into rest. Let us strive to enter the straight gate. Let us run that we may receive the prize. Let us fight, not as those who beat the air. Let us wrestle, not merely as those who wrestle flesh and blood. Let us press toward the mark, straining every nerve. Let us keep our body under and bring it into subjection, lest, after having preached and believed wonderful things, we should ourselves be discarded. Let us give diligence to make our calling and election sure. Let us add to our faith virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, and godliness, for he that lacketh these things is blind and cannot see afar off. But he that possesses them shall have an abundant entrance into the kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

One day a lawyer came to Jesus asking him, "Which is the greatest commandment in the law?" Jesus replied, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul and with all thy mind; this is the first and greatest commandment." One of the scribes, having heard this same answer on another occasion, said, "Well, master, thou hast said the truth: for there is one God, and there is none other but He, and to love Him with all the heart, and with all the understanding, and with all the soul, and with all the strength, and to love his neighbor as himself, is more than all whole burnt offering and sacrifices." And Jesus, perceiving that he had answered discreetly, said unto him, "Thou art not far from the kingdom of God."
The point I want to make is just this: To love God with all the heart and soul and mind is the fulfilling of all the law and will of God. This is better than burnt offerings or any sacrifice. This is indeed the fulfilling of all the law and the prophets. It is the foundation of the kingdom, the beginning of all righteousness, and the end of all good judgment and equity. It is the thing that God requires above all else. But there is another god that men love. That god is money, the god of this present age. To love him is not the foundation of the kingdom, but rather the root of all evil. Money is the thing that rules this age. We cannot buy the necessities of life without it, and there is no lust of the flesh nor desire of the eyes, ears, or taste, that cannot be obtained by those who possess it. It is connected with every war in history and with every dive and brothel in the world. For the love of this god men miss the kingdom. The rich young ruler wanted to be perfect, but went away sadly when he saw it would require the sale of his earthly possessions. And Jesus, feeling just as sad, saw him go, and said, "It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom." Of course it is hard for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven, because rich men and poor alike become worshippers of the god of this age, and we cannot serve God and Mammon. It is impossible to serve two masters. We are bound to love one more than the other. We are bound to cling to one and despise the other. Mammon was the Syrian god of riches. He is not only the Syrian god of riches but he has become the god of the whole world, the god of this whole age, and to love him is the root of all evil.

You do not have to be a rich man to love money. Poor men can love it, too. They often love it and strive for it even more than rich men. We do not have to be sinners to love money. Christians love it as much as others. An elder, a deacon, or a minister can be a lover of money and perform his ministry for filthy lucre's sake. He becomes a worshipper of the god of this age. They that love him finally err from the truth and pierce themselves through with many sorrows.

Jesus said that riches were deceitful. "The deceitfulness of riches chokes the word." He told us to "beware of covetous-ness". He said it was hard for a rich man to enter the kingdom. Paul warned Timothy not to trust in uncertain riches. Indeed, they are uncertain, for, as Solomon said, they make themselves wings and fly away. He told us that to covet money caused us to err from the truth, and to love money was the very root of all the evil in the age.

Why is the love of money the root of all evil? This is a very good question and it should be answered. Let me ask another question. What can you buy with money? Am I not right in saying that money can buy only temporal things for the body and can buy nothing for the soul or the spirit? Can you think of any eternal thing that can be purchased with money? Or on the other hand can you think of any temporal thing that money cannot buy? All things that can be lavished on the flesh can be purchased with money, but not one thing that belongs to the spirit can be obtained by money. When the sorcerer offered Peter money for a spiritual gift, Peter replied, "Your money perish with you, for you have thought the gift of God could be purchased with money." We must conclude then that spiritual things such as love, wisdom, knowledge, kindness, and a thousand other eternal things are obtained for the soul and spirit without any help from the god of this world. Anything that the flesh can use for any comfort or ease, to delight the eyes or ears or taste or any other sense, can be obtained with money. Anything to eat or drink or put on, any luxury or comfort or mode of travel can be bought with money. Furthermore, anything that can be bought for the body or anything that can be purchased with money is a transient thing that will soon perish and disappear.

Now, since the flesh lusts against the Spirit and is at endless conflict with it, then anything that seeks to make you earthly and fleshly-minded is a great evil. The things that belong to the realm of the flesh (the body) are passing away. Even the flesh itself is passing away. Anything that is passing away is not real. It is like a bubble that floats prettily in the air only to burst never to exist again. It is like the darkness that disappears with the dawn and has no certain dwelling place. It is like a flower in the field that blooms for a moment and disappears, a vision of the night, a fleeting shadow, a moment of joy, a passing sorrow, or a sudden pain. When such things have passed by, no one knows where they came from or whither they have gone. Those, however, who indulge themselves in the things that belong to the body grow to think that nothing is true or real but what is bodily and can be touched or seen or eaten or drunk or enjoyed by the passions of men. Unwittingly they change true riches for false; things that are unseen by mortal eyes for things that are seen. They exchange things that are spirit for things that can be touched, tasted, and felt by the body. The soul now begins to think that these things, which belong to the body, are real and therefore becomes fleshly minded. The carnal or fleshly mind is an enemy of God and an enemy of all things spiritual. It follows, then, that because the soul is burdened down with the earthly and visible, it is impossible for it to be spiritual, and when the time comes to depart out of this world by death and enter the realm of the Spirit, it will fear to die and want to remain in the body, because it is a stranger to the realm of the Spirit and has come to believe that the realm of the body is the only realm that is real, when in truth it is the only realm that is unreal.

Did you ever notice how the legion of spirits that possessed the man at Gadara were filled with dread at the thought of leaving the body of the maniac? When they found they must go out into the deep where there was no body, they begged to be permitted to enter the bodies of the swine. They would sooner inhabit the flesh of a pig than no flesh at all. I could be wrong, but I am inclined to believe it was Jesus rather than the demons who caused the pigs to run down the hill into the sea. You see, when we become fleshly minded and think the transient things are real, then every time our soul would fly to the spiritual and eternal it is dragged back again by the physical and visible, thinking that corporeal things are real, when, indeed, there is no reality in them, for they are passing away.

Will you agree with me that everything everywhere is made up of things, which are visible and things which are invisible? And is it not true that visible things never remain the same but are always changing, and that invisible things always remain the same and never change? And to which of these two things is the body most like? And to which is the spirit most like? Is not the bodily like the visible and changing and the spirit like the invisible and unchanging? When then the soul and spirit become lovers of the body, they are dragged away by it into things that are always changing and never remain the same. They become as unlike God as it is possible to be and are completely bound up and imprisoned by the body (flesh). When we try to discover any spiritual thing by the use of any of our bodily senses, we are taken into the realm of unreality and change; for everything connected with the body is changing while everything that belongs to the spirit is unchanging. It is small wonder then that the natural man cannot receive the things of the Spirit of God; for all things connected with the natural belong to time and change, while all the things belonging to the spiritual are eternal and changeless. So then all who would come to know the wisdom of God, and the revelation of the Lord, must turn their spirits from the realm of the physical and changing, the corrupt and mortal, and fly away into the realm of the pure, eternal, unchanging, and immortal. It is only there that rest and truth are found, and, abiding there in the Spirit, even the body itself begins to be lifted from corruption to incorruption and from mortality to immortality. We said a moment ago that when the soul comes into the realm of the flesh, it becomes carnal and fleshly-minded because it is dragged into the realm of the body. Inversely then, when the soul and spirit dwell in the secret place with God, they lift the body till it also becomes incorruptible, immortal, and eternal.

When anyone first comes to Christ from the world of sin, his spirit is fast bound up and imprisoned by his flesh, and, while he may live the rest of his life in this same condition, the Spirit of God immediately seeks to deliver him and change him from walking after the flesh to walking after the Spirit. A strife between the flesh and the Spirit begins, the flesh on the one hand endeavoring to bring the soul into bondage and death, the Spirit on the other hand seeking to bring both soul and body into the liberty of life and peace. This is the greatest reason imaginable why we should live in temperance, and hold aloof as far as possible from the unreality of physical desire, earthly pleasure, fear or pain, and instead have great desire for spiritual pleasure, knowledge, and joy in the Holy Ghost. Can you not see that when your spirit is associated with the earthly, it becomes earthly, and when it is associated only with the heavenly, it becomes eternal and spiritual? If your soul becomes associated with the pleasures and pains of the body, it is bound to think that these sensations are true and real when there is no reality in them, but they are only fleeting, passing things that appear like mists and are gone. Every physical pleasure has a way of fastening the soul more securely to the body and giving it a fleshly nature. Thus the soul or mind comes to think that the pleasures of the body are real and true, and because of this it comes to have the same fancies and desires as the body and becomes defiled by the flesh and cannot enter into the holiest of all. The soul has become a slave to the flesh and has lost all intercourse with the divine.

While the spirit and the body are united and dwell together, one must always be in subjection to the other. Either the body will be servant to the spirit or the spirit will be servant to the body. One will be the servant and be ruled. The other will be the master and rule. We cannot avoid this conclusion. Either the flesh will rule the spirit, or the spirit will rule the flesh. Since, however, the flesh is like the mortal and changing, and the spirit is like the immortal and unchanging, then the spirit is the one who should be the master. If the spirit is the master, it will save the flesh by lifting it to the realm of God and immortality, but if the body is master, it will ruin the soul by dragging it to the realm of the carnal, the mortal, and changing.

You may well wonder why I am taking so much time to describe the flesh and the carnal mind, but what is the value of talking about things we have never understood? Is there any use in talking about the carnal mind if we do not know what makes the mind carnal? Can we ever be delivered from it by ignorance? Why do Christians like to talk about the flesh and remain in ignorance as to what the flesh is and how it operates? Why do they continue to talk about the carnal mind and get angry when the revelation reveals what the carnal mind really is? We claim to love and desire the life in the Spirit, yet we make more and more provision for the flesh, so that we can enjoy more fully the fleeting sensations that belong to the body. We make provision to gratify every physical sense, yet every one of them perishes as it is used. Col. 2:21, 22. The more we see, the weaker our eyes become. The more we hear or feel the weaker the sense of hearing and feeling becomes, until, when a man has reached seventy years, he has lost seventy per cent of his physical senses.

Oh that men would awaken to the truth that they might see where reality dwells; that their eyes might be opened to see that their search for satisfaction in the realm of the body is but to chase rainbows and grasp the emptiness of bubbles in their hands. A mist may appear for a moment and then disappear. A dream of the night might terrify us, but its phantom figures disappear with our awaking. So also the fleeting fantasies of the flesh are dissipated with our awaking to the realities of the Spirit. The things that are seen are only temporal. The things that are not seen are eternal.

We squander health in search of wealth,
We scheme and toil and save,
We squander wealth in search of health
And all we get's a grave.
We live and boast of what we own,
We die and only get a stone.

That is about all the reality there is in the physical realm. I think you will agree with me that it is not reality at all. It is a ghostly phantom, a mist that appears for a little time and is gone. We can see, however, that those who set their hearts on obtaining as much as possible of these passing sensations of time are dragged into the realm of the unreal, and their minds become absorbed with physical things, bodily, fleshly, carnal things, until the realm of the carnal mind is the only realm that is real to them when in reality it is the only realm that is unreal. The wind will soon pass over it and it will be gone, and the place thereof shall know it no more. But the things of the Spirit are from everlasting to everlasting, and the righteousness of God to children's children.

For centuries and millenniums past men have always thought that the things of the Spirit were misty, ghostly, and unreal but that the things bodily and physical were the things that were tangible and real. The truth is exactly opposite to this; it is the spiritual and eternal things that are real and changeless, and it is the bodily and physical things that are always changing and never remain the same. They soon disappear - ashes to ashes and dust to dust.

I do not think there is need for more instruction as to how we are going to enter the realm of the Spirit and live and walk there. Our greatest necessity is to see the unreality of the realm in which we have lived so long. When we see its uselessness and fruitlessness, our love will turn away from the changing to the unchanging and from the passing to the permanent.

It is hard to imagine how anyone can truly love a thing that is always changing and never remains the same. Yet it is our ignorance of the realm in which we live that makes us love it. If a woman should love and marry a man because of his wealth, what cause do you think she would have to love him should he lose his wealth and become poor? And if a man should love a woman only because of her beauty of form and face, can she expect to retain his admiration when she has lost that beauty? But if he loves her for some spiritual quality such as kindness or patience or some other virtue, he will never cease in his love for her, for these are things that do not change. They always remain the same. This is the very thought the apostle had in mind when he wrote, "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world... for the world passeth away and the lusts thereof, but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." We have loved the world because we did not know its changeable character and we did not know that all things that belong to it pass quickly away and God has no permanent purpose for any of it.

We have come to the place in our experience where we are to pass the inner veil and enter the Holy of Holies where God lives and no flesh can abide. How many will attain to that glory I cannot say. God alone knows that. But this I do know: it is just as impossible for flesh and blood to inherit the kingdom as it is for corruption to inherit incorruption. God seems to be standing before the veil saying of our flesh, "You cannot bring that in here." The time has come to lay aside every weight, put off anger, malice, wrath, put away lying, mortify the deeds of the flesh, put on charity, crucify the flesh, put off lying, mortify the deeds of the flesh, put on charity, crucify the flesh, cast off the works of darkness, flee youthful lusts, abstain from all appearance of evil, purge ourselves of the leaven of malice and wickedness, and add to our faith virtue, knowledge, temperance, and every other spiritual virtue, for these things are unchanging and always remain the same. They abide in the realm of the Spirit of God and are unknown elsewhere.

I hope we have all become aware that we are entering a new era, a higher plane, and a new age. All the old things belonging to a natural realm are passing away because they belong to the realm of the passing, but all things of the Spirit are becoming new. These latter will abide forever because they belong to the realm of the permanent. Let the old things go! Do not set your heart on them nor weep at their passing! Set your heart on the realm of the Spirit. Make that your life and your very existence. I fear that in the past and even until now we have treated the realm of the Spirit with unbelievable casualness. Too often we look upon the realm of the Spirit as something to be entered into for an hour or two on Sunday morning while the rest of the time is spent making as much progress as possible in the natural realm, and in laying up goods in store for the body. Perhaps we have forgotten that all progress we make in the natural realm is only loss eventually, for, should we gain the whole world and yet be cast away, it has profited us nothing and is only loss to us.

"I know that my Redeemer liveth and He shall stand in the latter days upon the earth, and if after my skin worms destroy my body, yet in my flesh I shall see God, whom I shall see for myself and mine eyes shall behold and not another."

As we read these pages of truth, surely we must realize that for many months past there has grown an ever increasing knowledge within that the order we have known all our lives and which has existed for the past two thousand years is now rapidly passing away. The things that we have seen and heard and known and loved are waxing old and are ready to vanish away. The kingdoms of this world are preparing themselves for their own destruction. The systems of the church are decaying before our eyes and nothing can save them. Even while we read these lines many men and women filled with human zeal are putting forth frantic efforts to turn the tables, stem the tide, reverse the decadence, stop the advance of Communism, revive the church, reach the heathen. Every imaginable device is being used to accomplish this end; radio, television, literature crusades, missionary programs, city-wide organized revival meetings, and a multitude of other ideas. It is not within my right to condemn such zeal or effort nor speak a word against those who are so involved, but it is within my right to say that we are at the hour when all these human efforts are passing swiftly away. The imperfect things that have been used of God in an imperfect age are vanishing away with the age itself, for "when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part (imperfect) shall be done away."

Man has always had a reluctance to give up the good things of the past and lay hold of the better things of the future. Even in the natural realm some men scorned the thought that the automobile could ever replace the horse and buggy, but it did, and, if time were to prevail long enough, the automobile itself would be replaced with something far superior. But it is in the spiritual realm that the new is always resisted. Christians are like homing pigeons who are no sooner moved than they fly back to where they were before. God's people always hate and resist the coming of a new order. They are loath to change the visible for the invisible, but their rage and fury against spiritual progress and revelation do not hinder the program of the Lord, for He moves irresistibly on from the things of time to the things of eternity, from the realm of the imperfect to the realm of the perfect, from the passing to the permanent.

There was a little period of twilight between the ages of law and grace when God raised up a mighty prophet of whom it was said, "Among them that are born of women there hath not arisen a greater than John the Baptist." As his thundering voice echoed among the Judean hills, whole towns and cities went out into the wilderness to hear his message of repentance and baptism for the remission of sins. Four hundred years had gone by without the voice of a prophet and never had any person then living heard such things as John spoke. His message was new and vital and the priests, the common people, and the soldiers alike came to humble themselves and repent in preparation for the kingdom and the King that were soon to appear. We can safely affirm that no revival in history was ever greater, and probably none was ever of shorter duration, for this prophet was pointing the eyes of the people to the Lamb of God and, when Jesus Christ suddenly appeared on the scene with even greater power and glory, all men and women soon forgot John and turned to Him. It was a sad day for the disciples of John when they came to him, saying, "He to whom thou bearest witness beyond Jordan, the same baptizeth and all men follow Him." But it was not a sad day for John. Well he knew that the glory and wonder of his own ministry of preparation was but a passing thing. It was given to endure but for a moment that that which is permanent might come.

Now, can you not see that the message of John, which for a few months blazed and shone with its scintillating glory and power and truth, had waxed old and was ready to vanish away the very moment he cried aloud to the people, "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world?" Once Christ had come there was no more need of John's ministry of preparation. It was one of the passing things and it was ready to vanish away. Can you believe even for a moment that you would be willing to sit and listen to one of John the Baptist's sermons after Christ had come as John's ministry predicted? Do you not think those sermons would seem strangely dead and out of date if we were to hear them now, for who would want to hear him tell of a Christ that was soon to come after He was daily seen among them?

There is an interesting story in the Acts of the Apostles concerning a mighty preacher by the name of Apollos who, knowing not that Christ had come or that Pentecost was twenty years past, preached only the baptism of John. Thus it reads, "This man was instructed in the way of the Lord; and, being fervent in spirit, he spake and taught diligently the things of the Lord, knowing only the baptism of John." Acts 18:25 A Christian man, Aquila, and his wife Priscilla heard him preach these things and immediately took him aside and expounded unto him the way of God more perfectly. Verse 26 I am certain that the fiery zealous sermon of Apollos as he preached the baptism of John twenty years after Calvary and Pentecost were history must have sounded pitifully out of date to the enlightened Aquila and Priscilla. For this reason they took the great preacher aside and showed him the way of God more perfectly. It is a precious testimony in his favor that thereafter he "mightily convinced the Jews and that publicly, showing from the scripture that Jesus was the Christ." Acts 18:27-28

Once again we are at the place where the old is passing away and the new is coming in. The glory and wonder of an age we have loved is fading out and the heralds of God are proclaiming the transcending wonder of a better though still imperfect age. The kingdom of heaven is at hand. The man-child who will shepherd the nations with an iron hand will soon be caught up to the throne, for it is from the throne that the sons of God shall rule. Rev. 12:1-6 Is it any wonder, then, that the things that have been the order of an imperfect church for the past two thousand years should now be waxing old and be ready to vanish away? Just as Aquila and Priscilla were struck with the obsolescence and oldness of the message of Apollos as he boldly proclaimed the baptism of John, I am compelled to testify that I feel the same way concerning the present preaching of the gospel in our day. It has been God's order and truth for the past two thousand years, but a better and more enduring age is upon us, for that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away. The age of grace must give way to the kingdom and Paul's gospel must give way to the everlasting gospel of Rev. 14:6 which is to be proclaimed immediately following the birth of the manchild. Rev. 14:1-6

The struggling missionary programs that have been used of God to bring the elect few from the masses of the earth are about to vanish away, for the hour is upon us when all who sit in darkness and in the shadow of death will see a great light. Isa. 9:2 The hour is at hand when no one will have to say, "Know the Lord", for all will know Him from the least to the greatest. Heb. 8:11 All the frantic efforts devised by human zeal to revive the missionary programs will fall into the dust of decay. They are passing and not permanent. They have waxed old and are ready to vanish away. The hour is at hand when "Jesus shall reign where'er the sun doth his successive journeys run", and all men shall know Him from the least to the greatest.

The message of healing, which has had such a wonderful day in revivals through the ages, cannot again be revived. The healing campaign has run its course in spite of all claims to the contrary. God is taking away the first that He might establish the second. Certainly there have been many healings and certainly there are still healings, though in no such abundance as is claimed. It is passing away that the more permanent order may come, for the hour is at hand when the lame man shall leap as an hart, the tongue of the dumb shall sing, the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and there shall be no sickness in all the land. Isa. 35:5-7

As I write these things and meditate upon them, there is a tremendous sense within that the sun is setting on this dispensation of the grace of God. But the same sun that is setting on Europe is rising on America and the sun that is setting on America is rising on the Orient. So also it is that the sun which set on the age of the law was at the same moment rising on the age of grace, and now that it is setting on the age of grace, its gladsome rays are heralding the kingdom morning and the age-lasting joy that shall be upon us. It is the crowning day.

How totally inadequate do our words become at such a time as this! How futile are our explanations, how faint our exhortations! Only the revelation of the Almighty can teach us the things we ought to know and may God grant that spirit of wisdom and understanding in the knowledge of Him that the eyes of our understanding should be enlightened to see that the millennial dawn with lithesome steps is tripping o’er the kingdom hills.

On this very day and at this very moment all the end time signs spoken of by Jesus, by Daniel, and by Paul are coming to pass before our very eyes. The prophecies of Jesus Christ come echoing down the corridors of the years, saying to men of our day, "Many shall come in My name, saying 'I am Christ!' Nation shall rise against nation and kingdom against kingdom." "There shall be famines, pestilence, and earth-quakes." "Many false prophets shall arise and deceive many." "There shall be signs in the sun and the moon and on earth distress of nations." "Men's hearts failing them for fear and for looking after the things that are coming upon the earth, for the powers of the heavens shall be shaken." See Matt. 24 Is there yet anything lacking in the prophecy of Paul, which he spoke in these words, "This know also that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, having a form of godliness but denying the power thereof." 2 Tim. 3:1-5 Each truth of this prophecy abounds in minutest detail in our day. Not only do such things abound on the level of the individual, but they abound in international relations and the world of religion. The great leaders of the earth both of the East and of the West think nothing at all of lying, accusing falsely, truce-breaking, or covetousness, and boastfulness abounds without measure or precedent. Traitors and spies are continually discovered. The love of pleasure is everywhere and forms of godliness abound on every hand, yet they are devoid of the power of God.

Covetousness, boastfulness, and betrayal are found not only among the worldly. These things abound in the religious world as well and go hand in hand with all manner of deceit and trickery, which Paul has aptly described as "the sleight of men and the cunning craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive." Eph. 4:14

Daniel was told that in the time of the end "many shall run to and fro and knowledge shall increase", but it is doubtful whether even he could possibly have envisaged the ease with which moderns run to and fro. He could have had no idea of the swiftness of twentieth century travel or of men in orbit circling the earth in ninety minutes. He could have had no thought of trips to the moon or of sending rockets to Venus. Such a vast increase in knowledge was hidden even from this man, who is renowned for his wisdom beyond almost all men who have dwelt on the earth, but his prophecy is a sobering testimony that we are in the very last hours of this passing age. See Dan. chapter 12, especially verse 4.

I feel so deeply within about this truth, so positive that we are at the very end of the dispensation, so sure that the manifestation of the sons of God is even at the doors, that I have a burning desire to exhort all sober-minded men and women to set themselves aside more completely unto God. Give yourselves to watching, to fasting and prayer. Do not even try to "go along" with the existing church system. Seek to make Christ your head. Seek to be possessed with His mind. Seek to have Him daily reveal His will to you. Relax your hold on things that belong to time and lay hold on the things that are eternal. Let us turn our eyes from the realm of the passing and lift them up to the celestial hills of the permanent, for, when that which is perfect is come, that which is in part shall be done away.
EVER UP AND ONWARD

"The invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even His eternal power and Godhead, so that they are without excuse."

In my thirty-five or more years of writing it has never been my purpose nor aim to establish believers in tradition and doctrine, but rather to help all men see what is the hope of their calling and what the riches of the glory of their inheritance in Christ Jesus our Lord. It is when the saints of the Most High begin to see His predestined and immutable purpose for themselves, for the limitless hosts of mankind and for the whole world with all its multiplicity and diversity of beings, that we truly begin to love our wonderful Lord and fervently desire to draw near to Him that we may enter with holy zeal into His eternal purpose for us as individuals.

When our blessed Christ walked among us, He always dealt with men and women as individuals and not as faceless crowds. He practiced no mass psychology on the vast throngs that crowded about Him. He did not seek to sway them with superb oratory, nor charm them with music, nor any other kind of human manipulation that follows as a matter of course in today's gatherings. When He met with sinners, He met them as their Saviour. When the crowds thronged about Him so that they trod upon one another, He was not unaware of the touch of one solitary woman that needed Him, and, turning, He asked, "Who touched Me?" When she told Him the truth of her trouble, He sent her away rejoicing, every whit whole. By the side of the pool of Bethesda a poor man lay. For many years he had languished in bitter disappointment because, when the waters were troubled, there was no man to put him in the pool, but another, not so infirm as he, would step into the water before him. As Jesus passed by, He paused to ask, "Wilt thou be made whole?" And after listening with compassion to the man's sorrowful plight, His heavenly message was spoken to him as an individual, "Rise and take up thy bed and walk." At once the man arose and took up his bed and walked.

Two blind men sat begging by the highway and, being told that Jesus of Nazareth passed by, they began to cry to Him for help and mercy. He, turning aside from the multitude that thronged Him, called the men to Himself and sent them away with the blessing of sight they so sorely needed. This same wonderful Christ, walking among the crowds, paused to call to Zacchaeus to come down from the tree where he perched, hoping to see Jesus, and in his house that day this sinner met his Saviour as his Lord.

One sat alone beside the highway begging;
  His eyes were blind, the light he could not see.
He sat in rags and shivered in the shadows;
Then Jesus came and set the captive free.

So also it is today. Our Lord and Christ, ruling the universe and guiding the spheres, always has time to deal with us as individuals, but we, alas, seldom take time from our fruitless schedules to listen to what He has to say, and so we go blundering on through life - going, going, but not knowing where, spending a lifetime doing and doing, but accomplishing nothing.

Why do we imagine it is so important to be always up and doing, rushing here and there from one activity to another until we have no time at all to listen to the voice of the Master who once said, "Let there be light," and there was light, only to come to the end of life's road, saying, "Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in Thy name and in Thy name cast out devils, and in Thy name done many wonderful works", and to hear those words of despair, "Depart from Me; I never knew you."

You do not have to shout your faith.
  Thrice eloquent are the quiet trees
   And the green listening sod.
Hushed are the stars Whose power is never spent;
  The hills are mute,
Yet how they speak of God!
Today we live in momentous times. We are living in a period between ages. As John the Baptist ministered between the ages of law and grace, so we now live and minister between the ages of grace and the long awaited kingdom of God. This is not wishful thinking. All creation in the bondage of its night and decay has cried and sighed for the hour when the sons of God, who have been in preparation for millenniums of time, should come to their "adoption." The whole creation is in painful waiting for the hour of their emancipation, the day when the sons of God will deliver them from the thralldom of decay into the glorious freedom of the kingdom of God. Those wonderful days of transition are with us now. The things belonging to the old order of the dispensation of grace have waxed old and are ready to vanish away. But sadly and with deep regret we find that everywhere men and women are clinging to those old things that are passing away as drowning men cling to a straw. To them these precious antiques must be kept at all costs. They love their sects, their crowds, their endless and wearisome meetings, their sermons, song services and special numbers, their revival meetings and their missionary programs and all the other paraphernalia that has belonged to an age now passing away. We have become like the priests of the Old Testament whose greatest fear of Christ and His apostles was that they would change their beloved laws and customs. Acts 6:14 They cared not about God's purpose for the world and the universe. That was not important in the least. The important thing to them was that the old system be maintained and that there be no change. Tradition has it that, when the great veil in the temple was rent in twain at the death of Christ, opening the way into the holiest of all, the priests had it sewn together again that all things might remain as they had always been. When Jesus was buried, they took every imaginable precaution to make sure He did not rise, but He arose in spite of their care and ever lives on high and in the hearts of His people.

It is just the same today as it was in that far off day of blindness and unbelief. Why is it that men who preach of a kingdom to come continue to build their own kingdoms, their own establishments, their own congregations? Why is it that the name of Babylon is on all lips, while people still wade deep in its muddy waters? Why do Christians receive the message of a Babylon church system and leave one part of it, only to quickly ally themselves with another? Why are God's people so in love with crowds that they fail to see that the little group they are building is in itself the embryo of another sect?

It is time, beloved children of God that every man came to know Christ personally with spiritual knowledge far beyond that which can be taught by men. I have spent fifty years in my calling as a teacher - a ministry that I never dreamed of nor desired in any way, but one nonetheless that was given to me in Christ before the world began. If I have learned one lesson above all others through those long years, it is this: Of myself I can teach men no spiritual truth at all, unless the blessed Holy Spirit opens their understanding. Then He and He alone becomes their teacher to guide them into truth. Furthermore I have found that the things I myself have come to know have not come through poring over the books of learned men, but by the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, who receives of the Father and reveals the truth to our hearts. One hour in His presence is worth more than a lifetime of study without Him, for when He is come, He will reprove the world of sin and of righteousness and of judgment, and He will receive of the Father and reveal the truth unto us.

0, beloved children of God, how easy it is to rest on our oars and drift carelessly with the tide! How easy it is to rejoice in what we believe, but never go on to the experience of it! If Christ be in us, then we are spiritual persons and from that moment forward we live in the Spirit. But, if we live in the Spirit, let us take heed that we walk in the Spirit. Let that selfsame Holy Spirit change our spirit, soul and body from glory to glory. Be satisfied with nothing less than this, for this is the will of the Father in heaven. It is the path to sonship and manifestation. Let us spend our time in prayer and meditation on the word of God. That is how we partake of Christ, who is the bread of life. Never waste precious moments watching television programs. They savor of the world. They are full of the flesh and the devil. An hour spent listening to its worldly, idle trash with its cursing and swearing, its vulgarity, suggestiveness and corruption is as a sword thrust into the spirit. Such a wound retards your walk in the Spirit for many days. It deals an unconscious wound to the Christ life that takes months to heal. It causes the face of Christ and the reality of truth to grow strangely dim. It causes the heavenly vision to falter and fail and entices the pilgrims to fall out by the way. Continue with it if you will, but be warned that such things are too wide for the door of the kingdom or of the Holy City, where nothing defiling will ever enter in. Our association with these evils leads to ever increasing ungodliness, and that increasing ungodliness expands rapidly, defiling the whole course of nature.
We are at the end of this dispensation. That which we must do must be done now, and what we are to be we must become now. Therefore "let us lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of the Majesty on high."

The chapter that now follows is the principal message of this book. I ask you, the saints of God, to read its pages with diligence and care. The truth written in this message is glorious beyond compare, because it contains the truth concerning the fullness of our salvation for this present age - the redemption of the body. It was the hope of the transformation of the body from corruptible to incorruptible that lay upon the heart of Paul when he wrote, "Forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus... if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead." Phil. 3:13-14,11 This putting off of the corruptible and putting on of incorruption is the final hallowed and sacred experience of this age. It will come, not to all who name the name of Christ, but unto those who look for Him shall He appear the second time - not to deal with sin, but to make our salvation complete.

I trust that, before you read this article, you will pray. Pray that the Holy Spirit will open the eyes of your understanding, that you may grasp that which eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither has entered into the heart of man, but which is only revealed by the Holy Spirit.

There are yet many, I am sad to say, who are still hiding the garment of Babylon in the tent of their hearts. Like most all of us you, too, have picked up a garment which bore the label Made in Canada, or Made in Japan, or Taiwan, or some other place. Achan, during the capture of Jericho, saw a beautiful garment among the spoils of war, and when he saw the label on it, it evidently must have read Made in Babylon, so he took it with the silver and gold it represented and hid it. And so the battle of Ai was lost with the loss of much life as well.

We say we have left the Babylon system, we have left the big organizations; but have we left them only to turn to little Babylons? Do we still cling to our weekly meetings, our little groups and our forms of worship? Have we forgotten that we are now in the end of the age when the command of God has gone forth, "Come out from among them and be separate!" This is indeed the hour when the blessed Holy Spirit is calling His elect, saying, "Come, My people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be over-past. For, behold, the Lord cometh out of His place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity: the earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain." Isa. 26:20-21

It is with hope and joy that I present the final chapter of this book for your prayerful meditation. It will take all your consecration to attain the goal it presents. Please read it again and yet again until your spirit, soul and body yearns for this glory of the transformation so certainly promised for this, the end of the dispensation.

CHAPTER FOUR
THE REDEMPTION OF THE BODY

Careless seems the great Avenger;
History's pages but record
One death grapple in the darkness
'Twixt old systems and the Word.
Truth forever on the scaffold,
Wrong forever on the throne,
Yet that scaffold sways the future,
And behind the dim unknown
Standeth God within the shadows,
Keeping watch upon His own.
Then to side with truth is noble,
When we share her wretched crust,
Ere her cause brings fame and profit
And 'tis prosperous to be just.
Then it is the brave man chooses
While the coward stands aside,
Doubting in his abject spirit
Till his Lord is crucified
And the multitude makes virtue
Of the faith they have denied.
New occasions bring new duties;
Time makes ancient good uncouth.
We must upward still and onward
Who would keep abreast of truth.
Lo, before us gleams her campfires;
Launch our Mayflower and steer boldly
Through the desperate winter sea,
Nor attempt the future's portal
With the past's blood-rusted key.
Once to every man and nation
Comes the moment to decide
In the strife with truth and falsehood
For the good or evil side.
At the dawn of each new era,
With a recognizing start,
Nations wildly look as nation,
Standing with mute lips apart,
And glad truth, yet mightier manchild,
Leaps beneath the future's heart.

James R. Lovell

The gifts and callings of God have always been a source of joy and amazement to me. Whether they be natural gifts among natural men or spiritual gifts among spiritual, they all exhibit the incomparable wisdom of the divine mind. Among the abilities the Most High has given to bless mankind is the charming gift of the poet, who has the ability to express the most difficult truth in a simple, vivid and understandable way, as expressed, for instance, in verse four above, "Nations wildly look as nation, standing with mute lips apart". What an expressive phrase that is! Paul, speaking to the Greeks at Athens, quoted the words of one of their poets, "Ye are also His offspring", Acts 17:28, as confirmation of the spiritual truth he was endeavoring to teach them - that "in Him we live and move and have our being".

As the poem above has stated, there is always a "death grapple" between the darkness of this age and the ever advancing, ever progressing truth of the word of God as it is progressively revealed through the ages. The light shineth in darkness, but the darkness cannot comprehend the light. The darkened benighted heart of man cannot comprehend - that is, he cannot understand - the light. Therefore he vainly tries to extinguish it. Men love darkness and hate light because their deeds are evil and the light is sent to manifest that evil. I am loath to have to say that tradition-bound Christians find themselves so bound by custom, habit and convention that they have lost all ability to open their hearts to ever expanding truth and ever increasing light even as had the Pharisees, the Sadducees and doctors of the law of God in those heaven-sent days when truth dwelt among men in the person of Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God. Because they were bound by their tradition and refused to be moved from it, they found it more convenient to slay Him who is truth that they might continue undisturbed in the bondage of their tradition rather than follow the light, which He Himself was then and still is today.

It is noble to side with truth when the first rays of its glory shine upon us. It is noble to share "her wretched crust ere her cause brings fame and profit and 'tis prosperous to be just." The spiritual coward with abject spirit is always cowering beneath his tradition and hiding himself from light; but, when truth at last is triumphant and "tis prosperous to be just", he is ready to make virtue and profit of the faith he once denied.

Have you ever considered how "time makes ancient good uncouth"? Not untrue, but out of date. It becomes not present truth, but past truth. We have no controversy today with the man who first invented the wheel. It was probably a very clumsy, uncouth affair compared with the rubber-tired beauties they make today, yet that uncouth wheel was the forerunner of that which the whole world travels on today. The airplane made by the Wright brothers, that boasted a flight record of 150 feet, was clumsy indeed compared with the sleek behemoths of today. The news man who reported the flight was fired from his job for reporting untruth. When Alexander Graham Bell used his pasture fence at Brantford, Ont., to speak the first sentence by telephone, it was indeed an uncouth affair. People joked about it and one newspaper stated that "even if it did work, it would be of no practical value". But it was truth and the forerunner of the miraculous instrument of world-wide communication today.

I find it difficult to read many of the writings of the distant past. They were relevant in their day. They were "present truth" then, but established truth today. Since the day of Madam Guyon and William Law faith has been restored and holiness is found to be through personal identification with the cross of Christ and not a "do-it-yourself effort. Some time ago a brother wrote me saying he found it difficult to relate to the writings of a notable man who lived several centuries ago. The brother seemed a bit worried about this inability. In my reply I told him that, when he was baptized with the Holy Spirit, lying prostrate for hours under the power of God, he was taken so far beyond the experience of the writer in question that there was no possibility he would ever be able to see things as that ancient writer saw them. This is what the poet means when he says, "Time makes ancient good uncouth. We must ever up and onward who would keep abreast of truth."

The pilgrims who came to America on the Mayflower were pilgrims in the truest sense of the word, but their pilgrimage was not more important than yours. You, too, are pilgrims dwelling in earthly tabernacles, seeking the transformations that lead you forward to the day when under all the great eternal heavens and in the measureless universe itself there will be order, interdependence and unity, and the knowledge of the Lord will fill the whole of God's universal kingdom as the waters now fill the seas. Let no man foolishly say that God will rule in heaven and the devil will rule in hell. God will rule everywhere until both death and hell - and the devil as well - will be no more.

Long centuries ago a pilgrim named Abraham was called of God to leave his native Ur of the Chaldees and go to a land which he had never seen, unto a place which the Lord would afterward show him. The beautiful story says that "he went out, not knowing whither he went". Ah, how true that was of him then, and how true it is of us today! When Abram left Ur of the Chaldees down by ancient Babylon, he knew not that some glad day his seed would inherit the earth nor that he would be called the "heir of the world", Rom. 4:13 By faith he caught a glimpse of the blessed Redeemer who would be born of his seed and a vast family of manifested sons of God that would spring from the Christ root - the root of Him who said, "I am the vine; ye are the branches." His eye of faith beheld not only these sons of God, but the glorious bride as well, who at the end of the kingdom age will descend from the heavens to be joined in marriage to that magnificent, supernal Christ in His fullness - Christ, the Head, and Christ, the body, united in one corporate Christ - the "fullness of Him who everywhere will fill the universe with Himself. 0 that I could help God's people to see that the fullness of Christ was not the glorious Head alone, but the blessed Head united with the complete body of sons at the end of this age of grace! This is the fullness of Christ - until that morning comes at the end of the kingdom age when the bride also is prepared for the heavenly union.

We are wrong when we teach that we are the bride of Christ. We are not the bride of Christ. We are the sons of God, and members in particular of the Bridegroom. All during this age of grace the Lord has been preparing the man child, the "in Christ" company, the sons of God. During the millennial age, the entire age will be for the preparation of that heavenly company, the bride of Christ. When the thousand years (six times mentioned in Rev. 20:1-7) was complete, John was taken to a great and high mountain to behold in heavenly vision the Holy City, the New Jerusalem, descending from God out of heaven as a bride adorned for her husband. The sons of God are the holy Temple of the Lord. The bride of Christ is the holy city of the Lord, the New Jerusalem. As the temple of the Lord is made of living stones, 1 Peter 2:4-5, so the holy city, the New Jerusalem, the bride of Christ, is made of living stones. There will be no rocks nor bricks nor mortar in it. The gates are twelve pearls and those pearls are pearls of great price. Their names are the names of the twelve tribes of Israel. Rev. 21:12. When our lovely Lord was here on earth, He said, "I am the door: by Me if any man enter in, he shall be saved." In that New Jerusalem there is no longer one door, but twelve gates open to the north, east, west and south, Rev. 21:13, by which all mankind will enter the eternal city, twelve gates that are never closed at all by day, and there is no night there. Nothing defiling nor impure will ever enter it, but those whose names are in the Lamb's book of life. Within that city flows - not a springing well - but a river of the water of life, clear as crystal, flowing, not by, but out of the throne of God. Rev. 22:1 On either side of that beautiful river stands the tree of life, whose leaves are for the healing of all nations. Through those magnificent gates of life will enter every creature who is athirst to drink freely of its eternal, life-giving waters and be healed by the leaves of that tree, of which you and I by the grace of God have become a part.

0 happy day, happy day
When Jesus washed my sins away!

Little did we know in that blessed hour of sorrow and rejoicing that such an eternal inheritance was ours. Jesus paid it all. All to Him we owe. All the past with its sorrow and tears, all the future with its raptures and glory.

I walked one day along a country road
And there a stranger journeyed too,
Bent low beneath the burden of His load;
It was a cross, a cross I knew.
"Take up thy cross and follow Me,"
I hear the blessed Saviour call.
How can I make a lesser sacrifice
When Jesus gave His all?

How little we knew in that wonderful hour of redemption what glories He had prepared for those who love Him! We sang our songs of triumph then, but little did we realize that we had joined the triumphant march that leads at last to the reconciliation of the universe. We did not know on that happy day that the angels on high, who rejoiced over our repentance, would one day make the heavens with all their vast luminaries echo and re-echo with the praise of Him who was slain, that every knee should bow and every tongue confess to the glory of God that He is Lord of all. Rom. 14:11; Phil. 2:10, 11. The river of the water of life will not run dry as the thirst of the universe is slaked at its fountain; neither shall the bountiful tree of life fail of its inexhaustible supply as its leaves heal the wounds and pardon the sins of every nation on earth.

There is a fountain filled with blood,
Drawn from Immanuel's veins;
And sinners plunged beneath that flood Lose all their guilty stains.

Far away in the depths of my spirit the perfumed breezes of the holy city sweep over my being until my very soul weeps for joy and laughs for gladness. "There is a river, the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God, the holy place of the tabernacles of the Most High. God is in the midst of her; she shall not be moved: God shall help her, and that right early." Psa. 46:4, 5.

There's a holy and beautiful city
Whose builder and maker is God.
John saw it descending from heaven
As Patmos in exile he trod.
Its high massive walls are of jasper;
The city itself is pure gold,
And when my frail tent here is folded,
My eyes shall its glories behold.
It gives me joy to think of Sarah, that patient, long-suffering wife of Abraham, of whom it is written, "Through faith also Sara herself received strength to conceive seed, and was delivered of a child when she was past age, because she judged Him faithful who had promised. Therefore sprang there even of one, and him as good as dead, so many as the stars of the sky in multitude, and as the sand which is by the sea shore innumerable. These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth. For they that say such things declare plainly that they seek a country. And truly, if they had been mindful of that country from whence they came out, they might have had opportunity to have returned. But now they desire a better country, that is, an heavenly; wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God: For He hath prepared for them a city." Heb. 11:11-16. That city is the New Jerusalem, the bride of Christ. See then in this how the old Jerusalem, upon which much earthly glory was bestowed, becomes old and uncouth in the light of that New Jerusalem bride, the magnificence of which finds no suitable description, no, not even in scripture.

In the previous pages we sought to catch a fleeting glimpse, at least in part, of the hope our heavenly Father has set before us. It was for the hope that was set before him that Jesus "endured the cross, despised the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the majesty on high". It will be for the same hope that we, too, will endure the cross in days to come and despise the shame that we with Him in a kindlier age may take our place by His side in His blessed kingdom of peace.

As the months roll by, conviction is added to conviction that we are now seeing the culmination of this age of grace and the end of man's six days of evil rule. "Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work" was the edict of the Lord for man. Each of these six days represents one thousand years and each thousand years is one day. For six thousand years man has tested every imaginable kind of government, all of which have been a dismal failure, until in our day we see world wide turmoil such as is almost beyond imagination. What nation on earth shows any sign of stability? Not one! All from the least to the greatest are headed for inevitable collapse. Law has seen a universal breakdown. Order of any true sort is collapsing on every hand. Morals have decayed until our state is as Sodom and Gomorrah. The wickedness of man is great in the earth, while the thoughts and imaginations of men's hearts are only evil continually. The pulpits are filled with false prophets, salving consciences with what men want to hear. The air waves are filled with the voices of religious racketeers. Pure and undefiled Christianity in all but a few has fallen to the ground and vanished from the earth. The church system is ruled by the harlot system, and the church so-called and the world have become amorous bed-mates. The religious whore of Babylon sits astride the political beast of Babylon. The days of Sodom are with us on every hand. The evil spirit that gripped the heart of Pharaoh to murder the babies in the days of Moses and the antichrist spirit in Herod, who slaughtered the infants in the days of Jesus, now stalks the earth again, murdering millions of helpless, unborn infants who could have become useful citizens while the ungodly crew who slays them goes to every imaginable length to keep alive those infirm and pain-wracked souls who long to die. Nations great and small, who now have sufficient weapons to destroy the whole world ten times over, are frantically raising taxes to make yet more until one staggers at the confusion and disorder that bewilders our minds.

Dreadful as all this is, let us never forget that in the midst of man's disconcerting confusion the Lord of the universe is progressing unhindered with His eternal purpose to govern the universe by that blessed Son whom He has chosen. The nations are far advanced in their progress toward destruction, but God is well advanced in His preparation to take the reins of government and set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed. Throughout the ever, deepening night of man's rule the eternal purpose of the Most High has been moving steadily and completely unhindered forward. His purpose has been, not to destroy men's lives, but to save them, and, during the centuries when man has been misgoverning and systematically destroying the earth and himself with it, the Lord has been preparing a people from those blessed ones whom the world has despised and crucified that through the grief and pain of their suffering they might be brought to the perfection He requires, a perfection wherein there remains neither evil nor any form of sin. They have been brought to such a complete abandonment to God that no thought for self or selfishness, greed or corruption remains in their spotless soul. They are entering the realm of the born again where it is impossible for them to sin either in thought or word or deed. 1 John 3:9. The filthy robes of unrighteousness that were once theirs have been replaced by the pure white linen of the righteousness of the saints. Rev. 19:8. Righteousness, justice and equity are their crown. The Spirit of the Lord rests upon them and abides within them, and that same Holy Spirit is transforming them into the likeness of Christ, their elder brother. His mind He is putting within them and a new heart He has given them whereon the law of God is inscribed. There will be no need ever to remind them of the commandments of the Lord, for His law has been written in letters of gold within their hearts and in their minds the Spirit of God has inscribed them. The self-same finger of God that once engraved the Ten Commandments upon two tables of stone on Mt. Sinai has now inscribed the law of the kingdom of God in their hearts and in their minds. It is the law of the "spirit of life in Christ Jesus",

Like their perfect elder brother these saints strive not, nor do they lift their voices in the street, but they bring deliverance to the captives and recovering of sight to the blind. They will set at liberty all that are bruised, heal the broken-hearted and preach the acceptable year of the Lord and the day of vengeance of our God. Our Lord Jesus Christ did not preach "the day of vengeance of our God", but the time is now at hand when that message will be preached by His younger brothers, and all nations who have refused Him will be brought into judgment and justice before His throne.

The blessed sons of God have been in preparation since Jesus, the first born of many brethren, was manifested in the long ago. All through this weary dispensation our heavenly Father has been perfecting them and laying them aside to await the resurrection of the inchristed. They are waiting for the moment soon to come when the "dead in Christ shall rise first" to join the living in Christ, and together we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, when the last trump of Revelation has sounded.

It is no embarrassment to me to admit that I know nothing yet as I ought to know, but many things are becoming clearer as time hastens by and we come ever nearer to the grand climax of the ages. For many centuries past far-sighted men and women have felt assurance in their hearts that a blessed hour will surely come in the world's future when some saints will attain the realm of incorruption without ever tasting of death and going to the grave. I confess that this has been my faith and hope in the past and it still remains my faith at this very moment. It is always possible for honest souls to be wrong or misinformed, but the kingdom of God will not fall apart just because some honest soul misunderstands a truth.

It is evident that our Lord is reserving for the end of this age one of the greatest wonders of all time. There is yet to be a "catching away" of the people in Christ. There is to be a people who are caught up in the Spirit of God. The apostle John, while in the Isle of Patmos, was in the Spirit on the Lord's day, which I believe means "the day of the Lord". In his aloneness he heard a voice speaking to him. It was the voice as of a trumpet, saying, "Come up hither", and immediately John was in the Spirit caught up to the throne of God, caught up in spirit indeed while still standing on the Island of Patmos. Revelation, chapter 4. Likewise also the apostle Paul was caught up to the third heaven, yet he remained here in body as did John to tell forth the word of God for many years. Both Enoch and Elijah were caught up bodily into heaven, and it should not be cause for surprise if these same two men should appear once upon the earth before the great and dreadful day of the Lord. Of Elijah it is distinctly written, "Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord: and he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse." Mal. 4:5, 6. While it is perfectly true that John the Baptist came in the spirit and power of Elijah, it is equally true that, when the priests came and asked John, "Who art thou", he answered, "I am not the Christ." Then they asked him, "Art thou Elijah." And he said, "I am not." John 1:20, 21. So he was neither Christ nor Elijah nor "that prophet". The reference to "that prophet" is not to Elijah, but to the prophet that Moses spoke of when he said the Lord would raise up a prophet like unto him. Deut. 18:15. That reference was evidently to the Lord Jesus Christ Himself as stated in Acts 3:22-26 and Acts 7:37,38. Let us not be surprised, then, if the mighty Elijah himself should appear among us before the great and dreadful day of the Lord. A ministry such as his is just the one needed in this hour of sham, abounding false prophets and universal turmoil. Nothing can possibly come before God's time, but all things, regardless of how impossible they may seem, will come to pass in God's appointed hour.

The inspired word speaks first of the "common salvation", Jude 3; secondly of "our so great salvation", Heb. 2:3, and thirdly of the salvation that is reserved for us in heaven. 1 Peter 1:3, 4. If there is a salvation "reserved" in heaven, why then should we find it impossible to believe that our omniscient Father in heaven may have reserved some great part of our salvation to be bestowed upon the sons of God during the troubled times at the end of this age of grace? It is not my intention here to endeavor to prove what the common salvation is, but personally I believe it to be that common salvation that reaches even the weakest or faintest of believers. Many people are believers whose lives and spiritual experience have been buried in tradition and who have never grasped more than that basic fact that Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners. Then there is that "so great salvation" of which we wrote in volume 30 of Treasures of Truth. These are they that have grasped the purpose of God and have laid hold upon it in faith. These like millions more have died in faith, not having received the promise, God having reserved some better thing for us. What might that better thing be if not the inscrutable wonder that a chosen company, representative of the whole body, may enter the glory of incorruption without ever seeing death?

The dead indeed shall be raised incorruptible, 1 Cor. 15:52, and we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall be changed. But in what way are these living to be changed if it be not from the corruption we now know to the incorruption that He has promised for the last days? There is a blessed part of our salvation reserved for us who are kept by the power of God ready to be revealed or manifested in the last days. Therefore think on these things and, putting aside all else, let us "lay hold" on the prize before us.

THE BODY OF OUR HUMILIATION

In the letter of Paul to the Philippians we have this remarkable statement: "Our conversation (that is, our manner of living) is in heaven, from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ: who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto His glorious body, according to the working whereby He is able to subdue all things unto Himself." Phil. 3:20, 21. The word "vile" is indeed a very expressive word, but the margin of my Bible replaces this word by the words "the body of our humiliation." This phrase gives an even clearer understanding of what the apostle means to say. This body of our humiliation is some day to be changed to a body of glory. That is exactly what the passage states. This is the direct reversal of the nightmarish change that overtook Adam's body at the time of the great transgression. Before the transgression in Eden Adam and Eve had bodies of glory. I am firmly convinced that their beautiful, light, ethereal forms were vibrant with the life of the Spirit of God, that they far more resembled the glorious body Jesus manifested at the transfiguration as, recorded in Matt. 16 than they were like the bodies of humiliation in which we now are clothed and in which we painfully dwell. They knew no pain or weariness; no physical distresses nor illnesses alarmed them. They knew nothing of hunger or thirst or the multiplied curses that now beset us on every hand. They were glorious creatures, illustrious in their appearance, magnificent in their bearing, respected and admired by all creatures. About them an aura shone. They ruled not through fear, but through the love of God, who was in them. They knew no fear or terror in themselves and they imposed no dread on others. The light of God's glory filled their countenances, making them distinct from all other creatures. They knew no lusts, nor were they ravished by carnal desires. Their delight was in their Most High creator and maker. They literally walked with Him and communed with Him in the cool of the day. They knew no grievous toil or salty sweat. Every labor was a joy and every task a glory. In the Father they lived and moved and had their being, His joy was their constant strength and His love their everlasting comfort.

Then came the hour of transgression. Through its predestined sorrow the man with his wife and all the creation about him became subject to the nightmarish alarm of the fall. Fear, timidity, anxiety, apprehension and misgiving overshadowed them like a dark cloud, filling their hearts with trepidation, disquietude, despondency and despair. Fear, temerity and remorse hourly beset them. To their dismay the animals and birds, which before had trusted them implicitly, now eyed them with suspicion, fear and mistrust, for all had changed because of the blighting curse that had fallen like a convulsion upon them. The Lord, whose presence they had always loved and anticipated with joy, now was a dread to their very beings, so they hid themselves from His life-giving presence among the trees of the garden.

The greatest tragedy that had befallen them now became most evident, for the glory light that had hitherto clothed them as it clothed our Lord at His transfiguration had suddenly departed from them as it later departed from the temple, Ezek. 9:3; 10:18; 11:23, and looking upon themselves, they saw only their shameful nakedness. Then, to add trepidation to their heart-breaking sorrow, they stood aghast at the sight of their own bodies, for those bodies once radiant with life and glory were now bodies of humiliation, corruption and death, fitted for an existence of death, vanity and futility which was now to be endured by both them and all creation until the blessed Redeemer should come in ages yet unborn to restore all things. Thus to all mankind came the frightful humiliation of the fall. Bodies once fitted for glory were now "fitted for destruction".
The body of glory was changed for the body of humiliation — a condition fitted for the dreary, painful six thousand years of labor, trouble and sorrow to follow, in which mankind would earn his daily bread by the sweat of his face, toiling to eat and eating to toil, each that he might do the other, living in the realm of death to pass off the scene at last as a vapor that appears for a little time and is gone. "Man that is born of woman is of few days, and full of trouble. He cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down: he fleeth also as a shadow, and continueth not. And dost thou open thine eyes upon such an one, and bringest me into judgment with thee? Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? Not one." Job 14:1-4. "What is your life? It is even a vapor, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away." Jas. 4:14. "For all flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away." 1 Pet. 1:24. Such a body is the body of our humiliation — no part of it free from death, no part of it free from sickness and disease, no part of it free from pain and distress.

Now the meaning of humiliate is this: 1. To lower the pride or self esteem of; to subject to feelings of inferiority, worthlessness; to mortify. Humiliation is the act of humiliating or being humiliated. (Funk and Wagnall's Dictionary). It is as when a soldier is dishonorably discharged. In the case of Adam it is as a general court-martial, convened to try the gravest offenses and empowered to deliver a sentence of death or dishonorable discharge. In the case of Adam the humiliation was nothing less than the death sentence. Notice that one of the synonyms for to humiliate is to mortify. The word mortal derives from the Latin mortalis, which means death. All such words as mortuary, mortify and mortal are from the same root.

In the light of this humiliation to mortality, corruption, decay and death is it any wonder that the apostle Paul cried out in his anguish, "O wretched man that I am! Who shall deliver me from the body of this death!" Rom. 7:24. Paul not only saw the awful calamity of existing in a body of death, but was mortified and humiliated by the many other calamities that followed in the wake of such an humiliation. Listen as he enumerates them for us in his letter to the Romans. "The Law is spiritual; but I am unspiritual, sold to sin. For I do not recognize what I am doing. I do not act as I would, but I do what I loathe. But if I do what I do not desire, I admit the excellence of the Law; and now it is no longer I that do it, but the sin which has its home within me. For I know that in me, that is, in my lower self, nothing good has its home; for the wish to do right is there, but not the power. What I do is not the good deed I desire, but the evil deed I do not desire. But if I do what I do not desire, it is no longer I who do it, but sin which has its home within me. I find therefore this rule, that when I desire to do what is right, evil is there with me. In my inmost self all my sympathy is with the law of God, but I discover in my faculties a different law, at war with the law of my understanding, and leading me captive to the law, which is in my faculties — the law of sin. Unhappy man that I am! Who will rescue me from this body of death? God! To whom be thanks through Jesus Christ our Lord!" Rom. 7:14-24. (Weymouth) From the blessed words, "I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord", we may begin to build our hope of a return from this beastly realm of humiliation and death to the realm of glory and life.

Since it is true that in my flesh dwelleth no good thing, then it must also be true that all that derives from the flesh and all the flesh can possibly produce must of necessity be bad. "Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil (vile) fruit. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit ... Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them." Matt. 16:18, 20. This shameful fact adds even greater weight to the sorrow and burden of our humiliation. It leaves us with no way of escape. There is nothing of heaven nor of the kingdom of God in the man who lives after the flesh. "In my flesh there dwelleth no good thing." For this reason Jesus said, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of heaven." He cannot see it, perceive it or understand it. It must be revealed to him by the Spirit. He must be convinced and convicted of it by the Holy Spirit and then he is given repentance by the Spirit and faith by the Spirit to believe. Then he is lifted by the Spirit of God from the dark night of his unregenerate state to the light and blessedness of his regeneration. He has taken his first step back to the heavenly realm from which he fell; for it is written: "If Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin; but the Spirit is life (that is, the Spirit now lives) because of righteousness." We have been born from above, though the body still remains in its humiliation and death, for it has not yet been born again. Yet the word promises that "if the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in you."
Rom. 8:10, 11. Thus to the spiritually reborn the promise is given that the Spirit that now dwells within and has quickened the soul will in God's hour also quicken the body of our humiliation.

I came to earth one summer night,
In form so very frail.
Forgotten was the realm of light,
My spirit's home, supreme delight;
Now this earth's bondage is my plight.
Its sorrows I bewail.
What came I for? Why am I here?
These questions face us all.
Was there a purpose very clear,
To God the Father oh so dear
That made Him subject us to fear
Of death and sin's dread pall?
Except true light in darkness shine
This life so pointless seems!
Created are our hearts to pine
For something we cannot define,
And so He leads us line by line
As He in wisdom deems.
A precept here! A precept there!
A light along the way!
In answer to our inmost prayer
He'll show us truth beyond compare
Till doubts depart and spirits share
The hope that is our stay.
How great is God! How great His plan
For creatures such as we!
In ages past He planned that man
Through toil and tears in life's short span
Should be prepared to take command
And kings with Christ to be.
Such awesome truth must make us pause
To ponder its import,
Such glorious hope must give us cause
To search our hearts for hindering flaws
And lay aside all weights because Our time grows ever short.
Then home at last from whence we came,
Forevermore at rest;
Our lessons learned through sin and shame;
Salvation wrought in Christ's dear name;
Perfection ours we now proclaim,
Our beings heaven blest.

ALL THINGS MUST BE BORN FROM ABOVE

There is working in all creation a divine law that all things must be born from above if they ever hope to rise above their primary state. There are four distinct realms in evidence in all the marvelous creation of God. First, there is the mineral realm; second, the vegetable realm. Then comes the animal kingdom, of which man is the highest type. Then far above all is the realm of the kingdom of God. I need present no argument to prove that things belonging to the mineral kingdom can never by any effort of their own rise to the kingdom that is just above them. It is an impossibility. We may cut and polish a stone all we wish, but it can never lift itself into the vegetable kingdom just above it. Nevertheless, the wisdom of God has provided a way by which things belonging to the mineral kingdom may be raised to the vegetable kingdom, but that miracle is not accomplished by any effort on its part. It can happen only when the kingdom above it - in this case the vegetable kingdom - reaches down and raises it into itself. A seed belonging to the vegetable kingdom is planted in the earth. The rain from heaven falls upon it and by the miracle of germination it thrusts its tiny roots down into the ground and begins the miraculous process of lifting the earth up into itself. By this miracle the mineral kingdom is absorbed and drawn up into the plant kingdom. It is actually born from above.

In like manner also the plant kingdom can never by any effort of its own lift itself into the animal kingdom just above it. The plant is hermetically sealed in its own realm and no effort or struggle could ever lift it into the kingdom above itself. But then another miracle takes place. The animal kingdom above it reaches down to raise it up. Perhaps a cow eats the grass that grows out of the ground and by the miracle of digestion the plant is lifted up to become flesh and blood and part of the animal kingdom. It is transformed from a plant to flesh by being born from above. Or let us say that man eats of the fruit of the earth, perhaps of wheat or corn, or the fruit of a tree, and again by the miracle of digestion the vegetable kingdom is lifted into the animal kingdom above it. By this phenomenal process, that none but the Most High could devise, the mineral kingdom has now advanced through the plant kingdom to the animal kingdom - in each case by being born from above.

Now comes the greatest miracle of them all, for the kingdom of God is the kingdom immediately above the animal kingdom in which man dwells. There is no way possible by which any man on the face of the earth can lift himself up into the kingdom of God. Could he lift himself by his own bootstraps, then might such a thing happen. It is just as impossible for man by any self effort to raise himself into the kingdom of God or any form of God-likeness as it is impossible for a stone to turn itself into a plant or for a blade of grass to raise itself into the animal kingdom. In all cases this transformation can take place only when the kingdom above reaches down and lifts the kingdom below up into itself. There is no other way. Thus we see more clearly than ever the utter fruitlessness of the hope of man to ever attain the kingdom of God by his self-effort, good works or works of righteousness. It is an impossibility in every way we look at it. Not by works of righteousness, which we have done, but according to His mercy He saved us by the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Spirit. It is the Spirit that quickeneth. The flesh profiteth nothing. For this reason our Lord Jesus Christ said to Nicodemus, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God. That which is born of the flesh is flesh." It can never be anything else. That which is born mineral is mineral. It can never lift itself higher. That which is born vegetable is vegetable. It is forever shut up in that kingdom. That which is born flesh is flesh. It is hermetically sealed into that kingdom. That which is born of the Spirit is spirit. This is the realm of the Father forever unshackled. Is it any wonder then that Jesus said to a man born into the realm of flesh and blood, "Ye must be born again"? Marvel not that He said, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." It is fundamentally, scientifically and spiritually true. Man that is born of woman must be touched by the kingdom above him and lifted into it by the Holy Spirit. To be born again is to be born from above. The kingdom above touches us by its power and lifts us up into the realm of God.

Let us then consider this great miracle. In the case of man it is the kingdom of God that reaches down to him and by the miracles of repentance, faith and regeneration the Spirit of life from above raises him, spirit, soul and body, and he is born from above into the kingdom of God. Because he is thus reborn, he becomes a citizen of the heavenly realm. He who once was hermetically sealed into the animal kingdom of flesh and blood is now a citizen of the heavenly realm and born into the kingdom of God by the miracle of regeneration. No longer do his interests lie in the realm of carnal men, but henceforth his citizenship is in heaven from whence the Lord Jesus shall later appear to transform these bodies of our humiliation that they may be fashioned like unto His glorious body - or His body of glory - according to the working whereby He is able to subdue all things unto Himself. Phil. 3:21

We are all aware that in that far off beginning, after the Lord had made the heaven and the earth, He took of the dust of the earth and formed a man in His likeness and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life. With this thought in mind let us consider the following truth. We have illustrated above how that which belongs to the mineral kingdom may enter the vegetable kingdom when it is lifted from above. Then it can be brought into the animal kingdom by being eaten or absorbed by the kingdom of flesh and blood. Should it seem impossible, then, that man, whose body was made from the dust of the earth, should find himself at last transformed into the very image and likeness of God? To live no more in the body of his humiliation, but in the body of Christ's glory, our house which is from heaven? Well may we gasp at the wonder of this hope! Yet it is true, for "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him. But God hath revealed them unto us by His Spirit; for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God." 1 Cor. 9, 10

Now when the prophet Isaiah was speaking of the blessed triumphs of the kingdom age, he said, "And He will destroy in this mountain the face of the covering cast over all people, and the vail that is spread over all nations. He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of His people shall He take away from off all the earth: for the Lord hath spoken it." Isa. 25:7-8. Hear now these enthralling words from Moffatt's translation. "And on this mountain shall He strip away the mourning shroud from all mankind, the veil of sorrow from all nations, displacing death for evermore. So shall He wipe the tears from every face, and free His own folk from taunts everywhere. Tis the Eternal's own decree." It becomes increasingly evident that for ages there has been an impenetrable covering cast over the faces of all people. This has kept their eyes blinded to the greater and more perfect understanding of the truth. Paul once said, "Until this day remain-eth the same vail untaken away in the reading of the Old Testament; which vail is done away in Christ." 2 Cor. 3:13. My heart is often saddened when I perceive that many, many of God's dear people are not only wearing the vail of darkness over the eyes of their understanding, but pulling it closer lest the eyes of their understanding should be enlightened and the light of revelation should pierce the darkness of their tradition. They cannot see this and they cannot see that. It has amazed me beyond words that, though one presents them with dozens, perhaps hundreds, of scriptures that reveal a truth, for all that they still insist it isn't there. Oh, let us turn with open faces. Let the Spirit tear the vail away from our eyes that we may see by the Spirit that which eye hath not seen, ear hath not heard, neither hath entered the heart of man. The more we slam the door against the truth and argue against it the deeper we enter into darkness. No man can progress to greater heights until he accepts the truth the Spirit has set before him. David said it all when he prayed, "Open mine eyes that I may behold wondrous things out of Thy law." When we have an open heart, the Holy Spirit also opens our eyes that they may be ravished with the sight of wonderful things. There is an invisible world above us that can be seen only by the eye of the spirit. As deep calls to deep, so Spirit calls to spirit. Well might we murmur the prayer of Elisha, "Lord, open his eyes!" And the Lord opened his eyes and he saw the mountains and hills filled with the hosts of the Lord. 0 Lord! Remove the covering cast upon all faces and the vail that hangs dark and heavy upon all the nations of the earth! That vail is part of the humiliation that fell upon mankind at the hour of our transgression.

There's a big, broad world up yonder; There are forests where silence has lease. There's a beauty that fills me with wonder; There's a stillness that fills me with peace.

When the apostle Paul was preparing to reveal the truth of 2 Cor. Chapter 5, he well knew in his spirit that it would be a revelation difficult for people to believe. Therefore he set about to prepare our hearts for it in chapters 3 and 4. When Moses came down from the mountain, he had received the law, which was the ministration of death, 2 Cor. 3:7, because the law shouts death to men whose hearts are carnal and who cannot cease from sin. How may one who is born in sin and shapen in iniquity love the Lord with all his soul and mind and might? It is impossible. He who offends in one point is guilty of all. Thus the law ministers death - not life - and becomes our pedagogue to lead us to Christ, who will give us a new heart upon which the law of God is written and which is made a blessed and treasured part of our new spiritual nature. The law of God was never "done away" in the sense that it was discarded. It was done away from cold, hard tables of stone, from whence it stared in judgment upon helpless, hopeless sinners, but it was transferred into the heart of the penitent and believing soul, where it has become his new God-like nature and the joy of his very existence. The saints of God need no commandment from without shouting, "Thou shall love the Lord", because the love of God is placed within them by the Spirit which He has given them. They need no commanding voice, urging, "Thou shall not covet", for the love of God is in them, working no ill to their neighbor. They need no command to say, "Thou shall not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain", for that blessed name has become wholly sacred to them. Yea, His lovely name has become their new name, written in their blood-washed hearts, upon their holy heads and in their transformed minds. Thus it is with all the holy commandments of God. They have become the nature of the saints of the Most High.

Say no more, O foolish man, that the Lord has thrown His law away. The holy, righteous truth is that He has given the lawless man a new heart, which the holy law of God both fills and thrills. There it is written and kept by the power of the indwelling Christ as the commandments long ago were kept in the sacred Ark of the Covenant I exhort you in the name of the Lord to leach and believe these things, for they are truth. The idea that the holy law can be kept by a carnal man is forever wrong and is a dreadful error. Teach the people rather that the law is spiritual and man is carnal with a nature totally opposed to the nature of God and with little more ability lo abide by a spiritual law than the devil himself. It is a transformation that is needed. It is to be converted, born again from above, and translated into the kingdom of God. The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul. Godly sorrow worketh repentance not to be repented of, but the sorrow of the world worketh death. Say no more, "I am doing the best I can." All our righteousnesses are but filthy rags. The literal Hebrew meaning of "filthy rags" according to Strong is the menstrual cloth. Certainly, then, we have nothing good to present to Him whose holiness and purity is higher than the heavens. How much more does all this emphasize the body of our humiliation! In time past we all walked according to the course of this wicked age, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience, among whom we all had our conversation in times past in the lusts of men, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and the mind and were by nature the children of wrath even as others. Eph. 2:2-3. But how our souls exult in the words, which follow! "But God, who is rich in mercy, for His great love wherewith He loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ (by grace ye are saved): and hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus. For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God; Not of works lest any man should boast." Eph. 2:4-9

How true were the marvelous words of the prophet Ezekiel! Thus saith the Lord, "I will give them one heart, and I will put a new spirit within you; and I will take the stony heart out of their flesh, and give them a heart of flesh: that they may walk in My statutes, and keep Mine ordinances, and do them: and they shall be My people, and I shall be their God." Ezek. 11:19-20. Then again this theme is renewed in chapter 36:25-27 in these blessed words: "Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness, and from all your idols will I cleanse you. A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you: and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh. And I will put My Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in My statutes, and ye shall keep My judgments and do them." What marvelous promises these really are and what a magnificent hope our Lord has set before us! How thankful we ought to be that we now live in the day when our heavenly Father, through His grace freely bestowed in Christ Jesus, is indeed taking away our stony hearts to replace them with new hearts like, unto His own, and new minds also that love His law and keep His commandments! I trust we will not lose our blessed thread of thought should we turn aside a moment to say how thankful we should be that, in these evil days of rampaging wickedness when foolish men with hopelessly carnal minds are putting iron and plastic hearts in men and the hearts of baboons in babies to cure their ills, our blessed Lord from heaven is saying, "A new heart will I give you and a new spirit will I put within you: and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh and will give you a heart of flesh." Hallelujah!

Now "if the service that brings death — its code being engraved in writing upon stones — came with glory, so that the children of Israel could not look steadily on the face of Moses because of the brightness of his face — a transient luster — will not the service of the Spirit be far more glorious? For if the service, which pronounces doom had glory, far more glorious still is the service, which offers righteousness. For, in fact, that which was so glorious has no glory at all in comparison with the surpassing glory. For if that which was to be abolished (that is, the law written upon a stone) came with glory, much more is that which is permanent arrayed in glory. With such a hope as this, then, we speak without reserve, unlike Moses, who used to throw a veil over his face to hide from the gaze of the children of Israel the passing away of what was but transitory. But indeed their minds had grown dense; for to this day during the reading of the Old Testament the same veil remains unlifted, because it is in Christ that it is to be abolished. Yes, to this day, whenever Moses is read, a veil lies upon their hearts. But whenever they return to the Lord, the veil is withdrawn. Now the Lord means the Spirit; and where the Spirit of the Lord is, freedom is. But all of us, as with unveiled faces we mirror the glory of the Lord, are transformed into the same likeness, from glory to glory, even as derived from the Lord the Spirit." 2 Cor. 3:7-18. (Weymouth)
Transformed by grace divine
   The glory shall be Thine;
To Thy most holy will, 0 Lord,
   I now my all resign.
Take every failure, each mistake,
   Of our poor human ways,
And, Saviour, for Thy dear name's sake
Let me show forth Thy praise.

0, Christ, what glory Thou hast prepared for them that love Thee! How manifold are Thy blessings and all Thy ways past finding out!

THE ETERNAL HOUSE

"For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." 2 Cor. 5:1

The learned Adam Clark has pointed out that the Hebrew word labash, which answers to the apostle's phrase "to be clothed", signifies to be surrounded, covered, or invested with anything, so that, when it is stated that Moses went into the cloud, the inference is that he went into the midst of the cloud as if one put on a garment. Thus he was clothed with the cloud. He further states that the word beith in Hebrew (that is, house) denotes a cover, case or clothing. Thus the house of the face is a veil, the house of the hand signifies gloves and the house of the feet, shoes.

We can see from this that at present our soul and spirit are clothed upon with the body of humiliation, a body - or house - of flesh always in the process of corruption. But there remains for us another and better house - a house not made with hands - reserved for us in heaven. It is eternal and incorruptible. For this reason the apostle says, "We know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. For in this (our present house of humiliation) we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven: if so be that being clothed we shall not be found naked." 2 Cor. 5:1-3. Not only do we groan in this corruptible house, but the whole creation groans in pain with us. They are in painful waiting just as we are. How often on these prairies we hear the lonesome howling of the coyotes, wailing out their woes, perhaps to God Himself, plaintively crying to Him for food and, all unknown to us, pleading for the day of the manifestation of the sons of God. Think not this to be a myth, for the word of inspiration has plainly said, "The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now", waiting for the adoption (that is, sonship), even the redemption of our bodies. Concerning that redemption of the body this whole chapter is being written.

Not only do the wild beasts seek their food from God, but often we hear the piteous, plaintive cries of some frail creature being torn to pieces by a ravenous beast, or see the dreadful fear of a tiny mouse or bird about to be devoured by an enormous cat. These too, poor helpless creatures, are crying aloud and groaning with anguish and pain for the long awaited day when at long, long last the sons of God will be manifested and with Jesus Christ, their elder brother, as their Head, will deliver the whole creation from the thralldom of decay into the glorious freedom of the liberating reign of the sons of God. Then there will be no fear or dread. The wolf shall lie down with the lamb, the lion eat straw like an ox. The child shall play on the hole of the poisonous asp and nothing shall hurt nor destroy in all God's holy mountain.

There the bear will be gentle;
   The lion will be tame,
And the wolf shall lie down with the lamb.
   There the beast from the wild
   Will be led by the child,
And I shall be changed from the creature that I am.
0 Lord God of the universe, speed the wonderful day when these things shall surely be. Thy kingdom come! Thy will be done in earth as it is done in heaven.

These things shall be. A loftier race
Than ere the world hath known shall rise
With flame of freedom in their souls
And light of knowledge in their eyes.
They shall be gentle, brave and strong,
Not to spill human blood, but dare
All that may plant man's lordship firm
On earth and fire and sea and air.
Nation with nation, hand in hand,
Unarmed shall live as comrades free;
In every heart and brain shall throb
The pulse of one fraternity.
There shall be no more sin, no shame,
And wrath and wrong shall fettered lie;
For men shall be at one with God
In bonds of firm necessity.

Thus in pain the whole creation waits for the sons of God to put on their house which is from heaven that they as well as we may be delivered from the bondage of their corruption and the thralldom of their decay. In this we groan, "earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven: if so be that being clothed we shall not be found naked. For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened; not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life." All that is mortal about us must be swallowed up by that which is immortal. Beautiful and expressive as this passage is as rendered by the King James translators, we may derive even deeper meaning by comparing the rich translation of Richard Weymouth, which I am convinced brings the marvelous truth of incorruption even closer to home, as we shall see in the following words: "For we know that if the mere tent, which is our earthly house, is taken down, we have in heaven a building from God, a house not made with human hands, but eternal. In this one, indeed, we sigh, because we long to put on over it our dwelling which comes from heaven - sure that, when we have put it on, we shall not be found unclothed. Yes, we who are in this tent do sigh under our burdens, not that we wish to lay aside our tent, but rather to put the other over it, so that our mortality may be absorbed in life. And He who formed us for this very purpose is God, who has given us His Spirit as guarantee." 2 Cor. 5:1-5

Let us now notice just what truth is stated here. First, we do not wish to lay aside our present tent. Though we know that very glorious things lie before us, to my knowledge I have never met a man or a woman who was actually anxious to die. That is the meaning of the words, "We do not wish to lay aside our tent". In some remarkable way, only understood by the wisdom of the Most High, He has placed in the heart of all creation a secret dread of the thing we call death. We recoil from it as we would from an enemy or any distasteful thing. We do not desire to be unclothed and stripped of this home in which we now dwell. You will notice that this same trait is evident in the heart of every creature God has made, from the least to the greatest. Have you not seen animals scurry away when there was the least danger of death? Have you ever noticed the super strength of a creature who is fearful that death may overcome it? Or watched a tiny insect flee for its life if there is danger that one intends to kill it? Even a mosquito fears death, and that dread is in the heart of all creation and not least in the heart of man.

It is true, therefore, that even the most spiritual among men have a certain inbred reluctance to be stripped of their house of flesh, even though it is a covering of mortality, corruption and humiliation. This trait has been placed there by the Lord. Therefore, though our hearts sigh in painful waiting for the realm of incorruption, we do not desire to be unclothed by death, but rather, as the truth is presented here, "not that we wish to lay aside our tent, but rather to put the other over it, so that our mortality might be absorbed by life". That is the way we long for it to be. Therefore we take great courage and faith in the remarkable statement that now follows. "He that has formed us for this very purpose is God, who has given us His Spirit as a guarantee." Hence this is not only our wish, but it is also God's intention. He has formed us for this very purpose.

Lest we should lose the thread of our thought, it might be well here to consider other passages that deal closely with this truth, for verily I do believe that in these words there is a promise held out to the people of God in these last days, assuring that this marvelous change may yet take place in the saints who are now living at the end of this age, that they without going to the grave and thus laying aside their earthly tent may indeed put the other (that is, our house from heaven) over it, that mortality might be absorbed by life. As decayed and corrupt plants often become fertility for new plants, so also this body of our humiliation shall be absorbed by the new life of incorruption when our house from heaven is put on over it. For we shall not all sleep, the apostle tells us, but we shall all be changed.

The subject of resurrection, transfiguration and change was opened for us in the first epistle of Paul to the Corinthians, chapter 15. The enrapturing mystery proclaimed in this chapter should be perused with meditation and prayer, word by word and verse by verse by each and every one of us. It would take more space than we have in this book to search out all its gilded avenues, even if our ability was equal to the task, because it has to do with one of the most excellent mysteries of the ages - that is, the resurrection of the dead, the change from death to life, from corruption to incorruption, from mortality to immortality, and from glory to glory.

Infallible as is the truth that Jesus died, the resurrection holds such confirmation of its truth that only the most unlearned or the greatest of fools could ever deny the fact of it. That our bodies also shall be quickened, even as Jesus was quickened, by the life of Christ dwelling in us is therefore beyond doubt, whether reasonable or unreasonable. Many of the proofs of resurrection Paul lays down in 1 Cor. 15:1-8 The courts of earth require only two or three witnesses to prove even the gravest offenses. The greatest number of witnesses ever required is for that of an oral will, which in some countries requires the testimony of seven witnesses. But here the witnesses to the resurrection of Christ run into many hundreds of people who saw Him alive after His passion and talked with Him over a period of forty days as He dwelt among them, speaking to them of the things concerning the kingdom of God. He showed Himself alive after His passion by many infallible proofs. The more His enemies attempted to hide the truth, the more the truth was revealed by their contradictions.

In chapter 15, verse 39, Paul confidently affirms that, "all flesh is not the same flesh". There is one flesh of man, another flesh of beasts, another flesh of birds, and still another flesh of fish. Not many years ago science declared that there was no difference in flesh. Then they discovered a way by which the flesh of every creature could be identified as separate from all others. Today they can tell the difference between the flesh of a deer and the flesh of a cow, or the difference between the flesh of a cow and that of a chicken. Now they are beginning to discover at long last that there is also a definite difference between the flesh and blood of a white man and the flesh and blood of a black man. Whether we like it or not, the truth will reveal itself sooner or later. The scripture that in the King James Version says that God has made of one blood all nations to dwell upon the earth is misleading. The word blood, as you have probably noticed, is an italicized word and is therefore not in the original. The text actually reads, "God hath made of one (which is Himself) all nations," (yea, and all creatures to dwell upon the earth). This scripture appears thus in most other translations, including The British Revised Version, The American Revised Version, Weymouth, Moffatt, Wuest and The Emphatic Diaglott. Thus we may conclude that the "one" spoken of in this verse, Acts 17:26, refers to the Creator Himself, and not to Adam. If "kind after his kind" is the edict of the Lord, then it is an impossibility that two white parents could give birth to a black child or that two black parents could give birth to a white child. If a white man were to tell you that both his parents were black, would you believe him or laugh at him?

Not only did the apostle state that all flesh is not the same flesh, but he also declared, "There are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial; but the glory of the celestial is one (that is, one thing), and the glory of the terrestrial is another (thing)." 1 Cor. 15:40 Then in verse 42 he says, "So also is the resurrection of the dead. It (the body) is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption: it is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power; it is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body and there is a spiritual body. And so it is written, the first man Adam was made a living soul; the last Adam was made a quickening (life-giving) spirit. Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual. The first man is of the earth, earthy: the second man is the Lord from heaven."
Verses 42-47. "And as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly."
Verse 49

Now follows a great mystery, for we, after having been acquainted with the fact of life and death all our lives, are now told of a day to come when some will put on the incorruptible state and receive the body of resurrection without dying at all. "We shall not all sleep," (that is, we shall not all die), the apostle declares, "but we shall all be changed." 1 Cor. 15:51 The word changed as in 1 Cor. 15:51, transformed as in Rom. 12:2, and transfigured as in Matt. 17:3 all come from the Greek word metamorphoo, from which comes our English word metamorphosis, which refers to the kind of change (or metamorphosis) that takes place when a caterpillar is transformed into a butterfly - the first being a lowly creature of the dust, crawling in its humiliation on its belly, and the second a creature of glory, a citizen of the heavens and of the air. Thus the apostle is saying that we shall all be changed, transformed or transfigured, for this corruptible must put on incorruption and this mortal must put on immortality. This is the transformation that is promised by God and is certain to take place in its appointed time.

We are aware that the general teaching is that this scripture refers to a rapture that is to take place before a time of tribulation in which all Christians - hot, cold, or lukewarm - will suddenly be transported to heaven. It is not my purpose here to either confirm or refute this teaching, although there are serious errors in it. My purpose at present is rather to show that there is abundant evidence that this marvelous change for which the whole creation groans may well take place in the in Christed saints who are looking for His appearing while we are still in this age and upon this earth. We shall not all sleep (die), but we shall all be changed (transformed) at the sounding of the last trumpet. 1 Cor. 15:51-52 The last trumpet of Revelation sounds at the time when the Lord is about to take over the kingdoms of the world and set up His own government through the ministry of the sons of God. This will be a great time of trouble and upheaval, which is no doubt a necessary prelude to such a radical transformation as the coming of the kingdom will be.

This transfiguration of the in Christed saints will take place in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye. The twinkling of an eye takes about one-fortieth of a second. It will be as a flash of lightning as described by the Lord in Matt. 24:27. The Greek word "astrapto" means a flash of lightning and not a gradual lightening as at the dawn of a morning. This coming of the Son of man as a flash of lightning, or in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, is when the transformation of the in Christ saints from corruption to incorruption takes place. The great "shining forth", when every eye shall see Him, does not take place until a little time afterward. Matthew states in His gospel, "Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken: and then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." Matt. 24:29-31 First He appears to transform the saints. Afterwards He comes and all shall see Him.

THE APPEARING OF CHRIST

Many accounts are given in God's word that tell in no uncertain terms of blessed occasions when the Lord appeared unto men. On all occasions that appearing heralded some very special event that was soon to take place and always it brought a special unveiling of some immediate purpose of God that evidently had been purposed in His divine mind from the foundation of the world. From the garden of Eden to the book of Revelation we read of instances of the Lord's appearing in person to men and women whom He had chosen, and on all such occasions He brought life and blessed revelation to their hearts. There have been other occasions when a mighty angel such as Gabriel was sent to bring the Lord's message. That angel was sometimes called the angel of the Lord and was in all probability the Son of God Himself.

Millenniums ago the Lord appeared unto our father Abraham in Ur of the Chaldees. More than three hundred years had passed into history since the waters of the great flood of Noah's day had wiped the earth clean of its wicked inhabitants, but now, alas, man, always prone to degeneration, was once again descending into the very abyss of sin, rebellion and idolatry and, lest the Lord should send another flood to destroy him, he was now attempting to build a gigantic tower that would reach to heaven where men might take refuge. Carnal man will go to any extremity rather than turn to God in repentance. It was in the midst of these human schemes of rebellion against the Most High that the Lord appeared to Abraham, saying, "Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I shall show thee." Gen. 12:1. Then in verse 7 we are told "the Lord appeared unto Abram, and said, Unto thy seed will I give this land: and there he built an altar unto the Lord, who appeared unto him." Gen. 12:7-8

The prime root of the Hebrew word ra-ah, translated appear, means to see or to look on one another; to gaze, perceive and show. It also carries with it the thought of advice, provision, etc. These special appearances of the Lord are far beyond the possibility of human description. That is why those prophets like Ezekiel, who tried to describe an appearance of the Lord, always endeavored to compare what they saw to some known thing, but their efforts were always pitifully feeble because the Lord is not really like anything on earth that we have either known or seen. A good example of this difficulty in comparing the unknown with the known is found in Ezekiel, chapter 1, where the prophet tries to describe the appearance of the glory of the Lord. In doing so he uses such terms as a whirlwind, a great cloud, a fire infolding itself, a brightness, the color of amber, the likeness of four living creatures, the appearance as of a flash of lightning. Verse 14 A wheel within a wheel. The likeness of the firmament. Verse 22 A noise like great waters. Thus the prophet struggles with words to describe the indescribable. But these marvelous appearances of the Lord always wrought tremendous change and transformation in the lives of those blessed ones who experienced them.

Again the Lord appeared to Abram when he was ninety-nine years old, saying, "I am the Almighty God." Hebrew El-Shaddai; El Hebrew for God and Shaddai meaning the breasted one, that is, the nourisher and satisfier, the all-sufficient one. Not only was the appearance of El-Shaddai such a transforming event in Abraham's life, but the very name by which He made Himself known was a most significant revelation of Himself as the one who was able to keep all His promises as well as to add to them and be Abraham's everlasting supply and sustenance. What a marvelous revelation of the future this appearing of El was! History records the sustaining provision of the Lord all through the earthly journey of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, then to the millions of Israel, his seed, during their forty years of wandering in a dreary, trackless, burning wilderness, devoid of either food, water or shelter. There He was El-Shaddai, their sustainer and their provider; a pillar of fire by night and a covering cloud against the heat of the day; causing rivers of water to flow in the wilderness to supply a host of more than two million people besides innumerable cattle and beasts of burden. Surely the Almighty proved Himself true to His name - El-Shaddai, the breasted one.

Rivers shall flow in the wilderness,
Floods from heaven descend.
The earth shall be filled with His holiness
Forever, world without end.

Again the Lord appeared to Abraham to renew His promise to him that a son would be born to him of his wife Sarah and to forewarn him of the destruction of Sodom. Gen. 18

The Lord appeared unto Isaac in the days of the great famine, telling him that he should not go down to Egypt, but to "dwell in the land which I shall tell thee of." Gen. 26:2 "Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and will bless thee, for unto thee and unto thy seed I will give all these countries, and I will perform the oath which I sware unto Abraham thy father: and I will make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these countries: and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." Gen. 26:3-4

As we read of these appearances of the Lord, we become more and more convinced that every appearance of God to man is of utmost importance, bringing with it revelation, advice, truth and understanding, truth that is to affect the immediate present and also to be of vital importance in the days to follow. We certainly have a right to believe that the Lord, the ruler of heaven and earth, would never reveal Himself nor appear to any man or woman merely in answer to some wishful prayer or because of personal curiosity. Every revelation of Himself is intended to affect the purpose of God in general and His own beloved people in particular.

In like manner the Lord appeared to Jacob, the son of Isaac, the son of Abraham, to confirm His purpose in Him, saying unto him, "Behold, I will make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, and I will make thee a multitude of people; and will give this land to thy seed after thee for an everlasting possession." Gen. 48:4 The beautiful account of this appearing is recorded for us in Genesis 28:10-22. No words of mine could add to the beauty and importance of this wonderful story of the appearing of "the Lord God" (Hebrew, Jehovah Elohim) - a name used only when the Lord's relationship to man is involved, such as their governor, their redeemer, their creator or their king. Because of the beauty and importance of the appearing of the Lord on this occasion, I quote it here in its entirety. "And Jacob went out from Beer-sheba, and went toward Haran. And he lighted upon a certain place, and tarried there all night, because the sun was set; and he took of the stones of that place, and put them for his pillows, and lay down in that place to sleep. And he dreamed, and behold a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: and behold the angels of God ascending and descending upon it. And, behold, the Lord stood above it, and said, I am the Lord God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac: the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed; and thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth, and thou shalt spread abroad to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south: and in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed. And, behold, I am with thee, and will keep thee in all the places whither thou goest, and will bring thee again to this land; for I will not leave thee until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of. And Jacob awaked out of his sleep, and said, Surely the Lord is in this place; and I knew it not. And he was afraid, and said, How dreadful is this place! This is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven. And Jacob rose up early in the morning, and took the stone that he had put for his pillows, and set it up for a pillar, and poured oil upon the top of it. And he called the name of the place Bethel; but the name of that city was Luz at the first. And Jacob vowed a vow, saying, If God will be with me, and will keep me in this way that I go, and will give me bread to eat and raiment to put on, so that I come again to my father's house in peace; then shall the Lord be my God. And this stone, which I have set for a pillar, shall be God's house: and of all that Thou shalt give me I will surely give a tenth unto Thee." Gen. 28:10-22

This blessed appearing of the Lord at Luz, or Bethel, began a transformation in the life of Jacob, which was to be climaxed many years later in his terrible struggle with the angel of the Lord at Peniel. Gen. 32:24-32. The angel in this instance was none other than the Lord Himself. On this climactic occasion Jacob confessed that his name was indeed Jacob, the supplanter, the cheat, the crook, the knave and the swindler; and because of this confession his name was changed to Israel, the prince with God. I do not believe that Jacob received the blessing when he deceived his father and cheated Esau. Gen. 27:1:33. He received it only when he confessed his sin by confessing his name. That is why he said to the angel of the Lord, "I will not let thee go except thou bless me." Gen. 32:26

One of the most remarkable appearings of God to man was His appearance to Moses at the burning bush. There "the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush; and he looked, and, behold, the bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed. And Moses said, I will now turn aside, and see this great sight, why the bush is not burnt. And when the Lord saw that he turned aside to see, God called unto him out of the midst of the bush, and said, Moses, Moses. And he said, Here am I. And He said, Draw not nigh hither; put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground. Moreover He said, I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. And Moses hid his face, for he was afraid to look upon God. And the Lord said, I have surely seen the affliction of My people which are in Egypt, and have heard their cry by reason of their task masters for I know their sorrows; and I am come down to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians, and to bring them up out of that land unto a good land and a large, unto a land flowing with milk and honey." Exod. 3:2-8. "And Moses said unto God, Behold, when I come unto the children of Israel, and shall say unto them, The God of your fathers hath sent me unto you; and they shall say to me, What is His name? What shall I say unto them? And God said unto Moses, I AM THAT I AM: and He said, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, I AM hath sent me unto you." Exod. 3:13-14

I AM or I AM THAT I AM is really a title rather than a name, the import of which is far beyond the possibility of explanation. It reveals God to be much more than God. The Latin Vulgate translates this as "I AM WHO I AM;" The Septuagint, as "I AM HE WHO EXISTS;" The Arabic as "THE ETERNAL WHO PASSES NOT AWAY;" The Tar-gum of Jonathon as "HE WHO SPAKE AND THE WORLD WAS, WHO SPAKE AND ALL THINGS EXISTED". As the original words literally signify "I will be what I will be," some have supposed that God designed to inform Moses that what He had been to his fathers, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, in the past He would be to him and the Israelites in the future, and that He would perform the promises made to them and the fathers. This wonderful title, I AM THAT I AM, points up the eternity and self-existence of God. Jesus used this same title when He said, "Before Abraham was, I AM," and the Jews, understanding the implication, took up stones to stone Him. John 8:58.

My thought here is not to give an explanation of the meaning of this great revelation when the I AM appeared to Moses, but simply to show how important this appearing really was in that it confirmed all previous promises of God, that it foretold His power for the emancipation of Israel, and a deliverance that dwarfs and overshadows all other liberations the world has ever known. We see, then, how the appearances of God to man have never failed to bring with them a revelation of Himself and an experience of vast importance to the whole plan and purpose of God. Therefore we should consider with the greatest reverence and care this most blessed promise given to us: "Unto them that look for Him shall He appear the second time without sin unto salvation." Heb. 9:28 We pass over these precious promises oftentimes without even pausing to think what their meaning may really be. Certainly the vast majority of Christians see but do not perceive. They hear but do not understand. But, if we would sit in God's presence to consider the precious promises He has made to us, asking the Spirit of the Lord to reveal them to us, then would He open the eyes of our understanding that He might reveal to us that which eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, of the things that God has prepared for them that love Him, but which He reveals by His Spirit.

There are numerous other accounts in the Old Testament which tell of the Lord's appearances to men, such as His appearance to Solomon, 1 Kings 3:5 and 9:2-9; or to the prophet Elijah at Horeb, 1 Kings 19:8-18; to Hannah and to Samuel, Isaiah and Daniel; but we will leave them for your earnest searching.

The Gospels contain the soul-stirring account of the appearance of the resurrected Christ to Mary to raise again the hopes and joys of all those who had believed on Him throughout the ages, as the poet so beautifully says.

Raised from the dead were Mary's hopes and joys;
Gone were her sorrows, gone her doubts and fears.
She understood then what we now should know;
Eternal life is walking through the years.

By that glorious resurrection appearance He demonstrated to the whole world that He is indeed and in truth the resurrection and the life. Mary had come early, bringing spices, to begin the work of embalming His body, sorrowfully believing that His death on the cross of Calvary was indeed" the end of a very sad and painful chapter in the history of the world. But when He spoke her name, "Mary", her wide-eyed' cry of astonishment was expressed in her rapturous response, "R A B B O N I!" In my heart I see her look of awe and utter stupefaction as her eyes open wide with incredulity at His appearing, and her lips drop apart, mute to utter another word.

Then there followed the touching and wonderful appearing of Christ to Cleopas and another, probably his beloved wife, for she with her husband had remained at the cross with Mary when He was crucified, John 19:25, as they journeyed in bitter sorrow on their way home to Emmaus. Luke records in the lovely story that, as they talked together of all these things that had happened, it came to pass that Jesus Himself drew near and went with them; but their eyes were holden that they should not know Him. "And he said unto them.

“What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk, and are sad?” And the one of them, whose name was Cleopas, answering said unto Him, Art Thou only a stranger in Jerusalem, and hast not known the things which are come to pass there in these days? And He said unto them, What things? And they said unto Him, Concerning Jesus of Nazareth, which was a prophet mighty in deed and in word before God and all the people: and how the chief priests and our rulers delivered Him to be condemned to death, and have crucified Him. But we trusted that it had been He, which should have redeemed Israel: and beside all this, today is the third day since these things were done. Yea, and certain women also of our company made us astonished, which were early at the sepulcher: and when they found not His body, they came, saying that they had also seen a vision of angels, which said that He was alive. And certain of them, which were with us went to the sepulcher, and found it even so as the women had said: but Him they saw not.
Then He said unto them, 0 fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken! Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into His glory? And beginning at Moses and all the prophets, He expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning Himself. And they drew nigh unto the village, whither they went: and He made as though He would have gone further. But they constrained Him, saying, Abide with us: for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent. And He went in to tarry with them. And it came to pass, as He sat at meat with them, He took bread, and blessed it, and brake, and gave to them. And their eyes were opened, and they knew Him: and He vanished out of their sight. And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us, while He talked with us by the way, and while He opened to us the scriptures? And they rose up the same hour, and returned to Jerusalem, and found the eleven gathered together, and them that were with them, saying, The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon. And they told them what things were done in the way, and how He was known of them in breaking of bread.

"And as they thus spake, Jesus Himself stood in the midst of them, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you. But they were terrified and affrighted, and supposed that they had seen a spirit. And He said unto them, Why are ye troubled? and why do thoughts arise in your hearts? Behold My hands and My feet, that it is I Myself: handle Me and see: for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see Me have. And when He had thus spoken, He showed them His hands and His feet. And while they yet believed not for joy, and wondered, He said unto them, Have ye here any meat? And they gave Him a piece of a broiled fish, and of an honeycomb. And He took it, and did eat before them. And He said unto them, These are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled, which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms concerning Me. Then opened He their understanding, that they might understand the scriptures." Luke 24:13-45

My heart burns within me and my soul is filled with tears of rejoicing as these sacred and wonderful scenes pass in retrospect before my eyes. Beautiful and inspirational as the story is and wonderful beyond words as is the message it brings, yet to us who live in these days of promise the most precious jewel to us all is the knowledge that these were "appearings" of Christ as He appeared, first to Mary, then, it would seem, to Cleopas and his wife, then to Peter and the eleven gathered together. "Thomas, one of the twelve called Didymus, was not with them when Jesus came. The other disciples therefore said unto him, We have seen the Lord. But he said unto them, Except I shall see in His hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into His side, I will not believe. And after eight days again His disciples were within, and Thomas with them: then came Jesus, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said, Peace be unto you. Then saith He to Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and behold My hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into My side: and be not faithless, but believing. And Thomas answered, and said unto Him, MY LORD AND MY GOD! Jesus saith unto him, Thomas, because thou hast seen Me, thou hast believed: blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed." John 20: 24-29 How often have I, together with multitudes of others, longed to see His face, but how we may rejoice that, though we have not yet seen Him, this adds rather than takes away from our blessedness, for blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed.

But here again we must remind ourselves that these sacred stories we read with tears of joy and awe are indeed accounts of the many appearings of Christ after His resurrection as in His grace He came to confirm eternal truth among His brethren. Brethren, my heart is filled with love and gratitude in the knowledge that, while our blessed Saviour hung upon His cross of rejection and shame, there were those standing by, still loving, still adoring, and sharing with Him in His suffering. "There stood by the cross of Jesus His mother, and His mother's sister, Mary the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene." John 19:25. It was to these same ones who shared His suffering and stood by His cross that He first appeared after His resurrection, and, though inspiration no doubt wisely omits that He also appeared to His mother, that same inspiration tells us that He did, for she, too, stayed at the cross when He died.

Sadly we must admit with shamefacedness and regret that our Lord Jesus Christ is being crucified afresh in our day both by the world, who knows Him not, and by the church so-called, who has turned His gospel and His truth into lasciviousness and greed that their unscrupulous promoters as kings and priests might build up and reign over their own earthly kingdoms. Well did the ancient prophet Amos say of this generation, "I hate, I despise your feast days, and I will not smell in your solemn assemblies. Though ye offer Me burnt-offerings and your meat-offerings, I will not accept them: neither will I regard the peace offerings of your fat beasts. Take away from Me the noise of your songs; for I will not hear the melody of thy viols." Amos 5:21-24

How unutterably sad it is that these wretched conditions exist among God’s people in our day! The noise, perhaps better described as racket, of their music, the hippy-like songs of those whose hearts have never felt the sacredness and stillness of His presence, the empty sermons, and the sham of what they imagine to be anointing and glory are beyond belief. Everywhere the hateful doctrine of prosperity is being preached. The preachers forget that the people are the same today as Israel was in the wilderness, for always, when they prospered, they forgot God and concentrated on their own flesh to which prosperity so kindly catered. Turn from these vanities, my brethren, for it is those who have stood by His cross, continuing faithfully with Him in His sufferings, who will be there to see Him when He appears, for they are ever looking for Him.

"Bring no more vain oblations; incense is an abomination unto Me; the new moons and Sabbaths, the calling of assemblies, I cannot away with; it is iniquity, even the solemn meeting. Your new moons and your appointed feasts My soul hateth: they are a trouble unto Me; I am weary to bear them. And when ye spread forth your hands, I will hide Mine eyes from you: yea, when ye make many prayers, I will not hear: your hands are full of blood." Isa. 1:13-15

"Woe be to the pastors that destroy and scatter the sheep of My pasture! saith the Lord. Therefore thus saith the Lord God of Israel against the pastors that feed My people; Ye have scattered My flock, and driven them away, and have not visited them: behold, I will visit upon you the evil of your doings, saith the Lord. And I will gather the remnant of My flock out of all countries whither I have driven them, and will bring them again to their folds; and they shall be fruitful and increase." Jer. 23:1-3, 20-22 The false prophets of our day are always imagining that they have had a dream or seen a vision and the people are foolish enough to believe them. It will be noticed that the vision is usually to their benefit or to the building up of their kingdom. "I have heard what the prophets said, that prophesy lies in My name, saying, I have dreamed, I have dreamed. How long shall this be in the heart of the prophets that prophesy lies? Yea, they are prophets of the deceit of their own heart." Jer. 23:25, 26

Centuries ago the prophet Isaiah wrote a message that I feel certain applies to our day above all other days. This is what he said: "Like as a woman with child, that draweth near the time of her delivery, is in pain, and crieth out in her pangs; so have we been in Thy sight, 0 Lord. (Compare Rev. 12:1-2, 5-6) We have been with child, we have been in pain, we have as it were brought forth wind; we have not wrought any deliverance in the earth; neither have the inhabitants of the world fallen. Thy dead men shall live, together with My dead body (Christ’s) shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in the dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead." Isa. 26:17-19 This last statement is a promise of our resurrection. The righteous dead will be cast out of the earth in resurrection as Jonah was cast out or vomited out of the whale’s belly, the belly of death.

The final statement of the prophet in this chapter should be of great concern to the elect of God in this hour, for, while the big time preachers are all shouting for your money to help them evangelize the world, a thing the Lord never promised for this age, the Lord is saying in these days before the resurrection, the greatest emancipation of all ages, "Come, My people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation (that is, the tribulation of our day) be overpast. For, behold, the Lord cometh out of His place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity: the earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain." Isa. 26:20-21 There was a great upheaval in Egypt as the Almighty was preparing the deliverance of His people. Signs and wonders were evident everywhere. Dreadful, devastating plagues fell upon the land by the word of God through Moses. Plagues of grasshoppers, lice, flies, and frogs devastated the land until it was laid waste. By the word of the Lord there came grievous swarms of flies into the house of Pharaoh and into his servant's houses and into all the land of Egypt until the whole land was corrupted by them. Then upon the cattle, the horses, and the asses there fell a grievous murrain, a contagious disease similar to Anthrax or Texas fever, that affects cattle and other animals. So terrible was the plague that all the cattle of Egypt died. Exod. 9:6 Then followed the plague of boils, breaking out upon man and beast, smiting even the magicians of the land. Next followed the plague of rain and hail with dreadful thunder and fire sweeping along the ground, verse 23, smiting man and beast, breaking the trees and destroying the herbs, the wheat, the rye and the flax until the land was devastated. But for all this there was no repentance. Then came locusts that covered the earth so that no one could see the ground and the sun was darkened by their swarming presence; but no change of heart ensued. Then followed the plague of darkness so thick it could be felt and finally the death of the firstborn in all the land of Egypt. Then came the night of the Passover and the command to put blood upon the lintel and door posts of every house in Israel, and then before the final judgment to enter their chambers and remain in their houses until the angel of death had passed through the land. That same night the destroying angel of death passed over all the land and slew the firstborn son in every household where the blood was not found. It was the life blood of the lamb that brought them deliverance from all the bondage of Egypt just as the blood of Christ brings deliverance today. They were not simply "let go". They were thrust out of the land to become the first true Theocracy until their rebellion against God in the days of Samuel the prophet.

These things happened unto them for ensamples and they are written for our admonition upon whom the ends of the ages are come. 1 Cor. 10:11. Once again desolation is in the land, this time in our lands. Fires are sweeping our forests. Grasshoppers are swarming and devoured our grain. The greater part of the continent of Africa is in famine. Large sections of our own country are parched for rain. Uncontrollable diseases are reaching epidemic proportions world wide. Bankruptcies both of large corporations and of individuals are causing panic over the world. Crime is everywhere rampant. Morals have fled the earth except in the elect. False prophets fill the pulpits where at one time repentance toward God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ was taught. Wars and rumors of wars are everywhere. Well does the poem attributed to Mother Shipton of the 15th century speak of the end of this age.

Then shall mighty wars be planned, And blood and fire shall sweep the land. For those who live the century through In fear and trembling this will do: Flee to the mountains and the dens; To bogs and forests and wild fens, For storms shall rage and oceans roar When Gabriel stands on sea and shore; And as he blows his wondrous horn, Old worlds shall die and new be born.

UNTO THEM THAT LOOK FOR HIM

We are undoubtedly at the end of the age. We are seeing the signs spoken of by Paul in 2 Tim. 3:1-5 fulfilled all about us. Perilous times have come because men are lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of them that are good, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, having a form of godliness but denying the power thereof. From such turn away. These conditions, so evident on every hand, are definite indications that the full redemption of God's elect people is now at hand when the seventh trumpet begins to sound. Please give special attention to the words of Rev. 10:7: "In the days of the voice of the seventh angel, when he shall begin to sound, the mystery of God should be finished, as He hath declared to His servants the prophets." Notice especially the words "when he shall begin to sound". The blast of that trumpet is not a momentary blast. It takes some time - perhaps some years - to be fulfilled, but it is at the beginning of that sounding that the mystery of God is finished. This is the time of the resurrection of the dead in Christ. It is the time when the dead in Christ rise first to join the living in Christ, and we shall all be changed - or transformed - by the appearing of the Lord. At this time it is said there are lightnings and voices and thunderings and an earthquake and great hail. Rev.11:15-19. For as the lightning cometh out of the east and shineth even unto the west, so shall the coming of the Son of man be. Then, immediately after this resurrection of the "in Christ" saints will follow the tribulation of those days when the sun is darkened and the moon does not give her light. The stars shall fall from heaven and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken. Next the sign of the Son of man in heaven will appear, and all the nations of earth will see Christ and the great host of resurrected sons of God coming with power and great glory. Matt. 24:27-31. At that time the angels of the Lord will come with a great sound of trumpets to gather the elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other. We conclude from these things that the great change from corruption to incorruption will come at the beginning of the sounding of the seventh angel. It will come with the speed of a flash of lightning, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye.

No appearing of Christ has ever come, whether in the Old Testament or in the New, without bringing with it some great change in the course of events, but the greatest revelation and the greatest change of all time will occur when these words are fulfilled: "Unto them that look for Him shall He appear the second time, without sin unto salvation."

Heb. 9:28 The wording of the American Revised Version is very enlightening. This is what it says: "Christ, having been offered once to bear the sins of many, will appear the second time, not to deal with sin, but to save those who are eagerly waiting for Him." Christ will at that moment bring our salvation for spirit, soul and body to completion. This, I believe, is in harmony with the words of Paul, who, speaking of adoption (that is, full sonship), made this statement: "For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now. And not only they, but ourselves also, which have the first-fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body." Weymouth emphasizes this truth in these words: "For we know that the whole creation is moaning in the pangs of childbirth until this hour, and more than that, we ourselves, though we possess the Spirit as a foretaste of bliss, yet we ourselves inwardly moan as we wait for full sonship in the redemption of our bodies." The redemption of the body is the final act of our so great salvation in this present age. With it comes the transformation of our bodies from corruption to incorruption, then the manifestation of the sons of God and shortly afterward the coming of Christ with His manifested sons to reveal Himself openly to all mankind.

When our Lord Jesus Christ made His first appearance on earth, it was a very, very real appearance and presentation of the Son of God, dwelling among men as both the Son of God and the Son of man. We must conclude, however, that His first appearance among men was more real to those who were looking for Him than to those who were not. How real was His appearing to such devout persons as Anna and Simeon, who looked for redemption in Jerusalem! Luke 2:38. See the thrilling story in Luke, chapter 2. What a glorious appearing it was for them! How marvelous was the appearing of Him who never wrote a book, yet has filled the world with books about His life and first appearing among men on earth! With what appetite do we devour His words of wisdom! With what joy do we embrace His promises! With what thankfulness do we behold His deliverances from sickness, disease, and the multiplied works of the devil! With what awe do we behold His miracles! With what reverence do we see Him die for our sins, and with what joy do we see Him risen from the dead to appear with many infallible proofs among men for forty days until with a thousand mixed emotions we see this incorruptible Man rise from the earth to be received up by a waiting cloud of resurrected saints, rising into heaven into the realm of Him who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no mortal man can approach. His first appearing among men was indeed exceedingly real. To this we repeat our amens and shout our hallelujahs.

With what joy and satisfaction do we now entertain His precious promise, "unto them that look for Him will He appear the second time, without sin unto salvation." The first time He came, He came to bring salvation, but when He appears the second time, it will be to bring us to that full salvation which includes, not only the salvation of the soul, but the redemption of the body as well. It was to the redemption of the body that Paul referred when he wrote, "Now is our salvation nearer than when we believed." Rom. 13:11 And this is also the explanation of his statement, "If Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin; but the Spirit is life because of righteousness." Rom. 8:10 But this statement, which reveals our present state so thoroughly, is followed immediately by this further truth: "But if the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ shall also quicken your mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in you." Verse 11

That is a glorious promise. The Spirit that raised up Jesus in incorruption will also raise up us in incorruption. That promise is to be literally fulfilled in those who are alive upon the earth at the time of His second appearing, when He appears, not to deal with sin, but to bring to full salvation all who are looking for Him when that great appearing takes place. Countless thousands of saints have died in faith, not having received the promise, even as the illustrious Abraham did, but death really makes no difference to the promise, for the dead in Christ as well as the living in Christ will also be raised in incorruption, changed from the corruptible to the incorruptible. 1 Cor. 15:51-53 This the immutable Lord has promised. Those who in millennia past have gone to the grave in faith will share with those who at the end of the age are alive and remain to receive incorruption when He appears. There will be no difference in their standing, but all will equally share in the same power that raised up Jesus from the dead.

I know of nothing that the Most High has done in the past to manifest His glory as it will be manifested when thousands of saints who are looking for Him are transformed from the realm of corruption to the realm of incorruption with the speed of lightning and in the twinkling of an eye. It was a glorious day when many of the saints arose and came out of their graves after the resurrection of Christ and were seen in Jerusalem and among men for forty days. What a marvelous witness that must have been! But how much greater witness it will be when thousands are changed to incorruption when He appears the second time, not to deal with sin, but to bring His looking saints to full salvation!

In the gross darkness of this present hour we see through a glass darkly. Our understanding is often, if not always, faulty. We see things afar off and it is difficult to discern their exact form and shape or to understand all the details as we should. Therefore we are sadly subject to error. Even the Old Testament prophets searched diligently to know "what, or what manner of time the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow. Unto whom it was revealed, that not unto themselves, but unto us they did minister the things, which are now reported among you." 1 Pet. 1:11-12 Therefore I believe we must be aware of our misunderstanding and our lack of knowledge concerning things which are to come, but of which we are nevertheless assured, both by the Word and by the Spirit.

If the appearing of the Son of God when He came the first time was glorious, how shall not His second appearing be far more glorious? When He came two thousand years ago, the full extent of His glory was veiled to the eyes of all mankind. He came in a veil of flesh. Men saw Him then as the priests in the Holy Place saw the veil between themselves and the Most Holy Place. They saw the veil, but not the Shekinah. The veil was of fine linen, blue, purple and scarlet with -interwoven gold. The linen manifested His righteousness. The blue proclaimed that He was the Lord from heaven, the purple that He was the King of kings, and the gold that He was God. It was a magnificent foreshadow of Himself; but the glory of the Holy of Holies, shining not with the light of candles nor the light of the sun, but with the glory of God, was withheld from the eyes of the ministering priests even as the full glory of Christ was withheld from the world, and even His disciples, as He walked among them from day to day. It was not until His robe of flesh was rent on the cross of Calvary that the veil that hung before the Holiest of all was rent from top to bottom. It was not until after His death that His glory in resurrection appeared; and thus it will be with us when He appears, not to deal with sin, but to bring us full salvation.

In his Epistle to the Philippians, chapter 2, Paul tells us of the manner in which the Lord's glory was veiled when He came among us to appear among men two thousand years ago. "He made Himself of no reputation, and took upon Him the form of a servant, and was made in  the likeness of men (corruptible): and being found in fashion as a man, He humbled Himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." Phil. 2:7,8 Thus was His glory veiled all the time He dwelt among us at His first appearing. Isaiah saw Him as a "man of sorrows and acquainted with grief: He was despised, and we esteemed Him not." Isa. 53:3 That was because He came to bear the sins of many, to carry away our pains and to purchase full redemption for us. Isaiah saw His face "marred more than any man, and His form more than the sons of men." Isa. 52:14 But we see all this blessed humility and sacrifice as the price of our full redemption, which we shall share when He appears the second time.

The robe of flesh and mortality He wore when He appeared at His first coming will serve to emphasize His supernal and heavenly glory when He appears again to bring His beloved waiting saints to full salvation, for "we know that, when He shall appear, we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is." 1 John 3:2 Not as He was then, to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself, but as He is now, forever immortal, forever glorified. Therefore "every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as He is pure." Verse 3 Do you have this hope in you? Then, if you do, you will not be able to join the worldly, giddy throng of Christendom with all their light and frivolous ways, their food and fun, empty sermons and unspiritual songs. Your whole life must be spent diligently lending yourself to the purifying power of the Holy Spirit. How well advised we would be to pay diligent heed to the words of Peter, that great pastor apostle, who received from the lips of Christ the ministry to "feed My sheep"! For our eternal spiritual welfare and benefit he wrote, "According as His divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of Him that hath called us to glory and virtue; whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust. And beside all this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity." 2 Pet. 1:3-7 What a lifetime of adding by the Spirit the very nature and being of our Father in heaven! And with all this beautiful addition goes the promise, "For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure; for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall: for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ." 2 Pet. 1:8-11

There are far too many careless Christians in this distasteful hour of lukewarmness. They are neither hot nor cold, but lukewarm and fit to be spewed out of the mouth of God. Too many of God's people, who were once enlightened and have tasted of the good word of God and the powers of the age to come, are falling away to the place where it is impossible to renew them again to repentance. They are more interested in television than they are in prayer. They have become better acquainted with the names and life styles of movie stars and rock singers than with those of the apostles and prophets. We live in an abominable hour of spiritual declension. The prosperity doctrine is deceiving millions of Christians into thinking that the transient, visible things they can now have are more important than the permanent invisible things which God has promised to them that love Him. Well did the apostle write, "Having food and raiment, let us be content."

The apostle John, who knew Christ as few other men ever did, wrote, "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." 1 John 15-17 These words from Phillip's translation read as follows: "Never give your hearts to this world or to any of the things in it. A man cannot love the Father and the world at the same time, for the whole world system, based as it is on men's primitive desires, their greedy ambitions and the glamour of all they think splendid, is not derived from the Father at all, but from the world itself. The world with all its passionate desires will one day disappear, but the man who is following God's will is part of the permanent and cannot die." In the light of these things let us abandon the world with its lusts and greedy ambitions and lay hold on eternal life, for this is permanent and the glory that shall be revealed in all who look for His appearing.

Lay hold on life and it shall be Thy joy and crown eternally.

It is appointed unto men once to die and after that the judgment, but Christ, having been offered to take upon Himself the sins of many, will appear the second time, not to carry the burden of sin or to deal with sin, but to bring to full salvation those who are eagerly waiting for Him.

I pray that the Holy Spirit will impress upon the hearts of all who are looking for Him just how important this looking, watching and expecting His appearing really is, knowing as we do that when He shall appear, we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is. His appearing to the saints and the change that will take place in them will be instantaneous. No man can see God and live, but I am sure that the opposite is also true — that no man can see God and die. Manoah said, "We shall surely die because we have seen God." Jud. 13:22 But Manoah did not die. Instead it was the beginning of a new life entirely to be manifested in the person of the mighty Samson, and we may be sure it was a high and glorious new beginning in the life of Manoah and his wife also. "No man shall see My face and live," the Lord said to Moses. Exod. 33:20 Yet Moses spoke to the Lord face to face. Deut 34:10 It is not the individual that perishes. It is his old self-life lived after the manner of men and the flesh that dies, but the man himself is transformed into the likeness of his Maker. Before the Lord Jesus appeared to Saul of Tarsus on the Damascus road, Saul was a man of hate and bitterness with a heart full of murder and cruelty. He was the man who had bound the saints and tried to compel them to blaspheme. He accuses himself of being the chief of sinners. 1 Tim. 1:15. In his zeal he intended to wipe the name of Jesus Christ from the earth and if necessary to cleanse the world of His people as well. But the Lord had very different plans for him, for our ways are not God's ways and God's ways are not our ways. When the Lord's appointed moment came, a light above the brightness of the sun shone upon Saul and he heard a voice speaking to him and saying, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me? ...It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks." At that moment the light of Christ shone into his darkened spirit and Paul, knowing that the voice he heard was the voice of the Lord, replied, with shuddering and fear, "Who art Thou, Lord?" And He said, "I am Jesus whom thou persecustest." To this the trembling, fainting Saul replied, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" Do we not see the marvelous change wrought in this chief of sinners when he comes face to face with his Maker? See how the old man perishes and one in the likeness of Christ appears. And when he was led by the hand to the house of Judas, Ananias was sent to him by the Lord, and, coming to him, he said, "Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus, that appeared to thee in the way as thou earnest, hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight and be filled with the Holy Ghost. And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales," and he was filled with the very life and Spirit of the Christ he had so vigorously persecuted. Saul did not die when Jesus appeared to him in the way, but Saul, the hateful persecutor, was transformed to Paul, the mighty apostle of the grace of God and faithful lover of his wonderful Christ.

Christianity today has no need so great as is its need to meet personally with our Lord Jesus Christ, and I am sure that such an appearing is very near at hand, "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world; looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ." Titus 2:11-13 "For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ: who shall change our vile body (the body of our humiliation), that it may be fashioned like unto His glorious body (His body of glory) according to the working whereby He is able even to subdue all things unto Himself." This, beloved, is the blessed hope and the result of His glorious appearing, which is now near at hand. This appearing is the blessed hope of the sons of God and the assurance of their manifestation, which in turn is the hope and earnest longing of all creation. "For the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of the body." Now, we may then be perfectly sure that there will be a second appearing of our Lord just as there was a first appearing when He appeared among men some two thousand years ago to deal with sin and put sin away by the sacrifice of Himself. There will assuredly be a second appearing when He comes a second time, not to deal with sin, but to bring to full salvation all who are looking for Him, Heb. 9:28 For the earnest consideration of the saints who live in these end times I suggest that it is very probable that we have concerned ourselves far too much with times and seasons and expected dates for His second appearing. As a consequence we have forgotten the work of progression going on in the saints by which devout individuals here and now are being changed from glory to glory while we yet dwell amid all the curse and tribulation of this trouble filled age. Consider what a marvelous promise is presented in the following words: "But we all, with open (unveiled) face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord." 2 Cor. 3:18

It should be evident to us all from these words of truth that there is a wide open door of opportunity presented to every child of God so that we may here and now enter into the blessedness of the appearing of Christ, even unto that exceeding glory, the transformation of our bodies, while we yet await the day when He comes, not to deal with sin, but to bring us to incorruption in the twinkling of an eye. While this may be the introduction of an entirely new hope to most of us, there is much reason to believe that such a glorious hope exists. If this were not so, then why would Paul have said, when writing to the Philippians that he counted all things but dung that he might win Christ, and be found in Him, not having his own righteousness, and then to have continued, "That I may know Him, and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings, being made conformable unto His death, if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead. Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect; but I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which I am apprehended (that is, the resurrection) of Christ Jesus. Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended; but this one thing I do; forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things that are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus"? Phil. 3:10-14 This verse, brethren is loaded with truth - ineffable, marvelous, wonderful truth. What is the prize of the high calling of God of which the apostle speaks? Is he not teaching in all these verses about the resurrection"? And he is speaking, not only of the resurrection, but also of the hope of attaining that mark and sharing in the glory of transformation here and now. What else could the apostle mean when he said, "If by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead", if he were not speaking of attaining the prize in this age? Certainly Paul was not afraid he might never be resurrected, either in this age or in the ages to come, for our Lord has declared that there will be a resurrection both of the just and of the unjust. So the fact of resurrection is beyond question. No! Paul was hoping that he might attain the glory of the resurrection while still in this life. This truth is further emphasized by the wording of the Emphatic Diaglott, which makes Phil. 3:11 to say, "Being conformed to the death of Himself, if possibly I may attain to the resurrection out of the dead ones." To my understanding this means that Paul's hope was that he might attain the glory of the resurrection even though a vast number of Christians remained ignorant and dead to the possibility. It is true that, if Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin. This fact is true of all the saved, but that is not the end of the story. The apostle continues with this blessed truth: "But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in you." Rom. 8:11 The meaning of these two scriptures, when placed together, is definite and emphatic. Paul intended that the saints should know the wonderful possibility of our attaining the resurrection glory here and now, while we walk among the dead of this age.

All of God's people have, I suppose, pondered in disbelief the words of our Lord when in His discourse on the bread of life He said, "The bread of God is He which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world." John 6:33 And again, "I am the bread of life; he that cometh to Me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on Me shall never thirst." Verse 35 And yet again, I am that bread of life. Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness, and are dead. This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die. I am the living bread which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he shall live forever: and the bread that I will give is My flesh, which I will give for the life of the world." John 6:48-51

I know that these words seem to be incredible, but they are truth. The Jews who stood by thought them to be incredible and refused to believe them. And we may disbelieve them or, worse still, explain them away as unbelievers have done for centuries in their learned, educated, faithless and unbelieving sermons. The words of Christ remain there still true and faithful to those who can believe them. When Jesus said, "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink His blood, ye have no life in you", the unbelievers asked, "How can this man give us His flesh to eat?" This I also could not answer, so I said to the Lord in prayer, "What is the meaning of this saying, 'Except ye eat My flesh?"' And He, speaking to my inner spirit, replied, "The Word was made flesh." Then I asked, "How can we drink His blood?" Again the blessed answer came, "Blood is life." Therefore I saw clearly that to partake of His flesh is in truth to partake of Him, for He is the Word that was made flesh and to partake in faith of all the wonderful words of truth He spoke is to eat His flesh (the Word) and to drink His blood (His life). To partake of His life is to partake of Him; and to those who partake the promise is given, first, that they shall never die and, second, that they shall live forever because "My flesh is meat indeed, and My blood is drink indeed. He that eateth My flesh and drinketh My blood, dwelleth in Me and I in him. As the living Father hath sent Me, and I live by the Father: so he that eateth Me, even he shall live by Me. This is that bread which came down from heaven: not as your fathers did eat manna, and are dead: he that eateth of this bread shall live forever." John 6:55-58 In verse 58 Jesus said, "He that eateth this bread shall live forever", and in verse 50 He said, "This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die." These two statements taken together are very potent and confirming to say the least. Thus the Lord was showing those who look for Him the true way to life, resurrection and transformation, but was veiling that truth from those who could not believe. These will share in a resurrection yet to come.

We must all believe that certain saints of the past have been taken out of this world without dying. We believe that Enoch was translated because of his faith. Therefore we read, "By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death." Heb. 11:5 Was not Elijah also translated and so escaped the grave? Is it not true that Jesus said of the beloved John, "If I will that he tarry until I come, what is that to thee?" John 21:20 In this remarkable statement our Lord was not merely telling Peter that things concerning John were none of his business. He was really confirming to believing hearts that such a thing as tarrying until Jesus comes was a distinct possibility. It was always a policy of our Lord to veil the truth from the eyes of those who did not believe, but to reveal it to those who did. Do you not think it is a most remarkable thing that church history records the deaths of all the apostles except John? Such things are not accidents, but inspiration, and tell us plainly that John also may have become a partaker of resurrection life, even as Enoch, and never saw the grave at all.

There is one thing of importance that must be emphasized here. It is this: We must never believe, as so many have foolishly done, that our Lord ever intended that any saint would live on and on forever in a corruptible body. These bodies of death and humiliation were never designed to live forever. If believers are to live forever and not see death, it must be because they have been changed from glory to glory by the Spirit of the Lord until they come into His likeness.

The first glory is the ever-fading glory of corruption. The second glory is the glory of incorruption. The third glory is the glory of immortality. Our Lord Jesus did as we must do, passing from glory to glory. He was changed from corruption to incorruption to immortality. He rose from the dead incorruptible. He ascended to heaven into the presence of Him "who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto." 1 Tim. 6:16 Many people have taught that we can live forever, but to live on in these bodies of corruption is a thing the Lord never intended. The change to incorruption must come first, and it will come when He appears, whether that appearing be a personal appearing to individuals now or whether it be at the moment of change in the twinkling of an eye when He appears to all His saints. Let us then forget the corruptible things which are behind us and reach forth unto the incorruption that lies before us, while we press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus, if by any means we might attain the resurrection out from among the dead ones.

THE GLORY THAT EXCELLETH

"All flesh is not the same flesh: but there is one kind of flesh of men, another flesh of beasts, another of fishes, and another of birds. There are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial: but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another. There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars: for one star differeth from another star in glory. So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption: it is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power: it is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body." 1 Cor. 15:39-44 Notice now the difference between the first Adam and the last Adam. "So it is written, The first man Adam was made a living soul; the last Adam a quickening spirit (that is, a life-giving spirit). Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual. The first man is of the earth, earthy, the second man is the Lord from heaven." Verses 45-47 In our spiritual progression we pass from the fading glory of the natural through the spiritual to the celestial. Passing from glory to glory we pass from the fading glory of the corruptible realm to the more excellent glory of the incorruptible and on to the glory that excelleth, the immortal; from the glory of the stars, where one star differs from another in glory, to the glory of the moon to the glory of the sun. It is all too wonderful for me. I cannot explain it! It can only be revealed to us by the Holy Spirit. "The invisible things of Him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even His eternal power and Godhead"; but, even though the parable of life exists all about us in creation, it is only the Holy Spirit who can receive of the Father and show the truth to you and me.

There is something inherent in the nature of man that makes him very slow to accept change. This is the way it has always been, he thinks, and this is the way it is to be; but he forgets, if indeed he ever knew, that God's plan is ever progressive, leading the faithful from step to step and from glory to glory.

"The path of bad men leads through darkness dim; They do not know what makes them stumble. The path of good men is as a ray of dawn, Ever increasing to the full light of day."

Christians fear change, but the real truth is that it is their lack of progress from one glory to another that makes them stumble and lose their way. Their souls grow weary of "this light bread" they have fed on for so long and so they become willing to change the manna of their wilderness for the flesh-pots of Egypt. Therefore, instead of advancing to the next glory, the Lord gives them the flesh of quails to the full, but even while the food is in their mouths, His anger is kindled against them, and, instead of receiving glory, they are smitten with a fatal plague, and the name of the place was called Kibrothhattaavah because there they buried the people that lusted. See Num. 11:33-34 So, you see, we either follow on from glory to glory or we are buried beneath the weight of our own backsliding and unbelief. I do not think the Lord is interested in how much we know or even how much we do. He is interested in how well we believe, how we accept, and how well we follow the light that shines brightly until the day of our perfection.

The glory of yesterday and yesteryear is not sufficient for today. "Time makes ancient good uncouth. We must ever up and onward who would keep abreast of truth." Just when we begin to feel we have reached the final goal and compliment ourselves that we have attained that for which we sought, we discover that there is another horizon away out yonder, and the Spirit within tells us that it is another and far greater glory than has yet been reached. It is the promised land of the Spirit. Yes, indeed, there will be giants to bar our progress to the distant peaks sublime. But the Holy Spirit whispers, "You are well able to overcome them by My power." Most of those who once spied out the land with us will turn back, saying as Israel of old, "It is a good land, but we are not able to take it." In their hearts they will turn back to the wilderness to become ever more and more established in the things that were once glorious, but have faded as the glory did from Moses' face. Their ancient doctrines, their dogmas, their crowds and their groups are things they imagine must be preserved at all costs, and there with their tradition they will remain amid the ever increasing shadows of things that once were new, but now have grown old and are ready to vanish away. The cloud that once overshadowed them has moved on, but they have remained behind in the wilderness. The glory that once dwelt among them, filling their lives with hope and making the joy bells ring within them, has now moved on to a greater glory. Some of the faithful have moved on with it - a very small number indeed - but the great majority have remained behind to perish in the wilderness of their yesterdays, talk of the "good old days" when God was among them, and hurl their maledictions at those who have gone on with Him to the more excellent glory that lay before them.

How often we wonder about the twelve men whom Moses sent before Israel to spy out the promised land! Why was it that only two, Caleb and Joshua, believed they were able to take the land and enter into its rest, partake of its new wine, its milk and honey and strong corn? Why was it that, of the twelve who saw the land and testified that it was good, ten returned home to discourage the hosts of the Lord from entering in to the promise of rest? Well, my brother or sister, that is always the way it has been and the way it will always be. We will be fortunate indeed if we can find two out of twelve who will enter in. Oh so often it is "one of a city and two of a family". The path of consecration that lies ahead is too rough for most. It is much easier to sit and dream of the past than to labor up yonder toilsome mountain, so they settle down where they are with the big crowd or the little group and so perish in the wilderness of their own unbelief. Oh, how true are the words of inspiration, "Many are called but few are chosen!" And I regret to say that many who were once chosen, proved not faithful and so, falling into some slough of despond, returned to the glory they once had only to find that even it was no longer there. How sad! How pitiful! Yet how true!

How well I remember the excellent glory of the days of the great outpouring of the Holy Spirit that came to us in 1948! I shall never forget those wonderful, moving, heaven-filled days. Men and women upon whom the Spirit had never moved before now opened their mouths to pour out their prophetic utterances that caused a violent shaking among the dry bones. I believe it may have been the very shaking Ezekiel saw. Ezek. 37 An incredible shaking took place among the shriveled denominations. It seemed the great day of final, glory had arrived. But it was not long before the preachers, always steeped in tradition, preached their sermons of denunciation, filling the hearts of the people with unbelief and fear. Ambitious men, who at first sought to enter the glory they saw ahead, were side-tracked, coveting the silver and the gold that the outpouring produced. They got their eyes on the dollars instead of the increasing glory and the ever unfolding light of revelation. How well I remember a relation of mine, as I sought to advance to the greater glory that lay before us, saying in no uncertain tones, "You will rue the day, and it will hurt you financially, too." Perhaps he was right, but the prize before us is far too great to consider such paltry things as finance.

Our blessed Lord and Saviour endured the cross, despising the shame, because of the glorious throne that lay before Him. The day of anguish and sorrow came when His disciples forsook Him and fled, but more terrible still was the hour when His Father's face could not be seen. Our souls will see no rainbows if our eyes have shed no tears. We must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God.
There is a beautiful little parable wrapped in the arms of one single verse in the Gospel of Matthew, Chapter 13, verse 44. This is what it says: "The kingdom of heaven is like unto a treasure hid in a field; the which, when a man hath found, he hideth, and for joy thereof goeth and selleth all that he hath, and buyeth that field." I want you to notice that the man who found the treasure in the field could not lay claim to it because the field was not his. He did not go to the owner and ask to buy the treasure. If the man had known the treasure was there, no money could have bought it, so this man made the wisest move possible. He decided to buy the field and then the treasure that was hidden in it would also be his. But he did not have the money in the bank to buy it, so he gathered together everything he possessed and sold it all. He sold "all that he had", the verse tells us. With that price in his hand he went and bought the field in which the treasure lay. The price of the field in which the treasure lies, dear friend, is always the same. It never, never varies in value. It will cost you all that you have. All that I am! All that I have! That is the price of the field. If you possess a lot of old relics that you are determined to keep, your denomination, your sects, your groups, then you will not have sufficient to buy the field. Even if you are determined to hold on to the glory of yester-year, you will not be able to buy the field. It costs you everything. Even if you have left your denomination but are still determined to cling at all costs to your little group - and you may do so if you wish - you will not have enough to buy the field in which the hidden treasure lies. Let it go, my brother or sister. Offer it up as a burnt offering unto God and the smoke of it will ascend to Him as a sweet incense. The price will be acceptable in His sight.

Our spiritual experiences are like the manna that fell in the wilderness in the long ago. If any of it was kept on hand till the next day, it bred worms and stank. New manna had to be found every morning. So it will always be with our spiritual experience. The excellent glory was for our yesterday. The more excellent glory is for our tomorrow. Some time ago I went to visit a beloved old friend, whom I had known from infancy, as he lay dying in a hospital. He had been wonderfully saved in our meetings in 1934. As he lay on his bed, knowing that soon the angels would call to carry him triumphantly home, he said to me, "Brother, I would like to tell you something that the Lord gave me. I think it is a word of wisdom." This is it:

Think not of the past;
It is forgotten.
Nor peer into the future;
It will yet unfold.
But live today in the eternal present,
For where the Lord is it is now — today.

And what a word of wisdom that really is! Our Lord is the I AM THAT I AM - not the I AM that I was. If we want to move with Him, we must be where He is now, not years back in the past. Jesus said, "I will receive you unto Myself, that where I am, there ye may be also." John 14:3. And when Thomas complained, "Lord, we know not whither Thou goest, and how can we know the way?" His only reply was, "I AM the way, the truth, and the life. No man cometh to the Father but by Me."

Think of passing from a storm and tempest to a quiet harbor,
Of stepping on shore and finding it heaven;
Of taking hold of a hand and finding it God's hand;
Of breathing new atmosphere and finding it celestial air;
Of feeling invigorated and finding it immortality;
Of awaking and finding it home.

Home is where He is - not where He was centuries ago.

Just before our Lord's ascension He commanded His disciples that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait until Pentecost for the promise of the Father, "which," said He, "ye have heard of Me." In faithful obedience to His command they tarried in Jerusalem, for there were yet seven days before the day of Pentecost would come. When that blessed day was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place, and suddenly, as they waited, there was a sound from heaven as of a rushing, mighty wind that filled all the place where they were sitting. And there appeared unto them cloven tongues, like as of fire, that sat upon each of them; and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost and began to speak in other languages as the Spirit gave them utterance. Acts 2:1-4 Many have tried to describe the excellent glory of that marvelous outpouring and have reveled in the glory and power that followed it as the apostles gave witness with such mighty power from on high that multitudes both of men and women turned to the Lord. Even of the priests a great company believed. On and on the mighty outpouring swept until by the end of the first century one twentieth of the entire heathen Roman Empire had turned to the Lord, but by the time of the death of the apostles the excellent glory of Pentecost was fading away. Like all other glories this one was growing old and was ready to vanish away. With the exception of John it seems that all the other apostles had left the scene of earth's conflicts and were gone to their reward, and John was on the Isle of Patmos for the word of God and the testimony of Christ. As He walked in the Spirit on the Lord's Day, he heard a voice behind him, saying, "I am Alpha and Omega, the first and the last: and, what thou seest, write in a book, and send it unto the seven churches which are in Asia." So he turned to see who had spoken the words, and, being turned, he "saw seven golden candlesticks and in the midst of the candlesticks one like unto the Son of man, clothed with a garment down to the foot, and girt about the paps with a golden girdle. His head and His hairs were white like wool, as white as snow; and His eyes were as a flame of fire; and His feet like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace; and His voice as the sound of many waters. And He had in His right hand seven stars: and out of His mouth went a sharp two edged sword; and His countenance was as the sun shin-eth in his strength." When John saw Him, he fell at His feet as dead. And He laid His right hand upon him, saying, "I am the first and the last: I am He that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, and have the keys of hell and of death." See Rev. 1:11-18.

Without doubt the wonderful glories of Pentecost were fading away. No doubt then as now some of the old Christians sadly remembered the good old days and longed to have them back again. But John was not sighing nor crying for the good days of Pentecost. Well he knew they belonged to the yesterdays. His heart was crying for a new revelation of God's glory and what he saw was something so far beyond his imagination and so far beyond the glory of Pentecost that he fell as a dead man before the light of it. This apostle had seen first hand the glory manifested in the life and ministry of Jesus. He had gone to the mount of transfiguration with Him to behold the glory of the transfiguration of Christ. He had been filled with the Holy Spirit at Pentecost and had seen signs and wonders follow his own wonderful ministry. But now he saw an incomparable glory far, far beyond anything he had ever seen or imagined. It was the glory of the Christ in His body of sons. It was not the voice of the lonely Galilean that he heard, but the voice of many waters. No longer was it one single Son of God, but many sons, all baptized in one Spirit into one glorious Christ, and the light of such excellent, exceeding glory was more than John's mortality could stand, and he, falling as one dead, had to be raised up by the hand of Christ. Perhaps it was on this occasion of the glorious appearing of Christ that John was transformed into that same image, to put off corruption and put on incorruption. I am not sure that this is so, but in my spirit I feel a witness that this is true; "for unto them that look for Him shall He appear the second time, not to deal with sin, but to bring full salvation to all who are looking for Him." For such a glorious appearing we may now confidently look, for the signs around in earth and air and painted on the star-lit sky, God's faithful witnesses, declare that the coming of the Master draweth nigh.

CONCLUSION

There seems to be no suitable place to bring the thoughts of this chapter to a close. The more the truth unfolds the more we discover of the wonders of His inexhaustible purpose. No mountain of truth is so high but that another peak, yet still more lofty lifts its glorious head to shine its rays of truth upon us. For us to attempt to exhaust a subject such as this is to attempt the impossible. It is limitless in its riches even as God who planned it is exhaustless. But, that we might better search out and meditate upon the riches of our inheritance and become one with the ever increasing glory, I will attempt a brief recapitulation of the thoughts we have considered that they may be the more firmly fixed in our minds.

It has become the habit of God's people, perhaps for centuries, to think of "glory" as being tantamount to heaven or that they are, so to speak, six of one and half a dozen of the other. This idea is not founded on any scripture of which I am aware. It is true, we may be sure, that heaven will be glory and glory will be heaven, but if we imagine that both terms refer to the same thing, we will find ourselves in error and in much misunderstanding. How we are to explain just what glory is I am at a loss to know. Because it belongs to the realm of the Father, it is divine and far beyond the realm of our corruption. It is nonetheless a blessedness that our Saviour has revealed when in prayer He said to His Father, “The glory which Thou gavest Me I have given them.” This inheritance is part of His last will and testament, given as a legacy to all who believe. It is ours; but no man in all this age to our knowledge has ever received the glory He promised in its fullness. There is a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory awaiting the sons of God as this dispensation draws to its close; and by all signs and signals it cannot be far off.

The glory of God is a transforming radiance, emanating from the Father of glory. Flesh and corruption can no more abide in its presence than a slip of paper can endure the furnace flame. After our Lord Jesus Christ appeared to the stony-hearted Saul of Tarsus, Paul himself recounts the story: “As I made my journey, and was come nigh unto Damascus about noon, suddenly there shone from heaven a great light round about me ... And when I could not see for the glory of that light, being led by the hand of them that were with me, I came into Damascus.” Acts 22:6, 11 In Acts 26:13 Paul relates that the radiance of that glory light was above the brightness of the sun. From this we are to see that this more excellent glory was a radiant shekinah, emanating from the light which He Himself is.

Again it is written that, after Moses had been in the presence of the Lord at Sinai, the "children of Israel could not steadfastly behold the face of Moses for the glory of his countenance." 2 Cor. 3:7 In the awesome vision recorded by Daniel, his mortal eyes beheld the transforming vision of the Ancient of days, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of His head like wool. His throne was like the fiery flame and His wheels as burning fire. A fiery stream issued and came forth from Him. Thousand thousands ministered unto Him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before Him. Dan. 7:9-10 What an awe-inspiring, transforming display of His magnificent glory! There are many other scriptures manifesting the transforming appearance of God's glory, but these few, I trust, will help us to see that glory is not heaven, but rather a transforming, unspeakable radiance, emanating from the Most High as a perfume issues forth from a prairie rose or the radiance of light and heat flows forth from the sun. Such excellent glory comes forth from the realm of the Spirit and is therefore beyond any words of description that could proceed from the mind or pen of man. Glory is a quality belonging to God. It suggests that aura which radiates from the one who possesses it, leaving its transforming impress behind. Glory, honor and power proceed forth from God the Father most glorious.

The Hebrew word kabod (English, glory) does not refer to God in His essential nature, but bespeaks the luminous manifestation of His person - the glorious manifestation of Himself as shown in the following scriptures: "In the morning, then ye shall see the glory (kabod) of the Lord." Exod. 16:7 "And he (Moses) said, I beseech Thee, show me Thy glory (kabod). And he said, I will make all My goodness pass before thee." Exod. 33:18 "Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low: and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain: and the glory of the Lord (the kabod) shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." Isa. 40:4-5 Why should we fail to see that this very promise has definite reference to our own change from corruption to incorruption by the revelation of the glory of the Lord? "Arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord (the kabod) is risen upon thee." Isa. 60:1 "And it came to pass, as Aaron spake unto the whole congregation of the children of Israel that they looked toward the wilderness, and, behold, the glory of the Lord (the kabod) appeared in the cloud." Exod. 16:10 Notice also Deut. 5:24 The glory of the Lord is linked to seeing as in Exod. 16:7; Isa. 40:5; to appearing as in Exod. 16:10; Isa. 60:1; and to presence as in Exod. 40:34. "Then a cloud covered the tent of the congregation, and the glory of the Lord filled the tabernacle."

The Bible clearly teaches that there is to be a full manifestation of the kabod- that is, the glory of the Lord - in the last days. Its purpose is to bring full salvation, which, of course, includes the body of incorruption, to the Israel of God, salvation for spirit, soul, and body. The purpose of the manifestation of God's glory is twofold; first, to bring salvation to Israel, and secondly, through the manifestation of this glory to bring salvation to all nations. Let us notice how Isaiah reveals this purpose of God in the following words:

"Arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee." Isa. 60:1 First this glory must come to us. The nations of the world are not going to be converted until this transforming glory radiates from God's own people who are changed from corruptible to incorruptible. Our Father in heaven never intended that the world would be converted during the darkness and deadness of this age. The only command on behalf of the heathen was, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature, He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." But those among the heathen who have believed are exceedingly few by comparison with those who have not believed. The light of full salvation will not shine with any degree of brightness until this transforming glory appears, transforming God's people from corruptible to incorruptible in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye.

Note now from verse 2 that this shining forth of God's glory is to begin at the time that "darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people." Isa. 60:2 The people referred to here are the Israel people, but at this very moment, when all nations are in utter darkness, "the Lord shall rise upon thee, and His glory shall be seen upon thee. And the Gentiles (nations) shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising. Lift up thine eyes round about, and see: all they gather themselves together unto thee, they come to thee: thy sons shall come from far, and thy daughters shall be nursed at thy side." Isa. 60:1-4 How well Isaiah saw this great awakening among the heathen is clearly seen in Isa. 55; and David also in his 96th Psalm, speaking of the glory of the Lord, said, "Declare His glory among the heathen, His wonders among all people." "Give unto the Lord, 0 ye kindreds of the people, give unto the Lord glory and strength. Give unto the Lord the glory due unto His name ... 0 worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness." Verses 3, 7-8 There will be no lasting effect while those who preach the glory of the Lord do not possess that glory themselves, but in that day the glory of the Lord will not only rest upon the people, but will be proceeding forth from them as it now proceeds from God. The saints of the Lord will manifest the excellent glory of incorruption. "I will set My glory among the heathen, and all the heathen shall see my judgments that I have executed, and My hand that I have laid upon them." It is very apparent that these inspired writers expected a full manifestation of this glory in the last days.

The New Testament equivalent of the Hebrew word kabod (English, glory) is the Greek word doxa, variously translated glory 144 times; dignity 2; honor 6; praise 4; worship 1. The adjective doxazo is used in the New Testament 62 times.

We have already read that, when Moses received the law, which was the ministration of death to the carnal man, his face shone with the glory of God, as Paul described in 2 Cor. 3:7-8; but that glory was a fading glory and eventually faded from his countenance because it was the ministration of death. Though this fading glory could never produce incorruption, it is most significant that, when Moses was one hundred twenty years old, his natural force was unabated and his eye not dim, and, when his ministry was completed before a new order was ushered in, it was necessary for the Lord to tell him to go up the mountain and die - which he did.

Paul, having related these things, went on to explain that if the ministration of death was glorious, how much more glorious will be the ministration of Life and the Spirit, saying, "If the ministration of death, written and engraven in stones, was glorious, so that the children of Israel could not steadfastly behold the face of Moses for the glory of his countenance, which glory was to be done away: how shall not the ministration of the Spirit be rather glorious? For if the ministration of condemnation be glory, much more doth the ministration of righteousness exceed in glory." 2 Cor. 3:7-9. "For if that which is done away was glorious, much more that which remaineth is glorious." Verse 11. Then, to conclude his wonderful reasoning, he says, "But we all, with open (unveiled) face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord." Verse 18. These wonderful truths are being made known to us in these last days, "for God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." This glory of which he speaks is the doxa (Greek) and is the same glory as the Hebrew kabod, of which we have written above.

The truth of the subject is that we already "have this treasure (glory) in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us." 2 Cor. 4:7 The seed of this treasure - this glory - is already within those who have the Spirit, but its manifestation has been only in a very, very limited way. The glory has been veiled as the Ark of the Covenant was veiled and as Moses' face was veiled; but the moment is at hand for the unveiling and then with face unveiled we are changed from glory to glory into the very image of the resurrected Christ. If we will take time to carefully study the succeeding verses of 2 Cor. Chapter 4, we will see clearly that trouble, persecution, and every affliction that comes upon us, our bearing about in our body this dying, m sent by God, not to curse us, but to bring the true life and manifestation of His glory. 2 Cor. 4:10-11

Following this wonderful revelation of chapters 3 and 1, the apostle proceeds to assure us that, if our earthly house n't this tabernacle (the body) were completely dissolved, we have a "house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." Rend it with prayerful meditation and you will be given understanding by the Spirit that these promises are for us now more than any other time in history. It is time to "rise mid shine, for the glory of the Lord is risen upon (us)." Never was there a time of greater darkness than now. It literally covers the earth and gross darkness the people. But the Lord shall arise upon thee and His glory shall be seen upon thee. Isa. 60:1-3.

The two wonderful attributes praise and honor unwrapped up in and integral parts of God's glory. Thus Peter beautifully states, "The trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honor and glory (the doxa) at the appearing of Jesus Christ." This brings our minds back to the truth of the glorious appearing of Christ and the magnificent truth we have been unfolding that "unto them that look for Him shall He appear the second time without sin unto salvation." This next glory is to come when He appears to us, and when that appearing takes place, the change will take place in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye. "When Christ, who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with Him in glory." Col. 3:4 By the appearing of Christ death is abolished, because the glory of incorruption has been revealed. Then the glory that excelleth, which is immortality, is brought to light. Incorruption is the end of death. Immortality lies ahead where God "dwell in the light which no man (mortal) can approach unto."

With joy and anticipation we look for that blessed hope and glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ, Tit. 2:13, who shall change these bodies of our humiliation that they may be fashioned like unto His glorious body (body of glory). Phil. 3:21 This promise is made unto all them that love His appearing. 2 Tim. 4:8 Unto them that look for Him shall He appear the second time, not to deal with sin, but to make our salvation complete.

Therefore, laying aside "every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us, let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God."

Can Christians grow by holding firm
To doctrine and to creed?
The Shepherd leads His sheep to where They in new pastures feed.
Can food of yesteryear suffice
For hunger of today?
Was it not for our daily bread
That He taught us to pray?
A soul can never grow in grace
That is content to stay
In blissful contemplation of The things of yesterday
And live alone in memory
Of some bright evening star.
His grace was sent to lead us on,
Not keep us where we are.
Unfolding revelation is God's purpose for this hour.
Why live in flesh? The stratospheres
Are vibrant with His power!
There is a Spirit realm to which
We can triumphant rise,
And blend redemption's melodies
With music from the skies.

CHAPTER ONE
AN INTRODUCTION

This morning, January 14, 1986, for family devotion my wife and I read the gracious word of God spoken through His faithful servant Hosea. Gomer, the wife of Hosea, had borne a son to him and, at the time when the son was to receive a name, "then God said, Call his name Lo-Ammi; (a word which means not My people); for ye are not My people, and I will not be your God. Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered; and it shall come to pass that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not My people, there shall it be said unto them, Ye are the sons of the living God." Hosea 1:9-10

Upon reading these blessed words of infinite grace, I had to pause to choke back my emotions. Can mortal man indeed comprehend such matchless, infinite grace as this, spoken in loving kindness and tender mercy to such a prodigal son as the House of Israel, who continually devoured his inheritance with such avid prodigality among the harlots of Baalism and all manner of false gods, and now, after his lavish squandering, he sits half starved in the swine pen of his earthly corruption, unfaithfulness and unbelief? Who but the Father, full of grace, could ever have uttered such words as these to a sinful, rebellious people? "In the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not My people, there shall it be said unto them, Ye are the sons of the living God."

When our wonderful Lord Jesus recited the story of the prodigal son, (Luke 15:11-34), he was in fact re-citing and re-telling the same story found here in the words of Hosea the prophet. Our Lord in the gospel of Luke spoke of a son who was not content with the warmth, love and provision of a kind, caring father, but who no doubt had for many years sullenly harbored the rebellious thought of a day when he could free himself from the wise and kind restraints of his parents and home to have his uninhibited fling, unrestrained and unrestricted, in prodigal living. Like almost every boy, he imagined himself to be much wiser than his father. He resented the cautions of his mother. They were too old-fashioned, he thought. In his immature mind he judged that his parents were out to spoil his fun, and he would enjoy life without them.

Long had he impatiently awaited the day when he would be old enough to receive the inheritance his father had through sacrifice and toil laid up in store for him, and when at long last that day came, he was instant with his request; "Father, give me the portion of goods that falleth to me, and he (the father) divided unto them his living. Not many days after, the younger son gathered all together and took his journey into a far country and there wasted his substance in riotous living. And when he had spent all, there arose a mighty famine in that land; and he began to be in want. And he went and joined himself to a citizen of that country; and he sent him into his fields to feed swine. And he would fain have filled his belly with the husks that the swine did eat: and no man gave unto him. And when he came to himself, he said, How many servants of my father's have bread enough and to spare, and I perish with hunger! I will arise and go to my father, and will say unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven and before thee, and am no more worthy to be called thy son: make me as one of thy hired servants. And he arose, and came to his father. But when he was yet a great way off, his father saw him, and had compassion, and ran, and fell on his neck, and kissed him. And the son said unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven, and in thy sight, and am no more worthy to be called thy son. But the father said to his servants, Bring forth the best robe, and put it on him; and put a ring on his hand, and shoes on his feet: and bring hither the fatted calf, and kill it; and let us eat, and be merry: for this my son was dead, and is alive again; he was lost, and is found. And they began to be merry."

Luke 15:12-24

Marvelous grace of our loving Lord!
Grace that exceeds our sin and our guilt;
Yonder on Calvary's mount outpoured,
There where the blood of the Lamb was spilt.
Dark is the stain that we cannot hide;
What can avail to wash it away?
Look! There is flowing a crimson tide.
Whiter than snow you may be today.
Marvelous, infinite, matchless grace,
Freely bestowed on all who believe.
You who are longing to see His face,
Will you this moment His grace receive?

How our glad hearts rejoice and our eyes drop down their pearls of praise in the sacred knowledge that our heavenly Father has called us prodigals home and introduced us to the assembled throng with the words of pride and joy, "This is my son, who was dead and is alive. He was lost and now is found." Angels of light on starry wings touch their harps of gold and rejoice before the throne of God that one sinner has repented and returned from his prodigal wandering back to the fold from which he strayed.

Coming home! Coming home, never more to roam.
Open wide Thine arms of love, Lord, I'm coming home!

Oh, let us always remember that it was the Father who so loved the world that He gave His Son. It was the Father who gave His Son for the ransom of the many. It was the Father who gave His Son to be a propitiation for us — not to propitiate Himself, but to propitiate us and dispose us to kindness and repentance. It was the Father who gave the only Son He had to reconcile us to God. It was the Father who sent us the glorious tidings that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and it was the Father who committed that marvelous universal word of reconciliation to us, and He made us ambassadors for Christ, "as though God did beseech you by us, Be ye reconciled to God" 2 Cor. 5:18-20

The more I read the Bible and the more I come to know Him by personal association with Him the more the evidence abounds that our heavenly Father is hopelessly in love with His creation and is longing for the day when each and every wandering soul returns to Him with the eager words upon his lips, "Father, I have sinned". Then, without waiting for more and without one word of reproach, with joy He calls to His servants, "Bring the robe of righteousness and put it on him. Put the marriage ring on his finger. Bring hither the shoes that he may be shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace. Kill the fatted calf and let us dance and rejoice and sing, for this My son was dead, but now he lives forever, a new creation in Christ Jesus. He was lost and is found." And they began to make merry. It is a merriment and rejoicing that has only begun. The ever increasing joy of our sonship will never end, no, not in all the eons of eternity; for this My son was dead and is alive again - he was lost and is found.

Thus did the Most High Father speak through His prophet Hosea, saying, "In the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not My people, there shall it be said unto them, Ye are the sons of the living God."

0 the love that sought me!
0 the love that bought me!
Wondrous grace that brought me to the fold!
Oh the wonder of it all! Sonship! Sons of God and joint heirs with Christ! "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God: Therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew Him not." 1 John 3:1 Sonship is the hope of all creation. It is the pride of God's own heart. He created the whole race, the Adamic race, and the first father of that race, Adam. He (Adam) is called the son of God. Luke 3:38. If our father Adam was a son of God, then indisputably he belonged to the God family, and we, being his children, are sons of that Adam and are the children of him who was called the son of God. Prodigal sons indeed we have been, without hope, without God in the world, sometimes called the children of wrath even as others, "but God, who is rich in mercy, for His great love wherewith He loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ, (by grace are ye saved); and hath raised us up together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus; that in the ages to come He might show the exceeding riches of His grace in His kindness toward us through Christ Jesus" Eph. 2:4-7

Our sonship is the hope of all creation. "For the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him who hath subjected the same in hope. Because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God. For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now. And not only they, but ourselves also, which have the first fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body." Rom. 8:20-23

GLORY, HONOR, IMMORTALITY, ETERNAL LIFE

There's a big, wide world away yonder;
There are forests where silence has lease.
There's a beauty that fills me with wonder;
There's a stillness that fills me with peace.

The story of every Christian life will eventually be the story of a progression from the natural through the spiritual to the celestial, passing from the realm of the corruptible through the incorruptible to the immortal; from the brazen altar of sacrifice in the outer court to the golden altars of communion and prayer in the dim light of the candlestick in the holy place into the holiest of all, where shines undimmed the more excellent glory, the shekinah, the eternal "kabod". Of the New Jerusalem it is written: "And the glory of God did lighten it." Rev. 21:23 No wonder inspiration has added the words, "There shall be no night there." Rev. 21:25

The light of His love shineth brighter
As it falls on paths of woe;
The toil of my work growtheth lighter
As I stoop to raise the low.

Amid all the stormy, fiery declarations of condemnation and judgment found in the first two chapters of the book of Romans, the blessed Holy Spirit, as His custom always is, intermingles His fiery judgments with wonderful, marvelous, infinite words of grace and promise. Hear His blessed voice as the inspired Paul writes: "But after thy hardness and impenitent heart treasurest up unto thyself wrath against the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God; who will render to every man according to his deeds: To them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honor and immortality, eternal life: but unto them that are contentious, and do not obey the truth, but obey unrighteousness, indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish upon every soul that doeth evil... but glory, honor, and peace, to every man that worketh good." Rom. 2:5-10 Before judgment our heavenly Father always remembers mercy, and after judgment He remembers it again. The centre verse of the entire Bible is this: "Mercy and truth are met together: righteousness and peace have kissed each other." Psa. 85:10

In the loving embrace of that one verse, Rom. 2:7, is presented to man a most astonishing and beautiful child of promise. "To them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory, honor and immortality, eternal life." Glory, honor, immortality, eternal life! Saint of God, how is it possible to read such thrilling words of promise, declared and proffered to all who seek and believe? Yet so very few pay the slightest heed to what is being said. Shall we indeed daily tread among such "pearls of great price" and not even notice that they are there? Can we hold these rubies and diamonds in our hands and gaze upon them, never to notice that they are valuable? Can we look upon these gleaming sapphires of promise and not perceive that they are beautiful? Yet that is exactly what we do. Must we, God's people, through our heedless carelessness be likened unto those swine of which Jesus spoke that heedlessly trample priceless pearls beneath their feet or rip to shreds all things of value that may fall among them? I frankly admit with shamefacedness and regret that I myself have committed many chapters of scripture to memory without being awed by the truth they proffered. Among those glorious chapters was this second chapter of Romans. In fact, it is only now, sixty years later, that I have begun to notice the majesty of what is promised in this blessed seventh verse - glory, honor, immortality, eternal life. What rare and priceless gems these are! What incomparable treasure hid in a field! Let us, then, gather all other of earth's possessions together and sell them that we may buy this field and possess this costly treasure. It will cost us all we have. The price is always the same, but the eternal treasure will be ours. A Christian once said to a saint, "I would give the world to have an experience like yours!" The saint replied, "That is just what it cost me." The poet wrote, "All that I am, all that I have, I surrender to Thee." We shall not, I fear, enter into the glory of these promises unless we heed the advice that precedes them - "to them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory, honor, immortality, eternal life.

I have never been blessed with great patience. Whatever task lay before me I have wanted to tear into and get it done immediately, if not sooner, but I have found patience to be one of the most important rungs in the ladder by which we rise into the fullness of the love of God. Listen to these words of wisdom as they flow like living waters from the mind of the Holy Spirit: "Tribulation worketh patience; and patience, experience; and experience, hope; and hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost ...." Rom. 5:3-5 Again it is written: "The trial of your faith worketh patience." James 1:3 And yet again: "Let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing." James 1:4 Patience is named among the virtues, even as the beloved Peter exhorted us, saying, "Add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity." 2 Pet. 1:5-7 Thus with the virtues of the Spirit is built the ladder by which we rise from the lowly earth to the vaulted skies and we mount its summit round by round.

In like manner the apostle Paul exhorted the saints to seek for glory, honor, immortality, eternal life by patient continuance in well doing. We will not succeed in attaining such promises if we imagine we can ask for them today and blossom out tomorrow in these priceless robes of heavenly glory. If we are unwilling to patiently continue to seek this treasure, we will fail to find it. With all my heart I believe there must be a hunger and a thirst for this kind of righteousness. Only the hungering and thirsting are filled. It is not difficult to feed a hungry man. How eloquently has the scripture said, "The full soul loatheth the honey comb; but to the hungry soul every bitter thing is sweet." Prov. 27:7 So it is with the things of Christ and of the Spirit. If we seek for righteousness, there must be a hunger and thirst for righteousness - so much so that we are more than willing to lay aside every weight and the sin that so easily besets us that we may run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God. Perfection came to our Lord and Master Jesus Christ through suffering; for it became Him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons to glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings. Heb. 2:10 God is bringing many sons to glory, and this is the same glory we were exhorted to seek when the beloved Paul told us all that with patient continuance in well doing we should seek for glory, honor and immortality, eternal life.

All that is in the world is the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life. 1 John 2:16. These may be briefly defined by the words appetite, avarice and ambition. The ambitions of earth can often be shameful. Lucifer once expounded his unholy ambition in these fateful words: "I will ascend into heaven; I will exalt my throne above the stars of God; I will sit also upon the mount of the congregation, in the sides of the north; I will ascend above the heights of the clouds; I will be like the Most High." Isa. 14:13-14 But what saith the answer of God to him? "Thou shalt be brought down to hell, to the sides of the pit." Verse 15

There is, however, a holy ambition, which God exhorts us to have. Much as our Lord hates covetousness, He has exhorted us to covet earnestly the best gifts; and as much as He despises the kind of ambition evil men display, yet at the bottom of all pure religion there must be an overwhelming ambition to earnestly seek all the blessings and promises of the kingdom of God. But we cannot possess the kingdom of God without the King. Those who seek Him must be transformed into His likeness, but we can never ever be like Him until He possesses us and we possess Him. Nobody on earth can quite comprehend the anomalous statement, "Thou in Me and I in Thee, that they may be made perfect in one." Nobody, I say, except the saint to whom it is revealed. To the natural man the Lord is speaking an impossibility when he says, "Thou in Me and I in Thee", but to the saint it is no impossibility but a vast and possible necessity.

Sixty years ago I heard a preacher say, "It is one thing for the Spirit to be in you, but another thing for you to be in the Spirit." In the infancy of my Christian walk I wondered how this could be; but with the passing years it became increasingly clear that many people who had once been filled with the Spirit were not walking in the Spirit nor acting in the Spirit. Rather they were living after the earth-bound dictates of a corrupt carnal nature. Sad indeed have been the times when I discovered that my own life was not always being led in harmony with the Spirit who dwelt within. For this reason Paul said, "If we live in the Spirit, let us walk in the Spirit." If we walk in obedience to this principle, then the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus will make us free from the law of sin and death. "This I say, then; walk in the Spirit and ye shall not fulfill the lusts of the flesh."

Should one seek for glory, honor and immortality with some thought of self-aggrandizement in mind, this in itself is a great evil. All such seeking will remain unfulfilled, but for one who seeks these promises with holy desire in the knowledge that his attainment of them is both God's purpose and God's will there is guaranteed great reward and the mighty promises of God are placed within his reach. I have known of men who fasted for forty days in the vain hope of attaining a spiritual gift that would make them great and prosperous. All such seeking is worthless and wrong. If we have the right end in view, we will adhere to the right way, and, if the end in view is as high as heaven itself, God will be pleased with our ambition and will see that we come not short of the prize. It is not enough to know well, and profess well, and speak well. There must be a corresponding well doing that we may with well doing seek for glory, honor and immortality, eternal life. Those who spend a lifetime seeking the honor and glory of this present evil world usually end up missing even that, but those who seek that honor and glory, immortality and eternal life which our Father in heaven offers shall be rewarded by receiving them to keep in glory, honor and peace unto life eternal. Rom. 2:10

Patient continuance in well doing cannot possibly be attained except there be a complete cessation of evil doing, and carnality and corruption be banished from our lives. Furthermore, there must be a complete cessation of all evil thinking, scheming and planning. We have observed how Paul, when he wrote this truth, pronounced tribulation and anguish upon all who obey not the truth, but obey unrighteousness. Weymouth puts it in these words: "To each man He will make an award according to his deeds; to those who, by lives of persistent right-doing, strive for glory, honor and immortality, eternal life; while on the self-willed who yield not to the truth but yield to iniquity there shall fall wrath and affliction and anguish upon every human soul who does wrong." Rom. 2:6-9 Perhaps some will accuse me of legalism, but I am not stating my own opinion, but rather the sacred and forceful words of the Holy Spirit, clearly stated for searching saints to read and understand.

There are some things we are going to have to do and some things we are going to have to forsake. We are going to have to forsake all gluttony and living after the physical senses and in place of these we must devote ourselves to fasting, meditation and prayer. It is essential that we forsake all evil speakings and carnal judgments, for with what judgment we judge we shall likewise be judged, and with what measure we meet it shall be measured to us again. "Why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye and considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?" We must refrain from casting that which is holy to unclean dogs no matter what they profess, and we must cease from the useless practice of casting the pearls of God's truth before the swinish minds of unbelieving professors to be trampled underfoot while they turn to rend us for our faith in God. I shall make no hesitation is saying that he who feeds his mind on filthiness will remain filthy still. The filth that comes over the air waves, if watched or listened to, will thrust the evil sword of death into his spirit, inflicting mortal and spiritual wounds that will never heal until he casts away the very source from which the wounding came. The great evils invented to feed modern day corruption can never be dragged in through the door of the kingdom of God. They are too wide for that holy door, and if we insist on keeping them, as we would keep an idol, we will find ourselves unable to enter the realm of glory, honor and immortality.
There was once a lovely young man who came to Jesus feeling the need of a touch from the Saviour. "Good Master," he said, "what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life? And He said unto him, Why callest thou Me good? There is none good but one, that is, God: but if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments. He saith unto Him, Which?" Jesus said, Thou shalt do no murder. Thou shalt not commit adultery. Thou shalt not steal. Thou shalt not bear false witness. Honor thy father and thy mother: and, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. The young man saith unto Him, All these things have I kept from my youth up: what lack I yet? Jesus said unto him, If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come and follow Me. But when the young man heard that saying, he went away sorrowful: for he had great possessions." Matt. 19:16-22

Oh, if he had only heeded the question, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul or become a castaway?"

There should be no need to remind any who read these pages that we are without doubt living in the closing hours of this age. These are perilous times of trouble and they are going to get much worse as the next few years pass by. The Babel of the world system is falling apart and so also is the Babylon of the church system. The church system is the drunken harlot of Babylon. The beast upon which she sits is the Babylon of the world system. Rev. 17:3 "Babylon is fallen, is fallen," saith the Lord, "and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every unclean and hateful bird." Rev. 18:2 The destruction and doom of that system has been forming in the womb of destiny from its beginning in the far off days of Nimrod. Its downfall is especially announced by the blessed apostle John, and centuries earlier the prophet David proclaimed its devastating destruction and judgment when in prophecy the Psalmist wrote these words: "By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down, yea, we wept, when we remembered Zion. We hanged our harps on the willows in the midst thereof. For there they that carried us away captive required of us a song; and they that wasted us required of us mirth, saying, Sing us one of the songs of Zion. How shall we sing the Lord's songs in a strange land? If I forget thee, 0 Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning. If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth; if I prefer not Jerusalem above my chief joy... 0 daughter of Babylon, who art to be destroyed; happy shall he be, that rewardeth thee as thou hast served us. Happy shall he be that taketh and dasheth thy little ones against the stones." Psa. 137

Thus did David view in the Spirit the horror of Judah's captivity; but later, in the Spirit, he struck a much happier note, seeing not only her deliverance from the bondage of the Babylonian captivity, but faith can clearly tell that his vision was embracing the deliverance of the saints from the bondage of the daughters of Babylon, who are to be destroyed in these final evil days of this age. How simply we can hear the prophetic message in his inspired words: "When the Lord turned again the captivity of Zion, we were like them that dream. Then was our mouth filled with laughter, and our tongue with singing: Then said they among the heathen, The Lord hath done great things for them. The Lord hath done great things for us; whereof we are glad. Turn again our captivity, 0 Lord, as the streams in the south. They that sow in tears shall reap in joy. He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him." Psa. 126

Day after day rejoicing souls write to tell me of their deliverance from Babylon's harlot system into which the church has been taken captive, and I therein do greatly rejoice. Letters bear the testimony of the awful darkness and confusion of the denominational and sectarian system. They often tell how for forty or fifty years they lived on in their spiritually starved and stunted condition - starved by preaching and preachers who knew nothing of God's eternal purpose, but whose main ambition was to keep in their fold at all costs all who could be thus kept, while adding as many more to their numbers as could possibly be added. These letters tell how, since they have come out in obedience to His word, the Lord has taught them more in months than they were able to learn in all the years they were held in bondage to church teaching and doctrines of men. No wonder David, rejoicing in spirit, proclaimed, "When the Lord turned again the captivity of Zion, we were like them that dream. Then was our mouth filled with laughter, and our tongues with singing." The bondage of that system, which has blinded the eyes of God's people to so much purpose and truth and has blindly portrayed our loving Lord as a sort of unmerciful tyrant who does little more than find fault with His creation and is quick to record all the evil He can against His people, is brilliantly brought out in a letter from one of our correspondents.

Dear Mr. Hawtin:
"Three years ago I first learned the truth of reconciliation. However, because others that I was close to warned me against this teaching, I became frightened of it and did not investigate it any further, save re-reading through the tracts given me and keeping the list of addresses of further study aids. But the seed had been planted and now through a long series of events I came to the place where I was no longer afraid and knew I had to know the truth concerning this."

"I sent off and received your book Creation, Redemption, and the Restitution of All Things. Mr. Hawtin, I was saved twelve years ago and have spent those twelve years in a real love-hate relationship with God, never being able to understand much but desperately wanting to. I have even gone through periods of feeling that God was the greatest sadist of all time, times when I wanted to walk away from it all, and yet I couldn't. Despite the confusion something within me knew that Christ is the way. I can only praise God and thank Him with all my being that He has in His perfect timing led me to the truth I have been so diligently seeking. I could only fall on my face weeping after reading your book as I felt for the first time God's love for me and I in return being able to love Him with a purity that contained no anger or fear. No words can describe the peace I feel as the puzzle is all beginning to come together."

How can I thank you enough? May I address questions to you if necessary? There is no one here I can talk to about this."

God bless you greatly,
Catherine G.

This letter is a good sample of the kind of deliverance into the ocean of God's love that people experience when they are willing to forsake the abominable harlot and her deceiving daughters to come into the pure light that He is so willing to give - yea, the light which Jesus Himself is. I must remind my readers that the promise of sonship is given only to those who obey God and come out. Let us hear once again the word of our faithful Lord: "Come out from among them and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." Thus to those who obey and come out He promises sonship; and that promise is made only to those come-outers who obey.

After the apostle Paul had enumerated the traditions of the Jew's religion in which he was held in bondage, and in which tradition of the elders he gloried after the flesh, such as circumcision, his Israelitish inheritance, his diligence in keeping the letter of the law, concerning which he professed to be blameless, and his vaunted zeal for God, a carnal, hateful disposition that pushed him to the extreme wickedness of persecuting the church, he saw in the light of Christ that all these apparently commendable things, rather than being a spiritual gain to him, were in reality a spiritual loss that kept him from putting his whole faith in the finished work of Christ, who had come, not only to fulfill the law, but to bring to all who believe on Him a height of spiritual experience that the law never pretended to offer. In the light of this heavenly revelation he proclaimed the wondrous discovery: What things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ, Yea, doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ, and be found in Him, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith: That I may know Him, and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings, being made conformable unto His death: if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead. Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect; but I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus. Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus" Phil. 3:7-14

Can we not see by reading these living and potent statements that we all must thoroughly strip for the race if we are going to attain the prize, which is the high calling of God in Christ, a vessel, a member of the body of Christ, a partaker of the adoption, of full sonship, participant in glory, honor, immortality, eternal life?
There can be no tenacious hanging on to the things of the past. There must be a clean break away from all of Egypt's bondage and every relationship with the drunken harlot of Babylon. Rev. 17:6. We must forsake even the things that seem to be pleasant, good and harmless that we may attain, and for my part nothing short of attaining will satisfy. We must attain without counting any cost. We must sell all that we have that we may buy the pearl of great price. We must buy the truth, but sell it not. It will mean the loss of friends. It will mean misunderstanding among our relatives and often the closest members of our family. That is why Jesus said, "I am come not to send peace, but a sword." Matt. 10:34

Some of us have surely noticed how often in scripture the two beautiful words, glory and honor, are placed together, and now that we are beginning to see what glory and honor entail, we can surely see why it was so inspired by the Holy Spirit. As far back as the book of Chronicles we read these sacred words: "Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised: He also is to be feared above all gods. For all the gods of the people are idols; but the Lord made the heavens. Glory and honor are in His presence; strength and gladness are in His place." 1 Chron. 16:25-27 Glory and honor, we are here told, are to be found in His presence. It is in His presence that we find fullness of joy and it is in His presence that we will find glory and honor. Why are we so quick to seek for things where they cannot be found? Why are God's people so foolish - yea, so stupid - that they would imagine that they can attain to heavenly things while they insist upon indulging in the carnal entertainment offered by a corrupt and dying world? "The heart of him that hath understanding seeketh knowledge; but the mouth of fools feedeth on foolishness." Prov. 15:14 These are the words of the Holy Spirit! Let us then be men and women of understanding, that, instead of feeding on the foolishness offered to us upon the platter of a corrupt and untoward generation, we may feast from the wisdom and understanding of God, offered to us by the Holy Spirit in the presence of the Lord that we may attain the glory and honor which is freely offered to those who abide in His presence.

Have you ever felt yourself to be in the beautiful presence of Christ? I am sure you must have done. If you have never waited for His presence, I strongly advise you to wait with Him until all earthly voices are stilled, until the sounds of business and daily life are silent, until you hear Him whisper His message to your heart. There are far, far too many people today talking about experiencing Christ who have never been washed in His blood. We are witnessing today the horribly regrettable sight of men and women imagining they are baptized with the Spirit, though they still smoke and drink and indulge in carnality. Others pretend to speak with tongues of men and angels who are effeminate, fornicators, idolaters, sodomites, covetous and extortioners. Deceive yourself no longer, friend. What you need is to repent and be saved. You do not need some fake charismatic baptism. What you need first is to be washed in the blood of Christ and cleansed and saved from your sin. The washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Spirit is what a sinner needs first of all. Godly sorrow worketh repentance unto salvation not to be repented of, but the sorrow of the world worketh death.

I do not intend to revile, but rather to speak the truth in warning when I say that what I have seen and heard of the so-called Charismatic Movement and the like has served to convince me that what Paul spoke of in 2 Thess. 2:9-12 is very true concerning this movement. Speaking of the mystery of iniquity, he said: "Even him whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish: because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: that they might be damned (condemned) who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness." It is a fearful thing in my opinion that so many of these so-called charismatic people are the same people or the children of them who earlier rejected the great and mighty power of the Holy Spirit when He manifested Himself with signs and wonders in the Pentecostal outpouring when countless thousands of sinners were soundly converted, washed in the blood of Christ and filled with the Holy Spirit. But those who then rejected the truth are now being given over to delusion that they might believe a lie. Long ago our Lord made this solemn assertion to all unbelievers: "I am come in My Father's name, and ye receive Me not: if another shall come in His own name, him ye will receive." John 5:43

When will the eyes of this untoward generation be opened to see the sham, the fake, the intrigue, the mimicry, the pretence and imitation of this present day religious abomination? When will we begin to see the falsehood, the deception, the guile, the bad faith, the purgery, the invention, the hollowness and eye-wash of the vaunted television ministry, conducted by men who can talk for an hour about their need of money to spread the gospel, yet never preach a word of gospel in their programs? What a scathing word was spoken by Jeremiah when he described the preachers of our Laodicean age in these dire tones of rebuke: "A wonderful and horrible thing is committed in the land; the prophets prophesy falsely and the priests bear rule by their means; and My people love to have it so; and what will ye do in the end thereof?" Jer. 5:30-31 Surely the people shall know that the virgin of Israel has done a horrible thing. If there is no repentance, no crying for mercy, no kneeling to pray, no transformation in the lives of supposed converts, then there is no new birth either and there is no conversion. Christ did not come to save people in their sins; He came to save them from their sins. "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creation: old things are passed away: behold, all things are become new." 2 Cor. 5:17. The true believer lives in a new life, a new experience; it is a new birth. It is a resurrection from the dead. It is a right about face. It is a new attitude and a new direction. His soul - yea, his spirit - is born from above. He is re-born. He is born again.

Let us now further pursue this blessedness of glory and honor, for we shall soon see that our Most High Father is leading us into deep depths of experience that we may become fit vessels to rule and order such work of God's fingers as the sun and the moon and the stars, as well as the earth upon which we live. Verily man was created and made to govern the works of God's hands from the beginning when first the proclamation was made: "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth." Gen. 1:26 It was left to the prophet David to disclose in greater detail the meaning and extent of this type laid down in the genesis of the ages. By the Holy Spirit David mused, "When I consider Thy heavens, the work of Thy fingers, the moon, and the stars, which Thou hast ordained; what is man, that Thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that Thou visitest him? For Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels; Thou didst crown him with glory and honor, and didst set him over the works of Thy hands: Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet." Psa. 8:3-6

Now, in saying, "Thou hast crowned him (man) with glory and honor", it becomes very, very evident that, whereas the Most High is bestowing such sweeping, all-inclusive honor upon man in that He is preparing him for the supervision and jurisdiction over all these celestial and, indeed, the total rehabilitation of them all, surely to be worthy of such honor he must first be a partaker of the glory of transfiguration and of the resurrection to know the honor of being called a son of God - a partaker of the adoption, that is, a fully matured and responsible son of God like Jesus Christ Himself, who not only knew the glory of transfiguration and the honor of being proclaimed God's beloved Son, but who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach. 1 Tim. 6:16. The scripture has clearly said that we are the completeness or the fullness of Him (Christ) who filleth all in all, or, as Weymouth puts it, "who everywhere fills the universe with Himself." Eph. 1:23 Behold what unspeakable honor this is and consider well what inexpressible, ineffable glory! "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God!" What honor could exceed this? "Therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew Him not." That the Most High should redeem us with a redemption of such boundless extent that He would call us the sons of God, and again, "joint heirs with Jesus Christ" - this is love all excelling, love of infinite proportion. It is high. The human mind cannot attain unto its unspeakable glory and honor. Our redeemed spirits bow before Him in worship and praise, marveling that His purpose should have embraced such a plan. Surely we cannot wonder that Peter exulted when he said, "Angels desire to look into it."

Incredible as these inspired utterances of David appear, it was to Paul that the blessed Holy Spirit gave the final all-inclusive word concerning the enormity of the honor and glory that the Lord has purposed to bestow upon His sons. Every word of his statement in Hebrews 2:5-10 should be weighed with diligent meditation, thought and prayer. This is what the beloved apostle said: "For unto the angels hath He not put in subjection the world to come, whereof we speak. But one in a certain place testified, saying, What is man, that Thou art mindful of him? or the son of man that Thou visitest him? Thou madest him a little lower than the angels; Thou crownedst him with glory and honor, and didst set him over the works of Thy hands: Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet. For in that He put all in subjection under him, He left nothing that is not put under him. But now we see not yet all things put under him. But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor; that He by the grace of God should taste death for every man. For it became Him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through suffering." Heb. 2:5-10 We will notice that twice in the above quotation the expression glory and honor is used, first in verse 7 where the reference is to mankind, and the second in verse 9 concerning our Lord Jesus Christ, who is already crowned with glory and honor because He tasted death for every man that He might bring them as sons of God to be partakers of the same honor and glory that He Himself has now attained.

Saints of all ages have stood in awe, wondering with great amazement as they beheld the divine mystery of the sufferings of the saints. It is without doubt a very great mystery, but when the Spirit of God rends the deep veil, opening our eyes to behold the glory and honor that lies beyond, then the mystery of our suffering melts away and disappears. Listen to Peter, that great feeder of the sheep, as he makes this beautiful disclosure to all who suffer trials and tribulations in their pilgrimage to the realm of sonship. After reminding the saints of our election according to the foreknowledge of God and recalling to us that we have been brought from the darkness of this world's night into the glorious light of a living hope by the resurrection of Christ from the dead, he assures us in chapter one, verse four, that we have an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away, which is "reserved in heaven for you who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time." Verse 5

We might well wish that these verses could be the theme of this book, but let us say in passing that they hold within their embrace an incredible worth of information to all who will investigate and meditate upon them word for word. They reveal much to us of that inheritance of glory and honor, which has so much in common with the realm of incorruption to which we are pressing with all our might. In verse 7 it becomes very clear in what direction every trial of faith is leading us: "That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ." Here once again the words honor and glory appear, and here Peter is forcefully reminding us that it is in this place of glory and honor that Christ expects to find His brother sons when He appears in that wonderful day, not to deal with sin, but to bring us to full salvation.

That this great honor and glory to which Christ is bringing us through many trials, tribulations and sufferings is infinitely related to our putting off of corruption and putting on of incorruption cannot be disputed in the light of what he further states in 2 Pet. 1:16-17. Oh, let us give earnest heed to these tremendous statements! "For we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eyewitnesses of His majesty. For He received from God the Father honor and glory, when there came such a voice to Him from the excellent glory, This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. And this voice from heaven we heard, when we were with Him in the holy mount." (The mount of transfiguration). I take from these blessed words of truth that the honor and glory which Christ had and which was manifested in the wonder of the transfiguration is the honor and glory that Christ will bestow upon His saints at His coming. When this takes place at the sounding of the last trumpet, it will be with the speed of lightning and in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye. 1 Cor. 15:51-33 and Matt. 24:27

Now, seeing that the Father was honoring His Son at the transfiguration with the words, "This is My beloved Son", He honored Him in the same way at His baptism, for "Jesus, when He was baptized, went straightway out of the water; and, lo, the heavens were opened unto Him, and He saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon Him: and, lo, a voice from heaven, saying, This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased," Matt. 3:16-17 Let us notice as we consider this marvelous event that, while Jesus was being thus honored as the Son of God in whom He was well pleased, the heavens were opened. The realm of the open heavens was an entirely new realm in which He was to walk. It is a realm where no power of earth or heaven or hell or the flesh could ever obscure heaven or its glory and power from Him. This honor have the saints, and we will come gloriously to it, I trust, before the end of the century. Oh what an honor it was that not only should Christ be honored as God's Son, but that in the Father's pleasure with His Son He opened the vaults of heaven to Him with all their eternal resources!

There are yet two remarkable scriptures concerning this honor, which the Father bestowed upon His Son. Jesus, speaking with those ever unbelieving, argumentative Jews, made this significant statement: "I receive not honor from men". And it is most surprising that the word He used to describe honor in this scripture was the Greek word doxa, which was described at some length in volume 31, pages 120-122, as the kabod. The kind of honor man can bestow upon man is but a fading leaf. Even those who honor men with greatness today may find themselves at enmity tomorrow, as was so evidently seen at the time of Christ's triumphal entry into Jerusalem - after which fickle honor they crucified Him. One day men honored Paul and Barnabas as gods, Acts 14:11, but later they stoned Paul. This is not the kind of glory with which the Father honors His sons, for here the honor of which Christ speaks is likened unto the glory of the Shekinah that rested on the tabernacle and appeared unto Moses, which is not a fading glory nor can it pass away. This same fact is true when Jesus said, "If I honor Myself, My honor is nothing: It is My Father that honoreth (Doxazo) Me." John 8:54

That the hope of honor and glory may be fastened firmly in our spiritual minds, let it be forever understood that the greatest honor ever bestowed upon our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ, was bestowed on that day when the Father in heaven proclaimed, "This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." And to those who seek for glory and honor let the knowledge of this truth be firmly implanted that, in seeking the glory and honor offered to us by the Father, we are not seeking some fanciful will-o'-the-wisp, but we are seeking to live in harmony with the divine will and counsel of the Father that we as His sons may also be honored of Him as was our elder brother Jesus Christ. Be not deceived, for this is truth. The greatest honor that the Father will ever bestow upon any blood-washed child of His will come on that wonderful day when He with thunder voice proclaims to His whole creation, "This is My beloved son, in whom I am well pleased." Meditate long upon this, my brethren, for this is honor in its highest degree. Princes may rightly consider it an honor to be the son of an earthly king, but such honor is a corruptible, passing, fading leaf that will be gone when the grasping hand of the enemy, death, intervenes. But it shall not be so with those incorruptible sons who will on the appointed day be honored before all creation with the words of the Father: "These are My beloved sons, in whom I am well pleased." Even the thought of such honor divests me of all pride or self-seeking. In the light of it all earthly gain we count but loss, and pour contempt on all our pride. On the hallowed mount, as at His baptism, our Saviour received glory and honor when there came such a voice from the excellent glory, saying, "This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." 2 Pet. 1:17, 18. For this blessed honor and glory we now seek, 0 Lord, according to Thy will and Thy faithful word.

When our blessed Lord and Christ came into this sin-cursed world, few people were able to grasp the meaning of the question asked by the wise men. "Where is He that is born King of the Jews? For we have seen His star in the east and are come to worship Him." Matt. 2:2 Nor could they grasp the significance of the words of the blessed archangel Gabriel, who came from God's presence to Mary, bearing from the Father's throne the heavenly tidings, "Thou shalt conceive in thy womb and bring forth a son and shait call His name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God (Jehovah Elohim) shall give unto Him the throne of His father David: and He shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of His kingdom there shall be no end." Luke 1:31-33

It was beyond the ability of any of them to grasp the significance of the fact that three wise men, (evidently Israelites from the Assyrian or Babylonian captivity) had come from the east following a star by which they were assured that both a Saviour and a King had been born to the down-trodden people under Roman dominion. Ten tribes of these were still scattered to the east from the Black Sea to Persia, and the other two tribes, Benjamin and Judah, were still scattered from each other, some having never returned from Babylon, and those who had were now fretting under the iron yoke of Imperial Rome. Could it be possible that the rumors now spreading like fire around Jerusalem were true? Was it possible that, after so many centuries had passed since the Father in heaven had visited David, saying, "And thy house and thy kingdom shall be established forever before thee: thy throne shall be established for ever," 2 Sam. 7:16, now indeed a Messiah and King, born of the seed of David, had come to take the throne and reign forever? Could it be that the great emancipator was now born who would deliver them from Roman oppression as thoroughly as Moses delivered them from Egypt? The thought seemed far too great to be true. Yet it was true - indisputably true - that the Messiah of the house of David had come, but none seemed then to know that, before His reign was to be established in all the world, He would first establish His heavenly kingdom, the kingdom of God within His elect and chosen saints. They did not know as we should and must know that no man or woman shall reign with Christ in the kingdom which He will establish in the earth until Christ, the Lord of lords and Kings of kings, reigns supreme within him and in His elect people, who have completely surrendered to His divine mind and His perfect will that His will may be done in all the earth. Let not carnal, self-willed Christians imagine that it will be theirs to reign with Christ without first having shed their carnal minds and having put away from them all that in this kingdom of darkness is now ruled by the mind of man. The lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life are the reigning, governing powers of this present evil age. These are the evil things that continually drain the oil of the Holy Spirit from the virgins' lamps, and sad will be their cry when they find they have missed the kingdom, in which they might have reigned. But the King was promised, and the King had come just as the prophets had spoken. Isa. 53:1-12 They clothed Him in swaddling clothes and laid Him in a manger in Bethlehem, the very town the prophet Micah had long before foretold as the place of His birth. Micah. 5:2. And the child grew and waxed strong in spirit and in wisdom and stature and favor with God and man until the day of His showing unto Israel.

It is very doubtful that any in those days had the remotest idea that it was the Father's intention to take the next two thousand years to complete the great work of calling out a people for His name, Acts 15:13-18; a people who would reign with Him when His kingdom would be established over all the earth. They knew there was to be a kingdom and that the Messiah would reign on the throne of David, but their human expectation was that He would immediately set up His kingdom and throw off by force the hated Roman yoke and every other yoke as well. Their expectation was well expressed in the words of the disciples after the resurrection: "Wilt Thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel?" Well these men knew that one glorious day the kingdom would be restored to Israel, but in their puny, natural minds they hoped, as some do now, that, when the Messiah would come, He would make them the bosses and lords of the world. If such a carnal thought inhabits your mind today, my friend, I exhort you to start looking to Christ for His understanding, for that is not the way His kingdom will be. In that heaven blessed age no man will say, "Know the Lord", for all shall know Him from the least to the greatest. Jer. 31:34

From out of the masses of the redeemed our Father in heaven is even now preparing and calling a "people for His name", a people who have learned during the suffering of this age to let the mind of Christ dwell in them. From the hosts of the redeemed He is raising up a spiritual body, which God's word speaks of as the body of Christ and we as members in particular of that body, 1 Cor. 12:27, yea, a many-membered body in the image and likeness of that one like unto the Son of man, whom John beheld in vision, recorded in Rev. 1:10-18. Our wonderful Jesus, blessed first born Son of God, glorious as He was and is, was not the fullness of God's Christ. He has told us in His word that we are the fullness of Him who filleth all in all. Eph. 1:23 Or, as Weymouth has so beautifully stated, "The completeness of Him who everywhere filleth the universe with Himself". It is for the elect to know that they are integral parts of Himself, the Himself which includes in one the entire body of Christ - all the sons of God elect according to the foreknowledge of Him from the very foundation of the world. Oh, what long ages this infinite purpose has been in the planning and how patiently our heavenly Father has carried it out, and with what long-suffering, mercy and loving kindness has He molded the vessels of glory for His kingdom! Ah, Christian! Strip for the race! Let nothing impede your progress now. Cast off every weight and the sin which so easily besets us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, who is both the author and the finisher of our faith.

Christians as a whole have very faulty ideas concerning the body of Christ. Roman Catholics, kneeling before their idols, imagine themselves to be the body of Christ, if, indeed, they have heard that expression. Protestants who never have partaken of the regenerating power of the new birth, never having been born again, talk glibly about their being the body of Christ. Pentecostal people, still walking after the desires of the carnal mind, imagine themselves to be the body of Christ, and the so-called Charismatics, walking in all their looseness, insist that they are the body of Christ. But the body of Christ consists entirely of the in-Christed. These are they who are both living in the Spirit and walking in the Spirit. Their lives being now fully controlled by the power and direction of the Spirit, they have cast off the carnal mind and are in the truest sense being changed into His image and likeness. This blessedness does not depend on anything we have accomplished for God. It depends entirely upon what we are.

Jesus came to preach and introduce the manner and spirit of His kingdom. It should not, therefore, be difficult to demonstrate that every healing, every miracle, every explanation and every word of wisdom He did or spoke portrayed some vital truth concerning that coming millennium of blessedness and the majesty and power of His reign. In volume 22, chapter 2, of Treasures of Truth I have endeavored to show how the miracle of the waterpots and the wine was in reality a manifestation regarding the kingdom of God under the rule of Christ. When He healed the blind, He demonstrated that in His kingdom all darkness, blindness and blighting shadows will be removed by His power. When He healed the deaf, he was showing that His kingdom will be a day when every ear shall be unstopped, and all will hear and know and accept the truth. Healing the lame man, He portrayed a kingdom in which all mankind will walk uprightly, both in the body and in the Spirit as well. Examine every one of His miracles and you will understand, as did the prophet Isaiah when he said, "Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb shall sing: for in the wilderness shall waters break out, and streams in the desert." Isa. 35:5, 6. The incurable leprosy, which is symbolic of sin, He healed, and the leprosy of sin will be cleansed from His kingdom. The parables of Matthew, chapter 13, in every case show some mountain peak of kingdom glory. The beautiful Sermon on the Mount, the most remarkable sermon ever written or spoken, concerns in its entirety the laws and government of the kingdom of God. None of those laws can be lived except they be lived by the life and power of the indwelling Holy Spirit.

There was a day, according to Matt. 16:19, when Jesus said, not necessarily to Peter only, but to all the apostles, "I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." For some three glorious years our Lord Himself had freely used these keys to the kingdom. He had used them to loose the blind from their chains of darkness. He had made straight the crippled woman who was bowed together. He had made the trembling body of the palsied man to cease from its convulsive shaking. He had cleansed the leper and sent him away whole. He had healed the bloody issue of a woman who had suffered many things of many physicians, and was nothing better, but rather grew worse. He had stilled the waves, which are like unto the wicked who, like the troubled sea, cannot rest and whose waves cast up mire and dirt. Isa. 57:20 He had answered every question and unraveled every mystery, but now He was leaving the world and passing those keys of the kingdom on to those He had ordained to share His image and likeness. And I shall not hesitate to say that the works He did His apostles did also as they went forth opening the gates of the kingdom of heaven to the multitudes who came from every corner to hear the word of God.

Then, having said that he would give them the keys of the kingdom of heaven, He made this precious promise: "There be some standing here who will not taste of death until they shall see the Son of man coming in His kingdom." We shall now see what marvels the mount of transfiguration holds in relation to the kingdom of God. Matt. 16:28 "For," said Peter, "we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eyewitnesses of His majesty. For He received from God the Father honor and glory, when there came such a voice to Him from the excellent glory, This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." 2 Pet. 1:16-17

THE TRANSFIGURATION

The seventeenth chapter of Matthew begins with these words: "And after six days Jesus taketh Peter, James, and John his brother, and bringeth them up into a high mountain apart." I believe the high mountain was Mt. Hermon, for the Lord was at Caesarea Philippi at the foot of this mountain at the time. Matt. 16:13 Mt. Hermon is a very high mountain, Mark 9:2, 9232 feet in height. The mountain itself represents the kingdom and appears to be the place where the Lord commanded the blessing of glory and honor upon Christ. "As the dew of Hermon, and as the dew that descended upon the mountains of Zion: for there the Lord commanded the blessing, even life for evermore." Psa. 133:3

It is stated that their going into the high mountain was after six days. A day is with the Lord a thousand years and a thousand years is as one day. Centuries before this event the Father in heaven had said to man, "Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work; but the seventh is the reaper overtakes the sower, and where nothing hurts nor destroys in all God's holy mountain; for the knowledge of the Lord will fill the earth as the waters cover the sea. There will be no more hospitals, drug stores, funeral parlors, nor cemeteries, for there will be no more death except for those few who choose to rebel, as Zechariah has stated. Zech. 14:17-18 Man shall not be of few days, but will live out their lives - yea, live out their thousand year day of rest. Instead of the briar shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the thorn shall come up the myrtle tree; and it shall be to the Lord for a name, for an age-lasting sign, which shall not be cut off. Isa. 58:1-13 Blessed be the fountain of blood! Blessed be the kingdom of God! Blessed be the King of kings and blessed be His name unto the age of the ages! Alleluia!
Thus it was that after six days Jesus took these men to the mount to behold in miniature the glory of the kingdom of God as He had promised. It seems reminiscent of the day when Moses was taken to Mt. Pisgah to view the promised land. After six days these blessed events were to be in effect. Therefore let us take heart as saints of God, for the six thousand years are much nearer completion now than they were then. Nineteen hundred and eighty-six years or more have passed away since that wonderful day of transfiguration. The night is far spent and the day, the kingdom day, is at hand. More than nineteen centuries ago Paul wrote, "Now is our salvation nearer than when we believed." The night is far spent; the day is at hand. Let us rejoice that in 1986 we are much closer to the end of the sixth day than our beloved brother Paul was when he wrote those life-giving words. Sooner than we think it will be "after six days", not six typical days as it was then when Jesus gave them a bird's eye view of the kingdom, but six long one thousand year days have almost passed and the kingdom morn with lissomest steps is ushering in the glorious, long awaited kingdom day, for which all creation groans and sighs and prays in pain from Adam's day until now.

So it was that on that never-to-be-forgotten day our Lord led His three disciples to the top of a very high mountain and was transfigured before them. Matt. 17:1-2 The record states that "His face did shine as the sun, and His raiment was white as the light." Only light is truly white. His garments were not white like a snowflake; they were white as the light. It is a whiteness for which there is no description. I suggest that Adam was clothed with light as with a garment, Psa. 104:2, before the transgression divested him of it and left him naked and horribly ashamed. Gen. 2:8-11 Jesus was transfigured before them. He was transformed. He was changed. The Greek word metamorphoo is the word the evangelist Matthew used to describe the change that took place in Him on that wonderful day. As a grovelling worm is transformed to become a butterfly, so our Lord was transformed from corruptible to incorruptible, from natural man to manifested Son of God. The celestial light of the glory of God - the kabod, the doxa, the shekinah - shone from His face brighter than the glory of the sun. It was not a reflected light, but the manifestation of the light which He Himself is. It was the same glory light that lighted the world in the beginning when the Father said, "Let there be light", and there was light. It was the light that lightened the earth with His glory four days before the sun appeared in the heavens. Gen. 1:14-19 Man loses his power of expression when he tries to explain such unspeakable wonders as this. My mind falters for expression and fails for words in the presence of that which we know to be true, but, because it belongs to the celestial, the divine, no words in the tongues of earth exist to explain it.

His face did shine as the sun and His garments were white as the light. Matt. 17:2 Let us not forget that Christ was revealing to His disciples something of the magnificence of the kingdom of God. Above all, I suggest He was revealing the more excellent glory of the King who is to reign in that kingdom when earth is ruled by heaven. This was the shining forth of the incorruptible. Our Lord was revealing the unspeakable, excellent glory of the incorruptible realm. He was showing them, first, what He himself will be, and secondly, He intended that these astonished onlookers should understand what the incorruptible sons of God will be when they reign with Him in that heavenly realm. Paul plainly spoke of this great mystery, saying "Behold, I show you a mystery. We shall not all sleep (die) but we shall all be changed (transformed, transfigured) in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory." I Cor. 15:41-54 I will not take space here to speak of the difference between incorruption and immortality, but I will venture to say that the immortality which we must eventually put on is as far beyond incorruption as incorruption is beyond corruption. When Jesus arose from the dead, He arose in incorruption. When He ascended into Heaven, He ascended into immortality, into the light which no man can approach and no man has seen, and as yet, at least, cannot see. Of our Lord, Jesus Christ, Paul wrote: "Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light, which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see, to whom be honor and power everlasting." I Tim. 6:16

I do not wish to speculate nor do I take pleasure in sensationalism, but there is cause to wonder if this marvelous transfiguration may have been much more than a mere demonstration of the kingdom. Could it have been an actual "putting on" of incorruption? That which is incorruptible cannot corrupt. That which is immortal cannot die. The Father did not permit His Son to see corruption. Jesus did not die as other men die, neither was He killed as other men are killed. He said, "No man taketh My life from Me, but I lay it down of Myself. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again." John 10:18 It was not the agony of the cross, the terror of the nails, nor the thrust of the spear that took His life. He laid it down. He gave up the Spirit. Mark 15:37 He said, "Into Thy hands I commend My spirit."

Luke 23:46 When Lazarus had lain in the grave four days, his sister begged them not to remove the stone, "because," she said, "by this time he stinketh." John 11:39 He had gone into corruption; but Jesus was not suffered to see corruption. Psa. 16:10; Acts 2:27 Thus I am given to wonder if, indeed, that marvelous change - yea, metamorphosis - through which He passed during the glory of the transfiguration may in truth have been a permanent putting on of incorruption.

To a very large extent the glory of Christ was hidden through all the days of His earthly life. Only those blessed few to whom the heavens occasionally stood open saw Him as He really was. What was it that suddenly caused Peter to exclaim, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God?" And Nathaniel to utter those words of revelation, "Rabbi, Thou art the Son of God. Thou art the King of Israel?"

THE VOICE FROM THE CLOUD

Now when our Lord appeared in the glory of His transfiguration, Moses and Elijah appeared in glory with Him. Luke 9:29-30 I take Luke's words to mean that Moses, from the dispensation of the law, and Elijah, representing the prophets, were also clothed with the same incorruptible glory as was Christ. We need not be emphatic, but the scripture does say that they appeared with Him in glory, and I see no reason why they may not have appeared as Christ appeared. Moses did not remain in the grave after his burial, but was raised as Jude clearly indicates. Jude 9. And Elijah, being translated, did not see corruption. However, what we do not know here we will know hereafter, so we will rest the matter here.

Now, when Peter saw this wonderful sight, not knowing either what to say or what to do, he made the bold suggestion, "Let us make here three tabernacles: one for Thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias." Matt. 17:4 His words almost remind us of these: "I am of Paul. I am of Apollos. I am of Cephas. I am of Christ." But even while he spoke these words, a bright cloud overshadowed them. It was not a dark cloud of the usual sort, but a glory cloud - the shekinah, the kabod, the light of His presence. Then from out of the cloud there spoke that voice of thunder, the voice that long before had spoken from the flames and smoke of Mount Sinai when the law was given and which spoke again at the Saviour's baptism, and now once more the almighty Father spoke, saying, "This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. Hear Him." The voice which the disciples heard in the holy mount bore a most important message. There were to be no more tabernacles erected to Moses and the law; no buildings to Elijah of the prophets; not even a tabernacle to Jesus Himself. But the mighty voice from the bright cloud of glory thundered forth the glorious message, "This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. Hear Him." The days of the law were over forever. The days of the prophets had passed away. From that moment onward the voice of the Son of God alone was to be heard. "Hear Him," said the Father. "He is the truth, the light, the life, and the way. Hear Him! He is the Lord of all the earth. He is the King of the kingdom of God. He is the all in all." What He says is the mind of the eternal Father. What He speaks flows like a river from the lips of God. Hear Him! Too long the world has been confused by many voices; too many trumps giving an uncertain sound; too much teaching without revelation, and too many propagating their own theories and proclaiming their own beliefs. Why must we hear today the five hundred voices of Babylon, each building his own tabernacle of confusion? It is because we have not taken time to listen to the voice divine, who alone speaks the very word of God in truth, who knows no mind but the Father's mind, who says with reverent fervor, "I and My Father are one." But now the kingdom is within the saints and everything old has passed away, and we shall hear no voice speaking but the voice of the Son of God and know no law but His. Prophecy shall fail and tongues will cease and all earthly knowledge shall vanish away that He and He only may speak the message that will govern the world in righteousness. Well did the writer of Hebrews say, "God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by His Son, whom He hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also He made the worlds; who being the brightness of His glory, and the express image of His person, and upholding all things by the word of His power, when He had by Himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high." Heb. 1:1-3
Leaving this thought, I must yet remark that these men were seeing Christ as He will appear in His kingdom. A Babel of voices has been heard since He spoke that day and there has been a confusion of voices, all clamoring to be heard, but in that kingdom day there will be but one voice, God speaking in His Christ, God speaking in His Christ body, the sons of God, the completeness of Him who fills the universe with Himself, the fullness of Him who is the all in all. This was the overpowering sight John beheld in the Revelation - one like the Son of man whose voice was as "many waters." This is the fullness of the body of Christ - many yet one, all speaking the same truth. Rev. 1:9-18

Now, when the Father had spoken from the glory cloud, "This is My beloved Son; hear Him," the disciples were sore afraid and fell upon their faces before the voice of Him that spake. But Jesus, lifting them up, bade them to be not afraid, and, when they had lifted up their eyes, they saw no man but Jesus only. Beloved brethren, to this place of unity let us immediately come, the place of communion with Christ where we see no man but Jesus only. With all my heart and soul I earnestly pray that, when my frail bark is folded and this flickering candle of my mortality ceases to shine, I will leave no disciples or followers of myself, but that those few souls I may have influenced will every one be left following after my wonderful elder brother, Jesus Christ. I often glory in the sad but lovely scene pictured so beautifully in the gospel of John, chapter 1, verses 35-37. The mighty prophet, John, was standing with two of his disciples, possibly the only two he had left, and, pointing to Jesus as He passed, John said with tremendous conviction, "Behold the Lamb of God!" And the two disciples left that blessed, humble, powerful man standing alone and they went to follow Jesus. No wonder our blessed Lord later remarked, "Among men born of women there has not arisen a greater than John the Baptist." Matt. 11:11

It is sad, very sad, to see that, after ministries are long dead, disciples are still clinging to them and calling themselves after their names. I always rejoiced that, though the ministry of the late Charles S. Price reached and blessed tens of thousands of people, he left them all following after Jesus and not after himself. When men follow Jesus Christ and learn to hear His voice, they are never found in the wilderness of doubt, confusion and fear, or wondering what they will do now that some great one has departed this feeble life; but they will be found standing steadfast upon that Rock which Christ is, knowing that their anchor is fastened to that mighty Rock within the veil, our steadfast Christ who is High Priest of our faith, the Author and Finisher to us all.

The transcendent glory of the transfiguration was a vision of the future. It concerned a blessed age yet to come. Our Lord did not want His apostles to think that what they saw would immediately come to pass, though it seems evident that they must have thought this by their question, "Why, then, say the scribes that Elias must first come?" In other words they were saying, "If this transfiguring glory of Christ in His kingdom is to be the next thing in order, why are the scribes talking about the coming of Elijah, an event that was to happen before the onset of the kingdom of God?" We make a great mistake when we get truth misplaced. Truth to be active must be present truth. We make a mistake when we take the truths of ages past and try to preach them as though they belonged to our time. The law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ. So many today are trying to make the truth of ages past to be present truth for today. It is a mistake. It is not that the truth of yesterday is untrue today. It is that since then our Lord has added to it some more glorious unfolding of spiritual experience and purpose and we should concern ourselves with this. In Moses' day the law was written on stone. In our day, to all who walk in the Spirit, the law is written in our hearts and has become our spiritual nature. We love God with all our soul, our might and our strength, not because we are told to do so, but because the love of God is in our hearts.

The man Apollos was a man mighty in the scripture, but he knew only the baptism of John, and he preached it fervently and with great convincing conviction. But he did not know that Jesus had already come, nor did he know that the Holy Spirit had been given at Pentecost. Priscilla and Aquilla saw that Apollos was preaching past truth, so they took him to themselves and explained unto him the way of God more perfectly. Acts 18:24-26 They showed him that the Christ he preached had already come, that the water baptism he practiced, called the baptism of John, had given place to a greater baptism, the baptism of the Holy Spirit. He was a blessed man of great humility and, when he heard what the present truth was, he went to preaching present truth, by which, we are told, he mightily convinced the Jews, and that publicly, showing from the scripture that Jesus was Christ. Acts 18:28

So also it is when we try to apply the things of the kingdom to our age of grace. The majesty and the glory of the transfiguration foretold the truth of an age to come, and our Lord did not want His disciples thinking they would immediately enter that age. That is why He told them to tell no man until the Son of man was risen from the dead. What will be general knowledge and experience in the kingdom age is reserved now only for those who have the kingdom of God within them. The kingdom today "cometh not with observation." It exists only within us, only, I say, in the heart of the elect.

When this wonderful transfiguration scene had faded from their eyes, Jesus bade them tell no man the vision until the Son of man was risen from the dead. Well did they guard the secret and well they might, for those who enter such glory find, as did Paul, that it is unlawful to speak of them to those who are not prepared, 2 Cor. 12:1-4, knowing that no natural mind can possibly comprehend the glories of the heavenly realm or such celestial truth. Peter many years after the resurrection of Christ felt free to speak only a few words of what he had seen when in his second epistle he wrote, "We have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eyewitnesses of His majesty. For He received from God the Father honor and glory, when there came such a voice to Him from the excellent glory, This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with Him in the holy mount."

We spoke in another chapter of the two significant words, honor and glory, and here they meaningfully appear with reference to that voice speaking from the excellent glory that over-shadowed them, for Christ received honor and glory when the Father's voice spoke, saying, "This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." From these words from heaven we are to understand that the greatest honor will be given to the sons of God when with a voice like thunder He will awaken the world with the announcement, "These are My beloved sons, in whom I am well pleased. Hear them!" That mighty edict, proclaimed twice of our elder brother, Jesus Christ, will be spoken of them all. No greater honor nor greater glory can ever be bestowed than will be bestowed upon the sons of God when our great Father in heaven announces, "These are My beloved sons, in whom I am well pleased."

This is our adoption. This is the adoption for which all creation groans. Rom. 8:23. "I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us. For the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God." Rom. 8:18-19 The Son and the sons will then be one body, the Head and the body together. It will be then as God's word has said. Jesus Christ will be the oldest in "a vast family of brothers" (Weymouth), or "that He might be the firstborn among many brethren." Rom. 8:29 See also Heb. 2:10 This is he, the body of Christ, the one like the Son of God, whom John beheld as he was carried away in the Spirit on lonely little Patmos in the long ago. Rev. 1:10-18

The kingdom age is now near at hand. The sufferings of Christ and His cross are long past. The suffering of the saints that has been their lot all through this age is nearly at an end. The lightning is soon to flash and the trumpet to sound that the elect who are alive and the elect who are in the graves will hear the voice of God, and will be transfigured, transformed, changed in the twinkling of an eye. The majesty of a new age, even the kingdom of God and of His Christ will have come to shed its transforming rays of light, wisdom and understanding upon a new born earth in a new born age, for which Jesus taught us to pray and for which all creation has groaned.

Then the bear will be gentle
And the lion will be tame.
he wolf will lie down with the lamb.
There the beast from the wild
Shall be led by the child,
And I shall be changed from the Creature that I am.

Oh, what honor and glory is laid up in store for those who seek! "If we suffer (with Him), we shall also reign with Him."

THE LUNATIC
As the Lord with His three wondering disciples descended from the holy mountain, a strange but very revealing incident was taking place at its foot. A poor, distraught and heart-broken man had brought his lunatic son to the disciples that they might cast the devil from him and deliver him from his awful affliction; but, though all these disciples had been given power over devils to cast them out, they found themselves totally incapable of handling this dreadful case that was now placed before them. As Jesus descended the mountain, the father of the lunatic boy came running to Him for help. The enlightening story is told in detail by Matthew in these vivid words: "And when they were come to the multitude, there came to Him a certain man, kneeling down to Him, and saying, Lord, have mercy on my son; for he is lunatic, and sore vexed: for oft times he fell into the fire, and oft into the water. And I brought him to Thy disciples, and they could not cure him. Then Jesus answered and said, 0 faithless and perverse generation, how long shall I be with you? How long shall I suffer you? Bring him hither to Me. And Jesus rebuked the devil; and he departed out of him: and the child was cured from that very hour." Matt. 17:14-18

This strange story has often given me cause to wonder and I suppose has been a puzzle to many others as well. Why was it, I wondered, that, though Jesus had given these men authority over devils to cast them out - a miracle they had accomplished times without number, Luke 10:17, here in this instance was a situation they could not handle? And why did it appear at this particular moment when the glory of a coming age was being revealed? So for this I enquired of the Lord, and this is the message that unfolded before me.

The lunatic represents the whole world. There is nothing so demon possessed or so demon controlled as the world is at this moment and has been for six thousand years. Satan himself has been the prince of the power of the air. He is the spirit that "now worketh in the children of disobedience." Eph. 2:2 Long ago, after forty days of fasting and prayer, our Lord Jesus Christ was led into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil, the wilderness of this world with its evil, demon-controlled system. After the fast was over, Satan came to Him, as recorded by Matthew, Chapter 4. After the first and second temptation had failed, Satan took Him to an exceeding high mountain. I cannot help but wonder if that exceeding high mountain may not have been the same mountain, the mount of transfiguration, from which He was now descending. This may or may not be so, but I would suggest that it is worthy of consideration, for we will learn, as we progress through life, that the highest point of our temptation or our struggle will be also the highest point of our blessing. In any case, Jesus was taken to an exceeding high mountain and Satan showed Him all the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them, "and saith unto Him, All these things will I give Thee if Thou wilt fall down and worship me." Matt. 4:9

The evangelist Luke, however, adds these significant words: "All this power will I give Thee, and the glory of them: for that is delivered unto me; and to whomsoever I will I give it." Luke 4:6 This is a most significant declaration, and we will notice that our Lord did not in the least dispute nor challenge Satan’s claim. The world and the things in it have been given into his hand ever since man in the Garden of Eden abdicated to Satan's temptation and gave him the mastery.

Ever since that dreadful day Satan has been in control. I know that back of all things is God and there is no power but of God. The powers that be are ordained of God. These are very revealing statements, for it is true that there are times when even the vilest of men are permitted to rule and govern in this present evil world. So, though Satan has been given dominion for a period of time, even his dominion is not without restraint. The word of God has made it very clear that Satan, whatever be the extent of his power, cannot go one iota beyond the bounds which the Lord has set for him. Thus when Satan offered our Lord all the kingdoms of the world, he was evidently speaking the truth, because they were given into his hand; but he was also hiding the fact, as he always does, that his power and sway is not universal, neither is it almighty, but he controls only where permission has been given to him. The story of Job's great tribulation is a very revealing insight as to how far Satan has power to go and who it is that sets those confining boundaries. See Job 1:12 and 2:6

The world is the lunatic, governed and controlled by the power of the devil, acting through carnal and corrupt men. They are the rulers of the darkness of this world, controlled by the evil spirit that now "worketh in the children of disobedience." Eph. 2:2 Paul in this passage, verse 3, goes so far as to say to Christians, "Among whom also we all had our conversation (manner of living) in times past in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind; and were by nature the children of wrath, even as others." By such carnal minds as these the whole world has been governed ever since the Garden of Eden. The only tiny respite was the few years when God’s people Israel were governed by God through such men as Moses, Samuel and Joshua; but these were no sooner coming to the end of their time on earth than evil men like the sons of Eli and Samuel were ready to take the reins of government to turn the hearts of the people once again away from the rule and order of God to the rule and order of the principalities and powers, the spirits that now work in the children of disobedience.

The terrible predicament, not only of this poor, demon possessed boy, but of the world he represented was this: Often the spirit took control of him and often cast him into the fire and often into the water. It is no joke or pun, but a terrible reality, that for all these six thousand years of the rule of principalities and powers working in the children of disobedience the poor world has been either in the fire or in the water. How often we use the expression to indicate someone in great trouble, "He got himself into hot water." Or how often we hear the expression, "He has jumped from the frying pan into the fire." These idioms are understood only by those who use them, but we well know that man is not at home in the water because he is not a creature of the water; neither is he at home in the fire because he is not a creature of the fire. The world today, governed by evil spirits through the medium of very carnal men, is thrown first into the fire and then into the water. Man tries kings and they soon so dominate the lives of the people that they rebel. Dictators rise only to oppress the people. Democracies arise to have their day, but they, too, bind the people with taxation and laws that strangle them. Thus the evil story goes through any and all forms of human government, and man is willing to look to anyone for deliverance but to God.

For six thousand years now well-meaning men have been trying to deliver this world from the demon that possesses it, but all have miserably failed. They cannot cast the devil out nor deliver the maniac from his dementia. So the poor earth continues meanwhile to be cast first into the fire of war, upheaval and bloodshed and into the deep waters of depression, famine, taxation and all other evils, then to be thrown back into the fire in a wearying process that is bringing the whole creation nearer to destruction. "I brought him to Thy disciples, and they could not cure him," pleaded the poor father, and, oh, how true the fact is! There is no man in the world today - no, not Moses nor Solomon nor David nor any statesman of any time, nor any Christian with any gift in this age of grace who can "cure him." This is one devil the Lord has not given us power to cast out, and I know we speak the truth when we say that this present evil world, controlled as it is by the powers of darkness, cannot be cured by any man nor any form of human government. It is pitiful to hear the throngs shout and yell their hurrahs when some man with big promises and an even bigger mouth wins an election and gets into office as prime minister or president or dictator; but that poor soul, no matter how good his intentions may have been, is immediately confronted by the prince of the powers that be and is no sooner seated in the saddle than everything begins to fall either into the fire or into the water. When Canadians elected Trudeau as Prime Minister, the shouts could be heard from coast to coast, and when they finally got rid of him, the sighs of relief heaved from a million hearts were louder still. They screamed for Mulroney and already, after a little more than a year, the tide is turning against him. And so it will always be in every age and in every country of the world. The German nation shouted "Heil Hitler" until the rafters rang when he first gained power, but what fire and brimstone awaited both them and the world under his evil rule and into what waters of judgment the demon of lunacy cast them! Thus it must be until He comes whose right it is to reign.

When all else failed and even the disciples found themselves powerless to help the demon possessed lunatic, the father called upon Jesus. Listen to His words of rebuke, not to the father and not to the failure of the disciples, but to a faithless and perverse generation. The word generation does not always have reference to a prescribed or definite period of time. It often refers to an entire age or specified period of activity as in Numbers 32:13; "until all the generation that had done evil was consumed". Or Psa. 22:30; "a seed shall serve Him; it shall be counted to the Lord for a generation." The generation of the seed that serves Him stretches all the way from Adam to the end of the age in which we live and, indeed, the end of time. This, I think, is what Jesus intended us to know when He said, "0 faithless and perverse generation. Since the transgression in Eden the faithless, perverse generation of evil and perversity has continued unabated. It was in full bloom in Jesus' day and it became increasingly evident as the ages passed by. It is at its worst now, for the ruler of the darkness of this world knows that he has but a short time and is come down with great wrath, throwing the world into ever increasing confusion, darkness and disorder - sometimes into the fire and sometimes into the water - and no man alive is able to cast him out or change the circumstances. This perverse and faithless generation is as helpless as all others in the face of the demon possessed, demented, lunatic world we are in. But on that great day One was coming down from the mountain, One whom God had declared to be His Son. They had caught a glimpse of the kingdom age. Even our Lord Jesus Christ had been lifted to a new and higher realm of sonship, a realm of incorruption into which we shall come, if we are faithful and true. "Hear Him," the Father had said, and even this devil of lunacy must hear and obey.

"Bring him hither to Me" was the command of this transfigured Son, this glorious King of the kingdom age. There is none other who can cure the dire maladies and ills, the devils, the corrupt and carnal minds, none other but our Lord Jesus Christ. All power in heaven and earth is given unto Him. Devils, cowering before Him, shriek for mercy, crying, "I know Thee, who Thou art, the holy One of God." When the holy One of God bids them hold their peace, hold their peace they must. When He bids them come out, they come out, and when He binds them for a thousand years and shuts them up in chains of darkness, no power can possibly deliver or help them. How well it was stated by John, when he saw the fulfillment of the very thing of which we speak, "And I saw an angel come down from heaven, having the key of the bottomless pit and a great chain in his hand. And he laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent, which is the Devil, and Satan, and bound him for a thousand years, and cast him into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and set a seal upon him, that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years should be fulfilled..." Rev. 20:1-3 "Bring him to Me," our Lord commanded, and Jesus rebuked the devil, and "he departed out of him, and the child was cured from that very hour." The blessed hour is now at hand for the curing of the world's ills. The demons of greed, selfishness, lust and every hurtful and painful evil are having great wrath, because they know their time is very short. The sons of God, pressing patiently toward their adoption, are ascending the great and high mountain of transfiguration. It is the mount of the kingdom of God. From the glory of that kingdom mountain, praise God, they will rule in justice and equity for a thousand years of blessedness before the dispensation of the fullness of times, that age of the ages, comes to restore all things and reconcile the universe to God.

The mount of transfiguration is the kingdom mountain. It is the mountain of glory and honor, the glory of incorruption and transfiguration and the honor of adoption and manifestation. Some will certainly ask me how I know the Father will say of all the sons of God, "These are My beloved sons, in whom I am well pleased", even as He said it of Jesus, our elder brother. I know it is truth, because such honor is exactly what adoption is as it is taught in scripture, both at our Lord's baptism and at His transfiguration. Adoption in Israel was a rite in which a father called his friends together and introduced his son as a mature son and a responsible man. That was an honor indeed, but a small honor to be sure compared to that honor which was bestowed upon the Son of God when His Father in heaven announced to the world, "This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. Hear Him." Because we see that this is adoption, we know this same honor will be accorded to all who become sons of God. John 1:12 "We know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now. And not only they, but ourselves also, which have the firstfruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body." Rom. 8:22-23 And now already, praise be to God, we "have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father. The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God: and if children, then heirs; heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with Him, that we may also be glorified together." Rom. 8:15-17

This, then, in some small part is the honor and glory for which the sons of God seek - the glory of incorruption and the honor of adoption. We shall not seek such glory and honor with the wicked hope of self-aggrandizement, as some would certainly do, but with patient continuance in well doing we shall seek for glory and honor, immortality and eternal life.

"Beloved, now are we the sons (children) of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when He shall appear, we shall be like Him; for we shall see Him as He is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as He is pure." 1 John 3:2-3 Again let us reflect upon this sacred message, "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God: therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew Him not." 1 John 3:1 How glorious is the race that we with patient continuance in well doing now run, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith, who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God, angels, principalities and powers being made subject unto Him! Amen and Amen! How marvelous and wonderful it all is! Blessed be the Lord, who loadeth us with benefits!
The hour of glory and honor is now at hand. It is very near. Two thousand years ago Jesus led the disciples up the mount that they might see the glory and power of the coming kingdom. Its honor and glory was then with the Lord two days in the future, but in man's reckoning it was two thousand years in the future. Now the six days of man's labor and travail under the fearful rulers of the darkness of this world are almost over. If our chronology is right, there are only fourteen more years before the six days of man's labor are fulfilled. It may well be earlier than that, because times and seasons have with little doubt been altered, as the scripture said they would be. Two thousand years ago some men came to Jesus to tell Him that Herod sought to kill Him, and the Lord in answer revealed this secret: "Go and tell that fox, Behold, I do cures today and tomorrow, and the third day I will be glorified." Today and tomorrow represent two thousand years between then and now, and the third day is the kingdom day in which a glorified Christ with His glorious brother sons of incorruption will cast the devil out of the world system, healing the demented demoniac and binding Satan in chains of darkness for a thousand years.

Our Lord was almost quoting the words of the far-seeing Hosea who, writing to Israel of a future day, said, "Come, and let us return unto the Lord; for He hath torn and He will heal us; He hath smitten and He will bind us up. After two days will He revive us: in the third day He will raise us up, and we shall live in His sight." Hosea 6:1-2 Only a few more short years will our poor, benighted world be forced to writhe in pain under the fearful, demanding sway of principalities and powers and the rulers of the darkness of this world. Jesus is coming with His sons to say, "Bring him unto Me," and He will rebuke every evil power and set the demoniac free.

It will not be necessary for me here to endeavor to convince anyone that the world is now struggling helplessly between the fires of tribulation and the waters of judgment. Listen to the news any day at any hour and what do we hear? More violence, More killings, More break-ins, More robberies, More conspiracy, More defrauding, More wars, More armaments, More uprisings, More rebellions, More air crashes, More earthquakes, More tornadoes, More volcanoes, and mud slides, More drug abuse, More bombing, And an ever, increasing number of children born either crippled in body or retarded in mind, and... worst of all, no good news anywhere. The poor, sad, distraught, demon-possessed world, groaning and travailing in pain, is waiting for the sons of God to reach the glory and honor of adoption, waiting for the transfigured family of sons to say, "Bring him to me." Far away in the depths of my spirit I hear the voice of the prophet Isaiah, saying, "And he will destroy in this mountain (the mountain of the kingdom of God) the face of the covering cast over all people, and the vail that is spread over all nations. He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God shall wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of His people shall He take away from off all the earth: for the Lord hath spoken it." Isa. 25:7-8 "Thy dead men shall live, together with My dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in the dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead." Isa. 26:19 Oh what a song of joy there is going to be when the sons of God say, "Bring him unto me." And the poor, drunken, staggering, demon possessed world will as the demoniac of Gadara be devoutly following Jesus, clothed and in his right mind.

Oh what a stormy sea the world has sailed from Adam's transgression until now! What indescribable travail the earth has seen during these six days of labor as mankind has toiled in the sweat of his face for enough daily bread to keep body and soul together! We fight and war, yet we have not because we ask not. Poor, benighted man spends a lifetime striving to lay by for an old age he often never reaches, or laying up in store for a son that causes shame. "Man that is born of woman is of few days, and full of trouble. He cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down: he fleeth also as a shadow, and continueth not." Job 14:1-2

BORN AGAIN OF INCORRUPTIBLE SEED

From my kindergarten class room of some seventy summers ago a pretty childhood poem comes floating back on the wings of memory, telling of two little brown seeds lying in the ground, awaiting the warmth of spring. It goes like this: Little brown brother,

Oh little brown brother,
Are you awake in the dark?
Here we lie cosily
Close to each other;
Hark to the sound of the lark!
Waken, Waken, the lark says.
Waken and dress you;
Put on your green coats and gay:
Blue skies will shine on you,
Sunshine caress you; Waken!
Tis morning, 'tis May.

Little brown brother,
Oh little brown brother,
What kind of flower will you be?
I'll be a poppy
All white like my mother;
Oh do be a poppy like me!
What! You're a sunflower?
How I shall miss you
When you're grown golden and high.
But I will send all
The bees up to kiss you.
Little brown brother, goodbye.

Pretty, you say? Yes, and a little bit sad, but it teaches us all that forever unchangeable truth that whatsoever the seed is that is exactly what the plant will be. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." Gal. 6:7-8

This immutable law of God cannot be changed. The seed of a turnip and the seed of a rutabaga look identical. We could mix a pound of each together and not be able to tell which is which, but when they spring forth from the earth, each will come forth according to his own kind. What a frightful mess the world would be if this rigid law were not in effect! A white girl had married a black man, and when they brought her baby to her and she saw it was black, she began to cry. Her Negro mother-in-law, who had come to visit her, seeing her tears, kindly said, "Did yo' think it would be white, honey?" No! Whatsoever we sow, that is what we reap, and this is a conclusion, a divinely appointed result that no power on earth can possibly avoid or change.

In previous chapters we have been considering the words of Paul: "To them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honor and immortality, eternal life." Rom. 2:7 This is a very beautiful verse which reveals to us that it is only those who with all their hearts seek after this incorruptible realm, the realm of honor and glory, who will enter at last into its reality, but let us settle it in our minds here and now that, before anyone even begins to seek the incorruptible realm, the incorruptible seed must first be planted in the womb of his spirit by the Holy Ghost. It must be sown there by the miraculous new birth - by being born again. Upon this precious truth the apostle Peter shone the heavenly light of revelation when he said, "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently; being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." 1 Peter 1:22-23 The truth of tremendous importance, which we must see here is that, when one is born again by the miracle of the new birth, an incorruptible seed is planted within him. No amount of seeking or ascetic living will produce incorruption nor any amount of health food or healthful living. These may help to sustain the corruptible body, but never in a million worlds could they produce anything approaching incorruption. Incorruption can be produced only when the incorruptible seed is sown within by the power of the Holy Spirit. Peter here makes the truth very plain by which we understand that the actual planting of the incorruptible seed takes place at the moment one is born again, and, from the moment when the incorruptible seed is planted in us by the Holy Spirit, from that point the tree of incorruption takes root, develops and matures, swallowing up death in victory, yea, swallowing up corruption with incorruption.
This statement - death is swallowed up - is much too important to be passed over without earnest consideration. The apostle Paul, writing about the resurrection and having said, "This corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality", 1 Cor. 15:53, straightway proceeded to make this revealing observation: Verse 54 "So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory." Death and corruption are swallowed up. They are devoured by life. Corruption is death. Incorruption is life. Can we not hear the prophetic words of Isaiah speaking from the distant centuries? "He will destroy in this mountain (the kingdom mountain; the mount of transfiguration) the face of the covering cast over all people, and the vail that is spread over all nations. He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of His people shall He take away from off all the earth; for the Lord hath spoken it." Isa. 25:7-8

THE INCORRUPTIBLE SEED WHICH IS CHRIST

From the very heart of events from the morning of creation, which shone from the heavenly light which "no man can approach," there conies to us from the lips of the Creator Himself these words of truth: "In the beginning God." Let the modernist, the evolutionist, the atheist and the skeptic proclaim all the abominable theories they wish concerning the genesis of all things, but when they are finished propagating their crude guesses and all their brazen statements of conjecture born of unbelief, we will still be opening our ears of faith to those four great, eternal words, so brief in every tongue, yet so explicit in them all, "In the beginning God". There is no other solution or explanation for the incomparable wonder of things that "are"; "for of Him, and through Him, and to Him, are all things." Rom. 11:36 As Goodspeed has so beautifully stated, "From Him everything comes, through Him everything exists, and in Him everything ends." Rom. 11:36 Goodspeed Take away from the heart of our understanding those four mighty words of inspiration - in the beginning God - and mankind is left to drift without a compass on the merciless seas of unbelief and to wander in dreary wildernesses of purposelessness and futility. How blessed is the word of faith, "By Him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers; all things were created by Him, and for Him; and He is before all things, and by Him all things consist." Col. 1:16-17 Faith will forever shout aloud that truth and heaven itself re-echo the sacred phrase, "in the beginning God." No statement ever made is more basic to truth and understanding than this, and no statement more fundamental to pure faith and godliness. Subtract those four words from our foundation and every faith, every hope, and every spiritual longing turns to the dust of nothingness and the vagaries of uncertainty and unbelief. "Ye are of God, little children," wrote the beloved John, "and have overcome them: because greater is He that is in you, than he that is in the world." 1 John 4:4

Then from the lips of the Creator, the mighty Yahvah Himself, came forth that irresistible command of creation, "let." "Let there be light." Gen. 1:3 "Let" there be a firmament. Verse 6 "Let" the waters be gathered. Verse 9 "Let" there be lights in the firmament. Verse 14 "Let" the waters bring forth. Verse 20 "Let" the earth bring forth. Verse 24 Then, when all the lesser acts of creation were complete and ready for the habitation of man, there came the majestic proclamation, "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth." Verse 26 Amid all the stupendous movings in creation there came at last the creation of man, for whom all these things had been prepared. "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." Gen. 2:7 Thus in the very heart of the miracle of creation we find the Creator breathing into inanimate clay the breath of life, and man become a "living soul." The first man Adam was made a living soul, 1 Cor. 15:45, a "zoe psuche", pronounced as sooka; zoe in that Adam possessed the life of God and psuche showing that he was also possessor of animal or human life and mortality. The great gulf that is forever fixed between man and beast is that, though both possess "psuche", or animal life, man alone was given "zoe" - that is, the life of God. Thus was man made a zoe psuche, or a living soul.

When the Lord breathed upon Adam, the breath he breathed was the spirit of life. That living breath came forth from God and was the life of God. That breath was the Spirit of God, for that is what is here meant by breath. Four thousand years later Jesus Christ, the last Adam, told the story of a marvelous birth to the wondering Nicodemus. John 3:1-12. He said, "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit." Here the Holy Spirit is likened to wind or the breath of God. When God in the beginning breathed on that inanimate clay, it lived - oh marvelous wonder - and it lived the life that came forth from the Father, the zoe psuche. Every work of God in every act of creation is accomplished and done by the moving of His Spirit. "It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." John 6:63. He it is who convicts the sinner of sin and righteousness and judgment. John 16:7-8. He it is who guides the saint into all truth. Verse 13 He it is who moves upon the sinner to bring him to the foot of the cross, and it is that selfsame Spirit of God that brings about an entirely new birth and a new creation within the heart of every repentant sinner.

The first man Adam was given the power to reproduce his own kind in the corruptible realm. He was made a living soul, but the last man Adam, Jesus Christ, was not merely a living soul. He was a life giving Spirit. 1 Cor. 15:45 To Him was given the power to produce after the incorruptible and the eternal. For that reason the beloved Peter gave us the imperishable truth that we are "born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." 1 Pet. 1:23

It may not be deemed wise for man to draw too many parallels between the natural birth and the spiritual birth, yet it remains forever true that "the invisible things of Him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even His eternal power and Godhead." Rom. 1:20 Forgive me if I err, but is it not true that when Adam knew his wife Eve, he planted within her womb a corruptible seed, which brought forth after its kind in the two corruptible persons, Cain and Abel? But is it not also true that, when the blessed Holy Spirit overshadowed the virgin, He placed the eternal Christ seed in her womb that brought forth the incorruptible Christ, the Son of the living God? There are many mysteries about this wonder, this marvel of God, which are far beyond the understanding of this puny mind of mine, and I shall not be so foolish as to try to pry into them or even explain them. Sufficient be it to know that the angel Gabriel, who appeared to Mary, comforted her fretting heart with the sublime words of reassurance, "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that holy thing that shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." Luke 1:35 It was the seed of God that was planted in Mary's womb and therefore no other kind could possibly be brought forth. So it is said, "Therefore that holy thing that shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." Because the seed was the seed of God, the child was the Son of God. It cannot possibly be otherwise. Let every scoffer scoff, but thus it was by an established decree, the unalterable law of God. He alone can make laws that can never be broken. Man may do his best to pervert God's laws, but by man they can never be broken.

The Lord had said to Adam, "In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." And die he did. Before the transgression and before Eve was separated from him, Adam could have brought forth after his kind a glorious, incorruptible man like unto himself, for Adam was the son of God. Luke 1:38 But, when he entered into the transgression, he lost that power and his status was greatly lowered; and from that time he was able to reproduce only after his fallen kind. He could reproduce a man after that "psuche," the natural and soulish, but no longer could he reproduce after that other life, the "zoe," which is the life of God.

Dispensations had come and gone before our Lord Jesus Christ explained to the enquiring Nicodemus, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." John 3:3 The realm of the kingdom of God is the realm from which the first Adam had fallen, and all Adam's kindred were born into the kingdom below it, dead in trespasses and sins, Eph. 2:1, with eyes and mind unable to see eternal realities. Thus have all men been born into man's fallen kingdom and man's fallen estate. If we are ever to reach the realm of the kingdom of God, then that which was lost in Adam must now be regained and made alive in Christ. Man must be reborn. He must be born from above. He must be born again. Then only will he regain that kingdom of life from which he fell.

Is the word of God untrue when it tells the saint of a heavenly citizenship? Was Jesus not true when He told men that the kingdom of God was within them? No! He was not wrong, but spoke forth, immutable words of truth and soberness. Peter taught us that by being born again we are not born of corruptible seed as we were in Adam, but of incorruptible seed by the word of God, Christ our Lord, which liveth and abideth forever. Oh what a marvelous teaching! What a sublime, indisputable fact! What an experience is ours that through godly sorrow and repentance of sins and the cleansing of the precious blood of Christ the incorruptible seed of Christ, the last Adam, is planted in you and me and we are born again of incorruptible seed! Not that we may bring forth in the same manner as did Mary, but that the Christ seed in us may bring forth all that Adam lost in the beginning and much more, that Christ may be fully formed and mature in us after the image of Him who created Him. This process will not cease in the believer until death has been so completely swallowed up in victory that we shall say as Paul that we are no longer the old "I", but Christ, who liveth in us. Paul, having seen the truth of this unspeakable wonder, uttered this mystery that no man can understand but by the Spirit of God. Therefore let us not fail to ask the Spirit to teach us the hidden depths of its meaning. He said, "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." Gal. 2:20 Not I, but Christ! The miracle of the new birth has brought such transformation that what may now be seen is not the former man in the image of Adam, but through the miracle of the new birth he has matured in the image of Christ. When the regeneration is complete, it will be not I, but Christ. Incredible, you say? Yes, so it would seem to every natural mind; but it is not incredible nor is it impossible. It is living truth from the living heart of the Eternal. Unbelievable, shall we say? Yes! To the natural mind it is, but to the faith of Christ it is not unbelievable, but an experienced truth now working in all who believe.

Through the dreary years of every century since Christ was raised from the dead, the blessed Holy Spirit has been planting within the heart of believing men and women the incorruptible Christ seed and, wonder of wonders, yet true to God's eternal purpose, that incorruptible seed has been bringing forth after its kind. It cannot be any other way, dear friend. Kind must bring forth after its kind. This is an irreversible law. This is the law of the Lord.

The only person who can enter the kingdom of God is the person who has been born twice. That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and flesh and blood cannot enter the kingdom. 1 Cor. 15:50 But now that which is born of the Holy Spirit is spirit. The spirit of man dead in trespasses and sins is reborn into a spiritual kingdom, the kingdom from which it fell in the transgression long ago. We are born again. This supreme miracle, concealed in the heart of God, was reserved to be revealed in the latter days. Eph. 3:5 Men were not born again until Jesus rose from the dead and sent the Holy Spirit into the world, John 7:39, but after the resurrection and Pentecost the Spirit was not merely with or among men. The Spirit of life came to dwell within them.

The implication of such a marvelous event as the new birth is staggering to the imagination, and it is small wonder that Peter said that even the angels desire to look into it. But the implication it holds, not only for those who receive Him now, but for the entire creation in the ages to come, is beyond comprehension or even imagination. Jesus Christ, the lonely man of Galilee, God's first manifested Son, who challenged death, restored the maimed, healed the sick, raised the dead, cast out devils and had power over elements and men, was but one man in the image of God, but what glory will it be when the whole vast family of sons is manifested and arises to do the works that Jesus did and still greater works than He because He went to the Father to send the Spirit that the holy Christ seed might be planted in every believing heart? Even the thought of such glory and honor brings us deep and incredible awe. Such things are too high for the natural mind to receive. It leaves us dumbfounded, staggering in awe, contemplation and wonder. It is far too great a prospect for even the most spiritual of men, but by faith we see it and believe. The blessed, eternal implications of such a rebirth as that which Christ taught to Nicodemus are beyond anything we can ask or think or imagine. Surely these are the unspeakable things unlawful for a man to utter.

It was of this realm beyond the natural that Peter spoke when he said we are born of incorruptible seed. But someone will surely ask, "If we are born of incorruptible seed, what then is the need of our seeking glory, honor, immortality, eternal life? Why has the word of God given so many instructions to teach us how to live, such as these?" "Let us lay aside every weight, and the sin that doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith." Heb. 12:1-2 Or, "why does it say, 'Add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity.'" 2 Pet. 1:5-7 The answer is that by these means the seed of incorruption is cultivated. Those who know aught about farming or gardening will surely know that, though the seed they plant may be excellent and good, it will fail to bring forth much fruit if it is left to lie desolate and unattended to choke among the noxious weeds. In the revealing parable of the sower and the seed, Mark 4:1-12, we read of a sower who sowed the good seed of the word everywhere. Verse 14 Unfortunately some fell on the hard surface of the road and was carried off by the fowls of the air. Some fell among stones and, because there was no depth of earth and nothing to sustain it, it withered and died. Other seeds fell among thorns and the thorns sprang up and choked it, so that it became unfruitful. And other seed fell on good ground and brought forth some thirty fold, some sixty and some one hundred fold. But, if that otherwise good ground had been left lying full of weeds and stones, the good seed would have been choked out and consequently would have been unfruitful. Verse 19 There was nothing wrong with the seed the man sowed. It was the word of God. The problem lay entirely with the ground in which it was sowed. Let us go one step farther than this and say that the biggest problem was not so much in the ground as in the way the ground was prepared for the seed and then maintained afterward. The stones were left in the ground; the weeds were not destroyed; the watering was not done; and all this neglect contributed to the seed's withering, dying out and bringing forth nothing to perfection.

The good seed, we are told, is the word of God. It is very good seed, for it is the germ of spiritual life. It is the incorruptible seed. When the word instructs us to lay aside every weight and the sin which does so easily beset us, and to run with patience the race that is set before us, Heb. 12:1, it is telling how we must cultivate and keep the earth which we are that the incorruptible seed may vigorously grow to maturity and not wither away to unfruitfulness through our gross neglect. We have surely read these instructions: "Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and evil speaking, be put away from you with all malice: And be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you." Eph. 4:31-32 Could we imagine that even the seed of incorruption could possibly come to perfection and maturity in the life of a man who is bitter, wrathful, angry, clamorous, and evil speaking? Or would you say it will mature better in the person who is kind, tenderhearted, forgiving and full of the love and Spirit of God? I need not tell you, for you already know.

We have certainly read these words of inspiration: "Mortify therefore your members which are upon the earth; fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry: for which things' sake the wrath of God cometh on the children of disobedience: in which ye also walked some time, when ye lived in them. But now (that is, since you have been born again), ye also put off all these: anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth. Lie not one to another, seeing ye have put off the old man (the old Adamic man and nature) with his deeds; and have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of Him that created him." Col. 3:5-10 We ask again in which garden would the seed of incorruption grow the better - in the man who indulges in angry outbursts, manifests wrath, bears malice and envy, uses obscene and blasphemous language, indulges in filthy communication with smutty yarns and dirty talk in his mouth, and who thinks nothing of prevarication, lying and other deception, or do you think the incorruptible seed would mature better in the man who, having first believed, has put off the old man and the old nature with his corrupt deeds and has thoroughly put on the new man, which is Christ, who is in the image of Him who created us all? I need no answer, for you, my brother or sister, already have the answer in yourselves.

"This I say then, Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfill the lust of the flesh." Gal. 5:16 It is indeed the incorruptible seed that brings forth incorruption in the end, but the teachings concerning these carnal attitudes of which we have been reading are divine instructions as to how we are to tend this garden of God that the incorruptible seed will not be choked out by the weeds of corruption, the stones of sin, or be carried away by those evil fowls of unbelief that have their roost in the Babylon system ready like vultures to carry away the seed of the word of God lest it find root and flourish. The world today is full of unbelievers and scoffers who carry away the seed of the word of God lest it spring up into life aionian.

Should any man say I am preaching works and not grace, let me remind him that these quotations are largely from the writings of the apostle Paul, who above all others was especially called of God to introduce the fullness of the gospel of grace. He it was who said of himself, "If ye have heard of the dispensation of the grace of God which is given me to you-ward: how that by revelation He made known unto me the mystery (as I wrote afore in few words...)." Eph. 3:2-3 Never allow yourself to be deceived into loose and corrupt living by hiding like a coward behind the word grace. Hear what grace teaches. "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared unto all men, teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world." Titus 2:11-12 It is the grace of God that brings salvation, and salvation implies that we are saved from sin. Whatever, therefore, any man may say, the truth remains that, if you have not been delivered from sin, then you have partaken neither of the grace of God nor of the salvation which true grace implies and brings. We cannot gather grapes of thorns nor figs of thistles. Matt. 7:16 Long ago the great Isaiah wrote, "Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree: and it shall be to the Lord for a name, for an everlasting sign that shall not be cut off." Isa. 55:13

Let it be thoroughly known and understood by every man and woman who names the name of Christ that, "if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature. Old things have passed away, and, behold, all things have become new." We are new creatures because we are new creations. It stands, therefore, that, if any man claims to have believed on Christ and he is not an entirely new man in all manner of life and godliness, and if he does not show the signs of genuine conversion in all he is and does, then that man has never repented of his sin nor partaken of the true grace of God. If he had, Christ would have delivered him from his sin, for the blood of Jesus Christ, His Son, cleanses from all sin. 1 John 1:7 That is a far greater statement than it at first sounds. The English word all means: 1, the entire substance or extent of; 2, the entire substance of without exception; 3, the greatest possible; 4, any whatever; 5, every manner, sort or kind. Thus we see that the little word all is a very all inclusive, all embracing word. We must never walk up to God and tell him that the blood of His Son cannot cleanse us from all our sin. I have heard people say, "I can't quit smoking." Well, the Lord did not ask you to quit. He said the blood of Jesus would cleanse you from it, and I know for certain that the only reason you have not been cleansed from this filthy, defiling habit is because you do not want to be cleansed. In your heart you secretly hide this defiling evil that is killing people with cancers and many other diseases by the hundreds of thousands and will eventually kill you, too. Yield it up to the cleansing blood. Do not hide it secretly as Achan hid the garment of Babylon in his tent. Bring it forth for the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Spirit. I get sick and tired of hearing people talk about sonship with a cigarette in their hand, especially when the word of God has plainly told us to "put away all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness and receive with meekness the engrafted word (Christ), which is able to save your souls". Jas. 1:21 Let go of the world, carnality, greed, lusts and sin and bring them to the precious fountain of blood.

It gives me no joy to find it necessary to say these things, but to my utter grief I find that there are many thousands of people today who are drifting along on a false premise, a false faith and a ship full of holes. The shabbiness and shallowness of modern day conversions - "just a card signed or handshake" without godly sorrow or repentance - has brought to our door all manner of ill-formed spiritual births. It is happening in the spirit as it is happening in the flesh. Many mothers are bringing forth ill-formed children with irreparable physical defects from their birth because they insist on defiling the temple of God with smoke, liquor, drugs and all manner of abuse. The same is true in the spiritual realm, for many once "begotten of God" have failed to keep their garden. The good seed is the word of God, the living Christ, who liveth and abideth forever, but if the lusts of the flesh and the desires of the carnal mind, then it will not come to true spiritual birth. We live in a horrible hour when every hoddy doddy, Tom Noddy thinks he has a right to say he is born again.

For many years I wondered why it was that John said, "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him: and he cannot sin, because he is born of God." 1 John 3:9 Then in John 5:18 he says, "He that is begotten of God keepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not." So I asked the Lord regarding this and I saw immediately that there is a difference between that which is begotten and that which is born. That which is born of man was begotten nine months before it was born, and, if the mother did not keep herself during that nine months of gestation, the child might be sickly or weak, or it might perish and die even before it is born. The period of gestation is perhaps the most important time in the child's life.

All these things have their parallel in the spirit, teaching the same thing in the spirit as they do in the natural. "The invisible things of Him from the foundation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even His eternal power and Godhead, so that we are without excuse." If a man, therefore, who professes to believe on Christ, possesses only a head knowledge and a faith not born of God, he will not be transformed; or should his salvation at first seem bright, as was the seed sown among stones, having no root, it will wither away in the gestation period. And if, after having believed, he allows the thorns of carnality and corruption to prevail in the field of his experience, they will choke out the word (Christ) and it will become unfruitful. The cultivation of our spiritual lives as guided by the word of God is an extremely necessary thing. Without this keeping of ourselves and watching unto prayer, the receiving and applying of the living word to our heart, the putting on of Christ and the putting off of corruption, we will discover at last that the precious seed of incorruption which was sown at first has departed from us and is bringing no fruit unto perfection or life everlasting. We have often wondered why it was that so many converts, having begun well, afterward returned to the weak and beggarly elements to which they desire to remain in bondage. Before long these people have nothing of God - not even an empty profession - but it has happened to them according to the true proverb, "The dog is returned to his own vomit again; and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire." 2 Pet. 2:22.

Lest my own weakness and humanity should stand in the way to hinder understanding or stand in the path of any, I say the truth that all I want is to bring the power of the everlasting word of God to bear upon all our lives that we may be able without let or hindrance and with all diligence to seek for glory, honor, immortality, eternal life. Let the word of God be a fountain of cleansing in your life that we may be one and all conformed to the image of Christ. Let us be cleansed by the washing of water by the word, and the word quickened by the renewing of the Holy Spirit.

Above we spoke of the word all. How far reaching it is in its meaning! Let us now consider such words and phrases as if, diligence, drawing near, looking to yourselves, watching, the washing of the word, enduring and standing. Please read this with diligence and prayer that the Holy Spirit may apply their truth as a cleansing fuller's soap to purify us all and wash us clean from the abominable corruption and lukewarmness of this dreadful Laodicean age.

Long ago in Old Testament times the Lord said to Israel, "If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat of the good of the land; but if ye refuse and rebel, ye shall be devoured with the sword: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." Isa. 1:19-20 Then Peter, after exhorting the saints to add to their faith virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and charity, said this: "For if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fail: for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." 2 Pet. 1:8-11 Twice in these verses Peter warns us all that, though these promises are ours, they will be fulfilled only if these things be in us and if we do them. There is no room here for slackness or weakness or any kind of shoddy carelessness in our lives. These mighty promises of an abundant entrance into the kingdom of our Lord are entirely dependent on the if's, and if we lack these virtues of which He speaks, we are blind and cannot see afar of.

Paul has added this tremendous statement, which, as you will notice, definitely concerns the realm of which we have been speaking, the realms of corruption and incorruption. He warns us and exhorts us in these words: "For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live." Rom. 8:13 The person who lives for the five senses of the physical body - for taste, feeling, seeing, hearing and smelling - is living very much in the animal realm. All these senses are the elements of the universe. They are first principles just as the alphabet is elemental to reading. My book, Two Realms, Volume 25 of Treasures of Truth, will take any seeker into the secrets of the realm of the flesh. Many people talk about the flesh, but few, very very few, either know what it is or care to identify it. Again Paul says, "For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live." Gal. 1:10 The church is full of men and women pleasers. Never was there a day when the saying, "Like priest, like people," was more true than today. Yet again Paul says, "If I build again the things which I destroyed, I make myself a transgressor." Gal. 2:18 And yet again he wrote, "Let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." Gal. 6:9 Again to the Romans he wrote, "If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live." Rom. 8:13

I suppose there are many other such exhortations in the Bible, but these will serve to show us that so much depends on the ifs and if nots we do or do not these important things that serve so definitely to cultivate the earth, which we ourselves are and into which the good seed of incorruption has been cast. "0 earth, earth,
CHAPTER FIVE
THE PREPARATION OF THE SONS OF GOD

The manifestation of the sons of God is the hope of all creation. Our sonship was purposed in the heart of the Father in heaven long before the earth began or ever man was placed upon it. When our Father in heaven first proclaimed, "Let us make man in our image and after our likeness", His intention was to bring man into the image of Himself that the man He would make would be in every respect a true son of God. Oh how great the prospect was and how marvelous the plan! It was not sufficient that the Father should have one begotten Son in His image, but it was His intention that His beloved and only begotten Son should be the firstborn of many thousands of younger sons, who would be begotten by the miracle of the new birth, or, as Weymouth has so well said, that Jesus might be the oldest, the firstborn, in a vast family of sons to be born in ages to come. Again Paul wrote in Hebrews, "It became Him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons to glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through suffering." Our Lord Jesus Christ is the captain, the firstborn, and we the younger sons of the Christ body.

Such high and mighty purpose is certainly beyond the comprehension of the natural man or the natural mind. The truth and fullness of the wonder of it all only begins to seep into our reborn spirits when the Spirit of revelation gives us a peep behind the scenes into the glorious and wonderful fullness of the heavenly scheme. Such a revelation into the hidden glories was given when our Elder Brother was baptized and the almighty voice from on high proclaimed the words of adoption, "This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Man was later honored by a second visit into the celestial secrets when three of our younger brothers climbed the exceeding high mountain with their firstborn brother and saw face to face what both He and His brother sons of God would become in the wonderful kingdom age, which in our day is at our very doors.

They saw Him not as the lonely man of Galilee, despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. If they hid their faces from Him on that transfiguration day, it was not because He was without form or comeliness, with no beauty that they should desire Him. It was because His face did shine as the sun and His garment was white as the light. Before honor there must be humility, and that is why our wonderful Christ took the seven steps down that Paul described in Phil. 2:5-11. "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God; but made Himself of no reputation, and took upon Him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men: and being found in fashion as a man, He humbled Himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." By these seven steps of humility He descended to the realm of the lowest sinner to make His grave with the wicked. If there is no cross, there is no crown. Therefore, after His utmost humility, even the death of the cross, it is written: "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a name which is above every name: that at (or in) the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven and things in earth, and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father.

As the transfiguration was a preview of the kingdom when Christ with His entire body of sons will appear in honor and glory, it was right that the three disciples should see Him clothed in glory with face that outshone the sun and garments that were actually light itself, even the light which the Father is. But, wonderful as this is, it still was not the completeness of Christ as He will appear in His kingdom, as we shall presently see.

For the past two thousand years the elect sons of God have been passing through their time of humiliation. Their faces have been marred by their tribulation, so much so that we would have cause to wonder if they were sons of God at all. The elect have always been led to walk in burning wildernesses and among dreadful thorns, but, passing through their valley of death, they have felt no evil, for God has been with them. His rod and His staff have been their one comfort. In their affliction He has prepared a table before them in the presence of their enemies. He has anointed their heads with oil, the oil which is the Holy Spirit, the anointing of sonship, kingship and rulership.
Our beloved elder Brother has been a father to the fatherless, a husband to the widow, a strength to the weary servant and a comforter to the martyr, who, like Jesus our Lord, gave his life and his all for the God he loved and for whom he willingly died. Greater love hath no man than this, that a man should lay down his life for his friends, but the love of God is displayed in that, while we were yet enemies, Christ, our brother, died for us. Oh how I love Him! And now I shall affirm that greater love can no man show than that he should lay down his own life in the service of Christ who died for us and for the Father who so loved the world that He went to the extent of giving His only Son for us.

The virtuous man, though he die before his time, shall rest.

Length of days is not what makes age honorable,
not number of years the true measure of life;
understanding, this is man's grey hairs, untarnished life, this is ripe old age.
He has sought to please God, so God has loved him;
as he was living among sinners, he has been taken up.
He has been carried off so that evil may not warp his understanding or treachery seduce his soul;
for the fascination of evil throws good things in the shade, and the whirlwind of desire corrupts a simple heart.
Coming to perfection in so short a while, he achieved long life;
his soul being pleasing to the Lord,
He has taken him quickly from the wickedness around him.
Yet people look on, uncomprehending;
it does not enter their heads that grace and mercy await the chosen of the Lord, and protection His holy ones.
The virtuous man who dies condemns the godless who survive, and youth's untimely end the protracted age of the wicked.
These people see the wise man's ending without understanding what the Lord has in store for him or why He has taken him to safety;
they look on and sneer,
but the Lord will laugh at them.
Soon they will be corpses without honor, objects of scorn among the dead forever.
The Lord will dash them down headlong, dumb.
He will tear them from their foundations,
they will be utterly laid waste, anguish will be theirs, and their memory shall perish.
They will come trembling to the reckoning of their sins, and their crimes, confronting them, will accuse them.
Then the virtuous man stands up boldly to face those who have oppressed him, those who thought so little of his sufferings.
And they, at the sight of him, will shake with coward's fear, amazed he should be saved so unexpectedly.
Stricken with remorse, each will say to the other,
say with a groan and in distress of spirit:
"This is the man we used to laugh at once, a butt for our sarcasm, fools that we were!" His life we regarded as madness, his ending as without honor.
How has he come to be counted as one of the sons of God?
How does he come to be assigned a place among the saints'?
Clearly we have strayed from the way of truth;
the light of justice has not shone for us,
the sun never rose on us.
We have left no path of lawlessness or ruin unexplored,
we have crossed deserts where there was no track, but the way of the Lord is one we have never known.
Arrogance, what advantage has this brought us?
Wealth and boasting, what have these conferred on us?
All those things have passed like a shadow passed like a fleeting rumor.
Like a ship that cuts through heaving waves — leaving no trace to show where it has passed, no wake from its keel in the waves.
Or like a bird flying through the air — leaving no proof of its passing;
it whips the light air with the stroke of its pinion, tears it apart in its whirring rush, drives its way onward with sweeping wing, and afterwards no sign is seen of its passage.
Or like an arrow shot at a mark, the pierced air closing so quickly on itself,
there is no knowing which way the arrow has passed.
So with us: scarcely born we have ceased to be;
of virtue have we not a trace to show;
we have spent ourselves on wickedness instead.
But the virtuous live for ever,
their recompense lies with the Lord,
the Most High takes care of them.
So they shall receive the royal crown of splendor,
the diadem of beauty from the hand of the Lord;
for He will shelter them with His right hand and shield them with His arm;"
(Wisdom of Solomon).

The cross that He gave may be heavy,
But it ne'er outweighs His grace;
The storms that I feared may surround me,
But they ne'er exclude His face.

Our blessed elder Brother once sent a message to the suffering saints of Smyrna, saying, "I know thy works, and tribulation, and poverty, (but thou art rich) and I know the blasphemy of them that say they are Jews, and are not, but are of the synagogue of Satan. Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer: behold, the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried: and ye shall have tribulation ten days: be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." Rev. 2:9-10 Never think it strange, dear saint, concerning the things that you must suffer or "concerning the fiery trial that is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you: but rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when His glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy." 1 Pet. 4:12-13 Please notice the mention of glory in verse 13, and again in verse 14 "If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye; for the spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you: on their part He is evil spoken of, but on your part He is glorified."

There need be no question in the mind of any saint who would seek for glory and honor that the way to such glory and honor lies directly across the path of suffering - suffering in whatsoever form it may come. Let us not be so stupid as to imagine that the glory and honor given to Christ at His transfiguration came without the trial of faith through the fires of suffering, and let us not be so childish as to imagine it can possibly come to us without trial, without tribulation, without testing, but by lying on beds of ease and prosperity without proving and without fire. It just does not happen. It cannot be. The path of the just may certainly be as a shining light that leads to the full light of day - it is, and that light is Christ - but be advised of this; it leads through the slough of despond, past the city of destruction, up the mountain of difficulty, over the sea of tribulation, through the den of lions, through fires of temptation, often stumbling in the valley of doubt and fear, to leave us sometimes wondering why we ever started on the journey at all. But the light, praise God, though it always leads through the valley of the shadow of death, will at last lead us, not only to the light, but it will make us one with the light.

The light of His love shineth brighter
As it leads through paths of woe;
The toil of my work groweth lighter
As I stoop to raise the low.

I suppose in all the world there is never a mountain but there is a valley, perhaps both before it and after it. These valleys were made to be descended and these mountains were made to climb. In times of great test and trial, saint of God, always remember the words of the disciples of Jesus. After the "many" of His disciples had left to walk no more with Him because of the truth He spoke, our Lord said to the twelve that remained, "Will ye also go away?" And they replied, "Lord, to whom shall we go Thou hast the words of eternal life." Ah, how true that is! "Thou hast the words of eternal life."

For the second time in our lives my wife and I had suffered the sadness of being betrayed and excommunicated by brethren we had long loved and trusted. It was October 1st, 1960, while we were driving between Duluth and Milwaukee, deeply feeling the sorrow of the things that had happened, that the Lord spoke these beautiful words of love and comfort into my wife's heart. They proved a blessing to us and I quote them here in the hope they will be a strength to you also.

Help me, dear Lord, my cross to bear,
Of pride, and sin, and self beware.
Help me, dear Lord, Thy death to share.
Help me, 0 Lord, I pray!

Help me, dear Lord, to hear Thy voice;
Make of Thy will and way my choice
And in Thy truth and life rejoice,
Help me, 0 Lord, I pray!

Help me, dear Lord, to know Thy will,
Walk in the way of truth until
I stand transformed in Thy holy hill.
Help me, 0 Lord, I pray!

Help me, dear Lord, Thy plan to see;
Ever at one with Thy purpose be,
Partaking each day and hour of Thee.
Help me, 0 Lord, I pray!

Give me this day my daily bread
That I may live, as Thou hast said, Risen with Thee from out the dead.
Help me, 0 Lord, I pray!

Rhoda I. Hawtin.

My heart greatly rejoices today in the knowledge that no one will ever attain the glory and honor of adoption until he has walked with Christ through the temptations, the disapproval, the rejections, the Gethsemanes, the judgment halls to the cross itself, where he can tell his own heart, "I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me and gave Himself for me."

Let your heart consider what I now say. "They that are with Him are called, and chosen, and faithful. Rev. 17:14 It is not enough that we were predestined. Not enough that we were called. Nor is it sufficient that we were chosen. There is one virtue above all others that is of absolute necessity. We must be counted faithful and that by the Lord God Himself, the judge of all. Are you chosen? Were you chosen in Him before the foundation of the world? Oh how wonderful that is! Then, because He chose you, never choose your own way in anything. Choose His way. Let your whole life be led by the light of Him who said, "He that followeth Me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." I think it was the poet and song writer, Herbert Buffum, who penned these beautiful words to the blessed ones who are chosen of Him to sonship.

"Why can't I be like other people, Lord," so oft I cry.
"I see the careless multitude go laughing, passing by.
"Why must I bear this burden, till it seems that I must die?"
"Then the answer comes, "Have I not chosen you?"

"Why can't I rest without this fearful tugging at my heart? Why must I always feel the pain of other sufferers smart? Why is it that where'er I go the load will not depart?"
"Then the answer comes, "Have I not chosen you?"

I cried, "0 Lord, why am I made a laughing stock to foes? Why can't I lightly turn aside from other people's woes? Why is it that from year to year I bear the worldly blows?" Then the answer comes, "Have I not chosen you?"

And someday when I'm crowned within that home beyond the sky, I'll ask, "Why am I honored thus?" while endless ages fly. He'll smile and answer sweetly with the love light in His eye, "My child, it is because I've chosen you."

"Have I not chosen you? Have I not chosen you?"
0 bless His name for ever, He'll surely see us through. I'll walk with Him by faith until His face I view, Because I hear Him whisper, "Have I not chosen you?"

How wonderful the path of the chosen really is! How blessed beyond belief to know that He walks by our side from morning till evening and, though we see Him not, yet believing, we rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory. And someday, when sinks the golden sun beneath the rosy-tinted west, our blessed Lord will say, "Well done", and we shall enter into rest.

CHAPTER SIX
ONE LIKE THE SON OF MAN

Perhaps we, like Peter, would love to build a tabernacle to Christ and bask for the ages in the glory and honor and the marvels of the mount of transfiguration, but, dearly beloved brethren, even this manifestation of glory and honor is not the end. Our elder Brother, who on that blessed day received the glory of transfiguration and the honor bestowed upon Him by His Father's announcement, "This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased", knew that there was yet a greater glory to follow. That glory would come on a wonderful day two thousand years in the future when the glory and honor given to Him at His transfiguration would be experienced, not by Him alone, but by His whole body of elect and chosen sons, who by patient continuance in well doing and through identification with Him in His cross would be manifested together with Him. He, together with His many brethren, will receive the glory of transfiguration and the honor of sonship. Oh what a triumphant day!
Except for the revelation of the New Jerusalem, Rev. 21:9-27, the bride of Christ, no more wonderful vision was ever given than that seen by John when he on the Lord’s day beheld the heavenly glories that await the sons of God in that blessed hour of triumph, described so vividly in Rev. 1:9-18. Before we continue with this thought, I would like to point out one or two outstanding things which show clearly the infinite relationship between Christ, the firstborn Son, the first manifested Son, and that other glorious company of sons who come into His image and likeness and are the members of His body.

John, the beloved disciple, had been with Jesus in the mount of transfiguration. He had seen the surpassing wonder of things, which were to come. Like the others he, too, had fallen down afraid, dumbfounded by the glory that was manifest, as he saw the face of Christ shining as the sun and heard the voice of God from glory saying, "This is My beloved Son." Sixty or sixty-five years had gone by since that wonder-filled day and now for the word of God and the testimony of Jesus Christ this same John was exiled on the lonely island of Patmos. I do not think there was any place on earth that was lonely for John. He knew far too well how to fellowship with Christ in the Spirit to ever feel lonely, for the further he was from the earth the nearer he was to Him, and that is what he loved. Well John knew the Son of God and the sound of His voice was indelible in his ear. He had heard Him preach the Sermon on the Mount, had watched His gentle hand calm the fevered brow, raise the dead, and cast out the demons with His word. His wondering eyes had beheld Him on the mount of transfiguration; he had talked with Him after the resurrection; he had watched with awe as He rose from the earth and ascended into heaven. Yet he was not prepared for the excellent glory of the revelation that awaited him that distant day on Patmos, for the glory he was then to see was unlike any he had ever beheld before. In times past he had seen Jesus Christ, the only begotten Son of God, the first born from the dead, the manifested Son, the Son of Mary, the Son of the living God, but now he was to see the Christ in all His glorious completeness, Jesus Christ the Head with all that vast family of sons, every one in His exact image and likeness. The mercy drops of God were falling upon him that day as the glory of the Lord encompassed him as a cloud and from out the glory he heard a voice speaking. How well he knew that beloved voice, for oft its accents had fallen on his willing ear; and yet it was completely different, for he had known the voice of the lonely Galilean, Jesus Christ, the Head of the sons, but now that voice, though unmistakable, was not altogether identical. Now instead of one voice it thundered forth as the sound of many waters, many people, many sons; yet as many waters lose their identity in one ocean, so the voices of these many manifested sons lose their identity in the glory of Himself, that in all things He might have the preeminence.

It was natural that John should turn around to look for the one who spoke, and looking he saw Christ, the Son of the living God; but was it He? Was it the Christ of long ago? John declared it was "one like the Son of man". Very, very like Him. The exact image of Him. There He stood at the end of the age in all His completeness as if to say, "Here am I and the children which God has given Me," Heb. 2:13, Christ, the first Son, and all the younger sons, now perfected in His image, standing with Him, and in Him one glorious and perfect bridegroom. His head and His hair were white like wool, as white as snow, His eyes were as a flame of fire, and His feet, His glorious feet, like brass as if they burned in a furnace; and His voice was as the sound of many waters. Out of His mouth went a sharp two-edged sword and His countenance was as the sun shining in his strength. And when John saw Him, he fell at His feet as dead. Oh, the glory of the message that came forth from the lips of Christ as He took John by the hand to raise Him up! "Fear not. I am the first and the last," John had seen Him before and had known Him as the first, but never had he seen the resplendent end of the matter, Christ as He is at last. There before him stood the One who was dead and was now alive forevermore, the One with the keys of both death and hell. When the blessed Christ rose from the dead two thousand years ago, He led forth from hell a host of captives, but now at the end of the time He stands, holding the keys that unlock the gates of both hell and death. No wonder He once said, "On this rock I build My church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." The gates of hell cannot prevail against Him who holds the keys.

Marvelous are the promises of God made to those members of the body of Christ, which are the feet. Indeed, it is positively true and abundantly evident that the final crushing blow that will destroy everything belonging to the kingdom of Satan will be accomplished by the feet members of the body of Christ, the sons of God who will be manifested at the end of the age.
It was in the sad evening of the same day that man fell that first promise to the feet members of Christ was made. God had come to the garden to talk to the children He loved only to find them hiding from Him among the trees He had made. They had sewn fig leaves together to hide their nakedness, for the glory of God that had covered them at the first was gone and they were desperately afraid. And God said, "Who told thee that thou wast naked? Hast thou eaten of the tree whereof I commanded thee that thou shouldst not eat? And the man said, The woman whom thou gavest to be with me gave me of the tree and I did eat. And the Lord said unto the woman, What hast thou done? And the woman said, The serpent beguiled me and I did eat. And the Lord said unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life; and I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed. It shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise His heel." Gen. 3:11-15 Here the first promise of the coming of Christ, the seed of the woman, is made, but it is a promise, not only of the coming of Christ, who is the head, but also of the coming of those sons in His image and in His likeness who are the members of His body, of His flesh, and of His bones, that complete Christ whom John saw and described as "one like the Son of man", Rev. 1:13, whose feet were like fine brass (for judgment) as if they had burned in a furnace. These are not idle words. They are words of transcending truth and revelation. The promise to Eve was that the seed of the woman should finally and irrevocably crush the head of the serpent under His heel, or under His feet. We can find greater confirmation of this elsewhere. In Heb. 2:8 Paul said, "Thou hast put all things in subjection under His feet." Paul must be referring to the same thing when he said in Rom. 16:20, "And the God of peace shall bruise Satan under your feet shortly." David also, speaking by the Spirit, said, "Thou hast put all things under His feet." It is always a fatal mistake for any man, regardless of who he is, to imagine that the revelation he has is complete. That mistake will lead him into endless difficulty and make him bigoted in his ideas and so establish his ways that God can never give him any greater light. We should always remember that the revelation of the Lord is as the path of the just that shineth more and more until the day is full. Revelation grows from the frail, flickering light of dawn to the glory and fullness of the noonday sun. Oh so often people send me books and tracts on moldy old subjects that had their day several hundred years ago. They are still striving to prove things that need no proof. They are strumming harps that have no strings. They are like the Jews, hanging on to the law of Moses after the Holy Ghost was outpoured and Paul had come with his marvelous gospel of the grace of God. But even while I write, the shadows are lengthening on the day of the gospel of grace. The day of Paul's gospel is drawing to a rapid close and the glorious new day of the kingdom is at hand. Let us not try to revive the age of grace with its flickering lights, its spiritual gifts, and all its imperfections, but let us follow the increasing light into the perfect day where everything in part is done away. If you want to stay there, my brother, by all means stay, but don't ask me to stay with you, for the Holy Spirit is urging me within to stand with His feet on Mt. Zion and proclaim the glorious kingdom of eternal peace. Farewell to the age of imperfections. Farewell to things that are in part. Farewell to seeing through a glass darkly and good morning to that which is perfect; good morning to that which is complete; good morning to seeing face to face.

When God revealed to Adam and Eve that the seed of the woman would bruise the serpent's head, I'm sure they saw the truth only in embryo form. They saw the woman as Eve and the seed as Seth. Would we dare say they were wrong in so seeing the revelation? No! A thousand times no! They were perfectly right in what they saw, but they saw very little. They could not look through the vista of the years and see through the line of their sons that the Christ of God in all His sinless purity would be born of a virgin mother, begotten of God, the seed of the Holy Ghost; and Joseph and Mary, rejoicing in the birth of the Christ-child, the only begotten Son of God, could not look down the corridors of the years to the culmination of the age of grace and see that the seed which fell into the ground and died had brought forth a whole harvest of begotten sons in His own image and in His exact likeness. They could not hear the words of revelation flowing from the anointed lips of Paul as he proclaimed, "Whom He did foreknow He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the firstborn among many brethren." Rom. 8:29. Or as Weymouth translates it, "that He might be the eldest in a vast family of brothers."

In my spirit I hear the weeping voice of Jeremiah come ringing down the centuries, saying to us at the end of this age, "The precious sons of Zion, comparable to fine gold, how are they esteemed as earthen pitchers, the work of the hands of the potter." Lam. 4:2. But the full glory of the revelation was left for John to see, and, when he saw it, he fell down as dead at the feet of that seed of the woman, that glorious Christ, that complete Christ, the head, the body, the hands and the feet — the seed of the woman that was promised to Eve long ago now ready to fulfill all that was promised in destroying forever from the face of the universe every work of the serpent. It was left for the beloved John to witness the final phase of the complete birth of that Son who is to rule the nations with a rod of iron. Thus in Rev. 12 we read that he saw a spiritual virgin bringing forth a man child — not a male child, as some say, but a wonder never before known, a child that is a fully developed man at birth. Even Jesus grew in wisdom and stature and favor with God and man because He was born of a human mother though He was the Son of God. But this child is born of a spiritual woman and so is born a man child. This is the Son who is to rule all nations with a rod of iron. This is the final company of the sons of God,' the feet members of the body of Christ, who are to rule all nations with a rod of iron and finally put their heel on Satan's head to destroy his power.

For many years it has been clear to me that the valley of dry bones in Ezekiel 31 is a picture of the body of Christ as it has been for centuries — dry, scattered, sinewless, fleshless and breathless. Ezekiel could not tell whether it was possible for it to live. But, when the prophesying began, there came a tremendous shaking and strange things began to happen. Bone came to bone; sinews and skin and flesh began to appear; but the final glorious conclusion came when the Lord commanded Ezekiel to prophesy to the wind, which means the Spirit.
When he prophesied, wonderful things happened. Breath came into that dead carcass and, most wonderful of all, it stood upon its feet, an exceeding great army.

The days of the preparation of the bridegroom are almost complete. The feet are coming forth from the womb of the virgin. Then the preparation of the sons of God will be accomplished. The feet are ready for the washing that they might be cleansed from the last particles of the dust of the earth and have their part in Him. "What I do thou knowest not now," Jesus said to Peter, "but thou shalt know hereafter." Hallelujah! The glory of the truth is left for us, the feet, to know and I know for a surety that Christ is cleansing His feet from every trace of the world and its systems.

The story of the final coming forth of the sons of God is revealed in the twelfth chapter of Revelation in these words: "And there appeared a great wonder in heaven; a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars; and she being with child cried, travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered. And there appeared another wonder in heaven; and, behold, a great red dragon, having seven heads and ten horns, and seven crowns upon his heads. And his tail drew the third part of the stars of heaven, and did cast them to the earth: and the dragon stood before the woman which was ready to be delivered, for to devour her child as soon as it was born. And she brought forth a man child, who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron: and her child was caught up upon God, and to His throne. And the woman fled into the wilderness, where she hath a place prepared of God, that they (the sons of God) should feed her there a thousand two hundred and threescore days." Rev. 12:1-6.

We are in the closing hours of the dispensation of grace. The certain hope of the kingdom of God lies before us. Beasts and all cattle, creeping things and flying fowl, together with every living thing that moves, draw near to the moment of triumph. The whole creation, that has groaned in travail and pain throughout the night of every dispensation, is soon to hear the joyous song of the kingdom morning, where justice and equity will spread like a mantle over the tired world, for the knowledge of the Lord will fill the earth as the waters fill the seas.

Almost two millenniums ago God manifested His first Son, the Lord Jesus Christ. He is the firstborn and the head of all the sons of God prepared of God throughout the ages, and, when all those sons are complete, they will form one body, a sonship body in the exact image and likeness of that first Son, who is Himself the image of the Father.

There are many things to learn from types and antitypes, for by them truth is taught with more force than any spoken word. In the plan of God two distinct systems were to rule in power over the entire earth. The first was Babylon, the image of which was portrayed by the prophet Daniel. Dan. 2:31-35 The second is to be the kingdom of Christ, the Lord and Ruler of which was seen by the apostle John at Patmos. Rev. 1:10-18 See also Dan. 2:44 If we consider the image of Babylon with its head of gold, its breasts and arms of silver, its belly and thighs of brass, its legs of iron, and its feet part iron and part clay, we will learn this: The image of Babylon is one image, all the various parts of the image contributing together to make one image of the dread forms of Babylonish rule that would prevail over the entire earth. With this in mind we may readily see that, when John beheld the revelation of the fullness of the Christ, Rev. 1:10-18, he saw that the head, the hair, the eyes, the hands, and the feet, though all particular parts, were but one body. This was the revelation of the fullness of the sonship company, the in Christ company, of which He is the head and the firstborn. Nebuchadnezzar was the head of the image of Babylon. Dan. 2:38 Christ is the Head of the sons. Rom. 8:29 The feet of the image of Babylon were ready to fall apart in dust, but the feet of Christ, like unto brass eternally enduring, burned as in a furnace of fire. Just as the image of Babylon, representing all dominions and empires, was one image, so this image of Christ with its many members is but one body. As many soldiers are one army, so many sons make one body, and that body is the fullness of Christ. When Paul exhorted the Ephesians to come to the stature of the fullness of Christ, Eph. 4:13, he was speaking of the fullness John saw in Rev. 1:13-15 This is the perfect man among the candlesticks (churches) in His image. We may further say that, could we look more closely, we would certainly see that every nerve and every fiber, every muscle and sinew of that mighty one like unto the Son of man, was itself a manifested son of God, each the image of the other and all the image of Jesus Christ, the Head of all the sons of God.

The sons of God who are coming to maturity at the end of the age are the feet of Him. Isa. 52:7; 60:13-14. The clay feet of the image of Babylon are about to be smitten and crumble to dust. Dan. 2:34, 35. With them will crumble the whole system of Babylon with its millenniums of confusion. But the feet of Christ are not of clay, but as brass (judgment) burning in a furnace of fire; for judgment shall be given to the saints of the Most High and they shall reign unto the ages of the ages. Dan. 7:26-27

Deep from the depths of my spirit conies an inconsolable longing for the purification of the saints of the Most High. Too long have these sons wasted their living with harlot churches. It is time to come out from among them and return to the Father. It is time for the washing of feet - not in ceremony, but in reality. This is the hour when we are to know what only Jesus knew when He said to Peter, "If I wash thee not, thou hast no part in Me." John 13:6-8 This is the fulfillment of that type so richly manifested when the woman washed His feet with tears of repentance and love and anointed them with the symbolic oil of the Holy Spirit of God. Luke 7:3, 38 We are those feet of Christ whom He is now washing, John 13:4-5, that we might be shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace. Eph. 6:14-15 "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace, that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation, that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth!" Isa. 52:7 Rom. 10:15 Long ago Jesus showed them His hands and His side, and then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord; but the hour is at hand when He will show unto all the world His blessed feet, for it is they who will publish to all the world the glad news, "thy God reigneth."

There are many today whose feet are defiled, for they are far too interested in the affairs of this passing age, though they protest otherwise. I am convinced that no man who has any love left in him for this present evil age will ever attain to that glorious feet company of the sons of God, for those who are with Him are not only called, but chosen and faithful as well. Rev. 17:14 He whose feet are as brass in a furnace of fire is portraying in parable expressive beyond words that those who are to judge the nations of the earth must certainly themselves be first judged by fire, for the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is, and all that is wood, hay, and stubble shall be destroyed. 1 Cor. 3:12-16

Let us, then, now judge ourselves and thus cleanse ourselves of all that is wood and hay and stubble, for these things vividly portray the passing and not the permanent. Let all who are double-minded purify their hearts. Let us make a clean break with the harlot systems of earth. Let us recognize every denomination, every sect, and every religious system as being part and parcel of the Babylon system that is soon to crumble, bringing destruction, not only to itself, but to all who are found in her. Rev. 18:28

All who are members of Christ must suffer the pains of crucifixion. The Head was pierced with thorns; the hands were pierced with nails; the side was pierced with a spear. So also must the feet be pierced, for He who proudly displayed His hands and His side shall presently display with equal pride His wounded feet. He from whom all men fled that He might suffer alone amid the millions who swarmed around will also have us to share the cross of walking alone and misunderstood amid the millions of this crooked and perverse age. The hour of preparation of the feet company is at hand. It is the preparation of the final company of God's sons. Is it too much that we should be asked to abandon the trifles in which other men are so engrossed? "He that is washed needeth not save to wash his feet and is clean every whit."
CHAPTER SEVEN
A GARDEN ENCLOSED

In the beautiful genesis of our ages our gracious heavenly Father, having formed man in His own likeness, took the man He had formed and placed him in a garden eastward in Eden. We love at times to think upon that place of magnificent beauty with its four untainted rivers of pure, sparkling water flowing out to bring life to the new creation. The name of the first was Pison that compassed the whole land of Havilah (possibly Arabia). The name of the second was Gihon, which compassed the whole land of Ethiopia. The third was Hiddekel, which went out toward Assyria; and the fourth was the mighty Euphrates. Gen. 2:10-15 Man in the image of God was placed in this vast garden to dress it and rule it in the love and peace of God.

It will not be our purpose here to comment on the extent of the garden nor concerning those fragrant forests that perfumed the breeze, both pleasant to the sight and life-giving for food, Gen. 2:9, nor of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, nor of the tree of life, ever green and vibrant, in the midst of the garden. Neither tongues of men nor angels would be sufficient to tell the story of its heavenly beauty and describe the life-giving fruitfulness of its trees or how the tree of life in the midst of the garden offered life everlasting to any who would partake of it. In that beautiful land the rivers wandered o'er sands of gold. Radiant pearls gleamed forth from the coral strands where the burning rays of the rubies shine and the diamonds light up the secret mine; where feathery palm trees rise and dates grow ripe under its sunny skies. We can only imagine the effusion of fragrant forests that perfumed its every breeze. In that land of wonder every creature was a friend to every other. The bear was gentle, the lion was tame, the wolf lay down with the lamb and Adam was the lord and ruler in God's name and all creatures loved and willingly served at his word. My frail ability is too feeble to describe the unruffled tranquility of peace, but we have the blessed assurance that its river of peace will reappear a few days further down the road when the glory of Christ's kingdom will spread its fadeless Eden over all the face of the earth. There the last Adam, in God's image, will rule in a heavenly harmony where every bloom is fadeless and "storms with their blasts never frown."

Wonderful as that garden must have been, it becomes evident that Eden in all its magnificence was not the end our Father had in view. It was His intention that man himself was to become the garden of the Lord, a living garden, a garden in which reborn men in the image of God would become trees of life whose fragrance in the kingdom of God would fill the whole earth with the perfumed breeze of life and incorruption, and in the fullness of times restore the entire creation, visible and invisible, to the immortal image of Him who created all things for His glory. I hesitate not to declare to all mankind and all creation that it is God's will and intention that everything in earth, and everything in the heavens, and all things in the entire universe are to be restored, from the lowly earth to the vaulted skies and from the tiny planet on which we now dwell to the farthest star and the mightiest galaxy. All things, absolutely all things, were created both by Him and for Him, and all exist and are held together and in their place by His infinite power. "From Him everything comes, by Him everything exists, and in Him everything ends." Glory to Him for evermore! Amen!

The wise king Solomon, through the wisdom and insight given to him, saw deeper into the mysteries of God than most have been permitted to see when he made the statement, "a garden enclosed is my beloved." Song of Sol. 4:12.

As the great pendulum of the ages has relentlessly ticked away the centuries and millennia one second at a time, our heavenly Father; with infinite care has been preparing His fruitful garden. It has been ever increasing in fragrance, in glory, and in extent as the centuries have passed by. Well might we believe that it appeared as its first seed in the radiant life of the Son of God, that life-giving Spirit who appeared among men two thousand years ago. Year by year its glory has been increasing as day after endless day the great Gardener on high has reaped from among mankind an enormous harvest. While the world passes on unheeding, He has been preparing individual lives among mankind in His own image and likeness. They have brought forth fruit unto eternal life, sending their enlightening rays to illumine the earth and their heavenly perfume to call men home to the love of God.

You are the garden of the Lord, my brothers and sisters, and wisely it has been left to you to keep your garden. To you it has been given to bring forth fruit for His honor and glory, and none other can do it for you. Yours it is to cultivate and till. You must watch over it and destroy its noxious weeds. You must hedge it round about lest... the little foxes spoil its vines. Let it not be said of you, "These three years have I come seeking fruit on this tree, and I find none. Cut it down. Why cumbereth it the ground?" Dig about it, brethren, and dung it that it may bring forth fruit unto eternal life.

Long ago the troubled Jeremiah in the anguish of his spirit poured forth this plaintive plea: "O earth, earth, earth, hear the word of the Lord." Jer. 22:29 I am sure the prophet was not merely calling upon the inanimate earth to hear his words, but rather he was speaking to that special creation the great Elohim had brought forth on the day when He took the dust of the earth in His almighty fingers and, having formed the form of man, breathed upon it and that earth, touched by the breath of God, became a living soul in His image and likeness. This divine act of creation is beyond the natural mind to comprehend. Consequently unbelieving man discards this miracle of creation as something unworthy of man's proud mind, but there is no need to understand before we can believe. In the depths of my spirit I not only believe it, but perceive that which the natural mind cannot perceive.

It was some four millennia after the Lord had breathed upon that piece of clay to bring forth the animate from the inanimate that God wrought another miracle. The Holy Spirit of life, who long before had moved upon the face of the waters in the genesis of the eon, now moved upon a pure virgin maiden and from the earth which she was brought forth Jesus the Christ and Son of God, He who was and is and is to come. Wrapped up in that tiny baby was the One of whom Paul wrote, saying, "For of Him, and through Him, and to Him are all things." Rom. 11:36 Or, as Goodspeed translates it, "From him everything comes, through Him everything exists, and in Him everything ends." Once again the earth had heard the voice of the Lord and had brought forth a Son who was to become the head of a vast body of sons of God, who through the new birth would come into His image. Jesus Christ was the firstborn of many brethren. Rom. 8:29

Once again God is speaking to His earth to say, "Whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son... and whom He did predestinate, them He also called: and whom He called, them He also justified: and whom He justified, them He also glorified." Rom. 8:29-30 "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh nor whither it goeth. So is every one that is born of the Spirit." "It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing." "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life." The same Holy Spirit who breathed life into the first Adam and breathed upon the earth which was Mary, the virgin, now is breathing upon the earth which we are to bring forth sons of God in the image of Christ, who is the Head of the body, the oldest and firstborn and the first manifested Son of the entire Christ body. "As He is, so are we..." wrote the beloved John, 1 John 4:17, and I know it is so. "O earth, earth, earth! Hear the word of the Lord" and the glory He proclaims for you. Oh that I had the voice of a trumpet that could awaken the dead to hear these wonderful, all inclusive words, "O earth, earth, earth! Hear the word of the Lord," that mankind might know what the almighty Father has in store for an earth so torn with bloodshed and strife, so bruised with iniquity, and so chastised, that it might know peace.

I am aware that the message is unpopular, but it is true that many centuries ago the Most High set in motion a predetermined purpose which was to affect the whole universe in eons to come. In the twelfth chapter of Genesis He called a man by the name of Abram, saying unto him, "In thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed." Gen. 12:3 Once again my heart cries aloud, "O earth, earth, earth! Hear the word of the Lord." From the seed of Abraham through his grandson Israel came Jesus, the Christ. Unto Israel pertains the adoption or sonship, Rom. 9:1-5, and through the ministry of the sons of God (the adoption) the bride is prepared. This is the evident meaning of the story told in Rev. 12:1-6 "And there appeared a great wonder in heaven: a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars: and she being with child cried, travelling in birth, and pained to be delivered. And there appeared another wonder in heaven: and, behold, a great red dragon, having seven heads and ten horns, and seven crowns upon his heads. And his tail drew the third part of the stars of heaven, and did cast them to the earth: and the dragon stood before the woman which was ready to be delivered, for to devour her child as soon as it was born. And she brought forth a man child, who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron; and her child was caught up unto God, and to His throne. And the woman fled into the wilderness, where she hath a place prepared of God, that they should feed her there a thousand two hundred and threescore days." 0 earth, earth, earth! Hear the word of the Lord.
The whole earthly pilgrimage of Abraham must have been buoyed and uplifted as he saw God's promise unfolding and his spiritual eye caught a glimpse of the whole glorious plan. From his own earth body, now as good as dead, there would arise a people as numerous as the stars, and from his seed would come Jesus, the son of David, the son of Abraham, Matt. 1:1; but he saw much farther than this. He saw an elect people arising according to the promise given him, of whom it was said, "Whom he did foreknow, He did predestinate: and whom He did predestinate, them He called; and whom He called, them He also justified; and whom He justified, them He also glorified." Rom. 8:29-30 These He will bring to receive the glory of transfiguration and the honor of sonship and adoption just as Jesus received when He appeared unto Him there. 0 earth, earth, earth! Hear the word of the Lord!

Abraham saw still further than this, for it is written: "He looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." Heb. 11:10 There is only one city that hath foundations whose builder and maker is God, and that city is the celestial New Jerusalem. Rev. 21:19-20 Of that city it is written: "Jerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all." Gal. 4:26 So glorious was the sight of that holy city and so real was it to Abraham's spirit that, though a great man of wealth, he despised it all, dwelling rather in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob that, unhampered by the things of earth, he might press forward to that city. What indescribable joy it must have been to him to see inscribed upon its twelve pearly gates the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel and to know that through those twelve wide open gates in eons to come would pass the millions, yea, billions of all the families of earth to quench their thirst at the river of water of life that was seen flowing out of the throne of the Most High, Rev. 22:1-2, and to feast upon the tree of life that bare the twelve manner of fruits and the leaves of the tree that were for the healing of the nations. 0 hallelujah! Hallelujah to the Lamb! Hallelujah to the Lord God Almighty, the Author and Finisher of such a purpose! 0 earth, earth, earth! hear the word of the Lord!

"And there came unto me one of the seven angels which had the seven vials full of the seven last plagues, and talked with me, saying, Come hither, I will shew thee the bride, the Lamb's wife. And he carried me away in the spirit to a great and high mountain, and shewed me that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God, having the glory of God: and her light was like unto a stone most precious, even like a jasper stone, clear as crystal; and had a wall great and high, and had twelve gates, and at the gates twelve angels, and names written thereon, which are the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel: on the east three gates; on the north three gates; on the south three gates; and on the west three gates. And the wall of the city had twelve foundations, and in them the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb. And he that talked with me had a golden reed to measure the city, and the gates thereof, and the wall thereof. And the city lieth foursquare, and the length is as large as the breadth: and he measured the city with the reed, twelve thousand furlongs. The length and the breadth and the height of it are equal. And he measured the wall thereof, an hundred and forty and four cubits, according to the measure of a man, that is, of the angel. And the building of the wall of it was of jasper: and the city was pure gold, like unto clear glass. And the foundations of the wall of the city were garnished with all manner of precious stones. The first foundation was of jasper; the second, sapphire; the third, a chalcedony; the fourth, an emerald; the fifth, sardonyx; the sixth, sardius; the seventh, chrysolite; the eight, beryl; the ninth, a topaz; the tenth, a chrysoprasus; the eleventh, a jacinth; the twelfth, an amethyst. And the twelve gates were twelve pearly gates; every several gate was of one pearl: and the street of the city was pure gold, as it were transparent glass. And I saw no temple therein: for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it. And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it: for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof. And the nations of them, which are saved shall walk in the light of it: and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honor into it. And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day: for there shall be no night there. And they shall bring the glory and honor of the nations into it. And there shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie: but they, which are written in the Lamb's book of life. And he shewed me a pure river of water of life, pure as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb. In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations. And there shall be no more curse: but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it; and His servants shall serve Him: and they shall see His face; and His name shall be in their foreheads. And there shall be no night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord God giveth them light: and they shall reign forever and ever.

TREASURES OF TRUTH, Volume 32, Glory, Honor, and Immortality, Eternal Life [George R. Hawtin] ~ BOOK 40
And he said unto me, These sayings are faithful and true: and the Lord God of the holy prophets sent His angel to shew unto His servants the things which must shortly be done. Behold, I come quickly: blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book.” Rev. 21:9 to 22:7

We will speak of one thing more, for my ransomed, joyful spirit goes far beyond even these blessed things. The very earth of which we have spoken such glorious things is only the genesis, the beginning, of God's massive plan for the restoration of the entire universe. Let the scientists and astronomers talk as they will about other inhabited planets, there are none; but from mother earth and its redeemed will go forth the message of reconciliation to all the void and rock strewn wastes of all the universe. Well do we know those blessed words of grace and purpose indelibly inscribed for all to see, "And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to Himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation; to wit, that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation. Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God." 2 Cor. 5:18-20 "And, having made peace through the blood of His cross, by Him to reconcile all things unto Himself; by Him, I say, whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven." Col. 1:20 Was it not on earth that the reconciliation was made? Oh unbelieving man, did not the apostle say all things! Can anyone anywhere say in two words anything more all inclusive than all things! Yea, the power and scope of the cross of Christ went much further than any man has ever imagined, because on that bloody cross our glorious Head and elder Brother reconciled the universe to Himself. 0 earth, earth earth! hear the word of the Lord.

Hear still further what He says, for not only did our beloved Brother reconcile all things that day, but he has given to us, His younger brothers, the ministry of reconciliation. 2 Cor. 5:18 And this is the joyous word that ministry bears: "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto Himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation." Verse 19 Oh how few preachers even tell this wonderful message and how few refrain from imputing trespasses to the people! To every penitent soul our Lord doth say, "Neither do I condemn thee; go and sin no more." John 8:11

So it shall be in eons yet unborn that from this earth where the pain of reconciliation was suffered by our Brother, Jesus, we younger sons of God will bring the message to angels and to men, to principalities and powers and the rulers of the darkness of the world, that God was in Christ, reconciling the world to Himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them. "And, having made peace through the blood of His cross, by Him to reconcile all things unto Himself; by Him, I say, whether they be things in earth or things in heaven. And you that were sometime alienated and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now hath He reconciled in the body of His flesh through death, to present you holy and unblameable and unreproveable in his sight." Col. 1:20-22 And why should the great Author and Finisher of our faith impute trespasses to any who believe on Christ, since all trespasses were imputed unto Him? 0 earth, earth, earth! Hear the word of the Lord! Hear, 0 heaven, and give ear, 0 earth! Repent of your sin, your unbelief and your pride, and begin to tell the wonderful, wonderful story of reconciliation as it really is.

I make no apologies for truth. God is truth and in Him is no darkness or lie. Oh what a plan He had in His heart when long ago He formed a man from the clay that He had picked up from the earth and breathed upon, and from the potency of that breath Adam became a living soul!

Breathe on me, breath of God,
Fill me with life anew,
That I may love as Thou dost love
And do as Thou wouldst do.
Breathe on me, breath of God;
So shall I never die,
But live with Thee that perfect life
Of Thine eternity.

The miracle of what God has already done ravishes my heart. I am enthralled beyond measure at the prospect of what He has prepared for them that love Him and believe Him. Those indescribable glimpses beyond the veil help us to comprehend at least in part what it was of which Paul spoke when he said, "It is not expedient for me doubtless to glory. I will come to visions and revelations of the Lord. I knew a man in Christ above fourteen years ago (whether in the body, I cannot tell; or whether out of the body, I cannot tell: God knoweth); such an one caught up to the third heaven. And I knew such a man (whether in the body, or out of the body, I cannot tell: God knoweth) how that he was caught up into paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for a man to utter. Of such an one will I glory: but of myself I will not glory, but in mine infirmities." 2 Cor. 12:1-5 How ever can we help but glory in the prospect of such radiantly marvelous things?

"Dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return" was evidently not spoken to those who believe, for of them it is written, "This corruptible must put on incorruption and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory." 1 Cor. 15:53-54 This clay has been born again, born from above. It has been breathed upon by the breath of God. It has become a "zoe psuche," a living soul. It does not just possess a soul. It is a soul and it is a spirit. It has become the garden of the Lord, and we ourselves are our own gardeners that we may bring forth fruit unto perfection. Let other Christians waste their God-given time following the lusts of the flesh and the desires of the natural mind, but let it not be so with you or me; for, if we live after the flesh, we shall die, but if we through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, we shall live. Rom. 8:13 Having begun in the Spirit, we can never be made perfect through the flesh. If such a thing were possible, then we might well have never left the flesh realm, but now our lives, being lived by the power of Christ that worketh in us, have become the garden of the Lord that we may bring forth fruit unto eternal life.

"Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these: Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." Gal. 5:19-21 These are noxious weeds that grow readily and flourish in the garden of those who desire to live after the flesh. These abominable things are thrown before the eyes of the public every day on the T.V. screen, upon which Christians, alas, alas, feast their eyes - eyes that should be sanctified. "The heart of him that hath understanding seeketh knowledge; but the mouth of fools feedeth on foolishness." Prov. 15:14 You may mislead yourself, thinking you are getting away with it and not being affected by it, but the terrible truth is that he that soweth to the flesh shall reap only corruption. He that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life aionian. It is always true that whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.

These noxious weeds of the flesh are they, which must be destroyed from our garden. They must be uprooted. They must be reduced to ashes. If we plow them under, they will grow again. We were born of incorruptible seed when we believed, but I am inclined to think that, if our life is producing corruption, then it must be that we were not born of the incorruptible. When men tell me they are born again, and I hear them use profanity, see them drink booze, smoke cigarettes and indulge in other works of the flesh mentioned above, then I must admit that I do not believe them. Can we with the same tongue bless God and curse men? Can blessing and cursing come from the same mouth? Does a fountain send forth from the same place both sweet water and bitter? Can a fig tree bear olive berries? Either a vine, figs? So can no fountain yield both salt water and fresh. If we find ourselves in this kind of spiritual contradiction, we would be well advised - very well advised indeed - to heed the words of the apostle Paul when he said, "Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith, prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates?" 2 Cor. 13:5 It would be far better for people who have these noxious weeds in the garden of their spirit to either destroy them now or examine themselves and admit that they are not in the faith at all.

In an excellent article on Cultural Terrorism John Halford has written: "In the last five years, the American entertainment industry - which has never been saintly - has taken a particularly nasty turn.

"Instead of being merely suggestive, films and pop songs - with a few exceptions - now openly wallow in themes such as rape, drug abuse, satanism and perverted sex. No subject is off limits. Nothing is too outrageous, revolting or disgusting for a lyric or a screenplay, and half of all movies now produced in the U.S.A. are for a "mature audience." The greatest tragedy is that most of this appalling material is aimed to appeal to the young. The damage that has been done - and is being done - to the morals of a whole generation is incalculable.

"But it doesn't just affect the United States. American media provide the most persuasive cultural influences the world has ever seen. This flood of violence, pornography and perversion is seeping into nearly every country on earth. It is playing havoc with the sometimes, fragile cultures of the developing countries. Educators and intellectuals have criticized this invasion, calling it "cultural colonialism." Well, maybe. Sometimes it seems more like "cultural terrorism!"

"A terrorist who hijacks an airplane or plants a bomb in a crowded airport lounge apparently doesn't care who gets hurt, as long as he achieves his aim. That innocent people are blown to pieces or maimed for life is not his concern. Is the cultural terrorist any different? His aim is to make money. His weapons are anything that makes him money - a movie, a video tape or a new song. And he is apparently little concerned how violent, how perverted, how much his material appeals to the very lowest of emotions, or how much it twists and pollutes fresh young minds and further warps those already in trouble. If it makes money, it achieves the cultural terrorists aim and he will use it.

"Thankfully, not all producers, songwriters and artists have become cultural terrorists.

"But developing nations are often helpless in the face of cultural terrorism. They need the contact, even at the risk of exposing themselves to a contagious subculture that threatens their societies as surely as it is subverting the younger generation of 'advanced' countries.

"How can these great nations, which have so much good to offer, allow themselves to be represented so badly? We may place elaborate safeguards at airports to separate would-be hijackers from their weapons. But cultural terrorists are free to distribute their soul-destroying weapons without fear of prosecution!

"If ever a people were asking for it, it is the United States and Britain, when far too many of their actors and actresses portray fornication, murder and rape across the screens of the world, and their entertainers scream in song obscenities from countless millions of radios and cassette players. They are compounding the national sins of a people who are already in very deep trouble with God." End of quote.

These words are all too frighteningly true, but they show the kind of stuff, the kind of filth, now being foisted upon the world, designed to turn mankind down pathways that lead to inevitable destruction. No Christian need be told that radio, television, video, corrupt reading, rock and roll and every modern contraption now used to spew filth and corruption are designed by Satan himself, who, knowing that he has but a short time, Rev. 12:12, is going all out to destroy as many souls as he possibly can. The authorities utter lies when with smug audacity they tell the world that violent scenes displayed before the eyes of children do not cause violent behavior. Whom do these emissaries of the devil think they are hoodwinking when they act as the mouthpiece of the arch deceiver by propagating such abominable prevarications? Many a child has confessed that the crime he committed he saw first on T.V.

Some of the best lessons I have learned in life were statements simply overheard and not addressed to me at all. I once heard an elderly lady remark to her brother, "You can't rub up against dirt without getting dirty." That was almost sixty years ago, but its truth found lodging in my heart for a lifetime. The apostle Paul may have been more refined in his speech when he said, "Evil communications corrupt good manners," 1 Cor. 15:33, but how true it is! Time and again the words of the Greek poet come to mind:

Vice is a creature of such fearful mien
That to be hated needs but to be seen;
But seen too oft, familiar with his face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace.

Beloved brethren, the garden you are keeping is the garden of the Lord. It is the garden of the redeemed spirit. It is a garden enclosed. We are to keep it hedged about and fenced in that all evil speaking and thinking and every lust of the flesh and desire of the carnal mind will be kept out. I am not trying to say that one should shut himself away like a monk in a monastery. Such thought should never enter the mind of a saint. Our blessed Lord and Christ mingled freely with the throngs of people to whom He ministered. He was seen among drinkers, thieves, harlots and all the rest, but never once did He allow them to defile Him. He was not among them to partake of their evil. He was there only to tell them of God's goodness and that His mission was to seek and to save the lost. Which one among us would want to be found feasting our eyes on some corrupt thing should the Son of God appear in our presence? Did not our Lord tell us of the man who once had walked with God, but said, "My Lord delayeth His coming," then began to eat and drink with the drunken? Matt. 24:49

He warned us that such a servant would see the Lord come in a moment when he was not looking for Him, and in an hour when he was not aware.

It is unnecessary for me to spend much time warning of the evils around us. Close the gate of your beautiful garden and spend your time in communion with our Lord and Christ, for "a garden enclosed is my beloved."

"The fascination of evil throws good things into the shade, and the whirlwind of desire corrupts the simple heart."
"Soon it is not enough for them that their knowledge of God should be at fault; in the great struggle to which ignorance condemns their lives they next give such massive ills the name of peace. With their child-murdering initiations, their secret mysteries, their orgies with outlandish ceremonies, they no longer retain any purity in their lives or their marriages, one treacherously murdering the next or doing him injury by adultery. Everywhere a welter of blood and murder, theft and fraud, corruption, treachery, riots, perjury, disturbance of decent people, forgetfulness of favors, pollution of souls, sins against nature, disorder in marriage, adultery, debauchery. For the worship of unnamed idols is the beginning, cause, and end of every evil. Either that, or they rave in ecstasy, or utter false oracles."
Wisdom of Solomon

Solomon here speaks of the fascination of evil. What is there about evil that holds such a fascination for people! I frankly confess that I do not know, but we do know that it has a strange devilish appeal to almost everyone. Can we explain what it is in a child that makes him always want to try the very thing his mother told him not to do? It was the same strange fascination with evil that deceived Eve and made her partake of that which she inwardly knew would produce her death. Examine with care the passage quoted above from the Wisdom of Solomon, and we must all admit that each and every one of the evils mentioned there are rampant in our day and right in the society in which we live.

THE WORKS OF THE FLESH

There are many works of the flesh because the flesh manifests itself in so many ways, ways that are almost limitless. Paul, however, in Galatians 5:19-21 names seventeen works of the flesh that to a degree include all others, even the incredible list given in Rom. 1:28-32. "Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these; adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyanings, murders, drunkenness, revellings and such like. ..." Then the apostle adds the amazing words, "of which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God."

It should be remembered that these seventeen works or manifestations of the flesh are not the works of the devil. They are the works of the flesh, your flesh and mine. When Christians find these evils being manifested in their lives, they should not readily blame the devil for them. Indeed, Satan may take advantage of their presence in men and women, but they are not the works of the devil. They are the works of the flesh. It is important for us to know this fact. The scripture is very plain in its teaching that the flesh, our flesh, "lusteth against the Spirit and the Spirit against the flesh; and these are contrary the one to the other: so that we cannot do the things that we would."

Gal. 5:17  The whole seventh chapter of Romans describes this dilemma. Then again the apostle teaches, "This I say then, Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfill the lusts of the flesh."

Gal. 5:16  A life being lived in harmony with God is without doubt the secret of a life lived in perfect freedom from the lusts of the flesh and the desires of the natural mind.

Because preachers have been preaching about the flesh for centuries, but none seem able to identify it, I strongly recommend that you prayerfully study my book Two Realms (readily available upon request). Once the seeker after a life in the Spirit is able to identify his enemy, the flesh, and the manner in which it operates, for the first time in his life he is in a position to reckon himself dead to it. But he will not be able to crucify the flesh with its affections and lusts until he is able to identify it. He will beat the air like a blind man in a pillow fight. I must point out here that absolutely every spiritual thing a Christian learns he must learn by a revelation from the Spirit of God. Revelation is given to us when the Comforter, who is the Holy Spirit, takes the things of God and shows them unto us. Jesus said of the Holy Spirit, "He will receive of Mine, and shall show it unto you."

John 16:14  We may talk about sin all we like, but sin never becomes sinful until the blessed Holy Spirit reproves us of it.

Our complete dependence upon the work of the Holy Spirit is clearly brought out by our Saviour in the following words, every word of which deserves hours of meditation and prayer and comparison with other such statements in the word of God: "Nevertheless I tell you the truth: It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you: but if I depart, I will send Him unto you. And when He is come, He will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment: of sin, because they believe not on Me; of righteousness, because I go to the Father, and ye see Me no more; of judgment, because the prince of this world is judged. I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now. Howbeit when He, the Spirit of truth, is come, He will guide you into all truth: for He shall not speak of Himself; but whatsoever He shall hear, that shall He speak: and He will show you things to come. He shall glorify Me: for He shall receive of Mine, and shall show it unto you."

John 16:7-15  Let every Christian learn to involve his entire life in communion with the Holy Spirit. He is our teacher in this age. He has been sent by Christ, not merely to be with us, as our blessed Lord Himself was with us, but to be in us, John 14:17, and to abide with us forever. John 14:16  He is the anointing that abideth in us. Of Him the apostle John wrote these wonderfully inspiring words: "Ye have an anunction from the Holy One, and ye know all things. I have not written unto you because ye know not the truth, but because ye know it, and that no lie is of the truth. Who is a liar but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ? He is antichrist that denieth the Father and the Son. Whosoever denieth the Son, the same hath not the Father; but he that acknowledges the Son hath the Father also. Let that therefore abide in you which ye have heard from the beginning. (That is, the anointing.) If that which ye have heard from the beginning shall remain in you, ye also shall continue in the Son and in the Father. And this is the promise He hath promised us, even eternal life. These things have I written unto you concerning them that seduce you. But the anointing which ye have received of Him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you: but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in Him. And now, little children, abide in Him, that, when He shall appear, we may have confidence and not be ashamed before Him at His coming."

1 John 2:20-28  I have made the necessary discovery that the entire church system is rampant with divisions and torn to pieces with factions. This sad situation exists because preachers teach the traditions of their denominations and sects. These are the man made traditions of the elders just as was the case with the scribes and Pharisees in the days of Jesus. Jesus said, "Ye make the word of God of none effect by your traditions."

Matt. 15:6  But I have also made another discovery. It is this: Wherever men and women are depending upon the Holy Spirit to instruct them, they are all coming to the same conclusions and believing the same things. One of my great joys during the years I have been writing and sending literature all over the world has been that people, upon reading the truth I have written, have in turn written back to me to say that the things they read in my writings were the very things about which the Holy Spirit had been speaking to them before my writing came. This is a continual joy to me because it shows that the blessed Holy Spirit is in truth the great universal instructor, and wherever His anointing abides in the hearts of the saints, He diligently teaches them the same things; and these things taught by Him are truth and no lie, for no lie is of the truth. It should not then be an amazement to any one of us to hear Him say, "Ye have no need that any man teach you; but the same anointing teacheth you all things, and is truth."

It is true that God has set in the church teachers, but there are two things about those teachers that must be made very clear. Firstly, the Lord never raises up more than a handful of them in any generation. The idea that teachers, apostles and pastors are to be found in every little local gathering, no matter how carnal it may be, is utter falsehood and stupidity. The Lord never intended any such thing. How many statesmen of the caliber of Abraham Lincoln do we find in the world at one time? How many statesmen of the caliber of George Washington? Or King David? I know of no nation today where such selfless men can be found. How many composers are there in the world today of the caliber of Beethoven or Mozart? How many mathematicians like Einstein do we find at one time? How many true inventors like Thomas Edison? I remember hearing the great humorist, Red Skelton, when asked how many true comedians there were in the world at one time, answer "Never more than half a dozen." If these things be so in the natural realm, what makes Christians imagine that God-sent ministries which "God hath set" in His body are a dime a dozen and as numerous as the steeple houses that stand on a multitude of street corners? How many evangelists of the caliber of John Wesley or George Whitefield or D. L. Moody are there in the world today? Please do not try to tell me that the great T.V. kingdom builders and money graspers are evangelists, because they are not. How many true prophets are there in the world of the caliber of Isaiah or Elijah? I know not of any.

It is the same with the ministry of a teacher. There are never more than a very minute few in the universal church at one time. Paul said it all when he said, "Though ye have ten thousand instructors in Christ, yet have ye not many fathers." 1 Cor. 4:15 Even the apostle James, who was himself a great teacher, made the statement, "Let not many of you become teachers, my brethren." James 3:1 Revised Standard Version. Let us then remember that God, all wise and almighty, has put one great teacher in His universal body, and that one great teacher is the anointing that abideth, the Holy Spirit sent forth from the Father to abide in us forever.

It will not be our purpose here to describe further these noxious weeds of the flesh that flourish in so many spiritual gardens, choking out all spiritual growth and the fruit of the Spirit and drowning men in destruction and perdition with their hurtful lusts. 1 Tim. 6:9 Any Christian will find a most profitable study by taking his Concordance to study out where such words as adultery, fornication, uncleanness and all the other abominations of the flesh occur. In your investigations you will find such texts as this: "Ye adulterers and adulteresses, know ye not that friendship with the world is enmity with God?" James 4:4 You will find passages showing that Christians are committing spiritual fornication with the Babylon church system. Is it any wonder, then, that those who commit spiritual adultery with the world and who hide their lights beneath the bushel of sects and denominations, thus committing spiritual fornication with the harlot system, find themselves to be sadly lacking in all spiritual understanding? Can we marvel that the apostle Paul proclaimed this most necessary message, "They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with its affections and lusts?" Can we not see more clearly why the Lord through John commanded His saints with the voice of angels, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her sins"? Rev. 14:8-9; Rev. 18:1-5 Her chief sin is spiritual fornication. Does not the Spirit say, "All nations have committed fornication with her"! Rev. 17:1-5; 18:3 Why then do Christians imagine that it is their God-given duty to assemble with her? Are such people not like unto those who assemble in the house of the harlot? Are they not as Jeremiah said, "When I fed them to the full, they then committed adultery, and assembled themselves by troops in the harlots' houses"? There is no possibility of exhausting scripture truth. Scripture is as inexhaustible as God Himself. There is no end to His wisdom nor His understanding. Who has known the thoughts of the Lord that he should advise Him? "Who hath known the mind of the Lord? Or who hath been His counselor? Or who hath first given to Him, and it shall be recompensed unto him again? For of Him, and through Him, and to Him are all things: to whom be glory forever." Rom. 34-36
By way of conclusion concerning the works of the flesh, so vividly named and described in Gal. 5:19-21, let us settle it in our minds that these works of the flesh are not, as some suppose, the works of the devil. They are the works of your flesh and mine. Certainly Satan can and will whenever possible take advantage of them and stir them up within, but none of these are the works of Satan. They are the works of the flesh. It seems that almost everyone blames all temptation to the work of the devil, but the great teacher apostle, James, did not say so. He stated emphatically, "Every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lust and enticed. Then when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin: and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death." James 1:14-15 This, I think, is an important matter, for if we identify the source of our problem, we can find the cure. The medical world insists, if the cause of an illness can be found, it can be cured. They have proved that smoking causes cancer, so the cure for this kind of cancer is simply do not smoke. It is amazing, if not disgusting, to see the frantic efforts now being made to find a cure for AIDS. Countless millions, and possibly billions, are being spent to find a cure for that loathsome disease. There is no cure, for that disease is the judgment of God against one of the great abominations of the flesh. It is the fulfillment of the scripture, "Because that, when they knew God, they glorified Him not as God, neither were thankful; but became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened. Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools, and changed the glory of the incorruptible God into an image made like to corruptible man, and to birds, and four, footed beasts, and creeping things. Wherefore God also gave them up to uncleanness through the lusts of their own hearts, to dishonor of their own bodies between themselves: who changed the truth of God into a lie, and worshipped and served the creature more than the Creator, who is blessed forever. Amen. For this cause God gave them up unto vile affections: for even their women did change the natural use into that which is against nature: and likewise also the men, leaving the natural use of the woman, burned in their lust one toward another, men with men working that which is unseemly, and receiving in themselves that recompense of their error which was meet. And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind, to do those things which are not convenient." Rom. 1:21-28 The cure is to obey God's command and never commit such obnoxious, lewd, lustful, indecent lasciviousness.

We must conclude, then, that these seventeen evils, clearly identified in Gal. 5, are not the works of the devil. They are the works of the flesh. And now I shall explain a startling but vitally important truth. The only cure for these works of the flesh is death. We can all readily see that dead men are never affected by any of these evils, these works of the flesh. The dead man does not commit adultery, fornication, or any uncleanness. He has no lasciviousness (wanton, lustful desires). He is not an idolater, does not practice witchcraft, does not hate; and in him there is no variance, emulations, wrath, strife, sedition, heresy. Nor are there any envyings, murder, drunkenness or revelling. No work of the flesh is manifest in him because he is dead. But some will ask, "Must I die to be rid of the works of the flesh?" The answer is yes and that most emphatically. But your death will not mean the grave. Your death will be to become identified with the death of our Lord Jesus Christ. If that is done, as Paul taught it must be done, then you will find yourself as completely free of all works of the flesh as was Jesus in His death and resurrection.

"But how," we ask, "is such a wonderful death to the lusts of the flesh accomplished?" It is accomplished by reckoning. "Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord." Rom. 6:11 Reckon yourselves dead to sin by identifying yourself with Christ in His death, for you and all the world died in Him on His cross. Reckon yourself alive unto God by identifying yourself with Him in His resurrection from the dead, for you and all the world rose with Him when He rose from the dead. This not only should, but does, deliver the saint from all the works of his flesh, if that saint has through faith reckoned himself dead to sin and alive with Christ by identification with His resurrection. This is the true meaning of water baptism, but it is not taught that way. If we were to see the truth of water baptism as we should, we would rise from the water incorruptible.

See how vividly these thoughts are brought out by Phil-lips' translation of Rom. 6:1-14 "Now what is our response to be? Shall we sin to our heart's content and see how far we can exploit the grace of God? What a ghastly thought! We, who have died to sin - how could we live in sin a moment longer? Have you forgotten that all of us who were baptized into Jesus Christ were, by that very action, sharing His death? We were dead and buried with Him in baptism, so that just as He was raised from the dead by that splendid revelation of the Father's power so we too might rise to life on a new plane altogether. If we have, as it were, shared His death, let us rise and live our new lives with Him! Let us never forget that our old selves died with Him on the cross.
that the tyranny of sin over us might be broken - for a dead man can safely be said to be immune from the power of sin. And if we were dead men with Him, we can believe that we shall also be men newly alive with Him. We can be sure that the risen Christ never dies again - death's power to touch Him is finished. He died, because of sin once: He lives for God forever. In the same way look upon yourselves as dead to the appeal and power of sin, but alive and sensitive to the call of God through Jesus Christ our Lord. Do not, then, allow sin to establish any power over your mortal bodies in making you give way to your lusts. Nor hand over your organs to be, as it were, weapons of evil for the devil's purposes. But, like men rescued from certain death, put yourselves in God's hands as weapons of good for His own purposes. For sin is not meant to be your master - you are no longer living under the law, but under grace." (J. B. Phillips Translation)

I exhort every reader to seek the face of Christ and make earnest request that the things I have written here may be revealed to you by His Spirit. No person by the use of his natural mind can possibly grasp the truth of reckoning ourselves as identified with Christ in His death and resurrection apart from the revelation of the Holy Spirit. "When He, the Spirit of truth, is come, He will guide you into all truth; for he will receive of Mine and show it (reveal it) unto you."

Dearly beloved brethren, there are men and women, especially in the Charismatic move, who are bringing the people of God into lifelong bondage and disappointment by what they imagine to be the ministry of deliverance. These people, so terribly unlearned in the truth, are continually leading gullible people to believe that they are possessed of evil spirts, demons of all manner of things. They have devils of adultery, fornication, uncleanness and all the rest, with a lot of imaginary things thrown in. They lay their hands on people and try to cast these demons out of them. In the first place these works of the flesh are not the devil's work. They are the works of the flesh. In the second place we are not delivered from them by having someone suddenly lay hands on us for that purpose. We are delivered from them only by our reckoning ourselves to be dead with Christ and raised again, dead unto sin and alive unto God. This reckoning is reality. It is not imagination.

The marvelous reality of it is seen in the famous words and testimony of Paul when he wrote, "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave Himself for me." Gal. 2:20 This is reckoning in the truest sense. Isn't that a marvelous testimony? Paul did not attain such a glorious experience - death to sin and alive with Christ - by having some person with a yen for prominence and the spectacular lay hands on him and cast devils out of him, nor did he receive such an experience by travelling in prayer at an altar. He came to that knowledge when he saw by faith that God placed all men in Christ; therefore, when Christ died, Paul died. When Christ died, I died. When Christ died, you died. For this reason therefore he says, "Wherefore reckon yourselves dead indeed unto sin." It is not sin that is dead; it is you, it is I, it is Paul. But sin can have no more dominion because I am dead; I am crucified because He was crucified. But, oh happy thought, Christ did not and does not leave us in the grave when we reckon ourselves dead with Him; for, after reckoning ourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, Rom. 6:11, we next become participants of His resurrection here and now, and we reckon ourselves alive unto God, through Jesus Christ our Lord, that is, through identifying ourselves with Jesus Christ our Lord.

The next time some lust of the flesh raises its ugly head to tempt you, tell that lust and tell yourself, "There is nobody home I am dead, and Christ lives here." You have died with Christ to every work of the flesh and, furthermore, you have risen again; but you have not risen on the death side of the tomb as you entered it, but on the resurrection side where He arose. You are a new man, an entirely new woman, a new creation in Christ Jesus our Lord. You are Christ's, and the Spirit of Christ, not the works of the flesh, dwells in you. Oh how marvelous is this deliverance!

In closing this thought, I wish to warn all God's people that it is indeed a very dangerous thing to permit men and women to indiscriminately lay hands on you. It may be, for ought you know, that they themselves are sinners. It may be that some of these have evil spirits in them. I have known men who imagined they had a "deliverance ministry" who themselves were revealed to be homosexuals. If such a person as that should lay hands on you, he may well impart his unclean spirit to you so that, instead of your being delivered, you become like him. Never allow this kind of thing. The apostle Paul definitely stated, "Lay hands suddenly on no man; neither be partaker of other men's sins." 1 Tim. 5:22. Lay hands suddenly on no man because in doing so you... know not who or what the man is. Why try to impart some spiritual thing to someone who is not living for God? When he says, "Neither be partaker of other men's sins," the meaning is this: If people with some spiritual uncleanness are permitted to lay hands on you, you may become partaker of their sins. The laying on of hands is not a plaything. I know of no record in the scripture where either Jesus or the apostles ever laid hands on a possessed person. The demon was cast out by their word. Furthermore, they were not guessing. They had proper discernment about such things. All these evils are in the Babylon system today. The best and happiest thing you can do is come out from among them and be separate, that you be not partaker of her sins. You will be amazed at the freedom you will find when you "come out" and walk with Christ in the light which He Himself is to every man.

Wherefore let us reckon ourselves dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God. For further instruction on reckoning, please read Volume 25, Chapter 1.

CHAPTER EIGHT
THE FRUIT OF THE SPIRIT AND THE TREE OF LIFE

"The fruit of the Spirit is Love, joy, peace,
Longsuffering, goodness, gentleness,
Faith, meekness, temperance." Gal. 5:22,23.

I have placed them in the above order because love, joy and peace are the fruit of the Holy Spirit being manifested in the personal experience of the believer that his life as a believer may be lived in love toward God with joy and peace that passes understanding. Longsuffering, goodness and gentleness are the fruit of the Spirit flowing forth from the believer to bless a needy world and reaching forth their kindly hands to sinners, to saints, and to God in goodness and gentleness to all mankind in longsuffering before God and man. Faith, meekness and temperance are the fruit of the Holy Spirit, being manifested in all faithfulness, meekness and temperance before the Father in heaven. We are all aware that there can be no set lines as to where or toward whom these precious fruits are manifested. Meekness and faithfulness can be lived and manifested before our fellowmen as well as before God, saint or sinner. Faithfulness, meekness and temperance flow forth from the Spirit of God and are the fruit of His indwelling presence.

"The part cannot contain the whole", but should there be one part anywhere that does contain the whole, it is the first named fruit — love. Could there be joy, peace, longsuffering or any other that does not spring from the indwelling love of Christ, it would be naught but sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. It could not be genuine. "Ye are of God, little children," said John, the apostle of love. 1 John 4:4. And again, "Every one that loveth Him that begat loveth him also that is begotten of Him." 1 John 5:1. Love is of God. We cannot manifest love, which we do not have. If we have the love of God in us, then that love of God will manifest itself without any struggle on our part. "A wrathful man stirreth up strife." Prov. 15:18. That is because by his very nature he is a wrathful man. Of an envious person it is written, "Wrath is cruel and anger is outrageous; but who is able to stand before envy?" Prov. 27:4. An envious man will never be satisfied until he has brought the object of his envy to ruin. King Saul's envy of David is a perfect example of this.

A faithful man is faithful in all things because he is a faithful man. If we are truly saved and have the love of God in us, then it is written, "He that loveth Him that begat loveth also him that is begotten of Him." It is evident that an apple tree bears apples simply because it is an apple tree and apples grow on that tree because that is what the tree is. Try as we may to gather some other fruit from it, we will not succeed. A corrupt tree cannot bring forth good fruit. Neither can a good tree bring forth evil fruit. In any investigation we make concerning the fruit of the Spirit, let us always remember that it is the fruit of the Spirit, not some substitute thing that man brings forth from his corrupt self. Either we have this blessed fruit abiding in us by the Holy Spirit or we do not.

When penitent sinners come to Christ with "godly sorrow that worketh repentance to salvation" and are cleansed by the blood of Christ, the Spirit enters into them to make them new creatures. No man can be born of the Spirit unless and until the Holy Spirit dwells in him. "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His." Rom. 8:9. That statement should settle the question in our minds forever. Because the Holy Spirit dwells in the believer, it becomes the duty of the believer to cultivate the garden of his own spiritual life. He must make sure by watchfulness that none of these noxious weeds of the flesh are permitted to grow or increase in his life to choke out the fruit of the Holy Spirit. As we read the scripture, we find probably hundreds of statements that show that God's people may rid the garden of their Christian experience of the noxious weeds of the flesh. "Flee fornication." "Let him that stole steal no more." "Lay aside every weight." "Put off anger, wrath, blasphemy." "Put on the whole armor of God." "They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh." The word of God contains dozens of such wonderful instructions and we should use them all. The thorough committing of our old selves to the cross and our identification with Christ in His cross leaves no room for the noxious weeds of the flesh in our spiritual garden. The cross and the Spirit will surely produce the fruit of the Spirit. Water your garden with prayer that the Spirit might descend as rain upon it, and you will discover that the fruit of God's Spirit is growing and maturing in your life.

I ask you now to be prepared for some hard spiritual thinking. When I was a young man, one of my teachers said, "Learn to think in the Spirit." Brethren, this is a practice of great importance. By this means we can come to understand spiritual truth. It is certain that the natural mind cannot understand the things of the Spirit of God. How, then, will we ever come to this knowledge except it be by revelation? When the Holy Spirit stops you with a scripture, do not be quick to ask someone else what that scripture teaches. Ask the Holy Spirit what it means. Enquire of Him, for He is the author of it. It may be weeks or even months before He reveals its truth, but keep thinking about it and He will faithfully give you an understanding of it.

In preparing this chapter concerning the fruit of the Spirit, I found the writing of it very difficult and unfruitful. I felt within that the Holy Spirit desired that we should know something beyond the customary description of what love is, what joy is, peace, longsuffering and the others. So I earnestly sought the Lord to know His mind about the matter. About 3:00 A.M. this morning, as I waited before Him, He put in my heart the truth I now bring.

The garden eastward in Eden was the Lord's garden. In it He placed the man He had made to dress it and to keep it. Trees of every variety grew in that hallowed, perfumed Eden paradise. Every tree and plant that was good for food and every flowering shrub that was glorious for beauty flourished in its fertile haven of peace. It was a place of extreme grandeur. Animals and birds lived in harmony and fearless tranquility together and of man they had do dread nor fear, for he was their lord and friend.

In the midst of the garden two trees were evident above all others - the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, which Eve saw was good for food, and the tree that excelled all others for beauty and fruitfulness, the tree of life. There in all its magnificence it flourished, offering its ever blooming, ever bountiful fruit of eternal life to any who would partake of it, but no one, it would seem, reached out an eager hand to partake of it until after the transgression had cast its evil shadow of death and confusion upon them. Then did the Lord in kindness place a guardian angel with a flaming sword to keep the way to the tree of life lest man in his sin should reach out his willful hand to partake of its life and thus, without cleansing of the blood, live on in his vileness forever. What a tragedy that would have been!

"Death is an enemy," saith the scripture, 1 Cor. 15:26, and indeed it is a desolating enemy. But have you ever considered what a sad and pitiable place the world would be if in our present fallen state man could not die? We see the crippled in their distress and despair. What would it be if they could not die? We see the agonized sufferer groaning on his bed of pain. What would it be if he could not pass away and leave his broken frame to await a better resurrection? We see tottering men and women worn out with age and, like Jacob, weary of their life. What would it be if they could not die? How sad it is to visit a hospital where old men and women, who long to go to their rest, are being kept in their misery by the pretence of a doctor who imagines he is preserving life] Were it not for our enemy, death, the world would be full of helpless, groaning people, suffering an interminable hell. Because man in the beginning partook of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, the Lord

The kiss of the sun for pardon,
The song of the bird for mirth;
You are nearer God's heart in a garden
Than anywhere else on earth.

In the midst of the garden two trees were evident above all others - the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, which Eve saw was good for food, and the tree that excelled all others for beauty and fruitfulness, the tree of life. There in all its magnificence it flourished, offering its ever blooming, ever bountiful fruit of eternal life to any who would partake of it, but no one, it would seem, reached out an eager hand to partake of it until after the transgression had cast its evil shadow of death and confusion upon them. Then did the Lord in kindness place a guardian angel with a flaming sword to keep the way to the tree of life lest man in his sin should reach out his willful hand to partake of its life and thus, without cleansing of the blood, live on in his vileness forever. What a tragedy that would have been!

"Death is an enemy," saith the scripture, 1 Cor. 15:26, and indeed it is a desolating enemy. But have you ever considered what a sad and pitiable place the world would be if in our present fallen state man could not die? We see the crippled in their distress and despair. What would it be if they could not die? We see the agonized sufferer groaning on his bed of pain. What would it be if he could not pass away and leave his broken frame to await a better resurrection? We see tottering men and women worn out with age and, like Jacob, weary of their life. What would it be if they could not die? How sad it is to visit a hospital where old men and women, who long to go to their rest, are being kept in their misery by the pretence of a doctor who imagines he is preserving life] Were it not for our enemy, death, the world would be full of helpless, groaning people, suffering an interminable hell. Because man in the beginning partook of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, the Lord in wisdom barred his way to the tree of life lest in his state of living death he might groan on forever in his sorrow.

When Jesus came to redeem us, He came to deliver man from his sin and to open wide the gate to the tree of life where man, cleansed by redeeming blood, could receive eternal life and become a new creature in Christ. Paul preached that Christ died for all, and, in that He died for all, then all must have been dead. But our wonderful Lord remained not in the tomb. He arose, and, had He not arisen, we would be yet without hope. 1 Cor. 15:16-17 But now is Christ risen from the dead and become the firstfruits of all them that slept. Verse 20 "I give unto them eternal life," said Jesus, "and they shall never perish." John 10:28 In all eternity there will never be another fall. Neither shall there be any more death. The last enemy to be destroyed is death - all death, the first death and the second death too. There shall be no more strife nor war. There shall be no more sighing and no more pain, for the former things are passed away.

The tree of life that flourished in Eden's fragrant garden was a literal tree in a literal garden to the best of our understanding. But "that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual" (or spirit). 1 Cor. 15:46 That beautiful tree of life was a forecast of another tree of life to come, who came that we might have life more abundant. That garden of God called Eden was a type of another garden of God that was to come. Adam, who was made a living soul, was a type of another Adam that was to come who would be a life giving spirit.

I may not be completely accurate, but I am of the opinion that the soul-thrilling events of the last eleven chapters of the Gospel of John all took place within days, if not hours, before our Lord's crucifixion - the sermon concerning the good shepherd of chapter 10; the teaching and demonstration of the resurrection in chapter 11. Finally we are told in chapter 12 that it was six days before the Passover that Jesus came to Bethany where the actual raising of Lazarus, described so vividly in chapter 11, took place. The foot washing and its meaning in chapter 13; the words of comfort and the promise of the Holy Spirit in chapter 14; the marvelous sermon on the vine and the branches of chapter 15; the great detail concerning the coming of the blessed Holy Spirit in chapter 16; the fervent prayer after sermon, given in chapter 17; the arrest and betrayal of chapter 18; the crucifixion and entombment of chapter 19; the glorious news of the resurrection of chapter 20; and the meetings with His disciples of chapter 21 - all these sayings and events assure us that He was telling them, just before He left them, the things most important for them to know.

Oh I would to God that all who name the name of Christ would learn to literally live in those last eleven chapters of John! What teaching Jesus gave them there! What promises He left, what assurance in the words He spoke! How sad I am to find that, for all the glorious fruit of His garden, the preachers are starving the people to death for want of spiritual food with their wretched canned sermons and their appeals for money to build temples of wood and stone, every one of which will be thrown down and trodden under foot when the Lord comes to unveil that heavenly temple which is His body! Turn from these vanities, beloved saint, and close in with Jesus Christ, who is the author and finisher of your faith. "He who has begun a good work in you will perform it unto the day of Jesus Christ." Learn His ways and you will love Him, and if any man love God, the same (man) is known of Him.

In the fifteenth chapter of John our Lord begins to unfold a new revelation of the tree of life, a tree that bringeth forth much fruit. Give an attentive ear to these words our Saviour uttered. "I am the true vine, and My Father is the husbandman. Every branch in Me that beareth not fruit he taketh away: and every branch that beareth fruit, He purgeth (or pruneth) it, that it may being forth more fruit. Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you. Abide in Me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine, no more can ye, except ye abide in Me. I am the vine, ye are the branches: he that abideth in Me,and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit: for without Me ye can do nothing. If a man abide not in Me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered; and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned. If ye abide in Me, and My words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you. Herein is My Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit: so shall ye be My disciples." John 15:1-8

This enlightening passage, unfolding as it does such life-giving truth, is without doubt the unveiling of the new tree of life. Here our Lord portrays Himself as the vine, and from that vital trunk is springing forth fruit bearing branches. Those branches, beloved, according to the word of Christ, are you and I. It is not the trunk of the tree (the expression vine tree is found in Ezek. 15:2) that bears the fruit. It is the branches. And, saith He,
"Ye are the branches." The fruit you bear is spiritual fruit, the fruit of love, joy, peace, long-suffering, goodness, gentleness, faith, meekness and temperance. Wondrous fruit is this that, when it shall be manifest in all the world through those living branches, the sons of God, in the age now at our doors, will make all the world an Eden like to heaven above. Imagine, if you can, a world governed by a people full of love, joy, peace, long-suffering, goodness, gentleness, faith, meekness and temperance!

I am sure that there are many more fruits than those named here. Peter extends the list by repeating some of which Paul spoke and adding more when He said, "Add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity (love)." Oh what a list of virtuous fruit to satisfy the hunger of a groaning creation! Peter here adds to the fruit of the tree of life virtue, knowledge, patience, godliness and brotherly kindness. This is the manner of fruit that at this hour in which we live is beginning to flourish upon that tree of life, which is nothing less than the precious body of Christ, the mystical church, the true ecclesia of God.
"I am the vine tree and ye are the branches," said Jesus, and this the tree of life for the ages to come.

Many times I have mentioned that every spiritual truth has more than one interpretation. Truth rises from one glory to a greater glory, each glory ascending above the one preceding it. So it is with the tree of life; for this tree of life, with which we are at this moment so vitally involved, is to stand in the midst of God's garden, which will eventually include the whole of His creation and the entire universe. We shall not then meditate upon its importance in any fictitious or sentimental manner. From the garden of your own heart, from the Christ within your own heart, there is springing forth a branch which you yourself are. Upon this branch is borne those nine manner of fruits. The natural mind will never understand it, but the Holy Spirit, who knows all things and reveals the secrets of God to the spiritual mind, will unfold it to you, if you have a longing to understand; for
"when He, the Spirit of truth, is come, He will receive of Mine and show it unto you."

With the above truth gaining access and blooming in our hearts, let us now step beyond our present age to the end of the new age which is at hand, the age of the kingdom of God. In this present age of grace the great Architect of the universe is preparing the tree of life with its diverse manner of fruits. This tree of life is in truth the body of Jesus Christ, composed of many sons, many brothers, among whom our wonderful elder brother, our Lord and Christ, is the firstborn, the oldest and the Head of the vast family of brothers, as Paul so beautifully stated: "That He might be the firstborn of many brethren." Rom. 8:29 And again, "Behold, I and the sons which God hath given Me." Heb. 2:13 This great family of sons, every one a house not made with hands in which the Lord dwells, the house of which Jesus spoke, saying, "In My Father's house are many mansions," every son a mansion, every son a habitation for God through the Spirit, together form the temple of the Lord; for thus saith the Lord, "Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God; and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief corner stone; in whom all the building fitly framed together growth unto an holy temple in the Lord: in whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit." Eph.
2:19-22

Meditate day and night on these expressions of truth: My Father's house, John 14; many mansions; the household of God, Eph. 2:19; the chief corner stone, Eph. 2:20; (the corner stone here, I suggest, means the capstone as the capstone of a pyramid. Christ is the head stone. He is the Head. He is the headstone of the corner. Psa. 118:52. Only a pyramid has five corners and a headstone). Then notice the phrase a Holy temple, Eph. 2:21, and an habitation of God. Eph. 2:22 Dear brethren, receive with reverence and holiness such engrafted words of truth. Our Father in heaven would have His maturing sons to see that these towering statements of immense importance are spoken to them.

My brethren, we do not belong to this age; therefore let us cast off all bondage to it. Let us discard the silly doctrines of men and evil traditions inherited from the dark ages. Let us come out from among the inhabitants of Babylon that we may receive of God and become His sons and daughters. The glory of this hope hastens my step. It quickens my pulse. It speeds my writing. It urges me to partake completely of Him, to crown Him my Lord and Head forever. In Christ I plainly see that this Prince of peace is not only the Head, but my wonderful brother as well - the oldest in a vast family, of which family God is Father. Hallelujah! What a plan! What a glorious purpose! What a tree of life! What luscious fruit adorns its countless branches! "Glory and blessing and honor be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne and unto the Lamb for ever and ever!"

"You are a building which has been reared on the foundation of the apostles and prophets, the cornerstone being Christ Jesus Himself, in union with whom the whole fabric, truly bonded together, is rising so as to form a holy sanctuary in the Lord; in whom you also are being built up together to become a fixed abode for God through the Spirit." Eph. 2:20-22 Weymouth We thank Thee, Oh Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that Thou has hidden these things from the wise and prudent and hast revealed them unto babes. Open our eyes still further, Thou Spirit of the living God, that in the majesty of Thy revelation we may better strip off the flesh and all the works thereof that every noxious weed of the flesh may be rooted out and the fruit of the Spirit appear and the world may partake of Thy holy tree of life.

The sun is setting rapidly upon this tired old age in which we have lived so long, and even as it sets, the dawn with lithesome steps advances, stretching out her merciful fingers to draw aside the curtains of this six thousand years of night and open before our happy faces the gates of a new age, even the blessed Sabbath of the millennial rest of the Lord. We labor to enter into rest, and, when we have entered His rest, we shall find that His labor is rest.

These things shall be. A loftier race
Than e'er the world hath known shall rise
With flame of freedom in their souls
And light of knowledge in their eyes.

They shall be gentle, brave and strong,
Not to spill human blood, but to dare
All that may plant man's lordship firm
On earth and fire and sea and air.

Nation with nation hand in hand
Unarmed shall live as comrades free;
In every heart and brain shall throb
The pulse of one fraternity.

There shall be no more sin, no shame,
And wrath and wrong shall fettered be;
For men shall be at one with God In bonds of firm necessity.

The long awaited kingdom of God is at hand, the kingdom in which the heavens reign over the earth, the kingdom in which the saints shall reign with Christ, the day when the body of Christ is the governing temple of the Lord. All throughout that blessed kingdom, one thousand years of heavenly peace, our delighted eyes will behold another beautiful body forming more glorious than all before it. It is the body of the bride, the heavenly Jerusalem. Millennials ago the Lord opened the side of Adam and from his riven side He formed a woman - a literal, natural, but glorious woman. On Calvary's cross the Lord again opened the side of an Adam, the last man Adam. 1 Cor. 15:45 From His riven side there flowed forth the cleansing blood and the water of life. John 19:34. And a fountain was opened for all sin and uncleanness that Christ might truly say, "If any man thirst, let him come unto Me and drink. He that believeth on Me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. (But this spake He of the Spirit, which they that believe on Him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given, because that Jesus was not yet glorified.)" John 7:37-39 From that riven side all who believe are given power to become the sons of God. All who have been cleansed by the blood that flowed are God's children and all who drink of the water of His life, from their bellies shall flow, not wells, not fountains, but rivers of the water of life to nations yet unborn.

Oh how we marvel at the ever, progressing purpose and ever increasing manifestation of the Lord! From the Father's only begotten Son there comes forth a vast family of sons. Today our Lord is not the Father of an only begotten Son, but the Father of many brethren, all of whom are born into His family by the Holy Spirit. But what shall we say more, for I clearly see that, in the kingdom age to come, through the ministry of this man child there is to be brought forth a heavenly woman, a bride, an innumerable company. This is the meaning of the vision John saw in the Revelation of the woman in the wilderness, who in her travail brought forth a son, the sons of God, a man child who was caught up unto God even as we are now being caught up, and the woman, not as yet prepared as a bride, fled into the wilderness; and they, that is, the sons caught up, fed her there and prepared her as a bride, even as we now are being prepared as a bridegroom. Please read the revealing story, Rev. 12:1-6, the truth of which is so wisely hidden from unbelieving eyes, yet so beautifully manifest to those who ask.

I have been both amazed and enlightened by those delightful apiarists who have given us the almost incredible information that honey bees, when needing a queen bee, feed the maturing larva queen's food and by the queen's food they feed her a queen bee is produced. The same is true of the worker bees and the drones. They all become what they are fed. Do you not think that this same principle applies to a Christian? We become what we are fed, or shall we say, what we feed upon. Thus the saying is true, "As many as received Him (who is the living bread), to them gave He power to become the sons of God." It is a very great mystery, but it is amazingly true. When therefore the woman of the wilderness, who brought forth the man child, fled into the wilderness, a wilderness such as we also have been through, they, that is, the sons of God, fed her there, and it is this same woman who brought forth the man child who becomes the bride of Christ. This solves the great mystery spoken by Paul in 1 Cor. 11:12, for as we today are being fed the food of sons, the wilderness woman will be fed the food of the bride. "For as the woman is of the man, (Adam), even so is the man also by the woman; but all things of God." 1 Cor. 11:12 Today the woman is bringing forth the man child. Thus the man is of the woman. Next the man child feeds the woman and brings forth the bride. Thus the woman is of the man. Adam was first formed, then Eve, and she was the bride of Adam. So also it is with the bride of Christ, who is to be fed by the sons of God, the fullness of the last Adam.

What a day of days it must have been for the beloved John, who had already seen so much beyond what other men had seen, when at the end of what appears to be the kingdom age, the angel of the Lord came to him, saying, "Come hither, I will show thee the bride, the Lamb's wife. And he carried me away in the spirit to a great and high mountain, and showed me that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God, having the glory of God: and her light was like unto a stone most precious, even like a jasper stone, clear as crystal; and had a wall great and high, and had twelve gates, and at the gates twelve angels, and names written thereon, which are the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel." Rev. 21:9-12 We will not quote the entire beautiful passage here, but every reader should spend much time feasting his soul on the magnificence there displayed. The importance of the bride in relation to the whole plan of God cannot possibly be overestimated. She is the city of the Lord, the heavenly Jerusalem. It is not until her fullness is complete and she is joined in marriage to the Christ body of sons that the mystery of God is complete. Adam and Eve in the beginning were one person before they were separated to become male and female. In the fullness of times, the eighth day of new beginnings, the Christ and the bride will be one new Adam the fullness, the completeness of Him who filleth all in all.

It is not until the bride and groom have been united (I thought to say re-united) that the majesty and power of the restoration of all things begins in all its marvelous fullness. Only then do we read that the nations all nations that have never known the true God bring their glory and honor in and enter in through the gates of the city to partake of the tree of life and the water of life, Rev. 21:22 to 22:5, a program that will progress and never cease until all the groaning creation of all ages has been delivered.

Having beheld these wonders in spirit, let us investigate further the truth concerning the tree of life, not as it stood in Eden's lovely garden at the beginning. No, not even as it was promised when our Lord said, "I am the vine, ye are the branches," and spoke of the fruit borne by every son of God who abides in Him; nor even as that tree which is the body of Christ, whose branches flourish and produce the fruit of love, joy, peace, longsuffering, goodness, gentleness, faith, meekness and temperance. Glorious as all this is, its magnificence rises with the revelation of those things God hath prepared for all who love Him. Thus it is that the beloved John continued his revelation as the angel showed him concerning the New Jerusalem bride. "And he showed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb. In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations. And there shall be no more curse: but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it; and His servants shall serve Him. And they shall see His face; and His name shall be in their foreheads.” Rev. 22:1-4

The apostle Paul named nine manner of fruits developing and growing from the Holy Spirit in the believer, but when John saw this tree, which is Christ in all His completeness, the bridegroom and the bride united as the last Adam, he saw it bearing twelve manner of fruits and the leaves of the tree for the healing of the nations - all nations from all ages, every kindred, every tongue and every people.

Only with the mind of the Spirit may we imagine such a world, yea, such a universe, where from the very throne of the Most High Himself flows a river of living water to bring the life of God to all who partake of it; and I know that that all in truth means all. There will be no exception, for every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess that Jesus Christ is Lord as they bow to drink of its waters of eternal life. Only with the mind of the Holy Spirit can one even begin to imagine what the world will then be when in the supernal fullness of times all the world rests in tranquility and peace beneath the holy and benign government of Him whose very name is Wonderful, Counselor, the Mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of peace; and of His government and peace there shall be no end.

As we look upon the sad earth today, it is plain for any eye to see that, flowing from the corrupt mind of every government on earth, taught in schools and propagated on every hand, we find the evil fruit of death manifesting itself in adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings and such like. Everywhere on every continent mankind is being overwhelmed by its evil until the earth is filled with violence and the thoughts and imaginations of men's hearts are only evil continually.

In the midst of all these abominations, these works of the flesh flowing as a river of filth from the corrupt heart of man, the Father in heaven has been preparing His tree of life. Sooner, far sooner than we think or imagine - I trust before the end of this century, which will end the sixth day of man's labor - we shall see that kingdom of God established in which only righteousness is known and a world governed by the twelve manner of fruits of the tree of life, love, joy, peace, longsuffering, goodness, gentleness, faithfulness, meekness and temperance, and to these I make bold to add these three: wisdom, understanding and the fear of the Lord.

The kingdom of God will be a glorious kingdom, a kingdom which "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath entered into the heart of man." Yet beyond it lies a far greater age, the age called the fullness of times, whereof our brother Paul faithfully stated, "Having made known unto us the mystery of His will, according to His good pleasure which He hath purposed in Himself: that in the dispensation of the fullness of times He might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven and which are in earth; even in Him." Eph. 1:9-10. More forceful still is the translation by Weymouth. "And this is in harmony with God's merciful purpose for the government of the world when the times are ripe for it - the purpose which He has cherished in His own mind of restoring the whole creation to find its one Head in Christ; yes, things in heaven and things on earth, to find their one Head in Him."

In that age of the ages, the fullness of times, the same tree of life, lifted to a still higher order - dare we believe to immortality and eternal life - first the world and then the universe will be brought under the order of orders, the tree of life that bears the twelve manner of fruits, whose leaves are for the healing of the nations. At present I do not know what those leaves represent, but I do know that there will be no more curse, and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying; neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things have passed away. Rev. 21:4 Soon, oh soon, will the new tree of life, more glorious far than any words of men or angels could describe, bloom on both sides of the river of life, Rev. 21:2, in that heaven blest land of the New Jerusalem bride of Christ.

In closing the revelation of these wonders, let us bow our blood-washed hearts, our pure minds and our adoring spirits to this benediction:
"I always beseech the God of our Lord Jesus Christ - the Father most glorious - to give you a spirit of wisdom and of insight into mysteries through knowledge of Him, the eyes of your heart being enlightened so that you may know what is the hope which His call to you inspires, what the wealth of the glory of His inheritance in the saints, and what the transcendent greatness of His power in us believers as seen in the working of His infinite might when He displayed it in Christ by raising Him from the dead, and seating Him at His own right hand in the heavenly realms, high above all other government and authority and power and dominion, and every title of sovereignty used either in this age or in the age to come. God has put all things under His feet, and has appointed Him universal and supreme Head of the church, which is His body, the completeness of Him who everywhere fills the universe with Himself." Eph. 1:17-23 Weymouth

This is the glory, the honor, the immortality and eternal life for which we earnestly look and seek. Amen and Amen.

CHAPTER NINE
CONCLUSION

As time rushes on with ever increasing speed and we see the few remaining years of the twentieth century slipping away as sands in the hourglass of a dying millennium, there has come within the hearts of millions the knowledge that not only is a century or a millennium passing away but the Lord is drawing the shades of night on an entire dispensation as well. We are now seeing as never before in this dispensation the awesome fulfillment of the words of our Lord Jesus, the prophets and the apostles. Their prophetic utterances are coming to pass on every hand, warning mankind that all things to be fulfilled before the kingdom of God should come have now been fulfilled, and only those things remain that would urge the saints to prepare themselves for the appearing of the great Emancipator, Deliverer and Saviour - our Lord Jesus Christ.

The prophetic mysteries spoken by the prophets are unfolding before our eyes. The parallel of the days of Noah, of which Jesus faithfully warned, is seen in every nation, on every street corner and in countless millions of homes. Of those days of wickedness before the flood we read in the word of truth that, "God saw the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually." Gen. 6:5 And again, "The earth was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence. And God looked upon the earth, and, behold, it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth. And God said unto Noah, The end of all flesh has come before Me; for the earth is filled with violence through them; and, behold, I will destroy them with the earth." Gen. 6:11-13

May I here point out the root cause of much of today's evil? Have you noticed with concern the statement at the beginning of the sixth chapter of Genesis? Consider it with care, for these words without doubt set the stage for much of the evil that was to follow. Adam, we are told, was the son of God. Luke 3:38 He was of the God family and so also were his descendants. Thus we are told that, "the sons of God (the Adamites) saw the daughters of men that they were fair (often extremely beautiful); and they took them wives of all which they chose." Gen. 6:2 The result of this evil union, this flagrantly defiant transgression of the commandment of God, was that there were "giants in the earth", which became mighty men and men of renown. This fourth verse is followed immediately by the words, "And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth." These abhorrent and flagrant transgressions of God's command that kind should produce or be after his kind is everywhere manifest in the earth today as nations hasten to defile themselves and God's command by "going after strange flesh." The present result of this great transgression is exactly the same as it was then. The earth is filled with violence and the thoughts and imaginations of men's hearts are only evil continually.

Any young man or young woman, whether white or black, yellow or brown, who may be considering such a transgression of the commandment of God should turn from his evil thought in repentance, lest he find himself in defiance of His creator and be destroyed as these giants of old also were. The mingling of the seed of God with the seed of men is just as damaging to one race as it is to the other, because it is a transgression of the written instruction of God; but let both rather be preserved according to the unalterable will of the Lord. My point, however, is that all these evils are with us as Jesus said they would be, and there are few that be saved.
We need not here, I am sure, enlarge upon the vileness of Sodom, of which our Lord declared, "As it was in the days of Lot (in Sodom)"; so should it be when the Son of man comes. The evil of sodomy, punishable in God's law by death, now spreads its specter of filth over every land. Sodomy, instead of being pictured for the gross evil that it is, is now touted as "a way of life," but God's word shows it to be a way of death, spawning depraved minds and loathsome diseases among mankind to bring upon the world swift and terrible destruction. Reading the words of Paul in his second epistle to Timothy, Chapter 3, we see nothing whatever of the rampant sin portrayed there not evident in these last days of the age.

This book, Glory, Honor, Immortality and Eternal Life, is written for the eyes and hearts of those who seek such unspeakable glory. It is for those who, like Enoch and Noah, seek God and His immutable promises while yet dwelling in the midst of a corrupt, hell-bent people who seek all that is inglorious, all that is corrupt, and that which is mortal and pertains to death rather than eternal life. I have emphasized particularly glory and honor realizing, as we should, that these two priceless promises are close at hand and for our immediate future. Little is written here of immortality and eternal life, knowing that these most excellent glories may be reserved for that blessed age, the fullness of times. For the present at least immortality is the possession of our Elder Brother, the Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ, "who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto." 1 Tim. 6:16

Within these pages I have spoken freely of the garden of the Lord, which we, the saints of the Lord, surely are, and of the tree of life, which we, the true body of Christ are becoming, the tree from which all creation will find immortality and eternal life at last. I earnestly exhort every reader to read and re-read these Treasures of Truth, because each time you read them you will discover new truth unseen and unnoticed in your first reading. Many people have testified to the truth of this statement. We give glory to God alone for His Spirit of inspiration.

Let us then read and let us earnestly and selflessly seek for glory, honor, and immortality, eternal life, "in all things approving ourselves as the ministers of God, in much patience, in afflictions, in necessities, in distresses, in stripes, in imprisonments, in tumults, in labors, in watchings, in fastings; by pureness, by knowledge, by longsuffering, by kindness, by the Holy Ghost, by love unfeigned, by the word of truth, by the power of God, by the armor of righteousness on the right hand and on the left, by honor and dishonor, by evil report and good report: as deceivers, and yet true; as unknown, and yet well known; as dying, and, behold, we live; as chastened, and not killed; as sorrowful, yet always rejoicing; as poor, yet making many rich; as having nothing, and yet possessing all things." 2 Cor. 6:4-10
