For the past two thousand years the anti-type of that wilderness tabernacle has been in the process of formation. That blessed anti-type is the true church and the true church is the mystical body of Christ. Over against it in outer darkness stands that great, fraudulent deceiver and interloper, Mystery Babylon the great, mother of harlots and abominations of the earth. No glory cloud overshadows her and no fiery pillar enlightens her. Her plans and purposes are the schemes and ambitions of men of this world, who like Nadab and Abihu offer strange fire upon their altars and erect calves of gold to be their gods. From such turn away! There is a glory that excelleth. There is a "more excellent glory." It is a "treasure in earthen vessels." It is the glory of God's presence. It is not manifest among enormous crowds, fine furnishings and international programs. It is manifest only by the presence of the Holy Spirit in God's blessed saints. They and they alone are the habitation of God through the Spirit. Paul so wisely said, "Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God; and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief corner stone; in whom all the building, fitly framed together, growth into a holy temple in the Lord: in whom we also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit." Eph. 2:19-22.

From the beautiful phrases of Weymouth's translation of this passage, we have these illuminating words of glory and beauty. "You are a building which has been reared on the foundation of the apostles and prophets, the cornerstone being Jesus Christ Himself, in union with whom the whole fabric, truly bonded together, is rising so as to form a holy sanctuary in the Lord: in whom you also are being built up together to become a fixed abode for God through the Spirit." It was this living tabernacle, this dwelling place of God, this spiritual habitation, the body of Christ, which was so magnificently portrayed in every minute detail of the typical tabernacle in the wilderness. Over that tabernacle abode the cloud and fire of God's glory and within the holy of holies was the shekinah, which was the glory of God's presence. In these blessed days so long ago God walked among his people. The glory of God hovered continually over a figurative tabernacle. When Jesus came, He walked with them. As John once said, "We beheld His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth." But the time came when that heavenly glory, which is Jesus Christ Himself, came to dwell, not merely with them, but in them, for thus has the Spirit spoken, saying, "I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be My people." 2 Cor. 6:16.

To separate or disassociate God from His glory is an impossibility, for said Christ, "The glory which Thou gavest Me I have given them; that they may be one, even as We are one." John 17:22. Hours of prayer, study and meditation could be spent on the seventeenth chapter of John just receiving instruction from the things Jesus said about the glory of God. One manifestation of Christ's glory is seen in this statement: "I have manifested Thy name unto the men which Thou gavest Me out of the world; Thine they were, and Thou gavest them Me; and they have kept Thy word. Now they have known that all things whatsoever Thou hast given Me are of Thee. For I have given unto them the words which Thou gavest Me; and they have received them, and have known surely that I came out from Thee, and they have believed that Thou didnst send Me." John 17:6-8. It should not be difficult for a spiritual mind to see how the glory of God is manifested here in spiritual revelation and understanding. It was the glory of the presence of the Holy Spirit dwelling in the Saviour that made men see that Jesus was indeed God's Christ and that the words He spoke were the words of God. These words they received of Him and believed that He came forth from the Father.

What revealing light of revelation was it that made Philip say to his brother Nathaniel, "We have found Him of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph?" John 1:45. It was the glory of God. Why did Andrew go seeking his brother Peter and upon finding him say with confident assurance, "We have found the Messiah"! Why did Nathaniel, upon hearing the simplest statement from the lips of Jesus, say with evident amazement, "Thou art the Son of God; Thou art the King of Israel"? Verse 49.
Surely it was no persuasive arguments from Jesus, for He has simply inferred that He knew who Nathaniel was. No, it was something far more convincing than that. It was the glory of God's presence that revealed Him as Lord and King. And what shall we say of the disciples of Emmaus, whose hearts burned within them as Jesus opened the scripture to them? Was it not that same glory that unveiled Him and made them know Him? And what of the sorrowing Thomas, who like a bruised reed and smoking flax, was bowed down with his doubts and fears? Why did he suddenly cry out in amazement, My Lord and My God? It was nothing less than the revealing glory that manifested Christ to them all. And shall we not say the same of Paul, who in the bitterness and hate of his deluded heart desired nothing so much as to exterminate the very name of Jesus Christ from the earth? It was when the light of glory shone upon him that he fell helplessly to the earth even as the mob with lanterns and torches had done in Gethsemane. Lying impotent upon the ground, he heard a voice speaking to him and saying, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me?" And Saul, trembling and afraid before the glory of the light (Acts 22:11), dared not asked, "Who are you," but cried instead, "Who art Thou, Lord?" He knew beyond any doubt that the voice he heard was not the voice of a man but of the Lord. In later years, when Paul stood in Jerusalem before that unruly multitude who lusted for his blood, he gave testimony of his dramatic conversion and rehearsed the story of his meeting with Christ on the Damascus road in these words: "And it came to pass, that, as I made my journey, and was come nigh unto Damascus about noon, suddenly there shone from heaven a great light round about me. And I fell unto the ground, and heard a voice saying unto me, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me? and I answered, Who art Thou, Lord? and He said unto me, I am Jesus of Nazareth, whom thou persecutest. And they that were with me saw indeed the light, and were afraid; but they heard not the voice of Him that spake to me. And I said, What shall I do, Lord? And the Lord said unto me, Arise, and go into Damascus; and there it shall be told thee of all things which are appointed for thee to do. And when I could not see for the glory of that light, being led by the hand of them that were with me, I came into Damascus," Acts 22:6-11.

It was the glory of God that shone into the darkened mind of Saul, revealing to him that Jesus was the Christ. This was the man who had been brought up at the feet of the learned Gamaliel. Well did Saul know what it was to pore for hours over ancient manuscripts. He knew the scriptures as few men have known them, but, alas, the letter of the word alone could not reveal that Jesus was the Christ who was to come. But, when the glory light shone into the dark recesses of his heart, then he knew that it was of Christ the scriptures had spoken, "and straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues, that He is the Son of God... And Saul increased the more in strength, and confounded the Jews which dwelt at Damascus, proving that this is very Christ." Acts 9:20, 22.

It is not education that men need today. It is not more Bible Schools and religious training that is required; neither need we more preachers or more preaching to enlighten the mind. The burning need for all mankind is a manifestation of the glory of God. The manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal and will do more in one second to snap the chains of doubt and unbelief than all the preaching and learning of a lifetime. It is the revelation of the Spirit that opens the eyes of the blind. It is the glory of God that unfolds the mystery, "for God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." 2 Cor. 4:6.

The light that shone in the holiest of all behind the tabernacle curtains of blue and purple and scarlet and fine twined linen, laced with threads of gold and faces of cherubim, was not the light of a penny candle nor the rays of the sevenfold candlestick, nor even the radiance of the sun. It was the shekinah, the light of the Son, the glory light of God's majesty and presence. When our blessed Lord died on the cross and His flesh was rent in death, in that awful moment in which He cried, "It is finished," and gave up the ghost, the typical veil in the temple was rent in twain from top to bottom. For centuries the veil of the flesh had hidden God's glory, the shekinah, from mankind, but henceforth by the blood of Jesus, through the veil of His own flesh, the holiest of all stands open wide that all who believe may enter in. By the rending of His own flesh on Calvary every veil and hindering influence has been removed. "Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which He hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, His flesh... let us draw near..." Heb. 10:19-22.

Once the blessed Christ of glory
Was veiled off from human view;

TREASURES OF TRUTH, Volume 16, Beholding the More Excellent Glory [George R. Hawtin] ~ BOOK 6
But through suffering death and sorrow
He has rent the veil in two.
O, behold the Man of sorrows!
O, behold Him in plain view!
There He stands, the mighty conqueror,
Since He rent the veil in two.

Now, lest in our investigation of truth we should seem to miss the reality itself, we shall state clearly here that Jesus Christ, the Son of God, is the glory of God and the glory of the Father. I do not think that any clearer statement could be made than that which the Holy Spirit Himself has made in these words: "The Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, and we beheld His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth." John 1:14. All the wonderful manifestations of the glory of God, portrayed throughout the Old Testament and the New, find their eternal satisfaction in Jesus Christ our Lord. All the heavenly voices, the mighty thunderings, the glowing pillars of fire and the luminous clouds of glory find their fulfillment in Him. The voice heard in the Garden of Eden was nothing less than Christ, the Word of God. The thunderings, the lightnings, the flame and smoke of Mt. Sinai were the same voice that said, "Peace, be still," and "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." The fire of the pillar was the light of the world, the glory light that emanated from His presence. It was the radiant aura that is identical with the nature of that from which it emanates.

The glory of the cloud that overshadowed the tabernacle is the glory that overshadows us. The shekinah, that once filled the Holy of Holies in the long ago, is the light of Christ that now fills the holy of holies which we are. I know we can neither see nor understand as we often feel we should, but there is a great truth which we must all learn and the sooner we grasp it the sooner we will cease from our fleshy strivings and enter into the rest of our Lord. We must learn that God no longer dwells in a wilderness tabernacle or in temples made with hands. Glorious as were those types and shadows, they were merely frail reflections of a more glorious "house not made with hands" which was to come. Our Father no longer dwells in a temple in Jerusalem made by the art and Wisdom of Solomon or the cunning workmanship of skilled artisans. His temple henceforth is the living temple of His body, which temple are we. The burning truth the Holy Spirit would now reveal is that "ye are the temple of God, and the Spirit of God dwelleth in you." To the elect saints of the church age Paul dared to say, "Now ye are the body of Christ and members in particular." The saints are the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. They are the Father's house of many mansions. The body of Christ is made of living stones, which stones they are. This is the true temple. This is "My Father's house". From the radiant glory of its many mansions He will govern the world in ages to come, restoring and reconciling all things unto Himself.

Now let us learn a lesson from the types and shadows of old. We read of no glory cloud that overshadowed the tabernacle while Moses was in the process of building it. It was not until the tabernacle was complete in every detail and every item of furniture was secure in its place that the glory of God came to rest upon it. That wilderness tabernacle, built so long ago according to the exact pattern of God, was a typical tabernacle. Its intricate workmanship was in every detail symbolic of the true body of Christ, which the Holy Spirit has been forming as a living temple to become the fullness of God's Christ.

We have stated that it was not until the tabernacle was complete in every detail that the cloud of God's glory moved over it and filled it with such glory and power that even Moses, the man who had experienced the awesome glory of Sinai, was not able to enter into it. So also it will be with the mystical body of Christ. It will not be filled with the fullness of the glory of the Lord until it is complete in every detail. It was little more than thirty years ago that the truth concerning the body of Christ began to be revealed and God's people commenced to be seriously concerned about it. Then true to his Satanic cunning and as we might have expected when this truth began to be revealed, every Tom, Dick and Harry started jumping on what they imagined was a Hallelujah band wagon and, without revelation of the truth, started preaching about the body, the body. Everywhere, it seemed, little groups could be found who imagined that they were the body; they were sons of God; they had all the gifts and ministries, but for the most part scarcely any of them had even the remotest idea of what the body of Christ really is or what the term expresses. Just as the phrase born again has been horribly mutilated, and its meaning debased since tens of thousands of unregenerates have falsely claimed to be born again, so also the glorious message of the body of Christ has been dragged in the mire of misunderstanding and its
When Jehovah gave Moses instructions for the building of the tabernacle, with those instructions He also gave him a man, Bezaleel by name, the son of Uri of the tribe of Judah, a man gifted and endowed by God to carry out the intricate work. Reading about this man Bezaleel, I have often marveled. Take heed to what the Lord said about him. "And I have filled him with the Spirit of God, in wisdom, and in understanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship, to devise cunning works, to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass, and in cutting of stones, to set them, and in carving of timber, to work in all manner of workmanship. And I, behold, I have given with him Aholiab, the son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan: and in the hearts of all that are wise hearted I have put wisdom, that they may make all that I have commanded thee." Exod. 31:1-6.

If you read the next five verses of this chapter, you will read about the ark of the testimony, the table of shewbread, the altar of incense and the altar of burnt offering. You will read about the garments of beauty and glory to be worn by the priests, every item of which has its antitype in the body of Christ. If you will study Exodus, chapters 35 and 36, you will read of the bountiful gifts of the people in gold and silver and brass and stones and linen, goat's hair and oil, until Moses had more than enough for all the building and found it necessary to restrain their cheerful giving.

Finally, when every item in the tabernacle was complete, every board covered with gold, every silver socket in its place, the altars ready, the curtains made, the ram skins dyed red and the bars covered with gold, the ark of the covenant completed and the mercy seat placed on its top, the golden candlestick gleaming and filled with oil for the lighting, the altar of incense with the incense prepared, the holy vessels filled with the holy anointing oil and the priestly garments of glory and beauty at hand — then the Lord said unto Moses: "On the first day of the first month shalt thou set up the tabernacle of the tent of the congregation." Exod. 40:1-2. "Thus did Moses: according to all that the Lord commanded him, so did he. And it came to pass in the first month of the second year, on the first day of the month that the tabernacle was reared up. And Moses reared up the tabernacle, and fastened his sockets, and set up the boards thereof and reared up his pillars. And he spread abroad the tent over the tabernacle, and put the covering of the tent above upon it; as the Lord commanded Moses. And he took and put the testimony into the ark, and set the staves on the ark, and put the mercy seat above upon the ark: and he brought the ark into the tabernacle, and set up the veil of the covering, and covered the ark of the testimony; as the Lord commanded Moses. And he put the table in the tent of the congregation, upon the side of the tabernacle northward, without the veil. And he set the bread in order upon it before the Lord; as the Lord had commanded Moses. And he put the candlestick in the tent of the congregation, over against the table, on the side of the tabernacle southward. And he lighted the lamps before the Lord; as the Lord commanded Moses. And he put the golden altar in the tent of the congregation before the veil: and he burnt sweet incense thereon; as the Lord commanded Moses. And he set up the hanging at the door of the tabernacle. And he put the altar of burnt-offering by the door of the tabernacle of the tent of the congregation, and he offered upon it the burnt-offering and the meat-offering; as the Lord commanded Moses. And he set the laver between the tent of the congregation and the altar, and put water there, to wash withal. And Moses and Aaron and his sons washed their hands and their feet thereat: when they went into the tent of the congregation, and when they came near unto the altar, they washed; as the Lord commanded Moses. And he reared up the court round about the tabernacle and the altar, and set up the hanging of the court gate. So Moses finished the work." Verses 16-33.

And now at last, after months of building and devoutly following the intricate instructions of the Almighty, when every furnishing is finished and every feature is complete in the minutest detail, we have these satisfying and wonder filled words: "Then a cloud covered the tent of the congregation, and the glory of the Lord filled the tabernacle. And Moses was not able to enter into the tent of the congregation, because the cloud abode meaning defiled by unenlightened men who eagerly seize upon any message that seems to be exciting and will gather a crowd. Whether or not the Spirit has revealed the truth to their hearts is of no concern. Because so many are preaching this truth without any understanding at all, they vainly imagine that right now the body of Christ should be fully functional with every ministry fully manifest, but let me tell you this: The body of Christ is as yet little more than an embryo. It has not yet come forth from the womb. Even Jesus needed to grow in wisdom and stature and/over with God and man before the day of His manifestation. The hour of the manifestation of the Head of the body of Christ came at the marriage feast at Cana where, after the water was turned to wine, this statement is plainly made: "This beginning of miracles did Jesus, and manifested forth His glory; and His disciples believed on Him." John 2:11.

thereon, and the glory of the Lord filled the tabernacle." And when the cloud was taken up from over the (tabernacle, the children of Israel went onward in all their journeys: but if the cloud were not taken up, then they journeyed not till the day that it was taken up. For the cloud of the Lord was upon the tabernacle by day, and fire was on it by night, in the sight of all the house of Israel, throughout all their journeys." Verse 34-38. Note:
How good and wise it would have been if God's people had pulled up stakes and moved on when the glory lifted instead of trying to "get back where they once were" or to resort to human efforts as all the harlot denominations are doing!

I know and am sure that this wilderness tabernacle, of which the Bible speaks in such intricate detail, is a typical representation of the mystical body of Christ, of which we are a living part. Nothing else in all scripture so adequately and marvelously displays the ministries, the gifts, the graces, the fruits, the door, the sacrifices, the communion and the glory of the body of Christ as does the tabernacle. Every detail the apostles taught concerning the mystical body of Christ is clearly displayed in the tabernacle in the wilderness.

Let the fact be imprinted indelibly on our minds that it was not until the tabernacle was complete in every detail and set up according to the command of God that the pillar of cloud and fire moved over it and the glory of the Lord filled it so that even Moses could not enter it. Up to that day wise master builders and gifted men had been diligently preparing its mysterious furnishings. Bezaleel and Aholiab had been separated and filled with wisdom for the task and other skilled craftsmen, deft and ingenious, had worked with them, but when all was complete, the glory of God moved in and filled it. Thenceforth this tabernacle became the very seat of God's government and reign in Israel. There is coming a day, and that right soon, when every last detail of the body of Christ will be complete. Every son will be prepared for manifestation. A special gift will be in every saint.
Garments of glory and beauty will adorn every member. Wisdom and understanding, counsel and might will fill every mind, and, when all is in readiness, "The Lord, whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to His temple, even the messenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in: behold, He shall come, saith the Lord of hosts." Mal. 3:1.

That will be the day of the "latter rain." Christ first coming was the "former rain." Glorious as it was, it was given only moderately. When Jesus of Nazareth appeared, Christ the Head of the body was manifested. He came as the rain, the early rain, and the former rain. Marvelous was His ministry and the anointed ministry of His apostles, but said He, "He that believeth on Me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do: because I go unto My Father." And why was it important that He should go to the Father? He went that He might send the Holy Spirit upon them, but He also said, "I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto Myself." The place He is preparing is in the body of Christ, the habitation of God through the Spirit. The body is a body of sons. He is the first born of many brothers, the oldest of His household. The Christ body is undoubtedly the Father's house.

In the same breath in which He says, "I go," He also says, "I will come again." His second coming will be the time of the latter rain. It will be when the tabernacle of His body is complete. Then shall the glory of the Lord fill the house. Then there will be an outpouring of the Holy Ghost such as never was. The glory of the former rain at Pentecost was marvelous beyond human description, but the manifestation of God's glory that will appear when "My Father's house", the body of Christ, the tabernacle of God, the temple of the Lord, the house not made with hands is complete will pale the light of the noonday sun and make to seem insignificant the greatest and most glorious things of the past. Truly the prophet Haggai said in the long ago, "The glory of this latter house shall be greater than of the former, saith the Lord of hosts." Hag. 2:9.

I am not predicting that a world wide revival will take place before the coming of Christ. I could be wrong, but I do not believe we will see any such revival in this age. I am not speaking of a latter rain, which will take place before the coming of Christ. I believe the latter rain is the coming of Christ. Just as the former rain was given moderately following the coming of Jesus and His resurrection from the dead, so the latter rain will be given abundantly at the second coming of Jesus and the resurrection of His in-Christed saints. Just as the glory filled the typical tabernacle in the long ago when all was complete, so will the glory fill the completed tabernacle, the body of Christ resurrected from the dead, when He comes.

What do the words of Jesus mean to you, saint of God, which He spoke concerning His glory, saying, "When the Son of man shall come in His glory, and all the holy angels with Him, then shall He sit upon the throne of His glory? Matt. 25:31. Was not the tabernacle, filled with His glory, the seat of His government in Israel? Dare we not believe that the throne of His glory will be this glory filled temple of His body, the house of living stones not made with hands? Listen to Jesus as He describes this coming to His temple. "Then shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory." Luke 21:27. "And He shall send His angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and the shall gather together His elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." Matt. 24:31. These elect are they of whom Peter spoke, saying, "Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ." 1 Peter 1:2. These are the elect of all ages, members in particular of the "house not made with hands." God's glory shall fill that living temple which they are. The outpouring of His Spirit that will follow will be the latter rain in which millions - perhaps billions - will come to the knowledge of Christ, for thus it is written: "Behold, thou shall call a nation that thou knowest not, and nations that knew not thee shall run unto thee because of the Lord thy God, and for the Holy One of Israel; for He hath glorified thee." Isa. 55:5. Hallelujah! There is a sound of abundance of rain! "Be glad then, ye children of Zion, and rejoice in the Lord your God: for He hath given you the former rain moderately, and He will cause to come down for you the rain, the former rain and the latter rain in the first month." Joel 2:23. It is the second coming of Christ. It is the resurrection of the in-Christed. It is the glory of the Lord. "The floors shall be full of wheat, and the vats shall overflow with wine and oil." Joel 2:24.

Hear further the blessed words of Jesus as He speaks of the throne of His glory. "Then answered Peter and said unto Him, Behold, we have forsaken all, and followed Thee; what shall we have therefore? And Jesus said unto them, Verily I say unto you, that ye which have followed Me, in the regeneration (the kingdom) when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of His glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." Matt 19:27-28. Now I know that someone will wonder why Jesus said, "judging the twelve tribes of Israel." I know of only one answer to that question. Almost four thousand years ago the Lord selected Abraham from among the hosts of mankind. With Abraham an everlasting covenant was made in which God, who cannot lie, swears, saying, "I will make of thee a great nation." And again, "In thee shall all families of the earth be blessed." Gen. 12:2-3. Certainly it is possible for any man of any race upon the face of the earth to come to Christ by faith and to become a son of God. John 1:12. We need not doubt that in the least. But the truth appears indisputable that the divine intention in calling Abraham was first, that Jesus Christ, according to the flesh, was to come through his seed. That fact is definite and absolute. Secondly, it is evident, as we shall show, that the vast majority of the sons of God would also come of the seed of Israel according to the flesh, and, finally, the bride of Christ, the New Jerusalem, is in every sense of the twelve tribes of Israel.

It is not at all my intention to investigate this matter in detail here, but at times I feel a spirit of kinship with the apostle Paul when in an agony of earnestness, which seemed almost to reach the point of despair, he uttered these terribly painful but enlightening words of revelation concerning Israel after the flesh. I beg you to meditate sincerely on what he says and share with him some of the ache and pain he felt in his heart when he wrote these words: "I say the truth in Christ, I lie not, my conscience also bearing me witness in the Holy Ghost, that I have great heaviness and continual sorrow in my heart. For I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh: for He hath given you the former rain moderately, and He will cause to come down for you the rain, the former rain and the latter rain in the first month." Gen. 12:2-3. Certainly it is possible for any man of any race upon the face of the earth to come to Christ by faith and to become a son of God. John 1:12. We need not doubt that in the least. But the truth appears indisputable that the divine intention in calling Abraham was first, that Jesus Christ, according to the flesh, was to come through his seed. That fact is definite and absolute. Secondly, it is evident, as we shall show, that the vast majority of the sons of God would also come of the seed of Israel according to the flesh, and, finally, the bride of Christ, the New Jerusalem, is in every sense of the twelve tribes of Israel.

This in my opinion is one of the most profound and awe-inspiring statements of all scripture, and yet Christians are saying, "If we are Israelites, what difference does it make?" Well, if we are to understand from this passage what Paul intended us to understand, then what he said was this: To them pertaineth the adoption. Adoption means mature sonship. Since sonship is the hope of all creation and the whole creation groans for it and we also ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for adoption, which means not only full sonship but full redemption, even the redemption of our bodies, is it not understandable that Paul was greatly burdened for the people to whom adoption pertained? He was in such an agony that they might see the truth of it that he declared in desperation, "I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh."
Let us heed further as Paul continues. To them pertains the glory. This is the glory of which we have been speaking. Wonderful as is this promised glory, no one realizes better than I that we have learned practically nothing as yet when we consider the vast array of scriptures dealing with this wonderful truth that lie untouched and uninvestigated. When Jesus came to the manger of Bethlehem, even the angels sang with heavenly harmony, "Glory to God in the highest!" When Jesus comes again, He will come with power and great glory. He will rule from a throne of glory. Matt. 25:31. Yet Paul says, "To them (Israel) pertains the glory," first the glory of Christ; second, the glory of the body of Christ, and lastly, the glory of the New Jerusalem, which is the bride of Christ, the fullness and completeness of Him who everywhere fills the universe with Himself.

It is not for us to question why it was that God in His eternal wisdom chose the seed of Abraham to this glory. See Isa. 44:1-3. Has not the potter power over the clay? Did not God choose Pharaoh for an ignoble task as the scripture says: "Even for this same purpose have I raised thee up, that I might shew My power in thee, and that My name might be declared throughout all the earth?" Rom. 9:17. Has He not power to make one vessel to honor and another to dishonor as it pleases Him? Has He not said the first shall be last and the last shall be first? Thus has God said, "To them pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises." Dare we dispute His wisdom in these things? Had He chosen the seed of Pharaoh to bring the Christ into the world, it would have been for us to accept it, and had God made His covenant with Pharaoh, who could dispute or gainsay His wisdom?

We have already stated that the first coming of Jesus Christ to the earth and the marvelous outpouring of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost that followed His ascension into heaven was the former rain, spoken of by Joel the prophet as his spirit rejoiced in these prophetic words: "Be glad then, ye children of Zion, and rejoice in the Lord your God: for He hath given you the former rain moderately, and He will cause to come down for you the rain, the former rain, and the latter rain in the first month." Joel 2:23. Palestine has its rainy season and its dry season. During the dry season the brooks dry up and the first rains are always welcome. The early rain meant the autumn rain. Deut. 11:14. The latter rain was the spring rain and was for the maturing of the crops. Prov. 16:15.

When John the Baptist began to introduce the people to Jesus Christ, he made this tremendous assertion: "I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance: but He that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear: He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire." Matt. 3:11. Jesus Himself uttered profound statements concerning the coming outpouring of the Holy Spirit and the glory of His ministry both in the saints and in the world. On the very day in which He was taken up into heaven He gave this important message to the assembled disciples, who watched Him ascend: "Behold, I send the promise of My Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high. And He led them out as far as to Bethany, and He lifted up His hands, and blessed them. And it came to pass, while He blessed them, He was parted from them, and carried up into heaven." Luke 24:49-51.

It is of great significance that Luke, when writing to Theophilus concerning the ascension of Jesus, gives witness with these enlightening words: "When they therefore were come together, they asked of Him, saying, Lord, wilt Thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel? And He said unto them, It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in His own power. But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto Me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth. And when He had spoken these things, while they beheld, He was taken up: and a cloud received Him out of their sight. And while they looked steadfastly toward heaven as He went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel; which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen Him go into heaven." Acts 1:6-11.

Many outstanding things are noticeable in this wonderful account of Christ's ascension into heaven. First was the definite promise of the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, which, glorious as it proved to be, was the former rain moderately. Secondly, it is of special importance that, as He ascended, a cloud received Him out of their sight. That cloud was no ordinary cloud. It was a cloud of glory. Thirdly, when Jesus returns to the earth, it is promised that He will come as He went away - in a cloud of glory. Thus the scriptures have said, "Behold He cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see Him." Rev. 1:7. The first coming of Christ and the outpouring of the Holy Spirit that followed was the moderate former rain, but the second coming of Christ with power and great glory will be the latter rain, yea, the former rain and the latter rain in the first month as the prophet has clearly stated. “Then shall we know, if we follow on to know the Lord: His going forth is prepared as the morning; and He shall come unto us as the rain, as the latter and former rain unto the earth.” Hosea 6:3.

It is beyond the ability of any man to fully comprehend the far-reaching results of the outpouring of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost. I have no doctrinal point to prove nor theological axe to grind, but surely the blindest man must be aware of the unspeakable glory of the former rain that fell upon the waiting hosts at Pentecost. This mighty outpouring of the Holy Ghost was not only a real experience to those who received it, but a heavenly visitation that shook the entire earth as nothing either before it or since has ever done.

It is the custom of all mankind to give their friends and loved ones their most important messages just before they depart from them. Thus did our Lord Jesus as He departed from His disciples, saying, “Tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high.” This instruction the disciples followed, the number of the names of them being about one hundred and twenty. Acts 1:15. These all continued in prayer and supplication with the women, and Mary, the mother of Jesus, and with His brethren. Verse 14. “And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place. And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting. And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them. And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost and began to speak with other tongues (languages), as the Spirit gave them utterance. And there were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven. Now when this was noised abroad, the multitude came together, and were confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language. And they were amazed and marveled, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak Galileans? And how hear we every man in our tongue (language), wherein we were born?” Acts 2:1-8. Luke then made mention of many of the foreign languages which were spoken in the Spirit by these Galileans and were clearly understood by the Jews who had come from these far off countries to attend the Feast of Pentecost. Among the assembled multitudes were “Parthians, and Medes, and Elamites, and the dwellers in Mesopotamia, and in Judaea, and Cappadocia, in Pontus, and Asia, Phrygia, and Pamphylia, in Egypt, and in parts of Libya about Cyrene, and strangers of Rome, Jews and proselytes, Cretes and Arabians.” All these, being amazed at the phenomena, said, "We do hear them speak in our tongues (languages) the wonderful works of God."

Let there be no doubt in the mind of any man that the tongues spoken at Pentecost were real languages of real nations and that those languages, spoken as the Spirit gave utterance, were spoken by Galileans, who understood only that language spoken in Galilee. These Galileans were understood by men who had gathered from other nations all over the then known world. The speaking with tongues, or languages, at Pentecost was a miracle in the truest sense of the word. It was a miracle such as had never appeared before. It was a miracle of such caliber that no one could gainsay to deny it. It was the beginning of the restitution of all things, a restitution that will be complete when the former rain and the latter rain are outpoured together when Jesus comes again. At the tower of Babel the language was confounded so that no family understood what the other was saying, but at Pentecost, when the former rain was poured out moderately, this situation began to be reversed that all assembled understood clearly what was being spoken.

I do not in the least depreciate the worldwide outpouring of the Spirit which began in the year 1901, in which millions came to Christ and were transformed. Neither do I speak in derogatory terms of the speaking in tongues and mighty baptisms that accompanied it. I myself have been a glad partaker of its glory. I would not deny it in life or in death. Since the day the Spirit fell on me in a little shack on the Saskatchewan prairies when only my two brothers were present, I have seen hundreds, perhaps thousands, receive that blessed experience. Yet in my heart I know for certain that the glory we have seen is only a flickering shadow of that which fell on the saints at Pentecost when men, filled with the Holy Ghost, spoke in real languages and with mighty signs and wonders gave witness of the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. So great was that outpouring that by the end of the century one twentieth of the entire Roman Empire had been converted to Christ, and by the year 300 A.D. Christianity far exceeded paganism. Following Peter's sermon at Pentecost, three thousand souls were saved and the day following another five thousand were saved. In the days following multitudes both of men and women turned to the Lord. Mighty signs and wonders were done by all the apostles. By Paul's hand God wrought special miracles. The sick were brought and laid in the street that the shadow of Peter falling upon them might bring healing to their bodies. The glory of that former rain beggars Something happened to those saints at Pentecost that needs much more investigation than we have ability to give in this brief article, but let it be known that these people had been baptized with fire. Tongues of fire had rested upon them, burning up every trace of sin and carnal nature. I may be wrong, but I am persuaded that the Lord did for them at Pentecost in a moment of time that which other men must take a life time to attain. Their words were burning, flaming words of truth. Their miracles were on a par with the miracles of Jesus Christ. Their lives were radiant, shining suns, manifesting forth the glory of the Lord everywhere they went. Evil men killed them, but they could not resist the power and glory with which they spoke. The delinquent, bastard thing that in our day presumes to be Pentecost with its hippy music, its hard rock, its unsanctified lives, its love of money and pleasure, its worldly dress and careless talk is not even a shadow of that Pentecost of long ago; neither does this modern throng with its "food, fun and fellowship" bear any resemblance to the Pentecost that fell in 1901 and continued with diminishing glory for forty years.

Indescribable as was the glory of that first Pentecostal outpouring about the year 33 A.D., it was not the fullness of God's glory. It was the former rain, coming moderately upon the earth. It was the fulfillment of the type set forth in 2 Chronicles at the dedication of the temple when one hundred and twenty priests, sounding with trumpets, arrayed in white linen, having cymbals and psalteries and harps, stood at the east end of the altar, and it came even to pass, as the trumpeters and singers were as one, to make one sound to be heard in praising and thanking the Lord; and when they lifted up their voice with the trumpets and cymbals and instruments of music, and praised the Lord, saying, For He is good; for His mercy endureth forever: that then the house was filled with a cloud, even the house of the Lord; so the priests could not stand to minister by reason of the cloud; for the glory of the Lord had filled the house of God." 2 Chron. 5:13-14. The one hundred and twenty priests then were typical of the one hundred and twenty disciples of Acts 2:15. The praying and praising then was the praying and praising in the upper room. The glory that filled the typical temple of Solomon's day was the same glory that filled the living temple at Pentecost. Pentecost was the early rain given moderately, but it was glorious beyond description. In centuries past the Lord had filled temples made by human hands, but at Pentecost He was putting His Spirit in the hearts of men to form a temple not made with hands, a temple from which He will govern the world in the ages of glory yet to come.

Many preachers, alas, have spoken all manner of evil of that great former rain and Pentecostal outpouring of God's ineffable glory, but the things they say - may God forgive them - are said because they know not of what they speak. They are like unto men who, having never experienced regeneration, speak slightingly of the new birth. Natural men whose eyes are blind to natural things do not deny the existence of things they cannot see, but sadly and strangely those whose eyes are blind to spiritual things seem bent upon denying that such things exist. At the baptism of Jesus God in thunderous tones proclaimed for all mankind to hear, "This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Some hearing those words of life and truth believed, but others, whose ears were closed to heavenly things, said, "It thundered." The late Dr. Charles Price, having seen the fire when he was filled with the Holy Spirit, said, "Only those who have been in the upper room know what really happened there." And that is true. All advice or criticism from the lips of those who without an experience have only a theory is sounding brass and tinkling cymbal.

Glorious beyond description was that mighty outpouring of God's glory at Pentecost. No words of impassioned preacher or phrases of an eloquent orator can begin to describe its more excellent glory, but as highly as we may esteem the wonders of that heavenly visitation, it was only the former rain moderately. The latter rain is coming and compared to it the former rain was a flickering candle before the rays of a burning, shining light. It was a twinkling star in the night compared to the rays of the sun in his strength. The coming of Jesus Christ and the mighty outpouring of the Holy Spirit that followed His resurrection and ascension was the former rain, but never let the truth grow dim that this same Jesus, which was taken up from us into heaven, shall so come in like manner as they saw Him go. He will come with power and great glory. That will be the latter rain. At His coming the resurrection of the just, the in-Christed saints, will take place. Then will come the manifestation of the sons of God, for which all creation has groaned for six thousand years. Then the glory of the Lord will fill the living, completed temple of His body. His glory shall fill the earth. Then shall be fulfilled the words of the Saviour, "The works that I do shall ye do also, and greater works than these shall ye do." Oh, that men could see that He who spoke among the smoke and flames of Mt. Sinai is the same one who said, "Come unto Me, all ye that labor, and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Oh, that men might understand that the flaming, two-edged sword that proceeds out of His mouth at His second coming (Rev. 19:11-16) is the very same two-edged sword that pricked and cut to the heart at Pentecost, causing them to cry aloud, "Men and brethren, what must I do to be saved?"

Between the early and latter rain, there was a period of great dryness and dearth. The pools dried up and the brooks ceased to flow. It was the time when the grain was maturing. It is in that time of great dryness we now find ourselves. The brook has dried up as it did in the days of Elijah. The thousands of false prophets that fill the land are prophesying falsely. They are bound up in church tradition. They know not the purpose of God nor do they know the way of the Spirit. They leap on the altar and call on God to consume the sacrifice. They imagine there is strength in numbers and in much excitement, but while all their vain prophesying and activity is going on, God has His man in preparation in the house of the desolate widow. Somewhere among the worldly throng with its substitute religion He has His symbolic seven thousand unknowns who have not bowed the knee to the systems of Baal.

It was after Elijah was called out of the wilderness and after he had slain the prophets of Baal that he sent a message to Ahab, saying, "Get thee up, eat and drink; for there is a sound of abundance of rain... And it came to pass in the mean while, that the heaven was black with clouds and wind, and there was a great rain."

The wilderness journey is almost past. The dearth is almost over. The coming of the Lord in power and great glory is at hand. He shall come unto us as the early and the latter rain together. In that day the lame man shall leap as the hart, and the tongue of the dumb shall sing. The eyes of the blind shall be opened, the ears of the deaf unstop. The desert and the solitary place shall blossom as the rose. Men will learn war no more. It will be the time of the manifestation of the resurrected sons of God when the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea. Hab. 2:14.

BEHOLDING THE MORE EXCELLENT GLORY

PART TWO

"If any man think that he knoweth anything, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know. But if any man love God, the same is known of Him." 1 Cor. 8:2-3. This profound truth Paul imparted to the saints at Corinth that believers in ages to come might know that the open secret of spiritual understanding is a burning, fervent, and devout love for God.

Pitiful is the state of him who imagines himself to have reached some pinnacled apex of spiritual understanding, thinking himself to be an instructor with a thorough knowledge of the doctrines of God. How crippled is the mind and dead the spirit of those who think they have "attained" and need go no further! Did Paul not thrust the pin of truth into the balloon of human pride when he said, "If any man think that he knoweth anything, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know"? And into what low esteem does he cast all human understanding when we hear him say, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him. But God hath revealed them unto us by His Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God." 1 Cor. 2:9-10. If, then, it is given to man to know only the things of man, it follows with certainty that the "things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God" For this reason the Spirit of God has been given to the humble and the poor that they, having "been with Jesus", might a thousand times excel the human understanding of scribes and doctors of the law.

Far away in the depths of the inner man the Spirit of Jesus Christ is saying, "If any man love Me, he will keep My words: and My Father will love him, and We will come unto him, and make Our abode with him." John 14:23. When, therefore, "the Spirit of truth is come, He will guide you into all truth: ...for He shall receive of Mine, and shall show it unto you." John 16:13-14. Here, and here alone, lies the open secret of all spiritual understanding, and yet that secret, precious jewel that it is, glittering in the radiance of God's light, is hidden from the blind eyes and darkened perception of natural men with carnal minds, for the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; neither can he know them, for they are spiritually discerned.

We should always be fervently aware that those who are called to be partakers of His great salvation are not to be regarded as natural men and women, living purely on natural planes. They are not heirs apparent, but God's heirs of those things which eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, but which God hath revealed to them by His Spirit. The natural man "receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; neither can he know them." They are always foolishness unto him because they are spiritually discerned. That innumerable host of Christians who are always ready to dismiss things they cannot understand as the ravings of some dreaming mystic may be well advised to wonder if perchance it is they who are far too close to the realm of the natural to be able to see the invisible, hear the inaudible, and comprehend the incomprehensible. Our natural minds are brought to wonder why a man as wealthy as Abraham, who could have well afforded to build himself a palace, preferred rather to live out his whole life in tents, because he desired a better country, that is, an heavenly. Heb. 11:16. Far away in the depths of his spirit this blessed man could see the more excellent glory, the New Jerusalem, a city that hath foundations, and toward the glory of that celestial city he pressed, living all his lifetime in the moving tents of his earthly pilgrimage. In like manner also Moses "refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter", choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt, for he had "respect unto the recompense of the reward." Heb. 11:23-29.

Have you considered the truth that lies hidden in this inspired sentence: "He taketh away the first that He many establish the second"? Heb. 10:9. Those who walk with God are sure to discover that many things, which were once a glory to them eventually begin to fade away, and, as they fade and sink into the horizon of the past, the heart begins to long for something that as yet eye hath not seen. So very often well-meaning Christians sigh, "O for the good old days!" Foolish soul, do you not know that our wise Father in heaven has removed the former glory that we may become partakers of the excellent glory and, beyond that, the more excellent glory? The first man Adam was made a living soul. That was glorious. The last man Adam was made a life-giving Spirit. What a universe of difference lies between the glory of the first and the excellent glory of the last! The first was made a living soul - himself the recipient of life; the last, a life-giving Spirit, abundantly able to say, "I give unto them eternal life." It is always possible for us to be wrong in our understanding, but, as I have shown in my book, Creation, Redemption, and the Restitution of All Things, many infallible statements of scripture lead us to conclude that the first Adam and the last Adam were the same person. Have our ears been so dull to the voice of His Spirit that we have failed to hear Him say, "I am the First, and I am the Last - "the beginning of the creation of God?"

Church tradition, restrictive as it is, blinding men to truth and binding them in its prison cells, has forbidden us to see that we, who were the servants of sin, have through the marvelous grace of God become partakers of a heavenly calling and members in particular of Christ. Are we so irrational that we could affirm that he who is a member of the body of Christ is not a member of Christ? Ah, that blessed and holy truth, which eye hath not seen nor ear heard, is now finding entrance into the heart of man. To be in Christ is not merely to be saved from sin. To be in Christ is to be a part of Him, a member of His body, of His flesh, and of His bones, and partakers of the Spirit of Christ. 1 Cor. 12:13. What unfathomed depths are contained in this prayer of the Saviour just before His passion! "That they all might be one; as Thou, Father, art in Me, and I in Thee, that they also may be one in Us: that the world may believe that Thou hast sent Me. And the glory which Thou gavest Me I have given them; that they may be one even as We are one: I in them, and Thou in Me, that they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that Thou hast sent Me, and hast loved them, as Thou hast loved Me." John 17:21-23. These sublime statements of glory and unity are our holy inheritance as heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ, and in hope of them saints of all ages, including our own, are "forgetting the things which are behind and reaching forth unto those things which are before", pressing without weariness toward the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. In Christ Jesus! Ah, that is the highest calling God has made known to the children of men.

Long centuries ago the God of Israel led His chosen people forth from the bondage of Egypt, away from the fleshpots of Pharaoh, into a new realm - a realm which to the natural man was the burning sand of a wild, waste land, a desolate, hopeless wilderness, a waste of waterless, burning sand, devoid of the most rudimentary sustenance for the natural man. But "there is a path which the vulture's eye hath not seen", for the eye of the vulture is trained to spot only the dying and perishing things that will satisfy the ravaging hunger of his skinny body. He is like the natural man who sees only natural things. The vulture nature of the carnal man does not know that beyond the borders of Egypt, looking toward the wilderness, the glory of God has appeared to be a shadow in a burning land, a pillar of fire to protect them by night, and such a glory that their feet would never swell, nor their garments wax old, nor should one feeble person be in all their tribes. The glory of God would be to them

"A shelter in the wilderness,
A rest upon the way
From the burning of the noon tide heat
And the burden of the day."

The vulture's eye, which represents the eye of the carnal man, does not know that Christ opens the rock and the waters gush out to run in dry places like a river. Listen to the rejoicing of David as he recites the blessings of their wilderness journey. "He brought them forth also with silver and gold: and there was not one feeble person among their tribes. Egypt was glad when they departed: for fear of them fell upon them. He spread a cloud for a covering; and a fire to give light in the night. The people asked, and He brought quails, and satisfied them with the bread (manna) of heaven. He opened the rock, and the waters gushed out; they ran in the dry places like a river." Psa. 105:37-41.

The book of Deuteronomy is a brief history, given by Moses, of all God's kind and loving dealings with His people, a people stiff-necked and rebellious above all the peoples of the earth, but a people especially chosen of God to carry out the divine intention through the boundless ages to come. Through this people Jesus Christ, the Saviour, would be born. From them would come the principal body of the sons of God, for unto them "pertaineth the adoption." Rom. 9:4. Unto them was given the law, the promises and the covenants. Paul, seeing the vastness and importance of their calling, prayed for them in such an agony that he said, "I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh, who are Israelites." Rom. 9:3,4.

Those days in the wilderness were days of God's abiding presence, following the cloud of glory by day and the pillar of fire by night. In the words that follow Moses recorded how the Spirit of God directed them through all their journey. "On the day that the tabernacle was reared up the cloud covered the tabernacle, namely, the tent of the testimony; and at even there was upon the tabernacle as it were the appearance of fire, until the morning. So it was always: the cloud covered it by day, and the appearance of fire by night. And when the cloud was taken up from the tabernacle, then after that the children of Israel journeyed: and in the place where the cloud abode, there the children of Israel pitched their tents. At the commandment of the Lord the children of Israel journeyed, and at the commandment of the Lord they pitched: as long as the cloud tarried upon the tabernacle they rested in their tents. And when the cloud tarried long upon the tabernacle many days, then the children of Israel kept the charge of the Lord, and journeyed not. And so it was, when the cloud was a few days upon the tabernacle; according to the commandment of the Lord they abode in their tents, and according to the commandment of the Lord they journeyed. And so it was, when the cloud abode from even unto the morning, and that the cloud was taken up in the morning, then they journeyed: whether it was by day or by night that the cloud was taken up, they journeyed. Or whether it were two days, or a month, or a year that the cloud tarried upon the tabernacle, remaining thereon, the children of Israel abode in their tents, and journeyed not: but when it was taken up, they journeyed. At the commandment of the Lord they rested in the tents, and at the commandment of the Lord they journeyed: they kept the charge of the Lord, at the commandment of the Lord by the hand of Moses." Num. 9:15-23.

Blessed and wonderful as were all these things - the fire, the glory cloud, the angels' food, the rivers of water flowing from Christ, the rock that followed them, all the tribes in perfect physical health insomuch that no feeble person was among their hosts numbering over two million - yet for all this illustrious glory sadly they remained spiritually dull, carnal men and women, often lusting after evil things. The perfect and holy law, which they vowed to keep, was not written upon their hearts, but upon tables of stone, symbolic, I think, of the true condition of their hearts so shamelessly given to committing fornication with the nations about them, always lusting after the vanities of the outward man. Familiar as they were with the works of God, they were totally ignorant of His purposes and ways. They were not unlike the vast multitude of professing Christendom today, shouting praises when some glory appears - perhaps a miracle or a healing - running hither and thither to see this or hear that, chasing after self-styled miracle workers who tell of the wonderful things God is doing, but who never know God nor His ways, and look askance at those mystics who see God's merciful purpose for the government of the world by saints who know His ways and are acquainted with those purposes which were ordained in Christ our Lord before the world began and before the Spirit of life was breathed into the clay we call Adam.

I care not how many wonderful acts of God you see or bear witness to, you will always remain a spiritual baby, living for and lusting after outward things, until your spirit is awakened to grasp the eternal, immutable purposes of God. When your spiritual mind by revelation sees that "all things are of God", all things are working according to the purpose of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will, that nothing is controlled by Satan, that it is God who raises up good men and it is God who raises up evil, rebellious men and puts them down when His purpose is accomplished in them, when you come to grips with the indisputable fact that all things - absolutely all things - are working together for good to them that love God, then you, like Moses, will be one who is acquainted with God's ways and not merely one who knows His acts. Sadly we confess that the church system is filled today, as in the centuries past, with those shallow souls who praise the excitement, the revival meetings, physical healings, baptisms, seminars, building programs and acts without number, but who know not God's ways. Tell such super-spirituals that God had a purpose in the fall of mankind and they will brand you as a fanatic or a false prophet from the pit. Tell them that it is God's intention to reconcile all things unto Himself and they will begin their name calling and put the worst possible interpretation upon all you say. If you preach that ninety-and nine out of every hundred of God's creation will burn in torment eternally, they will admire you as a man of truth and understanding, but if you say that every knee shall, bow and every tongue shall confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father, they will gaze upon your ignorance with the sympathetic understanding generally reserved for lunatics. Like Israel of old they have seen God's acts, but have known none of His ways. Ever learning, but never able to come to the knowledge of the truth, they pride themselves in being hell fire preachers and love to try to dangle people over the flame, hoping to scare them into becoming believers. Well did the Lord say, "I have not sent these prophets, yet they ran: I have not spoken to them, yet they prophesied." Jer. 23:21.

O that all mankind might come to know "the mystery of His will, according to His good pleasure which He hath purposed in Himself: that in the dispensation of Usefulness of times He might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth, even in Him." Eph. 1:9,10.

In the endless procession of God's will it has always been His mind and purpose to take away first things that He might establish the second. As a babe nursing at his mother's breast is a thing absolutely necessary at a specified time, so to be later weaned from the milk and drawn from the breasts is necessary that the infant may partake of more substantial food for his health and growth. Thus our Father in heaven feeds with the milk of the word for a brief moment. Then He takes away the first that He may establish the second. To this end the prophet by inspiration wrote, "Whom shall He teach knowledge? and whom shall He make to understand doctrine? Them that are weaned from the milk, and drawn from the breasts." Isa. 28:9. Paul was building upon this truth when he said to the Corinthians, "I have fed you with milk, and not with meat: for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able. For ye are yet carnal..." 1 Cor. 3:2,3. Pay particular attention to those last four words. "Ye are yet carnal!" It is for our good to know that all who have not advanced beyond the milk are still carnal. These are they who remain among the denominational harlots, for only there do we find envy, strife and divisions. There men walk as babes and not as men. There and there alone do believers say, "I am of Paul. I am of Cephas. I am of Apollos." There they follow big name evangelists and renowned preachers as they tried to follow men in the days of Paul. These Christians take pride in being members of one of the thousand divided denominations and sects, but they are babes, walking as men and not as sons of God led by the Spirit of Christ. If we, like Israel, are lusting after outward things, we will never grow to maturity or come to the fullness of the stature of Christ.
It is not difficult to identify a Christian who clings to a sect or denomination. Not only does his schismaticalness betray him, but the dullness of his understanding speaks more eloquently than his words. He may speak of the acts of God, but know nothing of His ways. We may talk as we wish, but the first step a Christian must take to become a son of God is clearly stated in these inspired words: "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." 2 Cor. 6:17,18. To all who yet remain among the harlots of Babylon, which without doubt refers to the Protestant denominations, the Spirit calls in these last days, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues. For her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities." Rev. 18:4,5. This harlot system, so full of iniquity, prides herself as a queen, saying, "I am rich and increased in goods, and have need of nothing," but that she is "miserable and wretched and poor and blind and naked" is the word of the Lord. This deceived and destitute crowd, wretched, miserable, poor, blind and naked, is strong in its belief that they will escape all tribulation and be raptured, but the Lord has said of this harlot system, "Her sins have reached unto heaven and God hath remembered her iniquities." "Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage for every unclean and hateful bird." Rev. 18:2. Come out, therefore, and learn to lean on the wisdom of God.

"The wisdom of this world is foolishness with God." "Yet among the mature we do impart wisdom, although it is not a wisdom of this age or of the rulers of this age, who are doomed to pass away. But we impart a secret and hidden wisdom of God, which God decreed before the ages for our glorification. None of the rulers of this age understood this; for if they had, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory. But, as it is written, what no eye has seen, or ear heard, or the heart of man conceived, what God has prepared for those who love Him, God has revealed to us through the Spirit. For the Spirit searches everything, even the depths of God." 1 Cor. 2:6-10. (Revised Standard Version.) It is today with the church as it was with Israel in the wilderness. Though they had seen so many of the mighty works of God, yet they knew not God nor did they ever become acquainted with His ways. As long as they were dandled upon their father's knee and were fed at their mother's breast, they followed the Lord. But the people of God who desire mature sonship must learn, and that right early that the Lord is not satisfied that we remain forever children. We must be "weaned from the milk and drawn from the breasts." We must grow out of the realm of "little children" whose sins are forgiven for His name's sake (1 John 2:12) and mature to the realm where we become sons and fathers in that we have known Him who is from the beginning. 1 John 2:13. To make certain this growth is accomplished and not hindered by our determination to cling to childish and immature things "He taken away the first that He may establish the second." Heb. 10:9. That the Lord takes away good things to establish better things is proven by the fact that the manna ceased on the morrow after they had eaten of the old corn of the land. Neither had the children of Israel manna any more, but they did eat of the fruit of the land of Canaan that year. Josh. 5:12. Knowing humanity as we do, we may be sure some pined for the good old days when they had manna, but if maturity is to be gained and sonship is to be reached, the blessings of infancy must be removed and the realities of manhood introduced. Therefore our Father in grace and love "taketh away the first that He may establish the second."

Multitudes of Christians who have seen the workings of God over the past forty or fifty years must surely be aware that many of the glories of yesteryear have now faded into insignificance. That is the way God intended it should be. Though I was not saved until 1926 and the great Pentecostal outpouring, that had swept the world like a fire, was even then beginning to fade as the clammy arms of the denominational octopus slowly but steadily crushed its vitality and sucked the life blood from it, yet how well I remember the glowing faces, the transformed lives, the burning, spontaneous testimonies, the weeping, repenting sinners, the mighty baptisms and the powerful healings! In those days almost none of the saints knew any doctor but Jesus and every disease known to mankind was being healed.

We do not have space to recount the glory that was with us then, nor do we wish to dwell upon the fact that the glory has faded away. Some, I know, will make a feeble effort to deny this fact, but the real truth is that God has taken away the first that He might establish the second. Even those professed healers who are the loudest in their proclamation of divine healing deny their own testimony by depending on pills and medicines, submitting to operations, transfusions and respirators, all of which proves that the day has come for the removal of those things which once were fiery clouds of glory, rushing steams in the desert and manna to the hungry soul. Once again in the ever, progressing history of mankind we have come to the place where God Himself is taking away the first that He might establish the second. Once again the voice of the mighty apostle is speaking to say, "When that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away." 1 Cor. 13:10.

Though my statements may appear to defame and belittle, my intention is not to disparage what some are honestly trying to accomplish, but rather to acquaint the saints with the indisputable hope that a much greater glory awaits us in the days which are at hand. We have made special mention of divine healing only to show one instance where the former glory and power, once so freely manifested, has faded away. Yet if it has pleased the Lord to take it away, what then does He purpose to put in its place? Did He not say, "He taketh away the first that He might establish the second"? Though so much of Christendom has gone awhoring after healing, running hither and yon to be prayed over by men who claim to be healers, miracle workers and "God's man of the hour", for all this there are more sick people in the world than ever before, more Christians admitting to failure, and more dependence on doctors and every human aid. Certainly there are still some healings, but I am sad to find that healing is being used, not for the love of the sick and afflicted, but as an advertising gimmick by men who claim great gifts, but whose main ability proves to be the gathering of vast sums of money to carry out what they imagine to be their earth-shaking programs. God, I fear, is not in any of their wind, their earthquakes or their fire. So often these men are strangers to the still small voice of Him that speaketh from heaven. They have never wrapped their faces in their mantles and closed their mouths while they listened in awe and trembling to the voice of the Holy One of Israel. The angels they speak of as frequent visitors are nothing more than flights of fancy. We who live in this, the end of the age, live in an abominable hour of false prophets and false ministries who through pride and love of self teach the Christians to look to them and honor them. They are those seven women who take hold of the skirt of one man.

The seven churches of Asia (Rev. 1:4) represent the church system throughout the entire dispensation of grace. These are the seven women of whom Isaiah spoke, saying, "In that day seven women shall take hold of one man, saying, We will eat our own bread and wear our own apparel: only let us be called by thy name, to take away our reproach." Isa. 4:1. The seven women are the seven churches; the one man is Christ. They do not want His bread of life nor His apparel of righteousness. They want their own, but they know that, if they do not use His name and call themselves Christian, they will get nowhere. See how wretched, miserable, poor, blind and naked these denominational women are. Now, if our Father has taken away healing from our midst, what may we hope will be established in its place? Certainly the Holy Spirit never intended that His people should return to the wilderness or go back to Egypt again. Does He want us to try to bring back the fiery pillar or travail for the return of the manna? Does He want us to go back to doctors and hospitals? No! A thousand times No! He wants us to grasp the vital truth that He has taken away the first that He might reveal and establish the second. We must walk in the constant assurance that never, never, never does the Spirit of the Lord want us to re-dig the old wells. He intends to lead us on to where rivers of living water flow from out our hearts. Many thousands of weary folk in old Samaria had slaked their thirst at Jacob's well before the day that Jesus came and asked drink of a woman who had nothing more than questions and arguments to offer Him, but to her the Saviour said, "Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again: (yes, and we may add again and yet again) but whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him... (it) shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life." John 4:13-14.

Beloved soul, we have rightly rejoiced that our bodies were once healed, but however great our healing was, it was nothing more than the restoration of physical health to a mortal, corruptible body - a return to the health we previously enjoyed before some illness overtook us. However miraculous our healing may have been, it is true that those who were healed may sicken again and in the natural course of time they will weaken and die. Yea, it is possible that they may sicken of the very disease from whose clutches they were delivered and so pass away to the grave. Healing was never intended to be a permanent thing; nor was it ever intended to be God's best for His people. Therefore, if now we see it being taken away, may we not look with hope to see what Christ intends to establish in its place? Our Father never intends to leave us destitute, but He takes away the imperfect first that He may establish the perfect second.

The living water Jesus gives comes not from the well of Samaria. "From whence then hast Thou that living water?" the woman asked. Had not this old cistern from which Jacob watered his cattle served them well? Must we abandon it now? How could any well be more serviceable than this? But, O, the truth is that we may... drink of its water the rest of our lives and finally die, but whoso drinketh the living water Jesus gives shall never die. May we not in these moments before the resurrection come unto Him and drink that from the innermost being of him who drinks may flow "rivers of living water"? This, beloved, is what He will "establish" in the end of the days, which is today.

We need not engage in a dissertation to prove that divine healing has been God's will for the church age. That our Lord Jesus Christ healed the sick and raised the dead to life there can be no doubt. Nor is there doubt that the apostles continued to heal the sick in the name of Jesus Christ. So manifest were their healings that on occasion the sick were laid in the streets that the shadow of Peter, falling on them, might heal them, and it is written, "They were healed every one." Acts 5:16.

The Lord left no room for doubt that it was His intention to continue these wonders throughout the church age when He said, "These signs shall follow them that believe; In My name they shall cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." Mark. 16:17-18. Surely no one can dispute the psalms. Is any sick among you? Let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord: and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him." James 5:13-15.

These are wonderful promises that show physical healing to be as much a part of faith and grace as the forgiveness of sin. I am aware that orthodoxy has denied that healing was a part of the atonement made by Jesus, but we do not need proof beyond the statement of Isaiah, who, seeing aforesaid the sacrifice of Christ, said, "By His stripes we are healed." If healing is not part of the atonement Christ made for fallen man, then, pray tell me, where does it belong? No believer can disbelieve that both Jesus and His apostles healed the sick and gave witness to the entire church age that healings would follow whenever believing men prayed the prayer of faith. I shall now affirm that our Father in heaven has included all things in the atonement of Christ - everything in heaven, everything on earth, and everything in hell. Nothing is excluded or beyond the reach of Christ's atonement.

Glorious as it is to see the lame walk, the lepers cleansed, the cancers vanish, and the dead restored to life, with the utmost confidence in His promise and heartfelt appreciation for the wonders I have seen I know that healing, wonderful as it is, is not God's best plan for man. Blessed though it is, it is "the first" that must be taken away to make room for "the second" that will be established for the kingdom age to come. Once we see the incorruption God intends to establish, then healing and restoration of the corruptible becomes a retrogression.

When Jesus raised Lazarus, presenting him alive to his rejoicing sisters and happy friends, that was a miracle, indeed. But Lazarus was raised to mortality and later died and was probably buried in the very same tomb. The life Lazarus had when Jesus raised him from the dead was a restoration of his former health and mortality. It was not resurrection to incorruption. Jesus must be the "first fruits of the resurrection". One can be raised from the dead without being a partaker of the resurrection. The life Jesus had when He rose from the dead was resurrection life. It was not corruptible, but incorruptible. There is a natural body, which is of the earth earthly.
There is a spiritual body, which is from heaven. Thus Paul says, "There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body." 1 Cor. 15:44. The spiritual body is the resurrection body. It can never die again. It ever liveth. It is the body of the change, the body of the transformation, the body of the transfiguration. 1 Cor. 15:40-50. We consider these facts here because, since it is true that He taketh away the first that He might establish the second, the first in this case must refer to the temporary restoration of the corruptible body by divine healing while the second would refer to the partaking of the life that raised Jesus from the dead. The partaking of this life establishes a permanent change, a transformation, yea, a transfiguration. The believer becomes a partaker of the resurrection — the life that brought Jesus from the dead.

For many years I have loved the beautiful scripture found in Rom. 8:10-11, yet I was puzzled as to what the apostle was really teaching and what he wanted believers to understand. We should remember that even such eminent saints as Paul often taught truth which they themselves had not yet attained, yet they knew beyond the realm of death to the realm of life. That which was corruptible has been made partaker of incorruption, the body transfigured. That which was corruptible has taken a new form, a resurrection form. It has passed from whatever to do with healing or the restoration of the mortal being. It is a body changed, a body transformed, a body as it did for your spirit. It will quicken your body with the life that raised Jesus from the dead, and the life that raised Jesus from the dead will not do the same for your body as it did for your spirit. It will quicken your body with the life that raised Jesus from the dead, and the life that raised Jesus from the dead is resurrection life. The adverb also as used in this sentence is of great significance, for the quickening of our dead bodies, is not speaking of simple healing, but he introduces a new kind of life - not the reviving of animal life by healing, but the giving of resurrection life, that same life that raised Jesus from the dead. He does not say that the life that raised Jesus from the dead will heal you, but it will do the same for your body as it did for your spirit. It will quicken your body with the life that raised Jesus from the dead, and the life that raised Jesus from the dead is resurrection life. The adverb also as used in this sentence is of great significance, for Paul, having stated that the spirit is alive but the body is dead, next speaks of the Spirit that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken those who live in the last days just preceding the resurrection. It is the Spirit of God's Son, and, being nourished by all the good word of God, it will increase more and more until it is "not I, but Christ, that liveth in me." We will not sound such fathomless depths as this with the natural mind. If we try, we will find ourselves in a fog of doubt and unbelief. The family of God is composed of the sons of God and our Lord Jesus Christ is the eldest of that vast family of sons, which in itself composes the fullness of Christ. All who are begotten of the Spirit of Christ will mature in a spiritual gestation to be born of God and grow up unto the "measure of the stature of Jesus Christ." This is beyond human conception, I know, but it is true and it is the "prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

Let us consider the remainder of the text. Though the apostle clearly states, "The spirit is alive because of righteousness," he just as clearly states, "The body is dead because of sin." Therefore, though the believer's spirit is alive and regenerated, his body has not yet been touched by the life of God. It still has only animal life completely subject to the ravages of sickness and often in need of healing to deliver it from endless diseases that fasten themselves upon it. Because the body is yet corrupt, it breeds corruption, and, if it never advances beyond its present stage of death to partake of that more excellent glory, it will soon grow decrepit and sick and perish. The scripture we are considering gives definite promise that those who have believed for the quickening of the spirit may now also receive the same quickening for their physical bodies. I may be wrong, but it is my opinion that this blessed quickening is reserved for those who live in the last days just preceding the resurrection. To re-quote the text we read this: "If Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin; but the Spirit is life (alive) because of righteousness." (The conjunction but here is very important). "But if the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken (make alive) your mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in you." You will notice now that Paul, in promising the quickening of our dead bodies, is not speaking of simple healing, but he introduces a new kind of life - not the reviving of animal life by healing, but the giving of resurrection life, that same life that raised Jesus from the dead. He does not say that the life that raised Jesus from the dead will heal you, but it will do the same for your body as it did for your spirit. It will quicken your body with the life that raised Jesus from the dead, and the life that raised Jesus from the dead is resurrection life. The adverb also as used in this sentence is of great significance, for Paul, having stated that the spirit is alive but the body is dead, next speaks of the Spirit that raised up Jesus from the dead. Jesus was raised in incorruption. His mortal body, in which He tabernacled for thirty-three years, had now been transformed to the body of His resurrection. He had literally experienced that of which the Spirit said: "This corruptible must put on incorruption." This was resurrection life. It has nothing whatever to do with healing or the restoration of the mortal being. It is a body changed, a body transformed, a body transfigured. That which was corruptible has taken a new form, a resurrection form. It has passed from the realm of death to the realm of life. That which was corruptible has been made partaker of incorruption, the resurrection life Jesus had when the Spirit of God raised Him from the dead. Here, then, the word "also" is of great significance. Also means in addition, besides, or likewise. Thus Paul, speaking of the quickening of Jesus by resurrection and the quickening of our dead spirits, now clearly states that this same Spirit, dwelling in us, will "also quicken" OUR mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in us.

Just so long as Christians can come to God for the healing and restoration of the mortal flesh, they will remain satisfied with just that; but, when it comes time to advance to a higher realm, the Lord begins to "take away the first that He might establish the second." When healing begins to be taken away from our midst, we will be certain to do one of two things. Either we will return to Egypt to seek the physicians or we will know that the time has come for the Lord to wean us from the milk, take away the first, and bring in the second. The second in this case can be nothing less than receiving in our bodies the life that raised Jesus' body from the dead. He that raised up Christ shall also (likewise and in addition) quicken our mortal bodies as His was quickened.

Let us examine the passage further, because the thought does not end here. Having been taught that, His Spirit dwelling in us, our bodies are the temples of the Holy Spirit, the next statement is: "Therefore, brethren, we are debtors, not to the flesh, to live after the flesh. For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live."

It is distasteful to have to admit it, but the plain truth is that the vast majority of Christians live after the flesh. They spend far more time fussing over the mortal body than devoting themselves to the Spirit. "All man's labor is for his mouth, yet the appetite is not filled." Eccl. 6:7. We are not content to live humbly in the Spirit, but seek instead the best of everything for the flesh. Husbands urge their wives to leave their babies to the care of sitters, to join the labor force to raise more money to buy more things to satisfy the physical man and make the mortal flesh more comfortable. In my book, Two Realms, I have demonstrated beyond dispute that every industry in the world functions for the sole benefit of the five senses of our mortal flesh. Every industry, whether it be food for the body, furniture for comfort, perfumes to delight the sense of smell, sights to please the eye, sounds to enchant the ear - all is for the sake and satisfaction of the five senses of the mortal flesh. This sore travail was given to the sons of men when our first parents lusted after the outward things instead of cherishing the Christ life within. All that is in the world - the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life - is included in that one statement. "They saw that the tree was good for food, pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise." In their lust after outward things that concern the body, their inner life in the image of God faded and its glory disappeared until all that was left was a spirit dead in sin and a dead body of clay, capable of being sustained only by those corruptible foods that grow out of the earth.

In the light of such truth can we wonder that the apostle warns, "If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die"? There is no question about it. It could not be otherwise, yet at this point of misery and death Paul once again introduces that wonderful conjunction "but", which always indicates some important contrast such as is found in Eph. 2:3,4 where, after being shown our hopelessness, we receive the assurance "but God!" "But God, who is rich in mercy for His great love wherewith He loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together in Christ." So also here in Rom. 8:13, after saying, "If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die," Paul introduces a better prospect, namely this: "But if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live." Christ was put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit. Therefore it is not surprising that those who "reckon themselves dead" with him discover that they, too, are being quickened by that self same Spirit that raised up Jesus from the dead.

You have probably noticed that Paul, speaking of the grace of God that will reach and save all creation in ages to come, twice reminds the Ephesians, "By grace are ye saved." Eph. 2:58. If such as the Ephesians, dead in sins, hateful and hating one another, could be saved by grace, why then should men think it strange that God's grace will reach men in the ages to come? Is it not completely reasonable? Let us then apply this same understanding of grace to the subject of which we speak. If God raised Christ from the dead, is He not able to quicken our mortal bodies with that same resurrection life both here and now? If Christ gave eternal life to a spirit that was dead in trespasses and sins, cannot the Spirit that raised up Jesus from the dead give the same life to our mortal flesh?
This morning I awoke with the beautiful words of Jesus bringing life and understanding to my mind. These wonderful words of light, spoken to the darkened hearts of unbelieving and critical men, must not be met with stony unbelief in us as it was in them. May our spirits leap in response as we hear Him say, "The Father loveth the Son, and sheweth Him all things that Himself doeth; and He will shew Him greater works than these, that ye may marvel. For as the Father raiseth up the dead, and quickeneth them: even so the Son quickeneth whom He will." John 5:20,21. God grant that we may not read such sublime truth lightly and pass over it. May it sink down deep and find lodging in our hearts that we may partake of this broken bread and live forever.

These words of life were spoken to prepare our hearts for the truth to follow, which is this: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God: and they that hear shall live. For as the Father hath life in Himself, so hath He given to the Son to have life in Himself." Verses 25,26. Why should we marvel at such a truth as this when Jesus in the face of man's unbelief earnestly said, "Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear His voice, and shall come forth...?"

This last statement - "marvel not at this" - seems to prove that there is a difference between the time when all that are in the graves hear the voice of God and the time spoken of in verse 21, where it is said, "The Son quickeneth whom He will." Surely there is indication here to show that some will receive the quickening in their mortal bodies before the day when all who are in the graves hear His voice and come forth. Amid the unbelief about us we may seem as Noah, who builded an ark to save his household from the rain when hitherto there had been no rain; or as Moses, who endured as seeing Him who is invisible. Yet some will believe and receive the promise of life.

When Jesus led three disciples into the holy mountain of transfiguration, they knew not that their eyes, accustomed only to seeing natural things, needed only a shadow removed and they would behold the more excellent vision of the Son of man in His glory. Matt. 17:1-8. They were amazed at the vision, for what they saw that day was a Son of God as He really is when the shades of our mortality are fled away.

The last man, Adam, standing upon the mount of transfiguration, was the very signature and reflection of the first man Adam as he was before he began to desire to be like the creatures about him and so lost the image of God within. The angels in heaven neither marry nor are given in marriage, because they are male and female in one as was Adam before Eve was taken from him. On that glorious sixth day of creation God pronounced that all He had made was "very good". Gen. 1:31. But many days, perhaps years, later the Lord said, "It is not good that man should be alone." If it was good in the first place that male and female united were one son of God, then some falling away must have beset them between the first pronouncement and the second. When Eve was separated or divided from Adam, he lost much of his angelic nature and glory and was only one step away from the final transgression. The deep sleep that came upon him on the day Eve was separated from him was a sleep from which he has not awakened. We cannot comprehend what fearful loss befell the man when all the beautiful female qualities were taken from him. Qualities such as tenderness, patience, longsuffering, intuition, nurture, gentleness, submissiveness, preservation and understanding were to a large degree taken from him. But consider also what woman lost in strength, wisdom, durability and courage, and much more, yet Adam was all this in one as angels are and as sons of God will be. Nature, hating a vacuum as it does, has filled all these vacancies in both man and woman with their opposites - strength with weakness, wisdom with foolishness, patience with impatience, intuition with stupidity, intelligence with imbecility, generosity with frugality and so on without end.

There is to be a complete restoration in Christ, the last Adam, of all that was lost in the first Adam. Jesus on the mount of transfiguration was drawing aside the veil that men might behold the Son of man in His kingdom, the mountain of angelic government, lost by the first Adam in Eden. In lovely Eden the thief came to steal, to kill and to destroy. He stole their wisdom, their brightness and their glory until the image of the heavenly had departed from them and the image of the earthy remained, leaving them dead in trespasses and sins. Thus was fulfilled the dreadful edict, "In the day thou eatest thereof thou shall surely die." The waster had brought them to desolation and all creation with them was reduced to sweat and tears. With pain would they bring forth children in their own likeness to be ever at war with their surroundings and return at last to the dust from whence they came. Though paradise was lost in Adam, the blessed assurance abounds that Jesus, the second Adam, came to regain all that was lost in the first. Through His cruel passion and bloody sweat, the stripes He bore, the thorns He wore and the shedding of the blood of eternal life He delivered the whole creation from the curse, and, rising triumphant from the dead, a victor over wrath and fire and death, He offers life and the image of God to all mankind. In the beginning the thief came to kill and destroy, but "I am come," saith Jesus, "that ye might have life, and have it more abundantly." John 10:10.

On two notable occasions in God's word we read that the eyes of certain ones were opened, first amid the effulgent glory of the Garden of Eden and second, in a humble home by the Emmaus road following the glory and power of the resurrection. In both of these scriptures the act of eating or partaking is involved. I shall not attempt, as many have done, to explain what the tree of the knowledge of good and evil was, for I do not know. Our first parents, now divided, the male from the female, were no longer beholding with unveiled face the glory of the Lord. The inner light was growing dim since they began to admire and desire outward things. Even today the first signs of backsliding become evident when God's people begin to build again the things they once destroyed, for "if I build again the things which I destroyed, I make myself a transgressor." Gal. 2:18. As Adam and Eve began to admire and lust after the things about them, Satan as an angel of light was present to make the forbidden things appear attractive and the things that pertained to life and glory appear tedious and tasteless. Thus the father of lies through some vessel he had chosen, through half-truths and innuendo, persuaded our first parents to partake of that which God had forbidden. "Hath God said?" the enemy questioned. "Ye shall not surely die," he soothingly lied, "but God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil." Gen. 3:1-5.

We here perceive how the eyes of one who hitherto had been satisfied with the image of God, living by His Spirit and walking in His fellowship, now begins to look outward and lust after things that do not pertain to the Spirit. Eve, who had lived by "every word that proceeded out of the mouth of God", which was to her the "bread of life", now gazes upon another tree, the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, whose fruit yields, not the glory of life, but the bitterness of death. She saw it was good for food — yea, to partake of it would make one wise, but in her desire for outward things she did not know that the wisdom it gave was from beneath, earthly, sensual and devilish and more deadly than the poison of asps. Thus, reaching forth her eager hand, she partook of the tree and gave it also to her husband, and their eyes were opened, and they knew that they were naked.

What was this shameful nakedness that made them run to hide among the trees of the garden? Was it merely that they wore no clothes? Ah, no! It was that the radiant brightness of their inner shining was gone. It was as though the sun had gone black and had lost his radiance. This was their nakedness that made them ashamed. The glory of God had departed. He who once had shone as the Saviour at His transfiguration, now hiding in dread, muttered his "Ichabod," for the glory had departed. The luminous, glittering aurora had vanished. The angelic nature of a son of God was gone and there they stood naked, uncovered and exposed in the image of the creatures about them. Their eyes were opened - eyes that could not see God, eyes that could not see angels or any heavenly thing. Their only remaining ability was to gaze earthward toward all that was unspiritual, natural and dying. The glory of the celestial realm was shut out. The sweet strains of angels harping with their harps no longer sounded in their dull ears. Even spiritual sense and understanding had vanished from their hearts. Their eyes were opened - yes, indeed - opened to sorrow, pain and death and to every curse that from that day until now has blighted and bedeviled the earth and all who dwell upon it, but closed to the brightness, the glory and the eternal life. Harmony and peace had fled the earth for ages and ages to come and in their place war and desolation are determined, where all is vanity and vexation of spirit till that which came naked from its mother's womb naked should return from whence it came.

Four millenniums with heartache and travail had elapsed since Eden, and even the agonies of Calvary were passed when two heart-broken disciples plodded wearily homeward on the dusty road to Emmaus. As they with uneasy apprehension discussed the tragic events of the past few days, a stranger drew near and walked with them. "What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk, and are sad?" He asked. And they responded, "Art Thou a stranger and knowest not the things that have happened?" "What things?" He questioned. "Concerning Jesus of Nazareth," they answered, "a prophet mighty in word and deed, and how our rulers crucified Him. And certain women made us astonished when they said they had seen Him alive." The beautiful story, recorded in Luke 24, tells how Jesus, beginning with Moses and the prophets, expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning Himself. No sermon ever preached could have equaled that one. What a feast from the Tree of life it must have been! And when our Lord had blessed and broken the bread, their eyes were opened, and they knew Him, and He vanished out of their sight.

When Adam and Eve ate the bread, which God had forbidden their eyes were closed to the celestial world. The dark veil of spiritual blindness, misunderstanding and unbelief descended, to imprison the world in the realms of death; but these two, eating the bread which Christ had blessed, found their eyes were opened - the veil removed. Henceforth they would see the angels ascending and descending upon the Son of man.

For centuries now Christians have been "taking communion" believing they were eating the flesh and drinking the blood of Christ. They were seeing the type, but not the anti-type. The flesh of Christ is the bread of God, the Tree of Life, the living Word that came down from heaven, of which if a man partake he shall live forever; not that his animal life is to be extended forever, but because he has partaken of a new kind of life, even the eternal life which Jesus Christ is, for if we by faith eat His flesh, which is Jesus Christ the Word of God, and drink His blood, which is eternal life, we have life. He has said, "I am come that ye might have life, and have it more abundantly," and how can one possibly partake of the life that raised Jesus from the dead and still be sick or remain in death?

As the Father unfolds these truths to the inner man, we become convinced that Paul in his second epistle to the Corinthians described in some detail the things which hinder us from beholding Christ and thus being transformed in body as well as in spirit. At the same time he clearly demonstrates how we may behold His glory and be transformed from glory to more excellent glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord. O that we Christians, long tormented by sickness and compassed about with many infirmities, who have sought healing and been denied, would see that there is a new life awaiting us - not that life which is of the earth earthy, but that life which is from heaven; not health in the animal realm, but transformation by partaking of that life that raised Jesus from the dead.

Many passages of scripture remain locked up to man and cannot be understood with the natural mind. One such passage is found in Isaiah 28:15, which says, "Because ye have said, We have made a covenant with death, and with hell are we at agreement..." To what could this statement refer but to the covenant Israel had with the law? When corrupt and carnal man hopes to be saved by keeping a spiritual law, which he has broken at every point, he is in truth making a covenant with death. The entrance of God's law into the heart brings cleansing and life, but the law on a table of stone, glaring at carnal men, is as terrifying as the words, "Adam, where art thou," spoken to the transgressor in Eden.

The covenant of the saint in Christ is not a covenant with death and our agreement is not with hell (the grave). Our covenant is with Christ, the giver of life, and our agreement is not with the grave, but with the resurrection. "Forasmuch as ye are manifestly declared to be the epistle of Christ ministered by us, written not with ink, but by the Spirit of the living God; not in tables of stone, but in fleshy tables of the heart." 2 Cor. 3:3, "for the letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life." Verse 6. Therefore any covenant with the letter of the law is a covenant with death and an agreement with the grave. Our covenant with Christ not only gives life, but fulfills the law as well.

Now when Moses, having received the law, came down from the mountain, he held in his hands a covenant of death, yet his face shone. This was very strange, but Paul explains it thus: "If the ministration of death, written and engraven in stones, was glorious, so that the children of Israel could not steadfastly behold the face of Moses for the glory of his countenance; which glory was to be done away (or, more correctly, which glory was fading away) how shall not the ministration of the Spirit be rather glorious? For if the ministration of condemnation be glory, much more doth the ministration of righteousness exceed in glory." 2 Cor. 3:7-9. This passage of scripture needs prayerful consideration, but if we seek the light of the Holy Spirit upon it, we will find that the bread of God will be broken and our understanding will be enlightened to grasp a transforming truth.

The law, though holy and just and good, can only administer death to the unregenerate hearer. To the man who has not the love of God in his heart the law says, "Thou shall love the Lord thy God with all thy heart." To the blasphemer it says, "Thou shall not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain." To the adulterer it says,
"Thou shall not commit adultery." To the covetous it says, "Thou shall not covet." But, while all these commands are holy and good, the law has no power to change the heart or transform the life. The law is weak because of our flesh. Therefore every carnal man who has agreed to keep the law has made a covenant with death, for the law will slay him. Rom. 7:11-14. He will never be able to keep it because the law is holy, just and good, but we are carnal and sold under sin. O that men might see that the law was never intended to justify us, but to be OUT pedagogue to bring us, truant children, to Christ! Gal. 3:24. Though this covenant that Israel had with the law was a covenant with death and an agreement with the grave, in spite of this, when Moses received it, his face shone with glory. It was a glory that was fading away, for such a glory could not last. Phillips translation of verse 13 says this: "We are not like Moses, who veiled his face to prevent the Israelites from seeing its fading glory." Then he continues, "But it was their minds really which were blinded, for even today, when the old agreement is read to them, there is still a veil over their minds ... Yet if they turned to the Lord (Christ) the veil would disappear." 2 Cor. 3:13-16.

The law brought condemnation and death. Therefore, when Israel said, "All that the Lord hath said we will do", they were actually making a covenant with death and an agreement with the grave. To make this covenant with death active Moses, after he had spoken every precept to the people, "took the blood of calves and of goats, with water, and scarlet wool, and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book and all the people, saying, This is the blood of the testament (covenant) which God hath enjoined unto you." Heb. 9:19-20. Thus they agreed to keep the law, which no carnal mind can ever keep and it became a covenant with death and an agreement with hell (or Sheol). These carnal people had broken the law and worshipped idols even before the covenant was sealed.

Jesus Christ is the Word of God. The bread is His body. The breaking is the breaking of His word. When He broke that word to the travelers on the road to Emmaus, their eyes were opened and they knew Him. When Christ breaks the bread, the word of God, which in turn is Christ, our eyes are opened and we behold Him and transformation into His likeness begins. The wine, Jesus said, was His blood, shed for the remission of sins. His blood, beloved friend, is eternal life and those who drink of His Spirit drink deeply of eternal life. The blood of Christ is the life of God, eternal life and eternal light. Our partaking of the body and blood of the Lord is our recognition of His death and seals our covenant with life. Showing the Lord's death till He comes proves the covenant of life is in effect. It is not an agreement with death and the grave, but an agreement with life and resurrection. The covenant of the law brought condemnation, proving our guilt and making us flee to Jesus Christ for righteousness. He that offends in one point is also guilty of all. Do we now understand why the apostle said, "If the ministration of death, written and engraven in stones, was glorious, so that the children of Israel could not steadfastly behold the face of Moses for the glory of his countenance ... how shall not the ministration of the Spirit be rather glorious? For if the ministration of condemnation be glory, much more doth the ministration of righteousness exceed in glory." 2 Cor. 3:7-9. In verse 10 the apostle continues: "For even that which was made glorious had no glory in this respect, by reason of the glory that excelleth." In other words, if we compare the fading glory of the covenant of death with the increasing glory of the covenant of life, then there is no worthy comparison at all. We may as well compare Lazarus in a tomb with the glory of the mount of transfiguration. There is no room for comparison.

Paul in his effort to unfold this mystery explains that Israel could not see the glory that was on Moses' face because Moses had put a veil over his face. Verse 13. But the truth was that it was not the veil over Moses' face that stopped them from beholding the glory of God. It was the evil that was upon their own natural minds as he said: "Even today, when Moses is read, the veil is upon their hearts." Verse 15. "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit, neither can he know them." Therefore it is said, "Their minds were blinded; for until this day remaineth the same veil untaken away in the reading of the Old Testament (covenant); which veil is done away in Christ." Verse 14. Even now in the twentieth century this veil remains over every natural mind. Not only do Christians fail to see the glory of the law, but the vast majority never glimpse the more excellent glory of life offered by Christ in the new covenant of life.

Everywhere world wide much ado is made of physical healing. Christians fail to see that this glory is fading away. They cannot understand that healing is nothing more than the restoration of that which is physical, mortal and corruptible. It has never dawned upon them that there is a more excellent glory - a glory that excelleth where mortality becomes swallowed up by immortality and where that which is corruptible begins to be swallowed up by the incorruptible. Have we ever heard Jesus say, "Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness and are dead. I am the living bread which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he shall live forever: and the bread that I will give is My flesh (My word, My Spirit, My covenant of life) which I will give for the life of the world!" John 6:49-51. In the this can we wonder that the old covenant with death and agreement with hell, made with Moses, had no glory when compared to the excellent glory of Christ's covenant of life!

Notice now that Paul said, "The veil is still upon their heart." The face is here likened unto a mirror in which the glorious image of the resurrected Christ reflects. Christ on the mount of transfiguration was a reflection of what a son of God really is. Now, if the veil of the flesh is over our eyes, which veil is the natural mind, two things are evident. First, the veil prevents us from seeing the glory of Christ, and, second, the glory of Christ cannot reflect in our faces as in a mirror because of the veil. But hallelujah! Paul tells us that in Christ the veil is done away. Those who are in Christ are not ordinary people. They "walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit", for the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus has made them free from the law of sin and death. They have come out of the denominational corral and escaped the sectarian jail of human tradition to live in a spiritual realm where the light of Christ, shining upon them, brings life and transformation. It is to these in-Christed people that Paul now makes this wonderful promise: "We all, with open (unveiled) face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord." 2 Cor. 3:18.

Notice the sublime phrases of Weymouth's translation. "Now the Lord means the Spirit; and where the Spirit of the Lord is, freedom is. But all of us, as with unveiled faces we mirror the glory of the Lord, are transformed into the same likeness, from glory to glory, even as derived from the Lord, the Spirit." My friends, healing is glorious, but in comparison with the transformation that follows as we behold the glory of the risen Lord it has no glory at all.

Having made these sublime statements in chapter 3, Paul now introduces the stern realities of chapter 4. Here he enumerates the earthly, corrupt things that hang as a veil over our eyes, always hindering us from beholding the glory of the Lord, retarding all possibility of our being changed into that more excellent glory. Notice now what he says: (1) "Seeing we have this ministry we faint not." (2) We have renounced the hidden things of dishonesty, (3) not walking in craftiness. God knows the cunning craftiness and sleight of men in modern religion whereby even preachers lie in wait to deceive. (4) Nor handling the word of God deceitfully. (5) By a manifestation of truth commending ourselves to every man's conscience. (6) The god of this world has blinded the minds of them that believe not. "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." 1 John 2:15-17. (7) Always bearing about in our bodies the dying of the Lord Jesus. We identify ourselves with the death and burial of Christ that we may pass our time in this world as dead to it, but risen to walk in a completely new realm of life with our Lord Jesus Christ. Why do God's people live and strive as though they expected to remain in this realm of death forever? Should we not rather renounce these dishonest things and be content with such things as we have rather than lasting after more and more of the passing and desiring less and less of the permanent? As long as this death to self and the world is working in us, life will be produced in those to whom we minister. (8) Let us make certain that our light affliction, whatever it is and however severe, is working in us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory.

From these exhortations in chapter 4 the apostle now leads the seekers on to behold in chapter 5 a more excellent process of glory while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen; for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal. Ch. 4:18. Here our spiritual eyes are ravished with an exceeding great revelation of truth. "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." The house not made with hands is the body of Christ, but let us not forget that the body of Christ is made up of individual members such as you and me. The building of God refers to the incorruptible, immortal body, a fleeting glimpse of which Jesus revealed to three disciples on the mount of transfiguration. There he drew aside the veil that was on their faces and they beheld the Son of God as He really was. In this our state of mortality we continually groan. Pitiful is our mortal plight. Sad as it is, we may be benefited to hear the groaning of the sufferers or see the weary, tired old bodies in nursing homes, sighing under the weight of their awful mortality. How true are these words: "In this we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house from heaven."

Verse 3. "If so be that being clothed we shall not be found naked." We will better understand this verse if we remember that it was at the moment of Adam's transgression that the excellent glory of the light of life departed from him and he knew he was naked. No radiant glory remained upon him then, but the restoration of this excellent glory in Christ brings to an end the nakedness of our mortality. "For we that are in this tabernacle (this mortal body) do groan, being burdened." Notice now the almost incredible words, which follow. "Not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life." Verses 2, 3, 4. Do you grasp the extent of these words, "not that we should be unclothed"? None of us are asking to be unclothed by death, but we groan that this corruptible, this mortal might be swallowed up of life. Is not this exactly what Paul was teaching when he explained, "The body is dead because of sin, but the Spirit is life (alive) because of righteousness. But if the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in you?" Rom. 8:10-11. Is not this the same as saying "that mortality might be swallowed up of life”? We may disbelieve it if we will, but thus the Spirit speaketh.

Then the promise continues. "Now He that hath wrought us for the self same thing is God, who also hath given unto us the earnest of the Spirit." Verse 5. Weymouth renders this beautiful revelation as follows: "For we know that if the mere tent, which is our earthly house, is taken down, we have in heaven a building from God, a house not made by human hands, but eternal. In this one, indeed, we sigh, because we long to put on over it our dwelling which comes from heaven - sure that, when we have put it on, we shall not be found unclothed. Yes, we who are in this tent do sigh under our burdens, not that we wish to lay aside our tent, but rather to put the other over it, so that our mortality may be absorbed in life. And He who formed us for this very purpose is God, who has given us His Spirit as guarantee."

I am very much aware that all I have stated in these chapters may sound fantastic, and beyond belief, but these glories are only incredible to men of natural minds, for such can never receive the things of the Spirit of God. Surely the blindest man can see that this age of sin and all the corruption that pertains to it is swiftly passing away. God is taking away the first that He might establish the second.

In the beginning man became unclothed. The radiance of the light of life departed from him, leaving him naked. The very thing that was his life was stripped from him, leaving him mortal, corruptible and dead. Our blessed Lord, by momentarily removing the veil, revealed at His transfiguration what He really was and what all sons of God will be when mortality is swallowed up of life. As Paul has said, "He who has wrought us for this selfsame thing is God, who has given us His Spirit as guarantee."

Knowing that such glories are the promise and the will of God, and being assured that these promises are ours, then, "having these promises, dearly beloved," let us cleanse ourselves from all the defilement of the flesh and spirit, together with all forms and ceremonies of religion and from cunning craftiness and deceit that we may perfect holiness in the fear of the Lord. "To what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices unto Me? saith the Lord. I am full of the burnt offerings of rams, and the fat of fed beasts; and I delight not in the blood of bullocks, or of lambs, or of he goats. When ye come to appear before Me, who hath required this at your hand, to tread My courts? Bring no more vain oblations; incense is an abomination unto Me, the new moons and sabbaths, the calling of assemblies, I cannot away with; it is iniquity, even the solemn meeting. Your new moons and your appointed feasts My soul hateth: they are a trouble unto Me; I am weary to bear them. And when ye spread forth your hands, I will hide Mine eyes from you: yea, when ye make many prayers, I will not hear: your hands are full of blood. Wash you, make you clean; put away the evil of your doings from before Mine eyes; cease to do evil." Isa. 1:11-16. All such pretence in worship was an abomination in the past, but the ancient hypocrisy in religion is rampant everywhere in our day. All the eloquent and beautifully worded prayers in the prayer book will avail you nothing if all you do is recite the words while your heart is reaching out for the things of the world. Where your treasure is, there will your heart be. Where your heart is, that is where your mind is, and where your mind is, that is what you seek. If January and February were the only words you could say, even these spoken as a prayer in the Spirit will open to you the length and breadth, the depth and height of the love and glory of Christ.

Now I see what Paul meant when he said, "Pray without ceasing." Your whole life becomes a prayer, a reaching out after Christ and the glory of His indwelling presence that departed from us in Eden. Now I know what David meant when he said, "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul alter Thee, O God. My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God. When shall I appear before God?" Now I know why Jesus said, "When ye pray, say, Thy kingdom come; Thy will be done in earth as it is done in heaven." Now I know why John prayed, "Even so, come quickly, Lord Jesus." Now I know why my own spirit prayeth when my understanding is unfruitful. Now I know why Paul prayed, "My little children of whom I travail in birth again until Christ be formed in you." Now I know why I awake in the night with the Spirit of sonship crying, "Abba, Father." Now I know why in the day the Spirit within cries, "How long, O Lord, how long!" Those who hunger need not a dissertation on the value and composition of food. They need the bread of life. Those who thirst need not to know how much water is in the sea. They need to be shown the way to the fountain of the water of life. They need to hear Him say, "If any man thirst, let him come unto Me and drink."

BEHOLDING THE MORE EXCELLENT GLORY

PART THREE

These truths are presented with fear and trembling, but with fervent desire that the verities unfolded here may grip the spirit of God's elect with such forcefulness that many may become partakers of the more excellent glory, which glory should be the hope of every Christian enjoying the privilege of walking with God in these closing days of the age. These are the days clearly spoken of in Holy Scripture as the last days.

There is a path, which the vulture's eye hath not seen. Job 28:7. That is because the things, which inhabit this path are of no interest to vultures. The vulture is a bird of prey interested only in his belly and the dead things he can devour to hold his skinny bones together. He is an unclean bird, a scavenger concerned far more with things that are dying than with things that are living, more involved with death than with life. The whole world system has become like a devouring vulture and, when we see so many Christians clamor to partake as fully as possible of all the things this wretched age has to offer and the apathy they have toward the more excellent glory, it becomes necessary to dismiss them as believers walking after the flesh and not after the Spirit. To this end the Spirit bears witness that "if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live." Rom. 8:13. "O foolish Galatians," said Paul, "who hath bewitched you, that ye should not obey the truth, before whose eyes Jesus Christ hath been evidently set forth, crucified among you?" Gal. 3:1.

It has been a source of great distress to see Christians, who had once chosen to leave the confusion of Babylon and the harlot system, begin again to cast amorous glances in her direction, then wantonly follow the crowd back into her cage of deception. Though the knowledge of their apostasy fills the heart with sorrow, we need not trouble about it, knowing inwardly that there can be but one answer to their vacillating. They are not numbered among those who are called of God to enter into the more excellent glory of the last days.

Centuries ago the blessed Isaiah, prince among the seers, lifted up his prophetic voice to tell of a highway which men would walk in the kingdom age, and, if they are to walk there in the kingdom age, we may be certain that all those saints in whose hearts the kingdom of God is developing will by faith walk this same road, be it in this age of grace or in the kingdom age to come. Thus spoke the Spirit through the lips of the prophet: "An highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called THE WAY OF HOLINESS; the unclean shall not pass over it; but it shall be for those: the wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein. No lion shall be there, nor any ravenous beast shall go up thereon, it shall not be found there; but the redeemed shall walk there: And the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: They shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." Isa. 35:8-10.
This is the path, which the vulture’s eye does not see. This is the way of which the church of Laodicea, the church of the last days, knows nothing. Yet this way of holiness is reserved for those elect few in this age whose spirits leap in response to Christ as they hear His knock at the door, saying, "If any man hear My voice, and open the door, I will come in to him and sup with him, and he with Me." Rev. 3:20.

It is when we sup with Christ that we partake of the broken bread, which He is. Christ is the Word of God. Christ is the bread of God, which came down from heaven. The broken bread is the broken word, of which, if any man eat, he shall live forever. This is the bread of life He breaks with us when He sups with us and we with Him. There in the eating of the Word and the drinking of His Spirit He becomes a true Father to us and we become true sons and daughters. Ah, what Christians miss when they begin to cast amorous glances toward the harlot system, which, professing to be rich and increased with goods and having need of nothing, knows not that it is wretched and miserable and poor and blind and naked. Rev. 3:17.

In his introductory remarks addressed to the strangers of the dispersion Peter rejoices in these words: "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to His abundant mercy hath begotten us again to a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time." 1 Pet. 1:3-5. Here the apostle is saying that, when Jesus Christ arose from the dead, His resurrection brought a new and living hope for all mankind and especially for those elect saints who would be living in the last times, or the end of the days.

But what is that inheritance which He has reserved for the last times? It is explicitly stated in these words: "He hath begotten us unto a lively (living) hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away." The beautiful statement — an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled and that fadeth not away — is a weighty statement full of hope and meaning. Is this blessed promise to be the inheritance of a people who all their lifetime and for centuries past have known naught but corruption, defilement and fading away? Is this to be the inheritance of the saints of the last times whose corruptible bodies have been defiled with sickness and merciless incurable disease, who have seen their mortal bodies fading away as their flesh was swallowed up by leprosy or ten thousand cancerous and debilitating maladies far too numerous to be named in anything but a medical dictionary?

In the previous chapter we endeavored to put as much emphasis as possible on Paul's statement, "He taketh away the first that He may establish the second." Before Noah led the world into a new beginning after the tribulation of the flood, Enoch was taken away. Before the double portion ministry of Elisha began, Elijah was taken away. With the coming of grace the law was taken away, and before the Holy Spirit came, our blessed Lord was taken away.

What man would not rejoice when he sees the lame walk, the lepers cleansed, the blind made to see and the deaf to hear? Who can restrain the voice of praise when the hand of Jesus calms the fever, delivers from cancer and every disease known to mankind? Yes, indeed! It is a wonderful thing to see every disease known to mankind healed by the gracious power of God, but what should we say if saints should begin to enter into an inheritance of incorruption where their bodies are undefiled by any of these tragic diseases and where there is no fading away forever, but a continual changing from glory to glory as by the Spirit of the Lord? But, before that more excellent glory comes, we must see the irrevocable process at work once more. "He taketh away the first that He may establish the second."

Many who read these lines are young and have not been permitted to see the glories of former years when the Spirit of God was being outpoured, but many are old, having attained to eighty and ninety years, and have witnessed the glory of former things. Perhaps we are not unlike the people of Judah who saw the temple rebuilt after the captivity. The young people, who had not seen Solomon's magnificent temple, shouted for joy as the new temple was built, but the old men wept because the new temple was as nothing when compared to the splendor of the former temple. Many will remember how Christ in times past healed every disease known to mankind and that not occasionally. Now those who are honest must admit that healings are only occasional. I myself, a believer in miracles, have been sickened to hear the deceptive advertising of healing meetings, only to discover that the whole thing was a shameful sham, the cunning craftiness of some preacher who lay in wait to deceive the people and gather a crowd through misleading and fraudulent advertising. The real truth is that divine healing, which at best is the rehabilitation of the corruptible, valuable as it is, is being taken away in preparation for that more excellent glory of incorruption, reserved in heaven for the saints and ready to be manifested in the last times. 1 Pet. 1:3, 4. This is a glory, which the eye has not seen nor the ear heard, neither has it entered the heart of man, but God has revealed it by His Spirit.

Why is it, my friends, that Christians rightly expect that a sinner who has received pardon and been saved by Christ's blood should immediately grow in grace and in the knowledge of the Lord, that he should put on Christ and grow up into Him who is the head, that he should mature and become more Godlike as Christ lives and moves in him, that the Holy Spirit should increase in him and that he should advance from a child of God to a son of God? Are we not perfectly justified in expecting such growth, spiritual advancement and attainment? Of course we are right! Every Christian should continue to grow and be transformed, not only in this age, but in the ages yet to come. Why is it then that, while we expect Christians to grow and become strong in spirit, at the very same time we take for granted that the body must become weaker and weaker, sick and more sickly, until in failing strength and corruption it falls into the grave? Has not the body been redeemed as well as the spirit? Why are we so frowned upon for even suggesting that the corruptible may partake of incorruption and the mortal may partake of immortality? Did Christ not come to swallow up death in victory? 1 Cor. 15:54. Have we who dwell in mortal flesh never heeded the apostles words: "We that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened; not for that we would be unclothed (by death), but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life. Now He that hath wrought us for the selfsame thing is God, who hath given us the Spirit as a guarantee." 2 Cor. 5:1-5.

But some man will reply, "It is appointed unto man once to die; therefore, though our bodies are redeemed, they must grow weaker and more decrepit until they are consumed by death and fall into the grave." In saying, "We must die," we overlook a vital fact — the fact that we have already died and are already dead. Did not Paul arouse our imagination by saying, "If Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin?" Rom. 8:10. Can one be any more dead than dead? Would going to the grave make you any deader than you already are, since divine inspiration says, "The body is dead?" We have often heard it said that such an one was "killed dead." Certainly we understand what is meant, but the statement is superfluous because, if man is killed, he is already dead. He cannot be any deader than he is. Yet this is the kind of philosophy we use when we say of those whom God has declared dead that it is appointed unto them to die. That appointment with death has already been kept. The realm in which we now sojourn is the realm of the first death. This, which we call life is the valley of the shadow of death. It is said of Jesus that He prayed with strong crying and tears unto Him who was able to save Him from death and was heard in that He feared. Heb. 5:7. He could not have been praying that He would escape the cross or that He would not die, as the preachers tell us, for He did die, but when He prayed with strong crying to be delivered from death, He was praying to be delivered from this whole dreadful realm of death in which He, as the last Adam, had dwelt for the past thirty-three years and in which, if I err not, He had previously suffered as the first Adam for nine hundred and thirty years, being tempted in all points as we are. It was not that He might remain in this realm that He prayed. His awful dread was that He might miss the cross and so be forced to remain here longer. Therefore He prayed mightily to the Father, who was able to deliver Him from this appalling realm of death, and He was heard in that He feared. By means of the cross He was delivered from this hateful realm of death, and by means of His death He has delivered all mankind, who through fear of death are all their lifetime subject to bondage. Heb. 2:14,15. O great compassion! O boundless love! O great redemption!

Our Lord Jesus Christ not only spoke in parables insomuch that it is written, "Without a parable spake He not unto them," Mark 4:34, but He also performed many mighty works which in themselves were parables. You have probably noticed the array of miracles and healings, which He did on the Sabbath day. The Sabbath day, which is the seventh day, represents the kingdom age, the day of rest, when Christ will rule, bringing heaven's peace out of earth's upheaval and turmoil. Every miracle that Jesus performed on the Sabbath day is a parabolic miracle teaching us some blessed truth concerning that millennial kingdom. On the Sabbath day blind eyes were opened, lame men were made to walk, deaf were made to hear, dumb tongues were loosened, crooked limbs and bodies bent double were straightened. Impotent people who had never walked took up their beds and went their way. All these miracles are parabolic miracles bringing holy, glorious and indisputable revelation concerning that wonderful age, now so near at hand. If you will now make a spiritual application of these miracles, you will readily see that, while the opening of blind eyes teaches that the inhabitants of that millennial age will have physical sight, the message is abundantly clear that our eyes, long darkened to spiritual truth and revelation, will be opened and every veil will be removed from our understanding. We will know as we are known and we will see all things as they are. Now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face. Now I know in part, but then shall I know as I am also known.

Apply this same truth to the healing of the lame man or the impotent man who had never walked and you will understand that in that day not only will the lame leap as the hart, but all will know how to walk with God in the Spirit and in truth. Consider the deaf, whose ears were opened on the Sabbath day. Certainly many have been defaith in the natural and how dreadfully silent the world must be never to hear the song of a bird, never to thrill at the voice of a loved one, hear the whispering wind, be hushed by the strains of sweet music or be moved by the voice of a mighty choir! Yet even more melancholy than this is the tragic knowledge that the vast majority of mankind never hears the voice of God. Their muffled ears, long muted by the raucous clamor of earth, are dull of hearing, their eyes they have closed and their hearts are heavy and do not understand. But there is coming a day when every type and parabolic miracle will be fulfilled. The lame man shall leap as an hart and the tongue of the dumb will sing. The eyes of the blind will be opened and the deaf ears all unstopped. Then men shall see God with the eyes of the Spirit. Then will they be full of eyes, within and without. We marvel at a word of revelation now, but then will men hear and see and walk with the ears, the eyes and the power of the Spirit of God. Thus it was with Adam before his spiritual senses were dimmed by the deep sleep of death that fell upon him and thus will it be when all that was lost to us in the first Adam will be regained in the last Adam, who is Christ.

A few days had passed since our Lord had expounded the blessed truth of John, chapters four and five, when He led His disciples over the Sea of Galilee and, going up into a mountain, He lifted up His eyes and saw a great multitude of people following Him. This was the setting He required to introduce to all who had ears to hear and hearts to understand that Christ Himself is the bread of life that came down from heaven, of whom, if a man eat, he shall live forever. Seeing the multitudes, Jesus enquired of Philip, "Whence shall we buy bread that these may eat?" though He Himself knew exactly what He would do. To this query Philip mused, "Two hundred pennyworth of bread is not sufficient for them, that every one of them may take a little." But the gentle Andrew, never mentioned in scripture without being associated with his blustering brother, Peter, had a little suggestion, born of a faith in the wonderful power of the Christ he loved. "There is a lad here," said he, "which hath five barley loaves and two fishes. But what are they among so many?" I love this man Andrew. He was one of the two disciples who stood with John the Baptist and heard him say, "Behold the Lamb of God," and, leaving the beloved John, he went and asked, "Master, where dwellest Thou?" Jesus replied, "Come and see." And they abode with Him two days. It was this same Andrew who went and called his brother, Peter, saying,
"We have found the Messiah," and he brought him to Jesus. John 1:41. Andrew is the man who came to Jesus about certain Greeks who wanted to see the Christ, and he was the man who had evidently been chatting with some little boys in the throng, one of whom had confided to this kindly man that he had five barley loaves and two little fishes in his lunch basket. Andrew was not a mighty orator, but a man who mingled with the people, a blessed man who always knew what to do in every emergency, and the one thing above all else he was ready to do was to introduce men with their needs to that wonderful Lord Jesus Christ, who could meet them all.

Thus it was that Andrew said, "There is a lad here who hath five barley loaves," which I suppose a thoughtful mother had given the little fellow when he had asked her permission to go to hear the great prophet who had arisen in Israel. Not only did Andrew know the lad had the loaves in his lunch basket, but somehow he had discovered that the little fellow was willing to give them to Him who Himself is the bread of God, which came down from heaven. I love that little boy. Sermons without number have been preached about the feeding of the five thousand, but not too much has ever been said about the little lad who willingly offered his buns and sardines to the great Christ, who smiled and patted his head and said, "Thank you," as He took them to bless them and multiply them until a multitude of five thousand men, besides women and children, were more than filled and twelve basketsful of food were taken up afterward that nothing be lost. I cannot help but wonder what the lad thought when he saw the mighty increase that followed his offering.

Volumes could be written if we were to explore every aspect of the feeding of the thousands who swarmed about the Saviour that day, but the more important truth here is that which has received the briefest mention.
"And Jesus took the loaves; and when He had given thanks, He distributed to the disciples." John 6:11. These five words - when He had given thanks - hold the key that will unlock the door to all who would "eat His flesh" and "drink His blood" and so live forever. O, Spirit of God, grant us Thy secret wisdom which Thou hast reserved for the mature, but above all else give understanding. Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things which Thou hast prepared for them that love Thee, but Thou hast revealed them to us by Thy Spirit, for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God.

Those who tread these sacred courts are entering the realm of excellent glory. Take thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place where thou standest is holy ground. If we approach such sacred truth as the bread of life with an inquisitive or irreverent spirit instead of lifting up holy hands without wrath or doubting, we will eat condemnation to ourselves, and, instead of partaking of the life that raised Jesus from the dead, we will become weak and sickly and die before our time just as the apostle gave warning to the saints at Corinth, saying, "For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep." 1 Cor. 11:30.

In the beautiful story of the anointing of Saul, the son of Kish, recorded in 1 Samuel, chapter nine, it is said of Samuel (verse 13), "The people will not eat until he come, for he doth bless the sacrifice." We may conclude from this that the practice of blessing food before it is eaten has been a long, standing one among the Israelitish people. Our Lord Jesus Christ not only carried on the practice, but gave it a very special meaning, which with the help of His Spirit I will show you as clearly as I can. Be not, I pray you, like unto those careless partakers of loaves and fishes, who, after they had participated in such a heavenly manifestation of God's glory, went rushing by land and sea to find Christ, only to be told by Him, "Ye seek Me, not because ye saw the miracles, but because ye did eat of the loaves and were filled." What a tragedy that was and what a tragedy it is when Christians today seek Christ only for what benefit they hope to receive at His hand, without a thought of partaking of Him that they may become participants of the life that raised up Jesus from the dead!

The words of the blessed Master come ringing like a trumpet through the centuries, His accents falling like dew upon the listening ear, "Labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give you: for Him hath God the Father sealed." John 6:27.

From the mighty miracle of the loaves and fishes arose the even mightier discourse on the bread of life, a discourse filled with such profound truth and with such excellent hope for all who have ears to hear that my heart trembles to even begin to unfold the mysteries that lie hidden here, for what He said that day will blaze and burn eternally when worlds are burned away.

It is so easy to drive through beautiful scenery and see nothing but the ugly black top of the road. There are thousands who hum the music, but never sing the song. We listen with pleasure to a parable and never know that it contains the secret of life. It is so possible to sit on top of wealth and never dream it is there. My wife and I drove one day through a district in Saskatchewan where years of dearth and dust had driven many a valiant farmer to leave his hopes and dreams behind and move away. As we drove, we passed an abandoned farm yard, long forsaken by its owner. The buildings were gone and all that remained was the crumbling concrete basement of what had been the farmer's home. Standing not fifty feet from the abandoned basement was an oil well pumping vast wealth from some secret mine far below the forsaken wilderness waste on the surface. So it is with the church system of our day. While men and women starve for spiritual food and truth because hireling preachers have sermons to preach but no food to give, at our own right hand stands Jesus the Christ, saying, "This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die." John 6:50. Can you not hear Him saying to your spirit, "As the living Father hath sent Me, and I live by the Father: so he that eateth Me, even he shall live by Me?" Verse 57.

Almighty Father, banish our doubts and fears. Purge away the vain traditions that have been handed down for years, traditions that have reduced our mighty rocks to misty clouds, changed into hazy myth every sure word that Christ has spoken and turned the beautiful paths of the righteous into forked and rock strewn trails leading us to nowhere. Thou art the One who has said, "If any man thirst, let him come unto Me and drink." We have heard Thy voice in promise saying, "If any man hear My voice, and open the door, I will come in to him and sup with him and he with Me." Again today above the tumult of the world and beyond the vast expanse of the centuries our hearts catch the phrases that fell upon the ears of the multitude who saw the miracle of the loaves: "This is the bread which came down from heaven: not as your fathers did eat manna, and are dead: he that eateth of this bread shall live forever." John 6:58. Shall we who hear today believe and enter Thy excellent glory or shall we as they repeat the words of unbelief. "This is an hard saying; who can hear it"? Verse 60. Must it be said of us today as it was of them, "From that time many of His disciples went back, and walked no more with Him"?

Those who speak the truth are never the darlings of the world and those who hear the truth are always very few. We are living in that dark hour of Laodicea, a sad and pitiful time, when men love fables rather than truth, when Christians world wide have itching ears and will run nation wide to have them tickled. The path of the just, unpopular as it always has been with that worldly, giddy throng who listen to the music, but never hear the song, is as the shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day, a ray of dawn increasing until the day is full.

Nowhere in all scripture can we find more definite and profound statements than those given us in this mighty sermon concerning the bread of life. It is my purpose in the pages that follow to tell you exactly what Jesus said and emphasize the promises He made. If I understand not aright, then some day in endless realms of glory He will explain to me where I was wrong, but for both your sake and mine I now ask with the deepest possible respect why, if our blessed Lord did not mean what He said, He said it at all. I affirm that He must have meant what He said; otherwise there could not have been such a host of people who would not and could not believe those words of truth He spoke.

The miracle of the loaves and fishes had passed into history when the restless multitudes came swarming into Capernaum seeking for Jesus and, finding Him, they asked, "Rabbi, when earnest Thou hither?" To this Jesus replied, "Ye seek Me, not because ye saw the miracles, but because ye did eat of the loaves and were filled." This profound answer falling from the lips of Christ vividly displays how deceitful and desperately wicked the human heart can be. When we seek but cannot find, it is time to lay aside all business and pleasure that our hearts may be searched and made bare by the Holy Spirit and that He may put His finger upon the lock that hitherto has denied Him entrance through the door of our life. How easy it is to deceive ourselves by thinking that nothing in our life or attitude hinders our relationship with God! What disappointment, what disillusionment and chagrin are ours to think we are seeking Christ only to discover that we are not seeking Him, but the loaves and fishes we hope to get from Him! Tens of thousands today could be healed by the power of Christ should they come seeking Him instead of seeking the healing they hoped to get from Him.

"Labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give you: for Him hath God the Father sealed." In these closing days of time men's hearts are failing them for fear and worry, looking after the things that are coming upon the earth. They worry about Antichrist. They worry about making a living. They struggle with payments, often for things they do not need. They strive and strike for better conditions, forever fearful lest some evil should befall them and they be left adrift and in need. Men and women strive so hard to attain the paltry things that perish that they have no time to labor for the meat that endures unto everlasting life. Our hearts are caused to wonder what might happen if mankind, and especially the saints of the Lord, would reverse the trend and begin to labor for the things that endure unto everlasting life. If we loose the bands of wickedness, undo the heavy burdens, let the oppressed go free, break every yoke, deal our bread to the hungry, bring the poor that are cast out to our house, cover the naked, and hide not from our own flesh, then shall our light rise from obscurity, our health shall spring forth speedily, and our darkness shall be as noonday. Our righteousness shall go before us and the glory of the Lord be our rearward.

When the people heard the words of Jesus, "Labor not for the meat that perisheth," they enquired, "What shall we do that we might work the works of God?" O let us heed the reply He gave that day. "This is the work of God, that ye believe on Him whom He hath sent." To believe on Him whom God hath sent is very simple, is it not? Too simple, I fear, for minds that have been so preoccupied with great and mighty deeds that they have no time for simple believing. To the man who must be up and doing and trying to turn the world upside down, intent on instigating aggressive programs to try to "turn the tide", convert the world, or make an immortal name for himself, simple believing seems unimaginative to say the least. Yet I tell you the truth. It is better to believe the words of Jesus than to capture a city or defeat an army. It is better to believe His finished work than to compass land and sea to make many proselytes. It is better to believe than to build temples or have the adoration of men. To believe is better than sacrifice and to hear is better than the fat of rams. This is the work of God that ye believe on Him whom God hath sent. To believe on Christ is to partake of Christ. To believe is to partake of that meat which endures unto everlasting life. Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. "I am that bread of life," said Jesus. John 6:48. "I am the living bread which came down from heaven." Verse 51.

We must pause for a moment here to make the truth clear that, when we speak of the bread of life, it is Christ, the Word, who is the bread of life. "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God... In Him was life." John 1:1, 2. I see no difference between truth and that which truth speaks. Neither do I see a difference between the Word and that which the Word speaks. Every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God is a word proceeding from Himself. It is the spoken word proceeding from the living Word. See now the perfection of this symbol of living bread, for man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. "I am that living bread," Jesus said; therefore we conclude that it is Jesus Christ, the Word of God, who is Jesus Christ the bread of God. O what fruitless wars are waged because we refuse to eat that all encompassing sentence, "It is finished!"

Call to remembrance here that the truth given by Jesus Christ in this sixth chapter of John was so offensive to the people who heard it that, it is clearly written, "From that time many of His disciples went back and walked no more with Him." Verse 66. I shall not be surprised if the message contained herein is so offensive to some devout people that they will read no more. But truth lies not on the surface where swine may trample it with their feet, but it is like the jewels of a mine. It abides in its secret realm where it is hidden to all but those who search it out. Well did the wise sage say, "It is the glory of God to conceal a thing: but the honor of kings is to search out a matter." Prov. 25:2. Nowhere in all His teachings did our Lord make statements more difficult to the natural mind than those found in the sixth chapter of John. These declarations of heavenly truth, falling as they did on the dull ears of men who sought Him, not for who He was, but for what personal benefit they hoped to get from Him, were extremely offensive to their carnal minds, yet these words of life were spoken that the believing might see and, believing, partake of Him who is the bread of God and the bread of eternal life.

The more the Jews strove against the truth the more offensive the truth became. When they refused to believe that He was the bread of God that came down from heaven, a symbolism not too difficult to comprehend, then He made a statement that not only staggered their understanding and repulsed their sensibilities, but which causes the mind of man to flounder in our day as well. "Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink His blood, ye have no life in you." John 6:53. "The Jews therefore strove among themselves, saying, How can this man give us His flesh to eat?" And many of His disciples, when they had heard this, said, "This is an hard saying; who can hear it?" First of all we must believe; for "if ye will not believe, surely ye shall not be established." Isa. 7:9. The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; neither can he know them, for they are spiritually discerned. But there is a wisdom which God imparts to the mature and, when we seek Him, He enlightens our minds, and our minds being renewed by His Spirit, our bodies begin to experience the excellent glory of transformation as this corruptible begins to partake of incorruption.

The Word of God is the bread of God. To partake of the word, which He speaks is to partake of the living Word which He is. The flesh of Christ, which He said is "meat indeed", is the bread of life, the Word of God as it is written, "He that eateth My flesh and drinketh My blood, dwelleth in Me, and I in him." "This is that bread which came down from heaven." Verses 56, 58. Does this not clearly show that the bread of life and the flesh of which He speaks are one and the same thing? They are the meat of the Word and the bread of God, which is Christ, the Word of God.

Hear further how the scripture says, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." Then, that we might see that His Word is the flesh of which He speaks, it is clearly written, "The Word was made flesh and dwelt among us." Here we have a beautiful explanation of the symbolism Christ used, for it is plain that the flesh of which Christ says we must eat is His word and to believe His word is to eat the Word that was made flesh. His blood is eternal life; therefore to partake of eternal life is to drink His blood. "What shall we do that we might work the works of God," they asked, and He gave the clear answer: "This is the work of God, that ye believe on Him whom He hath sent." Verse 29. When we eat, we partake of our bread, and He who believes partakes of Christ, the true bread of life, which came down from heaven. Nothing can be received from God without believing faith. Every gift of God is part of Himself. Even Jesus, God's Son, is His gift to man.

Our Lord staggered their unbelieving minds yet more when He spoke the seemingly impossible words, "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink His blood, ye have no life in you." The blood of Christ is eternal life as the word of God clearly teaches. The British scientist, Dr. Langmuir, pointed out that blood plasma is congealed light. What a wonderful revelation that is! When Christ spoke of drinking His blood, He was telling us to partake of His life, and because blood is light, He was bidding us partake of the light, which He is. If we partake of life, we become life. When we partake of light, we become light, for as the Father hath life in Himself, so hath He given to the Son (sons) to have life in Himself. These are wonderful statements to those who can believe and receive them, but they are statements that drive the unbelieving and the scorners away so that he departs scornful, striving, unbelieving, empty and sad. O to be like that blind man who cast away his earthly garment in his desire to get to Christ! Mark 10:50.

I have sought to explain the spiritual meaning of eating His flesh and drinking his blood that we might receive the beautiful truths spoken in the sixth chapter of John with faith and understanding rather than with questioning and unbelief as did the throngs who were able to eat loaves and fishes, but could not partake of the Word that was made flesh or the eternal life that was in the blood. "It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth noting; the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." John 6:63.

Let us now turn our attention to the excellent glory of which He spoke to the multitudes who, though they had freely partaken of the loaves and fishes that Christ had blessed, were now totally unable to partake of the twelve basketsful of fragments - living bread that remains for those who are able to believe His word.

In answer to their question, "What must we do that we may work the works of God," Jesus had said, "Believe on Him whom God hath sent," but see how impossible it is for the carnal mind to break out of its prison of carnality. Believing! What was that to them? Their dull minds craved the spectacular, the supernatural and that which would supply all natural things. As the woman of Samaria, unawakened to her need, said, "Give me this water that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw," so these men now asked, "What sign showest Thou that we may see, and believe Thee? What dost Thou work?" As though they had not already seen signs enough to make a devil believe, they now ask for more. "Our fathers did eat manna in the desert; as it is written, He gave them bread from heaven to eat." Verses 30, 31. How patient was our Lord in the face of their blindness and striving for natural things! It must be remembered, however, that it was for the faithful, not the unbelieving, that these truths proceeded forth from the mouth of God. Such divine pronouncements, though true, are impossible except to those who believe. If we follow church tradition, we will never believe them. They seem designed to make unbelievers even more unbelieving. If we follow what we have seen and always accepted, we will never believe them. In my heart I feel that the words Jesus spoke that day must be in some measure reserved for those of us who were to live in the end of the age, that glorious hour which Jacob Boehme spoke of as the "time of the lily", which is the time of the resurrection. Listen carefully then to what the mighty Rabbi said: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, Moses gave you not that bread from heaven; but My Father giveth you the true bread from heaven." I could be wrong in my paraphrase, but this is what I think our Lord meant: "Moses gave you not that bread." That is to say, "Moses did not give that bread to you; he gave it to your fathers, but My Father giveth you the true bread." It is like saying the law was given by Moses. It was intended for those who lived in that dispensation, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ for those who live today. So now He is saying, "Moses gave manna to your fathers, but God now gives the true bread to you," for the bread of God is He which came down from heaven. Verse 33. The woman of Samaria, bedeviled by the darkness of the natural mind, had said, "Sir, give me this water, that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw." John 4:15. Now these say, "Lord, evermore give us this bread," (verse 34), but they murmured at Him because He said, "I am the bread that came down from heaven." Verse 41.

Take heed now that, as their unbelief increased, so the words of Christ became even more profound as He introduces to any who will believe that excellent glory of life that has been hidden to all mankind since that doeful day in Eden when the dark gloom of death displaced that excellent glory of life. Had our blessed Lord and Christ not spoken so boldly then, I would not dare to do so now. Though we believe, our hearts painfully cry, "Lord, help mine unbelief!" Then Jesus said unto them, "I am the bread of life. Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness, and are dead. This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die. I am the living bread which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he shall live forever: and the bread that I will give is My flesh, which I will give for the life of the world." Verses 49-51. I seek to prove nothing to any dark and carnal mind, but to those who believe, this is what He said: Your fathers ate manna and are dead. Verse 49. This is the bread which cometh down from heaven that a man may eat thereof and not die. Verse 50. Our minds stagger before this weight of truth. Though these are very plain statements, they bewilder our minds until we, like Saul of Tarsus, cannot see for the glory of that light. But these amazing words of wonderment proceed forth from the lips of Christ, who cannot lie. This truth, haltered for ages in the death house of religious tradition, is truth destined to be revealed in the last days. Since He takes away the first that He might establish the second, then this excellent glory of incorruption is the second, that is to be established after the first has been taken away. When healing of the mortal flesh has been taken away, resurrection life must be established. Man who lives by bread alone must of necessity die as our fathers perished in the wilderness, but he who lives by the bread of God, that living word that proceeds from the mouth of God, shall experience change and transformation as it is written: "This corruptible must put on incorruption and this mortal must put on immortality."

"I am the bread of life," Jesus spoke the word. "He that cometh to Me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on Me shall never thirst." Verse 35. All too often precious saints write their pathetic letters, plaintively telling how starved they are for spiritual food. They go to church regularly, but receive no bread of heaven to abate their hunger or water of life to slake their thirst. Ah, dear friend, how often must I remind you that instead of going to church you should be coming to Jesus, for "he that cometh to Me shall never hunger, and he that believeth on Me shall never thirst." You cannot go to church. If you are a child of God, you are the church. Let those blessed saints who are hungering and thirsting for God hear the words of God: "As the living Father hath sent Me, and I live by the Father: so he that eateth Me, even he shall live by Me." Verse 57. In like manner as Jesus, God's Son, derived all His life from the Father, so now are we to receive our life from Him. He is the bread that comes down from heaven. Not as our fathers did eat manna and are dead: he that eateth this bread shall live forever. It is the Spirit that quickeneth. The flesh profiteth nothing.

In writing these truths, which to the natural mind are both impossible and unbelievable, there is but little that we can add to the plain statements Jesus Himself has given. To try to enlarge upon His word is an impossible task. How can any man say with greater clearness that believers here and now may partake of that life which He is, that they will never see death, and that the grave itself will be robbed of its prey, than to quote the words of the Master Himself, "I am the bread of life?" "Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness and are dead. This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die." These staggering statements are infallible truth coming from the lips of Christ, who is both the truth and the life in one. If the death that our fathers died in the wilderness was a physical death, then the death of which Christ here speaks must also be physical. Would you not say so? We cannot compare apples to oranges; neither can we affirm that the death they died was physical while the life we live is spiritual. Such juggling of speech is artful dodging and leaves us with no continuity of language at all. If the first is physical, so is the second. If the first is spiritual, so is the second.

Some well-meaning soul will immediately insist, "It is appointed unto man once to die." Yes, that is true; but is it not also true that man outside of Christ is already dead? How can he become any more dead than he is? Did Paul not say, "I was alive without the law once, but when the commandment came, sin revived, and I died"? And did not this same inspired man say with incredible clearness, "If Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin; but the spirit is life (alive) because of righteousness"? Can a body be more dead than dead? But Paul was sharing both the wisdom and the promise of Jesus when he hastened to add for the edification of every believer, "But if the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken (make alive) your mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in you." Rom. 8:11. "He shall make alive your mortal body!" Is this not what Jesus was promising when He confounded the Jews, and His own disciples also, by saying, "I am the living bread which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he shall live forever, and the bread that I will give is My flesh, which I will give for the life of the world"? John 6:51.
When our Lord Jesus made these tremendous pronouncements, the unbelieving multitudes gave way to violent argument and demeaning abuse. "How can this man give us His flesh to eat?" they growled in disgust. "This is an hard saying; who can hear it?" they murmured in unbelief. "Whom maketh Thou Thyself?" they heckled, and uttered many other such statements of resentment and unbelief until many of his disciples went back and walked no more with Him. O that believers would learn that it is the Spirit that quickeneth. The flesh profiteth nothing. The words He spoke that day were both Spirit and life. Was it not the Spirit of life who rose up Christ from the dead? Is it not the Spirit who quickeneth all who believe in His name? Was it not His Spirit who imparted eternal life to us, even the life that is in His Blood? Shall not He who fulfilled His promise in quickening our spirit also make good His promise to make alive our mortal flesh by His Spirit that dwelleth in us? Impossible, some will say. Has such a thing ever been known? No, not in the history of the whole world. But are they right in making such an assertion as this? Has not the scripture clearly stated that "Enoch, the seventh from Adam, walked with God, and was not, for God took Him"? And again, Paul affirms, "By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death; and was not found, because God had translated him: for before his translation he had this testimony, that he pleased God." Did he not escape the grave? And Elijah, too. Was he not translated and "taken up" in a fiery whirlwind into heaven? Of Melchisedec it is written that he had neither beginning of days nor end of life. And what must we conclude of John, the apostle, who in the sixth chapter of his book recorded these life-giving words of Christ? For when Jesus had told Peter by what manner he should glorify Christ, Peter, perhaps in deference to John, who had once enquired for him concerning the traitor, now returned the compliment by asking for John, "What shall this man do?" John 21:21. Jesus replied with words freighted with meaning, "If he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?" John 21:22. It is true that Jesus did not say that John would not die, as is stated in verse 23, but He let it be known that such a blessing was by no means beyond the realm of possibility. It is a matter of more than passing consideration that, though history records the martyrdom of each of the other eleven apostles, there is no known record that John ever died. It is also important to know that none of the twelve apostles died a natural death, but each and every one of them except John laid down his life in martyrdom. I am convinced that to die is one thing, but to lye down one's life is another.

The more I heed the word of God and the more intently I listen to the voice of the Holy Spirit, the more I am convinced that we have neither been listening nor paying attention to what our Lord has been clearly saying. Because we have been unable to grasp what He said, we have passed over it with seldom an earnest thought, but often a carnal argument. For the most part all our human arguments arise because of inbred tradition, that progenitor of faithlessness and unbelief. "If any man keep My saying," said Jesus, "he shall never see death," but to this triumphant statement His tradition bound disputers replied with taunting sarcasm and derisive contempt, 'Wow we know that Thou hast a devil. Abraham is dead and the prophets; and Thou sayest, If a man keep My saying, he shall never see death. Art Thou greater than our father Abraham, which is dead? and the prophets are dead: whom makest Thou Thyself?' John 8:52, 53. It is so easy to raise questions and produce what appears to be irrefutable arguments, but it is something else altogether just to close in with Christ and accept with gladness the word of faith He spoke.

The book of John is a very remarkable book. It is as much the revelation of Jesus Christ as is the book of Revelation itself. Its theme is Jesus Christ, the Son of God, masterfully laid out in the first verses of the evangel. "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God." In chapter one Christ is presented as the Word of God. In chapter four He is the water of life. In chapter six He is the bread of life. In chapter eight He is the light of the world. In chapter ten He is the good shepherd that enters by the door and the door by which the shepherd enters. In chapter eleven He is the resurrection and the life. In chapter twelve He is the anointed sacrifice. In chapter fourteen He becomes the head of the body of Christ and the giver of the Spirit in whom all are baptized into His body. In chapter fifteen He becomes the true vine, drawing His life from the Father and we become the branches, drawing our life from Him. In chapter seventeen He is the intercessor, the mediator, between God and man. In chapter twenty He becomes the sacrifice and in chapter twenty-one He is the firstfruit of the resurrection.

This synopsis is far too brief to be of much value, but it serves to demonstrate that our Lord and Saviour is all things to all men. He who is the word of life is also the bread of life. He who is the bread of life is also the water of life, and He who is the water of life is also the Spirit of life. He who is the Spirit of life is also the light of life. From Him everything comes, by Him everything exists, and in Him everything ends.
As our rejoicing hearts hear our Lord say, "I am the living bread which came down from heaven: if a man eat this bread, he shall live forever," these inspired words of Paul come echoing down the corridors of time: "We that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened, not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life." 2 Cor. 5:4. O brethren, give heed to these words of inspiration, for here lies the key to that life of which Jesus spoke - "that mortality might be swallowed up of life" "For if the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in you." Rom. 8:11. These wonderful statements of truth show that, when Jesus said we would live and not die, He was telling beforehand that the Spirit would change our bodies from corruptible to incorruptible and from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord.

Let us now consider some other faithful words of inspiration that point unerringly to the truth of this excellent glory of change and transformation. Paul in his letter to Timothy, speaking of Jesus Christ, made this wonderful assertion that we can only describe as breathtaking: "Who hath saved us and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began, but is now made manifest by the appearing of our Saviour Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." 2 Tim. 1:9, 10. Now what are we going to conclude when we read that Christ has abolished death and brought life and immortality to light? Shall we believe these words of inspiration or shall we man the defenses of our dead tradition and deny that God's word means what it says? "Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, He also Himself took part of the same; that through death He might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil; and deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage." Heb. 2:14, 15.

The word abolish is an exceedingly powerful transitive verb. It means to put an end to, to do away with, to annul, to destroy. The synonyms of the verb are: annihilate, exterminate, eradicate, extirpate, and terminate. The word abolish is used only of institutions or conditions - never of people. Let us be doubly certain then that, when Paul made the statement that Christ has abolished death, he was using the strongest possible term regarding the termination of that dreadful institution, and, when he declares in the same sentence that Christ has brought to light life and immortality, He has taken away the first by abolishing it to establish the second, which is immortality. When God's people are faced with such truth as this, they are obliged to either believe and eat the word, which is life eternal, or turn aside and cuddle their traditions as did those unbelieving Jews in the long ago.

The notable English mystic, William Law, writing in about the year 1750, made the following statement, to which we all must give sincere and earnest heed lest we, like those who rejected Christ and the truth He brought, should refuse Him that speaketh from heaven simply because His truth upsets our tradition. Thus writes William Law: "Consider how it is that the carnal Jew, the deep-read scribe, the learned rabbi, the religious Pharisee not only did not receive but crucified their Saviour. It was because they willed and desired no such Saviour as He was, no such inward salvation as He offered them. They desired no change of their nature, no inward destruction of their own natural tempers, no deliverance from the love of themselves and the enjoyments of their passions. They liked their state, the gratifications of their old man, their long robes, their broad phylacteries and greetings in the market. They wanted not to have their pride and self love dethroned, their covetousness and sensuality to be subdued by a new nature from heaven derived into them. Their only desire was the success of Judaism, to have an outward Saviour, a temporal Prince that should establish their law and ceremonies over all the earth. And therefore they crucified their dear Redeemer and would have none of His salvation because it all consisted in a change of their nature, in a new birth from above, and a kingdom of heaven to be opened within them by the Spirit of God. O Christendom, look not only at the old Jews, but see thyself in this glass, for at this day, (O sad truth to be told), at this day Christ within us, an inward Saviour raising a birth of His own nature, life and Spirit within, is rejected as gross enthusiasm. The learned rabbis take counsel against it. The propagation of popery, the propagation of Protestantism, the success of some particular church is the salvation which priests and people are chiefly concerned about."

We will never understand the machinations of the natural mind. It is such a lying, two-faced hypocrite that there is no grasping the depths of its duplicity. While it shouts, "I want God" with one mouth, it contradicts all Christ says with the other. Even while it is swearing fidelity to the truth of the word of God, it is tearing truth to shreds in an evil attempt to make it conform to tradition. Time and time again I am moved to exhort God's people to come out from every phase of the church system. It is full of dead men's bones. It has become a habitation of devils and a hold for every unclean and hateful bird. Yet for all this people refuse to budge, preferring rather to be fed the meager crumbs of tradition on a garnished table with sounding brass and tinkling cymbal and the voice of many words than to feast on the bread of life in obscurity.

So with the ancient priesthood with their broad phylacteries, their long prayers in public, their love of being addressed as Rabbi, father and reverend, strutting about like peacocks in their long robes, robbing widows in their penury, binding heavy burdens upon the people, but unwilling to touch them with one of their fingers, and so it is today. Amid this impious cesspool of Pharisaic hypocrisy the blessed Christ came to His own, but His own received Him not. They wanted none of His gospel to the poor, His healing of the broken-hearted, or the recovering of sight to the blind. They were not interested in His delivering the captive or setting at liberty them that are bruised, and as for His preaching the acceptable year of the Lord - they cared not a whit about that. On with the program! Advance the tradition! Fill the earth with our order and bring in a temporal kingdom where things will be done our way! That was what they wanted, and so they hissed, "He has a devil. Why hear ye Him?" "Abraham is dead and the prophets are dead. Whom makest Thou Thyself?" they jeered. And so amid the rising crescendo of their blasphemous taunting they screamed, "Away with such a fellow from the earth! Crucify Him! Crucify Him! It is not fit that He should live."

"Careless seems the great Avenger;
    History's pages but record
One death grapple in the darkness
Twixt old systems and the Word.
    Truth forever on the scaffold,
Wrong forever on the throne;
Yet that scaffold sways the future;
And behind the dim unknown
Standeth God within the shadows
Keeping watch upon His own."

Lowell.

No matter to what extent the religious systems murder the innocent and resist the truth, our great heavenly Father always has a people who eagerly partake of living bread. The apostle Paul, who knew too well the violent contradictions of scribes and priesthood, left this beautiful exhortation so full of meaning to the brethren of all ages who would follow Christ and give heed to His voice above the clamor and din of earth's vain religions: "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God." Rom. 12:1, 2. Among the tender mercies of God I can think of nothing greater than that a believer may partake of that living bread which came down from heaven, of which, Jesus solemnly said, if a man eat, he shall live forever. It must have been with this truth burning in his heart that Paul in Romans, chapter 12, begins to beseech the elect saints by the mercies of God to present their bodies to Christ as a living sacrifice. Their spirits, though alive because of the Christ within, were still dwelling in dead bodies, but now the time is come for the Spirit of Him who raised up Christ from the dead to also "make alive" our mortal bodies by His Spirit dwelling within. If the saints will follow the path of spiritual progress through the book of Romans, they will see man advancing through the realm of the grace of God from the place of a rebel against Christ to justification, sanctification and full sonship, which is adoption.

I make this declaration with confidence, knowing that full sonship comes only with the redemption of the body, as Paul taught in Rom 8:23.1 am not a Greek scholar by any means, but a little research in either Young's or Strong's Concordance or any English-Greek Lexicon will show us that the word transformed in Rom. 12:2, quoted above, is translated from the Greek word metamorphoo, from which comes our English word metamorphosis. The word metamorphosis, according to Funk and Wagnall's Dictionary, means to change from one form or shape or substance to another. (Biological meaning): Any marked development in the form and structure of an animal in its development from embryo to adult, as from chrysalis to butterfly or tadpole to frog.
It is a great confirmation to know that the word rendered transfigured (Matt. 17:2) is also derived from the same root word metamorphoo. That wonderful vision given to the three disciples when Christ was transfigured before them actually demonstrates before our very eyes exactly what the word of God means by being transformed. In that heavenly hour when Jesus was transformed or transfigured on the holy mount according to Matt. 17:2, His face shone as the sun and His raiment was white as the light. Mark in his gospel adds that His raiment became shining, exceeding white as snow so as no fuller on earth could white them, Mark 9:3, and Luke 9:29 sums up with the significant words: "His countenance was altered and his raiment was white and glistening." The reader is aware that the word glistering indicates the shining as from an inward light rather than to glisten from a reflected light. The shining of the sun is from an inward light; the shining of the moon is from a reflected light. It was probably for this reason that Matthew affirmed, "His face did shine as the sun," and Luke for the same reason used the word glistering.

There is a marked distinction between incorruption and immortality. The meaning of the former is "not subject to decay or spoilage." The meaning of the later is unending existence; eternal life. It is my opinion, however, that the dictionary meaning falls far short of the Bible meaning. Even that one text, 1 Tim. 6:16, which, when speaking of Jesus Christ, states, "Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see," indicates that this more excellent glory of immortality far excels incorruption, glorious as that blessed state may be.

Notice now that in 2 Tim. 1:10 this enlightening statement is made: "Who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light..." The first attainment, then, is incorruption - a state in which death is abolished. The second is immortality, which brings life and immortality to light. For this very reason Paul, when teaching the resurrection of the dead, stated first, "this corruptible must put on incorruption," and second, "this mortal must put on immortality." 1 Cor. 15:53. "So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, "Death is swallowed up in victory (or life)." Verse 54.

It is concerning this change from corruption to incorruption that Paul is speaking. "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind..." Rom. 12:1, 2. We must certainly have noticed that the exhortation to the saints here is that they present their bodies a living sacrifice. We presented our spirits to God when first we confessed our sins and believed on Christ the Lord. At that moment we were quickened and our spirits became alive, as it is written, "You hath He quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins." Eph. 2:1. But, though Christ be in us, the body is dead because of sin, though the Spirit is life (alive) because of righteousness. Rom. 8:10. We who have been saved and our spirits made partakers of eternal life have not yet presented our bodies to Christ for salvation as we formerly presented our souls to Him. As the burnt offerings were laid upon the altar long ago, so now the apostle calls upon the saints to present their corrupt bodies as living sacrifices that we may be transformed and begin here and now to partake of that deathless state of incorruption where degeneration is no more and decay is a thing of the past.

The body is not only the seat of the carnal nature, but the body is itself the carnis. (Latin meaning flesh.) This fact - that the physical body is the flesh of which the Bible speaks so often - is a fact that cannot be over emphasized. Preachers have preached and teachers have taught about the flesh, the flesh, the flesh, for centuries, never once realizing that the flesh of which they spoke is the corrupt body, the carnis, which continually wars against the redeemed spirit, bringing it into subjection even as spoken by Jesus to His dozing disciples, "The spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak." Matt. 26:41. O how unutterably true those words are! The flesh (the corrupt body) lusteth against the Spirit and the Spirit against the flesh, so that we cannot do the things we would. It has always been thus. It is today and it will always remain so until we present our bodies as living sacrifices that transformation may take place.

It must now be noted that this transformation is accomplished by the renewing of the mind. The vast majority of God's people have walked all their lifetime, not being led by the Spirit, but following instead the dictates of the body. At every turn of the road it is the body that hinders spiritual progress. Should we not believe this, we have only to consider how many hours a day are spent sleeping just to rest the body. Consider how many hours each day are spent preparing meals to feed the body and how many hours are spent eating and drinking, bathing and washing, primping, choosing clothes, relaxing, amusing oneself and many other such innocent activities. These things are not sinful - far from it. The truth is that most of them are essential, but place in contrast all the hours we must spend just to keep the body fed, clothed, rested and comfortable with those few minutes spent edifying the spirit and we will easily see that for our whole lifetime we are bond slaves to the body. O so often people write to tell me, "Do not send me any more literature. I have no time to read," but if they told the truth, they would likely say they have plenty of time to read the news, the magazines and novels to entertain the carnal mind or watch the late night shows with their violence and crime as thousands of Christians do. Don't tell me there is no time to edify the spirit and commune with Christ. There is plenty of time to do what we want to do, but the truth is that most Christians find time for those things that pertain to the realm of the flesh.

The hour must come when the realm of the flesh is abandoned and Christ becomes Lord and Master, that those who live in the Spirit also walk in the Spirit. This is the place of the renewing of the mind. "Let this mind dwell in you, which was also in Christ Jesus," Paul says. The mind of Christ is the Father's mind. It is the mind that transforms the human chrysalis to the heavenly butterfly, the corruptible to the incorruptible, the finite to the infinite.

In the light of Paul's teaching - "Be ye transformed by the renewing of the mind" - it is of singular interest to note that biologists have determined that, when a caterpillar enters its cocoon, the process of change from the chrysalis to the butterfly is caused by a certain hormone in the tiny brain of the insect. In other words the metamorphosis begins in the creature's mind. In the light of this biological fact is it not most remarkable that Paul said by inspiration, "Be ye transformed by the renewing of the mind?" All our lifetime we have been subject to the bondage of corruption and death and of the carnal mind, which is the mind concerned only with the body. Hundreds of billions of dollars are spent every year in an attempt to keep people from dying, yet for all this they know they will die. But in Rom 12:1, 2 a truth is introduced showing that the transformation of the body will begin with the renewing of the mind. What other reason could the apostle possibly have had for exhorting the saints to present their mortal bodies as a living sacrifice? It was that they might be transformed by the mind of Christ dwelling within. If ever a reason was given for a change of mind and a renewal of understanding, this must be it: "Be ye transformed by the renewing of the mind."

Open the cocoon of a worm while the insect is in the process of metamorphosis and you will discover that within that death cell is such a mass of corruption that one would be hard put to it to imagine how anything as graceful and beautiful, if not heavenly, as a butterfly could possible emerge from it. What a spiritual lesson this is as we look upon our dying bodies, convinced that only the grave is a fit place for such as we are! Yet patient Job, sitting in dust and ashes amid the stinking mass of his own corruption, breathed the words, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and He shall stand in the latter days upon the earth: and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." The renewed mind soars by faith far beyond the visible corruption of the natural to the realm of the Spirit and incorruption where the mind of Christ transforms our corruption to incorruption, speeding the day when this mortal shall put on immortality.

Paul was following the teaching of Jesus when he said, "Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect: but I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus." Phil. 3:12. In the Old Testament sacrifice of the burnt offering the sacrificial animal was killed at the door of the tabernacle. It was flayed, its legs and entrails were washed, the whole animal was cut in pieces and all the parts with the head and the fat were laid upon the altar and burned to ashes. Lev. 1:3-9. This was the whole burnt offering. It was typical, of course, of the presentation of our bodies as living sacrifices to Christ. When Paul therefore reverently exhorts, "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice," this is that the old may be consumed by the fire of God, thus showing how complete that living sacrifice must be. The burnt offering of the Old Testament was transformed into ashes, but the living sacrifice we present is transformed to the deathless state beyond corruption, even as Jesus displayed when He was transfigured on the holy mount.

The full truth concerning this more excellent glory is far too extensive to be fully dealt with here; therefore, by the mercies of God, I beseech you as Paul did to consider with prayer and great carefulness the presentation... of your bodies as a living sacrifice, even as the Holy Spirit has taught in Rom. 12:1-2. We are to present ourselves living, holy, and acceptable to God. This is not considered some special sacrifice on our part, but is rather our reasonable service.

We are told that we are to be no longer conformed to the world. Pitiful is the indisputable fact that an incredible number of God's people are inordinately conformed to the world. In our day of outer darkness and delusion deceived preachers from the pulpit and on the air are telling the people that Christians should have the best of everything in the world. They should have the best homes, drive the top grade cars, wear the most elegant clothes, and have plenty of money to bestow on their outward show. These preachers are deceiving the people. They neither speak the words of Christ, who said, "In the world ye shall have tribulation," nor are they speaking the words of the apostle, who said, "Be not conformed to the world," or "Having food and raiment, let us be content." They do not remember that the love of money is the root of all evil, which, when men covet, causes them to err from the truth and to pierce themselves through with many sorrows. Heed none of these deceivers who would have you believe that gain is godliness, but follow after Christ out of a pure heart. These deceivers, disguised as angels of light and light bringers to the earth, are not only conformed to the world themselves but they teach others to follow their pernicious ways. The man who gives in hope of receiving abundance in return is giving with the wrong spirit and with the wrong end in view. "Be not conformed to the world" was the exhortation of the faithful Paul. Shun its programs. Avoid its amusements. Keep clear of its deceptions. Shy away from the worldly church system, for it is Babylon. Eschew the very appearance of evil. Love not the world or any of the things that are in the world, for all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, are not of the Father, but of the world; and the world with all its passionate desires will one day disappear, but the man who does God's will is part of the permanent and cannot die.

Thus Paul, having said, "Be not conformed to the world," followed this instruction with a statement which to every natural mind is incredible, if not preposterous, Even God's own people pass it by with scarcely a moment's meditation. "Be ye transformed by the renewing of the mind." Be transfigured, be changed, or metamorphosed even as Christ demonstrated to three men on the holy mount. This transformation must have been Paul's burning quest when, writing to the Philippians, he burst forth in prayer: "That I may know Him, and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings, being made conformable unto His death; if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead. Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect: but I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus." How could Paul have stated more clearly than he did that he was fervently expecting to experience the power of the resurrection during his life time? The margins of some Bibles read, "That I may attain the out resurrection from among the dead ones."

"Our conversation is in heaven," Phil 3:20, that is, our manner of living is in the heavenly realm, for that is what conversation means in this sentence, "from whence we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ: who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto His glorious body, according to the working whereby He is able even to subdue all things unto Himself." Phil. 3:20, 21.

Centuries ago dear Martha stood weeping at the grave of her beloved brother Lazarus. John, Chapter 11. Jesus said unto her, "Thy brother shall rise again." "I know," she sobbed from a broken heart, "that he will rise in the resurrection at the last day." To this truth Jesus responded, "I am the resurrection, and the life; he that believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth in Me shall never die. Believeth thou this?" How could she believe? Did not all history bear witness that such a thing could never be? And yet history had never heard of anyone like Jesus of Nazareth; neither had any ever appeared on earth's scene of death and darkness who could say, "I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth in Me shall never die." "Believeth thou this?" He asked the weeping woman, arousing a glow of hope in her heart. Again today He is asking those of us who hear His promise, "Believeth thou this?" Let these words sink down deep into our ears, for the hour of resurrection and transformation is at hand. Once again His voice is speaking from the excellent glory, bearing the glad tidings of an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for those who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time.
Therefore we follow after, forgetting the things, which are behind and reaching forth unto the things that are before, if by any means we might attain that "out resurrection from among the dead ones." This is the more excellent glory ready to be revealed in the last times.

"He that has formed us for this very purpose is God, who has given us His Spirit as a guarantee." 2 Cor 5:4 (Weymouth).

CHAPTER FOUR
BEHOLDING THE MORE EXCELLENT GLORY

PART FOUR

For years I wondered why it was that a college graduation exercise, at which students receive diplomas for work accomplished, is called Commencement until a remark by a friend made me realize that the graduating students were not really graduating, but were only commencing to put their studies into practice. Their graduation was in reality a beginning rather than an ending and a commencement rather than a termination. What they had learned in theory was only a smattering of what they would learn in practice as the days extended into months, the months into years, and the years into a lifetime of experience. Far more would be learned in the college of experience than had been learned in theory and they would undoubtedly find by experience that at least some of their theory would fall far short of the truth.

Astronomers studying the heavens for centuries had formed many conclusions about the planet Saturn, but, when the pictures came back from the exploring satellite, they were astonished to find that a closer look had exploded almost all their long established theories. So shall we Christians find that, in drawing nigh to our blessed Lord, who in loving kindness draws near to us, practically all the established dogmas of learned theologians will be exploded when we see Him as he is. "What things were gain to me" said Paul, "those I counted loss for Christ. Yea, doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord. When we see Him as He is at close range and face to face, we "suffer the loss of all things," and, finding them old, useless, and ready to vanish away, we purge ourselves of them as we would of dung that we may lay hold of the glory of Christ and be found in Him without spot or blemish.

I feel assured that the three preceding chapters concerning the more excellent glory are illuminations of great significance in this present hour. I have felt the presence of Christ as I have written them and I know they are inspired. My earnest request is that all who have read them will read and reread them with diligence and prayer. If these truths are reread six months from now, the searcher will find that not only his understanding has been increased, but rays of new light are shining from their pages. It is careless and wrong to casually read these revealing truths and then imagine we know them. Our reading of them is only a commencement exercise. All the glory of experience lies ahead. In Christ we know nothing until we know it experimentally. All the "following after" and "pressing toward" preceed the "apprehending." The things which eye hath not seen, or ear heard, neither have entered the heart of man are the things that come to the diligent seeker after truth. Herein is the scripture fulfilled, "Seek and ye shall find; knock and it shall be opened; for he that seeketh findeth, and to him that knocketh it shall be opened."

Dearly beloved brethren, I leave the following truth for your consideration, but only the wise will understand it. Though God is light, He hides Himself in the shadows. "He covereth Himself with thick darkness." Ah, but you ask, "Why would the Lord intentionally hide Himself?" It is to assure that only those who seek Him with all their hearts will find Him. The prize is to those who diligently seek with a pure, undivided heart, as it is written: "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." The Lord is not far from any one of us. Draw nigh to God and He will advance toward you, but you must seek him without alloy. Never seek things; only seek God. From the dilatory, the reluctant, the sluggish, the dawdling, the procrastinator and the spiritually lazy He always hides Himself. These never come to know Him. They may believe, but faith is never active in their hearts. You cannot serve God and Mammon (Mammon, the Syrian god of riches, personifies riches and greed), therefore you are unwise to try. You cannot live after the demands of the body, which, of course, is the flesh, and still attain to the realm of the Spirit; so do not try. You cannot put on the graces of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long suffering, brotherly love and charity until you have put off anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, lying and filthy communication out of your mouth. So do not try. You cannot put on the new man until with repentance you have put off the old man. You cannot have the mind of Christ until you have put off the carnal mind. So do not waste your time trying. Men and women who talk about sonship but who have never been cleansed from tobacco and alcohol have not yet truly repented of sin. We have every reason to doubt their profession.

Instead of seeking worldly pleasure and associates and scheming to attain every glittering thing this world has to offer, seek rather to let that mind dwell in you which was also in Christ Jesus, "who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God; but made Himself of no reputation and took upon Him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men: and, being found in fashion as a man, He humbled Himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." Now see the result of a spiritual mind like His in the words that follow: "Wherefore God hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a name which is above every name: that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." Phil. 2:6-11.

Let us not then lightly lay aside this truth of the more excellent glory, which the Holy Spirit has illumined and of which the word of God speaks in such awesome and reverential terms. Let us rather lay hold on the prize that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the majesty on high. Therefore, seeing we have this ministry, let us faint not. Let us renounce the hidden things of dishonesty, not walking in craftiness or handling the word of God deceitfully; for God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined into our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ. We are troubled on every side, but not distressed; persecuted, but not forsaken; knocked down, but not knocked out, always bearing about in our bodies that crucifixion of self, that dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life of Jesus might be made manifest in our bodies.

These are truths that vitally concern those who live on the earth just before the coming of our Lord. They do not concern those who, eating and drinking with the drunken, excuse themselves by saying, "My Lord delayeth His coming." They concern those who, like Enoch, walk with God.

We shall not attain that more excellent glory by any human striving, but we shall be like Him when we see Him as He is. Therefore let every man who has this hope dwelling in him depart from iniquity, together with all the love of the world, even as Enoch, who was translated that he might not see death. Seek not for visions. Pray not for spectacular manifestation of the Lord. Christ alone knows who you need. Therefore seek His face, listen to His voice, set aside holy times for fasting and prayer - not to bombard heaven with childish requests, but rather to listen to that voice speaking from heaven, which once in the days of Moses shook the earth and again declares, "Yet once more I shake, not the earth only, but also the heavens." The most necessary element in prayer is not speaking, but listening for that blessed voice that guides the universe speaking to our inner man. That was the voice that Adam heard as the perfumed breeze swept through the trees of lovely Eden. That was the voice that shook the earth when the fiery law was given at Sinai. It was the still small voice that spoke in love to the weary Elijah. Jesus is the speaking word, speaking better things than Abel. Refuse not Him who speaketh from heaven. Thine ear shall hear a voice behind thee, saying, "This is the way; walk ye in it."

I beseech you therefore, beloved saints of God, to give diligent heed to this mighty message of the hour, because it is only as we live in vital relationship with our blessed Christ that Christ is formed in us and the change progresses from glory to excellent glory to more excellent glory, even as by the Spirit of Christ dwelling in us.

We are drawing very near to the end of the age. The coming of the Lord is nigh. It is much nearer than we think and probably much different than we think. In the years that have passed many theories and doctrines have been formed concerning the coming of Christ, most of which, I fear, were the product of the natural mind and had little to do with the actual truth. The further we go with God the more we realize how little truth we have really known, and we realize, too, that the little we have known or thought we knew has hindered us from going on to the fullness and the glory of the coming of the Lord.

When our Lord came to earth some two thousand years ago, the scribes, Pharisees, and doctors of the law had their stereotyped doctrines and theories about the coming Messiah, but, when the King finally came, His coming was so contrary to their set theories that they did not recognize Him at all. The idea of the King of Israel being born in a manger was nonsense to them. The idea that He was to be lifted up on a cross was an even greater stumbling-stone. They were not in the least prepared to accept or receive any of these things because such things were contrary to all their preconceived ideas. So they gave their word against Him and hung Him on a cross saying, "Let His blood be upon us and upon our children." But the tradition of the church today is even more involved than the traditions of Israel. For centuries Christians have talked of the second coming of Christ. They have filled books with arguments about how and when and for whom He will come, but I fear that, when He does come, many will never know a thing about it or, if they do, they will reject Him because He will not have come in accordance with their theories.

There are a number of scriptures that I would like to consider with you. If you will let these gracious inspired words speak for themselves, there will be little need of explanation. First of all, however, there are a few things we should try to grasp and a few things we should let go.

No doubt there is a place for sound doctrine, but how good it would be if we could realize that doctrines as we know them are only articles of faith that have been set forth by certain sects for their people to accept and believe. Most of us imbibed the doctrines of the sect among whom we first believed. Doctrine that is set forth in this manner is not true doctrine. It is likely to have a fragment of truth but at best be only in part. It was likely living and real to the man to whom it was first revealed, but his successors merely received it as a tradition and it meant little or nothing to them and changed their lives not a whit. Doctrine that is not progressive in its scope is valueless. When a revelation becomes a tradition, it is practically worthless and serves only as an opiate to deaden the minds of those who accept it.

We are going to have to do more than accept dead doctrines. We are going to have to see the living Christ, for He is the Word of God and the Doctrine of God. It is going to take more than sermons on holiness and sanctification to make us holy and sanctified. We are going to have to see Him and be changed into His image. It is going to take a great deal more than meetings and human fellowship to bring us to a knowledge of God. We shall have to meet Him as Thomas and Paul and John met Him. We must hear His voice speaking to the deep recesses of our hearts. We must speak to Him and hear His answer and His command. Church meetings have been a blessing to us in our spiritual infancy even as the country school house was a blessing in our natural infancy. But church meetings have no ability to produce Christian maturity. Maturity can only come by personal association with Christ Himself. I am willing to stake my life and what feeble ministry I have on this assertion: no man or woman can ever become mature until he has cast off the yokes and bondages of human tradition and religion and has met Christ personally, spoken to Him face to face and heart to heart, and continued to walk in the ever increasing light and glory of what he saw. The Apostle Paul struck the keynote to the whole thing when he said, "When it pleased God who separated me from my mother's womb to reveal His Son in me, immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood."

Once a man has seen Christ, he has no need to confer with men, for man's traditions and ideas will stink in his nostrils and all human suggestions, thoughts, and ideas will be found to be desperately constricted, confined, and short of the mark. As the feeble flickering light of a wax candle fades before the rising of the glorious sun, so all human doctrine and understanding fades into insignificance and nothingness before the glorious rising of the sun of righteousness.

Just as sure as we live and move, the next great event in the order of things is that those who believe and are faithful are going to know the transcending glory of His appearing and they will see Him in His beauty. That one glimpse will do more for them in a second of time than all the meetings they have attended, all the songs they have sung, and all the doctrine they have listened to in their whole life.

Have you ever wondered what is the difference between a Pharisee who laboriously, fervently, and reverently adhered to the minutest commands of the law and a man like Paul who, though he made no effort to keep the law, had a far higher and richer standard of holiness than the Pharisee? I'll tell you what the difference is: Paul had met Christ personally. His eyes had beheld His wonderful beauty and purity and with that beholding he had been changed into that same image. To walk as Christ walked from henceforth was not a matter of slavish imitation of a hero or an idol but a matter of being. He walked like Christ because he was like Him, for his eyes had beheld Him. Yet the Pharisee, adhering strictly to his tradition, was only a slave to what he believed and at the end of his life was no more like his pattern or his doctrine than he was the day he began.

Has not the above also been the picture of the Christian? Here and there someone has met the Lord and been changed into His image, but the vast majority of so-called "born-again" people spend their lives in the shallows miserably trying to be like Jesus so that they will go to heaven when they die, but with the other side of their nature reaching out to partake of as much of the things of the earth as they feel they dare. No man who has heard the sweet sounds of heaven's music can lend his ear to earth's rasping discords. Much less can those whose eyes have seen the King in His beauty be entertained in their parlors by the adulterous seed of Hollywood. It is not a matter of do's and don'ts. It is a matter of whether or not we have seen Him.

How I wish that for a while at least God's people could forget their continual groaning and moaning for fellowship with people and for the rest of their lives concentrate on finding fellowship with Him. How I wish they could quit groaning for meetings and the wonderful days of the past and meet Christ personally for the first time in their life. You are not going to find Christ in meetings any more. If you are going to look for Him there, you are going to be disappointed, for the times are changing and old things are passing away. A new day and a new era is coming when men shall know God and His mind will dwell in them and they will walk in the light and glory of His will.

There is no greater authority on these things than the word of God itself. Paul the Apostle was ordained of God to bring Christians the teachings of the church age. He knew how a church meeting should be conducted and it must have been a glorious thing at times to meet together as he taught the people. But it is a source of wonder to see how right in the midst of his instructions about spiritual gifts and all the other wonderful things that were to take place in a public gathering he soared away into the Spirit to tell us of a more excellent way - a glorious way where all the former things would fall into decay, where prophecy would fail, tongues would cease, knowledge would vanish away, and preaching would be no more. Certainly none of these things are necessary in that realm where we meet Him face to face. Surely there is no need of seeing through a glass darkly when we have seen face to face. Surely there is no need of partial knowledge and partial prophecy when we know Him as He knows us.

How sad my heart often gets when I hear someone trying to explain from 1 Cor. 13 how we should show love. With all respect I must say that no one is ever helped by such teachings, for at best it can only make him an imitator and he is no more like Christ by being an imitator of Him than a parrot is like a man because he imitates him. The foundation and root of the whole matter of love is that God is love and that he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God and God in Him. There is no love apart from God for God is love, and God has manifested His love toward us in that He gave us His Son that we might have the love of God in us because His son is in us.

Our great need is not a return of the good old meetings of the past with all their tongues, interpretations, prophecies, healings and miracles, for we can have all these things, together with much more and still have absolutely nothing. Our need is to meet with Christ personally and individually and there find all the needs of a groaning creation are met by the fullness that dwells in Him. Love is not a thing. Love is a person, and God is that person.

Let us see now and take note of some of the strange and wonderful promises He left us for the last days. I am fully aware that the church has already explained away many of the wonderful things He left us as a sure inheritance. But these promises of Christ are true and, when they actually take place in those who believe them, their fulfillment is going to bring about the transformation of the ages.

We are not following some cunningly devised fable when we look in faith for Christ to manifest Himself to us personally. He has told us by His word of truth that, "unto those who look for Him shall He appear the second time without sin unto salvation." Heb. 9:28. There are many people today talking about a rapture when they believe they will be caught away suddenly into heaven, but there are very, very few people who are looking for Him. If we can rid our minds of the church tradition of rapture for a while, we may be able to see more clearly what the scripture means when it promises that unto them that look for Him shall He appear. We have grown too busy in our numerous activities to be looking for Jesus to appear to us as He did to Mary, Peter, Thomas, and Paul and transform our lives by His glorious presence. But the hour is at hand when Christ will appear to those who are looking for Him and this will surely take place right while the multitude of Christians are busy with the usual forms and ceremonies of church activity. He will have come as a thief in the night and they will be unaware of it.

It would be well worth our time to consider prayerfully just what is actually stated in the promise of Heb. 9:28 which says, "So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto those who look for Him shall He appear the second time without sin unto salvation." This is a promise of God and can no more pass away than any other of God's promises. It clearly describes the purpose of the first coming of Christ - that is, to bear the sins of the world, but it also describes the purpose of His coming the second time, which is to bring full salvation to those who look for Him. That statement in itself explains Paul's remark in Romans 13:11, "And knowing the time, that now it is high time to awaken out of sleep, for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed." The two statements go hand in hand. It is a grave mistake to think that we entered into the fullness of salvation when we believed. Indeed we were believers. Indeed we were saved, but the nearer we get to the second coming of Christ the nearer our salvation comes, for He is going to appear the second time to bring us to the fullness of it.

Weymouth's translation of Heb. 9:28 reads thus: "Christ also, having been once offered in sacrifice in order that He might bear the sins of many, will appear a second time, separated from sin, to those who are eagerly expecting Him to make their salvation complete." And Moffat: "Christ, after being once sacrificed to bear the sins of many, will appear again, not to deal with sin, but for the saving of those who are on the lookout for Him."

The Lord Jesus greatly puzzled His disciples by saying, "A little while and ye shall not see Me, and again a little while and ye shall see Me, because I go to the Father." John 14:16. This statement so puzzled the disciples that they said to each other, "What is this that He saith unto us, a little while and ye shall not see Me; and again a little while and ye shall see Me; and because I go to Father? They said therefore, What is this that He saith, a little while? We cannot tell what He saith." That statement has puzzled Christians of all ages, it has caused wonder in us all and because we have not understood it, we have come up with many theories and strange answers.

I have sometimes thought that Christ's answer to the question was intentionally ambiguous, but as I read it today, it seems to be a clear description of all that has happened to true believers from His first appearing to His second appearing. It portrays a weeping, lamenting, sorrowing, travelling church contrasted by a laughing, rejoicing world, but He tells them, "I will see you again, and your heart shall rejoice and your joy no man taketh from you. In that day ye shall ask Me nothing; verily, verily I say unto you, whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in My name He will give it you."

The traditions of the past have so dimmed our understanding that every truth is side-tracked to be made to conform to the doctrines and teachings of a Babylonish church. Thus it is that when we speak of Christ's appearing unto those who look for Him, our minds fall into the thought of a rapture and once again we begin to look for a moment when the whole Babylonish church is to be caught up to meet the Lord in the air and the whole world left to the Antichrist. I cannot accept it. The truth is that the existing church is not looking for the Lord. It is too engrossed in the pleasure of the world and its numerous activities and programs to want the Lord to come, but Christ will appear to the ones who are looking for Him and hoping that every shadow in His shadow, every knock at the door is His knock, and every footstep is the sound of His feet. Their hearts are crying, "Oh, Lord Jesus, how long?" Their lips are repeating, the prayer, "Even so, Lord Jesus, come quickly."

The great and glorious hope of the individual believer is that the Lord will manifest Himself to him and thus complete the work of salvation within Him. Unto such as desire His presence more than life itself and, except they see Him, for grief would gladly lay them down and die shall He appear. There are many instances of the Lord's personal appearance to His people and whenever He appeared to any of them, a vast and wonderful change took place in their lives.

There is a beautiful story in Luke 24 that tells of one of the many appearings of Christ and of the transforming results that followed. The blessed Lord had been crucified and laid away in the tomb. With the death of this great prophet of God, who they thought should have redeemed Israel, faith and hope had ebbed from their lives as the tides of the sea ebb from the shores leaving unknown rocks and sinking sands. The sun, darkened for three hours at Calvary, had now set beyond their little horizon and with it the last faint rays of hope had faded into darkness. Two disappointed and heartbroken disciples trudged wearily down the road to the little village of Emmaus. They might as well go home, they thought. There was nothing else left to do. As they plodded their weary way homeward, their rough hands of toil brushed away the blinding tears that crowded unbidden o'er their sight. Choking back the sobs of sadness and disappointment, they communed with each other and recounted with brokenhearted bitterness the events of the past few days. As they communed and reasoned, a shadow fell across their path and a stranger drew near who, walking with them, asked the meaning of their sorrow. The record reads thus.

"And, behold, two of them went the same day to a village called Emmaus, which was from Jerusalem about threescore furlongs. And they talked together of all these things which had happened. And it came to pass that, while they communed together and reasoned, Jesus Himself drew near and went with them. But their eyes were holden that they should not know Him, and He said unto them, What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another as ye walk and are sad? And one of them, whose name was Cleopas, answering said unto Him, Art thou only a stranger in Jerusalem and hast not known the things that are come to pass there in these days? And He said unto them, What things? And they said unto Him, Concerning Jesus of Nazareth, which was a prophet mighty in deed and word before God and the people and how the chief priests and our rulers delivered Him to be condemned to death and have crucified him. But we trusted that it should have been He, which should have redeemed Israel. And beside all this, today is the third day since these things were done. Yea, and certain women of our company made us astonished which were early at the sepulcher; and when they found not His body, they came saying they had also seen a vision of angels which said that He was alive. And certain of them that were with us went to the sepulcher and found it even as the women had said; but they saw Him not.

Then he said unto them, O fools and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken. Ought not Christ to have suffered these things and to enter into His glory”) And beginning at Moses and all the prophets, He expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning Himself. And they drew nigh unto the village whither they went; and He made as though He would have gone further, but they constrained Him saying, Abide with us; for it is toward evening and the day is far spent. And He went in to tarry with them. And it came to pass, as He sat at meat with them, He took bread, and blessed it, and brake it, and gave to them. And their eyes were opened and they knew Him and He vanished out of their sight. And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us while He talked with us by the way, and while He opened to us the scriptures; and they rose up the same hour and returned to Jerusalem and found the eleven gathered and them that were with them, saying, The Lord is risen and hath appeared to Simon, and they told what things were done in the way and how He was made known by the breaking of bread."

My heart leaps within me for joy as I contemplate this wonderful story and anticipate the glad hour when He shall appear in some like manner to you and to me and to all others who love His appearing. I do not know the day nor the hour of His appearing, but I do know that, when our eyes behold Him, our tears of sorrow will turn to pearls of praise, our broken chords will vibrate once more, and in a moment of time we shall be like Him for we shall see him as He is. From the distant mountain peaks of faith comes an echo clear as vespers ringing. It is the voice of Job sounding from out the centuries past, "I know that my Redeemer liveth and He shall stand in the latter days upon the earth, and if after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in My flesh shall I see God, whom I shall see for myself and mine eyes shall behold and not another." This is the kind of appearing that is going to make the difference and change our lives and make us new creatures. And when it happens, it will do more for us in the twinkling of an eye than all the sermons, teachings, and doctrines have ever done for us in a lifetime. Furthermore, those unto whom the Lord has thus appeared will be able to accomplish more for the earth in a moment of time than in a whole lifetime spent in the shallows of our present state.
I have often thought of the wonderful words "no man can see God and live." Oh how often we have quoted that wonderful passage as proof that we may not hope to see His face. Will you allow me to reverently say something else? Though it is true that no man can see God and live, it is equally true that no man can see God and die. Men do not die in God's presence, neither do they live as they used to live, but they are transformed. Hallelujah! They are changed; they are transfigured; they come into that same image of Him who created them. In whatever measure God reveals Himself to man, to that same measure he is changed and nothing can avoid that conclusion. There is no possibility of any man's ever being the same again or living as he used to live once he has personally met the Lord and his eyes have beheld Him, the King in his beauty. "As for me," said David, "I will behold Thy face in righteousness. I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with thy likeness." My own heart answers, Amen. That is when I, too, shall be fully satisfied.

There are few recorded instances of Christ's appearings more enlightening than the account of Christ's personal revealing of Himself to Thomas. It is a sobering thing to know that a man could be with Jesus for three years and yet never really see Him. But truly a man could be with Jesus three thousand years and never see Him until it pleased God to open his eyes and understanding. Thomas was naturally slow to believe. By his very nature he was inclined to be a doubter. In any case the stories about the resurrection of Jesus sounded like idle tales in his ears. It may have been as a result of this doubt that he was absent when Christ appeared to the other ten, for "Thomas called Didymus was not with them when Jesus came." Was he not the man who had said, "Lord, we know not where thou goest and how can we know the way"? And was it not he who at Lazarus' death had said, "Let us go that we may die with Him," and was he not now saying, "Except I shall see in His hands the print of the nails and put my finger into the print of the nails and thrust my hand into His side, I will not believe"? But he did not know what a transformation would take place in his life when his eyes would see the resurrected Christ. How long he sought to see the Lord, but like many of us doubters now he was almost beyond hope that he would see Him again. He did not know one glimpse of the Son of God would pierce the gloomy mists of doubt and throw a rainbow of hope about his shoulders. "Reach hither thy finger," said Jesus, "and behold my hands, and reach hither thy hand and thrust it into my side, and be not faithless but believing." And Thomas answered and said unto Him, "My Lord and my God!" Gone were the gloomy doubts. Gone were the mists of fear and unbelief. Thomas has seen the risen Lord. He is transformed by the presence divine.

Church history records that after seeing Christ none of the disciples ever exceeded Thomas for his fervent faith and labor of love until the day he gladly laid down his life for Christ.

Saul of Tarsus was a hard-headed bigot if one ever lived. It is difficult for a man who has been strictly trained in tradition from childhood to have any inclination to change. We cannot help but admire the man and his background as it is recorded in sacred writ. Few men have ever been able to boast of a better record after the natural than Saul and well he was aware of it. Circumcised the eighth day, of the stock of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, an Hebrew of the Hebrews; as touching the law a Pharisee; concerning zeal, persecuting the church; touching the righteousness of the law, blameless. Phil. 3:5-6. He had been taught by the great teacher Gamaliel, and had risen above many who were his equals. His zeal for God and the law stopped at nothing less than a determined effort to stamp out Christianity at all cost and by any method. With this thought in mind he was on his way to Damascus to bind and chain the Christians and bring them to Jerusalem when Jesus Christ met him and revealed Himself to him.

As he rode along the road to Damascus, his mind was filled with hate both against Christ and against Christians. His heart rejoiced at the thought of the persecution and slaughter he was about to bring upon them. Yet his heart was not all bad, for he was doing it ignorantly in unbelief and he thought he did God a service. Suddenly a light above the brightness of the sun shone upon him and he, falling to the earth, heard a voice speaking to him. "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me?" "Who art thou Lord?" he asked, and the Lord replied, "I am Jesus whom thou persecutest. It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks." And he trembling and astonished said, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" And He said, "Arise and go into the city and it shall be told thee what thou must do."

Years later when Paul was writing to the Galatians, he said, "When it pleased God, who separated me from my mother's womb, to reveal His Son in me, immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood." Flesh and blood and sermons of men can never do for anyone what Jesus can do. A whole volume could not rightly give account of the works and the glorious life of this man after Jesus revealed Himself to him. But Paul increased the more in strength and confounded the Jews, which dwelt at Damascus, proving that this is the very Christ.
Acts 9:22. No life has meant more to the world than Paul's after he saw the Lord. He must have realized how much he owed to the revelation of Christ in his life when he said of Jesus, "He was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve, after that He was seen of James; then of all the apostles, and last of all He was seen of me also as one born out of due time. ... But by the grace of God I am what I am, and His grace which was bestowed upon me was not in vain; but I labored more abundantly than they all, and yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me." 1 Cor. 15:5-10.

The greatest need of Christians today is to meet with Jesus. One moment of such an open revelation of Him will bring about a transformation such as nothing else could bring. Whether the Lord appeared in the New Testament or the Old, the result was always the same. It brought complete transformation to the one who met Him. What a message is brought to our hearts by Job when he said, "I have heard of Thee with the hearing of the ear." Even this did indescribable good to his soul, for no man was more righteous than Job. But when the next phase of his experience came, he exclaimed in awe, "But now mine eye seeth Thee," and he was a completely transformed man. The glory of God's presence had made him look desperately unclean until now he cried in penitence, "Wherefore I do abhor myself and repent in dust and ashes."

Many times, no doubt, you get desperately restless because of the apparent inactivity that besets you. I certainly do, but in waiting on God He has spoken to my heart and made it crystal clear that, until my mind is completely free from every last vestige of Babylon's harlot system, I shall not see His blessed face. Nothing is more real to my spirit than the truth that by God's grace we must come out of her. There is no use in coming out of one phase in Babylon and then starting up the same old thing over again in another place with a little different setup, for that really only amounts to the birth of one more harlot in the same great mysterious system of Babylon. There is something deep within me that tells me that the kingdom of heaven is not going to be launched from the same old launching pad we have used for the past two thousand years. It is going to be as different from the systems of the existing church as the ministry of John the Baptist was different from the forms and ritualistic ceremonies of the Pharisees. People will think you a fool and a fanatic to hold to such notions, but this is the way it will be. I have no hesitation in saying that I do not believe in the church's frantic programs for the conversion of the heathen and of the world. It never has worked, it is not working now, and it never will work. What the church now does and what Jesus and the apostles did, are not the same thing at all. They went in the power of God. Today they depend on organization and money. I do not believe that the Church is right in proclaiming that, if the heathen are not reached now, they will be lost forever. Such human teaching makes God's wisdom foolishness, His omnipotence, impotence; omniscience, thoughtlessness; His love, hate; His purpose, aimlessness, and His glory, shame. It makes the devil to be stronger than God, and makes an all-wise, almighty God dependent on the impotence of men. The Bible contains marvelous promises for the heathen and when He is ready to reveal Himself to them, they will come. The church, like the Pharisees, compasses land and sea to make a proselyte and often they are worse than before.

If we really searched the scripture to find out what God is doing in this age, we would soon find out that we are not in the midst of some frantic scramble to drag as many unwilling victims as possible from an inferno that somehow got out of God's control, but rather we are in a perfectly ordered plan in which God is calling out a people and preparing out of them a people for the government of the kingdom and of the ages to come, and in the dispensation of the fullness of times - the dispensation following the kingdom - God's grace will be extended to every creature. Can any sensible man deny that this is what Paul taught in Eph. 1:9-11: "Having made known unto us the mystery of His will, according to His good pleasure which He hath purposed in Himself; that in the dispensation of the fullness of times, He might gather together in one all things in Christ both which are in heaven and which are in earth; even in Him. In whom we have obtained an inheritance, being predestinated according to the purpose of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will." That is minutely the plan of God. The churches' gruesome doctrines of rue and torment in a blazing hell for sinners, who have never heard that God had a Son, would seem to me to charge the blessed Lord with crimes more heartless and inconsistent than those of Adolph Eichmann.

The desperate crying need of the true Zion is to be completely delivered from the daughter of Babylon. Our true condition is perfectly described in the words of the prophet Zechariah. Zech. 2:7. "Deliver thyself, O Zion, that dwellest with the daughter of Babylon." The true church, the elect of God, has dwelt so long with Babylon that we imagine she is our true mother. Like ducklings hatched by a chicken we accept her as our mother though all our ways are contrary to her. Babylon has invaded the minds of people until they are at a loss to think without her. But the Lord has begun to purge away the filth of the daughter of Zion by the spirit of judgment and the spirit of burning. Isa. 4:3-6. It must be of this that Zechariah spoke when he said, "And He showed me Joshua the high priest standing before the angel of the Lord, and Satan was standing at his right hand to resist him. And the Lord said unto Satan, The Lord rebuke thee. Is not this a branch plucked out of the fire! Now Joshua was clothed with filthy garments and stood before the angel, and He answered and spake unto those that stood before Him, saying, Take away the filthy garments from him; and unto him He said, Behold, I have caused thine iniquity to pass from thee and I will clothe thee with a change of raiment." Zech. 3:1-4.

In connection with the above it is clearly seen that nothing will deliver us from the filth of Babylon like meeting the Lord face to face. Was that not Paul's experience when he met Christ? He took all his past goodness, all his ancient tradition, all his natural descent, all his righteousness after the law, and threw it on the dung pile and reckoned that everything that had been a gain to him in the past was now nothing but a loss. Phil. 3:4-9. It will be exactly the same with you and me. All this Babylonish tradition with all its commendable works, its righteousness, and its program will be found to be like salt that has lost its savor fit only for the dung pile.

This Joshua who stood before the Lord clothed in filthy garments is you and me dressed in the garments of Babylon, (the great church system). But notice, please, that this Joshua met with the Angel of the Lord (which is Christ). He stood before Him and new garments were put on him. A fair miter was placed on Joshua's head, (this is the mind of Christ), and he was commanded to walk in the ways of the Lord. This is the will of God. Ah, what a difference it makes to meet with Jesus. How soon the filth of the carnal mind begins to disappear with all its human ways of looking at things, and that glorious fair miter, the mind of Christ, begins to change our lives with their carnal outlook, causing us to walk in the will of God and become men to be wondered at. (Verse 8). It makes us branches of the glorious vine, and bids us call every man our neighbor under the vine (Christ) and under the fig tree (God's chosen Israel). Please read verses 8-10.

There is never time nor space to consider these blessed truths as we should consider them. We will have to omit from our study list many of the personal appearings of the Lord as recorded in the scripture and consider them in our closets of prayer before the Lord. The appearances of Christ to individuals and companies of individuals were so frequent throughout the New Testament that I would say we had every right to look for and long for that transforming experience ourselves. What a tragic loss there would have been to the story of the resurrection if Jesus had not appeared to a weeping woman who stood numb with grief, peering into an empty sepulcher for the body of her blessed Lord. Hearing footsteps behind her, she turned and saw Jesus standing, and knew Him not. "Why wepest thou?" He asked. "Whom seekest thou?" And she, supposing Him to have been the gardener, answered amid her sobs, "Sir, if thou hast borne Him hence, tell me where thou hast laid Him and I will take Him away." Jesus said unto her, "Mary!!" It was the voice she knew and loved so well. There was no mistaking it. That was the voice, which had commanded seven devils to leave her body. She had heard that voice call men from out the tomb and still angry storms by a word. Yes, she knew it well. "Rabboni!!" she exclaimed with enraptured awe, and fell at His feet. But He bade her not to touch Him, saying "Go to My brethren and tell them I ascend unto My Father and your Father and to My God and your God." John 20:11-18.

What assurance would have been lacking had He not appeared personally to the disciples as with locked doors they sat huddled in fear of the Jews, mourning and weeping over what seemed to be the greatest loss the world had ever sustained. But see how hope banishes fear as light banishes darkness when He stood in their midst, saying, "Peace be unto you," and showing them His hands and His side. Perhaps one of the greatest understatements of all time is contained in the words, "Then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord." John 20:19-23.

What a change took place in Thomas as he cried, "My Lord and my God!!" at the appearing of Christ, and in Peter as he girt his fisher's cloak about him and cast himself into the sea to hurry to Him. John 21:2-4. What indescribable joy must have filled the two Marys as Jesus met them, saying, "All Hail," and they held Him by the feet and worshipped Him. Matt 28:8,9. See also Acts 1:3-11 and Cor. 15:7. If Jesus had not appeared personally to Paul, do you think we would have the undying truth today that we read in all his epistles? Had He not appeared to John on the Isle of Patmos, would we have had the glorious truth of the Revelation? Would John himself have known that fellowship with the Father and with His Son Jesus Christ, which he wrote about
I may be wrong in what I am going to say, but I think there is excellent reason to believe that every writer of the New Testament had met Christ personally and individually. I am not merely referring to His life on earth, but I mean that at some time after the resurrection Jesus had appeared to them, and because He had thus appeared, their lives had been so changed, their minds so transformed that they simply were not the same men and women they were before He met them. God forbid that I should seem mysterious in my talk, but there must come a day when His promises will find their fulfillment. It is not a catching away into the sky that we need. It is a revelation of Jesus Christ to our individual hearts. Then will our eyes and our understandings be opened and our innermost beings transformed. We need that which will make Christ to be far more than an historical character. We need to meet Him and see Him as the Son of the living God.

The following story quoted from abundant experience of the renowned evangelist, Charles S. Price, will help us to see the necessity of meeting Jesus Christ face to face.

"It is the poor and the needy who have been given so many good things, and it is the rich whom He has sent empty away. A crippled man was brought to the meetings some years ago. Those who brought him told me he was a man possessed of all the faith in the world and one who was known in the community for his good life and works. He was a good-living man and, no doubt, loved His Lord; but he was to go away from more than one service because of the one thing that he lacked, and which His Master was ultimately to reveal to his mind. "How the people prayed for that cripple! I can see him now, struggling to rise in answer to the entreaties of the people that he arose in faith and walk. Many times I knelt by the side of his chair and rebuked the power, which bound him. The days went by and yet there was no sign of his healing - no acquiescence had come from the skies in response to prayer. One afternoon they wheeled him to a corner in the building. He asked the people to leave the two of us alone, and then said something, which has lingered in the chambers of my memory.

"What a failure I am," he declared. "I came here strong in what I thought was my faith in the Lord. As I look deeply into my heart I find something about which I wish to confess. What a poor, miserable failure I have been. I have been spiritually proud of the fact that people have pointed to me as a man who suffered without complaining. They pointed me out as the man who never grumbled, although he had a cross to bear. I grew proud of my reputation and I can see now that what I termed my goodness has been self-righteousness in the sight of my Lord.

"He put his face in his hands and wept. There was something so pathetic about that poor, crippled man that the tears welled up in my eyes too. I reached out my hands and put them on his head and commenced to pray. I prayed for his healing; and, as I prayed, he stopped me. "Dr. Price," he said, "I don't need healing half as much as I need Jesus. I am so hungry for His presence. More than anything else in my life, I want to know Him better, and I am content to spend my days in this chair if only He will flood this self-righteous heart of mine with His peace and love." So I watched the cripple in the wheel chair disappear around the corner of the building.

"He went away quietly, and my heart went with him, as they wheeled him out of the building. All the way home my heart was singing for him the hymn:

"Saviour, Saviour, hear my humble cry;
While on others Thou art calling,
Do not pass me by!"

"A broken and a contrite heart will He not despise! How sweet it is to come to the end of self! How wonderful, after we have toiled all night and have caught nothing, that He condescends to wait for us on the shore! How gracious the voice that tells us to cast our nets on the right side of the boat, that our joy might be full! What determines which is the right side of a boat? Why, the way it is going, of course. You will soon find out where the right side is if your boat is going toward Jesus; and the boat must be empty, if you would bring the Nazarene on board.
"A few days later I was leaving the building in company with Dr. Manchester, the man who buried President McKinley. At the door of the auditorium sat the man in his wheelchair, patiently waiting for the doors to open for the evening service. The afternoon meeting was over. Dr. Manchester looked at the face of the crippled man and stopped. Then he walked over to him and I followed. "Are you coming for prayer?" he asked.

"For prayer and to receive healing," as the reply. There was something different about the man. His voice - his tone - his eyes - such a look of reflected glory on his face. I knew something had happened. "Tell me," I said, "What has happened? My brother, I discern you have experienced something that is so wonderful I can feel its glory, though I do not know what it is."

"Then he told me he had been with Jesus. He had spent the night in prayer - not in intercession alone, but in praise and worship. He told me that at four in the morning a consciousness of the presence of His Lord had overwhelmed him. He knew Jesus was in his room in a special way. He told me how his voice in adoration had commenced to praise his Lord. He said that he then became conscious of an infusion of the Life Divine. Something passed from Jesus to him; and he felt as though a fog had rolled away from his heart and mind. From that moment on he knew his struggles were over; and a sweet and holy peace was wrapped around his soul. He told us that now he knew, when once again he came to obey his Lord in the anointing with oil, strength would flow from Jesus, and life divine would be given him to restore him to health and strength.

"As I looked into Dr. Manchester's face, I noticed that tears stood in his eyes. Then he spoke, "Why does this man have to wait until tonight?"

"He does not," I replied. "The Great Physician is here now. Jesus of Nazareth is passing by."

"A moment later it was over. Out of his wheel chair arose that man. He ran and jumped and praised the Lord for his deliverance. It was a miracle of power divine. Around him on the snowy street, men and women gathered first to praise, and then to pray. Unsaved hearts were broken, and many were the penitential tears that were shed! More than once I have been with a group of disciples, struggling at the foot of a mountain; and oh, how my heart can testify to the difference it makes when into the midst of our helplessness Jesus Himself comes walking."

The glorious appearing of Christ is called that blessed hope. Let other men spend their time in arguing the how, why, when, and wherefore but let it be that you and I, who realize that the world's greatest need is men who have met with Jesus, have heard His voice, have seen His face, and have felt His transforming power, begin our earnest watching that we may be found ready and waiting when He appears. Christ will appear to those who look for Him. He is coming for those who are watching. What I say unto one I say unto all. Watch!! He will not intrude into the picture show to reveal Himself to us. He will not even interrupt our T.V. or earthly amusement. Neither will He interfere with those who are engrossed in worldly plans. If we are going to see Him when He comes, we are going to need to be watching and listening for Him.

How well I remember my old boyhood home out on the boundless Canadian prairies. Our farmstead was twelve miles from the nearest town and in the pioneer days our only means of travel was by team and wagon. I do not think there is any place on earth that can be so completely silent as the vast prairies at night time. Their wonderful solitude causes one to stand in His presence. One of the most wonderful experiences of my life has been to stand alone in that immense vastness and listen intently to try to catch some faint sound of movement or life of some kind. With not even a breath of air moving there was no sound at all, and whenever there was a sound it could be heard for miles. How often when father or brothers had gone away to the village in the morning and were returning late at night, we would stand outdoors and listen for the sound of wagon wheels in the distance. Returning at intervals, we would listen again and again until at last we could hear the sound we were waiting for. Then we would light the dim old kerosene lantern and be waiting on the doorstep to welcome them home. I shall never forget those good and wonderful days. But tonight I am not listening and waiting for the sound of a wagon rumbling over the plains. I am standing at the door waiting, looking, and longing for Jesus to come; and He is sending His message before Him, "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh."
There is a great and damning fault among Christians that seems to be past explanation. It is a fault that has developed and grown more grotesque as the years have come and gone. Men and women have come to desire and covet spiritual things, not for the glory of God and the honor of His eternal purpose, but that they themselves might become great men in the earth. Many a man has spent long periods in fasting that he might attain a great spiritual gift, yet all the time he is supposedly seeking the gift his talk shows that his mind is full of hope that he will become a great and powerful minister to whom people will look with awe and pride. This is wrong seeking and a very great evil. Many a man has sought after the gift of healing - not because he was burdened for the sick, but because the gift would bring him honor among the people. He expected it would bring him crowds and fame and money. Oh, let men search their hearts before they ask of God lest they ask amiss to consume it upon their own lusts. James 4:3. The result of such asking is spiritual death. It is of the carnal mind and hateful in God's sight. The carnal mind is always desirous of spiritual gifts! It likes to appear honored of God and accepted. That is why there are so many false prophets, false teachers, false healers, and also miracle workers in the world. Men who love people to think they are the great power of God will, for all their apparent wonders, hear God tell them on that day, "I never knew you." We have an example of this kind of man in Acts 8:9-10. "But there was a certain man called Simon, which beforetime used sorceries and bewitched the people of Samaria, giving out that himself was some great one, to whom the people gave heed from the least to the greatest, saying. This man is the great power of God." There are such men in our day who have similarly bewitched the people. They clamor for spectacular gifts that they might have a spectacular following. This is not the way a man should seek a gift.

I greatly fear that many people will desire to see the face of Christ in the same inquisitive manner - not because they love Him or long to be like Him, but only to see what God would look like. Their interest is more on the level of a crowd rushing to see the President or the Queen or of nosey little children crowding around to catch a glimpse of the victim of a tragic accident. In Exodus 19:12-21 we gave a perfect example of this very thing. At the time of the law God commanded Moses in these words: "Thou shalt set bounds unto the people round about saying, Take heed unto yourselves that ye go not into the mount or touch the border of it: - and the Lord said unto Moses. Go down; charge the people lest they break through unto the Lord to gaze, and many of them perish." Imagine that! Lest they break through to gaze! It was only their curiosity they wanted to satisfy. They were inquisitive, prying, peeping Toms. Their only interest in God was to gape and stare.

I am not exaggerating when I say that the average Christian has a similar attitude toward God and miracles. It is better not to approach to God at all than to approach with the attitude of sightseer.

David said, "My soul waiteth for the Lord more than they that watch for the morning: I say more than they that watch for the morning." Psalms 130:6. This is the desire men should have when they seek the face of Christ. Men and women who with burning love and desire stand weeping for His presence will see Him when He comes and be found ready and waiting to be changed by the glory of His presence into that same image. Their longing prayer shall be, "Tell me, O Thou whom my soul loveth, where Thou feedest, where Thou makest Thy flocks to rest at noon." Songs 1:7. "By night on my bed I sought Him whom my soul loveth, but I found Him not. I will arise now, and go about the city in the streets, and in the broad way I will seek Him whom my soul loveth: I sought Him, but found Him not. The watchmen that went about the city found me; To whom I said, saw ye Him whom my soul loveth? It was but a little that I passed from them, but I found Him whom my soul loveth." Songs 3:1-5.

"Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth and hath long patience for it until he receive the early and latter rain. Be ye also patient. Establish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." James 5:7-8. "We know that when He shall appear we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself even as He is pure." 1 John 3:2-3. And they shall see His face and His name shall be in their foreheads. He that testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly. Amen. Even so come. Lord Jesus.

CHAPTER FIVE
THE OVERSHADOWING PRESENCE
As we walk through the wilderness of this world, there can be no greater need among men than communion with Christ. Having written the previous chapters, there comes an intense awareness that the revelation of any great mystery must be vanity and utter futility if the key to the door through which we enter to become partakers of the riches of God's inheritance remains hidden from us. However towering and forbidding the walls that bar our progress to the distant hills sublime may be, we are faced with no problem whatsoever if in our hands we hold the key that unlocks the inhospitable gates. Then may our happy souls command, "Lift up your heads, O ye gates; even lift them up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in." Psa. 24:9. But, if no key to the door is in our hand, weary ourselves as we may, we shall not find admittance to the celestial storehouse our vision beheld afar.

Upon a time almost two thousand years ago our blessed Lord scathingly reproached those blind leaders of the blind, who were none other than the bigoted ecclesiastics that imagined themselves to be the spiritual leaders of the day. With derisive rebuke He cried, "Woe unto you, lawyers! for ye have taken away the key of knowledge: ye entered not in yourselves, and them that were entering in ye hindered." Luke 11:52. Oh, what a blistering rebuke that was! The men who were looked to as the spiritual leaders of the people of God were the ones who were guilty of hiding the key so that neither themselves nor those who followed them were able to enter in to the green pastures of truth. He must be a blind soul indeed who cannot see that the ministers of the church system, who now are looked to as spiritual leaders of our day, are for the most part blind guides who see no vision of things that are nor things that are to be - who know not where they are going nor how to get there. Yet Christians, who hold in their hands the promise of eternal things, sit apathetically at their feet year after dreary year listening to their infantile fairy tales and giving abundantly of their means to assist them in their grandiose schemes, while the world sinks ever downward into the dismal abyss of crime, divorce, broken homes, sodomy, vandalism and every rebellion that the bottomless pit can produce. Sinners and Christians alike wander and lose their way as they blindly grope in the abysmal darkness that covers the earth and the gross darkness that covers the people of God.

If we will but listen again to our Lord's rebuke and denunciation of these blind guides, we will hear Him say, "Ye have taken away the key of knowledge, for ye enter not in." Open your eyes now, O Christian, and you will see that, at the very moment in which He said the key of knowledge was taken away from the people, in that same sentence He reveals to us what the key of knowledge really is in these words: Ye enter not in. Ah! This, then, is the strange and unexpected discovery of the "key" to enter in. Actually there are no barred doors at all. We only imagine it to be so. The key is to enter in through the unlocked door. Long centuries ago when the life blood of Jesus Christ flowed from Him to open the fountain in the house of David for sin and uncleanness, that life blood He shed forth was eternal life. That eternal life today enters the soul of every believer to quicken him and make of him a new creation. When our blessed Lord worshipfully bowed His sacred head and said to God, His Father, to the world and all creatures therein, "It is finished", at that most dramatic moment in all the history of earth the veil in the temple was rent asunder - not from bottom to top by man - but from top to bottom by the hand of God, and there before their wondering eyes for the first time in the history of fallen humanity the way into the holiest of all was made not only visible but open wide to all. For that very reason the apostle, endued with the wisdom of God, proclaimed this heavenly message: "Wherefore, brethren, let us come with boldness into the holiest of all by a new and living way, which He hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, His flesh." No longer need we seek the key. The key is to enter in through Christ, the unlocked door.

Yet, true to the dark pattern of the ages, those unbelieving Jews sewed the riven veil back together again to bar from our vision the more excellent glory that shines like a radiant sun just beyond the veil, that is to say, our own flesh. The key to entering into the more excellent glory so expressly taught in scripture and in the chapters of this book is nothing more or less than this: that we "enter in", that we stand no longer without, listlessly dandling the eternal promises in our heads and refusing to stretch forth our hand of faith or move our unwilling feet, but that we come with boldness, casting off the "fear of the Jews", those perennial enemies of Christ and all His ways; the fear of the preachers, who say and do not; the fear of leaders, those blind leaders of the blind; that we cast off all subservience to denominations, those wretched prison walls behind which dwarfed Christians are kept chained in their cells of sectarianism and the strait jackets of unbelief. Cast off their bondage and their fear and come with boldness to Christ, the unlocked door. By Him and Him alone, if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and he shall go in and out and find pasture. Before us stands Christ, the door. He is a door unlocked. We need no other key than this - that we enter in. Let those who will remain without, but let us enter in to the holiest of all by this new and living way, whither the forerunner hath for us entered, even Jesus Christ, made a High Priest forever after the order of Melchisedec.

These secrets we must know that we may enter in to the presence of God. Beyond the great veil that hung between the holy place and the holiest of all was the Shekinah, that unspeakable light of God's presence, the light which no unclean man approaches. Into the glory of that realm only the High Priest was allowed to enter, and that but once a year; but when our great Christ came, being made an High Priest - not after the earthly order of Aaron, but after the heavenly order of Melchisedec - then the door was opened wide that we all may freely enter once more into the very presence of God.

Once the blessed Christ of beauty
Was veiled off from human view;
But through suffering death and sorrow
He has rent the veil in two.

And why should it not be thus? Those priests of Aaron could not give eternal life because their own lives were passing away, each one ending in death, but this High Priest, Christ Jesus our risen Lord, because He "ever liveth", has restored to us through the shedding of His life blood that eternal life which departed from us in that dark day of transgression in Eden long, long ago.

It is only in the presence of God that men truly live. Apart from Him and apart from His presence all is death. In Him and Him alone is life - life eternal. Except He abides is us and we abide in Him, we have no life. "I am the vine," He said. "Ye are the branches... If a man abide not in Me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered; and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned." "I am the door." Thus spoke our Lord, and may I add, He is the unlocked door. "By Me, if any man enter in, he shall be saved."

Let us now earnestly consider the importance of the presence of God and, in speaking of this living presence, let us find that the presence of God is something far more than a pretty theory. Instead and in truth it is that shadowing Shekinah, that presence which is none other than God Himself. As I was considering this awe inspiring wonder of the presence of God, this glory that emanates and radiates as an aura from God Himself, I was solemnized as the truth began to dawn like a sunrise upon me. It was this: After Adamic man had entered into the transgression that dark day when angels hushed their singing and all the world stood still, it is said, "And Adam and his wife hid themselves from the presence of the Lord God among the trees of the garden." Gen. 3:8. He, who only yesterday in the cool of the evening had walked in the very presence of God,

Where the perfumed breeze
Swept through the trees
In that heaven blest land of Eden,

Now with sorrow, nakedness and a darkened mind hid himself in fear from the presence of God among the trees of the garden, becoming almost identical to those pre-Adamic nations who inhabited the world before him. The image of God had departed from him. The heavenly garment of light had vanished from him and he stood in darkness among the trees of the garden, hiding from God's presence, naked and terribly ashamed. Thus in darkness must man ever remain until that gladsome day when he by faith enters once again into the presence from which he hid by the new and living way which Christ has consecrated for us, opening wide the door before us in our wonderful day of grace.

It is never my wish to be controversial and I suggest that what the reader cannot see he lay aside. Never say no and slam the door, for the moment you say no, you close the door and God can teach you nothing. Thus you are doomed to remain in those pharisaical prisons where men are drowned in human tradition.

Some time ago, while reading the story of the healing of a certain blind man, Mark 8, I was arrested by these words: "And He took the blind man by the hand, and led him out of the town: and when He had spit on his eyes, and put His hands upon him, He asked him if he saw ought. And he looked up, and said, I see men as trees, walking." Then said I to the Lord, "Whatever does this mean - I see men as trees?" It is seldom that the Lord immediately shows us the answer to our questions, but if we wait patiently, sooner or later He will reveal the truth to us. As time went on, He began to reveal that trees in scripture not only refer to those magnificent monarchs that lift their leafy arms as if in praise to God, but represent in many, if not most, instances nations of men.

As we read the scripture, we discover that many nations become clearly identifiable as trees. Perhaps the foremost example of this is found in the prophecy of Ezekiel. In Ezekiel 31:3 the mighty Assyrian is described in this manner: "Behold, the Assyrian was a cedar in Lebanon with fair branches, and with a shadowing shroud, and of a high stature; and his top was among the thick boughs." Then to our amazement we are told in verses 8 and 9 that this same Assyrian was a tree in the garden of God. Here it is. "The cedars in the garden of God could not hide him; the fir trees were not like his boughs, and the chestnut trees were not like his branches; nor any tree in the garden of God was like unto him in his beauty. I have made him fair by the multitude of his branches, so that all the trees of Eden, that were in the garden of God, envied him." This verse is not talking about a tree nor an individual, but a great nation that was in Eden. Though this is not our subject now, if you look, you will find that the other trees - the oak, the fir, the chestnut, the fig tree and the olive - are all symbols of nations. "I see men as trees, walking."

Thus we find our father Adam, who only yesterday was clothed with light and filled with wisdom above all other races on earth, now fallen, stripped of his heavenly glory and abandoned by the light and, except for the fair color of his skin, he was not unlike the other races about him. In fear he hid himself from the presence of God among the trees of the garden because now, in his fallen state, he was far more in their earthly image than in the image of the heavenly.

This sad and pitiful picture has been with us throughout the ages as God's people, once living under the shadow of His presence by day and being led and given light by the pillar of fire by night, began to demand as they did in the days of Samuel, "Give us a king to reign over us that we might be like the other nations" 1 Sam. 8:1-6, or to cry, "Up, make us gods to go before us, for as for this man Moses, we know not what has become of him". Exod. 32:1-6. The words "we will not have this man to rule over us," Luke 19:14, have been the words of man's rejection of God ever since Eden, and undoubtedly before that; but God has an elect people according to His grace, who even now are entering beyond the riven veil into the holiest of all to live and move and have their being in that glorious presence which is the Elohim Himself and the Immanuel of God.

O, my Father, Thou who dwellest
In a high and holy place,
Yet shall I regain Thy presence
And again behold Thy face.
Day by day Thy Spirit leadeth
Ever upward unto Thee, Till at last I find perfection
In Thy pure reality.

I find words and phrases totally inadequate to portray the transforming glory prepared for the man who would dwell in the presence of God and abide under the shadow of the Almighty. At the dedication of Solomon's temple the presence of God filled the house with such indescribable glory that the priests could not stand to minister. 2 Chron. 5:13-14. God's presence is no fanciful flight of imagination. It is a reality beyond man's power to understand. It is an invisible Spirit felt to be near. It is Jehovah Shammah - the Lord is present. We can scarcely be wrong in saying that ever since the transgression in Eden men have been hiding themselves from His presence and God's people as well as sinners find themselves shrinking from its transforming glory as a worm shrinks from a fire. We must remember that this presence of which we speak is the Shekinah. It is the presence of Christ. It is the fire that formed the pillar over the tabernacle. It is the fire that fell on the altar in the days of Moses, never to be extinguished through all of Israel's journeys. Compare Lev. 9:24 with Lev. 6:12. This is the fire that consumed the sacrifices. It is the fire that fell from heaven to destroy the prophets of Baal and it is the same fire that fell at Pentecost, transforming men of common clay into burning, holy, powerful sons of God, whose power and boldness turned the world upside down, accomplishing in the hearts of unlearned and ignorant men a transformation that culture and education could never achieve in a thousand generations.
Then again this marvelous presence may come as a still small voice without any other manifestation at all. Thus it came to Elijah when he stood in the mouth of his cave, his mantle reverently wrapped about his head, while he listened with awe to the instruction of the Almighty. Who can possibly say in what manner the great Jehovah Shammah will manifest Himself to us or how He will make His presence known? I for one cannot say, because this is a relationship between each of us and the Almighty Elohim that can only be experienced. It can never be explained nor pried into. It must be experienced by those who abide under His shadow.

A. B. Simpson was a saintly man of God who learned of the presence of God, not from books, but by experience. We quote here a few words of his testimony for the enlightenment of all who are willing to learn by them.

"A score of years ago a friend placed in my hand a book called True Peace. It was an old medieval message and it had but one thought - that God was waiting in the depths of my being to talk to me, if I would only get still enough to hear His voice. I thought this would be a very easy matter, and so I began to get still. But no sooner had I commenced than a perfect pandemonium of voices reached my ears - a thousand clamoring notes without and within until I could hear nothing but their noise and din.

"Some were my own voice, my own questions. Some were my very prayers. Others were suggestions of the tempter and the voices of the world of turmoil. In every direction I was pulled and pushed and greeted with acclamations of unspeakable unrest. It seemed necessary for me to listen to some of them and answer some of them, but God said, "Be still and know that I am God."

"Then came the conflict of thought for tomorrow and its duties and cares. But God said, 'Be still.' And, as I listened and slowly learned to obey and shut my ears to every sound, I found after a while that, when the voices ceased (or I ceased to hear them), there was a still, small voice in the depths of my being that began to speak with an inexpressible tenderness, power and comfort.

"As I listened, it became to me the voice of prayer, the voice of wisdom, the voice of duty. And I did not need to think so hard, nor pray so hard, nor trust so hard. That still, small voice of the Holy Spirit in my heart was God's prayer in my secret soul; it was God's life and strength for soul and body and became the substance of all knowledge and all prayer and all blessings, for it was the living God Himself as my life, my all.

"It is thus that our spirit drinks in the life of the risen Lord and we go forth to life's conflicts and duties like a flower that has drunk in through the shades of night the cool and crystal drops of dew. But as dew never falls on a stormy night, so the dew of His grace never comes to a restless soul.

"O the calm, the rest, the peace which comes as we wait in His presence until we hear from Him!"

Be still, just now be still!
There comes a presence very mild and sweet;
White are the sandals of His noiseless feet.
It is the Comforter whom Jesus sent
To teach thee that the words He uttered meant.
The willing, waiting spirit He doth fill.
If thou wouldst hear His message,
Dear soul, be still.

In the 32nd and 33rd chapters of Exodus the account of a great transgression committed by the children of Israel is given. The record reveals that, while Moses was in communion with God in Mt. Sinai, receiving the sacred law written by the finger of the Almighty, the children of Israel impatiently called upon Aaron, the brother of Moses, saying, "Up, make us gods, which shall go before us; for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what has become of him." Exod. 32:1. Aaron in his irresolute and fickle vacillation cravenly bowed to their demand and made them a golden calf, of which they said, "These be thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt." When Aaron saw it, he built an altar before it and wickedly made a proclamation, saying, "Tomorrow is a feast to the Lord. And they rose up early on the tomorrow, and offered burnt offerings, and brought in peace offerings: and the people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play. And the Lord said unto Moses, Go, get thee down; for thy people, which thou broughtest out of the land of Egypt, have corrupted themselves." Exod. 32:5-7. This is the gist of the terrible story of their idolatry, and I shall add without any fear of sincere contradiction that the same feeble minded irresolution has blighted the history of God's people throughout the ages. No sooner has a great work of God begun than the rank and file of the people go awhoring after some visible god that their corrupt and carnal minds have devised. To it they slavishly give their worship and their gifts.

Throughout the pages of history this turning aside from the truth is evident. We will find its evil image in the history of every powerful religious movement, and if you look within, you may find this abominable shilly-shallying in your own heart, as I also have found in mine. In the days of Samuel it was not good enough, nor was it Israel's pleasure, that God Himself should be their King to provide their every need and go before them into battle. No! They wanted a visible king who would rule over them and go before them into battle so that they would be like the other nations. Thus they rejected the King of all kings and Lord of all lords in favor of some corrupt and vacillating man, and the Lord in His infinite grace and goodness did not cast them off entirely, but because they had rejected Him, He brought leanness into their souls. Many a battle was lost and much blood was shed until at last their wretched and carnal decision brought them into such bondage that, after the death of Solomon, they were so oppressed that the whole nation split asunder, and after many years more of strife, bloodshed, loss and idol worship, they were all carried away into captivity. Even then their Jehovah Shammah (the Lord is present) did not forsake them.

The New Testament records in some detail the unspeakable glories of Pentecost and the heavenly wonders spoken of in the book of Acts as the Holy Spirit filled the waiting throngs with Himself. Pentecost was the most transforming event that had ever occurred throughout the ages. Thousands of souls were saved. Lives were transformed. Sick were healed. Devils were cast out. Dead were raised to life again. The people were so changed and made new by the power and presence of the Lord that nothing could stand before them. But alas, alas! It was not long before there arose a murmuring of the Grecians against the Hebrews. Acts 6:1. Then later the Judaizers rose up, demanding that all the converts should be circumcised and commanded to keep the law. Acts 15:1-5. Blind leaders of the blind they were, unable to understand that these heavenly saints, transformed into Christ's image by the power of the Spirit, were circumcised, not in the flesh, but in the heart, and the law to them was not written on a stone nor was it staring at them from a scroll, but written indelibly by the Spirit of God in the tables of their hearts and in their reborn spirits and gloriously manifested in their very beings. O cursed carnality! How I despise thy slavish bondage and fear whereby thou hast corrupted the ways of God from Eden's fragrant garden to the dawn of the dispensation of the fullness of times! Pitifully sad it is that before the end of the first century A.D. John wrote, "Even now there are many antichrists." 1 Jno. 2:18.

Antichrist, dear brethren, in the strictest sense does not indicate one that is against Christ, but one who is in the place of Christ. If we see this necessary fact, we see both that men and women can be antichrists and that sects and denominations can be antichrists. Many preachers today are so worshipped and admired by the people that they have put themselves in the place of Christ. The law of God is just and holy and good and it is the very mind of Christ, but if we put the "thou shall not" in place of the law of the Spirit, then we have put the commandment in place of the Spirit, where it ought not to be, and have unwittingly raised up an antichrist.
I keep the ten commandments every day of my life, but my keeping them is not accomplished by tying them about my neck on a golden chain or by placing them in an ephod, as the priests did under the law. It is accomplished by the transforming power of the living Christ, the true Word of God, living and moving and having His being within this heart and temple which I am. "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus" is the word of the Spirit. "Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfill the lusts of the flesh." Abide in Him and let His Word, His living Word, abide in you. This is the way of truth and the only way of victory and sonship. We no longer slavishly keep the law, but the law keeps us. There is none other way acceptable with Him. "O foolish Galatians... received ye the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith?" Gal. 2:1-

Follow the course of every great revival or time of refreshing down through the ages and always without fail we will find some carnal man conniving to bring the move of the Spirit under human control and adjust the worship
according to his liking and his human way of looking at things. Well do I remember when the great move of the Spirit began in the little city of North Battleford, February 13, 1948. The glory of God's presence descended from heaven that blessed morning to dwell among us, and for many months it seemed to carry all things before it by the majesty of its celestial wave. The glory of that wonderful visitation began to sweep over all North America as city after city was visited by its blessed refreshing. Well do I remember the pastor of a large congregation, who had received the message with gladness, saying to me, "We will have to form some kind of an organization or people are just going to take this message and run with it." I did my best to warn him of the perils of any attempt to organize a move of the Spirit of God, but my warnings fell on deaf ears; and when I returned some months later, to my dismay he had membership cards in the hands of the ministers round about and, of course, he himself was the head and king pin. Thus it has always been as carnal man seeks to dethrone the Almighty that he might set himself in authority. Thus "he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God." That is what antichrist is. Whether he be a man or an organization of men, that wicked spirit grows until the whole system is antichrist.

There are, praise be unto God, always those who are not content to bow to the Babylonian image of human organization. Their hearts refuse to be satisfied with less than the presence of God. They refuse to have men rule over them or lead them. They seek only His presence. They abhor and refuse the antichrist doctrine of shepherding that places man instead of Christ. There is one ambition I have in life. I pray it may not be denied. I desire that, when my earthly pilgrimage is over, the tens of thousands who have read my writings or listened to my sermons may be found to be so enamored with Jesus Christ, the great Shepherd - Jehovah Ra-ah - that they will scarcely notice that I am gone.

As the antichrist spirit showed its ugly head in the offerings of Cain in Eden, so now it manifests its rebellion with the setting up of the calf of gold, and had it not been for the intercession that the Spirit of God laid upon His servant Moses, the whole nation of Israel would have been wiped out. In the midst of all the confusion that followed this great sin of idolatry (Exodus 32 and 33), Moses took the tabernacle, from which the presence of God had departed, and pitched it outside the camp of Israel. Exod. 33:7. And after he had done so, the cloud and the pillar of God's presence, that had departed, descended once again upon it. Verses 9-11. Then every person who sought the Lord went outside the camp of Israel to the tabernacle. What an infinite lesson this is for us today! Once the people of God become filled with man's carnal ways and man's worship, the Spirit of God withdraws from their midst and an evil spirit, a false, deceiving spirit, comes to take His place, and because they are deceived, they think they are right. For this reason the great apostle wrote, "Wherefore let us go unto Him without the camp, bearing His reproach." And again he wrote, "Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you." 2 Cor. 6:17. Christ in the Revelation echoes the call: "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her sins or receive of her plagues." Stay in the camp if you want to, my brethren, but you will find in the end that God is not there.

Careless seems the great Avenger!
History's pages but record
One death grapple in the darkness
'Twixt old systems and the Word.
Truth forever on the scaffold,
Wrong forever on the throne;
Yet that scaffold sways the future,
And behind the dim unknown
Standeth God within the shadows,
Keeping watch upon His own.

Then to side with truth is noble,
When we share her wretched crust
Ere her cause brings fame and profit
And 'tis prosperous to be just.
Then it is the brave man chooses
While the coward stands aside, Doubting in his abject spirit
    Till His Lord is crucified
And the multitude makes virtue
    Of the faith they have denied.
New occasions teach new duties;
    Time makes ancient good uncouth.
They must ever up and onward
    Who would keep abreast of truth.
Lo! Before us gleams her campfires;
    We ourselves must pilgrims be;
Launch our Mayflower and steer boldly
    Through the desperate winter sea,
Nor attempt the future's portal
    With the past's blood rusted key.

Once to every man and nation
    Comes the moment to decide
In the strife 'twixt truth and falsehood
    For the good or evil side.
In the dawn of each new era
    With a recognizing start Nations wildly look as nation,
    Standing with mute lips apart,
And grand truth, yet mightier manchild,
    Leaps within the future's heart.

James Lowell

Take heed to the words of that wonderful poem. All who are willing to go unto Him without the camp to seek His presence will find how unspeakably true these phrases are.

So Moses pitched the tabernacle of the congregation outside the camp and all who sought the Lord went out there to worship God, for there and there alone may His presence be found. However offensive these words may be to those who tarry with the crowd, they are as true in our day as they were in the hour they came forth from the lips of Christ. The Spirit of God has withdrawn Himself from all human systems, the denominations and sects of men, and whether we wish to believe it or whether we do not, it still remains true that all who would seek Him and abide in His presence must do as Moses and Joshua and all others who sought the Lord did - go unto Him without the camp, bearing His reproach. The Lord never intended any of us to have a continuing city here, but we seek one to come, whose builder and maker is God.

The worshipping of the golden calf constituted one of Israel's greatest calamities. I dare not take space here to say how this golden god men call money is part and parcel of all modern worship and religion. "Give us your gold," they seem to say, "and with it we will save the world." Flee, my friend, while yet there is time, from the wrath that is about to fall upon this golden calf, the god of Babylon. During Israel's unholy rebellion the Lord said unto Moses, "I will send an angel before thee; and I will drive out the Canaanite, the Amorite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, the Hivite, and the Jebusite... for thou art a stiff-necked people: lest I consume thee in the way." Exod. 33:2-3. But this promise brought only mourning to Moses. He was not satisfied that an angel should go before them. No power in heaven or earth could be a substitute for the presence of God. His heartfelt prayer - yes, his demand - was, "If Thy presence go not with me, carry us not up hence." Exod. 33:15. And God in grace and mercy accepted the repentance of the people and promised again, "My presence shall go with thee, and I shall give thee rest." 33:14.

Our journey through the wilderness of this world is far too important to be attempted without His presence. Angels are ministering spirits sent forth to minister to those who are the heirs of salvation, but the indwelling presence of Christ alone can change men into the image of God. Naught can we receive of the works of grace apart from His abiding presence. The graces of His Spirit cannot be known apart from Him. Spiritual gifts apart from Him are a fake and a fraud. They are no longer gifts of the Spirit, but manifestations of the flesh. The fruit of the Spirit cannot exist without His presence. It is utterly impossible. Human declarations of fidelity are of no value to God. If our consecration comes not by the Spirit, it is of the flesh and is therefore a falsehood. A lady once offered me a drink of whiskey. I said, "No, thank you, madam. I don't drink." "Ah," she said, "you signed the pledge and kept it." But no, I had not signed the pledge at all. I had been saved and that is what made the difference. That is the only transformation that is pleasing to Him. He does it all as we yield ourselves to His indwelling presence. Man may reform himself, but only the indwelling Christ can transform.

As we voyage along through this pilgrimage of life, we will find as we walk in His blessed abiding presence that there are very few decisions for us to make. They are all made for us and His presence, going before us, is leading us one step at a time. One of the sweetest memories I have is of a day when my small son trotted and skipped by my side along a busy street, all the while amusing me with his childish patter, but when we came to the busy intersection thronging with people and traffic, I felt his little hand slip into mine while he walked secure and unafraid through the dangers all about him.

There is a power whose care
Teaches my steps along the pathless coast,
The desert and illimitable air,
Lone wandering, but not lost.
He who from zone to zone
Guideth my uncertain flight
In the long, long night that I must walk alone
Will guide my steps aright.

CHAPTER SIX
COMMUNION WITH CHRIST

And it came to pass that, while they communed together and reasoned, Jesus Himself drew near. (Luke 24:15)

There is a more excellent glory, which our heavenly Father has prepared for His saints. It is the glory of incorruption and immortality. None but those who dwell in the transforming presence of Christ will find it. In the shadow of the Almighty is the secret place of the most High. This is the place of which the prophet David spoke, saying, "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty." Psa. 91:1. These are words of shining enlightenment. Here ordinary saints may dwell. Here they may abide eternally. No longer is the Holy Place confined to a corner of the wilderness tabernacle as it was in the days of Moses, but David, looking with prophetic vision far into the future, spoke of this our day when the door, which is Christ, standing wide open, would bid us enter the secret place of His presence. When the veil in the temple was rent asunder, the voice of the Almighty was proclaiming, "Let us come with boldness into the holiest of all by a new and living way, which He hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, His flesh." Heb. 10:19.

Only those who dwell in His presence will share in the more excellent glory of incorruption and only those who know the secret of communion with Christ will dwell in His presence. Let us then earnestly consider the truth that follows that we might better understand how man may commune with Christ and so abide in His presence forever. There seems to be a powerful message in the words, "As they communed together and reasoned, Jesus Himself drew near." This impressive verse illumines our path, for communing with Christ is the key to abiding in His presence.

Times without number I have seen it happen that, when devout men and women begin to speak of Christ and commune together concerning Him, before many moments have passed by they become aware that Christ in the person of the Holy Spirit has joined the gathering to enlighten the understanding, make the dark things plain, quicken the mind and confirm their devotion. Oh, how unspeakably true it has proved to be that, where two or three are gathered together in His name, there He stands in the midst of them! The gatherings of which the Saviour speaks are not pre-arranged meetings, announced in bold letters in the daily newspaper. These are gatherings arranged as if by chance, as was the communion between Cleopas and his wife on the Emmaus road. Wherever hungry, devoted hearts are reaching out to Christ, there will His presence be. It is the Comforter, whom Jesus sent to teach us what the words He uttered meant. I once read of a trapper working alone in the far North Country, where cold and snow are everywhere and weeks pass by in utter solitude. The trapper was a Christian and, being alone, he often whiled away the hours by taking up his banjo and singing hymns unto the Lord. One night, as he thus worshipped, he heard a gentle tapping at the door. “Who is there?” he called. A voice replied, “We are angels of the Lord. We just came down to listen.” More of the story I do not know, but of this we may be certain: In every nation and every clime, should even one commune with Him, He will be present though unheard and unseen.

Our Lord is meek and lowly in heart. We will find that He seeks out men and women who, like Himself, are meek and lowly in heart. They shall find rest for their souls as He covers them with His feathers and under His wings they trust. Beloved in Christ, learn this simple truth. The presence of Christ is not a place to which you go to meet Him. The presence of Christ is found wherever a soul is reaching out to Him. Jesus loved Mary and Martha and Lazarus. He loved them because they loved Him. Several times in scripture we read of His visiting in their house, but never once do we read that they ever went to visit Him. Jesus knew they dearly loved Him and that His presence was welcome in their home. Martha had lovingly served Him, ministering to His every need. Mary had poured the precious ointment upon His head and washed His feet with her tears. Lazarus, according to ancient authority, had been an almost constant companion. He it was who sat at table with Him after being raised from the dead. Our blessed Lord, who communes with the meek and lowly, dwelleth not in huge temples, erected by the business acumen of empire building preachers. His presence is always found with worshippers humble and true, who worship the Father in spirit and in truth, for “the Father seeketh such to worship Him.” I am neither a prophet nor the son of a prophet, but the hour cometh when these empire building preachers, who have squandered hundreds of millions of dollars taken by craft from the poor to build great monuments to their own ingenuity, will stand both naked and empty handed, vainly protesting, “Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in Thy name and in Thy name done many wonderful works?” To this the Lord will answer, “I never knew you. Depart from Me, ye that work iniquity.” Learn as early in life as possible that it is not what we do for God that counts. It is what we are’, and what we are depends entirely on our relationship to Christ. Furthermore, our relationship to Him depends entirely on our communion with Him. If we do not take time to commune with Him and live our life in His presence, we will develop no relationship with Him and all our labor will be wood, hay and stubble.

God has given no greater blessing to man than the word of God and prayer. Without these we can never hope to form a relationship or a communion with Him. We have been taught many falsehoods about prayer. We have been exhorted to make all our wants and wishes known to God with the assurance that He will supply them all. This, however, having no true basis in scripture, is not the truth. Our wants and wishes almost always arise from the corrupt fountain of the carnal mind. Christians have become like bratty little children running loose in a department store, begging their mothers for practically everything they see but do not need, while they whine and snivel because they are denied. We must learn, beloved friend, not to come to God with all our wants. Mary and Martha and Lazarus. He loved them because they loved Him. Several times in scripture we read of His visiting in their house, but never once do we read that they ever went to visit Him. Jesus knew they dearly loved Him and that His presence was welcome in their home. Martha had lovingly served Him, ministering to His every need. Mary had poured the precious ointment upon His head and washed His feet with her tears. Lazarus, according to ancient authority, had been an almost constant companion. He it was who sat at table with Him after being raised from the dead. Our blessed Lord, who communes with the meek and lowly, dwelleth not in huge temples, erected by the business acumen of empire building preachers. His presence is always found with worshippers humble and true, who worship the Father in spirit and in truth, for “the Father seeketh such to worship Him.” I am neither a prophet nor the son of a prophet, but the hour cometh when these empire building preachers, who have squandered hundreds of millions of dollars taken by craft from the poor to build great monuments to their own ingenuity, will stand both naked and empty handed, vainly protesting, “Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in Thy name and in Thy name done many wonderful works?” To this the Lord will answer, “I never knew you. Depart from Me, ye that work iniquity.” Learn as early in life as possible that it is not what we do for God that counts. It is what we are’, and what we are depends entirely on our relationship to Christ. Furthermore, our relationship to Him depends entirely on our communion with Him. If we do not take time to commune with Him and live our life in His presence, we will develop no relationship with Him and all our labor will be wood, hay and stubble.

Whoever gave you or me authority to tell God what He should do? Whoever gave us authority to storm the throne of grace until we get our heart’s desire? Where did we get the notion that we would be heard for our much speaking? Let us unlearn these errors of the past and abandon the instruction that false prophets and false teachers have made us believe, and let us come in humility, saying, “Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?” Prayer is not man commanding God. Prayer is God presenting His wishes to man. Certainly the Bible... says, "Ask and ye shall receive", but let us walk close enough to Him to know what the burden of His Spirit is. Ask for that and we shall receive. See what wise instruction the Holy Spirit gave through Paul when he said, "We know not what we should pray for as we ought", Rom. 8:26, and having said this, he told us the way we should pray, for said he, "The Spirit itself maketh intercession for us (the saints) ...according to the will of God." Verses 26-27. This is the true pattern for prayer. Let us diligently follow it. Abandon the human error of presenting your wishes to God. Your wishes are probably the enemies of His will. Abandon your prayer lists with their vain repetitions, like a monk counting beads. God will not hear us for our much speaking.

Communion begins, not with our storming the throne and making demands before God, but in waiting in His presence to hear the still small voice of the blessed Paraclete, the Holy Spirit, whose ministry it is to lead us into all truth, making us wise in all the wisdom of God. The Holy Spirit is our great teacher, teaching us the ways of righteousness and truth. He is our ever, present guide, ever directing our lives into all His mind and will.

So often God's people tell me, "I am seeking God's will." That is good and it is the right thing to do, but know this first of all. You are in God's will right now. Continue to walk in submission to Him. Commit your way to Him from day to day and fifty years from now you will stand in utter amazement when you contemplate how faithfully His loving hand has guided you throughout the journey of life.

Next as a method of communion God has given us His holy word. A great deal of emphasis has been placed upon Bible study. Bible Schools and colleges have been erected and maintained at enormous expense for the study of the Bible, the study of Theology and the turning out of preachers to preach what they have been taught. Many an honest life has been spent in an endeavor to teach men and women the scripture, but remember this: No man on earth can understand the truth unless it is revealed to him by the Holy Spirit. For many years it was my privilege to teach large classes in Bible School besides ministering to hundreds and often thousands in large congregations. But this I have learned: However diligent the teacher may be or however earnest the student, no man can learn or receive truth except it be given him from heaven. The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; neither can he know them, for they are spiritually discerned. We may wrestle with a truth for years and never be able to grasp it, but if we will ask the Holy Spirit to reveal the truth, sooner or later He will open our minds to it and we will marvel at its simplicity. Young Christians should first of all read the Bible from cover to cover as a narrative. This will familiarize them with those themes and covenants that run from Genesis to Revelation. By this they will understand what Jesus and the apostles are saying when they make hundreds of references to Old Testament scripture. The Bible interprets itself if we study it. It is the work of the Holy Spirit. He is the author. He is His ministry to lead us into truth and bring all things to our remembrance, whatsoever He has told us. Never depend on the worn out old doctrines of the church system. They become strait jackets and plaster casts handed down from the mother of harlots. Steadfastly refuse to confine truth to the codes of denominations. Ask the Holy Spirit to interpret and reveal His truth. Of Him Jesus said, "He will guide you into all truth." Not part of it nor half of it, but all of it. For this reason I never cease to bid God's people to leave the denominations, the non-denominations, the inter-denominations, and the sects, together with every little ist and ism and receive the Holy Spirit as their only instructor, teacher and enlightener. John the beloved taught us, "The anointing which ye have received of Him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you; but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in Him." 1 Jno. 2:27. Let us avail ourselves of this blessed promise.

The word of God is much more than the written word. The word may appear as the created word, or the creation. "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth His handiwork. Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night sheweth knowledge. There is no speech nor language where their voice is not heard. Their line is gone out through all the earth, and their words to the end of the world." Psa. 19:1-4. Even a person who has never seen a Bible can learn great wisdom from the creation, which declares the glory of God. In creation we see the truth of death every night and resurrection every morning. We can see the death of all things every autumn and the restitution of all things every spring. We see God's omnipotence - in ten thousand ways in every wind and waterfall, every tide and ocean, every earthquake, tempest and tornado. His faithfulness is fresh every sunrise and new every evening.
The greatest of all is the Living Word, which is Christ Himself. Many years I puzzled over the words of Jesus, "Except ye eat My flesh and drink My blood, ye have no life in you", but when the answer came, "The Word was made flesh", the simplicity of it was astonishing. So to eat His flesh is to partake of His word, and that Word is Christ Himself. His blood is life. How simple, then, it is to become partakers of His flesh, which is His word, and of His blood, which is His life, for, said He, "My flesh is meat indeed and My blood is drink indeed."

In Him is life (blood) and the life is the light of men, and the light shineth in darkness and the darkness comprehendeth it not. What wonders these are! No marvel that Jesus cried, "If any man thirst, let him come unto Me and drink. He that believeth on Me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. But this spake He of the Spirit, which they that believe on Him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given; because Jesus was not yet glorified." John 7:37-39. Beloved saint, it is true! "My flesh is meat indeed, and My blood is drink indeed." Eat and drink of the inexhaustible Christ. There and there alone is life eternal.

In meditation upon these things a strange and wonderful unfolding pervaded my spirit and the truth that Christ is "the Word" became exceedingly clear. It is the Spirit that quickeneth. From John 1:1-3 we read these strangely wonderful words: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by Him; and without Him was not anything made that was made." The creative word that came forth from the lips of the Father in the beginning was the word spoken in Genesis, chapter 1. By it God commanded the light to shine. By it the universes were formed. He spoke the word and light and darkness were separated. By His word the sun ruled the day and the moon the night. By His word the grass grew and the beasts and nations came into being. He said, "Let Us make man in Our image" and it was so. All things were made by the word of God, and without it was nothing made. That word was light and life and God; but carnal man can never comprehend light. Though the light shone in the darkness, the darkness of the human heart could not receive it. In Him was life, and the life was the light of men; but here again men could not receive life, because the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God. They were not born of light and could not comprehend the way. He was in the world and the world was made by Him, but the world knew Him not. He came unto His own, but His own received Him not. Because of this blindness and darkness and inability to comprehend the life, the light, or the word of truth, God in grace and mercy wrapped the Word, the truth, the light and the life in human flesh, presented all this glory on the level of man, and called Him Jesus Christ, saying, "The Word was made flesh and dwelt among us." Only then did man behold His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth, life and light. In like manner that vapor and water and ice are one and the same thing manifested on different levels, so the Word, the Truth and God's Son manifested in the flesh are one and the same. For this very reason it is written, "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. All things were made by Him, and without Him was not anything made that was made." The Word was made flesh and dwelt among us and was manifested among us as God's Son, our Christ, the Word of God. It staggers the imagination to be sure, but this is what God says. The Word was made flesh to dwell with man that man might become the Word to dwell in God. "Ye are our epistle written in our hearts, known and read of all men. Forasmuch as ye are manifestly declared to be the epistle of Christ ministered by us, written not with ink, but by the Spirit of the living God..." 2 Cor. 3:2-3.

"And I saw heaven opened, and behold a white horse; and He that sat upon him was called Faithful and True, and in righteousness He doth judge and make war. His eyes were as a flame of fire, and on His head were many crowns; and He had a name written, that no man knew, but He Himself. And He was clothed in a vesture dipped in blood; and His name is called The Word of God" Rev. 19:11-13. Because the Word was made flesh, Jesus said, "Except ye eat My flesh and drink My blood, ye have no life in you." It is here in eating His flesh and drinking His blood that we come face to face with the deepest meaning of communion. The flesh of which He speaks is the Word and Christ is the Word. The blood is the life and that life is eternal. It was the same night in which the son of God was betrayed that He took unleavened bread, saying, "This is My body, broken for you." Then He took the cup of wine, saying, "This cup is the new testament - or the new covenant - in My blood. Drink ye all of it."

Paul in his teaching concerning this Passover supper explained, "The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ?" We have been explaining how communion with Christ brings us into the realm of the more excellent... glory, the realm of incorruption and immortality. In the ordinance of communion we grasp with greater clearness the reality of eating His flesh (the word) and drinking His blood (the life). Weymouth in his translation of this passage uses the word participation instead of communion. Thus the bread which we break, is it not participation in the body of Christ? Moffatt uses yet another expression. "Is it not sharing the body of Christ?"

Each of these words is most enlightening. We should meditate long upon them all - communion, participation and sharing.

It is our responsibility to give particular heed to these things because Paul makes it clear that our failure to understand this sacrament is the reason that many are weak and sickly among us and many die. 1 Cor. 11:30. Moses was one hundred and twenty years old, yet his eyes were not dim nor his natural force abated. He had become well nigh incorruptible. No feeble person existed among the two million Israelites in the desert, and this is the reason: "They did all eat the same spiritual meat, and did all drink the same spiritual drink, for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them: and that Rock was Christ." 1 Cor. 10:3-4. I know of no place on earth today where the communion, the Lord's supper, is taken with understanding. It is therefore taken unworthily. 1 Cor. 11:29. The covenant of grace, which it represents, is not even thought of, let alone partaken of. From these wonderful facts we see as never before the importance of communion with Christ and partaking of Him. Moses saw it and understood it; and I suppose, had not God told him to go up into the mount and die, he would have lived in incorruption unto this day. Learn to commune with Christ, the Word. Enter into the secret of His presence. He that dwelleth in the secret place of the most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty.

The importance of our daily communion can never be over emphasized, but before closing this chapter, I would like to disclose a truth concerning the sacrament of the Lord's supper that is so important that, if we can grasp it by the Spirit, it will revolutionize our relationship with God during this age of grace. We have all noticed, perhaps without a question, that the first section of the Bible is known as the Old Testament and the second section is known as the New Testament. A testament is actually a will or a covenant. The words testament and covenant come from the same Greek word diatheke. The legend on my will reads, "Last will and testament." Within its covers specific instructions are given as to who shall be heirs of the property I possess. As long as I live, my will is of no value to anyone. No one can receive anything from it or make any bargain in lieu of it, but, the moment I am proclaimed dead, the property belongs no longer to me but to my heirs. They do not have to ask for it nor pay for it. It is theirs. The entire New Testament is a faithful record concerning the things our Lord Jesus Christ willed to those who are His heirs at the proclamation of His death. There are hundreds of promises given in the New Testament, every one of which became our property when our Lord died and His will and testament came into force. In that last will and testament there are promises of salvation, justification and sanctification. There are promises of physical healing, promises that the Spirit would make alive our mortal flesh, promises that we should be filled with the Holy Spirit, promises that God's power would keep us. There are promises of sonship, adoption, incorruption and immortality, the kingdom of God, resurrection and reigning with Christ. Think of the words, "Father, I will that those whom Thou hast given Me be with Me where I am." John 17:24. And "I give unto them eternal life." The promises in Christ's will and testament are so varied that they touch every phase of our Christian existence, both in this age and in the ages to come. To continue to try to name them all would be futile. Think of all that is entailed in this one declaration, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee", and "Lo, I am with you always."

Let us remember once again that these are promises that Christ put in His will, the wonderful New Testament. But let us remember also that no one could claim any of them while Jesus was still alive. Heb. 9:16-17. It is true He healed the sick, but that was an act of His mercy and love - like a gift given during the life time of a wealthy testator. But the moment Jesus died, all the promises of the New Testament (will) were ours, not to ask for or beg for or even pray for, but to receive as His last will and testament.

Throughout the Bible practically every covenant or testament was sealed with blood. Heb. 9:22. A lamb was slain in Eden. Noah made an offering after the flood. The Abrahamic covenant was sealed with blood. The Mosaic covenant was sealed with blood. The Davidic covenant was sealed with blood. So, true to God's pattern, the New Covenant was sealed with blood - not the blood of bulls and goats, but with better blood, even the blood of the Son of God. "Almost all things are by the law purged with blood, and without the shedding of blood there is no remission." Heb. 9:22.
On the night in which our Saviour was betrayed, He observed the Passover supper with His disciples. "And as they were eating, Jesus took bread, and blessed it, and brake it, and gave it to the disciples, and said, Take, eat; this is My body. And He took the cup, and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying Drink ye all of it: For this is the blood of the New Testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins." Matt. 26:26-28. Thus the shedding of the life blood of Jesus Christ was the proclamation by God Himself that Jesus Christ, the testator, was dead and His last will and testament was in force.

When the apostle Paul discussed this matter with the Corinthian Christians, he wrote, "I have received of the Lord that which also I delivered unto you, that the Lord Jesus the same night in which He was betrayed took bread: and when He had given thanks, He brake it, and said, Take, eat: this is My body, which is broken for you: this do in remembrance of Me. After the same manner also He took the cup, when He had supped, saying, This cup is the new testament (will) in My blood; this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of Me. For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till He come." 1 Cor. 11-23, 26. By using the word show as in the King James Version we have, I fear, been missing the dynamic meaning and the great significance of the sacrament. In the British Revised Version we have this very meaningful translation: "As oft as you eat this bread and drink this cup, you do proclaim the Lord's death." This word proclaim struck me like a thunder bolt, Paul is here emphatically teaching that, every time a Christian observes this Passover supper, which we call the sacrament of the Lord's supper, we are proclaiming anew that the mighty covenant, the unalterable testament, the eternal will and testament of Christ is in force, because the testator, Jesus Christ, died; therefore every promise in the entire New Testament is ours - not to be asked for, begged for, or requested, but it is ours as a covenant right.

If you pause to think, you will become fully aware that the whole church system and Christians of many ages have, when keeping this sacrament, been merely reminding themselves in a sentimental way that Jesus died for them, as a sorrowing parent might remember the death of a child. But the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was never intended to be a tearful reminder of His death on the cross. It is instead the proclamation of the death of the testator, Jesus Christ our Lord. The proclamation of His death brings His last will and testament into force. Because the testator, who made the will, is dead, every promise He made and every gift He promised within the covers of the entire New Testament is fully active and fully ours as heirs according to the promise. Gal. 3:29. This almighty message we proclaim every time we break the bread and drink the cup. "For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do proclaim the Lord's death until He come." Oh what a difference it makes to our Christian experience when we see ourselves no longer as starving mendicants, begging crumbs from the Master's table, but heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ in the mightiest will ever made! And not only made, but now through the shedding of His blood fully in force and active]

I cannot advocate that God's people attend the gatherings of some Babylonish system to partake of the communion, because there they will partake of division, and where there is division, they come together, not for the better, but for the worse. 1 Cor. 11:17-18. Would it not be much better to do as they often did in New Testament times and simply sit at table once or twice a year in your own home or with a few devout friends and there with unleavened bread and wine remember the body and blood of the Lord?

Acts 2:4,6. For as often as we eat this bread and drink this cup, we do proclaim the Lord's death and declare that the glorious last will and testament of Christ is fully in force and active in our hearts. No longer need we be as strangers who lick up the crumbs that fall from the Master's table, but sons of God and heirs according to the promise.

It is remarkable, to say the least, that the book known as The New Testament, with which we are all so familiar, is actually the last will and testament of Jesus Christ. Within its two covers are contained the terms of the will together with all the riches of the inheritance. Is it not incredibly strange that, though we are so familiar with the words of the New Testament, we have failed to understand that what we have been reading for so many years is in fact and in truth the last will and testament of Jesus Christ?

In closing the precious truth of this chapter, we shall point out one more important and blessed fact. When anyone makes a will, he always appoints an executor, whose duty it will be to see that the terms of the will are faithfully carried out after the death of the testator. With the last will and testament of Jesus Christ we find something never before known in the history of the world. The testator who made the will and the executor who discharges its terms are one and the same person. Instead of the word executor the scripture uses the term mediator. Heb. 8:6; 9:15; 12:24. Now Jesus Christ, according to the scriptures is the testator who made the will, leaving all the marvelous glories of the new covenant to us, His elect children. But three days after His death He, the testator, rose from the dead and became the executor of His own will. Thus the Holy Spirit teaches that, "if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh: how much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered Himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God? And for this cause He is the mediator (executor) of the New Testament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament (that is, the Old Testament), they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance. For where a testament is, there must also of necessity be the death of the testator." Heb. 9:13-16.

Therefore as oft as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye do proclaim the Lord's death until He come. The death of Christ makes us heirs of the inheritance. His resurrection assures us of its benefits. Amen and Amen!

CHAPTER SEVEN
SOME MUST ENTER

O Father, who hath sent Thy Son that a world born in sin might be born of God, grant that our eyes may be opened to the abundance of Thy goodness and mercy. Thou who hast sent the Spirit of Thy Son into our hearts crying, Abba Father, grant that He may open our understanding to see that the old and imperfect is passing away as the kingdom dawning increaseth more and more!

The truth being revealed concerning the more excellent glory is of extraordinary importance to the saints who live in these momentous hours just preceding the resurrection. The glorious and long-awaited resurrection of the dead has been fully and faithfully promised in Holy Scripture and is doubly assured by the indisputable fact of the personal, physical resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ, the first born from the dead.

There are only a few people in the world hardy enough to disbelieve the death of Christ. That Jesus actually died at Calvary is attested to by many infallible proofs. Pilate believed Him to be dead. The centurion believed He was dead. The fact that blood and water flowed from His wounded side is proof indisputable that He was dead. He Himself, after having said, "It is finished," gave up the ghost. God pronounced Him dead. The apostles said He was killed. The women came to embalm His dead body. The soldiers, knowing He was dead, "break not His legs." Every Old Testament sacrifice foretold the death of Christ. The proofs of His death are certain and infallible. He was the lamb slain from the foundation of the world.

Indisputable as is the death of the Saviour, the proofs of His resurrection are even greater. Highly trained soldiers under pain of death for neglect for sleeping guarded His tomb; yet the stone was rolled away and the tomb found empty. Surely this is proof insurmountable that Jesus rose from the dead. That He was seen of Mary and the other women, then of the apostles, then of travelers on the road to Emmaus, then of the eleven on various occasions is proof abundant that He rose from the dead. He showed Himself alive by many infallible proofs. He ministered among the people for forty days, speaking to them concerning the kingdom of God. Acts 1:3. He was seen of James, and later by all the apostles by the lake. He was seen of over five hundred brethren at once, 1 Cor. 15:4-7, and after His ascension into heaven He was seen of Paul. Verse 8. Many years later He was seen in wonderful glory by John, Rev. 1:10-18, and likewise many saints down through the centuries have been visited by the glorified Christ. The greatest proof of Christ's resurrection is found in that one disputable fact that, after He ascended to heaven, He sent the Holy Spirit as He had promised, John 16:7, to abide with and in the believer to transform all who believe on His name. By many infallible proofs He has proven Himself to be alive forevermore. He is the first born from the dead, the first of billions who will rise because He rose. I have reason to be sure that many now reading these lines can testify that they, too, have seen the resurrected Jesus Christ.
I feel a great urgency about this message because we are rapidly approaching the hour when some must enter the more excellent glory of incorruption. As it is written, this corruptible must put on incorruption and this mortal, immortality. That is the realm where death is swallowed up in victory. Paul has clearly stated that adoption, which is sonship in all its completeness, comes with the redemption of the body. Rom. 8:23. Since we are members in particular of the Christ body and are the "fullness of Him," then it certainly follows that God's Christ, both the head and the body, must be completely resurrected that the body might partake of the same incorruption as the head.

This corruptible must put on His resurrection form. We must be changed into His likeness. The body of our humiliation must be transformed into His heavenly image. The resurrection of all that are in the graves, each in his own order, is an absolute certainty, for Christ, who cannot lie, has promised it. There is no room for error in this respect. That the dead in Christ will rise first, 1 Thess. 4:16, is also a certainty. It is also a certainty that the in Christ people, or the "inChristed," who are still living on earth when He returns, will be changed. 1 Cor. 15:51-53. They will receive their resurrection bodies at the instant the dead saints in Christ arise. We are all greatly lacking in understanding, but I am not at all certain that the resurrected saints will be caught away at the instant of their resurrection. They will certainly be changed as it is clearly stated in 1 Cor. 15:52-53, but, though Paul in 1 Thess 4:16-17 speaks of a catching up, he does not necessarily infer that the catching up is at the same instant that the dead and the living are changed. It is therefore my opinion that, as our blessed Lord at His resurrection was changed from corruptible to incorruptible in the twinkling of an eye, yet remained on earth forty days to minister, so also will the inChristed body be raised and be manifested among men before they are taken up.

While the apostle Paul was on earth, he clearly stated that he was endeavoring to attain the resurrection and thus reach adoption and sonship even in his day, as is recorded in Phil 3:10-16. What else could he have been seeking when he said, "That I may know Him, and the power of His resurrection...", and again, "If by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead?" He undoubtedly sought to attain to this marvelous change, this transformation from corruptible to incorruptible, even in his day.

Because of the frailty of my own understanding, I tread softly here, yet may we not expect that some will enter that realm of full sonship, an elect from among the elect, even before the trumpet sounds? There must be an Elijah company who, according to the prophet Malachi, will minister, no doubt in the heat of opposition as the book of Revelation clearly shows, Rev. 11:3-12, but none shall hurt them or make them afraid. They will turn the hearts of many fathers to the children and many children to the wisdom of the just. Mal. 4:5-6. Then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven. Then shall the inChristed sons rise to meet their elder brother and head to return with Him for the glorious kingdom reign of the King of kings and Lord of lords. He who has prepared us for this change is God, who has given us the Holy Spirit as a guarantee.

"All flesh is not the same flesh: but there is one kind of flesh of men, another flesh of beasts, another of fishes, and another of birds. There are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial: but the glory of the celestial is one (thing), and the glory of the terrestrial is another. There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars: for one star differeth from another star in glory. So also is the resurrection of the dead. It (the body) is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption: it is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power: it is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body." 1 Cor. 15:39-44. This resurrection body is the more excellent glory, excelling the corruptible body of our humiliation as the sun excels the light of a penny candle. When our Lord Jesus Christ at His transfiguration was manifested in His resurrected form as He will appear in the kingdom, His face did shine as the sun and His garments were white as the light. Matt. 17:1-3. Thus it was with the resurrection of Christ and thus it shall be with the resurrection of all who are in Christ, for the head and body united form one glorious Christ.

When the writer of the book of Hebrews wrote the fourth chapter, he commenced with this warning: "Let us therefore fear, lest, a promise being left us of entering into His rest, any of you should seem to come short of it." Heb. 4:1. All the events that occurred in the history of Israel were for our learning upon whom the ends of the ages are come. Rom. 15:4. Their seventh day was Saturday; our seventh day is the dispensation of the kingdom of God. Their rest was Canaan; ours is the kingdom of God. No wonder Paul bids us fear lest we should come short of God's promises and fail to enter in! Since the seventh day of which he speaks represents the Sabbath rest of the kingdom of God, he therefore bids us fear, lest the promises left us of entering into that rest be missed or we should come short of it. Israel in the wilderness failed to attain, because they did not believe. Unto us is the gospel preached as well as unto them, but, if it be not mixed with faith, we will fail to enter in to this more excellent glory. "For He spoke in a certain place of the seventh day on this wise, And God did rest the seventh day from all His works. And in this place again, If they shall enter into My rest. Seeing therefore it remaineth that some must enter therein, and they to whom it was first preached entered not because of unbelief," Heb. 4:4-6, it remains that another day would come in which some would enter in to share with Christ the glories of the incorruptible realm. There remaineth a rest (verse 8) to the sons of God, and some must enter it. Those to whom it was first preached entered not; therefore the promise remains for us, the sons of God, at the end of the age.

Some two million Israelites perished in the wilderness because they could not believe to enter the land of Canaan. Nevertheless, Caleb and Joshua, with all those under the age of accountability at the time of the rebellion, entered in. Millions refused to enter the ark with Noah, but some entered in. Enoch walked with God and entered in, for God took him. One hundred and twenty tarried till Pentecost at the bidding of Christ and entered in to the new glories of a spiritual realm. Publicans and harlots entered in while scribes and Pharisees in unbelief spurned their Christ and received Him not.

So in our day the greatest glory of all ages lies before us - the more excellent glory of entering the realm of incorruption. Many will refuse to believe and will forfeit their right to enter in, but some must enter in. They shall partake of the bread of life, which Christ is. They shall not die, but they shall be changed. Their corruptible will put on incorruption and their mortal, immortality. They shall know no end of days, for they will be made one with Him who hath neither beginning of days nor end of life, but abideth continually and forever. Some must enter in. God has prepared us for this change and has given His Spirit as a guarantee. What greater guarantee could possible be given? Let us therefore, as Paul, become conformable unto Christ's death that we might in this, the end of the age, be made partakers of His resurrection. Not as though we had already attained, either were already perfect, but we follow after if that we may apprehend that for which we were apprehended of Christ Jesus. Phil. 3:10-14. We count not ourselves to have apprehended, but this one thing we do: forgetting the things which are behind and reaching forth to the things that are before, we press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

Can you imagine a saint two thousand years ago seeking to attain to the resurrection from among the dead? That is what Paul was doing. I have no way of knowing whether or not he attained his precious goal, but some must enter in: and Peter has given us the assurance that there is an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled and that fadeth not away, ready to be revealed in the last times. 1 Pet. 1:4. Surely then this message is to us, and some must enter in.

O, that I may know Him, and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His suffering, being made conformable unto His death; if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead.

Old things are passing away. They are not permanent. All things are to be made new. Let us therefore relinquish the things that belong to the passing and lay hold on the things, which are permanent and belong to the age to come, for some must enter in.

In our journey from the natural to the spiritual realm we are continually beset with dangers and pitfalls. For every gain we make it seems there can be many losses, and every triumph can bring its defeats. It is for these reasons that it may be profitable for us to consider things as they are, and to solicit God's help that we might see ourselves as He sees us. We cannot repeat too often the great fundamental fact that every fresh degree of light, which shines upon our pathway must of necessity bring a corresponding repentance. If we will pause long enough to meditate on the following statement, we will likely decide it is true: "Things that seemed spiritual in our yesterdays seem to be only natural in our todays and will seem carnal in our tomorrows." If that is not our testimony, then we may well begin to question whether we are making any real progress in God at all. But if our testimony should prove opposite to this, so that things, which were carnal in our yesterdays are accepted as part of our spiritual life today, then we are in a bad way indeed, for, if I build again the things that I destroyed, I make myself a transgressor.
It would be profitable here to go over a few of the warnings that are constantly repeated in the word of the Lord. Always remember that the Bible is God's word. Every word of it was given by revelation. Not only thoughts were inspired of God, but the words as well. All Scripture is given by inspiration of God and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works. 2 Tim. 3:16. The scriptures are able to make us wise unto salvation through faith, which is in Christ Jesus. Verse 15.

Notice the testimony of the scripture to "word" inspiration. "The Spirit of the Lord spake by me and His word was in my tongue." 2 Sam. 23:2. "Hear, oh heavens, and give ear, oh earth, for the Lord hath spoken." Isa. 1:3.

"Behold I have put My words in thy mouth" Jer. 1:9.

"Thou shall speak My words unto them." Eze. 2:7 and 3:4.

"David himself said by the Holy Ghost." Mark 12:36.

While I could multiply such passages as these, it is perhaps unnecessary, yet for your study you might refer to such other passages as follows: John 19:24. Matt. 2:5, Matt. 5:18, John 10:35, Luke 24:25, 44. The references of Jesus to the scriptures were always calculated to give the utmost confidence and trust, saying, "Ye search the scriptures because in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of Me." And again, that heaven and earth should pass away but the word of the Lord would not pass away, neither would a jot or tittle fail until all was fulfilled.

The Bible abounds on every hand with useful and practical instructions for our guidance in everyday life. It covers every phase of life from birth to immortality. It uncovers every sin and work of the flesh. It shows in detail the purpose of God for all time. It unfolds the paths of righteousness and truth to all who will walk in them. By taking heed to it young men cleanse their ways. It displays the glories that await those who walk in righteousness and the dire peril of those who walk in evil. Psalm 119 is the longest chapter in the Bible, containing one hundred seventy-six verses. Only three of these verses (121, 122 and 132) fail to mention the word of God by calling it judgments, statutes, precepts, testimonies, word, or some kindred name. "The judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether, more to be desired than gold, yea, than much fine gold; sweeter also than honey and the honeycomb, moreover by them is thy servant warned; and in keeping of them is great reward." (Psa. 119:9-11).

Now to come back to our original thought - to go over the oft, repeated warnings contained in the word of God. "Let us therefore fear lest a promise being left us of entering into His rest, any of you should seem to come short of it." Heb. 4:1. There is always a tendency for God's people to grow weary with the journey and fail to enter into the rest God has promised us. We sometimes console ourselves and excuse our apathy by saying we should not get over-anxious about ourselves and get ahead of God. Of course, we should not get ahead of God. We will have a difficult time doing that, for we cannot enter into anything He has not revealed to us. The moment, however, He reveals a truth, an experience, or a height to us, it is time to strip for the race and get moving. Paul did not calm the people by telling them not to get over-anxious. He told them to fear lest they miss it.

I have been amazed of late at the number of instructions given in the word of God about this very thing. Let us listen to a few of them. "Let us therefore fear lest a promise being left us of entering into His rest, any of you should seem to come short of it." Heb. 4:1. "Let us labor, therefore, to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief." Heb. 4:11. "Thy that run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize. So run that ye may attain." 1 Cor. 9:24-26. "Run with patience the race that is set before us." Heb. 12:1. "I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God." Phil. 3:12, 16. "Ye did run well; who did hinder you?" Gal. 5:7. "Take heed lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God." Heb. 3:12.
None of these warnings give us any reason to rest on our oars. Labor is labor wherever you find it, and there is always toil and hard work connected with it, often disappointment and work that has to be done several times over. There are always those who would like to "sit at ease in Zion," but the path of the will of God lies by the way of Gethsemane and Golgotha, both being places of awful travail that will cost us all far more than we possess. I know of a truth that there will be no reward for those who do not labor to enter in. The spirit of ease that has settled over us will have to be dispelled or the losses will be great and irretrievable. Jesus taught us to "strive to enter in at the gate", for, He said, the gate is straight and the way narrow and only few would find it.

I was thinking of the words of the Greek poet who wrote:

Vice there is in abundance,
And easy to find,
For the way to it is smooth,
And lies very near.
But before the Temple of Virtue,
The immortal gods have placed Labor.
And the way to it is long and steep
And at the commencement rough,
But once the traveler has reached the summit it is easy,
However difficult it was at first.

Everything that is worthy and valuable is filled with labor, and the road to it always lies through the mountains of difficulty and never through the plains of ease. We may wish we could rest, and indeed we shall at last, but before rest comes work and travail, for we must labor to enter into His rest.

The apostle Paul on one momentous occasion was carried by the Spirit into the third heaven. God in sovereignty reached down and picked him up (whether in the body or out of it he did not know) and carried him into the celestial realm, the third heaven. He never did repeat any of the things he saw there, but so great and glorious were the visions of that holy hour that he found it unlawful to utter its secrets to ordinary men, and he died without disclosing it to anyone. His vision in the Spirit must have at least equaled the glories of the mount of transfiguration, which Peter briefly describes as the power and coming of Christ, which they saw when they were with Him in the holy mount. But because Paul had gone into that holy of holies through the sovereignty of God, he was not allowed to remain there, but was brought back to his former condition. He never could forget the glories he had seen. Therefore, to attain them as an eternal prize, he spent the rest of his earthly life pressing toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus, running that he might attain; fighting not as those that beat the air; keeping his body (flesh) under and bringing it into subjection, wrestling flesh and blood and principalities and powers; and finally, having fought a good fight, there was laid up for him a crown of righteousness, and not for him only but all those who loved the appearing of Christ.

It seems to me that our journey to the celestial could be more accurately described as a run rather than a walk. "So run that ye may attain," Paul says, and again, "Let us run with patience the race that is set before us." Running is never an easy matter. It takes every ounce of energy that we possess. Those who engage in this sport strip off every possible article of clothing, and carry nothing with them. There is no idleness or sitting at ease. They are out to win. Runners in this life obtain only a corruptible crown, but runners of the race we speak of obtain an incorruptible crown. Here, only one receives the prize, but there many may receive it.

Many years ago, when I was a child, a number of long distance runners ran a race from San Francisco to New York. They were running thirty and forty miles a day. I still remember following the newspapers every day for the report on their progress. They encountered many difficulties along the way. Some dropped out almost every day. Some could not stand the pace; others developed sore feet. The runners were constantly bothered by motorists who pulled alongside and tried to question them as they ran. About the halfway mark one runner was standing out above all the others. He was a Finlander, whose name was Gavuzzi. By the time they had reached the three-quarter mark it seemed there was no chance of anyone overtaking him. I can still remember the pictures of his unshaven face and the appearance of his sinewy body. But just about here trouble began to overtake him. He developed a severe toothache and after several more days he was forced to drop out, and another who was not so swift but had more endurance took the prize. Running, you see, is not just a matter of walking up to the grandstand to get your prize. It is a thing that requires stripping, patience, endurance, as well as speed.

Paul spoke of the Galatians who did run well for a time but were hindered. That is ever our trouble. We do very well for a time, but the cares of this age and the deceitfulness of riches and the desires for other things enter in and choke us, and we become unfruitful and drop out of the race altogether.

Let us labor to enter into rest. Let us strive to enter the straight gate. Let us run that we may receive the prize. Let us fight not as those who beat the air. Let us wrestle, not merely as those who wrestle flesh and blood. Let us press toward the mark, straining every nerve. Let us keep our body under and bring it into subjection, lest, after having preached and believed wonderful things, we should ourselves be discarded. Let us give diligence to make our calling and election sure. Let us add to our faith virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, and godliness, for he that lacketh these things is blind and cannot see afar off. But he that possesses them shall have an abundant entrance into the kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

One day a lawyer came to Jesus asking him, "Which is the greatest commandment in the law?" Jesus replied, "Thou shall love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul and with all thy mind; this is the first and greatest commandment." One of the scribes, having heard this same answer on another occasion, said, "Well, master, thou hast said the truth: for there is one God, and there is none other but He, and to love Him with all the heart, and with all the understanding, and with all the soul, and with all the strength, and to love his neighbor as himself, is more than all whole burnt offering and sacrifices." And Jesus, perceiving that he had answered discreetly, said unto him, "Thou art not far from the kingdom of God."

The point I want to make is just this: To love God with all the heart and soul and mind is the fulfilling of all the law and will of God. This is better than burnt offerings or any sacrifice. This is indeed the fulfilling of all the law and the prophets. It is the foundation of the kingdom, the beginning of all righteousness, and the end of all good judgment and equity. It is the thing that God requires above all else. But there is another god that men love. That god is money, the god of this present age. To love him is not the foundation of the kingdom, but rather the root of all evil. Money is the thing that rules this age. We cannot buy the necessities of life without it, and there is no lust of the flesh or desire of the eyes, ears, or taste, that cannot be obtained by those who possess it. It is connected with every war in history and with every dive and brothel in the world. For the love of this god men miss the kingdom. The rich young ruler wanted to be perfect, but went away sadly when he saw it would require the sale of his earthly possessions. And Jesus, feeling just as sad, saw him go, and said, "It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom." Of course, it is hard for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven, because rich men and poor alike become worshippers of the god of this age, and we cannot serve God and Mammon. It is impossible to serve two masters. We are bound to love one more than the other. We are bound to cling to one and despise the other. Mammon was the Syrian god of riches. He is not only the Syrian god of riches, but he has become the god of the whole world, the god of this whole age, and to love him is the root of all evil.

We do not have to be rich to love money. Poor men can love it, too. They often love it and strive for it even more than rich men. We do not have to be a sinner to love money. Christians love it as much as others. An elder, a deacon, or a minister can be a lover of money and perform his ministry for filthy lucre’s sake. He becomes a worshipper of the god of this age. They that love him finally err from the truth and pierce themselves through with many sorrows.

Jesus said that riches were deceitful. "The deceitfulness of riches chokes the word." He told us to "beware of covetousness". He said it was hard for a rich man to enter the kingdom. Paul warned Timothy not to trust in uncertain riches. Indeed, they are uncertain, for, as Solomon said, they make themselves wings and fly away. He told us that to covet money caused us to err from the truth, and to love money was the very root of all the evil in the age.

Why is the love of money the root of all evil? This is a very good question and it should be answered. Let me ask another question. What can you buy with money? Am I not right in saying that money can only buy temporal things for the body and can buy nothing for the soul or the spirit? Can you think of any eternal thing that can be purchased with money? Or on the other hand can you think of any temporal thing that money cannot buy? All things that can be lavished on the flesh can be purchased with money, but not one thing that belongs to the spirit can be obtained by money. When the sorcerer offered Peter money for a spiritual gift, Peter replied, "Your money perish with you, for you have thought the gift of God could be purchased with money." We must conclude then that spiritual things such as love, wisdom, knowledge, kindness, and a thousand other eternal things are obtained for the soul and spirit without any help from the god of this world. Anything that the flesh can use for any comfort or ease, to delight the eyes or ears or taste or any other sense, can be obtained with money. Anything to eat or drink or put on, any luxury or comfort or mode of travel can be bought with money. Furthermore, anything that can be bought for the body, or anything that can be purchased with money is a transient thing that will soon perish and disappear.

Now, since the flesh lusts against the Spirit and is at endless conflict with it, then anything that seeks to make us earthly and fleshly-minded is a great evil. The things that belong to the realm of the flesh (the body) are passing away. Even the flesh itself is passing away. Anything that is passing away is not real. It is like a bubble that floats prettily in the air only to burst never to exist again. It is like the darkness that disappears with the dawn and has no certain dwelling place. It is like a flower in the field that blooms for a moment and disappears, a vision of the night, a fleeting shadow, a moment of joy, a passing sorrow, or a sudden pain. When such things have passed by, no one knows where they came from nor whither they have gone. Those, however, who indulge themselves in the things that belong to the body grow to think that nothing is true or real but what is bodily and can be touched or seen or eaten or drunk or enjoyed by the passions of men. Unwittingly they change true riches for false; things that are unseen by mortal eyes for things that are seen. They exchange things that are spirit for things that can be touched, tasted, and felt by the body. The soul now begins to think that these things, which belong to the body, are real and therefore becomes fleshly minded. The carnal or fleshly mind is an enemy of God and an enemy of all things spiritual. It follows, then, that because the soul is burdened down with the earthly and visible, it is impossible for it to be spiritual, and when the time comes to depart out of this world by death and enter the realm of the Spirit, it will fear to die and want to remain in the body, because it is a stranger to the realm of the Spirit and has come to believe that the realm of the body is the only realm that is real, when in truth it is the only realm that is unreal.

Did you ever notice how the legion of spirits that possessed the man at Gadara were filled with dread at the thought of leaving the body of the maniac? When they found they must go out into the deep where there was no body, they begged to be permitted to enter the bodies of the swine. They would sooner inhabit the flesh of a pig than no flesh at all. I could be wrong, but I am inclined to believe it was Jesus rather than the demons who caused the pigs to run down the hill into the sea. You see, when we become fleshly minded and think the transient things are real, then every time our soul would fly to the spiritual and eternal it is dragged back again by the physical and visible thinking that corporeal things are real, when, indeed, there is no reality in them for they are passing away.

Will you agree with me that everything everywhere is made up of things, which are visible and things, which are invisible? And is it not true that visible things never remain the same but are always changing, and that invisible things always remain the same and never change? And to which of these two things is the body most like? And to which is the spirit most like? Is not the body like the visible and changing and the spirit like the invisible and unchanging? Then when the soul and spirit become lovers of the body, they are dragged away by it into things that are always changing and never remain the same. They become as unlike God as it is possible to be and are completely bound up and imprisoned by the body (flesh). When we try to discover any spiritual thing by the use of any of our bodily senses, we are taken into the realm of unreality and change; for everything connected with the body is changing while everything that belongs to the spirit is unchanging. It is small wonder then that the natural man cannot receive the things of the Spirit of God; for all things connected with the natural belong to time and change, while all the things belonging to the spiritual are eternal and changeless. So then all who would come to know the wisdom of God and the revelation of the Lord, must turn their spirits from the realm of the physical and changing, the corrupt and mortal, and fly away into the realm of the pure, eternal, unchanging, and immortal. It is only there that rest and truth are found, and, abiding there in the Spirit, even the body itself begins to be lifted from corruption to incorruption and from mortality to immortality. We said a moment ago that when the soul comes into the realm of the flesh, it becomes carnal and fleshly-minded because it is dragged into the realm of the body. Inversely then, when the soul and spirit dwell in the secret place with God, they lift the body till it also becomes incorruptible, immortal, and eternal.
When anyone first comes to Christ from the world of sin, His spirit is fast bound up and imprisoned by his flesh, and, while he may live the rest of his life in this same condition, yet the Spirit of God immediately seeks to deliver him and change him from walking after the flesh to walking after the Spirit. A strife between the flesh and the spirit begins, the flesh on the one hand endeavoring to bring the soul into bondage and death, the spirit on the other hand seeking to bring both soul and body into the liberty of life and peace. This is the greatest reason imaginable why we should live in temperance, and hold aloof as far as possible from the unreality of physical desire, earthly pleasure, fear or pain, and instead have great desire for spiritual pleasure, wisdom, knowledge, and joy in the Holy Ghost. Can you not see that when your spirit is associated with the earthly, it becomes earthly, and when it is associated only with the heavenly, it becomes eternal and spiritual? If your soul becomes associated with the pleasures and pains of the body, it is bound to think that these sensations are true and real when there is no reality in them, but they are only fleeting passing things that appear like mists and are gone. Every physical pleasure has a way of fastening the soul more securely to the body and giving it a fleshly nature. Thus the soul or mind comes to think that the pleasures of the body are real and true, and because of this it comes to have the same fancies and desires as the body and becomes defiled by the flesh and cannot enter into the holiest of all. The soul has become a slave to the flesh and has lost all intercourse with the divine.

While the spirit and the body are united and dwell together, one must always be in subjection to the other. Either the body will be servant to the spirit or the spirit will be servant to the body. One will be the servant and be ruled. The other will be the master and rule. We cannot avoid this conclusion. Either the flesh will rule the spirit, or the spirit will rule the flesh. Since, however, the flesh is like the mortal and changing, and the spirit is like the immortal and unchanging, then the spirit is the one who should be the master. If the spirit is the master, it will save the flesh by lifting it to the realm of God and immortality, but if the body is master, it will ruin the soul by dragging it to the realm of the carnal, the mortal, and changing.

You may well wonder why I am taking so much time to describe the flesh and the carnal mind, but what is the value of talking about things we have never understood? Is there any use in talking about the carnal mind if we do not know what makes the mind carnal? Can we ever be delivered from it by ignorance? Why do Christians like to talk about the flesh and remain in ignorance as to what the flesh is and how it operates? Why do they continue to talk about the carnal mind and get angry when the revelation reveals what the carnal mind really is? We claim to love and desire the life in the Spirit, yet we make more and more provision for the flesh, so that we can enjoy more fully the fleeting sensations that belong to the body. We make provision to gratify every physical sense, yet every one of them perishes as it is used. Col. 2:21-22. The more we see, the weaker our eyes become. The more we hear or feel the weaker the sense of hearing and feeling becomes, until, when a man has reached seventy years, he has lost seventy per cent of his physical senses.

Oh! that men would awaken to the truth that they might see where reality dwells; that their eyes might be opened to see that their search for satisfaction in the realm of the body is but to chase rainbows and grasp the emptiness of bubbles in their hands. A mist may appear for a moment and then disappear. A dream of the night might terrify, but its phantom figures disappear with our awaking. So also the fleeting fantasies of the flesh are dissipated with our awaking to the realities of the Spirit. The things that are seen are only temporal. The things that are not seen are eternal.

We squander health in search of wealth,
We scheme and toil and save,
We squander wealth in search of health
And all we get's a grave.
We live and boast of what we own,
We die and only get a stone.

That is about all the reality there is in the physical realm. I think you will agree with me that it is not reality at all. It is a ghostly phantom, a mist that appears for a little time and is gone. We can see, however, that those who set their hearts on obtaining as much as possible of the passing sensations of time are dragged into the realm of the unreal, and their minds become absorbed with physical things, bodily, fleshly, carnal things, until the realm of the carnal mind is the only realm that is real to them, when in reality it is the only realm that is unreal. The wind will soon pass over it and it will be gone, and the place thereof shall know it no more. But the things of the Spirit are from everlasting to everlasting, and the righteousness of God to children's children.

For centuries and millenniums past men have always thought that the things of the Spirit were misty, ghostly, and unreal but that the things bodily and physical were the things that were tangible and real. The truth is exactly opposite to this; it is the spiritual and eternal things that are real and changeless, and it is the bodily and physical things that are always changing and never remain the same. They soon disappear - ashes to ashes and dust to dust.

I do not think there is need for more instruction as to how we are going to enter the realm of the Spirit and live and walk there. Our greatest necessity is to see the unreality of the realm in which we have lived so long. When we see its uselessness and fruitlessness, our love will turn away from the changing to the unchanging and from the passing to the permanent.

It is hard to imagine how anyone can truly love a thing that is always changing and never remains the same. Yet it is our ignorance of the realm in which we live that makes us love it. If a woman should love and marry a man because of his wealth, what cause do you think she would have to love him should he lose his wealth and become poor? And if a man should love a woman only because of her beauty of form and face, can she expect to retain his admiration when she has lost that beauty? But if he loves her for some spiritual quality such as kindness or patience or some other virtue, he will never cease in his love for her, for these are things that do not change. They always remain the same. This is the very thought the apostle had in mind when he wrote, "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world... for the world passeth away and the lusts thereof, but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." We have loved the world because we did not know its changeable character and we did not know that all things that belong to it pass quickly away and God has no permanent purpose for any of it.

We have come to the place in our experience where we are to pass the inner veil and enter the Holy of Holies where God lives and no flesh can abide. How many will attain to that glory I cannot say. God alone knows that. But this I do know; it is just as impossible for flesh and blood to inherit the kingdom as it is for corruption to inherit incorruption. God seems to be standing before the veil saying of our flesh, "You cannot bring that in here." The time has come to lay aside every weight, put off anger, malice, wrath, put away lying, mortify the deeds of the flesh, put on charity, crucify the flesh, cast off the works of darkness, flee youthful lusts, abstain from all appearance of evil, purge ourselves of the leaven of malice and wickedness, and add to our faith virtue, knowledge, temperance, and every other spiritual virtue, for these things are unchanging and always remain the same. They abide in the realm of the Spirit of God and are unknown elsewhere.

I hope we have all become aware that we are entering a new era, a higher plane, and a new age. All the old things belonging to a natural realm are passing away because they belong to the realm of the passing, but all things of the Spirit are becoming new. These latter will abide forever because they belong to the realm of the permanent. Let the old things go! Do not set your heart on them nor weep at their passing! Set your heart on the realm of the Spirit. Make that your life and your very existence. I fear that in the past and even until now we have treated the realm of the Spirit with unbelievable casualness. Too often we look upon the realm of the Spirit as something to be entered into for an hour or two on Sunday morning while the rest of the time is spent making as much progress as possible in the natural realm, and in laying up goods in store for the body. Perhaps we have forgotten that all progress we make in the natural realm is only loss eventually, for, should we gain the whole world and yet be cast away, it has profited us nothing and is only loss to us.

I know that my Redeemer liveth and he shall stand in the latter days upon the earth, and if after my skin worms destroy my body, yet in my flesh I shall see God, whom I shall see for myself and mine eyes shall behold and not another.

As we read these pages of truth, surely we must realize that for many months past there has grown an ever increasing knowledge within that the order we have known all our lives and which has existed for the past two thousand years is now rapidly passing away. The things that we have seen and heard and known and loved are waxing old and are ready to vanish away. The kingdoms of this world are preparing themselves for their own destruction. The systems of the church are decaying before our eyes and nothing can save them. Even while we read these lines many men and women filled with human zeal are putting forth frantic efforts to turn the tables, stem the tide, reverse the decadence, stop the advance of Communism, revive the church, reach the heathen. Every imaginable device is being used to accomplish this end; radio, television, literature crusades, missionary programs, citywide organized revival meetings, and a multitude of other ideas. It is not within my right to condemn such zeal or effort or speak a word against those who are so involved, but it is within my right to say that we are at the hour when all these human efforts are passing swiftly away. The imperfect things that have been used of God in an imperfect age are vanishing away with the age itself, for "when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part (imperfect) shall be done away."

Man has always had a reluctance to give up the good things of the past and lay hold of the better things of the future. Even in the natural realm some men scorned the thought that the automobile could ever replace the horse and buggy, but it did, and, if time were to prevail long enough, the automobile itself would be replaced with something far superior. But it is in the spiritual realm that the new is always resisted. Christians are like homing pigeons who are no sooner moved than they fly back to where they were before. God's people always hate and resist the coming of a new order. They are loath to change the visible for the invisible, but their rage and fury against spiritual progress and revelation do not hinder the program of the Lord, for He moves irresistibly on from the things of time to the things of eternity, from the realm of the imperfect to the realm of the perfect.

There was a little period of twilight between the ages of law and grace when God raised up a mighty prophet of whom it was said, "Among them that are born of women there hath not arisen a greater than John the Baptist." As his thundering voice echoed among the Judean hills, whole towns and cities went out into the wilderness to hear his message of repentance and baptism for the remission of sins. Four hundred years had gone by without the voice of a prophet and never had any person then living heard such things as John spoke. His message was new and vital and the priests, the common people, and the soldiers alike came to humble themselves and repent in preparation for the kingdom and the King that were soon to appear. We can safely affirm that no revival in history was ever greater, and probably none was ever of shorter duration, for this prophet was pointing the eyes of the people to the Lamb of God, and when Jesus Christ suddenly appeared on the scene with even greater power and glory, all men and women soon forgot John and turned to Him. It was a sad day for the disciples of John when they came to him saying, "He to whom thou bearest witness beyond Jordan, the same baptizeth and all men follow Him." But it was not a sad day for John. Well he knew that the glory and wonder of his own ministry of preparation was but a passing thing. It was given to endure but for a moment that that which is permanent might come.

Now, can you not see that the message of John, which for a few months blazed and shone with its scintillating glory and power and truth, had waxed old and was ready to vanish away the very moment he cried aloud to the people, "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world?" Once Christ had come, there was no more need of John's ministry of preparation. It was one of the passing things and it was ready to vanish away. Can you believe even for a moment that you would be willing to sit and listen to one of John the Baptist's sermons after Christ had come as John's ministry predicted? Do you not think those sermons would seem strangely dead and out of date if we were to hear them now, for who would want to hear him tell of a Christ that was soon to come after He was daily seen among them?

There is an interesting story in the Acts of the Apostles concerning a mighty preacher by the name of Apollos who, knowing not that Christ had come or that Pentecost was twenty years past, preached only the baptism of John. Thus it reads, "This man was instructed in the way of the Lord; and, being fervent in spirit, he spake and taught diligently the things of the Lord, knowing only the baptism of John." Acts 18:25. A Christian man, Aquila, and his wife Priscilla heard him preach these things and immediately took him aside and expounded unto him the way of God more perfectly. Verse 26. I am certain that the fiery zealous sermon of Apollos as he preached the baptism of John twenty years after Calvary and Pentecost were history must have sounded pitifully out of date to the enlightened Aquila and Priscilla. For this reason they took the great preacher aside and showed him the way of God more perfectly. It is a precious testimony in his favor that thereafter he "mightily convinced the Jews and that publicly, showing from the scripture that Jesus was the Christ." Acts 18:27-28.
Once again we are at the place where the old is passing away and the new is coming in. The glory and wonder of an age we have loved is fading out and the heralds of God are proclaiming the transcending wonder of a better though still imperfect age. The kingdom of God is at hand. The man-child, who will shepherd the nations with an iron hand, will soon be caught up to the throne, for it is from the throne that the sons of God shall rule. Rev. 12:1-6. Is it any wonder, then, that the things that have been the order of an imperfect church for the past two thousand years should now be waxing old and be ready to vanish away? Just as Aquila and Priscilla were struck with the obsolescence and oldness of the message of Apollos as he boldly proclaimed the baptism of John, I am compelled to testify that I feel the same way concerning the present preaching of the gospel in our day. It has been God's order and truth for the past two thousand years, but a better and more enduring age is upon us, for that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away. The age of grace must give way to the kingdom and Paul's gospel must give way to the everlasting gospel of Rev: 14:6, which is to be proclaimed immediately following the birth of the manchild. Rev. 14:1-6.

The struggling missionary programs that have been used of God to bring the elect few from the masses of the earth are about to vanish away, for the hour is upon us when all who sit in darkness and in the shadow of death will see a great light. Isa. 9:2. The hour is at hand when no one will have to say, "Know the Lord", for all will know Him from the least to the greatest. Heb. 8:11. All the frantic efforts devised by human zeal to revive missionaryprograms will fall into the dust of decay. They are passing and not permanent. They have waxed old and are ready to vanish away. The hour is at hand when "Jesus shall reign where'er the sun doth his successive journey run" and all men shall know Him from the least to the greatest.

The message of healing, which has had such a wonderful day in revivals through the ages, cannot again be revived. The healing campaign has run its course in spite of all claims to the contrary. God is taking away the first that He might establish the second. Certainly there have been many healings and certainly there are still healings, though in no such abundance as is claimed. It is passing away that the more permanent order may come, for the hour is at hand when the lame man shall leap as a hart, the tongue of the dumb shall sing, the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and there shall be no sickness in all the land. Isa. 35:5-7.

As I write these things and meditate upon them, there is a tremendous sense within that the sun is setting on this dispensation of the grace of God. But the same sun that is setting on Europe is rising on America and the sun that is setting on America is rising on the Orient. So also it is that the sun which set on the age of the law was at the same moment rising on the age of grace, and now that it is setting on the age of grace its gladsome rays are heralding the kingdom morning and the age-lasting joy that shall be upon us. It is the crowning day.

How totally inadequate do our words become at such a time as this! How futile are our explanations, how faint our exhortations! Only the revelation of the Almighty can teach us the things we ought to know and may God grant that spirit of wisdom and understanding in the knowledge of Him that the eyes of our understanding should be enlightened to see that the millennial dawn with lithesome steps is tripping o'er the kingdom hills.

On this very day and at this very moment all the end time signs spoken of by Jesus, by Daniel, and by Paul are coming to pass before our very eyes. The prophetic words of Jesus Christ come echoing down the corridors of the years saying to men of our day, "Many shall come in My name saying, 'I am Christ!' Nation shall rise against nation and kingdom against kingdom." "There shall be famines, pestilence, and earth-quakes." "Many false prophets shall arise and deceive many." "There shall be signs in the sun and the moon and on earth distress of nations." "Men's hearts failing them for fear and for looking after the things that are coming upon the earth, for the powers of the heavens shall be shaken." See Matt. 24. Is there yet anything lacking in the prophecy of Paul, which he spoke in these words, "This know also that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high minded, covetous,boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, having a form of godliness but denying the power thereof? 2 Tim. 3:1-5. Each truth of this prophecy abounds in minutest detail in our day. Not only do such things abound on the level of the individual, but they abound in international relations and the world of religion. The great leaders of the earth both of the East and of the West think nothing at all of lying, accusing falsely, truce breaking, or covetousness, and boastfulness abounds without measure or precedent. Traitors and spies are continually discovered. The love of pleasure is everywhere and forms of godliness abound on every hand, yet they are devoid of the power of God.

Covetousness, boastfulness, and betrayal are found not only among the worldly. These things abound in the religious world as well and go hand in hand with all manner of deceit and trickery, which Paul has aptly described as "the sleight of men and the cunning craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive." Eph. 4:14.

Daniel was told that in the time of the end "many shall run to and fro and knowledge shall increase," but it is doubtful whether even he could possibly have envisaged the ease with which moderns run to and fro. He could have had no idea of the swiftness of twentieth century travel or of men in orbit circling the earth in ninety minutes. He could have had no thought of trips to the moon nor of sending rockets to Venus. Such a vast increase in knowledge was hidden even from this man who is renowned for his wisdom beyond almost all men who have dwelt on the earth, but his prophecy is a sobering testimony that we are in the very last hours of this passing age. See Dan. Chapter 12, especially verse 4.

I feel so deeply within about this truth, so positive that we are at the very end of the dispensation, so sure that the manifestation of the sons of God is even at the doors that I have a burning desire to exhort all sober-minded men and women to set themselves aside more completely unto God. Give yourselves to watching, to fasting and prayer. Do not even try to "go along" with the existing church system. Seek to make Christ your head. Seek to be possessed with His mind. Seek to have Him daily reveal His will to you. Relax your hold on things that belong to time and lay hold on the things that are eternal. Let us turn our eyes from the realm of the passing and lift them up to the celestial hills of the permanent, for, when that which is perfect is come, that which is in part shall be done away.
"Feed My sheep" was the commandment Jesus gave to Peter. There was but one commandment left to be given and it was the all important one, "Follow thou Me." There is beautiful harmony between these two commandments because there is no possible way by which a man can feed the flock of God if he himself is following Christ afar off.

The scriptures record that, on the night when Jesus was betrayed and the howling, bloodthirsty rabble came to seize Him and to take Him captive, a certain brave man drew his sword in defense of his Master, smiting the servant of the high priest and cutting off his ear. Matt. 26:51. Each of the four gospel writers bear record of this incident, but John alone identifies the sword-wielding man as none other than Simon Peter, saying, "Then Simon Peter, having a sword, drew it, and smote the high priest's servant, and cut off his right ear." John 18:10. The servant's name was Malchus.

Simon Peter was no dastard in war. The fiery nature of his natural man was both ready and willing to face overwhelming and fearful odds. The mob who had come to take Jesus were armed men with swords and staves, determined to end forever the works of God's Christ. Matthew described the mob scene in these words: "And while He yet spake, lo, Judas, one of the twelve, came, and with him a great multitude with swords and staves, from the chief priests and elders of the people." Matt. 26:47. This was no band of weaklings who had come to take the Lord, but a great multitude of well armed men, bent on their malevolent and vicious intent, and Peter, seeing one of them lay hands on his beloved Master, drew his sword and smote the offender and cut off his right ear. His personal courage was ready to take on the whole mob. Then why was it, we may ask, that this brave and resolute man was seen a few minutes later 'following afar off'”? Matt. 26:58. And the record tells that later still he emphatically denied that he had ever known Jesus at all.

I hope no man among us will blame him too much or condemn him for his sudden weakness. He was in a position more dreadful and scary than perhaps any of us have ever been, and we know our blessed Lord understood his weakness, too. Well Jesus knew and well we also know that many a valiant man who will stand up boldly against the fiercest foe will run and hide in fear rather than confess to a vital and personal relationship with Jesus Christ. God knows that, too. He has seen our many efforts to stand for Him when the going gets rough, and He has seen our failure with gracious understanding. He knows that in the natural we are very brave, but He also knows that the spiritual realm is far above the natural world and its weakness. In that blessed realm human bravery will not suffice. In fact, it will not do at all. Spiritual strength comes only by the Spirit of God and all earth's bravery or bravado is only weakness in that realm. Jesus wasn't amazed at Peter's weakness. It was no surprise to Him at all. For a long time He had known that this hardy man was far too dependent upon his human resources. That is why He told him earlier, "The cock shall not crow twice before thou hast denied Me thrice." Peter was sure such a thing could never be, but God knows how frail the natural man really is. He knows that man must die to himself and all he is or ever hopes to be that Christ may be his strength. Jesus turned and looked on Peter when He heard the denial for the third time, and Peter, remembering the words of the Lord, went outside and wept bitterly. The look of Christ was not a look of anger, but, oh, what sermons can be preached by a look! A look is not unlike a smile. Indeed, a smile is a look. Long ago in the world we used to sing:
There are smiles that make us happy;
There are smiles that make us blue.
There are smiles that drive away the teardrops
As the sunshine drives away the dew.
There are smiles that have a tender meaning
That the eye of love alone can see;
But the smiles that fill my life with sunshine
Are the smiles you give to me.

A look can tell of friendship, displeasure, or appreciation. It can speak of hate, disgust, mistrust. It can expose doubt, fear, or rebellion. It can show the tenderness of love or the vileness of lust. It can tell of forgiveness, mercy, or understanding. There seems to be nothing that cannot be said by a look.

It is now almost sixty years since the blessed Holy Spirit laid His convicting hand upon me and told me as only He can do that the time had come for me to leave the world and all its blighting sin and come to the cleansing fountain of blood that all my sins might be washed away. Many and fierce had been the days of struggle as the Holy Spirit prepared my heart with great conviction of my sin and showed me as only He can my great need of Christ. I shall be thankful forever that one night, as I stood in the midst of my convictions and struggles, a saintly woman turned around from where she stood several rows of seats in front of me and smiled at me. I don't know what made her turn nor do I know why she smiled at me - we had never met nor spoken - but her smile told me I need have no fear in trusting God, that He was as good as His promise and that, if I would but come, He would meet me and save me from my sin.

And so it must have been with Peter that sad night when Jesus turned and looked upon him. Peter knew the meaning of that look. He knew there was reproof and he knew there was forgiveness, but above all he knew there was understanding.

God understands our sorrows;
He sees the falling tear
And whispers, "I am with you;
You need not have a fear."

Peter denied the Lord three times that night, and that is why Peter was grieved that morning by Galilee when Jesus said, not once, not twice, but three times, "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou Me?" He wanted to make sure that Peter was forever finished with the vanity of trusting in himself, and I am sure he was. Once before Jesus had said to him, "Simon, Simon, behold, Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as wheat; but I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not: and when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren." Luke 22:31-32.

Perhaps I will shock many people when I say that at this particular time neither Peter nor any of the other disciples were converted men or born of the Spirit. You ask how that could be. It is because they were still living in the dispensation of the law. No man can be truly converted until he receives the Holy Spirit to quicken him and regenerate his spirit, and this is why the scripture says, "...The Holy Ghost was not yet given; because that Jesus was not yet glorified." John 7:39. It was not until after the resurrection and Christ's own glorification that He appeared in the midst of His disciples and breathed the Spirit upon them, saying, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost." John 20:22. These same men, upon whom He breathed the Spirit that they might be regenerated, born again, New Testament Christians, were the men who some fifty days later were filled with the Holy Ghost when the day of Pentecost was fully come. Acts 2:1-4. On that day the fire and glory of God descended upon them, and they were baptized with the Holy Ghost according to the promise of Jesus, which He gave them just before His ascension into heaven, saying, "John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence." Acts 1:5. The Feast of Pentecost is fifty days after the Feast of the Passover. Jesus, true to type, was crucified a few hours before the Passover began and was taken down from the cross that He might not hang there on the Passover day. He was buried and remained three days and three nights in the heart of the earth. After He arose in triumph from the tomb, He was seen of men for forty
That adds up to forty-three days since the Passover. On the day He ascended to heaven, He commanded His disciples, saying, "...Tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high." Luke 24:49. "Then He led them out as far as to Bethany, and He lifted up His hands and blessed them. And it came to pass, while He blessed them, He was parted from them, and carried up into heaven. And they worshipped Him, and returned to Jerusalem with great joy: and were continually in the temple, praising and blessing God. Amen." Luke 24:50-53. "And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place. And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting. And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them. And they were filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance." Acts 2:1-4.

Such was the heavenly preparation of this man Peter, to whom Jesus had said, "Feed My sheep," and such was the preparation of all those men the Lord was sending forth. Such also should be the preparation of every Christian, for the things of which we have spoken actually comprise a simple New Testament experience.

I do not think that by any stretch of the imagination any could say that Peter's two sermons, recorded in the book of Acts, were masterpieces of oratory or elocution, but his eloquence knew no bounds in fervency of speech and passion of experience. Great were his experiences in God. Varied, indeed, had been his testings and temptations. Through them he had learned the weakness and unprofitableness of the flesh, and knew beyond doubt that it is vanity to put one's trust in the flesh, but that he who puts his trust in the Lord shall never be ashamed.

"Feed My sheep and follow thou Me," His Lord had told him, and through all his life he steadfastly did that very thing until the crowning day came and it happened to him as Jesus had told him, "When thou wast young, thou girdedst thyself, and walkedst where thou wouldest: but when thou shall be old, thou shalt stretch forth thy hands, and another shall gird thee, and carry thee where thou wouldest not. This spake He, signifying by what death he should glorify God." John 21:18-19. And so it was that, when Peter was an old man and knew that his death by crucifixion was near, he wrote in triumph, "Knowing that shortly I must put off this tabernacle, even as our Lord Jesus Christ hath shewed me." 2 Pet. 1:14.

For many months now I have felt a burden on my heart to write a message that would be of special benefit to those precious people who as yet have not come to a saving knowledge of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. While it is true that practically the whole New Testament is addressed to believers who have come to the knowledge of salvation, the Bible is such a versatile book that it meets people in every walk of life and ministers to them on whatever level of experience or need they may be.

"Come, ye sinners, lost and hopeless, Jesus' blood can make you free; For He saved the worst among us When He saved a wretch like me."

How good it is to read in the book of Jude, "Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation..." Jude 3. The common salvation is a level of salvation common among the children of men. I regret to say, and yet I suppose it is the will of the Lord, that by far the greater number of professing Christians have never obtained anything more than the common salvation. They become just the every day, run-of-the-mill sort of Christians. They have believed on Christ and they have been saved and they are satisfied with the most meager experience. Just so long as they make it to heaven when life is over that is all they care. They have been made partakers of a salvation which Jude calls the common salvation. They never know that higher realm of the "so great salvation" or, higher still, the salvation "reserved in heaven." Included in this common salvation group may be found thousands of people who have never known a time when God ever spoke to them or touched their lives in any way, yet they believe in God, in Christ, in the blood, in the atoning death and in the power of His resurrection, and in their hearts they believe they will be saved through His death on the cross. Knowing the infinite extent of God's grace and believing that Christ has reconciled all things unto Himself, we must believe that many of these people are walking in the realm of the common salvation. Our unbelief can never make the faith of God without effect. God forbid! It is God after all who has exercised faith for the salvation of the universe and it certainly shall be according to His decree.
But you, my brother in the world, and you, my sister without an experience of God's glory in your heart, need not remain so close to the realm of death. You need not abide in a dismal experience where you can never testify that you have assurance from His Spirit that you are saved from your sin. God has assured us time and again that it is possible for a man or a woman to know beyond any doubt that he is saved and a child of God. The word saved is a very scriptural word and is used many times in the New Testament. Its meaning is very simple. We speak of people being saved from drowning because someone pulled them out of the water. We tell heroic stories of people being saved from burning buildings by someone who rescued them, perhaps at the risk of his own life. When we speak of being saved from sin, the meaning is the same the difference being that the way a man is saved from sin is not the same as the way a man is saved from drowning. Sin is the transgression of the law of God — that wonderful law that is recorded word by word in the twentieth chapter of Exodus. Because no one has ever been able to keep that law, therefore, the word of God plainly tells us that all have sinned and come short of the glory of God. Rom. 3:23.

How thankful our hearts should be that God does not leave us to die in such despair as that! Though He tells us plainly that through the deeds of the law no flesh can be saved, He shows how the righteousness of God may be attained without the law, even the righteousness of God, which comes through Jesus Christ to every one who believes in Him. This is the meaning of Rom. 3:20-22.

For a man to be saved and know it there are two things he must know and two things he must do. First, he must know that he is a sinner. The Bible tells us this in the verse we have quoted. Rom. 3:23. Secondly, he must know that, if he confesses this inherent sinfulness to God, God is faithful and just to forgive him of his sins and to cleanse him from all unrighteousness, for "the blood of Jesus Christ, God's Son, cleanseth us from all sins." Then there are two things he must do. First, he must confess his sins to God and believe that when he does so he is both forgiven and cleansed from all his sins. I cannot remember how many times I have knelt beside a seeking soul who longed for the knowledge of salvation and yet could not find assurance. The whole trouble is that God's way of salvation is so simple that sinners often stumble over it for its sheer simplicity. When, therefore, I found a man who could not find assurance that his sins were gone, I have pointed him to the simple words of 1 John 1:9. Nothing can be more simple or assuring than this, "If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." "Have you sincerely confessed your sins to God?" I have asked, and invariably the answer has come, often through tears of sincerity, "Yes, I have." "Then do you believe He has forgiven you as He promised to do in that verse of scripture?" "Yes," is usually the sincere and inevitable reply. I do not remember anyone who ever failed to see that God meant what He said in this scripture and found assurance by it.

Because the way of salvation is so very simple, sinners often fail to grasp its beautiful simplicity. They look for something difficult. They have often been taught that they must do good works and try to do the best they can and all such manner of things. I have no quarrel with good works, nor do I question the honesty of a man who is trying to do the best he can, but such is not the way of salvation. "What must I do to be saved?" the trembling jailor cried that wonderful night at Philippi. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shall be saved," was Paul's answer, and at that very moment amid all the confusion that prevailed, the jailor believed and was saved and baptized in water. It is just as simple as that, if you can only believe it. But I have good news for you still, for you do not even need to depend upon your own faith. Our wonderful God has promised that He Himself will give you the faith to be saved and to believe that the blood of Christ cleanses you from all sin. So He says in His word, "By grace are ye saved through faith, and that (faith) not of yourselves; it is the gift of God." Eph. 2:8.

What a blessing it is when a man who really longs to know that he is saved and justified in God's sight really reaches out in the simplicity of his faith and believes the truth as God has spoken it! I shall never forget the night my bother, Philip, was saved. He, like myself, had spent many years under deep conviction of sin. On November 21, 1926, while some Salvation Army people were singing the song:

She only touched the hem of His garment
As to His side she stole Amid the crowd that gathered around Him,
And straightway she was whole.
Oh, touch the hem of His garment,
And thou, too, shall be free.
His saving power this very hour
Will bring new life to thee.

While they sang that beautiful song, Jesus of Nazareth laid His nail-pierced hand upon me, and by His Spirit He bade me come to Him. I started for the altar where some had already gathered to pray, and I had not gone three steps before my burden of sin was gone. I didn't know what had happened, I felt so light, and it was not until the next day, when I saw how different my walk had suddenly become, that assurance began to fill my heart with the knowledge that I was truly saved. But while I knelt there before God, I told Him that what I was doing was for forever, that from that day on I would belong to Him. I told Him that if I made mistakes or even sinned in days to come that I would still be His, and He heard my blundering prayer and saved me by His grace. I was only a lad of seventeen years then; I am much older now and, as my mind wanders over those rolling hills of time, my soul sings a thousand hallelujahs because of His faithfulness throughout the many years.

All the way my Saviour leads me;
What have I to ask beside?
Can I doubt His wondrous mercy,
Who through life has been my guide?

But I really started to tell you about my brother Phil. It was just nine days after I came to Christ that the conviction of years deepened in his soul. One night he decided to go to a meeting with me and, as we walked along the snowy path, he said to me, "George, I am trying hard to make up my mind tonight." I tried to assure him in my feeble way that God would meet him if he did, but when at last we arrived at the meeting house, we found the doors closed. To our great disappointment no meeting was to be held that night. I am sure the Good Shepherd was leading us, for we soon found ourselves standing somewhat bewildered at the entrance of a little Pentecostal mission, a strange people of whom we knew nothing. As we waited, an elderly lady with her daughter approached and turned toward the door. "What kind of meetings do you have in there?" my brother ventured to ask. "Oh," she said with fervent conviction, "we have wonderful meetings here. Won't you boys come in?" So in we went and sat down amid these totally new and strange surroundings. We had never heard people pray like they prayed, and their singing was with an exuberance and joy that we had never heard nor dreamed of. The pews were nothing more than benches, fashioned from cheap lumber. There were no carpets on the floors, nor was there an orchestra or choir - nothing, praise God, but the joy of the Lord that rang with a certainty from overflowing hearts. Then one by one they rose to testify, and such fervent testimonies they were! We had never heard the like. There were young men in the bloom of youth, young women shining with the glory of God, old men who had traveled far on the journey of life and old ladies whose faces shone with heavenly sweetness.

As they testified and sang the praises of God, my poor brother leaned over to me and whispered, "This seems to be alright, George," and I agreed that I thought it was. There was a little sermon by some layman and then almost everyone went to pray. Someone asked my brother if he was saved yet. "No," he said, "but my brother is." "Well," said they, "why don't you come to Christ now, too?" And with no more hesitation away he went to pray. As he knelt in prayer, God gave him great repentance. The rough old bench was a pool of bitter tears, but for all his weeping, assurance just did not come. God knows how best to deal with us and it is good sometimes when assurance does not come too quickly. I tried to assure him with what little I knew that God had accepted him, and others, who knew much more than I, explained the way of salvation more perfectly. Finally he sat up looking dejected and disappointed, not knowing it was his own unbelief that kept God's assurance from him. Then an old preacher, a man by the name of Bunting, came. He sat down beside him and explained the way of salvation to him, but still he couldn't believe. Finally, taking a little New Testament from his pocket, Mr. Bunting said, "Do you see this little Testament?" "Yes," was Phil's dubious reply. "Have you got this Testament or have I got it?" he asked.

"You've got it," Phil replied. Then the old preacher handed it to him and said, "Now you take it," and Phil reached out his hand and took it. "Have you got it now?" he asked. "Yes," my brother nodded. "And have you got salvation, too?" he asked. Phil sat for a moment as silently the light began to break across the meadows of his soul, and then, scarcely believing the simplicity of it all, he replied, "Yes, I think I have." Then he made a move to return the Testament to its owner and dear Bro. Bunting said, "No, you keep that. It's yours." I have often thought of the wisdom of that little act of assurance.

Well, we left the building without too much assurance and started down the snowy streets, but I think I could take you to the very spot where assurance bloomed like a flower of spring in the garden of his heart, and with the joy of a man who has just found a precious jewel he said to me, "You know, George, I believe things are different." Assurance flooded his soul and for the rest of the long walk home we gloried in the goodness of our wonderful Lord.

It's just like Jesus to roll the clouds away;
It's just like Jesus to keep me day by day;
It's just like Jesus all along the way;
It's just like His great love.

It is just as simple as that. There is nothing difficult or hard about God's way of salvation.

Between the saddle and the ground
Sinners Jesus sought and Jesus found.

We said above that there were two things a sinner needs to believe and two things he needs to do. He must first believe he is a sinner and, secondly, he must believe that, if he confesses his sins to God, God will forgive him and the blood of Christ will cleanse him. Then he must confess his sins to God and believe that God, according to His word, has forgiven him and saved him. There is one thing that is absolutely necessary for a new, born child of God to do and, if he fails to do it, sooner or later his experience will grow cold. He must confess openly and unashamed that he is God's child and that Christ has saved him from his sins. God's word plainly teaches us this. "If thou shall confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thy heart that God hath raised Him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." Rom. 9:9-10. There is nothing like confessing Christ in humility before men to bring full assurance of salvation. We must never be ashamed of Christ or His great salvation. Jesus Himself has plainly said, "Whosoever therefore shall confess Me before men, him will I confess also before My Father which is in heaven. But whosoever shall deny Me before men, him will I also deny before My Father which is in heaven." Matt. 10:32-33. When a man comes to Christ and is saved, he should not hide his light under a bushel. Go, confess Christ before your wife; she, too, will probably want to come to Christ. Tell your children that you have found the Saviour. Let the people among whom you work see that there is a change that Christ has wrought by your clean walk and your freedom from all evil habits. Lay aside all filthy talk, smoking, drinking, swearing and all such evil everywhere common among sinners. It will not be long before people will want to know the reason for the hope that is within you, and then you can tell them with meekness and fear what Jesus Christ has done in you.

There are certain things that accompany salvation. Paul wrote of certain professing Christians who fail to show the fruit of God's Spirit in their lives, but who bring forth thorns and briers instead. He wrote, "But, beloved, we are persuaded better things of you, and things that accompany salvation..." Just as certain evils always accompany a life of sin and are manifest in the lives of those who are living in sin, so there are certain graces that accompany salvation and those who are living the life of the redeemed. There are certain evils that we put off and put away from ourselves the moment we are saved. For this reason Paul said, "Put off all these: anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth. Lie not one to another..." Col. 3:8-9. All such evils as anger, wrath, swearing, dirty talk and lying have no part at all in the life of a Christian. They should be put away immediately and grace should be sought from God to overcome them completely. Such earthly habits as smoking and drinking have no place nor part in the life of a born again person. A Christian will find abounding joy and complete satisfaction through the joy of the Lord when truly saved. God does not ask you to give up the world and all things in it and give you nothing satisfying in return. He tells you to put off all these evils, but in their place He says, "Put on therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, longsuffering, forbearing one another, and forgiving one another..." Col. 3:12-13. A new born child of God should always remember that the joy of the Lord is his strength (Neh. 8:10), and, forgetting the things that are behind and looking to the glorious things that are before, he should press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Phil. 3:13-14.

To seek after God and to desire to be wholly His is the noblest desire that can fill the human breast. There are a few necessary things of vital importance that every seeking soul should know. God is not far from any one of us and His presence is certain and sure. They that seek shall find.

"To those who fall how kind Thou art!
How good to those who seek!"

First, a person seeking God should know that there is never anything indefinite or uncertain about God's plan. This is an important fact that is left out of almost every sermon we hear preached to sinners. The gist of evangelistic preaching usually runs in this vein: You are a sinner and, though Christ can save you, you must repent or be eternally lost. There is, of course, an element of truth in that statement, but it plunges the seeker into the realm of uncertainty as to why this should be and leaves him in a quandary concerning God's loving purpose toward him. Let every man and woman who longs to know that he is a child of God be assured that there is nothing uncertain or indefinite about God's dealings with us. Oh that all men were taught to understand that God knew them, not only when they were born, but long before they were born. Yea, even before the foundation of the world He knew them and planned the course and order of their lives! Before the world began, God knew you. He knew when you were to be born. He knew where you would be born. He arranged that you should be born into such and such a family under such and such a condition, whether favorable or unfavorable, that through those circumstances, whether pleasant or disagreeable, He might mold and fashion your life into the exact vessel He chose you to be in the unspeakable glory of those great ages which are yet to come. Oh that men would see and understand this marvelous truth, for the knowledge of it lends abounding assurance to a troubled heart. Many centuries ago, some six hundred years before Christ was born, the Lord said to Jeremiah, "Before I formed thee in the belly I knew thee; and before thou earnest forth out of the womb I sanctified thee, and I ordained thee a prophet unto the nations." Jer. 1:5. Now God is no respecter of persons, and I have perfect confidence that He, who knew Jeremiah from the beginning, also knew you, dear reader, long before Adam was in Eden's lovely garden, when the morning stars sang together and the sons of God shouted for joy. Did not Paul confirm this very thing when he said, "Whom He did foreknow, He did predestinate... whom he did predestinate, them He also called; and whom He called, them He also justified; and whom He justified, them He also glorified." See Romans 8:29,30. It was before the world began that God foreknew us, and it was before the ages were formed that He predestinated us to share the likeness of His Son. As time went by, He called us, and then He justified us. As we walk with Him, He sanctifies us and makes us holy, and the day of glorification will surely come in its appointed time. It is important for you to know, oh seeking soul, that you are not some idle chip on the ocean of time, unloved, uncared for, and with no appointed future. Know rather that you are a special object of God's love and care, a person with a place in God's eternal purpose for the ages to come.

You will have noticed in the scripture quoted above (Rom. 8:29-30) that the Lord said, "Whom He did predestinate, them He also called." When the time comes in your life for God to speak to your heart with His still small voice, He sends the Holy Spirit to you, and when He is come, Jesus says, He will reprove the world (you and me) of sin and righteousness and of judgment (not judgment to come, as so many quote). John 16:8. He convinces and convicts us of sin because He wants us to know that we are sinners and that it is only when we confess our sins to Him that we find forgiveness. So John wrote: "If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." 1 John 1:9. That, then, is the first thing to do when coming to God. Confess your sins to Him. A seeker should pay no heed to how he feels, but simply believe what God says. He says, "He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." When therefore God says He forgives the man who confesses his sin, be assured that the moment you confess and ask His pardon you are forgiven. Let neither man nor demon ever dissuade you of that wonderful fact. God is faithful. He cannot lie. Titus 1:2. Neither can He deny himself. 2 Tim. 2:13.

The Holy Spirit next convinces us of righteousness (John 16:9) - first that Christ, our Saviour, is righteous and, secondly, that, because we have believed on Him, we, too, are righteous and fully justified from all things. A Jew once said to a Christian brother, "Do you think Adolph Hitler could be forgiven and saved from sin?" The brother replied, "Of course he could, if he confessed his sin and believed on Christ." "Good!" said the Jew, "for I know that, if God could not forgive him, then He could not forgive me either." And that is perfectly true. Saul of Tarsus called himself the chief of sinners, but the moment Jesus spoke to him, he fell down before God and accepted Jesus Christ as his Lord, and he who was so wicked and sinful in the past was made righteous, because Christ is righteous. When we come to Jesus Christ, we abandon forever any righteousness we ever thought we had, for all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags. Isa. 64:6. Receiving Christ as our Saviour and Lord, we receive His righteousness as well. If God, therefore, gives us His righteousness, what need have we to depend upon our own? He who believes is justified from all things in God's sight and made pure and righteous, even as Christ is righteous. 1 John 3:7.

Repentance is godly sorrow for our sins. That is why Paul said, "Godly sorrow worketh repentance not to be repented of: but the sorrow of the world worketh death." 2 Cor. 7:10. The sorrow of the world is the kind of sorrow or regret that a thief has when he is caught in his thieving. That, of course, is not true sorrow. It is merely self-pity. But, when men or women know that they were born in sin and shapen in iniquity and that all their lives they have been seeking to enjoy the pleasures of a sinful world, then, when the Holy Spirit speaks to them and convinces them of their need of His righteousness, the time has certainly come for repentance and whole-hearted turning to the Lord.

Jesus one day took a little child on His knee and said to His disciples, "Verily I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." Matt. 18:2-3. To be converted means a complete about face, a complete turn around. It means leaving off the old ways of the world with all its rebellion against God and an embracing instead of the salvation of the Lord. It means you are no longer a sinner, but a converted saint, born anew by the miracle-working power of Jesus Christ, the Saviour of all mankind. Nor does our blessed Lord leave us without an inner witness. To every believing heart he says, "He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself." 1 John 5:10. And yet again: "The Spirit himself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God." Rom. 8:16. That wonderful witness will assuredly come as we believe God's word and bear witness to His faithfulness.

There is no other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved. Mohammed is dead; Buddha is dead; Confucius is dead, but Jesus Christ, God's Son, is alive forevermore, and in His nail-pierced hand He holds the keys of death and hell. It is Christ who unlocks the door and delivers men from their sin. It is He who on that great last day will unlock the door of hell itself that all men may stand before Him in judgment. He who hath received much, of him shall much be required, and he who hath received little, of him shall He require the less. Luke 12:48. There is no other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved. Acts 4:12. Therefore every man needs Christ and Christ alone and must believe in Him as his own personal Saviour that he might be saved. The great sinner needs Christ to cleanse him of his sin. The one who has sinned but little needs Christ just as much. There is no difference, for all have sinned and come short of the glory of God. Rom. 3:23. There are none too old to be saved, and none too young. The man full of his own righteousness needs the salvation of Christ, and the most dissolute and wicked wretch also needs the grace of Christ to lift him to higher ground.

Let no man ever say he has gone too far in sin, for the blood of Jesus Christ, God's Son, cleanseth us from all sin. However wicked the past may have been, let me assure you that it is not the greatness of your crimes that keeps you away from the love of God, but the unbelief in your heart. There is only one damning sin known among men. It is not blasphemy. It is not robbery. It is not adultery, and it is not murder. It is unbelief. For thus saith God, "By Him all that believe UK justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses." Acts 13:39. God is just as willing to save the worst of sinners as to save a penitent child.

Many years ago in the farming country where we lived there abode a woman who for many years had been the talk of the neighborhood. Long ago her husband had left her because of the life of sin she continually led. She had a family of five children and, though she was so rough and coarse and very sinful, to her credit it must be said that those in need or in trouble could expect her to be among the first to offer a helping hand. But she was bad, and there was no mistake about that, though it is not my place to recount or recall her sins. Among her family of five children there was one little boy who was slowly dying of Blight's disease. His name was Kenny.
As time went by, my brother Philip and I were converted to Christ and received the infilling of the Holy Spirit, as I mentioned earlier in this writing. It so happened in the good will of the Lord that this woman moved away from our district and went to live at a little village called La Porte. She was a farm woman and unlike most women she managed and worked her own farm herself. She plowed the fields like a man, threshed the grain and hauled it to the elevator with her own horses and wagon. She hesitated at nothing. As the years passed by and the blessed Lord laid His hand upon my brother and me and sent us to preach the gospel, a door was opened to us in that same little Saskatchewan town of La Porte - a French word meaning the door. We knew of no Christians in the place, but held our meetings in a community hall. The Holy Spirit moved upon some of the people and they believed on Christ and were saved.

It happened one day that my brother and I were driving our old touring car along the road when we noticed this woman and the son who was suffering from Bright's disease coming toward us with a team of horses and a wagon. We did not stop to speak, but waved to her and went on. As we drove along, I said to my brother, "Wouldn't it be wonderful if that poor woman came to the meetings and gave her heart to Christ and God should heal that little boy?" He agreed, of course, that it would be wonderful, but I confess that neither of us expected that such a thing would ever be.

One night when our little meeting began, to our surprise there sat this woman with a friend of hers on one side and her little boy on the other. Night after night she attended the services, and one evening, after my brother had preached, he asked if there were any who desired prayer for God's help. To our utter amazement her hand was among the first to be raised, and the lady beside her raised her hand as well. My brother and I were very inexperienced preachers and we always took turns in preaching. It was the following evening, I believe, that we held our service in a tiny hall because the larger hall was in use. It was my turn to speak and I am sure it must have been a very simple sermon, but our lack and childish simplicity means nothing when that wonderful Man of Galilee is there sending forth His Holy Spirit to convince the world of sin and righteousness and judgment. After the little sermon we sang an invitation hymn, and oh what a look of sadness and dejection was on the hardened face of that poor, benighted woman! Presently the lady beside her arose and walked to the bench at the front to pray. Then I heard the woman say aloud, "I guess I'll go, too." She came up to the front and knelt before God to pray. I shall never forget how she wept before the Lord and how she confessed her sinfulness to Him. Her body shook with sobs of repentance as the bitter tears coursed down her cheek and fell as rain on the bench where she knelt. Then Jesus came, and faithful to His word He spoke peace and forgiveness to her troubled heart. He cleansed her from sin and filled her heart with assurance that she belonged to Him forever. Then she looked up to heaven and with a heart bursting with joy, she cried, "Oh, I feel so different!" And do you know, the hard lines of sin that had marred her face for so many years melted away as Jesus came and wiped the tears of sorrow all away, and we knew that the same Jesus who long ago said to a sinful woman, "Neither do I condemn thee; go and sin no more," was with us in that little hall that night.

A few weeks went by and one day there was a knock on the door of our little shack, and there before us stood two little boys. One was the boy who was slowly dying of Bright's disease and the other a little friend of his. We asked them in, and as they played around the house, I said to my brother, "I wonder if that little fellow came down here to be prayed for?" We could only guess, for he had not said so. So Phil asked him, "Kenny, did you want us to pray that God would make you well?" The little freckled fellow sheepishly said, "Yes." So we all knelt down together — two boys about twelve years of age, my brother Phil and I. We anointed his head with oil and prayed a simple prayer that Jesus would touch him and heal him and make him well. No power on earth could save him, for the doctor had told his mother that she could not expect him to live more than two or three years. Already his condition was so severe that his bed sheets had to be changed three times in the night. So we prayed and the boys went home.

The next Sunday we were invited to have dinner at their home. We had only just been seated when the lady said, "I suppose you boys would like to know how Kenny is." "Yes," we said, "we surely would." "Well," she answered with tears of joy, "I haven't had to attend to him once since he was prayed for," and so we rejoiced together. I will not mention further details now except to say that Kenny grew to be a man, joined the army, fought all through World War II, and then returned home.
Some weeks later this new born saint, Kenny's mother, received the baptism of the Holy Spirit, and I shall never forget the joyful song she sang as the glorious anointing of God's Spirit rested upon her and filled her hungry soul.

Is not this the land of Beulah,
Blessed, blessed land of light,
Where the sun is always shining
And the sky is always bright?

She has gone home to heaven now to dwell with the Lord she loved, and when I see her in the sweet bye and bye, I'm sure I'll hear her tell the angels how Jesus came to save her that night so long ago.

Marvelous grace of our loving Lord,
Freely bestowed on all who believe,
Yonder on Calvary's mount outpoured;
Will you this moment His grace receive?

Dark is the stain that we cannot hide;
What can avail to wash it away?
Look, there is flowing a crimson tide!
Whiter than snow you may be today.

THE HOLY SPIRIT AND CONVICTION OF SIN

The vast wealth of blessing freely bestowed upon mankind by the coming of the Holy Spirit is, I freely admit, beyond the scope of my ability to portray, nor need we attempt to encompass with our limited understanding the full extent of that which our omniscient heavenly Father knows. In the months past we have written briefly of some of the mighty workings of His divine power in the lives of those who yield themselves to Him, but until we rid ourselves of the reasonings of the human mind to let the mind of Christ dwell in us, we will be unable to grasp more than the rudiments of all He is and does. "But, when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, He shall testify of Me: And ye also shall bear witness, because ye have been with Me from the beginning." John 15:26-27.

I know no words, be they many or few, that could more adequately describe the blessedness of the presence of the Holy Spirit in the world and in the believer's heart than these inspired words of Jesus by which He promised that after His departure He would send the Holy Spirit to abide with us forever. "Nevertheless I tell you the truth; it is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come to you; but if I depart, I will send Him unto you." John 16:7.

The physical presence of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, walking among men for thirty-three years manifesting the truth, the light, the life, and the glory of God, must have been the greatest and most blessed visitation the world had ever known. We dare i on the events of power and glory that daily filled the mighty ministry manifested to the world by that first Son of God. Should we now allow our minds to explore a ministry of such greatness that even the world itself could not contain the books needed to describe it, we could not now write of that Comforter whom Jesus promised to send that we might share His sonship. Behold what infinite importance Jesus, the Son of God placed upon the coming of the Holy Spirit when He said, "It is expedient for you that I go away." His departure out of this world meant the coming of the Spirit, and this in His wisdom was expedient. (The word means serving to promote a desired end.) He had been with them and had worked the work of God among them, but henceforth by His Spirit He would be in them, transforming them into God's image and likeness and through them extending God's work and will in all the world as well.

"It is the spirit that quickeneth, John 6:63, and if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His." Rom. 8:9. Only by the entrance of the Holy Spirit are men born of God, and from that new birth all who henceforth walk in the Spirit, not fulfilling the lusts of the flesh, are changed into the image of Christ from one glory to another by each successive step until we arrive at that same image. 2 Cor. 3:18. God hath both finished and manifested His first Son. That Son, Jesus Christ, is the firstborn of a vast family of sons, who are members of His body. God is now in the wonderful process of finishing and perfecting these younger sons who are members of the Christ body. The Spirit has baptized them into the body of Christ and they have all drunk of that one Holy Spirit. 1 Cor. 12:13.

More and more like Him! Repeat the blest story
Over and over again.
Changed by His Spirit from glory to glory,
I shall be satisfied then.

As diamonds are dug from the grime and filth of a mine thence to be cut and fashioned into objects of extreme value and beauty, so now does the Holy Spirit search out from among the filth and corruption of the world those who by God's grace are predestined to share His image and likeness. Man in sin is lost. He is without God and without hope. He is a stranger and an enemy. He is blind and cannot see his way; and, worst of all, he is dead in trespasses and sins. Could a cold stone by its efforts transform its lifeless self into a man, then might a man dead in trespasses and sins transform himself into a living son of God. If the dead by some effort could arise from his tomb, then might he who is dead in sins deliver himself from death's chain to walk in newness of life; but these things cannot be. It is the Spirit that quickeneth. The Holy Spirit quickens those dead in trespasses and sins by planting the life of Christ within them. Man, to enter the kingdom of God, must be born from above. The Spirit of life - the Holy Spirit - reaching down from above, touches the dead soul with the life of God. Then and then only does the creature live. All nature teaches us this vital lesson. Five distinct kingdoms are clearly visible: the mineral kingdom, the vegetable kingdom, the animal kingdom, the human kingdom, and the kingdom of God. Each of these kingdoms is fast sealed and shut up in its own realm. By no effort of its own can the mineral enter the vegetable kingdom. By no effort of its own can the plant enter the animal kingdom; and by no effort of his own can man enter the kingdom of God.

The clay that lies inert and lifeless in the garden possesses no power by which it can transform itself into a plant and enter the kingdom above it, yet how often our eyes have seen the miracle of a living seed planted in the ground, springing forth, first the blade, then the ear, and then the full corn in the ear. We have seen that seed of life from the vegetable kingdom above touching the deadness of the clay, lifting it up through its tender stem, transforming it into a living plant, a flower, a vegetable, a fruit, or an oak, depending entirely upon the kind of seed that was planted in the dead earth. We shall further affirm that it is impossible for a plant by some effort of its own to enter the animal kingdom immediately above it; yet we have seen with our eyes how both animals and men, eating that plant, do by a miracle which we call digestion lift it up into the animal kingdom and transform it into the flesh of a beast or a man. Though perhaps my thought may seem crude, am I speaking aught but truth and soberness when I say that even the flesh of beasts, eaten by man, does by the same miracle of digestion become the flesh of man? Thus does each kingdom, when touched by the life above it, leave its own realm to enter into the realm above its own. We should now plainly see how impossible it is for man by some effort of his own to enter the kingdom of God above him. How could he by any process transform himself into the likeness of God? It is impossible! Yet when the Spirit of life from God's kingdom above enters his soul, planting there that incorruptible seed of the word of God, that liveth and abideth forever, then that man is born of God. Yea, he is born into the kingdom immediately above him, which kingdom is the kingdom of God. He becomes God's child, God's son, and a full partaker of God's Spirit of life. He is born again. He is born from above.

If we have considered the matter as we ought, we will surely have noticed how all things in God's creation come from a seed whether it be of the vegetable creation, the animal creation, or whether it be the kingdom of God. An oak tree comes from an acorn, planted in the earth. Man comes from a seed, planted in the womb; and sons of God come from the incorruptible seed, planted in the heart by the Spirit of God. That is why Peter said we are born of incorruptible seed, the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever. 1 Pet. 1:23.

We speak the truth in saying that God seeks His sons from the corruption in which they are lost, without God and without hope in the world. It is the ministry of the Holy Spirit to arrest these men in their night of sin. He awakens them, brings them to repentance, gives them faith to believe God's great redemption, and then He quickens them by planting within their hearts that incorruptible seed, which liveth and abideth forever. Therefore Jesus told them, "When the Comforter is come (the Holy Spirit), He will reprove (that is, convict and convince) the world of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment." Have we not by experience found that man, convicted of his sin and thoroughly convinced of the righteousness of Christ and His power to save and deliver from death and bondage, will soon turn his heart to God in repentance and faith to receive the life that comes pouring into his soul from above?

Let us then consider the work of the Spirit in convicting men of sin. I greatly fear that in our day men are not being convinced and convicted of sin as they ought to be; and, because they are not being convicted of sin as they ought to be, they are not being delivered from the bondage of their corruption. The sad consequence inevitably follows that before long they sink back into sin again, seeing no evil in it. But the man who has seen his deplorable state in sin even as God sees him and has repented with the repentance the Spirit gives him will never again turn back, nor will he desire to do so. My lifelong observation has convinced me that men who turn back, or backslide, are men who never thoroughly repented in the first place. We make a great mistake when in our anxiety to bring men to a decision we force a sort of premature birth, an unwholesome conversion, that is followed by a life-time of sickly, immature Christianity. The world does not need religion. The world needs conviction, repentance, conversion, and life. Men need to know that they are dead in trespasses and sins and that the wrath of God abides upon them. "But," you may ask, "what is the wrath of God?" I must reply that the wrath of God is death. "The soul that sinneth, it will die" is the edict of the Lord. God's wrath against sin is manifested in the death of the sinner, a Christless death in which he abides throughout all the decades of his existence until Christ comes into his heart. It was this very truth that Jesus was making clear to us when He said, "He that hath the Son hath life, but he that hath not the Son hath not life; but the wrath of God (death) abideth on him" because he hath not life. Though such an one should live in the extreme fullness of earth's pleasures, yet he is dead white he lives (1 Tim. 5:6), a stranger to Christ, and an enemy of God.

The condition of a man outside of Christ is a condition of complete and utter helplessness, and, insofar as his ability to help himself is concerned, his condition is also one of utter hopelessness. That which is dead is both helpless and hopeless. "The dead know not anything" and are powerless to avoid the corruption that sets in as the skin worms destroy the body. Our condition as sinners outside Christ is the condition of death. To the Christians at Ephesus Paul wrote, saying, "You hath He quickened (made alive) who were dead in trespasses and sins." Eph. 2:1. And Jesus also, when speaking to the Jews who contended with Him, in like manner revealed man's condition of death when He said, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, the hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God: and they that hear shall live. For as the Father hath life in Himself, so hath He given to the Son to have life in Himself." John 5:25-26. The tenor of thought forcefully expressed throughout the whole scripture is that man in his natural state is dead. It is because of this fact and this alone that our Lord Jesus Christ Himself entered the realm of death, "because we thus judge, that if one died for all, then were all dead." 2 Cor. 5:14. What statement could be more plain or what fact more clear than that which is stated here: - because all are dead, Christ died for all! And, if Christ died for all because all were dead, then without Him and the divine life He freely bestows mankind is not only dead but helpless and hopeless as well.

As a man with his voice arouses another from sleep, so those who sleep in death shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live. Our Saviour demonstrated time and time again throughout His earthly ministry that the power to raise dead men by His word was inherent in Himself. He was, yea, rather is, both the resurrection and the life, and all who hear His voice must come forth. "Young man, arise," He said as His fingers touched the bier (Luke 7:14), and the young man arose to be returned in life to his widowed mother. "Talitha cumi; maiden, arise," was the word of power He spoke to the maiden silent in death (Mark 5:41), and at His word her heart resumed its beating, the blood its life giving flow, and all the people rejoiced at the marvelous thing they had seen. "Lazarus, come forth," He called as they rolled the stone away; and he that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with grave clothes. "Loose him and let him go," the Master spoke; and Lazarus walked in the newness and freedom of life.

"I am the resurrection!" Thus He spoke In lovely Bethany one cloudy day To weeping sisters; yet those living words Healed not their wound, nor dried their tears away.
Naught did they see but death; the chasm wide
Was deep and dark and cold. They did not know
Eternal life was standing by their side.

"I am the resurrection!" Yet they wept
Though Life Eternal looked into their eyes;
For resurrection came to visit earth
When Jesus left His home beyond the skies.
So Life walked down that day with human feet
To where death trembled in the grave's dark gloom.
Life challenged death; he dropped his keys and fled,
And with Christ-life a man came from the tomb.

"I am the resurrection!" Angels smiled
That day in spring they rolled the stone away
While humans wept. They could not yet believe That conquered death could never hold his prey.
But in that grave Life stepped from out a shroud.
Life fears no shrouds nor death's vales dark and wild.
The everlasting arms are lifting him
And tenderly as mother lifts her child.

"I am the resurrection!" Jesus walked Beneath the trees that He himself had made,
And watched a broken-hearted woman weep
Outside a tomb where all her hopes were laid.
If He could bring a dead man back to life,
If by His word death vanished from the tomb,
Could He not bring back hopes that now are dead
And resurrect lost joys from night's dark gloom?
"I am the resurrection!" Jesus spoke;
One word fell from the lips of endless
Life, One word, a name; but that was word enough
To banish all the darkness, fear, and strife.
Raised from the dead were Mary's hopes and joys.
Gone were her sorrows, gone her doubts and fears.
She understood then what we now should know —
Eternal Life is walking through the years.

He is the resurrection! And today
We walk the road with Him in life anew.
The resurrection life He gave to them
Is life that now He wants to give to you.
He is that life\ He gives it freely when We bid him enter, nevermore to part.
You find it not beyond the starry skies;
You have it when you have Him in your heart.

Charles S. Price

Man has no life in himself. He is dead in trespasses and sins. But, as the Father hath life in Himself, so hath He given to the Son to have life in Himself. John 5:26. When, therefore the soul that is dead in trespasses and sins hears the voice of the Son of God, he awakens to an entirely new life as Jesus said. "I give unto them eternal life." We are mistaken in our thinking when we conclude that eternal life is called eternal merely to signify duration. Eternal life does not speak of duration but of the kind and quality of life that Jesus gives. We already have physical life, and those who possess nothing more are dead while they live. Eternal life is not the life of this world, but the life of the ages, for that is what the Greek word aionian means. Christ gives the believer His life, and His life is the life of the ages. It is the life that will fill all things forever. It is the life of God, and, because it is His life, it is as timeless and endless as Himself. Endurance, however, is only one of the qualities of the life that Jesus gives. "This is life eternal, that they might know Thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom Thou hast sent." John 17:3. Since the Saviour said, "I am the life," then we should be able to see that life in all its fullness is what He is in all His fullness. The life He gives is a different quality of life. That which man calls life God calls death. He sees us with this mist, this vapor we think is life, as dead men burying our dead, but the life He gives to those who believe is His own life, and that life is Christ Himself. "I give unto them eternal life, and they shall never perish," was the promise He made. It is certain they cannot perish. His life is imperishable because He is imperishable and He is life. "I give unto them aionian life," Jesus said, and aionian life is the life of the ages. Eternal life is not an extension of this present life. Christ is eternal life. The life, which He is, is the life He now gives to those who believe. That life is imperishable because He is imperishable. We are in error when we say, "Jesus died that I might live." The real truth is that Jesus died that He might give His life to us. He is the corn of wheat that fell into the ground and died, and, as a result of that death, His life now reappears in the millions of those who believe.

We are inclined to lightly pass over many profound statements of Holy Scripture. There is "a time to be born," the wise man said. Eccles. 3:2. Jesus in His unfolding of the mysteries of God made this remarkable declaration: "All that the Father hath given to Me shall come to Me, and him that cometh to Me I will in no wise cast out." John 6:37. He also said with equal force, "No man can come to Me, except the Father which hath sent Me draw him: and I will raise him up at the last day." John 6:44. These two definite assertions are contrary, if not completely opposite, to the negative preaching of modern evangelists, but let God be true though every man be a liar. No man comes to Christ until the Father draws him. Organize all the revival meetings you wish. Preach your heart out; persuade, exhort, cajole, warn, rebuke, and threaten, but they still will not come except and until the Father draws them. You may by persuasion gain a proselyte or a mere professor, but only the Spirit of God can make a believer. It is the Lord who adds daily to the church such as should be saved; it is not man. Acts 2:47. There is a time to be born in the Spirit just as there is a time to be born in the natural. Men come to spiritual birth when they hear the voice of the Son of God speaking to the innermost depths of their spirit; then they that hear and believe live. No man comes except the Father draws him, but all that the Father hath given to Jesus Christ will come to Him. John 6:37. Our believing on Jesus Christ is the beginning of the resurrection. Our faith in Him is actually the first step in the order of a resurrection which, when completed, will include our spirit, our soul, and even our bodies in perfection, incorruption, and immortality. First the spirit is quickened and made alive by the life of Christ. Then the mind is renewed as we become possessors of the mind of Christ. God does not put His thoughts into our minds; He gives us the mind of Christ. Finally, the body is renewed as it is written, "This corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. (The victory here mentioned is the life of Christ.) O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory." 1 Cor. 15:53-55.

As the resurrection of the dead from the grave proceeds, "every man in his own order" (band or group), 1 Cor. 15:23, so likewise the quickening of the spirits of men walking the earth, dead in trespasses and sins, comes "every man in his own order" Every man comes to Christ in his proper time — when the Holy Spirit calls him. This Jesus plainly taught when He said, "All that the Father hath given Me shall come to Me," John 6:37, and "No man can come to Me, except the Father which hath sent Me draw him: and I will raise him up at the last day." John 6:44.

If we can lay aside the tradition of the evangelists, theologians, and sects and listen instead to the word of God, we will clearly see that it is only when Christ calls men by His Spirit that they come in repentance to God. Did Jesus Christ consult Saul of Tarsus as to whether or not he wanted to become a Christian? Did He plead with that rebellious, persecuting tyrant to change his ways and to follow Him? No! He did not! He told him in the plainest and simplest manner possible that he was a vessel chosen of God and that he was to bear the name of Christ before Jews, Gentiles, and Israelites, that he must stand before kings to testify in Christ's name, and that in doing so he would suffer great persecutions and hardships. Paul had nothing to do but obey. No wonder this murderous Christ-hater was able to say with power and assurance, "Every man in his own order." If you will search a bit, you will not look far before you find many men who were similarly called against their will and told by the Spirit of God what they must do, though at first they had no intention of doing any such things. Moses was certainly among those unwilling ones, as was also Jeremiah and many others, both in scripture record and in history as well. When the Spirit of God speaks, dead men, though bound hand and foot with grave clothes, come forth from the darkness and hopelessness of death's deep sleep to be loosed and let go, to live and to sit together in heavenly places with Christ Jesus our Lord.

When the hour comes for men to be called to Christ, the first work of the Spirit is to convict them of sin. "When He the Spirit of truth is come, He will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment." With eloquent words the poet sang:

I know not how the Spirit moves,
Convincing men of sin;
Nor how, unworthy, Christ in love Redeemed me for His own.
But I know whom I have believed,
And am persuaded that He is able To keep that which I've committed Unto Him against that day.

Our hearts respond with reverence and a fervent amen to such truth as this. I frankly confess that after almost half a century of walking with God, I still cannot explain the miracle of conviction of sin, nor do I fully understand that heavenly wonder, the miracle of the new birth. My ignorance is yet more manifest as I behold with bewildered admiration the miracle of those things we speak of as being natural, which occur momentarily all about us. "Knowest thou how the bones do grow in the womb of her that is with child?" the Spirit questions. Eccles. 11:5. To this, with bowed head and wondering heart, I confess, "My Lord, I know not!" If we understand not the miracle of a leaf falling from a tree in autumn, how shall our little minds explain the miracle of the bones that grow in the womb of her that is with child? How much less are we able to explain the wonder of the Spirit moving in grace and power over the lifelessness of the soul of one dead in trespasses and sins, awakening the spirit with conviction of sin and granting repentance unto life eternal through Jesus Christ, our wonderful Lord! Jesus spoke of something more than a far off resurrection day when He said, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, the hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live." John 5:25. No one was more certain of a great and final resurrection than was the Christ, who said, "I am the resurrection," and no one understood as well as He that there is a resurrection which now is, taking place in the spirits of those who, believing, receive life through His name. As the breeze, moving gently in the tree-tops, bears in its breath the mystery of God, so is everyone who is born of the Spirit.

It is the Holy Spirit who convicts the heart of sin, rousing and awakening him to repentance and salvation. The method by which the Spirit convicts men of sin is shown here to be threefold. He will reprove or convince the world of sin, of righteousness and of judgment: "Of sin because they believe not on Me; of righteousness because I go to the Father; of judgment because the prince of this world is judged." John 16:8-11. The great damning sin upon which the Spirit fastens His work of conviction is the sin of unbelief. "Of sin because they believe not" is the word of the Lord! Unbelief is the one great damning sin. Sin and unrighteousness of any and every kind remain to darken the soul and hold it in the vice-like grip of death wherever unbelief is found, but sins of years are washed away and blackest stains become as snow when men believe on Christ, for the Holy Ghost has said, "The blood of Jesus Christ, God's Son, cleanseth us from all sin." 1 John 1:7. If there is no belief in the blood of Christ, no spirit of repentance toward God, no faith toward Jesus Christ, then nothing is cleansed and the soul dead in trespasses and sins remains in his death and the wrath of God abides upon him — because he has not believed. We have already shown that the wrath of God is death, and, since the unbeliever is already dead in sins, thus the wrath abides upon him while he remains in his unbelief. John 3:36. When Jesus with three of His disciples descended from the mount of transfiguration, a scene of pitiful confusion met His eyes. A lunatic boy, violently possessed of a demon, had been brought to His disciples, but they could not deliver him. So they brought him to Jesus. "And when He saw him, straightway the spirit tare him; and he fell on the ground, and wallowed foaming. And He asked his father, How long is it ago since this came unto him? And he said, Of a child. And oft times it hath cast him into the fire, and into the waters, to destroy him: but if Thou canst do anything, have compassion on us, and help us. Jesus said unto him, If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth. And straightway the father of the child cried out, and said with tears, Lord, I believe: help Thou mine unbelief." Mark 9:20-24. The question we ask must not be, "If Thou canst help us," for with God all things are possible. The question of eternal importance is this: "If thou canst believe."

"Lord, now, indeed, I find Thy power and Thine alone Can change the leopard's spots, and melt the heart of stone."

The question is not, "Can Christ save me?" The question is, "Do you believe that God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life?" The question is not, "Can God forgive and save a murderer, an adulterer, a thief, or any other?" The question is, "Do I believe that the blood of Jesus Christ, God's Son, cleanseth from all sin?" He who believes that the blood of Jesus Christ cleanses him will in one moment make a wonderful discovery — that, though his sins were as scarlet, they are now as white as snow, and, though they were red like crimson, now they are as wool. Isa. 1:18.

Conviction of sin, seizing upon the sinful heart, will cause the penitent spirit to cry from its unsearchable depths,

"Lord Jesus, I long to be perfectly whole.
 I want Thee forever to dwell in my soul.
 Break down every idol; cast out every foe.
 Now wash me and I shall be whiter than snow.
 Lord Jesus, for this I most humbly entreat.
 I wait, blessed Lord, at Thy crucified feet.
 By faith for my cleansing I see Thy blood flow;
 Now wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow."

"Faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the word of God." Rom. 10:17. Simply stated the meaning is this: Faith cometh by hearing the word of God. "The entrance of Thy word giveth light." It is when the Spirit whispers the promise of God into the sinner's heart that faith, born of the Holy Ghost, reaches up to grasp and lay hold on the truth and bring salvation and the life of Christ to the believing heart. How often during my life I have knelt by the side of repentant sinners only to find that, though they had confessed their sins to God, they still did not have the witness of the Spirit that the blood of Christ had cleansed their sins away. Oh such occasions I always opened the Bible at that bright promise in 1 John 1:9 to let them read for themselves God's wonderful assurance that "if we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." And I think I can say to the glory of God that I know of neither man nor woman who, seeing the simplicity of that straightforward promise, was unable to believe to the salvation of his soul.

He will reprove - i.e. convict and convince - the world of sin. Conviction of sin must be recognized as the first and initial work of the Holy Spirit in the unbeliever. If there is no true conviction of sin in the heart and conscience of the sinner, then there is no true conversion. Men must be convicted of the fact of sin, the fault of their sin, the folly of their sin, and the filth of sin. The fact of sin is that we have transgressed the commandment of the Lord. The fault of sin is that we have despised God's word, God's law, and God's Christ and have done ill worthy of death by our transgression. The folly of sin is that, while we continue in it, we are acting against our own reason and against the word of the Lord as revealed by His holy law, against the conviction of our own conscience and the reproof of the Holy Spirit, and in so doing are treading beneath our feet the blood of the Lord Jesus Christ, which was shed for the remission of our sins. The apostle spoke a fiery and dreadful truth when he exclaimed, "He that despised Moses law died without mercy under two or three witnesses: Of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden underfoot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit of Grace" Heb. 10:28-29. The words of the evangelist could not have been far wrong when he cried with eloquence, "Oh dying but immortal men, ye blood-bought hearers of the word, better for thee that Calvary had not borne its burden and that the lips of Christ had not been opened in invitation if, rejecting all, thou goest into eternal desolation, thy hands and thy feet be dabbled with the blood of the Son of God!"

The folly of remaining in sin could be attested to by ten thousand reasons, for "what shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" The filth of our sin can only be fully seen as we behold the inherent purity and glory of God. I dare not deviate from my subject now to endeavor to portray the holiness and the glory of God, but let us at least call to remembrance how, on those occasions recorded in which the Lord revealed His holiness to men, those men, though themselves among the holiest on earth, shrank always to hide themselves in dust and ashes from the blinding light of that holiness which He is. No greater man ever lifted his prophetical voice to unfold eternal mysteries than the prophet Isaiah, yet the inglorious vileness he felt as he saw himself in the revealing light which God is, is recorded for us in these inspired words: "In the year that king Uzziah died, I saw also the Lord, sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and His train filled the temple. Above it stood the seraphims: each one had six wings; with twain he covered his face, and with twain he covered his feet, and with twain he did fly. And one cried unto another, and said, Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts: the whole earth is full of His glory. And the posts of the door moved at the voice of him that cried, and the house was filled with smoke. Then said I, Woe is me! For I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a. people of unclean lips: for mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts. Then flew one of the seraphims unto me, having a live coal in his hand, which he had taken with the tongs from off the altar: and he laid it upon my mouth, and said, Lo, this hath touched thy lips; and thine iniquity is taken away, and thy sin purged." Isa. 6:1-7.

The reason sinners today are not aware of the filth of their sin is because preachers have lost sight of the glory and holiness of God. "A wonderful and horrible thing is committed in the land; the prophets prophesy falsely and the priests bear rule by their means; and My people love to have it so..." "For among My people are found wicked men; they lay wait, as he that setteth snares; they set a trap, they catch men. As a cage is full of birds, so are their houses full of deceit: therefore they are become great, and waxen rich." These words, quoted from the fifth chapter of Jeremiah, I say with extreme regret, picture with vivid inspiration the dreadful condition of preachers and priests in our day. They prophesy falsely and the people love to have it so. But what will they do in the end thereof? Because the preachers have lost sight of the glory of God and have given themselves to numbering their congregations, while compassing land and sea to make new proselytes, therefore the people, Christian and unconverted alike, have lost their sense and realization of the dreadful filth of their sin. It is true that some occasionally speak of the holiness of God, but they seldom seem to have any true conviction of it and seldom do they live the thing they preach. Therefore their sermons are clouds without water and empty words preached from empty hearts.

No man will ever convince men of the filth of sin while he consents to believe that Christ was a hippy, bumming idly about the country as a rebellious, long-haired mendicant, intent on stirring up trouble. I am amazed beyond belief that an almost countless number of professed spiritual leaders have gone aimlessly along with such imbecilic absurdity, and, not content with this, have even allowed themselves to be instructed by this unclean rabble, who are intent on fulfilling every lust of the flesh, repenting of nothing, but gratifying every unclean and hurtful inclination. Christ, so far from being a hippy, was holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, and made higher than the heavens. Heb. 7:26. Let us both see and partake of the holiness of God; then shall our presence be a rebuke to those who live in ungodliness. The blood of Jesus Christ cleanses from all sin, and where will that cleansing be more manifest than in the purity of heart and life and conduct of those who believe? If the cleansing within fails to be manifested in the cleansing of the outward life, who can believe that Christ is in them at all?

The folly of sin is the more accentuated in the light of the indisputable fact that there is a fearful penalty for sin. Among the very first instructions given to man was God's faithful and immutable warning of the dire and inevitable result that would follow if he partook of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. "Thou shall not eat of it, for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shall surely die." And, when man in disobedience stretched oil his inquisitive hand to partake of that which God has forbidden, the life of God departed from him and he stood naked, ashamed, and dead in Trespasses and sins. This, O reader, is the first death, and this first death passed upon all men for that all have sinned. This whole existence, which we now erroneously call life, is, in fact, death from the cradle to the grave, and all men and women outside of Jesus Christ are dead. "You hath He quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins," said Paul, speaking to men whose spirits had been made alive through faith in Christ, Eph. 2:1, and, speaking to believers who had received the life of God in their souls, he spoke of the yet unregenerate body, saying, "If Christ be in you, the body is dead, because of sin; but the Spirit is life because of righteousness." Rom. 8:10. Thus we should clearly see that all of this existence, which we now erroneously call life, is, in fact, death from the cradle to the grave, and all men and women outside of Jesus Christ are dead. "You hath He quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins," said Paul, speaking to men whose spirits had been made alive through faith in Christ, Eph. 2:1, and, speaking to believers who had received the life of God in their souls, he spoke of the yet unregenerate body, saying, "If Christ be in you, the body is dead, because of sin; but the Spirit is life because of righteousness." Rom. 8:10. The Spirit has faithfully told us of a second death into which unbelieving men shall surely go. That second death will be a period of time similar to this first death we are now experiencing, but much more terrible and severe than anything we now know - so much so that it is described in Rev. 21:8 as a lake of fire. Its only inhabitants will be the sorcerers, whoremongers, murderers, idolaters, the fearful and unbelieving, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie. The penalty of sin is very great. Not only in this present age does it curse us, but in that second death which is to come. It can only be described as the "lake of fire."

It is the work of the Holy Spirit, yea, the Spirit of holiness, to reprove the world of sin and of righteousness and of judgment, but woe, woe to the inhabitants of the earth, for the believers are lukewarm! They are neither cold nor hot. They manifest neither the holiness nor the love of God. Their lives, lukewarm and nauseating, have become mingled with the world and all its ways. As Belshazzar in the dissipation of his licentious orgy mingled the vessels of the Lord with the debauchery that delighted his ungodly heart, so these men, saved and unsaved alike, mingle together, speaking in tongues, worshipping Mary, celebrating mass, converting the world, preaching that God is holy and Christ is a hippy, dancing on the altars, using pop for communion, while delighting in feasts, breakfasts, and dinners. Well did Jude describe this generation in these fearful words: "These are spots in your feasts of charity, when they feast with you, feeding themselves without fear: clouds they are without water, carried about of winds; trees whose fruit withereth, without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots; raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame; wandering stars, to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness forever." Jude 12-13. O corrupt and filthy Sodom of the twentieth century, your degenerate heart does not know that the things in which you delight will bring the wrath of God upon you! Neither do you remember the words of our Lord, who said, "As the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." Matt. 24:37.

He will reprove the world of sin and of righteousness and of judgment. There is no surer way to reprove the world of sin than by a faithful demonstration of the righteousness of Jesus Christ. God the Father, the highest authority in all the universe, has now declared to angels, principalities, and men that the righteousness of His Son is sufficient to make all the world righteous, and that we, too, shall be made the righteousness of God in Him. Give audience and hear with reverence the truth He would have us believe: "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God; being justified freely by His grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus: whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation (reconciliation and satisfaction) through faith in His blood, to declare His righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God; to declare, I say, at this time His righteousness: that He might be just, and the justifier of Him which believeth in Jesus." Rom. 23-26.

So complete was the righteousness of Christ that, when men by wicked hands killed Him, God raised Him from the dead, and, being raised from the dead, He ascended to the right hand of God's throne. There Stephen in spirit beheld Him when he cried, "I see the heavens opened, and the Son of man standing on the right hand of God!" Acts 7:55. Nothing so completely manifests the righteousness of Christ and the acceptance by the Father of His sacrifice and death as does His resurrection from the dead and His ascension to heaven. Therefore, Jesus said that when He, the Spirit of truth, was come, He would reprove the world of righteousness "because I go to the Father."

It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing.

REPENTANCE TOWARD GOD AND FAITH TOWARD JESUS CHRIST
As we journey through the wilderness of this world, ever climbing the pathway upward and onward, it has pleased our omniscient Father in heaven that from time to time the ascending pathway of our pilgrimage should seem less steep and rugged as our spirits break upon those broader planes of higher ground. Our kind heavenly Father is well pleased when He can call a brief halt in our toilsome journey and say, "Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place and rest awhile." Mark 6:31. Perhaps it is in the shade of Elim's three score and ten palm trees and the cool delight of her twelve sparkling wells of water, Ex. 15:27, or perhaps we stand before some burning bush to contemplate the past and consider the future, or eat a meal from an angel's hand because the journey has been great and the way exceedingly hard. 1 Kings 18:5-7.

To these new heights of experience and new realms of glory every saint of God will come if we fervently "follow on to know the Lord." But it is lamentably true that the vast majority of men and women who begin the pilgrimage to the distant peaks of spiritual attainment soon grow footsore and weary of the way as Israel did and in their hearts turn back again into Egypt, or at best find some cozy level of Christian experience or embrace some pet doctrine where they can talk and bask in fond remembrance of the good old days and sing, "The old time religion is good enough for me." Moses said to the children of Israel, "A prophet shall the Lord God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; Him shall ye hear." Acts 7:37. But the fathers would not hear him; neither would they obey him, but "thrust him from them, and in their hearts turned back again into Egypt." Verse 39. And so it came to pass that the Lord, having saved the people out of the land of Egypt, afterward destroyed them that believed not. Jude 5.

Those who are always mourning for Christian fellowship, who imagine they cannot live for God without many others to buoy them up, should bear in mind that there are more tares in the field than wheat. There are more goats in the pasture than sheep, and much more ground is yielding nothing than that which yields one hundredfold. There are more false prophets than true prophets, and there are many false christs to steal away your love, but only one Christ who is the Son of God. I must confess that I grow very weary of being reminded that Paul once said to persecuted Hebrew saints who stood in continual fear of death and martyrdom, "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together, as the manner of some is..." Why is it that those who are forever harping on this string have never read nor considered that this same Paul, when writing to the Corinthians, who were not persecuted, but full of divisions and sectarianism, continually affirming, "I am of Paul, I am of Apollos, I am of Cephas, I am of Christ," told them in no uncertain voice that, because of the division among them and the sectarian spirit they displayed, they were assembling together, not for the better, but for the worse." 1 Cor. 11:7. Tell me, you whose Christianity is founded on the formality of assembling, what good is it to assemble yourselves when your coming together is not for the better, but for the worse! Would it not be much better for you to walk with Christ and fellowship with Him, remembering that He told you, "Where two or three are gathered together in My name, there am I in the midst of them?" Matt. 18:20. It is better far to read and pray with your wife in the breakfast nook or commune with your friends in the parlor with Christ's presence about you than to assemble with ten thousand people where disunity and division exist. All who thus assemble partake of the spirit of division and "come together, not for the better, but for the worse." 1 Cor. 11:17-18.

"I know," said one, "that modernism is creeping in, but what denomination is it where it is not?" In this you speak the truth, my friend, for there is no denomination, which is not honeycombed with division and modernism; neither is there any denomination in all the world that has an open door to the revelation of God. If you will be perfectly honest with yourself before God, you will agree that denominations once formed never advance in spiritual growth or spiritual understanding.

From time immemorial their trend has always been backward and downward to deadness and emptiness. Indeed, they do grow in numbers, but what value is it to compass land and sea to make a proselyte if we discover in the end that he is twofold more the child of hell than he was in the beginning? Matt. 23:15.

Religious denominations are the false christs of which Jesus spoke in Matt. 24:24. Do you not know that men trust in sects and denominations for their salvation and often times they cannot imagine themselves Christians at all unless they are joined to one of them? Why do men search here and there for the false christs of which Jesus said there would be many? Are they not everywhere about us? Do not their high places adorn many streets? Do they not inscribe your name on their roll and claim you as their property, acting as though they were your mediator and pathway to heaven? Of course the truth hurts us and men, as always, hate to hear it.
Yesterday a minister sat in our parlor with whom we spoke freely of the ways of God. Before he left, he apologetically informed us that he was a member of a certain denomination, but he said with noticeable chagrin, "You almost have to belong to a denomination to be properly recognized by the government, to get income tax deductions, to perform marriages, and to obtain half fare on trains and buses." How interesting that is! Is there really something very special in the word incorporated, which is so proudly displayed on the official documents of every sect in the land? Have you ever considered that the word incorporated you so proudly display on your letterhead signifies that the system you think to be the church is in fact incorporated with the world system? Could Christ be a part of a thing like that since He openly declared, "I am not of this world"?
Was He not saying, "I am not of this world system"? But you proudly display the fact that both you and your sect are openly incorporated with it when you should be as your Master who said, "I am not of this world." You should not partake of its systems or in any way fall under its dominion. The true church is no more a part of this world system than Christ is a part of it. Well did He say to those about Him, "Ye are from beneath; I am from above. Ye are of this world; I am not of this world." John 8:23. Let all who long for sonship, all who would be peculiarly His, turn from all these vanities that men have devised. Let us break our connections with all that is from beneath and let us walk with Christ as pilgrims who have no continuing city in this world but who seek one to come, whose builder and maker is God. Heb. 13:13-14.

Let the heart of every faithful pilgrim be assured of this: Though the world is full of religious sects and denominations of every kind which blind men to truth and obscure that holy virgin thing which Christ called "My church", yet His church is in the earth, untouched, unsullied, and undefiled, a pure virgin church to be presented to Him without spot and without blemish. Eph. 5:27. That church is not and never was a denomination, nor is it a sect of any kind. Its members have shown repentance toward God and faith toward His Son. Their souls are washed in the blood of Christ. In one Spirit, even the Holy Spirit, they have been baptized into one body and that one body is the body of Christ. Eph. 4:4-6. His church is as pure a virgin as Christ Himself. As Christ was born of a virgin undefiled and untouchable by the powers of human organization or procreation, so also is the virgin church. His church is not incorporated with the world system. It cannot possibly be. The names of its members are written only in heaven, even in the Lamb's book of life, founded long before the foundation of the world. The moment a man repents of his sin and believes on Christ for the salvation of his soul, he becomes a member of the true church, the tabernacle which God pitched and not man, the church, the house not made with hands, which is His body; but the moment a child of God allies himself with one of earth's harlot systems, he begins to lose sight of the true and heavenly tabernacle which God pitched, his eyes beholding the false church pitched by man. No longer does he remain a chaste virgin for Christ, walking in the purity and light of his heavenly citizenship, but, having hearkened to the charming voice of one of Babylon's harlot daughters, he embraces another bosom that will rob him of his first love, wither his experience, close his spiritual eyes, and make him a citizen of Babylon instead of a citizen of heaven.

It was of this harlot church woman that Solomon wrote this mysterious prophetic parable: "For at the window of my house I looked through my casement, and beheld among the simple ones; I discerned among the youths, a young man void of understanding, passing through the street near her corner; and he went the way to her house, in the twilight, and in the evening, in the black and dark night. And, behold, there met him a woman with the attire of an harlot, and subtil of heart. (She is loud and stubborn; her feet abide not in her house: Now she is without, now in the streets, and lieth in wait at every corner.) So she caught him, and kissed him, and with an impudent face said unto him, I have peace offerings with me; this day have I paid my vows. Therefore came I forth to meet thee, diligently to seek thy face, and I have found thee. I have decked my bed with coverings of tapestry, with carved works, with fine linen of Egypt (the world). I have perfumed my bed with myrrh, aloes, and cinnamon. Come, let us take our fill of love until the morning: let us solace ourselves with loves. For the good man (Christ) is not at home; he is gone on a long journey: He hath taken a bag of money with him, and will come home at the day appointed. With her much fair speech she caused him to yield, with the flattering of her lips she forced him. He goeth after her straightway, as an ox goeth to the slaughter, or as a fool to the correction of the stocks; till a dart strike through his liver; as a bird hasteth to the snare, and knoweth not that it is for his life." Prov. 7:6-23. How could divine inspiration give a bitter portrait of those harlot, denominational systems who coax the young converts to their steeple houses with glowing promises of food, fun, fellowship

and opportunity but who in reality displace the love and the purpose of God with a false love, a false purpose, a false system, and a false Christ?

Woe to us that we live in a day when man and his systems of religion are everywhere exalted. Have you ever noticed how the faces of the world renowned and internationally known preachers smile out condescendingly from page after page of their magazines, while articles and testimonials and pictures exalt their prowess as preachers, healers, and miracle workers and proclaim their great revival meetings, their radio and TV ministry, their missionary work, and their programs for the poor? Everywhere we go we hear men talking of this great ministry and that great ministry, lifting up to public gaze this renowned man and that remarkable sister, but I hear very few saints talking one to another of how wonderful is Christ, the Son of God, who said, "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto Me." John 12:32. Somewhere along the line they have lost Him in the crowd, and like Joseph and Mary they have gone on without Him, but, if they would retrace their steps, they would find Him sitting among the devout, answering questions and attending to His Father’s business.

We live in a day when men without any true commission from God are compassing land and sea to make proselytes, not for Christ, but for themselves. Christ is used as a sort of allurement, a bait, to gain their ends. They could be likened to the seven women taking hold of one man saying, "We will eat our own bread and wear our own apparel; only let us be called by thy name to take away our reproach." Isa. 4:1. Men who compass land and sea to make disciples seem to have the uncanny ability to make disciples for themselves rather than for Christ. It is very easy to see that in our day almost all men are devout followers of some human leader of whose ministry and talents they speak with awe and reverence. Ah, fools and slow of heart, should we not turn from these vanities and follow Christ, who said, "He that followeth Me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life"?

The greatest need of the hour in which we live is not a world wide revival. It is not that we should have great power as the apostles or Elijah or Moses. We do not need more preachers or missionaries, radio programs or literature; and as for money, may the thought forever perish that God’s program should live or die or in any way depend upon the corrupt foundation of the mammon of unrighteousness. Those deluded men who with one breath proclaim their labors to be a work of faith and their ministry to be a ministry of faith but with the next breath have the audacity to warn you that, unless you come through with your dimes and dollars and tithes and offerings, their work will suffer, are deceivers both of the people who heed them and of themselves as well. Let Christians learn to call a horse a horse and a spade a spade. If my work depends on begging, then let me beg and call myself a beggar and not a man of faith. But, if my work is of faith, then let God, who possesses the silver and gold and the cattle of a thousand hills, open the riches of His storehouse that all the work of which He is the author may grow and prosper in whatsoever manner He pleases.

The great need of the hour is neither revival nor power nor program nor miracles nor money. The great need of the hour is that men and women should get down to the serious business of loving God in spirit and in truth. "Ah," you say, "but I do love God. I am saved. I pray. I read the Bible. I tithe. I belong to a church." Do not be so quick to justify yourself, my brother. The time has come for every man to examine himself, whether he be in the faith. 1 Cor. 13:5. We can perform all these tasks regularly and faithfully and still be no nearer to the heart of Christ than was the Pharisee who stood and prayed with himself, saying, "God, I thank Thee that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican. I fast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess." Luke 18:11-12. Oh, how sickening is all our corroding self-righteousness! How soothing and deceptive is this everlasting church-going and this constant assembling as though God is delighted or satisfied with such a thing as that!

Well did Isaiah prophesy of this lukewarm, apathetic and indifferent age, saying, "Hear, O heavens, and give ear, O earth: for the Lord hath spoken. I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against Me. The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib: but Israel doth not know, My people doth not consider. Ah sinful nation, a people laden with iniquity, a seed of evildoers, children that are corrupters: they have forsaken the Lord, they have provoked the Holy One of Israel unto anger, they are gone away backward. Why should ye be stricken any more? Ye will revolt more and more: The whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint. From the sole of the foot even unto the head there is no soundness in it; but wounds, and bruises, and putrefying sores: They have not been closed, neither bound up, neither mollified with ointment."
Isa. 1:2-6. "Except the Lord of hosts had left us a very small remnant, we should have been as Sodom, and we should have been like unto Gomorrah." Verse 9. "To what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices unto Me, saith the Lord? I am full of the burnt-offering of rams, and the fat of fed beasts; and I delight not in the blood of bullocks, or of lambs, or of he goats. When ye come to appear before Me (continual assemblings), who hath required this at your hand, to tread My courts? Bring no more vain oblations; incense is an abomination unto Me; the new moons and sabbaths, the calling of assemblies (conventions, conferences,revivals). I cannot away with; it is iniquity, even the solemn meeting." Verses 9-13. Please note this last statement: "even the solemn meeting!" "And when ye spread forth your hands, I will hide mine eyes from you:" (How often we hear the people exhorted to raise their hands and praise God, and how dead it usually is! But why does God hide His eyes in our midst?) "Yea, when you make many prayers, I will not hear: your hands are full of blood." Verse 15. In other words we are guilty of rebellion, self-love, hypocrisy, self-seeking, love of pleasure more than love of God, possessing all manner of forms of worship but denying the power of God and the wisdom of God. Christians have become lovers of the world and all the things that are in it - the lust of the flesh (appetites), the lust of the eyes (avarice), and the pride of life (ambition).

The prophet then follows his fearful rebuke against Israel for their filth, their pride, their assemblings, their prayers, and the lifting up of their hands to praise the Lord with a call to bitter and heartfelt repentance for their hypocritical profession. "Wash you, make you clean," he cries. "Put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes: cease to do evil; learn to do well; seek judgment, relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, plead for the widow. Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord: Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool." Isa. 1:16-18.

There is a great and ever increasing need of repentance among Christians and all who name the name of Christ. there is a desperate need of true repentance for sin and a wholehearted turning to God. Our lukewarm forms, ceremonies, and assemblings demand Godly sorrow, for "godly sorrow worketh repentance unto salvation not to be repented of, but the sorrow of the world worketh death." 2 Cor. 7:10. Too many Christians, I fear, have repented of the repentance and consecration they once so fervently made, but true repentance is not to be repented of. Thousands of Christians there are today who once repented of sin, receiving the joy and life of Christ. They abandoned the world and all that is therein and with the dew of rejoicing as pearls upon their cheeks they pressed hard on the upward way, but, as time went by, like Lot's wife they turned to look back at things they had left behind. As their love for God waxed cold, they found reasonable though feeble excuses to drag some things they once destroyed back into their lives. Once they had renounced the world and all its vain show, its pride, its vanity, its pleasure. They had stripped for the race and fervently sung, "I won't turn back! I won't turn back!" But now, alas, the love of many has grown cold, and families are building again the things they once destroyed. Forgetting the fearful warning of Paul, "If I build again the thing which I destroyed, I make myself a transgressor," Gal. 2:18, they begin to drag back into their lives the things they once threw out, building again the thing they once destroyed.

Thousands of Christians who once bade farewell to earth's vanity are today attending picture shows and dances and embracing many evil things, all the while deceiving themselves that they love God, but in truth and fact they have repented of their repentance. The picture show that was once an abomination to them they now watch hourly, daily, and nightly in their living-room. They rush home from church where a few minutes before they paid their tithes and offerings and lifted up their hands in pretended praise to God, fill their dinner plates, and perhaps without thanksgiving for their food they assemble around the television to feed their souls on the lowest form of corruption the carnal mind can produce. Can Christians such as these honestly expect to be among the sonship company, who will rule and reign with Christ in the glory of His kingdom? I tell you, nay. This can never be! The wisdom of God has clearly shown that all who will reign with Him in His kingdom must be first absorbed in His will and filled with His mind. How can he be filled with the mind of Christ who permits his soul to be fed corruption? Hath not God Himself declared, "The mouths of fools feed on foolishness"? What then is this tragedy that has overtaken God's people? There can be but one answer: They have repented of their repentance. Their once godly sorrow has been replaced by the sorrow of the world that worketh death. It encompasses men with such darkness that they willingly believe a lie, believing that evil can in some way be good and that good can in some way be evil.

"Wash you; make you clean; put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes. Cease to do evil; learn to do well." Was there not a man in Israel, Achan by name, who hid a beautiful Babylonish garment in his tent?
Surely there could be no wrong in keeping such a pretty garment! Yet for his vacillating both he and all his house by God's command were destroyed. Was there not a man in Israel who indulged in the innocent pastime of gathering up sticks on the Sabbath day, who was ordered slain for his disobedience? Num. 15:32-36.

I do not expect that men will love me for uttering the truth about these things. I care not a straw for that. I seek neither the love nor the admiration of any man, but earnestly covet that you may prove to be the love slave of Christ, who through His great love and mercy once delivered you from all these corrupting vanities. He washed you in His blood and placed in your heart that first love which burned as a bright light set on a hill for other men to see. But God has somewhat against you now, for you have left your first love and built again the things you once destroyed, making yourself a transgressor. Your heart should repent with a godly sorrow and with a repentance not to be repented of. If I build again the things, which I destroyed, I make myself a transgressor, and what is sin if it be not transgression?

All over the world today Christians are mourning their lack of power and influence. My brother, do you dare to imagine that you can influence a man while you stand on the same ground as he? Is it not a spiritual fact that the "husbandman that laboreth must be first partaker of the fruit"? Must we not live above men if we hope to lift and save them? There is a very simple yet solemn reason why healings and miracles have all but fled from our midst, and the world has lost all faith in Christ and the church system. How can any man who lives in the flesh ever hope to heal a body of flesh? For of whatsoever a man is overcome of the same is he brought into bondage. Can we expect a man to cast out demons while he daily allows demon possessed men and women to be his entertainers? Did not our Lord cast out unclean spirits? Could He have done so if He Himself had been unclean? Should it be difficult to observe that all uncleanness in man springs forth from spirits of uncleanness? Christ cast out spirits of violence, spirits of infirmity, and spirits of insanity, but this He could not have done had He been violent, infirm, or insane. Violence, then, is motivated by violent spirits. Every time you watch a shooting, a murder, a bludgeoning, or a rape, you are watching acts motivated by violent spirits and your mind is being influenced by them. Whenever you watch adultery or the filth of sodomy, you are being influenced by unclean and filthy spirits, just as smokers and drinkers are influenced by advertising, and then we wonder whatever has happened to our young people! Have we drifted so far into darkness that our minds are bereft of reason? It is time to repent! It is time to return to God! It is time to abandon every evil thing that we may love Christ with an undivided and unhindered love.

I do not pretend to have jurisdiction over the faith of any man, but before God, who requires me to be faithful, I exhort all Christians to discard their televisions as the Ephesians discarded their piles of books worth fifty thousand pieces of silver. Acts 19:19. These ghostly one-eyed demons are without doubt the greatest moral corrupters the world has ever known. If you do not believe this to be so, then ask yourself this question: What is it that has caused such unheard of moral degeneracy, such looseness and permissiveness, such rebellion, such disobedience, such defiance, such violence, such irresponsibility, such disrespect for law, such disregard for everything that is holy and good until the thoughts and intents of society are only evil continually? You will find that from this source more than all others combined comes the forceful answer to your problem.

I quote now from an article, which appeared in the North Battleford News-Optimist on Feb. 25th, 1974. "Juvenile crime and brutality are mounting rapidly in the western world. Canadian parents do not realize the gravity of this social sickness. Nor are they aware that one of the principal germ carriers may be right in their living rooms - the TV set." So says C. E. Edwards of Bridgetown, N.S., Deputy President of the Canadian Home and School and Parent-Teacher Federation. He is a school inspector and a specialist in audio-visual education. In 1962 he was Canada's representative to the International Conference on Screen Education in Norway, sponsored by UNESCO. Mr. Edwards believes that television has almost unlimited possibilities as a medium for educating and civilizing. But he fears that the fine influence on children of the many good TV programs is swamped by the constant flow of programs that emphasize crime and violence.

"This 'conditioning' goes on year after year, and the whole time unthinking parents abet the gradual process of brutalizing their children by allowing unrestricted use of the TV set, and by going out to buy the products advertised between the sluggings and shootings. Two decades of constant glorification of the fast-draw, the switchblade and the judo chop are showing clearly in the police courts. There are other contributing factors to the increases in youthful crime, no doubt, but I accuse the massive, continuous injections of TV violence into the home as a major cause. American teen-agers are turning to crime in record numbers. Arrests of youths seventeen and under are increasing three times as fast as the growth in juvenile population. (Journal of American Insurance, October 1963.)

"According to the Canadian Corrections Association, the number of persons between the ages of eighteen and twenty-one convicted of indictable offences in Canada increased thirty-five percent from 1957 to 1961. This is about three times the population growth in this age category. Ontario Chief Justice C. McRuer said in January that, in the last five years for which figures are available, convictions for juvenile delinquency in York County had almost trebled - from 922 to 2726. He has tried four youths, none over sixteen, for capital murder in the last two years.

"Psychologists suspect that the minds and personalities of children are being changed by TV in many ways. Children are under the sway of the TV set, on the average, one-sixth of their waking hours. Only thorough and continuing research can accurately assess all the changes that are being imposed upon Canadian children by TV. But there is one effect of TV that has been established. The youth today is more brutal, far more likely to land in jail than his father - because he has learned to be like that from the picture tube in the living room." End of quote.

Please don't waste your time telling me that there is some good in it. I know that! But, if I must swallow ninety-nine percent corruption to obtain one percent good, then I know I can find much more benefit inquiring of my God and listening to the sweet strains of His eternal wisdom as He speaks to my heart. And, my brother, may I ask how long ago it is since your last great burden in prayer? How long ago is it since you rose early to wait before God until He spoke words of wonder and glory to your heart? Has something displaced His glory? Has some idol of wood or gold or tin possessed your time, your mind, and your heart? Then put away the evil of your doings, learn to do well, and He will accept you.

One of the saddest passages in the Bible and yet one that proffers great hope is found in Revelation 3:20. The setting is at the end of our age; the words were spoken to the church at Laodicea, a people rich and increased in goods and satisfied in themselves that they had need of nothing. They are fundamentalists. They believe in justification by faith. They speak of the baptism of the Spirit. They believe in divine healing. They believe the Lord will come and rapture them. Yes, they know the doctrines and have studied them for years. They have great missionary programs. They put on revivals. They have programs for the poor. They are rich, increased in goods, and have need of nothing. That is, at least, man's estimation of the situation, and it is hard, if not impossible, to convince the carnal mind of his need. Nothing is worse than a self-satisfied Christian. Better it would be to be an out and out sinner than a carnal, self-satisfied Christian. Even publicans and harlots will repent and enter the kingdom before him. But what does God say of Laodicea? "Thou knowest not that thou art wretched and miserable and poor and blind and naked." How dreadful a predicament to be wretched, miserable, poor, blind, and naked and know it not, and, worse still, to imagine oneself to have need of nothing! Yet this is the case with millions in our day. The most pitiful thing of all, however, is this: Christ, who should be enthroned in their hearts, is in reality standing outside the door! He is not within at all! While they loudly sing, "He lives within my heart," the truth is that other things have crept into their hearts and, with their permission, have pushed Him outside and left Him standing there.

"When Jesus came to Kensington,
They wouldn't give Him pain:
They simply passed Him on the street,

The Lord no longer finds a place within the precincts of this self-satisfied Laodicean church system with all its denominations and sects, its false prophets and false christs. He has turned away from it completely to seek those blessed virgin spirits who will open the door and let Him in. Over the wide world today Christ is coming to individuals. You will not often find Him among the crowds. You will find Him communing with some Mary and Martha, or perhaps you will find Him opening the scriptures to disappointed and heart-broken men as they wearily plod to their Emmaus. Lo, He calls, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock. If any man hear My voice and open the door, I will come in to him and will sup with him and he with Me." Here, oh saint of God, is a promise of everlasting importance, given not to crowds or multitudes, not to churches or assemblies or conventions, but to individuals, to men and women who have grown weary of formality, tired of hypocrisy, disgusted with church ways, sick of conventions and the artificiality of revivals and the wearisome assemblings. They are fed up with the big, the famous, the outstanding and the great. Their hearts are longing for reality. Their minds demand to know Him by whom and through whom all things exist. They desire to hear the words of His lips and feel their hearts burn within them as He unfolds His eternal purposes. No man can love Christ because some preacher has told him he should. To love Christ you must see Him as He is, and when you hear Him speak, you will say, "Never man spake like this man." When you see Him as He is, you will love Him as all the virgins do, for from Him everything comes, by Him everything exists, and in Him everything ends. Glory to Christ forever and evermore! The moment we see Him, we instinctively know that we belong to Him and that all our hope of eternal fullness dwells in Him.

It is unto you who long to know the Christ separate and apart from the soul-possessing demands of insipid church systems and groups that He now comes in goodness and mercy. He who has been turned away from the door of Laodicea, that poverty-stricken church system that possesses everything but Christ, now comes to stand at the heart door of needy individuals such as you and I whose hearts long, not for riches, but for reality; not for ceremony, but for sincerity; not for religion, but for righteousness; not for Christology, but for Christ. It is to you, my disconsolate brother that He now comes. It is to you, my burdened sister that He now calls. Even now, as you sit in distressed contemplation because of the abounding corruption around you and the obnoxious lukewarmness that you would gladly spue from your mouth, the Son of God has come to visit you and offer Himself as the eternal satisfaction for your deepest heart longing. "Behold, I stand at the door and knock," He says. Ah, so that is the voice I hear so clearly! The disturbance, the turmoil, the discontent, and the dissatisfaction within my soul was not of my making after all! It was the hand of Christ knocking at the door, telling me that, though my life was filled with the riches of Laodicea, the King of kings and Lords of lords was not enthroned in my heart. The disturbance and lack of assurance you feel within your spirit is in reality His voice, warning you that all is wrong with the system, with Laodicea and Babylon, and all who remain in them will be spued from the very mouth of God and become partaker of Babylon's plagues.

But listen more carefully to the wonder of the promise He so freely gives to the individual Christian of this age, the "any man" who will hear His voice and open the door to Him. I find it difficult to believe that a greater promise was ever given to "any man" than that which He now offers to the lonely, discontented, hungry individuals who at the end of this age turn from the vanities of the Laodicean church system to open the door of their hearts, their souls, and their spirits that God's wonderful Christ may enter in and take his rightful place in their lives. "Behold, I stand at the door and knock; if any man hear My voice and open the door, I will come in to him, and sup with him, and he with Me." It would take many more pages than we have at our disposal to unfold the wealth that lies hidden in this gold mine of truth. Take heart and courage, disconsolate saint, for, though Christ has been barred from the doors of the system that insists upon calling itself the church, His promise is unto you if you will but hear and recognize His voice. If you will arise and open wide the door of your heart, He will enter. Yea, He will enter, not as a guest, but as Lord forevermore, the owner and possessor of all things. He has already declared, "Ye are not your own; for ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's." 2 Cor. 6:19-20. Bid Him therefore enter the temple of your body, not to sit amid the clutter of Laodicea with all her abominations, her riches and her increase, her forms and ceremonies, but to individuals, to men and women who have grown weary of formality, tired of hypocrisy, disgusted with church ways, sick of conventions and the artificiality of revivals and the wearisome assemblings. They are fed up with the big, the famous, the outstanding and the great. Their hearts are longing for reality. Their minds demand to know Him by whom and through whom all things exist. They desire to hear the words of His lips and feel their hearts burn within them as He unfolds His eternal purposes. No man can love Christ because some preacher has told him he should. To love Christ you must see Him as He is, and when you hear Him speak, you will say, "Never man spake like this man." When you see Him as He is, you will love Him as all the virgins do, for from Him everything comes, by Him everything exists, and in Him everything ends. Glory to Christ forever and evermore! The moment we see Him, we instinctively know that we belong to Him and that all our hope of eternal fullness dwells in Him.

"I will come in to him, and sup with him, and he with Me" is the promise of Christ. Here is the true fellowship you have been seeking. Here is the communion your heart has craved so long, even the communion of your spirit with His Spirit. "I will sup with him and he with Me." "I am the vine, ye are the branches," said Jesus. It is when He sits to sup with us that we partake of the fruit of the true vine, which He is. "Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness, and are dead. This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die. I am the living bread which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he shall live forever: and the bread that I will give him is My flesh, which I will give for the life of the world." John 6:49-51. Have our spiritual ears heard the words of life that flowed from the lips of Paul when he said, "For I have received of the Lord that which also I delivered unto you, that the Lord Jesus the same night in which He was betrayed took bread: and when He had given thanks, He brake it, and said, Take, eat: this is My body. which is broken for you; this do in remembrance of Me. After the same manner also He took the cup, when He had supped, saying, This cup is the new testament (covenant) in My blood: this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of Me." 1 Cor. 11:23-25. To sup with Christ is not merely to adhere to the formality of a communion service, which often can be meaningless, empty, and devoid of the Spirit; but he who communes with Christ partakes of Christ, and, in partaking of Him, partakes of His very nature and likeness, becoming eternal and immortal and sharing not only in His likeness, but in His spiritual body and in Himself.

"And it came to pass, as He sat at meat with them, He took bread, and blessed it, and brake, and gave to them. And their eyes were opened, and they knew Him; and He vanished out of their sight. And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us, while He talked with us by the way, and while He opened to us the scriptures." Luke 24:30-32. Yes, my brother, it is true even in this hour of Laodicea that, if you will turn from the vanities of the church systems and, putting them from you, will open your heart to Christ, He will indeed come in to you. Your heart will burn as He opens the scripture to reveal to your starving spirit the things that have lain hidden in the mind of God from the very foundation of the world. Your heart will burn as He sits to bless and break that eternal bread which He is and He will give it to you, saying, "This is My body."

"Wherefore do you spend money for that which is not bread and your labor for that which satisfieth not? Hearken diligently unto Me, and eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness. Incline your ear and come unto Me; hear, and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David." I will come in and sup with him and he with Me." If God did not need you, He would not have created you. God is not satisfied with forms and ceremonies. Christ desires not only that you should sup with him, but that He should sup with you. He desires that you partake of Him and become one with Him, but there is a way, which perhaps only He can understand, by which He also partakes of you and becomes one with you. Ho, every one that thirsteth! Ho, every one that hath no money! Ho! Awake! Listen! Hearken! Hear! Come ye to the living fountain of waters! Come ye to the rivers of the water of life! Come, buy wine and milk without money and without price! For "whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life."

Yea, out of his being shall flow rivers of living water. "Behold, I stand at the door and knock. If any man hear My voice and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him and he with Me."

We mentioned earlier how important a thing it is that men and women should love Christ. My brother and my sister, it is certain that you know that every man who has been bought with a price no longer belongs to himself, but to Him who bought him. 1 Cor. 7:23. "Ye are not your own," saith God. "Ye are bought with a price; therefore glorify God in your body and in your spirit, which are God's." 1 Cor. 6:19-20. Of course you belong to God because He bought you and paid for you with the life blood of His Son. Since, then, these things are so and cannot be spoken against, you, being God's purchased possession, no longer belong to yourself. Neither do you belong to this world nor to this age nor to any of the systems of this age. Your time is not yours. Your possessions are only leased to you. How right and good it was that saints in the infancy of our age considered that none of the things, which they possessed was their own! Acts 4:32. And should we imagine that the things, which God has temporarily placed in our hands, belong to us? Should we not be stewards only and not possessors and owners? How quickly God can change our circumstances and erode from us all that we have, for riches make themselves wings and fly away like a dream in the night.

When the blessed and saintly Lucian stood before his persecutors, he was asked, "Of what country art thou?" To this he replied, "I am a Christian." "What is your occupation?" "I am a Christian." "Of what family art thou?" "I am a Christian." Such saintly and blessed words are worthy to be emblazoned on the very gates of paradise. To this man Christ was everything. Christ was his business', Christ was his occupation', Christ was his country; Christ was his family connection. It is this that the Spirit teaches when He says, "Ye are not your own; ye are bought with a price." Indeed, you are not your own. You have been purchased by Him and you are His eternal possession.

Do I not speak the truth when I say that modern Christians have forgotten that Christianity is their business, that Christ is their Lord, their owner, their redeemer, their possessor, that they do not belong to this age nor to any of the things in it but to Him who is before all things and by whom all things consist. Christ, by whom are all things and for whom are all things, has become a sort of handy convenience to millions of Christians - someone to save them when life is over, someone to heal them when they are sick from living after the flesh, someone to call upon when finances go wrong, someone to pray to when relations go astray. I fear that, as Rachel hid her father's gods among the camel's furniture, so Christians have buried Christ among the accumulation of junk and rubbish they have dragged into the temple, which they are. "My house," saith God, "shall be a house of prayer, but ye have made it a den of thieves."

For me to live is Christ. For me to die is Christ. My business is Christ. I belong to no sect, no order, no denomination. I am not denominational. I am not undenominational. I am not interdenominational. If anything, I am anti-denominational, anti-sectarian, anti-every conceivable thing that would try to possess me or own me or direct me or in any way hinder me from being completely His in spirit, soul, and body. Where the Spirit of God is, there the true church is. Everything we lost in Adam we find and gain in Jesus Christ. So may God, who has separated us from the community of the ungodly, unite us forever with those who are consecrated to Him.

Concerning that wonderful principle of loving only Him, being His citizens and His possession, I found my spirit much stirred by the words of the saintly Basil, who lived about 300 A.D. Because of his holy life and godly teaching the Roman emperor threatened him with banishment, confiscation of goods, and death. When it came to his ears that he had been thus threatened, he replied, "Not one of these things touch me. His property cannot be confiscated who has none. Banishment I know not, for I am restricted to no place. I am the guest of God to whom the earth belongs. And death will be a benefit to me to send me more quickly to God." Those, I think, must be the words of one whose citizenship is in heaven and whose only true love is Christ.

The days in which we live are very evil. They are without doubt the repetition of those days immediately preceding the flood. We are now seeing on every hand the literal fulfillment of the words of Jesus Christ who said, "As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the days of the coming of the Son of man." In those days the world was given over to the flesh. Men were eating and drinking, not for the sake of needed sustenance, but for the very sake of eating and drinking. Wasteful and gluttonous, they were consuming all they could on this wretched, dying realm of the physical flesh, whose eyes are not filled with seeing, whose ears are not filled with hearing, whose appetite is never filled with dainties. In the days of Noah they were marrying and giving in marriage, not in the pure simplicity of marriage that was ordained of God, but for the filth and momentary satisfaction of the flesh. They were marrying and divorcing, remarrying and divorcing again, just as we see it all about us today. In our day divorce and re-marriage has become such a tragedy that it is almost impossible to speak to a crowd of half a dozen without finding some among them who are divorced and remarried. It would be tragic enough if this situation existed among the world of the ungodly, but the whole professing church system is honeycombed with this evil, which always precedes the wrath and judgment of God. Along with the corruption of sex goes violence, sodomy, rebellion, until all the thoughts and imaginations of men's hearts are only evil continually.

It is usual and remote for me to write of the things we shall now consider, but in these days, when people are intent on marrying and giving in marriage, imagining that the paltry thing called sex that is everywhere exalted as a goddess to be desired, admired, cherished, and coveted as the highest aim in life, now that it is taught in schools, foisted on young people, and made to be the end and purpose of marriage itself, there is something very special to be said for those consecrated people who because of their great love for Jesus Christ have chosen to remain unmarried and fully devoted to Christ, rather than for the mere sake of marriage to marry outside of Christ or become a partner unequally yoked with an unbeliever. In these evil days when marriage is completely out of perspective, entered into lightly by immature children who know nothing of what life or responsibility is all about, we find practically nothing being taught either in writing or by preaching about the blessings of virginity so clearly spoken of by the apostle Paul. Therefore, for the edification and comfort of the many faithful young men and women who have deemed the riches of Christ far more important than marriage at any price, I wish to point out that the apostle Paul consumed at least one chapter in the New Testament (1 Cor. 7) to exalt the benefits that accrue to those faithful virgin people who remain steadfast in their devotion to Christ, finding no necessity outside of Him. I would emphasize also that, while Paul is showing the blessings of virginity, he is at the same time pointing out the difficulties encountered by those who are married — who have the wishes of their partners to consider as well as the will of Christ and the demands of the gospel.

We do not have space enough here to explain the chapter, 1 Cor. 7, verse by verse nor to compare it with other writings of the New Testament. But Paul with great wisdom and plainness of speech pointed up one of the greatest difficulties of married life, be that marriage ever so happy, well ordered and successful. "The wife," he said, "hath not power of her own body, but the husband; and likewise also the husband hath not power of his own body, but the wife." 1 Cor. 7:4. This should bring to our immediate attention the fact that once we enter into the marriage contract it is well nigh impossible to be as completely devoted to Christ as we once were for the very simple reason so wisely and vividly explained in verse 4, quoted above. There is now another person to be taken into account, a wife or a husband, a third party to be taken into consideration in all phases of our work and devotion.

Paul, speaking of virgins, is not speaking only of women, for a man may also remain a virgin. Paul lived in a day of great distress when peril and persecution were always present. We also live in an hour of great distress of nations, perhaps the greatest in the history of the world. Therefore, Paul said of the virgins, whether men or women, "Now concerning virgins I have no commandment of the Lord; yet I give my judgment, as one that hath obtained mercy of the Lord to be faithful. I suppose therefore that this is good for the present distress, I say, that it is good for a man so to be. (That is, to remain unmarried.) Art thou bound to a wife? Seek not to be loosed. Art thou loosed from a wife? Seek not a wife. But and if thou marry, thou hast not sinned; and if a virgin marry, she hath not sinned. Nevertheless such shall have trouble in the flesh: but I spare you." Verses 25-28. Again he says, "But I would have you without carefulness. He that is unmarried careth for the things that belong to the Lord, how he may please the Lord: but he that is married careth for the things of the world, how he may please his wife. There is difference also between a wife and a virgin. The unmarried woman careth for the things of the Lord, that she may be holy both in body and in spirit: but she that is married careth for the things of the world, how she may please her husband." Verses 32-34. It is not my thought or ministry to endeavor to establish any rules or regulations about any of these things, but let those men and especially those young women who for the sake of their devotion to Christ have denied themselves things so earnestly sought by the millions about them be mightily encouraged by this powerful word of wisdom and inspiration: "He who giveth her in marriage doeth well, but he that giveth her not in marriage doeth better." Verse 38.

Why should anyone think it unreasonable, incredible, or impossible that many in these evil days should desire not only to forsake the confusing bondage of the harlot church system, but to entirely cut themselves free from every form, custom, or relationship that could prove to be a weight that might hinder them in the all important race we are now running? It is true that Paul said, "It is better to marry than to burn" (1 Cor. 7:9), but would he have made this concession if all men and women had through God's grace overcome the burning as he himself had done? 1 Cor. 7:7. He also said, "To avoid fornication let every man have his own wife, and let every woman have her own husband." But could this possibly apply to those who through grace have crucified the flesh, treading all physical passion beneath their feet? Our Lord Jesus Christ, whose name is wisdom and understanding, in one simple and powerful word of wisdom wrapped up the important matter of virginity and complete separation unto Christ in these remarkable words: "All men cannot receive this saying, save they to whom it is given. For there are some eunuchs, which were so born from their mother's womb: and there are some eunuchs, which were made eunuchs of men: and there be eunuchs which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it." Matt. 19:11-12. If you then are among that number whose highest ambition is to be a chaste virgin unto Christ, a eunuch for the kingdom of heaven's sake, then receive this wise teaching of Christ. If on the other hand you are among those who cannot receive this saying, then forget about it and leave it alone, but hinder not those who can receive it. "Consecrated virgins," wrote the saintly Cyprian, "are the flowers of the church, reflecting the holiness of the Saviour. They are the elite of the faithful. They are married only to God, to Christ, and in that heavenly union find abundant compensation. They have found the pearl of great price."

Perhaps in this writing I have made some statements that are difficult to be understood. Many, I fear, will shrug them off as irrelevant and unimportant. Some will certainly be angry and refuse the teaching while others will go merrily on refusing to heed aught but that which pleases them. It is ever true that, though we mourn, few lament, and though we pipe, there be few that dance. Nevertheless, I have a sincere reason for writing these things. While I waited before God and chastened my soul in His presence, it became clear that we are moving into the final phases of this age of abounding evil. God's elect, who have run the race with patience and determination, are entering that final home stretch in preparation for the kingdom age.

The elect of God are beyond doubt a very special people, members in particular of the body of Christ. They are a people hand picked for sonship from the teeming multitudes of the dispensations. They are few in number.
They are chosen in the furnace of affliction. They have stripped for the race. They have girded up their loins with truth. They have laid aside every weight and the sin that doth so easily beset all mankind. They have pressed toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ. That calling is full sonship in Him. They have counted every dear and precious thing of earth but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus their Lord. Christ has become all in all to them. He is high and lifted up within them. They love Him first and foremost and all else they love in Him.

The age is passing away and all the lusts thereof. Because the nations refuse to retain God in their knowledge, carnality knows no bounds and sin and iniquity are rampant. The reprobate mind has so seized upon the world leaders that every decision they make is retrograde and evil. The bottomless pit is open wide. The smoke is ascending. The sun is darkening. The locusts, the unclean spirits, have gone forth into all the earth, deceiving the hearts of mankind. The nations are gearing and tooling up for the great and terrible Armageddon. Drugs, medicine, and pollution are dissipating the health of the people and preparing the way for the plagues that will wipe out billions of earth's people. But, while all this evil is in preparation, God is preparing His mystical company of pure sons who shall take the government of this world and reign in an age when sin shall be no more.

The importance of Christ's being lifted up in our lives in these final hours of the dispensation cannot possibly be overestimated or over stated, for as we see Him as He is, admire Him, love Him, and behold His face, we are changed into His image. "Now the Lord is that Spirit, and where the Spirit is Lord there is freedom. But we all with unveiled face, beholding as in a mirror the glory of the Lord, are changed into that same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord."

Run the straight race through God's good grace; Lift up thine eyes and see His face. Only believe and thou shalt see, That Christ is all in all to thee.

CHAPTER FOUR
FROM DEATH TO LIFE

During those holy hours in which John the beloved disciple was carried away in the Spirit to behold in vivid detail the revelation concerning the end of the age, he heard the voice of Jesus speaking in triumph from the resurrection side of the tomb. No longer was it the lonely voice of Jesus the Galilean, despised, rejected, filled with sorrows and acquainted with endless grief but the Christ multitudinous whose multisonant voice rang out as the sound of many waters. It was the voice of Jesus now in company with all that vast family of God's beloved sons who through His infinite design have become one body in Him. The thrilling message that poured forth from His lips was this: "I am the first and the last: I am He that liveth and was dead; and, behold, I am alive forevermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death." Rev. 1:17-18.

To accentuate the greatness of that message and to aid our understanding concerning the depths of truth written in this book, we quote here the rendering of the above verses from the Bible translations of Rotherham, Weymouth (original), and the Emphatic Diaglott. "Do not fear! I am the First and the Last and the Living One, - And I became dead; - and lo! living am I unto the Ages of Ages." Rotherham. "Do not be afraid: I am the First and the Last, and the ever-living One. I died; but I am now alive until the Ages of the Ages..." Weymouth Original. "Fear not; I am the First and the Last, and the Living One; I was even dead, but, behold, I am living for the Ages of the Ages. " Emphatic Diaglott.

Our purpose in quoting the above three renderings of Rev. 1:17-18 is that our minds might embrace the undeniable truth that the life now possessed by Jesus the Son of God is not a life such as ours, which is but a vapor that appeareth for a little time and is gone, Jas. 4:14, but His life is the life of the ages, continuing on and on, age after age, even forevermore. I have nothing in common with the teaching, which holds that after this age of grace comes eternity. Eternity is eternity. That which is eternal has neither beginning nor ending. We are in eternity now and always have been and always will be. Eternity is filled with ages just as weeks are filled with days and days are filled with hours, and hours are filled with minutes and minutes are filled with seconds. The truth is that following this age of grace comes another age, the kingdom period. After the kingdom age comes another age, the fullness of times. After the fullness of times come more ages which, as we have noticed above, are described as ages of ages. There is nothing stagnant or static about the God we love and serve or in the purpose, which He purposed in Christ Jesus before the ages began. The purpose of God, which began ages ago is now in progress and will be carried out endlessly in the ages of ages, which are yet to come. The sooner God's people dismount from their rickety hobby-horse of human tradition taught by the hired clergy of an apostate church system and forsake the high-sounding fiddle-faddle that pictures a comparative handful of saints in a heaven of bliss while countless billions are shut out from God's presence forever in the direct and most indescribable misery the sooner we will be able to see God's eternal purpose progressing from age to age and from glory to glory until in the dispensation of the fullness of times God gathers together in one all things in Christ, whether they be things in heaven or things in earth. Eph. 1:10.

How my soul exults in these wise words of wisdom, written by A. P. Adams in his description of the New Jerusalem, the heavenly bride of Christ, who appears adorned for her husband at the end of the kingdom age! Rev. 22. "Its jasper walls and pearly gates, its foundations of precious stones and golden streets are only representations faintly symbolizing the transcendent majesty of that new and perfect government. Every blessing for mankind is represented as flowing out of this grand city. The Lord God almighty and the Lamb are the temple and the light of it; and the nations of them that are saved shall walk in the light of it; and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honor into it; and the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day: for there is no night there. This is no selfish orthodox heaven with narrow gates all fast upon a handful of saved, and myriads of the lost eternally wailing around its outer walls; this is a great city with twelve gates, each one wide enough for a regiment to march in abreast, and never shut, thank God."

The life of the ages! How could we humans, who have seen naught but death, ever describe that life which He has and which He also is? What boundless glory must have flooded the heart of the eternal Son when He cried, "Behold, I am alive forevermore, (or for the ages of the ages), and I hold in My hand the keys of death and hell." It is part of God's purpose to destroy all death, the first death, the second death, and every form of death there could possibly be until death in all its forms will be erased and eradicated from a universe in which He Himself is both the life and the light. In the new heaven and the new earth where the sons of God, who are the Temple of the Lord, Rev. 21:22, reign in life with the bride of Christ, who is the New Jerusalem, Rev. 21:1,2,9-21, there will be no death anywhere any more, for "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away." Rev. 21:3-4.

It is my earnest prayer that the Spirit of God will give each one who reads these pages the spirit of thoughtfulness and revelation. If your spirit is able to grasp the truth I purpose to set forth in the following pages, the truth concerning life and death, many stumbling stones will be removed from the highway of your understanding and you will see great truths in a light which has been hidden from you hitherto. We must always remember that light dispels darkness and brings into clear perspective all things that were hidden in the gloomy mists of death. "Truth is the light, but falsehood is the night;" therefore, when light shines we see things as they are and not as they have always seemed. It is a very common thing among us to find both children and adult men and women who are afraid of the dark. We can forgive them for this because there are many reasons for being afraid of the dark - not because of the dark itself, but because of the dangers we cannot see while we walk in it. The pitiful thing is not that men should be afraid of the dark but that they should be afraid of the light. It is when men, and especially Christian men, are afraid of the light that we need to be troubled. Men in the temporal realm are afraid of the dark and welcome the light, but in the spiritual realm men love darkness because their deeds are evil, and are afraid of light lest they be reproved. Let us who are of the light have no fear of walking in it, for the path of the just is as the shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day. Light shining on any portion of truth quickly dispels the darkness that long hung over that truth until things that seemed beyond explanation become simple, reasonable, and easily understandable. If, for example, we accept the widespread theology which is forever proclaiming that the day of grace is almost over, we are thrown into distress, worry, confusion, and into many harmful and useless human works in our efforts to redeem the time; but if our spiritual understanding can grasp the words of Paul, we will clearly see that we who have received the life of Christ here and now are being raised up together and made to sit in heavenly places so that through us in the ages to come He might show the exceeding riches of His grace. See Eph. 2:5-7. Only then do our minds settle down in confidence and harmony, knowing that God's purpose now in our days is to save and prepare and raise up an elect and chosen people who, having fully partaken of His marvelous grace in this present evil age, will in the ages to come be used in God's wisdom to reveal and display the exceeding riches of His grace to all people, as is clearly taught in Eph. 2:4-7. Let us then love the light that we may walk in confidence and be not ashamed, and let us flee from the darkness lest we walk in nakedness and confusion. For many centuries men who love to be honored as theologians (though in my opinion there is no such person or ministry, for we know nothing yet as we ought to know) have debated loud and long about what day of the week Jesus died, as though it mattered in the least. The truth that will mark a change in our Christian experience, unfolding and unraveling many difficulties, will come with the discovery that the real death that Jesus died was on that day when He laid down or laid aside the life of the ages to become a man and to enter into the realm of death in which mankind has dwelt since the day Adam sinned and all men died in him, for God had said, In the day thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die." When the blessed Son of God became a son of man, on that very day He entered the realm of death in all its dark and gloomy horror, and there in the living hell of this realm He abode for thirty-three and one-half years, a whole lifetime of death, and then on the cross of Calvary He ended forever His death experience.

It was only hours before the cross that Jesus prayed, saying, "I have finished the work which Thou gavest Me to do. And now, O Father, glorify Thou Me with Thine own self with the glory that I had with Thee before the world was." John 17:45. The glory that He had with the Father before the world was was the life of the ages (eternal life). It was this life that He had power to lay down and power to take up again. John 10:17-18. And now in a few hours His thirty-three years of death would be ended by the cross and He would take up again the life and glory that He had with the Father before the ages began. It was after God had raised Him from the dead and He had taken the pre-existent life again that He proclaimed in triumph, "I am He that liveth and was dead; and, behold, I am alive forevermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death." Rev. 1:18.

It is very important that we see this truth, because, once we understand it, we comprehend as never before the limitless depths to which the Son of God went in His redemption of us all. His death was not confined to a few hours on a bloody cross, terrible as that must have been, but the truth is that He entered into death when He entered the world and walked in all its hateful power, felt its lifelong sting, resisted and defeated its temptations, wept at its sorrows, was beset by its endless grief, was touched by the frightful hurt of its infirmities, felt the dreadful pangs of terrifying loneliness and the exasperating frustration of misunderstanding, and bowed His back to the injustice of the rulers of this present world. Who has suffered and He has suffered not? Who has known grief and He has not known grief? "He was oppressed, and He was afflicted, yet He opened not His mouth: He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so He openeth not His mouth. He was taken from prison and from judgment: and who shall declare His generation? For He was cut off out of the land of the living: for the transgression of my people was He stricken. And He made His grave with the wicked, and with the rich in His death; because He had done no violence, neither was any deceit in His mouth. Yet it pleased the Lord to bruise Him; He hath put Him to grief: when Thou shall make His soul an offering for sin, He shall see His seed, He shall prolong His days, and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in His hand." Isa. 53:7-10.

Man that is born of woman is born in sin and shapen in iniquity and, because we have sinful natures and dwell in a world where sin with all its sordid evil exists on every hand, we are accustomed to it, never remembering anything better. A man who is born in the poverty of a dungeon pays little heed to his condition since he knows nothing better, but a free man, thrown into a dungeon, is thrown into an agonizing hell. No man on earth can properly understand the terror, the horror, and alarming dismay of the death Christ suffered when He took upon Himself the form of a man and became obedient unto death, because no man has yet tasted the glory of that world of life He enjoyed with the Father before the ages began. Paul tried to explain the extent of His poverty and humiliation with these words of inspiration: "You know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though He was rich, yet for your sakes He became poor, that ye through His poverty might be rich." 2 Cor. 8:9. And again, with the use of words that, though inspired, are yet feeble, he exhorted us to let the same mind be in us that was in Christ Jesus: "Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: but made Himself of no reputation, and took upon Him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men: and being found in fashion as a man, He humbled Himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." Phil. 2:5-8.

I find myself too confined to set forth this truth as I should do, but let us request of God's Spirit the ability to see the death of Christ in all its lifelong extent - not as six hours on a cross, but as thirty-three and one half years, fully partaking of death in all its aspects, tempted in all points as we are, suffering in all points as we do, that through His suffering He might become the first perfect man, the first perfect Son of man. The Son of God through His incarnation became the Son of man that we who were born sons of men might through Him become sons of God, yes, perfect sons of men and perfect sons of God. What a sacrifice that was and what a death He died! And now He is alive forevermore, triumphantly holding in His incorruptible hand the keys of both death and hell, and is abundantly able to offer the life of the ages to dead men who believe in Him. "I give unto them the life of the ages," He has proclaimed, "and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of My hand; My Father which gave them Me is greater than all, and no man can pluck them out of My Father's hand." John 10:28-29.

Now it naturally follows that, if our blessed Lord spent all the days of His earthly existence in death, we also are doing the same, and I shall advance many infallible proofs to show that the very thing men have called life is not life at all, but death. Indeed, we may claim that three score and ten years are the years of our life and, of course, we all understand what is meant by that statement, but the real truth is that the three score and ten years during which we dwell in this corruptible body are not the years of our life, but the years of our death. When we mortals put a man in a coffin and bury him in the dark, cold earth, we say the man is dead, and indeed he is; but have you heard what Jesus answered when one of His disciples said to him, "Suffer me first to go and bury my father?" The strange reply He gave was this: "Follow Me: and let the dead bury their dead." Matt. 8:21-22. How strange that statement sounds to us who do not understand what death is, but the Lord was really telling them that the able-bodied men who were carrying the coffin to the cemetery were just as dead as the man who was lying breathless within it. In other words the very thing we insist is life God says is death. The sooner we learn that lesson the sooner we will release as useless all things that pertain to this realm of death that we might be enabled to firmly lay hold on life, even the life which Jesus gives, aionian life, or the life of the ages.

When the truth of this dawned upon my soul, I found many earthly things slipping away from me in a manner I had not known hitherto. Who among us could ever desire to lay fast hold upon that which he discovers to be naught but death? The things that are dead we bury out of our sight, and I think I am right in saying that the lusts and temptations that belong to this death lose their grip upon us when we know that they are naught but death and that the flesh life to which these temptations cling is but a vapor that the wind driveth away. I cannot see myself slaving to lay up great wealth in store for that which I know is dead. What an abominable lie has gripped our hearts, deceiving us into endless labor and travail until on every side men and women are dying of heart attacks in their worry to provide worthless goods for this body of death.

FROM DEATH TO LIFE

In the book of Genesis, chapter 2, verses 16-17, we have God's first command to Adam in these words: "And the Lord God commanded the man, saying, Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat; but the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shall not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shall surely die." For many years I explained this passage of scripture by saying the man, Adam, died spiritually the moment he ate of the fruit of the tree, but that he lived on physically for over nine hundred years before death came to his body. Now this may seem a very plausible sort of explanation and one that is very satisfying to the natural mind but it is not the truth at all. Neither is it enough to say death set in right there and then. The real truth is that the moment he partook of the fruit it happened to him exactly as God had said it would - "In the day thou eatest thereof thou shall surely die."

God's word is always true, but it is our meddling with it that makes it awkward and difficult to explain. The truth is that life departed from Adam when he sinned, and what he experienced and endured for the next nine hundred years was not life at all but outer darkness and death. We in our ignorance call it life, but God, who knows what life really is, calls it death. It may be difficult at first for one to understand this truth, but once it is seen and accepted and the reality of it floods the soul, many things which hitherto were filled with mystery become living with truth and reality as I will show as we progress.

Paul the apostle in confirmation of this truth, when writing to the Christians concerning their walking after the flesh or after he Spirit, uttered this heart rending cry to God: "O wretched man that I am! Who shall deliver me from the body of this death!" Rom. 7:24. Now how could man with human words ever tell us more clearly than he did in this anguished cry to God that the body is indeed dead and that it is nothing more or less than the mortal tabernacle in which we spend the years of this death! It is most certainly the body of this death. Now Paul, as though to add great weight and force to what he had already said concerning the body of death, continues to add strength to his argument by saying, "If Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin, but the Spirit is life (alive) because of righteousness." Rom. 8:10. This statement is positively true to fact, and when we accept the fact that what we have insisted is life is that which God calls death, then we can understand the truth that Paul is trying to get the believers to see.

You will ask why it is, then, that Paul says, "The Spirit is life (or alive)." The answer is very simple. The people to whom he is speaking are believers. Our Lord Jesus plainly told us. "My sheep hear My voice, and I know them, and they follow Me: and I give unto them eternal life, (or, the life of the ages), and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of My hand. My Father, which gave them Me is greater than all; and no man is able to pluck them out of My Father's hand." John 10:27-29. The moment any man believes on Jesus Christ, accepting Him as His Lord and Saviour, at that moment the gift of God, which is eternal life, is given to that believing man and the life of God, which is in fact and in truth Jesus Christ, the Son of God, begins to live and dwell and abide in that man as a well of water springing up unto the life of the ages. Christ is the tree of life. Man in the beginning by an act of unbelief and disobedience partook of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil and the life of the ages departed from him; but now, through an act of repentance and belief, he partakes of the tree of life, even Jesus Christ, the Son of God. Of Him it is written, "In Him was life; and the life was the light of men. And the light shineth in darkness, and the darkness comprehended it not (cannot overcome it)." John 1:4-5. The truth of the matter, my believing brother or sister, is simply this: In Him is life, and the only life we have is the life Jesus gave us the same day that we repented and believed. That was the life of the ages, which Christ Himself is. All else besides that is death and must never be construed to be anything else but death. Man calls it life, but the Bible and God, who is its author, declare that it is death.

In these last days medical science has become extremely efficient in prolonging what they believe is life. Humanity is gulping pills by the thousands of tons; hearts, kidneys and lungs are transplanted in an effort to prolong life. Homes for the aged are springing up everywhere, giving every imaginable intensive care in an effort to prolong life. Thousands of suffering people at enormous expense are kept breathing by artificial means who would be a thousand times better off to have gone to their graves. And all this effort, extra pain, endless suffering and weariness is supposed to be the preservation of life. Rubbish, my well-meaning friend! We are not by this means preserving life; we are preserving death. We are keeping men and women in the realm of death who should have passed beyond the realm of death into the realm of life. Full well may every man along with every sufferer wail out the apostle's bitter cry, "O wretched man that I am! Who shall deliver me from the body of this death?"

We repeat again and again that Christ is life. In Him is life. In Him alone is life. Life cannot be had apart from Him. Outside of Him there is naught but darkness and darkness is death. "Who so drinketh of this water shall thirst again" were the words He spoke to the troubled woman at the well of Samaria, "but whoseo drinketh of the water that I shall give shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall become a fountain within him, springing up for the life of the ages." John 4:14. (Weymouth). He is the fountain of life. He alone is the fountain of eternal youth. Neither is there salvation in any other, for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved.

On the last day of the great feast at Jerusalem, recorded in the seventh chapter of John, many and varied opinions were given of Jesus. Some said He was a good man. Some said, "Nay, He deceives the people." Others questioned, "How knoweth this man letters, having never learned?" Others wondered whether or not He would venture to come to the feast. While all this confusion prevailed, Jesus stood up to speak such living words as scarcely ever before or since were spoken, saying, "If any man thirst, let him come unto Me and drink. He that believeth on Me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. This spake He of the Spirit, which they that believe on Him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given..." John 7:37-39.

Sweet mystery of life, at last we've found Thee! And we have found that Thou, O Christ, art life — not that life which flourishes as grass in the field today and tomorrow the wind passes over it and it is gone, nor life like ours, which is as a mist which the wind driveth away, but life aionian, life everlasting, life eternal, life evermore, the life of the ages. Well spoke our beloved Lord when He said, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth My word, and believeth on Him that sent Me, hath everlasting life, the life of the ages, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life," John 5:24, or as Rotherham has translated it, "Hath passed over out of death into life." It is a wonderful hour in the experience of any man when he passes from death "across to life," Jno. 5:24 (Moffat), and that is exactly what happens when we believe on Christ. As the Father hath life in Himself, so hath He given to the Son to have life in Himself; and to all who believe on Him life is given, even that eternal life which God Himself is and which abounds like rivers of living water within us when Jesus Christ comes in to abide. Oh, taste and see that the Lord is good! Blessed is every man that trusteth in Him!

With this wonderful realization firmly abiding in our hearts we are better prepared to grasp the truth Christ clearly gave us when he said, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God: and they that hear shall live." John 5:25 Think on that statement, child of God. Was not Jesus telling us that we are dead as dead can be? And did He not make two remarkable statements - first, the hour is coming, and, second, the hour now is when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live? Have not we who have believed proved the truth of this in our very spirit and in our experience? The greatest proof in the universe that Jesus Christ is alive forevermore is the fact that, when we believed, He came to dwell within us. He came to live His life in us. He came to deliver us from our sin and our habits and make us to know that death would never more hold our spirits in its vice-like grip. Do we not know that He who lives and was dead, and, behold, He is alive forevermore, has come to us that we might live also? He who was delivered for our offences and raised again for our justification has come to deliver us from our offences and raise us together with Himself to share with Him the life of the ages. And marvel not only at the wonder of this, "for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear His voice, and shall come forth: they that have done good unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation (judgment)." John 5:28-29. This final resurrection we will consider presently.

The scope for elaboration here is limitless, but, as our space is somewhat limited, we will have to deny ourselves some of the luscious fruit of truth that awaits us by the way. Having seen that the only life we now possess is the life of the ages given us by the Son of God when we first believed and that all existence outside that realm is death, we are much better equipped to understand Paul's reason for saying to the Colossians, "Ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God." Col. 3:3. And again, "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with Him in glory." Col. 3:4. And I think, too, that his teaching in the entire seventh chapter of Romans becomes increasingly clear. The flesh he so vividly describes is undoubtedly the dead body (the body of death) in which we now dwell and which besets us with much trouble and temptation, and because of which we are never entirely free to devote ourselves fully to God, but must be forever spending our time ministering to the body of this death — feeding it, clothing it, washing it, providing it with shelter, providing for its old age, paying its doctor bills, giving it things to see and hear and taste and feel and smell. It is this fleshly body of death that interferes with all our communion and intercourse with God. It is the body of death which would sleep when God would have us watch and pray, which would eat when God would have us fast. Its lusts are never satisfied, its worm dieth not, and its fires are not quenched. Who can wonder that Paul cried in despair, "Who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" Rom. 7:24. I think the battle is three parts won and the victory assured the moment a man sees that the flesh is the body and the body is dead, just as God told Adam it would be. So the body is dead because of sin, but the spirit is alive because of righteousness - His righteousness, of course, for there is none other, the righteousness that comes with Him when we believe in Him and He gives us Himself and with Himself His life.
Since, then, our spirits are alive because of the indwelling Christ, Paul leads us on to another marvelous hope and truth which I fear thousands of earnest Christians are failing to see. Paul's statement, "The body is dead because of sin, but the spirit is life (alive) because of righteousness," is followed by this very precious and understandable conclusion: "If the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ shall also quicken (make alive) your mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in you." Rom. 8:11.

Paul is not speaking of that which we often refer to as divine healing. I am well aware that the sick bodies of countless thousands of God's people have been touched by the power of God and returned to physical health. I have witnessed too many cases of healing during my own life to ever dare deny that fact. Nevertheless Paul, in Rom. 8:11, is not speaking of divine healing, which at best is simply the restoration of natural health. He is speaking of a life far, far beyond the natural. He is showing us that the only real life anywhere is that life of Christ, which has already made our spirits alive. If, therefore, we will cease to concentrate on physical life and physical well-being, which in the final analysis is only death, and concentrate instead on the life which He is, then a strange and wonderful thing will begin to manifest itself in our bodies. We will discover to our joy that the life which He is is also quickening and making alive our mortal bodies and that here and now that same Christ-life that made our spirits alive is giving life to our bodies as well as they become partakers of the resurrection which He is. Thus it comes to pass that He who raised up Christ from the dead now makes alive our mortal bodies by His Spirit that indwells us. This is the first step to resurrection and incorruption.

I am sick and tired of all the phony advertisements of healing meetings and of all the lying statements about miracle men and miracle women and great men of faith and God's men of the hour. I am repulsed by front cover pictures of great healers with their microphones in hand and crowds of people being prayed over. In the first place most of it is merely show business or a wonder that happened somewhere else a long way off from where we live. These are gimmicks to attract bigger crowds with bigger offerings, and buy more books, and get more excited over more grandiose schemes that had their origin in the scheming heads of carnal men. They glamorize the healing of one man who could have been as well healed had his wife or neighbor prayed for him, but they never mention the tens of thousands who go away as they came, with their vessels empty. These large, super, and giant miracle men are the lying wonders of our age. Do not seek to be like them nor seek to follow them. Their mouths are open sepulchers. Their tongues pour out deceits. Their hearts are far from God. They cause people to go awhoring after the healing of "this body of death," but they never teach the people the boundless truth that "if the Spirit of Him that raised up Christ from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ from the dead will also quicken your mortal body by His Spirit that dwelleth in you." Concentrate on Christ, my friend and brother, and the resurrection life assured you by His indwelling Spirit, and forget about the momentary reviving of a dead carcass, which is indeed the body of death. If, instead of running hither and yon to some spectacular meeting to give ear to a highly paid, highly advertised man whose interest in you depends largely on the size of your wallet, you would spend those hours in communion with Christ, listening to His secret instruction and touching Him who is Himself the resurrection and the life, you would soon find that the Spirit of Him who raised up Christ from the dead would begin to give resurrection life to your mortal flesh. A change that this world has seldom seen would begin to take place as the mortal felt the pull of immortality and the corruptible tasted the power of incorruption and endless life.

Do you remember that Paul spoke of Jesus, saying, "Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto...?" 1 Tim. 6:16. It is here in this blest communion with Christ that the life of Jesus becomes manifest in our mortal flesh. 2 Cor. 4:10-11. The world and believers as well are filled with the harmful imagination that, as long as we are physically well and can run here and there unhampered and unhindered by any disability, capable of enjoying the good things of life, partaking of the pleasures offered to us on every side, we are without doubt among those happy people who are really enjoying life and getting the most out of it. But it seems we have forgotten that Paul gave forth some truth that gives the lie to all such folly and falsehood when he said, "She that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth." 1 Tim. 5:6. People who are healthy and well-to-do and capable of much worldly pleasures imagine they are enjoying life and seeing many good days, but the real truth is that they are dead while they live just as God told Adam he would be and as Paul clearly stated in the quotation above, and as we, too, have endeavored to show.

There is not a man on the face of the earth who can even remotely comprehend the extent of the horror, the loneliness and debasement into which Jesus Christ came when for our sakes He entered the realm of death. Should we mortals endeavor to describe the humiliation, or even try to understand it, we would succeed only in marring the wonder of it. The inspired men who wrote the epistles, the gospels, and the prophecies of scripture make little or no attempt to describe that which is indescribable, but satisfy themselves instead with a few majestic statements which hide forever within themselves their infinite truth and meaning. "Ye know the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ," said Paul, "that though He was rich, yet for your sakes He became poor, that ye through His poverty might be rich." 2 Cor. 8:9. God alone could ever reveal the boundless truth that lies hidden in this statement, which with one hand embraces the riches of the unseen and eternal where all is life and with the other partakes of the poverty and degradation of fallen man in all his sin and death. "Being in the form of God, He thought it not robbery to be equal with God, but made Himself of no reputation and took upon Himself the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men; and being found in fashion as a man, He humbled Himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross."

Earth's voices must fall silent here, for they will never be able to tell the story of the humiliation He willingly suffered when He, who was life itself, laid aside the life of the ages to partake of death for our sakes. I would have said that such a divesting Himself of the life of the ages would be impossible had He not said, "I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again." John 10:18. My dead eyes can only receive light, but His eyes are as lamps of fire, Dan. 10:6, and everywhere He looks they give light. My ears can receive sound only, but when He hears He gives understanding. My dead words can only kill; His words are life and give both life and spirit to all who hear them.

There is a great difference between the man who lies in the coffin and the man who stands beside it, yet both alike are dead. But He who alone is life, having never touched death, humbled Himself for our sakes and became obedient unto death. He stooped to die and lived thirty-three and one half years in it. Then at the end He went to the cross and there expired in separation from God the Father, the only one in the universe who fully understood His humiliation. He who was the richest became the poorest; the holiest became sin. He whom angels eternally praised was despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, "a worm and no man, a reproach of men and despised of the people. All they that see Me laugh Me to scorn: they shoot out the lip, they shake the head, saying, He trusted on the Lord that He would deliver Him: let Him deliver Him, seeing He delighted in Him ... I am poured out like water, and all My bones are out of joint: My heart is like wax; it is melted in the midst of My bowels. My strength is dried up like a potsherd; and My tongue cleaveth to My jaws; and Thou hast brought Me into the dust of death." Psa. 22:6-8,14,15. With these and many other words the psalmist David describes the humiliation and pitiful loneliness of the thirty-three years of our Lord's death.

There is a truth written in Hebrews, chapter 5 and verse 7, concerning the death of Christ, which I think has gone entirely unnoticed and completely unexplained. I do not think you have ever heard the explanation of it that I will now present. The verse reads thus: "Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec, Who in the days of His flesh, when He had offered up prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears unto Him that was able to save Him from death, and was heard in that He feared." Heb. 5:6,7. We will not speak of the priesthood of Melchisedec at present, who here is the type, but of Jesus Christ, who is the anti-type. The passage says that He (Jesus) in the days of His flesh offered up prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears unto Him who was able to save Him from death, and was heard in that He feared. Now the general interpretation of this passage is that the cross with all its dreadful horror was the cup He dreaded, and that His flesh shrank from it and the death it entailed. But I think we are all very careless readers of God's word, for in reality this passage says no such thing and the meaning is opposite to what has been taught. Did you notice that it says He offered up prayers to Him who was able to save Him from death, and was heard in that He feared? Now, if He prayed that He might be saved from death, and was heard, then His prayer must have been answered and God must have saved Him from death. What was it that He feared? Was it the cross? No, a thousand times no! What He feared was the terrible possibility that He might not go to the cross and so be obliged to remain more years in the horror of this death. Already He had spent thirty-three years in the terror and horror of its clutches and the greatest dread of His life was that He might continue in it longer still. Therefore, with strong crying and tears He offered up prayer to God that He might be saved from death and He was heard in that He feared. When He expired on the cross, He passed from the realm of death to the realm of life, and on the resurrection side of the tomb He cried in triumph, "Behold, I am alive for evermore." Rev. 1:18. God had certainly heard and answered His prayer.
And now I believe I see more clearly than I have ever done why it was that Paul, who, as you and I do, still dwelt in this hellish realm of death, cried out, "God forbid that I should glory save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me and I unto the world." It was not the cross that Jesus feared but the possibility that somehow it might escape Him or He might escape it and thus be condemned to spend further years in this torturous prison house of death. You will no longer fear the cross when once you see that it alone can save you from this realm of death and corruption in which you have always lived. The cross was Christ's door of exit from the realm of death, and it has now become your deliverance also. The cup, which Jesus dreaded most of all as He prayed in the garden was that final, fearsome, indescribable phase of death which would separate Him from His Father. The most heart rending and terrible cry ever to shake the gates of Paradise was expressed in those climactic moments of His thirty-three years of death. "My God, My God, why hast Thou foresaken Me?" Everyone in heaven and earth had forsaken Him, and now God, His Father, too.

I think the interpretation I have given above is the correct one, and that this is the true meaning of the passage is well confirmed by Weymouth, who translates it thus: "Jesus during His earthly life offered up prayers and entreaties, crying aloud and weeping as He pleaded with Him who was able to bring Him in safety oat of death, and He was delivered from the terror from which He shrank." Heb. 5:7. We must conclude, therefore, that His prayers were not that He might be saved from the cross, but rather from that whole realm of death into which He willingly came to fulfill His blessed part in that purpose devised of God before the ages were formed. His death extended from that moment when He divested Himself of His glory and made Himself of no reputation, was born of a woman in Bethlehem, and was made in the form of man to dwell in the fashion of a man, and in all points to become obedient unto the full extent of man's death. Until we enter fully into the glorious realm of life, we will never know nor fully understand how deep was the humiliation He suffered when for our sakes He tasted a whole lifetime of death, which Paul so aptly describes as the days of His flesh. Heb. 5:7.

Deliverance from the power of self is without doubt the hottest and hardest fought battle that will ever be fought during the lifetime of any man, and the greatest ally of self is the flesh. We are filled with self confidence, self esteem, self defense, self vindication, self seeking, self centeredness, self inspection, self pleasing, self choosing, self assertiveness, self respect, self boasting, self expression, self indulgence, self satisfaction, self admiration, self congratulation, self excusing, self justification, self righteousness, self complacency, self reflection, self love and selfishness. But, if we can see that self and the flesh are already dead things, existing in the realm of death only, then with what joyful abandon can we assign them to the cross, knowing, as Jesus did, that the cross and the cross alone is the God-sent causeway from the realm of death across to the realm of life.

The fearful agony and bloody sweat of our blessed Saviour was not because He feared the cross and desired if possible to be saved from it, but rather that He feared and loathed His prison house of death in which He had been confined all the days of His flesh and now He longed for the cross and reached out eagerly to embrace this final hour of death's agony, for beyond it was life, even the life of the ages, which He had laid down when He came to the world and of which He had said, "I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again." As He faced the cross, He said, "I have glorified Thee on the earth: I have finished the work which Thou gavest Me to do. And now, O Father, glorify Thou Me with Thine own self with the glory which I had with Thee before the world was." John 17:4-5. And shall not we who now face and share His cross look upon it as our deliverance from this hateful realm of death, this prison house into which by disobedience we came? The strong crying and tears of the blessed Christ that He might be delivered from this realm of death made Him the princely fore-runner and deliverer of all those who long to be delivered from death and pass from death across to life. This is He who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despised the shame, and is set down at the right hand of God. Heb. 12:2.

Because of the almost unspeakable importance of the theme we are discussing and because of the life-giving transformation the revelation of it is working in my own life, our time will be well spent in enlarging somewhat upon it; and, though we cannot hope to exhaust such a boundless theme, we know that all who think upon it will find many things falling into place which before seemed impossible to explain. In this light, then, let us notice a few important statements of scripture. In Col. 1:18 Jesus Christ is called the "firstborn from the dead." In the Emphatic Diaglott the direct translation is that He is the "firstborn out of the dead ones." And again in Phil. 3:11 where Paul says, "If by any means I may attain to the resurrection of the dead," the Diaglott translates his words, "If possibly I may attain to the resurrection out of the dead ones." The "dead ones" Paul speaks of here are actually the people we have thought of all our lives as living ones. These are people who are walking about, eating and drinking and being merry, people who, like the pleasure-loving woman of 1 Tim. 5:6, are dead while they live. Paul well knew that there is a resurrection coming in the future, but he also knew that, if he became thoroughly identified with Christ here and now, it would be possible for him, without tasting the grave at all, to attain the resurrection - not from the grave, but from among the dead ones, the people among whom he dwelt every day. We have good reason to believe that John attained this "out resurrection" and perhaps many others as well, but it cannot be attained by anything but complete identification with the death and the resurrection of Christ. I have not attained it and I know of none now on earth who have, but that does not bar its possibility in these closing hours of the age when death has seized upon all.

Paul in his sermon at Antioch, speaking of the resurrection of the dead, made the clear statement that Christ, being raised from the dead, would never again return to corruption. See Acts 13:34. Now, since He did not see corruption in the grave (see verse 35), then the corruption Paul referred to was certainly his thirty-three and one half years of death, or the days of His flesh.

"Forasmuch, then, as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, He also Himself likewise took part of the same; that through death He might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil; and deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage." Heb. 2:14-15. Had we understood what death really is, and had we known that this, which we call life is naught but death, then Paul could profitably have written, "And deliver them who through all their death time were subject to bondage." We are, indeed, terribly and horribly in bondage to the body of this death, and with us the whole creation is groaning, waiting for the day when the sons of God will deliver them from the bondage of corruption. In this (the body of death) we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house, which is from heaven that we might not be found naked. That nakedness is the condition in which Adam found himself when death seized upon him. He had lost that clothing of life the moment he had sinned. Man alone of all God's creatures has to wear clothes to cover his nakedness. Every dress or suit we buy testifies loudly that life has departed from us and we are naked and in death. Therefore we desire not to be naked, but clothed upon, that that which is mortal may be swallowed up of life.

Our blessed Lord Jesus Christ, by partaking of death during the days of His flesh and ending all death on the cross of Calvary, has brought to light both life and immortality. He is the blessed and only potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords; who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light, which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see. 1 Tim. 6:15,16. But fear not; for, though no man hath seen immortality but Christ, yet His immortality has gained immortality for us all. He "hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began, but is now made manifest by the appearing of our Saviour Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death, abolished, abolished, abolished - and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." 2 Tim. 1:9-10. Oh, read it and re-read it and rejoice in it with joy unspeakable and full of glory! Through His thirty-three years of death He hath abolished death and through the power of His glorious resurrection He has brought both life and immortality to light.

There is no greater theme in all the Bible than the theme of the resurrection. It would seem to be the crowning truth of the plan of redemption, for, "if when we were enemies we were reconciled by the death of His Son, how much more shall we be saved by His life." Rom. 5:10. It is plain to see that from the indisputable fact that there will be a resurrection unto life we can only conclude that the life we now live in the flesh or in the body is in reality naught but death. So Paul, speaking of the glory of the resurrection, says, "Behold, I show you a mystery: We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. (Even the dead who do not sleep in the grave.) For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting, O grave, where is thy victory?" 1 Cor. 15:51-55. It would be quite impossible to express a thought more clearly than Paul has done here. The words of this text show with utmost clarity that our present mortality and our present corruptibility are naught but death. Think of it. Meditate upon it and love this realm of death no more. Therefore he says, "When this corruptible shall have put on incorruption and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall death be swallowed up in victory." I do not need to argue with any man to prove our present mortality. We are all aware of our constant and unremitting decay. Therefore, when Paul, speaking by the Spirit, teaches that, when this mortal puts on immortality, death is swallowed up, then that should certainly prove to us that death and mortality is one and the same thing. The terms are synonymous. Gloring in this blessed fact the apostle rejoices triumphantly with his two-fold question: O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The long years of our death have been nothing but a sting and every grave that swallowed us up at the end has been a seeming victory, but in the moment of immortality at the resurrection of the just the saints will shout in triumph over both death and the grave.

Jesus told us that the gates of hell should not prevail against His church. Gates, I am sure you understand, are not weapons which we use to batter down walls but gates are bars and bars are to keep some people out and other people in. But they will not prevail either to keep us in death, to keep us in the grave, or to keep us in hell, for the gates of hell shall not prevail against it (the true church). O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? O gates of hell, thou shall not prevail!

I wish now to make plain a subject about which there is nothing but ignorance in all Christendom. I speak regarding the second death. The Bible is very clear in its teaching that there are two resurrections. Jesus told us that the hour was coming when all who were in the graves would hear the voice of the Son of God and would come forth, they that had done good unto the resurrection of life, and they that had done evil unto the resurrection of condemnation. Daniel, writing long before, spoke of the resurrection, saying, "Many that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life and some to shame and age-lasting contempt." When John received the revelation of the end times, the truth was clearly revealed to him that these two resurrections, one of the just and the other of the unjust, would be one thousand years apart. He wrote in the book of Revelation saying, "And I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years. But the rest of the dead (the unconverted and wicked dead) lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection. Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with Him a thousand years." Only the blessed and holy have part in this first resurrection. Rev. 20:4-6.

It is very plain from this passage of scripture that the first resurrection, which is the resurrection of the saints, will take place at the coming of Christ and before the one thousand year kingdom of God, but that the rest of the dead (the unrighteous and wicked) do not live again until the one thousand year kingdom age is over. It is also clear from these verses that all the just are raised to life in the first resurrection and all the wicked are raised to death at the second resurrection and will then partake of the second death similar to the death we now endure. Therefore it is written, "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power." None of those who overcome during this present age of death will ever be hurt of the second death. Rev. 2:11 This word hurt is most significant, and we shall enlarge upon it before the ending of the study.

Whereas so few people have understood that our present existence is, in fact, the first death, it is only normal that they would be in even greater darkness regarding the second death. I think that we have made it very clear from scripture that this life, which we now live in the flesh is in truth not life at all, but death. Whether we live a few days or one hundred years, it is death, decay, corruption, change, aches, pains, sorrow, heartache, sickness, war, travail, dispute, graft, greed, and every terrible calamity and heartache imaginable. Indeed, as I mentioned above, it has been a hurt from beginning to end. There are not enough nouns or adjectives in all the languages of earth to fitly describe the abominable hurt of this present death. This death, which we all have suffered and which we still suffer, is indeed the first death, but, thank God, the people who have received Jesus Christ - for they alone are blessed and holy and they alone are righteous - will never know or experience any more of death. Death will have no more dominion over them and the grave will have no more victory over them.
There is coming a wonderful day when there shall be no more death. In that day "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away." Rev. 21:4. Now, when the God of all truth tells His people that a blessed day is coming in which there will be no more death, then all our faith and all our doctrine must be adjusted to fit His immutable word. If it is God's word that a day is coming when there is no more death, then it is plainly evident to anyone with eyes to see that there will be no more death of any kind, whether it be the first death or the second death, or whatsoever other death there could possibly be, for all death of whatsoever sort will be obliterated from God's glorious redeemed and restored universe. The moment death has served its purpose in God's plan of things it will be done away and never again through all eternity will its power be felt. It is not only John who writes that there will be no more death, but Paul also, speaking with mighty words of inspiration and confirmation, declared, "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." 1 Cor. 15:26. It follows, therefore, that, if death is to be destroyed, then there will be no more death, as John so clearly stated in Rev. 21:4.

It was through Adam that all fell into death, for in Adam all die. It is in Christ that all are made alive. Thus Paul wrote, saying, "for as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." 1 Cor. 15:22. "But, every man in his own order, (like soldiers marching in platoons and companies), Christ the firstfruits, afterward they that are His at His coming. Then cometh the end, when He shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father..." 1 Cor. 15:22-24. Therefore, in the resurrection we have three phases or orders in which men are restored to life: First, Christ the firstfruits; second, they that are His at His coming; third, the end, that is the end or final part of the resurrection, when all shall be raised to life and all have departed from death forever through Christ.

Someone will surely ask me, "How is it then that 'the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death'," as stated in Rev. 21:8? This question is most legitimate and certainly deserves an answer; for, if the lake of fire is such as people have imagined it to be then all our understanding would be in jeopardy. Christians through the tradition they have received have pictured the lake of fire to be some vast, seething, flaming lake, perhaps bigger than the world itself, into which God will throw every useless and unmanageable thing. But I do not think it is such as that. If I am not mistaken, the verse we have quoted above explains itself by telling us with great simplicity that the lake of fire is "the second death." Is that not what the apostle said and also what he meant when he wrote that certain people would have their part in the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone, "which is the second death"? We must conclude from this passage, then, that the lake of fire is the second death.

Furthermore, with regard to this lake of fire and brimstone, it is of utmost importance that we clearly understand what sort of fire it is that is referred to here and what this brimstone (or sulphur) really is. God pity us that the tradition of an apostate church system has foisted the crude notion upon us that would have us believe that the lake of fire is a stinking lake of raging flames and vile sulphurous fumes, filled with devils and the piercing shrieks of the doomed rending the universal sky in hopelessness forevermore. Such crude notions are not the truth and are an insulting and outrageous affront to the wisdom and the love and the glory of God.

A simple look at the original language of the New Testament will assure us beyond doubt that this lake of fire has nothing whatever to do with that which we commonly call fire. It is not natural fire; it is spiritual, as we shall show. In the Acts of the Apostles, chapter 28:2-3, we have this statement: "They kindled a fire, and received us every one." In this simple passage the original Greek word used for fire is "pura" and the word signifies natural fire. There is no doubt in all the world that the fire these kind barbarians lit to warm these rescued sailors was a simple camp fire such as we have so often seen. It was ordinary natural fire. But, when the day of Pentecost was fully come and there appeared unto them cloven tongues like fire, the Greek word is "pur," which is spiritual, the fire of God, the fire of the Holy Spirit, the fire which God Himself actually is, for our God is a consuming fire. Heb. 12:29. When we consider the marvelous, fiery purging that took place at Pentecost, delivering these baptized men from self and carnality as none other in history has been delivered and empowered, then we better understand the purpose of the fire of God and what it does for those who are touched by its power.
Now the point I wish to make clear and forceful is simply this: The Greek word pur, which has reference to the fire of God, or spiritual fire, in Acts 2:3, is exactly the same word that is used in Rev. 21:8 where it is stated that certain ones were cast into the lake of fire. Furthermore, this word pur is the same word used by John the Baptist when he said, "He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire." Matt. 3:11. Other places where the word pur (spiritual fire) is used may be found in Matt. 3:12; 5:22; Acts 2:19; I Cor. 3:13,15; Heb. 1:7; Rev. 3:18; 8:5, 14:10, and many others. The word brimstone or sulphur is derived from the Greek word theion. The word means divine fire or sulphur. (See Young's Analytical Concordance, page 116.) Examples of the word are found in Rev. 14:10; 19:20; 20:10; 21:8.

How then can we doubt the indisputable fact that the lake of fire is a spiritual lake filled with spiritual fire - the same fire indeed with which the disciples were baptized at Pentecost, though the purpose was different? The same Greek word pur is used in both cases. This lake of fire, then, is the second death. The life we now live in the flesh is the first death. It is a realm of fiery trials that are to try those of us who in this dispensation had our names in the book of life and were chosen to be saved in this age. For all such there will be no second death. That is reserved for the fearful and the unbelieving, and for them it will endure until that marvelous day when throughout all God's universe the proclamation shall go forth, "There shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away."

"And He that sat upon the throne said, Behold I make all things new. And He said unto me, Write: for these words are true and faithful." Rev. 21:5. "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with Him a thousand years." Rev. 20:6. "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away." Rev. 21:4. Well has Paul spoken, saying, "In the dispensation of the fullness of times God will gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven and which are in earth." Eph. 1:10. And John, as if to shout Amen, wrote later to say, "And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it: for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb was the light thereof. And the nations of them, which are saved shall walk in the light of it: and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honor into it. And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day: for there shall be no night there." Rev. 21:23-25.

CHAPTER FIVE AFAR OFF AND BROUGHT NIGH

Oh, my Father, Thou that dwellest
In a high and glorious place,
When shall I regain Thy presence
And again behold Thy face?
In Thy holy habitation
Did my spirit once reside?
In my first primeval childhood
Was I nurtured by Thy side?

For a wise and glorious purpose
Thou hast made me here on earth
And withheld the recollection
Of my former friends and birth.
But at times the secret something Whispers, "You're a stranger here;"
And I feel that I have wandered
From a more exalted sphere.

Oh, my Father, Thou that dwellest
In a high and glorious place,
Yet shall I appear before Thee
And again behold Thy face.
Day by day Thy Spirit leadeth
Ever onward onto Thee, Till at last I'll find contentment In Thy pure reality.

"Now in Christ Jesus ye who were sometimes afar off are made nigh by the blood of Christ."

Many centuries ago the apostle Paul uttered one of the most profound statements of truth that ever fell upon the listening ear of mankind. He had been teaching that the Lord with wisdom and understanding had called Israel to be a special people for His name. Then he recounted their acts of rebellion against Him, showing how they fell for a season from their God-appointed place to wander into all manner of corruption, idolatry and sin - so much so that He cast them from their special place, saying to Israel, "All day long have I stretched forth My hands unto a disobedient and gainsaying people." Rom. 10:21. But, lest we should imagine that God had cast them away forever, the apostle hastened with assuring words to ask, "Hath God cast away His people? God forbid. For I also am an Israelite, of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin. God hath not cast away His people which He foreknew..." Rom. 11:1-2.

Should the reader be a Christian brother or a man who has not as yet received the grace of God in his heart, it is my earnest prayer that the Holy Spirit will enlighten his eyes to understand that God's ways are not our ways, neither are His thoughts our thoughts, for as heaven is higher than the earth, so are His ways higher than our ways and His thoughts than our thoughts. But let us be assured that He whose wisdom is greater than angels is even now causing all things to work together for good to them who are the called according to His purpose. In like manner also to those who are strangers to His love and grace He declares, "The steps of a man are ordered by the Lord." Psa. 37:23. The word good in the text is a supplied word and not in the original.

With these lofty thoughts of God in our minds, knowing that His ways and methods are higher and better than our own, our hearts respond with joyful accord when Paul in wisdom shows that it was God's intention that all mankind should come to know Him through faith in God's Christ and not through their own works of righteousness. Therefore, exalting mightily the grace of God rather than the works of man, he wrote to the Gentiles these almost incredible words of faith: "For God hath concluded them all in unbelief, that He might have mercy upon all. O the depths of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable are His judgments, and His ways past finding out! For who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who hath been His counselor? Or who hath first given to Him, and it shall be recompensed unto him again? For of Him, and through Him, and to Him, are all things: to whom be glory for ever. Amen." Rom. 11:32-36. The clearest possible rendering of the final verses of Romans eleven is found in the translation by Goodspeed, which in verses 34-36 gives this clear wording: "Who has ever known the Lord's thoughts or advised Him? Or who has advanced anything to Him for which he will have to be repaid? For/raw Him everything comes, through Him everything exists, and in Him everything ends."

Somewhere hidden in the spirit of every man there abides the secret knowledge that we came forth from God, even as this text forcefully declares. This, too, is the thought so beautifully expressed by the poet in the idyll quoted on page one.

"In Thy holy habitation
Did my spirit once reside?
In my first primeval childhood
Was I nurtured by Thy side?"

I shall be surprised indeed in that glory world above should we find that these blessed words of Christ, spoken of Himself, do not in truth apply to us all: "I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world: again, I leave the world and go to the Father." John 16:28. Far away in the depths of my ransomed being there is a chord that vibrates in response to the words, "I came forth from the Father and am come into the world," and that same chord responds again to the words,

"Again, I leave the world and go to the Father."
"Yet shall I appear before Thee

We came forth from God, our orbit leading us from the celestial to the terrestrial. There can be no doubt of that; and by faith we know that this same orbit will guide us again from the realm of the terrestrial back to the bosom of the Father, for from Him everything originally comes, through Him everything now exists, and in Him everything will ultimately end. Glory to God forever! Amen!

My spirit rejoices today in thankfulness to my Father in heaven that many years ago He let me hear a secret from His own heart, a secret that few in our generation have ever understood. When He breathed it into my listening heart, it well nigh stunned me because of my tradition and unbelief, yet I could not doubt the truth He taught me when He said, "The creation was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him who has subjected the same in hope." Rom. 8:20. I was thunderstruck by these words because for years teachers and preachers had instilled the very opposite into my mind. They taught that man through disobedience had ruined the plan of God and God was hard put to the test to devise some alternate scheme by which He might salvage some small part of the deplorable wreckage the devil had accomplished. But when I heard the voice of the omniscient Lord, speaking from the throne of His own omnipotence, taking upon Himself all responsibility for the vanity and error into which His creatures had fallen, my heart was amazed in His presence and for the first time in my life the "purpose of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will" began to unfold to my enlightened spirit.

It is when man begins to see purpose in the fall that he truly begins to love God. A purposeless God could not be loved by anyone, but He is dearly loved by those who have seen that we have obtained an inheritance in Him, "being predestined according to the purpose of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will." Eph. 1:11. "Unto me, who am less than the least of all saints, is this grace given, that I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ; and to make all men see what is the fellowship of the mystery, which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God, who created all things by Jesus Christ: to the intent that now unto the principalities and powers in heavenly places might be known by the church the manifold wisdom of God, according to the eternal purpose which He purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord." Eph. 3:8-11.

As dew distilling from the mighty ocean falls in snow and ice upon the rugged mountain, there to remain in the grip of glacial death for a thousand years or more until released at last by the warmth of the sun to race down the mountain side in rushing torrents of water and join a thousand babbling brooks to expand into a mighty river and flow into the eternal seas, so as a mist has the spirit of man gone forth from the presence of God. Buffeted by the frigid winds of earth, he learns the lessons before ordained by the wisdom of God, and when the Sun of righteousness shines upon him, freeing his spirit from the icy bondages of the flesh, cleansing him by the power of the blood of Christ, he returns to God whence he came, not empty and alone, but as a mighty river, once again to become one with the ocean of God's self.

Thus, sinner friend of this vain world, we find ourselves "far off from God. Like the prodigal son we have been left to wander wanderings that have brought us to a far country. So far away from God are we that never in a thousand years could we find our way back to Him. "All we like sheep have gone astray. We have turned every one to his own way." Our own willfulness has led us into a far country, far, far away from God. I do not know into what part of this far country you have come, but all around about on every hand in every walk of life men and women roam by the millions who are far away from God. As a wayward son in carelessness and willfulness leaves his parents and his home to waste his substance in riotous living, never bothering to contact father or mother or friends who formerly loved him, forgetting to pray or turn his footsteps home again, neglecting to write or phone or inform anyone of his whereabouts, so mankind has turned away from God to wander off in the wilderness of disobedience and seek pleasure where pleasure can never be found.

Just how far our unbelieving hearts have led us in our wandering is clearly stated in the word of God. Before ever man can return to the Lord, he must be awakened by the Holy Spirit to his sinful condition; otherwise his eyes will never be opened to see himself as God sees him. It is a most amazing thing to find that men who all their lives have been content to rest in their own self righteousness suddenly see themselves as the cheapest of sinners when the Holy Spirit shows them how far from God they really are. The apostle Paul, before his conversion, lived in close contact with the law. He did his utmost to conform to its precepts in every way. When it pleased God to reveal His Son, Jesus Christ, to him, immediately he saw himself as the chief of sinners in need of repentance and cleansing. After his conversion to Christ he wrote these immortal words: "Though I might also have confidence in the flesh. If any other man thinketh that he hath whereof he might trust in the flesh, I more: Circumcised the eighth day, of the stock of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, an Hebrew of the Hebrews; as touching the law, a Pharisee; concerning zeal, persecuting the church; touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless. But what things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ. Yea, doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ." Phil. 3:4-8.

There is no value whatever in recounting our own righteousnesses before the Lord. He pays no attention to them at all, accounting them to be as filthy rags. It is a great detriment to any man to depend upon his own works of righteousness, because that makes him trust in a lie. Better far it would be to learn the truth of the scripture which clearly states, "All our righteousnesses are as filthy rags." Isa. 64:6. How well that truth was emphasized by Jesus Christ when He told how two men went up into the temple to pray, the one a Pharisee and the other a publican. The Pharisee, looking confidently up to heaven, no doubt with sanctimonious face and folded hands, said, "God, I thank Thee that I am not as other men are, extortioners; unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican. I fast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess." But the publican, standing afar off, would not so much as lift up his eyes to heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, "God, be merciful to me a sinner." And Jesus said, "I tell you, this man went down to his house justified rather than the other." Luke 18:10-14. It is written that whosoever confesses and forsakes his sin shall find mercy of the Lord. Prov. 28:13. "Sacrifice and offering Thou wouldst not, else would I give it," wept David as he begged the forgiveness of his sin, knowing that a broken and a contrite heart the Lord would not despise. O that sinners would confess their sin to God! Then would the blood of Christ cleanse them thoroughly from all iniquity, give them a new heart, and put a right spirit within them.

Not only did we sinners find ourselves far off from God, but our sorry plight was greatly emphasized by the solemn fact that we were without God and without Christ and without hope. Paul writing to Gentile Christians, fervently reminded them of their former lives and hopeless state. "Wherefore remember," he said, "that ye being in time past Gentiles in the flesh, who were called the Uncircumcision by that which is called the Circumcision in the flesh made by hands; that at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world." Eph. 2:11-12.

A man is certainly in sad predicament when he discovers that he is without God and without hope, yet it is in this very condition that we all find ourselves when we are awakened to our sinfulness and our dire need of the redeeming grace of Jesus Christ our Lord. No one in the universe knows as God our Father knows that all His sheep have gone astray and have become lost upon the mountains of sin and unbelief. It was because of our lost state that Jesus Christ came into the world, saying, "I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." "This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners; of whom I am chief." 1 Tim. 1:15.

Many and wonderful were the parables spoken by our Lord during His ministry upon the earth. Each and every one of them bears in itself some special truth that the Lord would convey to mankind. In the fifteenth chapter of the gospel of Luke three parables are given - the parable of the lost sheep, the parable of the lost coin, and the parable of the lost son. These three parables, following each other as they do, are given in succession that the teaching of each might complement the other. Together they show how really far off from God and hopelessly lost we sinners really are. The parable of the lost sheep shows that a man is lost naturally. The parable of the lost coin shows that a man is lost hopelessly; and the parable of the lost son shows that a man is lost willfully.

Centuries ago the prophet Isaiah cried, "All we like sheep have gone astray. We have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on Him (Jesus Christ) the iniquity of us all."

Many creatures of the animal kingdom are possessed of a remarkable sense of direction, so much so that it is almost impossible to lose them. Cats and dogs, for instance, can be blindfolded and carried many miles away. from home, but will find their way back again. We have in Saskatchewan record of a cat that returned from the west coast of British Columbia about a thousand miles away, finding its way back home over mountains and prairies, arriving almost starved and at the point of death. Birds speed their way through the trackless air to some pin-point of an island in the distant seas. Horses, given rein in a prairie blizzard, will guide a lost one home. But man soon loses his sense of direction and when lost is prone to walk in circles or perchance in the opposite direction entirely. Thus, like a sheep, he is soon lost, goes astray, and turns to his own way.

True as this picture is in the natural realm, it is even truer in the spiritual realm. Man simply cannot find his way back to God. He is lost by nature. He is naturally lost and ever prone to go astray. What other reason could be given for man's constant tendency to move farther and farther away from God? Why does even a child, left to his own devices, wander from one sin to another, each day going a little deeper and a little farther beyond his depth until he is held captive in the vise-like grip of sin? Men, like sheep, are prone to wander and easily go astray, and were it not for the Good Shepherd, who calls His sheep by name, they would perish without hope and without God in the world.

I was straying when Christ found me
In the night so dark and cold;
Tenderly His arm went round me
And bore me to His fold.

That, I know, will be the testimony from the myriad ranks of the redeemed in the ages yet to come. "We who were afar off have been brought nigh through the blood of Christ." So as sheep are lost naturally, man is also lost naturally. "Behold, I was shapen in iniquity; and in sin did my mother conceive me," wept David when he saw the awfulness of his plight in the sight of the Lord. Then, seeing his need of a transformation from above, he cried, "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me."

Many years ago while yet a little boy I saw scrawled upon a wall a cartoon in which the unknown cartoonist had pictured in a straight line these six things: a baby bottle, a set of playing blocks, a deck of cards, a cigarette, a whiskey bottle, and a skull and cross bones. Underneath he had scrawled this nomenclature: Life is one... thing after another. Though I was but a boy when I saw it, I was greatly impressed, and since I have come to know the Bible and have seen man's natural tendency to go astray, wandering from one sin to another, finally to die in despair without God and without hope, I realized how forcefully that transient artist had portrayed a life lived without the redeeming power of the Son of God.

"I am the good shepherd," Jesus said. "The good shepherd giveth His life for the sheep." "I am the good shepherd, and know My sheep, and am known of Mine. As the Father knoweth Me, even so know I the Father: and I lay down My life for the sheep. And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear My voice: and there shall be one fold and one shepherd." John 10:11,14-16. "What man of you, having an hundred sheep, if he lose one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness, and go after that which is lost, until he find it? And when he hath found it, he layeth it on his shoulders rejoicing. And when he cometh home, he calleth together his friends and one shepherd. And when he cometh home, he calleth together his friends and one shepherd. And he saith unto them, Rejoice with me; for I have found my sheep which was lost. I say unto you, that likewise joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine just persons, which need no repentance." Luke 15:4-7.

The shepherd went out and sought for his sheep,
And all through the night on the rocky steep
He sought till he found it;
With love bands he bound it,
And I was that one lost sheep.

Now the lost coin was lost in an entirely different way. Though it was not lost naturally, yet, being lost, it was lost both helplessly and hopelessly. There it lay in the crevice into which it had rolled when it had fallen from its owner's purse. It could never of itself return to its original place, because it had neither power of speech nor means by which it could raise itself. The lost coin was doomed to lie forever where it was, as many a lost coin is now lying, had not the good woman sought diligently to recover it. Taking her broom in her hand, she swept the floor, searching beneath the rugs and furniture, then sifting through the dust and dirt until at last she saw where it lay, helpless and hopeless to either call or draw near. So she picked it up and returned it to its place in the dowry, rejoicing with her friends that she had found that which she had lost.

Of all the wealth of scripture truth nothing is more certain or clear than the fact that man of himself is both helplessly and hopelessly lost. He cannot find his way back to God if he would and he cannot return in his own righteousness, for all man's righteousnesses are filthy rags in the sight of God. Between unregenerate man and God there is an impassable gulf, making it impossible for him to pass from the realm of the natural to the realm of the spiritual. Not only is man without God; he is also without hope, as we have already seen in the words of Paul: "Having no hope and without God in the world."

The scripture describes unregenerate man as strangers and foreigners to God, men who cannot speak heaven's language, who are not acquainted with the way of the Lord. If we offer sacrifice, it is unacceptable. If we offer works of righteousness, it is but filthy rags. How far off from God is man in such a hopeless state as this! It is immeasurable. But to the glory of God it is plainly written here that the woman who lost the coin lit a candle, and swept the house, and sought diligently until she found it. But find it she did, and in the joy of the moment she called her friends and neighbors together, saying, "Rejoice with me, for I have found the piece which I had lost." Jesus Christ is the light of the world. He is the light that shines in a dark place. To many of us now His light may seem no more than the light of a candle, shining in the darkness of the world, but once His light shines upon us, such a response is created in our dead and dormant hearts that we find ourselves answering, "Here am I, Lord. What wilt Thou have me to do?" When the light of heaven shone down into the hopeless heart of Saul of Tarsus, he heard a voice speaking to him and saying, "Saul, Saul, why persecutes! Thou Me?" And he, crying from the night of his desperate hopelessness, said, "Who art Thou, Lord? What wilt Thou have me to do?" When the light of the candle divine comes shining into the darkened recesses of the soul, that man can never be the same again. Once Jesus, the light of the world, shines upon him, never again will he be satisfied with the outer darkness of this world. In the parable of the lost son we have yet another example of man's depravity and his condition without God, for this boy was lost willfully. He had been raised in the fear of God and had long known the ways of the Lord. His father had instructed him in the way of truth and at his mother's knee he had been taught to pray. As a child he had knelt at the altar of the Lord, expressing his faith and hope in God. He was no stranger to the word of the Lord and the scripture he believed from cover to cover. But like so many before him, he got his eyes off the Lord and began to covet the tinsel about him. He saw and coveted the frivolity and fun the world was having in their unbelief and in his backslidden heart he wanted to run with them. It was a much easier way; everything seemed so happy and gay out there and he seemed to be missing so much. The day soon came when he was of age and could make his own decision. Feeling he had no time to lose, he called his father and said to him, "Father, give me the portion of goods that falleth to me, and he divided unto them his living. And not many days after the younger son gathered all together, and took his journey into a far country, and there wasted his substance in riotous living." O what a time he had! Never had he dreamed the world was such a friendly place, full of so many friendly people, and never before had he found that he himself was such a grand fellow. So he let his money fly in every direction. He had plenty of good hard cash and prodigally he wasted it. The more money he spent the more friends he had, and the more friends the more fun. How glad he was that he had broken free from the restraints of home. "Poor old Dad," thought he, "doesn't know what fun he had been missing."

These things belong to youth
And are its natural right;
My books, my pastimes, and my friends
The merry and the bright.
My Father's heart is kind;
He will not deem it ill
That my small corner of the world Should please and hold me still.

But there came a day when famine raised its ugly head in the land. Things began to go wrong and stark reality began to dawn on him. His money was now gone, and to his utter amazement and chagrin he discovered that once his money was gone his friends were gone, too. Those good pals who had slapped his back and blessed him as a jolly good fellow when he was the life of all their parties were suddenly strangers to him. He had yet to learn the bitter lesson that "every man is a friend to him that giveth gifts"; but "all the brethren of the poor do hate him: how much more do his friends go far from him? He pursueth them with words, yet they are wanting to him." Prov. 19:6-7. The famine increased and none would take him in; neither would any one give anything to him or help him. Ah, my good man! Early in life we must learn the bitter truth that the friendly outstretched hand of the world is not reliable. It will be drawn back the instant you are no longer able to contribute anything to it. For our learning it is written here, "He began to be in want and no man gave unto him." During life we discover that we have few true friends - only the merest handful. They soon forget us and soon neglect us.

When we come to such sorry straits as this, our corrupt carnal mind does not immediately think of returning to God, and the Lord in wisdom does not soon call us back, either. Well He knows how necessary it is for mankind to learn by experience that there is nothing out there in the world but the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life. The sinner must discover for himself that the country into which he had wandered is afar country. His own wickedness will correct him, for he must learn that he is afar off and without hope in the world. When the mighty famine arose, as sooner or later it must do, he went and joined himself to a citizen of that country who sent him into his fields to feed swine. His pay was poor, and, being hungry, he would fain have filled his belly with the husks that the swine did eat, and no man gave unto him. Luke 15:15-16. The young man, who once was a son in his father's house, surrounded by servants and bounty on every hand, now finds himself in afar country surrounded by swine and himself sitting in a corner of the pig-pen, ready to eat the husks that the swine did not eat, for no man gave unto him.

Is it any wonder that Paul speaks of our unregenerate condition as afar off or that Jesus in the parable describes this as a far country? See into what straits his willfulness has brought him and how destitute man becomes when he turns from God to walk the dreary ways of the earth. All its promise is but a fading leaf. It is like a mist that the wind driveth away or as the grass which today springs green in the field, but tomorrow is withered in the heat of the sun. Think not, young man, that youth will abide with you forever, for you will not have gone many steps before silver threads will begin to adorn your brow, and when you look into your mirror, instead of a carefree, smiling youth, you will see a careworn man, fast going the way of all the earth.

It was when the young man was in the swine pen of his extremity that he suddenly came to himself. Now he knew by bitter experience what his inner self knew all along, and when he came to himself, he said, "How many hired servants of my father's have bread enough and to spare, and I perish with hunger; I will arise and go to my father, and will say unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven and before thee, and am no more worthy to be called thy son: make me as one of thy hired servants." So he arose and came to his father, "but when he was yet a great way off, his father saw him, and had compassion, and ran, and fell on his neck, and kissed him. And the son said unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven and in thy sight, and am no more worthy to be called thy son. But the father said to his servants, Bring forth the best robe, and put it on him: and put a ring on his hand and shoes on his feet: and bring hither the fatted calf and kill it; and let us eat, and be merry: for this my son was dead, and is alive again; he was lost and is found. And they began to be merry."

The sound of the sinner's prayer, "I have sinned; God, be merciful to me, a sinner," is like sweet music in the ears of God, for thus saith the Lord, "There is more joy in heaven over one sinner that repenteth than over ninety and nine just persons who need no repentance."

Sinners Jesus will receive!
Sound the word of grace to all
Who the heavenly pathway leave,
All who linger, all who fall.
Christ receiveth sinful men,
Even me with all my sin.
Purged from every spot and stain, Heaven with Him I'll enter in.

Many years ago a young man by the name of Jack Dahl left his home in Norway to seek a new life in Canada. His mother was a godly woman and he a wayward young man. Like so many other young men and women, he longed for the day to come when he could pack up his meager belongings and get away from home. His parents were hard working people and had taught him work and honesty, too, but like so many others he chafed for the day when he could say goodbye, be on his own, and be able to live his life as he pleased without those parental restraints, which he deemed so old-fashioned and unnecessary. In his mind he dreamed of a far away land. He would go to Canada and make his way in that brave new world of promise of which he had heard so much.

Finally the great day came and, calling his parents, he told them of his plans to leave. They did not try to dissuade him from his purpose, but told him from the love that was in their hearts that difficulties and hardships would be met whether he went away or remained in the land of his birth. Seeing his determination to leave, they yielded themselves to the inevitable and began to gather together a few things for his journey. All too soon came the day for his departure. Goodbyes were tearfully said and his mother, putting her arms around him, kissed him goodbye, softly saying in his ear, "Remember, Jack, wherever you go, I'll always be praying for you." Bravely brushing the tears from her eye with the corner of her apron, she smiled as he drove away. She watched and waved from the door until the turn in the road obscured him from her sight, then, brushing back a wisp of hair, she returned with a sigh and prayer to her tasks.

Many years passed swiftly by for Jack. He found that life in a far off country did not hold all the promise he hoped it would. He learned many evil ways and became a rough, hard man with little or no thought of God. Too soon the years were adorning his brow with silver. His hands were hard with much toil and his heart was hard with years of sin.

In the year 1933 I was traveling as an evangelist through the towns of Saskatchewan and by the will of God I was led to preach the gospel in a little country school house near the village of Naicam, the very community where Jack was farming. The Spirit of the Lord began to move among us and, before many days had gone by, some thirty or more people had knelt at the benches to give their hearts to Jesus Christ. Jack's wife and dughters began to attend the meetings, and one happy night they knelt in prayer to consecrate their hearts to Christ. The joy of new found salvation filled their hearts and it was with gladness the good lady and her dughters went home to tell the good news to Jack. But their joy was soon turned to dismay, for he railed upon them for indulging in such foolishness and promised them that he would go the very next night and break up the meeting.

Of course, I knew nothing of his intentions and so the meeting commenced as usual. We had sung a hymn or two when Jack arrived at the school. He tied his horse outside and approached the door, but in the good wisdom of the Lord I had at that very moment picked up my banjo to play and sing. As he entered the door the words of the song he heard were these:

The night was dark and stormy;
The wind was howling wild
As an aged mother gazed upon
The portrait of her child.
She gazed on his baby features
That had once filled her heart with joy;
He's now o'er the wide world roaming,
A mother's long lost boy.
Your mother still prays for you, Jack;
Your mother still prays for you.
And though you’re far o'er the ocean,
Your mother still prays for you.

Poor Jack stood quietly in the doorway. Tears came to his eyes as the Spirit of God spoke to his heart. He listened through the song and with rapt attention gave audience to the sermon. Then Brother Amundson, a man of great wisdom in the things of God, seeing the concern upon his face, spoke to him of the Lord and led him to the altar of repentance and prayer. As he confessed his sins to God, Jesus Christ came into his heart and he went home to join his wife and daughters in the great family of God, singing, "What a wonderful change in my life has been wrought since Jesus came into my heart!"
Well did the apostle Paul know the greatness of the love and mercy of God. Through years of revelation the Lord had taught him the universality of salvation. Well he knew that redemption included every man, but it must have been through scenes like these in which he saw sinners finding peace with God that he wrote with assurance these blessed words: "But now in Christ Jesus ye who were sometimes afar off are made nigh by the blood of Christ." Though all men have sinned and come short of the glory of God and we are without hope and without God in the world, our minds being blinded as we walk in lasciviousness and uncleanness, and though we are dead in the trespasses and sins, afar off from God, yet through the blood of Jesus Christ we have been brought nigh to Him to find a place in His sanctified throng.

By the deeds of the law shall no flesh be saved, but now the righteousness of God without the law is manifest, even the righteousness of God, which is by faith of Jesus Christ, unto all and upon all them that believe, for there is no difference. All have sinned and come short of the glory of God. We are justified freely through the redemption, which is in Christ Jesus. God, through faith in the blood of His Son, has sent forth the Holy Spirit to deal with us on behalf of Himself, telling us that the righteousness of Jesus Christ is available to us all the moment we believe and accept Him. At this time God the Father declares the righteousness of His Son that He might be just and the justifier of every man who believes. First believe, my friend and brother. First believe. To believe in Christ and the completeness of the work He has accomplished on your behalf is the thing of greatest importance. When man was afar off from God, without hope and without God in the world, having no righteousness with which to approach the Lord, at that time Christ the righteous died for us that all who would believe should be justified from all things.

Salvation is by the grace of God. It is by grace that it might be by faith. If we depend on works, we are lost, for it is not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to His mercy He saved us by the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Spirit. If we depend on personal righteousness, we are lost, for all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags. There is nothing upon which a sinner may depend save the mercy of God, which is freely offered to us through Christ our Lord. The moment a sinner looks up into the face of God and says, Lord, I believe (hat Jesus died for me," in that very moment he is justified from all things. His sins are cleansed away through the power of the blood of Christ and (he Holy Spirit comes in to walk in him and dwell in him that God may be his Father and he may be His child.

Faith is a wonderful thing. Like all other heavenly gifts it has its source in God. Man in himself has no faith, but when the Lord convicts us of sin, and points us to the Saviour, in His love and kindness He also puts faith into the heart of the seeker that he might be justified by faith. For that reason it is clearly written, "By grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast." Eph. 2:8.

Salvation is by the grace of God. It is the Lord's unmerited favor and kindness toward man. "For we ourselves also were sometimes foolish, disobedient, deceived, serving diverse lusts and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful, and hating one another. But after that the kindness and love of God our Saviour toward man appeared, not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to His mercy He saved us, by the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Ghost; which He shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Saviour." Titus 3:3-6. So, you see, salvation is of the grace of God. It is His unmerited favor toward us. He gives salvation freely to all who believe, without works of righteousness or without any merit but faith in Him. It is of grace that it might be by faith that he who believes on Christ is justified in the sight of God. His righteousness is imputed to us. It is given to us that God might be just and the justifier of everyone who believes. All who believe are justified from all things. They are made pure in God's sight, for the blood of the righteous Christ has cleansed them from all sin.

Once we are afar off, but now through the blood of Christ we are brought nigh. He who once said that we were enemies and aliens, without hope and without God in the world, afar off from God and lost in sin, having no righteousness of our own, now speaks the word of peace to us, saying, "Beloved, now are we the sons (children) of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when He shall appear, we shall be like Him; for we shall see Him as He is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as He is pure." 1 John 3:2-3.
Long ago in the city of Chicago a woman lay dying. She had lived a long life of sin without care or thought for God. While she was young, life had gone her way, but as the years went by her friends became fewer and fewer until at last, deserted and alone, she lay dying in her dismal attic room. In her distress she sent her daughter to call for the neighborhood minister. "Tell him," she said, "that I am dying and I want him to tell me how to get in." The night was cold and the minister himself knew not the true way of salvation. On the walls of his study hung the pictures of his college classmates and his degrees in learning. He was reluctant to leave the comfort of his home to go out on such a cold night to such a dismal district, but because of the importunity of the girl he aroused himself and, wrapping his warm coat about him, was led to the dingy apartment where the dying woman lay. A look of pleasure wreathed her careworn face as he came in. "I'm so glad you've come," she said, "for I want you to tell me how to get in." The poor minister was baffled. He knew not what to say. For years he had taught the people to do the best they could, to join the church, and to live good respectable lives, but here was a situation he had never faced before. Seating himself on the chair beside the bed, he began to tell her how we should think kind thoughts and do kind deeds. "Ah," said the woman, "but I am dying. It is too late for that now." "Well," said the minister, "you should keep the golden rule and do unto others as you would have them do to you. If we do the best we can, we will be alright." "But," said the woman, "it is too late for that. Is there nothing else you can tell me?" The minister, in his distraction realizing how vain such words were in such a critical hour as this, ventured to quote a scripture he had learned to recite as a child. "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believed on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life: for God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through Him might be saved." "That's it! That's it," she cried. "That's what I wanted to hear. Now kneel down and pray for me." The minister kneeled to pray, but unable to pray for the woman, he prayed for himself, and as he prayed, Christ came into his heart; and he got in, and she got in. It is of grace that it might be by faith that all who are afar off might be brought nigh to God through faith in Jesus Christ our Lord.
Our relationship to Jesus Christ will be mightily enhanced as we give heed to a great line of our illustrious forefathers, who through their immovable faith in God subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight and turned to flight the armies of the aliens. Women received their dead raised to life again; others were tortured, not accepting deliverance, that they might obtain a better resurrection; and others had trial of cruel mockings and scourgings, yea, moreover of bonds and imprisonment: they were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword: they wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented; (of whom the world was not worthy:) They wandered in deserts, and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth. And these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise: God having provided some better things for us, that they without us should not be made perfect. Heb. 11:32-39

In all the sad, dark history of the world, where the omnipresent power of evil stalks like a ranging bear, God has not left Himself without faithful witnesses, men and women staunch, steadfast, immovable, worthy of trust and loved by God. By the eye of faith they were able to look far into the oncoming millenniums to see the unfolding purpose of dispensations yet unborn and grasp the consummation of the eternal plan of the Most High. God, the possessor of all wisdom and understanding, has purposed that in the dispensation of the fullness of times He would gather into Christ everything in heaven and everything in earth. There shall be nothing left unrestored, nothing left unredeemed, no one left unsaved. Hell itself will be emptied of its inhabitants whosoever they be even as Christ, that towering rock of ages, Himself declared when He said, "On this rock will I build My ecclesia; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Gates are not for attack. Gates are constructed for defense and the gates of hell shall fail to keep her inhabitants against the power of Christ. Surely this is what the Psalmist spoke when he plucked his harp strings and sang, "Lift up your heads, O ye gates; even lift them up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in. Who is this King of glory? The Lord of hosts, He is the King of glory."

O great compassion! O boundless love!
O loving kindness, faithful and true!
Sprinkle your souls with the blood of the Lamb,
And I will pass, will pass over you.
God has never left Himself without a witnessing people, neither in generations past nor in our generation. Nor will He in generations yet to come. In each generation His wisdom passes into holy souls. He makes them friends of God as did Jesus when He said to His disciples, "Henceforth I call you not servants; for the servant knoweth not what his Lord doeth; but I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of My Father I have made known unto you." John 15:15 This is not the wisdom of the world, but the wisdom of God. It is wisdom more splendid than the sun. Its brightness outshines the constellations. Over the God-given wisdom of saints, evil can never triumph. Their understanding embraces all things and orders all things for good.

Oh, what a towering cloud of witnesses have successive generations revealed, each saint in his order proclaiming some separate aspect of the greatness, the goodness or the power of an almighty Father! Some saints, like Moses, displayed power as God, standing in the place of God. Others as Joshua wielded power as kings and were renowned for their strength and authority. Others, like Joseph, were intelligent advisers, uttering prophetic truth to save and deliver the nations. Others, like Solomon, directed people by their advice and the wise proverbs of their teaching. Others, like David, composed psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, setting them as melodies in the hearts of the people. Others, as Abraham, were rich and powerful, living peaceably in their pilgrimage, while others, equally honored in the sight of God, wandered about in sheeplains and goatskins, being destitute, afflicted and tormented. Some have seen their honor pass on to future generations while others, equally loved of the Father, have passed from earth's turbulent scene unwept, unhonored and unsung.

ABEL - THE MAN WHO OFFERED A MORE EXCELLENT SACRIFICE

Of Abel it is written that he offered a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, and by it he being dead yet speaketh. Heb. 11:4 It is the day of sacrifice in lovely Eden and two brothers draw near the altar to worship the Lord. In the hand of Cain is a pretty sacrifice composed of the good and luscious fruit of the earth, beautiful indeed to look upon and much to be desired in the sight of man, but not the kind of sacrifice that a sinner must bring to God; for sinners are dead in trespasses and sins and the fruit of the ground has no power to give them eternal life, it, too, being dead even as the earth from which it grew. Beautiful as his offering was, there was nothing in it that could give him life nor cleanse his sin away, for it is not by works of righteousness that we have done, but according to His mercy He saved us by the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Spirit.

Near by his side stood his brother Abel. In his hand was an innocent lamb, which he slew and laid upon a rough altar. From the open wound the blood red stream of life poured forth. While Cain scowled and chided at what to him was a gruesome slaughter and a useless sacrifice, the heavenly Father smiled His approval and accepted the life blood of the lamb as atonement for sin. Abel was pronounced righteous and God placed the witness in his soul that what he had done by faith was well pleasing and acceptable in His sight. Four thousand years later, when declaring that the just shall live by faith, Paul added this marvelous confirmation: "By faith Abel offered a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by the which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts: and by it he being dead yet speaketh." Heb. 11:4

But why, brother Abel, did you offer to God this uncouth sacrifice of a bleeding lamb? Was not the offering of Cain, thy brother, prettier far, the work and labor of his hands and a splendid manifestation of his husbandry? Far away in the misty valleys of time I see him smile his reply, pointing with unerring finger to a distant skull-shaped hill. It is the hill of Calvary where through the haze of four thousand future years and the rising mists of blinding tears a lonely cross appears and upon the cross on the wind swept hill a Lamb is dying. It is a Lamb indeed, but no ordinary lamb. It is the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world. It is the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world. From a wound in His side a river of blood is flowing. But is it blood, O brother Abel? Yea, far more than blood. It is eternal life, for the life is in the blood.

Learn, O saint, that your Father in heaven glories not in the blood of ten thousand sacrificial lambs, yet how better can we learn than by these that what of life they had to offer was in their blood, for the blood thereof is the life thereof. When, therefore, Jesus Christ shed His blood on the cross of Calvary that blessed sacrifice was not made to mollify the rage of an angry God, as thousands are erroneously preaching today. Far be that from the truth. That glorious sacrifice was made by a Father who so loved the world that He gave His Son, because in Him was life. God did not give His only Son to die in my stead, as orthodoxy insists and as preachers are always declaring. Do you not know that I was already dead in my trespasses, my sins and my unbelief? Jesus did not die that I might not die. The truth is that I was already dead. Eph. 2:1 He died that He might give His life to me. And His life is eternal life. Yea, He is eternal life. What other person could possibly have said, "I give unto them eternal life, and they shall never perish?" O my Christian brother and my sinner friend, eternal life is the only life I have. I possess none other, and that life is in Christ's blood. His blood is that life, and the moment any man believes, eternal life becomes his possession and he will never perish because the life Christ gives is both eternal and imperishable.

I see a crimson stream of blood
That flows from Calvary.
Its waves, which reach the throne of God,
Are sweeping over me.
And now no condemnation Abides to turn away
My soul from His salvation.
It's in my heart to stay.

Now do I understand, O Abel, why thou broughtest a bleeding, unblemished lamb for your offering to God. Frail and insignificant though it was, it pointed an unerring prophetic finger to that true Lamb of God, who taketh away the sin of the world. The penalty of sin is death; therefore all were dead. Eternal life is in the blood of Christ; therefore, all who believe on Him receive eternal life. This is the new birth of which Jesus spoke and it was of this wonderful regeneration that Paul wrote, saying, "You hath He quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins." Eph. 2:1

O what potent words were penned by Paul when to the Romans he declared that the faith of God the Father in the blood of His Son, Jesus Christ, was so great that in one mighty pronouncement He forgave and remitted all the sins of the past! "Being justified freely by His grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus: whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith (God's faith) in His (Christ's) blood, to declare His righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God: to declare, I say, at this time His righteousness: that He might be just, and the justifier of him that believeth in Jesus." Rom 3:24-26

When Abel offered his feeble sacrifice of blood, he was testifying to his faith in Christ and his belief that the blood of Jesus not only cleanses from sin, but gives to the believer eternal life, inasmuch as "the life is in the blood." Thus it is written, "By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts: and by it he being dead yet speaketh." Christ is the more excellent sacrifice. The blood of Christ is better than the blood Abel offered. That blood was the type, but the blood of Christ is the anti-type. If, therefore, the typical "blood of bulls and goats, and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh, how much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered Himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God?" Heb. 9; 13-14

Surely Cain, the brother of Abel, must have been the first modernist who ever lived. Who else but an unbelieving modernist could ever imagine that one dead in trespasses and sins could possibly obtain life by bringing to God what he himself knew had no breath of life in it? Will such people never learn that, should they bring the whole world itself and everything in it as an offering to God, they would still remain "dead" in their sins? Does not all creation teach us that all the righteous acts we can perform and all the gifts we can bring will never bring a dead man back to life? The nurses and doctors in the hospitals often struggle long and hard to preserve a man's life, but once the man is dead, they know he is beyond their reach. Nothing known to medical science can bring him back. Should we offer for his life all the diamonds of Africa and a thousand rivers of oil, no man on earth could bring him back. How then can works of righteousness or an offering of the fruit of the field or a life time of good works change the situation? Only Christ can raise the dead. He alone is the resurrection and the life. But let me bear this true witness, though you may never have heard it before. When Christ raises the dead, He does not give back the flickering candle of life they once possessed. He gives His life and His life is eternal. Yea, more also, He gives Himself.

Today within our ransomed spirits we hear Him say, "He that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son hath not life." "This is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in His Son." 1 John 5:11 "I give unto them eternal life, and they shall never perish." John 10:28

We walk the road with Him in life anew.
The resurrection life He gave to them
Is life He wants to give to you.
He is that life, O vision blest!
From us, Lord, never part.
We find it not beyond the starry skies;
We have it when we have Him in our heart.

Abel brought not the fruit of the earth. His ear was in tune with the wonderful message of the prophet Habakkuk: "The just shall live by faith." Though Paul had not yet proclaimed the message that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law, Rom. 3:28, those words were living in the heart of Abel as he brought an offering of blood as an emblem, a symbol and a type to manifest his faith in the blood of Christ, which would be shed for man's redemption. Redemption is simply this: Christ came to man and, finding him dead in trespasses and sins, He gave him His own life and freely offers it now to all who will believe as Abel did. By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain and by it he, being dead, yet speaketh.

ENOCH—THE MAN WHO WALKED WITH GOD

Of the life of this illustrious man history's pages record but little. Few, brief and far between are the passages in God's word that tell us aught about him. From Gen. 5:19 we learn that Jared was his father and that Enoch had brothers and sisters. He begat a son, Methuselah by name, verse 21, who lived nine hundred and sixty-nine years and evidently died the same year the flood came. In the epistle of Jude we are told that Enoch was the seventh from Adam and that he prophesied of the coming of the Lord, saying, "Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousands of His saints, to execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against Him." Jude 14-15. The writer of Hebrews, Heb. 11:5, plants the feet of this remarkable man among that vast family of the faithful, who have arisen through the centuries to be marked UN saints who have lived so completely in the realm of faith that their possibilities in God became limitless.

In the annals of a man whose life spanned a period of three hundred sixty-five years and whose recorded biblical history could be contained in one brief paragraph is it not a most remarkable thing that twice in that brief record we are reminded that, "Enoch walked with God?" Gen. 5:22, 24. The scriptures have much to teach concerning man's walk with God. During the ages many men and women have walked with God, yet upon this one man is conferred this testimony: "Enoch walked with God, and was not for God took him."

The writer of the book of Hebrews tells us three very definite things concerning him: first, that he was translated that he might not see death, 11:5; second, that he was not found because God had translated him, and, third, that before his translation he had this testimony, that he pleased God." We conclude, therefore, that, though his recorded history is exceedingly brief, yet, had a whole volume concerning him been written, it could have added little to these eloquent statements: that Enoch walked with God, that he had this testimony that he pleased God, that he prophesied of the coming of the Lord with ten thousands of His saints, and that, having walked with the Lord three hundred years after the birth of Methuselah, the magnetism of heaven far exceeded that of earth and he was not, for God took him, and that he was translated that he might not see death.

There is seldom anything very exciting about walking. If a man is seen running, he is noticed by every person on the street and many start guessing as to what might be the cause of his haste. They wonder if he is running to catch a bus, keep an appointment, or perhaps he is trying to make a get-away. In those wonderful days when late, late prayer meetings were no exception to the rule, my youngest brother was returning home from such a prayer meeting with his friend at 4 A.M. The streets were empty of pedestrians so to speed their journey they broke into a run. They had not gone far, however, before a big voice boomed, "HEY!" A patrolman walked up and asked, "Where are you boys going?" "We're going home," they replied. "Where have you been?" he asked. "To prayer meeting," was their answer, so with a smile and a pleasant good night he walked on. It was their running that attracted attention. Had they been walking, he would have thought nothing.

So Enoch walked with God for three hundred years. It was not an exciting thing to do, but, as they walked, the fellowship between the two became so close that at the end of the three hundred years Enoch was nowhere to be found, for they had walked together straight into the celestial realms and Enoch was translated that he might not see death and he was not, for God took him.

Walking is not a means of rapid transportation. It is the slowest locomotion common to man, yet there is no means of movement so reliable. Walking, we understand, is the best exercise known to man. It is better than running, jogging or swimming. It is something every normal person is capable of doing. It can be tiring and it is often tedious, but without the ability of mankind to walk the world would come to a standstill and its inhabitants would perish.

If we will apply these few thoughts to our spiritual walk, we will have a lesson of life-long worth. How often have we, impatient souls that we are, longed for more rapid progress in our walk with God! How we have longed to reach some great spiritual height that we saw far off in the Spirit, as Abraham saw the New Jerusalem! We begged for complete victory over the old nature, the world and the flesh. We asked people to pray for us that we might enter in right away. But that kind of haste is not God's way. How often I have wondered why it was that after fifty years of walking day and night with God, speaking to Him often and often knowing that He had spoken to me, for all that imperfection still manifests itself on every side. Have you not wondered the same thing? Please remember that, though in walking locomotion is slow, there is no method of travel more safe or sure. Indeed, it seems to be the only progression that is pleasing to God. Mushrooms grow up and perish in a night, but sons of God are of a different order.

In my heart I am sure that Enoch must have caught a glimpse of the more excellent glory of translation, transfiguration and change just about the time his son Methuselah was born. Far off on the distant horizons his eye of faith caught sight of the more excellent glory of incorruption and he started his steadfast walking toward that celestial realm. It may never have occurred to this faithful man at the beginning of his journey that the goal upon which his heart was steadfastly fixed lay beyond such toilsome valleys and precipitous peaks that it would take him three hundred weary years to attain it. So he started his walk with God through moor and fen, o'er crag and torrent, his unerring eye fixed on the celestial realm.

Cold blows the blast across the moor;
The sleet drives hissing in the wind.
Yon toilsome mountain lies before,
A dreary, treeless waste behind.
So faint I am these tottering feet
No more my feeble frame can bear.
My sinking heart forgets to beat,
And drifting snows my tomb prepare. But
There is a power whose care
Teaches thy way along the pathless coast,
The desert and illimitable air,
Lone wandering, but not lost.
He who from zone to zone
Guides through the boundless coast
Thy certain flight
In the long way that I must walk alone
Will guide my steps aright.

W.C.B.

And yet, on we walk strengthened by power divine. When sinew fails and strength is gone, underneath are the everlasting arms. Then we run and feel not weary; we walk but do not faint. Like Elijah we feel the gentle touch of an angel and hear a kindly voice saying, "Eat and drink, for the journey is too great for thee." 1 Kings 19:5-7

Then on we go for another forty days on the strength of that one meal of angels' food until we arrive at the mount of God.

How wonderful it all is and how slowly we learn to walk without trying to run or fly or hitch a ride on someone else's chariot! The deep valleys that lie before us must be entered and passed through. Then the words of David in Psalm 23 will become our personal experience. "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for Thou art with me; Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me." Yon toilsome mountain cannot be bypassed. It must be climbed. Some grow weary and turn back, but those who reach the summit rejoice eternally, however difficult it was at first.

Sometimes in reflection I have thought of the wonderful events that happened on mountains and hills as recorded in scripture. Abraham offered Isaac on Mount Moriah. Our blessed Lord gave us His life by shedding His blood on wind-swept Calvary. Moses amid fire and smoke received the law on Mt. Sinai and Noah landed his ark on Mt. Ararat. Moses took his last walk up Mt. Nebo to receive his crown of life, and was not seen again until that wonderful day when Jesus climbed an exceedingly high mountain, probably Mt. Hermon, and, praying, the fashion of his countenance was altered as Moses and Elijah appeared with Him in glory. "As the dews of Hermon and as the snows that descended upon the mountains of Zion, there the Lord commanded the blessing, even life forevermore." Christ preached the sermon on the mount to His disciples on the mount of beatitudes, and on ascension day our blessed Lord led a little group of faithful saints out to the Mount of Olives and, as He blessed them, He was parted from them and carried up into heaven and a cloud received Him out of their sight. And, if we read our Bibles aright, our Lord will soon return to that same mountain when He comes again, for thus saith the Lord, "His feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives."

Our progress up the mountains of God may be slow and difficult. We watch mountain climbers clinging like spiders to icy precipitous cliffs and we wonder why they do it. It is because they want to reach the top and are willing to risk their lives to attain that frail earthly glory. They do it to obtain a corruptible crown, but we an incorruptible. For three hundred years Enoch walked up the hills and down into the valleys, but he was not walking alone. God was walking with him.

The heavenly Father must have had some eternal interest vested in Enoch that He would walk with him three hundred years just to accomplish his perfection, and shall we fail to believe that He has an equal investment in each of us? Are we not heirs together with Him of the promise, "I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be My people?" 2 Cor. 6:16 He raises us when we fall, guides us when we are lost, strengthens us when we are weak, and permits us to fall when we imagine we are strong. Ah, yes, it is so! When the Lord plants a redwood tree in the womb of mother earth, He is looking forward perhaps five thousand years to the day when it is a towering monarch of the jungle. Think it not strange, then, that He would spend three hundred years in bringing to perfection a saint who is to rule the world as a son of God, bringing order and cosmos out of all the dreadful chaos that everywhere abides on earth. The wonder is that it does not take much longer. Let us, therefore, not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not. At times I have thought, "I shall faint if I reap not," but the truth is the reverse. We shall reap if we faint not.

The Apostle Paul was moved to tears when he wrote, "Many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ: whose end is destruction, whose God is their belly, and whose glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things.” Phil. 3:18-19

Pages without end could be written and sermons innumerable could be preached concerning this sad state of affairs among Christian people who are ever mindful of earthly things. As Jeremiah was the weeping prophet, Paul at times was a weeping apostle, and here in the text quoted above the manner in which many Christians walked made him weep, and rightly so. So many who name the name of Christ are really the enemies of the cross of Christ and every design and intention of it, for God's intention in the cross was that the world should be "crucified unto me and I unto the world." Meditate for a moment on that text and you will see what a great gulf the cross places between you and the world. The walk of so many Christians is surer evidence of what they really are than the words of their profession, as it is written, "By their fruits ye shall know them." Figs are not gathered of thorns nor grapes of thistles. Minding nothing so much as their sensual appetites, they become enemies of the cross of Christ.

When a man's belly becomes his god, a wretched idol it is, a scandal for any, but especially for Christians, who sacrifice the favor of God, their peace of conscience and aionian happiness that they may satisfy their god of sensuality. Gluttons and drunkards make a god of their bellies and their care in life is to make provision for it. The observance, which good people give to God, others give to their appetites, serving not the Lord Jesus Christ, but their own bellies, making a glory of their shame and being mindful of earthly things. Minding earthly things, they walk contrary to the cross, having no relish for things that are spiritual and heavenly.

Others walk after the flesh, following the way of Cain, who hated his brother. Others run greedily after the error of Baalam, who, like so many modern preachers, prophesied for the sake of reward. Still others follow the error of Core, who was unafraid to speak evil of God-given authority. I greatly fear that in our day many preachers are following the error of Baalam. Their vast financial ambitions are insatiable. Their life styles are incredible and their manner of living lavish beyond belief, in many cases far exceeding that of kings and presidents, and all done under the pretense that it is the work of Christ. No wonder Paul wept and denounced them as the enemies of the cross of Christ! Well spake our Lord Jesus Christ when He foretold the rise of many false prophets and many false christs. If Christians would but open their eyes, they would see that radio and television programs are alive with false prophets, preaching for reward as Baalam, all clamoring for money, money, money! How unlike Christ they are with all their abominable fanfare, their man-made programs and endless ambitions accompanied by an utter dearth of nourishing, spiritual truth! Seldom among them is there one who does not design his very sermon as an appeal for more money to carry out more lavish programs, and, while all this is being done, the world sinks lower and lower into the pit of despair. Nevertheless, this is what always happens when those who call themselves by the name of Christ walk not with Him, but after their own ambitions. Follow not after them nor waste your reserves supporting them. Learn rather from that illustrious man of whom it is written, "Enoch walked with God and was not, for God took him."

The first record we have of God walking was on that occasion in paradise when the ever, living God walked in the effulgent glory and perfumed magnificence of heaven-blessed Eden. I know of no other reason why the voice of God was heard in the evening cool of paradise than that He was calling to Adam to come and walk with Him as he had done every day for perhaps a hundred years or more. But, when Adam was not to be found, He called, "Adam, where art thou?" There was no response in Adam's heart for he had hidden himself among the trees of the garden and the glory of their long relationship had fled away.

Dear one in Christ, the Lord "knoweth thy walking through this great wilderness." Deut. 2:7 The wilderness of this world is a "waste, howling wilderness," the burning sand of a wild wasteland. God has purposed that it should be so; but, if we will heed the voice of God, we will discover that we are not walking alone. There will be an ever, increasing consciousness that He is walking with us, and, when the way is too difficult for us and we are too weary to continue on, we will be borne up on His mighty shoulder and underneath we will feel the arms that are everlasting. How often during my reflections have I wondered how I managed to get through those dreary, toilsome mountain passes where evil circumstances overwhelmed and temptations lay on every side! There is only one answer. Underneath were the everlasting arms. Where there was no way, He became the way. When there was no truth, He was truth and were there was no candle, He was the shining light. What unwritten history lives in the recollections of the people of God as they remember impossible summits over which they have come and the dreary valleys through which they have passed! We shake our heads in disbelief and smile, "It was Christ who carried me through."
What story has ever thrilled more fainting hearts than the account in Luke's gospel of a little known man named Cleopas and an unnamed companion, who was probably his wife. They were walking the eight mile journey from Jerusalem to Emmaus and; as they walked, their talk was hushed with sorrow because of the heartbreaking events of the last few days. But, glory to God in the highest, "it came to pass" that, while they walked and communed together and reasoned, the resurrected Jesus drew near and walked with them. But their eyes were "holden" that they should not know Him. "And He said unto them, What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk, and are sad? And the one of them, whose name was Cleopas, answering said unto Him, Art Thou only a stranger in Jerusalem, and hast not known the things that are come to pass in these days? And He said unto them, What things? And they said unto Him, Concerning Jesus of Nazareth, which was a prophet mighty in deed and word before God and all the people: and how the chief priests and our rulers delivered Him to be condemned to death, and have crucified Him. But we trusted that it had been He, which should have redeemed Israel: and beside all this, today is the third day since these things were done. Yea, and certain women also of our company made us astonished, which were early at the sepulcher; and when they found not His body, they came, saying that they had also seen a vision of angels, which said that He was alive. And certain of them that were with us went to the sepulcher, and found it even so as the women had said; but Him they saw not. Then He said unto them, O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken: ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into His glory? And beginning at Moses and all the prophets, He expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning Himself. And they drew nigh unto the village, whither they went: and He made as though He would have gone farther. But they constrained Him, saying, Abide with us: for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent. And He went in to tarry with them. And it came to pass, as He sat at meat with them, He took bread, and blessed it, and brake, and gave to them. And their eyes were opened, and they knew Him; and He vanished out of their sight." They walked with Christ and, as they did, He revealed Himself unto them in an unimaginable blaze of resurrection truth that would shine as a guiding star both for them and for us until the day we walk with Christ into the celestial realms on high.

From the far distant mountain peaks of time the inspired voice of Paul, clear as a vesper bell, rings out the message, "This I say, then, Walk in the Spirit and ye shall not fulfill the lusts of the flesh," and from the deepening night of the valleys the voice of the sweet psalmist of Israel is singing, "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for Thou art with me; Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me." And with incredible pride the Master proclaims, "I will dwell with them and walk with them, and I will be their God and they shall be My people." Even among the backslidden Christians of Sardis there were a few saints who had not defiled their garments but were walking with God, and unto this few the Spirit of Christ whispered, "They shall walk with Me in white, for they are worthy." There is no doubt about it. Christ Himself is outside the camp of the church's "vanity fair" of religions, and to us He calls, saying, "Go unto Him without the camp, bearing His reproach." There He will walk with us and there He will be our God and we will be His people.

Enoch was translated. There need be no question about that. We should not think it strange that our God would do this wonderful thing. Two delightfully captivating statements are made of Enoch from which we might form a conclusion which does not appear on the surface, but which, if we can accept it, will be an inspiring benefit and blessing to our progression in Christ.

In Genesis 5:24 we read these words: "Enoch walked with God, and he was not," and in Hebrews 11:5, "He was not found." Certainly Enoch was translated. To the believer that fact is beyond dispute, but these very statements, "he was not" and "he was not found", appear to me to describe a spiritual process now taking place in every believer who is earnestly pressing toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. You will remember that Paul said, "It is not I, but Christ." The old Saul of Tarsus was not. He was not found. He was dead. He was crucified. He had been laid in the tomb, and a new man, the Christ-man, was standing in his stead. The religious, fanatic, persecuting tyrant that was Saul of Tarsus was not. He was nowhere to be found. It is true that God had not translated him out of the world, but he had been so thoroughly transformed by the power of God that he was able to say, "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not
I, but Christ liveth in me." He was not, for God took him and He is now taking us. We may rightly say that Paul was not translated out of the world as Enoch was, but his own experience of being removed from all that he once was in his former life was so real to him that in Col. 1:13 he enravishes our spiritual beings with these enlightening words: "Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of His dear Son." Is not that an illuminating statement?

Elect according to the foreknowledge of God through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth, I urge this truth upon you. This kind of identity with Christ is the true path of sonship. There should be nothing in your life more important than this: that old things should pass away and all things become new. To some degree it must already be that you, my brother, my sister, can truthfully say, "I am not what I once was - the sinner, the blasphemer, held captive by the old nature and all his vices. I am a new man, a new creature." Day after day, year after year, the Spirit of God is transforming His redeemed and translating them into His heavenly kingdom. In a very real sense we are not, for God has taken us. As you walk with God, make sure that you are relinquishing every old thing that belongs to the old nature and the former realm of corruption. Do not grasp after the world and the trinkets money can buy. Do not cling to this age; it is passing away. Remember, you have been saved, and have "come to Mt. Zion and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and church of the firstborn, which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel." Heb. 12:22-24

O, beloved saint, you are not, for God has taken you. You are a new man, a new woman. Your life is new. Your hopes are new. Your outlook is new. Christ has transformed you. He has brought you out of darkness, and translated you into His kingdom of light. There is no more / to be found. The old has passed away and, behold, all things are new. Enoch was not, for God took him. Even before his translation he was not, for he had this testimony that he pleased God. You are not if you have entirely yielded yourself to Christ. God has taken you. He has transformed you into a new man and the old person you once were is not found.

Walking with God is a relationship that is cultivated through lifelong experience. To walk with God requires two persons - yourself and your Christ - going in the same direction. We cannot walk with God if we are going the opposite way, nor can we walk with Him if our ambitions are our own and not His. How can two walk together except they be agreed? If we would walk with God, there must come a time when we have no ideas, purposes, ambitions or plans of our own. The pride of life is personal ambition, but to walk with God is to see and grasp His eternal purpose and walk only in it. As for me, I have come to the end of myself. I have no plans for tomorrow. If His presence should say, "Let us now walk out of this world", there would be no moaning at the bar or begging to abide here longer. Enoch walked with God, and he was not, for God took him.

Are we not double-minded deceivers of ourselves when we sing, "I'm longing to go", yet fight like tigers to remain in the wasted, howling wilderness of this world when we could go walking arm in arm with Christ back into the presence of Him from whence we came? When the moment comes for God to take us in whatsoever manner He chooses, may we be like the beloved Enoch, who was not, for God took him.

ABRAHAM - THE FRIEND OF GOD

Friendship with the world, saith the scripture, is enmity with God. We cannot serve God and Mammon. A friend loveth at all times. A brother is born for adversity, but there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother. My father used to sing:

Comrades, comrades, ever since we were boys,
Sharing each other's sorrow, sharing each other's joys.
Comrades when manhood was dawning,
Faithful what'er may betide.
When I was in danger, my darling old comrade
Was there by my side.

David the son of Jesse and Jonathan the son of Saul were friends. Their relationship was born of God. Though Jonathan knew in his heart that his friend David would one day ascend the throne of Israel in his stead, 1 Sam.
23:17, the scripture says, "The soul of Jonathan was knit with the soul of David, and Jonathan loved him as his own soul." 1 Sam. 18:1 The friendship that began between them the day Goliath was slain was to continue through fiercest adversity until the day Jonathan was slain in battle. Far too many friends are like shadows. They stick with us while the sun is shining, but the moment the clouds of trouble and adversity come, they disappear. The truest friendships are those that are welded together in the heat of trial even as two pieces of iron become one in the furnace.

Now Abraham was a friend of God. Of all the devout saints of scripture Abraham alone bears the honorable title, the Friend of God. That friendship was born of long-standing relationship with the Lord. Abraham, through a century of wandering as a pilgrim in strange lands and among strange peoples, found God to be a faithful friend at all times and it is equally true that the heavenly Father found Abraham to be a faithful man, who cared for nothing on earth except the mind, knowledge and will of God. Well did the Father in heaven know that Abraham was a man to be depended upon, faithful and reliable even to the yielding up of his son as a sacrifice. With fatherly pride in His friend He rejoiced in the knowledge that in every adversity or success Abraham's fidelity would be forever constant. The love of a man for a maid may wax and wane as the moon, but the love of a friend for a friend is as constant as the stars.

When the great Isaiah spoke of the love of God in forging Israel into a nation for His glory, he said, "Thou, Israel, art My servant, Jacob whom I have chosen, the seed of Abraham, My friend." Isa. 41:8 James the Just, writing of the faithfulness of Abraham, made this beautiful observation: "The scripture was fulfilled which saith, Abraham believed God, and it was imputed unto him for righteousness: and he was called the Friend of God." James 2:23

The Holy Scripture has a great deal to say concerning the relationships between believers and their Lord. Those who receive truth seriously must often be awed by the declarations the Lord has made concerning the intimate closeness of our relationship with the Father and with His Son Jesus Christ. As the depths of our spiritual bond with the Father are revealed to us and our spirits begin to grasp the force and truth of what the Holy Spirit is really teaching, we become speechless with wonder and filled with amazement. For so many centuries God's beloved people have been led by false shepherds who caused them to see themselves as poor, starving mendicants, begging crumbs that fell from the table of a God who sat far off in the heavens, too busy rolling out the stars to be interested in fellowship with man. How I abhor those demeaning traditions of men that have been passed down through the years, doing despite to God's Spirit of grace and causing believers to pass through life in the shallows, never seeing God as their loving Father and faithful friend, reconciling the world to Himself and committing to faithful men the word of reconciliation!

Have you ever been awed by such statements as these, considering them one word at a time: "Beloved, now are we the sons (children) of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when He shall appear, we shall be like Him; for we shall see Him as He is?" Oh, what a universe of truth lies in this wealthy mine! We are not children of the flesh, sons of an earthly monarch or president. We are children born of the Spirit into the family of God and we are His children. The moment we believe on the name of Christ, we are sealed with His Holy Spirit of promise. Then and there the Spirit of God enters into that new and living temple which we are. A work of regeneration begins in which the old things of our unregenerate past fade away and all things become new. Our spirit, long dead in sins, is made alive. The life that once raised Jesus from the dead now arouses us from our long, long night of death in trespasses and sins.

Can we wonder that a soul who has come into such an experience of resurrection life should immediately discover that a new life has begun in which all things are new? Christ, finding us dead in our sins, poured in the oil and wine of eternal life and we live because He lives. He found us without hope and in His love He begat us unto a living hope through His own resurrection from the dead. He found us hopelessly bound in sin and shapen in iniquity, so He stretched forth His mighty hand to loose us and let us go. Raised from the dead were all our hopes and joys; gone were our sorrows - gone our doubts and fears. We understood then what once we did not know: "Eternal life is walking through the years." He is that life. "Oh, vision blest! From us, Lord, never part. We find it not beyond the starry skies; we have it when we have Him in our heart."

Children of God, the scripture calls us. Children are a happy lot. They have few cares or burdens and they enjoy every minute of every day. While we are children, it does not appear what we shall be, but years of growth along with life's accompanying trials and tribulations will bring forth sonship at last. "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God: therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew Him not.” 1 John 3:1 The sublime truth of sonship pervades the whole of scripture. As every man hopes to be the father of a son, so our heavenly Father has brought the whole of creation into groaning and travail to bring forth sons of God. If ever a truth was made known to man which should produce humility, sobriety and patience, surely sonship is that truth. During the past thirty years my heart has often bowed down in heaviness to find so many people grasping at the message of sonship with a kind of egocentricity, while remaining devoid of the spirit of sonship.

"Abba, Father," the spirit of sonship cries;
Tis deep calling unto deep.
Far, far beyond the scope of natural man lies
The sons' great eternal realm.
Naught but the spirit of sonship can take the veil away.
Naught but deep calling unto deep will bring in God's new day.
Night and day must the cry go forth from deep down within,
Cleansing, purifying, changing, 'til I am fashioned just like Him.
Then in all His glorious fullness I shall come.
Deep will call to deep, "Abba, Father, I am Thy son.
Father, I am Thy son."

Frances Quantz

Now every man that hath the hope of sonship in him purifies himself - not by self-effort, but by walking in the light, for, "if we walk in the light as He is in the light, we have fellowship one with the other and the blood of Jesus Christ, His Son, cleanses us from all sin." The further we walk with Christ, the more He will rid us and deliver us from all that is flesh and sin. All through our Christian lives we will be putting off hindering weights and sins that easily beset us by the power of His Spirit. To every son of God the Spirit is speaking, "Put off all these; anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth. Lie not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds; and have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of Him that created him." Col. 3:8

In the fifteenth chapter of John's gospel our blessed Lord introduced His disciples to an entirely new relationship with Himself. These twelve disciples were Christ's servants, but the ever, deepening relationship between them and their Lord had increased as the years passed by. They had come to love Christ and to trust Him as their faithful Lord, their Master and the Saviour of the world. Learn this lesson, oh saint of God! Learn it as quickly as you can. Your Lord will always rejoice in your ever increasing love and knowledge of Himself, yet, however far you advance in heights or depths or lengths or breadths of spiritual progress, you will not have reached the ultimate. There is always a further, a deeper and more blessed relationship to be attained, and your Father in heaven will not rest until you have attained it. Whatever struggle may ensue, He will pull you through if you can stand the pull.

What a feast it would be if we could but pause beneath His shadow to consider the relationship of the vine, which is Christ, to the branches, which we are! "I am the vine, ye are the branches," Jesus said, and we abide in Him even as He abides in the Father. In John 15:11 Jesus led his disciples into a bond with Himself that hitherto they had not known. After telling them, "If ye keep My commandments, ye shall abide in My love; even as I have kept My Father's commandments, and abide in His love", He made this new and wonderful declaration: "Ye are My friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you." Verse 14

There is a difference between servants and friends. It is a difference in the relationship, which our Lord forcefully taught in verse 15. Notice every word of it. "Henceforth I call you not servants; for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth: but I have called you friends,' for all things that I have heard of My Father I have made known unto you." Can you imagine the inestimable value of such inter-relationship as this? This is a new kinship and one to be greatly cherished. It is an honorable thing to be a servant of the Lord, but, however good this may be, it is still servitude and servants work for hire. They do as they are bidden to do and their master owes them no explanation whatever as to what end their service may be. Soldiers are ordered into battle and expected to accomplish whatever task they are given, but seldom do they know what relationship their assignment has to the over-all course of the war.

The disciples had been faithful servants of Christ. They had done the things they were commanded to do. They had come to love each other and especially to love Christ above all else. Now, therefore, our Lord begins to take away the first - that is, servitude - that He might raise them to the new relationship - that is, the closeness of friends. "No longer shall I call you servants, for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth; but I have called you friends." They were now to share a new intimacy with Christ - the filiations and affiliation of friends. "A servant knoweth not what his lord doeth," the Saviour explained, "but I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of My Father, I have made known unto you." To men and women who really love Christ and long to know Him and see Him as He is there is sure to come a time when He begins to unveil to their hearts the merciful purposes and infinite secrets of His will, which hitherto were hidden from us. It is the relationship of friend communing with friend.

For many years I worked for Christ as a servant. I struggled to undo the works of the devil and bring about a revival that would sweep millions into the kingdom, but how well I remember where I was standing when for the first time in my life Christ began to open to my heart the secret of His immutable purpose for the government of the universe and the all inclusive reconciliation He had made for all things. It was a shock to me to find that, though I could quote the eighth chapter of Romans by heart and most of the rest of the book besides, for all this I had never once heard what the Spirit was really saying in its pages until my new found friend, the Lord Jesus Christ, whispered these words of wisdom: "The creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him who hath subjected the same in hope." Rom. 8:20 Then I cried out in my wonder, "My God, do You mean to say that You are taking the responsibility for the fall of man?" For years I taught that Satan alone was the instigator of the fall of the Adamic creation. Unwittingly I had honored him as being able to thwart the wisdom of God and despoil His wonderful purpose and His hope for a perfect creation. But now the Spirit was revealing from the long established word that, "the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him who had subjected the same in hope." This marvelous hope in the heart of the Creator is designed to one day fill the whole universe with sons of God, who know and understand all the ramifications of sin and of the fall. They would not know good and evil by hearsay, which is useless at best, but by personal experience in its sordid realm - which experience could never be questioned, refuted nor gainsaid. From the dreary shadows of a fallen, benighted creation there would arise the perfection of sonship, for which the whole creation groans. The same creature that was made subject to vanity and utter futility shall be delivered from its appalling bondage into the glorious freedom of the sons of God. Rom 8:18-23

How I pity the Christian who walks through life having no understanding of what His Lord doeth! The fresh air of revelation never breathes upon his spirit, but he stumbles along through life doing what he deems necessary - attending his church, listening to oft repeated sermons, singing of a beautiful land on a far away strand, but never being able to grasp the truth that right now, while he lives, an eternal purpose is steadily and irresistibly unfolding before all creation. This is the mystery of His will, the secret of His good pleasure, which He has purposed in Himself and is now revealing unto us, that in the dispensation of the fullness of times He might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven and which are in earth, even in Him. Eph. 1:10. Every man and every woman who comes into Christ in this age is bringing that hope one step nearer to fulfillment, but not until the ages to come will God manifest the exceeding riches of His grace. Eph. 2:7. The exceeding riches of His grace that are to be manifest in the ages to come will be manifest through those who in this age have freely partaken of the grace and wisdom of God. Is not this what the Spirit is telling us when He says, "And hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places with Christ: that in the ages to come He might show the exceeding riches of His grace in (or by) His kindness toward us through Christ Jesus"? Eph. 2:6-7

Such truth as this is not the understanding of servants, for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth, but, if it is in our heart to enter into a new relationship with Jesus Christ, the relationship of friends, He will commune with us heart to heart and unfold to us the unsearchable riches of Christ, and will display the extent of God's inheritance in His saints. "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear My voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with Me." Rev. 3:20 For too long saints have been wondering what their inheritance will be in God, but it is far more important that we should see that God is rejoicing over His wonderful inheritance in the saints. His beloved saints will one day fill His universe with His glory and His praise, and eternity itself will not be too long to fill an ever expanding universe with an ever increasing glory. "Henceforth I call you not servants, for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth; but I have called you friends."

Now Abraham was the friend of God. He was God’s friend and God was his friend. Their blessed relationship had been forged together through a century of fiery trials. God had been faithful to Abraham and Abraham had been faithful to God.

The touching story of how the Lord appeared to Abraham just before the destruction of the city of Sodom, recorded in Genesis, chapter 18, is too lengthy to quote in fullness here, but it is an intimate manifestation of friend communing with friend. If you will read this entire enlightening chapter, you will be greatly edified by the conversation between the Lord and Abraham, His friend. It is beautiful to notice as you read that, when the Lord appeared in the form of three men, Abraham did not cower in fear nor did he wonder who the visitor was, but, knowing it was the Lord, he ran to meet them, brought water to wash their feet, and prepared a delightful meal for them to eat. Eating and drinking in holy scripture usually indicates some close communion.

The ensuing talk between them is a most enlightening one. The Lord opened the conversation with the question, "Where is Sarah thy wife?" because the promise of a son had much to do with her. Abraham replied, "In the tent." Notice how the Lord begins to make known to His friend certain important things, which must come to pass. The servant knoweth not what his lord doeth, but Abraham was much more than a servant. He was a friend. The second revelation is this: "I will certainly return unto thee according to the time of life; and, lo, Sarah thy wife shall have a son," and Sarah, hearing what the Lord had said and knowing that it had ceased to be with her after the manner of women, laughed within herself and said, "After I am waxed old, shall I have pleasure, my lord being old also?" Then the omniscient Father asked, "Wherefore did Sarah laugh?" That little laugh was a laugh of unbelief. "Is anything too hard for the Lord?" He asked. The questions were, "Where is Sarah?" "Wherefore did Sarah laugh?" "Is anything too hard for the Lord?" Then follows the greatest question of all. "Shall I hide from Abraham the thing which I do?"

The thing, which the Lord was about to do He had evidently hidden from everyone else. Even Lot, Abraham’s nephew, who was to be one of the principals in the calamity of Sodom, had not been told what the Lord purposed to do, but He asks, "Shall I hide from Abraham that thing which I do?" Can we really imagine the extent of a statement such as this? It seems almost beyond the grasp of our understanding that the Lord of the universe would feel obliged to tell His friend Abraham beforehand of important things to come, but, because Abraham was His friend, He would do nothing without first revealing His plan to him. "Shall I hide from Abraham that thing which I do; seeing that Abraham shall surely become a great and mighty nation, and all the nations of the earth shall be blessed in him?" Now give heed to what follows. "For I know him, that he will command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the Lord, to do justice and judgment; that the Lord may bring upon Abraham that which He hath spoken of him.” Gen. 18:19

We have no need to walk in darkness as we have so often done in the past. On that blessed day of promise when our Lord Jesus gave His word to send the Holy Spirit into the hearts of believing men and women, He included some precious vows, one of which was this: "When He, the Spirit of truth, is come, He will guide you into all truth: for He shall not speak of Himself; but whatsoever He shall hear, that shall He hear; and He will show you things to come." John 16:13 And again: "Therefore said I that He shall take of Mine, and shall show it unto you." Verse 15 "The servant knoweth not what his lord doeth, but I have called you friends." Therefore, because you are friends, "He shall take of Mine and shew it unto you." The relationship of friend with friend is an intimate association. Thrice in Holy Scripture Abraham is called the friend of God; therefore the Lord said, "Shall I hide from Abraham that thing which I do?"

Every word the Lord spoke to Abraham in this eighteenth chapter of Genesis is worthy of a sermon in itself, but let us consider now with what awe-inspiring and persuasive statements Abraham besought the Lord, his friend, to have mercy on Sodom. And Abraham drew near and said:

(1) Wilt Thou also destroy the righteous with the wicked?
(2) That be far from Thee to do after this manner, to slay the righteous with the wicked.
(3) Shall not the judge of all the earth do right? Gen. 18:22

Oh, what mighty persuasions are these! If ever a man presented his cause to God, it was Abraham the friend of God. His entreaty on this occasion is one of the greatest examples of intercession in the whole Bible, or anywhere else for that matter. "Peradventure there be fifty righteous within the city: wilt Thou also destroy and not spare the place for the fifty righteous that are therein? That be far from Thee to do after this manner, to slay the righteous with the wicked... And the Lord said, If I find in Sodom fifty righteous within the city, then will I spare all the place for their sakes." Then Abraham reinforced his persuasion thus:

Peradventure there be forty-five!
Peradventure there be forty!
Peradventure there be thirty!
Peradventure there be twenty!
And finally, Peradventure there be ten,
And the Lord said
"I will not destroy it for ten's sake."

O the pure delight of a single hour
That before Thy throne I spend,
As I kneel in prayer and with Thee, my God,
I commune as friend with friend.

"Now the Lord had said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will show thee: And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shall be a blessing: And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed." Gen. 12:1-3
These three brief verses record not only the beginning of Abraham's friendship with God but also the beginning of a great and mighty nation. The ninth chapter of Romans is an astonishing revelation of God's plan for Israel, the seed of Abraham. Unto them pertains the adoption, (sonship) and the true body of Christ. From this nation the bride of Christ, the New Jerusalem, is to come. Rev. 21:19-21. This nation possesses the covenants, the promises, the glory, the giving of the law, and the service of God. Rom. 9:1-5. Against the word of God there can be no argument or gainsaying.

Each succeeding event in the life of this illustrious patriarch brought him into a deeper relationship with his God. His confidence in the Lord and the Lord's confidence in him increased with each successive trial, and every victory gained brought added promise to the covenant the Lord made with him. God is no respecter of persons. He does not have favorites or pets. He just has callings, and every man should abide in the calling wherewith he was called. Oh that people might learn that their calling is more of a pilgrimage - a life-long journey - than anything else. Every trial in life is an open opportunity to victory and spiritual depth, and every temptation reveals another opportunity to become a closer and a more intimate friend of God.

I must speak the truth. It is my opinion - and I think I have the mind of Christ - that, if you desire God's friendship and an ever deepening relationship with Him, the very first command He gives you will be the command He gave to Abraham. "For the Lord had said to Abram, (notice with special attention what He said), "Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house." However much we may love our country, our kindred, or our father's house, be assured that, if you are going to follow Christ, in all probability you will have to leave your dearest associates behind. "Get thee out!" "Follow Me," the Spirit calls. "Suffer me first to bury my father," says one. The Lord replies, "Let the dead bury their dead, but follow thou Me." "I will follow Thee whithersoever Thou goest," another affirms, but Jesus warned him, "The foxes have holes and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of man hath not where to lay His head." "Return to thy father's house." Thus pleads Naomi with Ruth; but Ruth replied, "Intreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee: for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God: Where thou diest, I will die, and there will I be buried: the Lord do so to me, and more also, if ought but death part thee and me." Ruth 1:16-17 These words must surely be among the most illustrious ever spoken. Thus Ruth, the Moabitess, evidently a descendant of Lot's incestuous daughter, Gen. 19:36-38, became the wife of Boaz, the great great grandfather of David, from whose lineage came our Lord Jesus Christ. Surely we may say that this specially chosen woman was also a friend of God.

Can any sane person believe otherwise than that we are now living in the last days of this age? Never since the days of Noah has such sin, rebellion, violence and confusion filled the whole earth. Never before has the church system seen deeper degradation. Amos, the herdsman of Tekoa, prophesying of our day, summed up our wretched state in these words: "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord God, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord: And they shall wander from sea to sea, and from the north even to the east. They shall run to and fro to seek the word of the Lord, and shall not find it." Amos 8:11-12 There are thousands of preachers and people run from sea to sea to hear them, but how little of the preaching we hear is anything more than a famine of the word of God, an explosion of wind and an appeal for more and more money, a thing which is powerless to advance the kingdom of God.

Leonard Ravenhill in a scathing rebuke to the modern Laodicean church made these searching remarks. "Since our pulpits have more puppets than prophets in this crisis hour of history and since the rocks have not yet cried out nor the stars fallen from their places, men of secular interest have become the prophets of gloom and of doom. Here are samples of what the intellectuals are saying. "It is becoming more and more obvious that it is not starvation nor microbes nor cancer, but man himself who is mankind's greatest danger."

"Anthony Storr in his book Human Aggression says: 'We are the crudest species that ever walked the earth.' Paul Tourniers is no less gloomy when he says. The dance of violence goes round and round.' (Ravenhill continues) Against this backdrop of misery I find it bitter medicine to read in the Wall Street Journal, July 11, a front page article with the subtitle, 'An evangelical revival is sweeping the nation, but with little effect.' This in my opinion is like saying, 'An earthquake shook the United States from San Francisco to New York, measuring 9.5 on the Richter scale, and no one felt it.'

"In a recent poll taken of Christians across the United States it found this horrendous condition. Ninety per cent who answered the poll said, 'I am carnal' or 'I am a babe in Christ.' Transfer this to the secular world. It would be something like this: 'We have just taken a poll of the men operating our supersonic fighter planes and our new computerized tanks and the crews of our nuclear aircraft and they are cub scouts.' What a shock the nation would have! But is the church shocked to discover this self-confessed impotence among us? Carnal men and babes in Christ!

"A preacher waving his Bible is featured in many magazines, crying, 'Help me clean up America!' But I dare any preacher to start a crusade to 'clean up the church.' St. Paul, storming the gates of hell, cried, 'I press toward the mark.' Instead believers today have the attitude, 'Relax and be raptured.'

"The New Testament church did not depend on an ethical majority but on a holy minority. The church now has more fashion than passion, is more pathetic than prophetic, is more superficial than supernatural. Events in the early church were amazing; today they are amusing. The early church was identified with persecutions, prisons and poverty; today it is identified with prosperity, popularity and personalities. We lack apostolic power because we lack apostolic piety, and we lack apostolic piety because we lack apostolic purity. We have an adulterated gospel preached by adulterers, and some of them sadly and sickenly claim to be Spirit filled.

"In Christ for the Nations magazine, August, 1980, there is a small article on the Third Force in Christianity. It reads like this: 'According to reliable sources,' Dr. Vinson Synan, Pentecostal Holiness, says, There are two and one-half million Protestants who have received the baptism of the Holy Spirit and are staying in their churches. Another two and one-half million Charismatic Catholics are staying in their churches. This is five million people. This condition has impact.' What impact? Where is it seen? I am puzzled and I get no answer to my question. There were one hundred and twenty in the upper room without all our media and electronics, without a thousand gospel printing houses and a hundred thousand preachers, without all our Bible Schools. They turned the world upside down. Now with five million (supposedly) Spirit filled people mentioned above, plus millions more in the mainline denominations, we have the greatest mass of sin within the nation that we have ever known." Thus writes Leonard Ravenhill and his summation is correct.
Abraham lived in Ur of the Chaldees, only a few miles from ancient Babylon. God's first command to him was, "Get thee out. Get thee out from thy country, thy kindred, and thy father's house unto a land that I will show thee." This, my brethren, is God's command to you. 2 Cor. 6:17-18. For twenty-two years I have not ceased to warn God's people of the appalling state of this Laodicean system, this Babel of confusion and refuge of lies that dares to call itself the church. The mighty prophet Isaiah said, "The priest and the prophet ... err in vision, they stumble in judgment. For all tables are full of vomit and filthiness, so that there is no place clean. Whom shall he teach knowledge? and whom shall he make to understand doctrine? Them that are weaned from the milk and drawn from the breasts." Isa. 28:7-9 The Babylon system has no desire for men and women of understanding and knowledge. It requires its adherents to remain babies at the breast. How dreadful is the appalling darkness that now covers the earth!

How often must you, my friend, hear this fearful warning before you obey? "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues. For her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities." Rev. 18:4-5 It was with difficulty that the angels persuaded Lot to flee out of Sodom before its destruction. His sons-in-law that had married his daughters refused to go and were incinerated with the city. Lot's wife looked back and became a monument to her error, and even Lot himself pleaded to remain in one of the little cities rather than flee to the glorious mountain as God had bidden him to do.

With a sincere heart and many prayers and tears I have warned God's people to leave the Babylon system with all its pomp, self-seeking and pride, and with its false prophets, of whom Jesus said there were many. You shall know them by their love of money. They have exchanged the upper room for the supper room. The church no longer invades the world. The world has invaded the church. "Come out from among them, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters, saith the Lord almighty." With this final exhortation I trust I am pure of the blood of all men.

Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, and by it he being dead yet speaketh. Enoch walked with God, having this testimony that he pleased God, and was translated that he might not see death. He was not, for God took him. And what can we say of Abraham that could be better than this text? "Abraham believed God, and it was imputed unto him for righteousness: and he was called the friend of God." James 2:23

Ah, we say, these are indeed illustrious men to have attained such blessed relationships with God, but, beloved, these things are written for our admonition upon whom the ends of the ages are come. The Holy Spirit teaches us that no height attained by them is beyond the realm of our own possibility if we, as Abraham, will "get us out" from the corruption of the world system and the confusion and blindness of Babylon and its religious systems, and if we, as Abel, will offer to God the more excellent sacrifice of faith and walk with God as Enoch did. Each of these illustrious men was a called out saint who walked with God while religion in its somnolent state slept on, anesthetized by the false prophets and drugged by the world system it imitates and loves.

MOSES, DAVID, JOHN

MOSES: THE MAN WHO KNEW GOD FACE TO FACE

The glorious Philadelphia period of the church age has passed into history. The brotherly love and the deep, earth, shaking revivals that accompanied that blessed period in time from the days of George Whitefield and John Wesley until about 1930 are gone. We are now living in the sad state of affairs represented by the Laodicean church of Rev. 3:14-22, the time of lukewarmness when nothing is hot or cold, but lukewarm; when nothing is black or white, but only gray; when nothing is good or evil, but a horrible mixture of carnality and spirituality. The wretched situation has become so mingled that the divinely ordered place of male and female has given way to a kind of devilish unisex where no distinction between male and female is recognized. God loathes the situation and He spues it out of His mouth as distasteful evil. Christ would much rather be a friend to publicans and sinners than He would condone the wretched conglomeration of good and evil everywhere manifest in the lukewarm church system of our day. His only command to the few pure in heart who keep their robes white in this end time abomination is, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her sins nor receive of her plagues." "Unto the angel of the church of the Laodiceans write: These things saith the Amen, the faithful and true witness, the beginning of the creation of God; I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot; I would thou wert cold or hot. So then, because thou sayest, I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked: I counsel thee to buy of Me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear." Rev. 3:14-18

As long as the ages endure and men slavishly walk after the dictates of the carnal mind, the evil that filled the world with woe in the beginning will continue to wither and blight us until the end. God be praised that in every age our heavenly Father has reserved to Himself a people who walk after His mind and after His will - who have ceased to walk after the flesh that they might follow and know the way of the Spirit.

Moses was a man chosen of God, a man who knew God face to face, a man "elect according to the foreknowledge of God" through lifelong sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth. Holy Scripture records that on the day of his birth his parents saw that he was a "proper child." A proper child! What else could this assertion mean than that his parents knew Moses was born to be a man beyond the ordinary, a man elect according to the foreknowledge of God? Because this blessed understanding filled their hearts, they willingly disobeyed the king's commandment, committing their son to the terrible river in a frail basket of reeds. Yet it was not to the river they committed him, but to the mercy and kindness of God. It was by faith they disobeyed the king and it was by faith they believed and obeyed God. Thus was the wisdom and power of God made manifest, bringing Moses, their son, to no less a place than the palace of Pharaoh to be raised and nourished at the table and in the household of Pharaoh, the king who had sought to destroy both Moses and his people. Such are God's ways, and His ways are past finding out. Oh, that His saints would learn this lesson of faith - that all things are working together for good to those who love the Lord, to them who are the called according to His purpose! Rom. 8:28

So Moses grew, nourished, brought up and educated in the house of Pharaoh, learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians. Because this "proper child" was an elect child, he refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter. In so doing, he refused the throne to Egypt, "choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king." Heb. 11:24-26

From his childhood he seemed to know that he was to be a deliverer of his people, and when he was full forty years old, seeing an Egyptian smite a Hebrew, the urge to deliver his people rose within him. He smote the Egyptian and hid his body in the sand. Then, fearing the wrath of Pharaoh, he fled into the wilderness to feed the flock of Jethro, a Midianite and a descendant of Keturah, the wife of Abraham. There he married Zipporah, the daughter of Jethro. Moses during his wandering had indeed married an Ethiopian woman, Adoniah the Cushite queen, who had been given him as a reward for defeating Kikianus, but Moses, knowing that intermarriage with non-Israelitish races was forbidden by the commandment of God, refused to cohabit with her or to turn his eyes to her. "So Moses took the city by his wisdom, and the children of Cush placed him on the throne instead of Kikianus, king of Cush. And they placed the royal crown upon his head, and they gave him for a wife Adoniah the Cushite queen, wife of Kikianus. And Moses feared the Lord God of his fathers, so that he came not to her, nor did he turn his eyes to her." Book of Jasher, chapter 73:30-32 Moses' sons were the children of Zipporah, the daughter of Jethro, the Midianite, a descendant of Abraham and Keturah.

When Moses was eighty years old, he met God in a new way at the burning bush. This marvelous fire of God that lights and warms, but consumes only our bondages to the old system and all carnality and earthly corruption, was to be the transforming power of his life. Here he heard the soul transforming voice of God and here he saw a manifestation of God's glory that revolutionized his very being, spirit, soul and body. "Take thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground," came the command of the Holy One of Israel, and Moses, who knew not until then that it was God, took off his shoes, bared his head and stood bowed in reverence and godly fear in God's holy presence. The Lord, who said to Peter, "Follow Me, and I will make you fishers of men," was calling Moses from his sheepfold to be a patient and long-suffering shepherd of His chosen people Israel. He was casting off the grimy shoes of earth's toil that he might be shod with the shoes of the preparation of the gospel of peace.

To every saint of the Lord there must come a moment in time when there is a special meeting with God - a time when we come to know Christ in a new way. There must come a transforming experience when old things pass away and all things become new - a time of breaking the bonds of tradition and coming out to walk in newness of life with Christ. How wonderful are the ways of God, and how sadly few there are who know them! Perhaps the most revealing passage concerning the man Moses, who knew God face to face, came from the lips of David when in that blessed Psalm 103 he said, "He made known His ways unto Moses, His acts unto the children of Israel." Verse 7 The world is overflowing with people who know about God, but the number of people in each generation who know Him is pitifully few. There are millions in our day who can tell us about the acts of God, but those who know God's ways and are walking in harmony with His merciful purpose for the ages are incredibly few.

Every week the air waves are full of sermons telling about the acts of God, some miracle that was performed, some physical healing that took place in answer to prayer, some financial help that fell from the hand of God. But, beloved friend, it is possible to know and see all the acts of God and still be an utter stranger concerning His ways. It is possible to preach fiery sermons on the law, but never know the lawgiver to have Him in our hearts. The multitudes love to hear of miracles, healings, revivals and deliverances, but how many sermons are preached on the theme of suffering, or how many know that we must through great tribulation enter into the kingdom of God? How many people are aware that the dreadful things at large in the world today are all part of an eternal purpose through which God is bringing forth a kingdom of righteousness and a vast family of sons who know Him face to face and who in ages to come will reign in His mind that the entire universe may come into harmony with His eternal purpose?

"He made known His ways unto Moses, His acts to the children of Israel." The children of Israel could shout the victory and tell of their marvelous deliverance from the bondage of Egypt, but only Moses knew God's purpose in delivering them. The multitudes could take their timbrels and sing with Miriam, "Sing ye to the Lord, for He hath triumphed gloriously; the horse and his rider hath He thrown into the sea," Exod. 15:21, as they gloried in the acts of God, yet they knew so little of His ways that the selfsame crowd a few weeks later could dance with equal enthusiasm about a golden calf and shout with a shout that could be heard for miles, "These be thy gods, O Israel, that brought thee up out of the land of Egypt." These, the people of God, could tell of the mighty wonders wrought in Egypt. They could speak with incredible eloquence of the opening of the Red Sea and of their passage through it on dry land. They had seen the barren rock open its mouth to fill the desert with rivers of sparkling water to quench the thirst of two million parching tongues besides thousands of thirsty cattle. They could tell their children of the manna, angels' food from heaven that stood like dew in the wilderness every morning. They had seen Joshua's victory over Amalek and they had trembled at the sight of smoke and fire on Mt. Sinai and had heard the voice of God; yet, for all their knowledge of the marvelous acts of God, they knew none of His ways.

Oh, how like the Israelites are the people of this Laodicean age! They can tell of signs and wonders, answers to prayer. They are full of good works, church programs, revival meetings, seminars and all the rest - works and acts in abundance - but the ways of God they know not; and when we speak to them about the eternal purposes, they become as dumb as oysters and look at us as though we have taken leave of our senses. Moses did indeed see God's glory and he knew all the acts of God, but he knew something far more than acts and miracles. He knew God, and the Spirit of God had revealed His eternal purposes unto him in such a way that he understood how every victory and every defeat were working together to produce exactly the result the Lord had designed.

On that dismal, woebegone day when the people saw that Moses delayed to come down from the mount, they had gathered themselves together unto Aaron and said, "Up, make us gods, which shall go before us; for as for this Moses, the man that brought us out of the land of Egypt, we know not what is become of him." Exod. 32:1. And Aaron, not knowing the ways of God any more than the people he was trying to lead, obeyed their demands and made a golden calf for them to worship, saying, "These be thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt." Oh how quickly the people who know only the acts of God begin to turn His glory into some shameful thing! How quickly after the most glorious victories the golden head of Babylon begins to raise its image! How quickly the favor of the El Shaddai, the breasted One, is lost when we turn away from His abundant provision to depend on gold and silver as we lust after carnal things!

There was a man by the name of Achan among those valiant saints who invaded and triumphantly overthrew the city of Jericho, but this same man caused the shameful defeat of the hosts of the Lord when they made their attack on the wicked city of Ai. Among the spoils of war he had espied a Babylonian garment and a wedge of gold, both of which are telling symbols of Babylon. The garment indeed was beautiful and the wedge of gold weighty and useful in the purchase of all the things that go with that system of blasphemy, which quickly displaces the glory of God with the glory of man, and the moment that begins to take place, the days of triumph are over and will never return until the Lord raises up a people who glorify Him and have no dependence upon the gold of this benighted age or the garments of the unrighteous.

"Thou art this head of gold," spake Daniel to Nebuchadnezzar, the king of Babylon, and verily it is true that gold is the head of all the kingdoms of this world, whether they be silver, brass, iron, or iron mingled with clay, gold is their god. It was Nebuchadnezzar, the king of Babylon, who made an image of gold and commanded that all men everywhere should worship it. Few indeed of all the hosts of Babylon were they who did not immediately, yea, gladly, fall down to worship this image of blasphemy, and few, pitifully few, there be in our day who do not willingly bow their heads and do obeisance and homage before the image of gold. Everywhere men and women strike and demand more money even while unemployment increases and the world totters on the brink of utter bankruptcy.

Gold, silver, and money, money, money is the plea of almost all the radio preachers. Each one has his own program to advance - programs, which cannot be advanced without incredible and ever increasing sums of money, and before this god of money they fall down to worship. Everything from Hollywood stars to puppets are used to gain this unholy end, but they will find in the end that their wedge of gold will be the loss of the battle and the golden head will feel the weight of the stone cut out without hands, that all its seeming pomp and pride will become as the dust of the summer threshing floor.

There were three men in Babylon who refused to bow down to Babylon's unholy image of gold. Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego were their names. Oh, how few among the people of the nation were willing to stand with unbowed heads, considering it better to suffer the affliction of a burning, fiery furnace than to bow down to the shameful and cursed image, the golden god, that has captivated and made slaves of the whole earth. As Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego were led to the roaring furnace, their spirits must have sung. The flame shall not hurt thee, My only design Thy dross to consume and Thy gold to refine.

Some of the truest and most forceful statements I have ever read regarding the modern Babylonish church system and its worship of gold were written by Gene Edwards of California. Believing his dynamic words, so forceful and vivid, will be an awakening to many, I beg the liberty to quote him here in the following nine paragraphs.

"The era between 1100 and 1400 has generally been considered the most corrupt in church history, an age when the papacy went to the highest bidder, priests were alcoholics, popes bore children, and the church was the most powerful political and financial force on earth.

"But we live in a day when churches look like storybook castles and the servants of God are salaried (a scriptural abomination), live in mansion-like homes, drive the latest automobile, are cushioned by a retirement fund, and are applauded as pillars in community affairs. The present day minister has the same hobby as his cousin the Pharisee - investing in some local money-making scheme - and is so derelict in relation to his faith that the idea of owning nothing throughout his whole life would strike him as cultish. He is quite unlike his father, the early Christian, who was the natural enemy of his community, who fought for the privilege of living his whole life owning nothing but the clothes on his back, and who gloried in dying a pauper.

"So security oriented, so money conscious, the Lord's servant today has a mentality so twisted that he automatically looks upon every new wind of God, every new sermon idea, and every new spiritual experience as something to get hold of, package up, and sell as a commodity. Whether it be tongues, casting out demons, or getting Bibles into Russia, he can figure out some way to make a living at it.

"We can be grateful the Lord did not choose to first come in our century, for if He had, we would have conjured up a supersonic, guided tour of the Holy Land, sold tickets to the crucifixion, and gone on the national conference circuit armed with slides in living color to tell all about it.

"The Lord's servant today, hands down, has won the trophy for the wealthiest, most commercial, sophisticated, worldly-minded, materialistic, and comfortable man in the whole history of religion. All other ages blush and drop back in awe.

"There is one more trophy to which this century - above any other - can lay undisputed claim, that is, unless a radical change takes place soon. In every century history has recorded the names of a few devout men and women whose hallmark was awesome spiritual depth and utter devotional abandonment. There were such men even during the bleakest days the dark ages ever witnessed. There have always been a few who knew Him in the depths. The age you and I live in has simply recorded no such people. I am both ashamed and infuriated. Historically this century must be categorized as the most universally shallow age ever to parade across the pages of church history.

"It is my studied judgment that some future generation will deem this to be the darkest century in church history.

"More corrupt than the dark days before Luther; more impotently intellectual than during the heyday of Calvinism; more financially perverted than the days that caused John the Baptist to explode; more intoxicated with the drive for spiritual power than any age, yet exercising that outward power with less internal transformation than anyone since King Saul; enamored with the gifts, yet hardly knowing the Giver; this century has produced the most commercial, materialistic, fad-oriented people ever to claim His name.

"Some of you might feel this assessment is just a little too harsh. I would respond to you by pointing to one last trophy this age has won: We seem to be more totally blind to our deprivation than all other centuries lumped together.

"It is true we have built more buildings and founded more religious organizations than all the past eras combined, but this only highlights our immortal ability to raise money and then waste it on utterly folly. It is true that today's Christianity has won more men to Christ than all other ages combined, but it is also just as true that those converts have set new records for the short length of time they have followed the Lord. Although the Lord has gained a multitude of new believers, He has netted virtually no blindly abandoned devotees."

These are indeed potent words. My own spirit bears witness to their truth. To them we might add the inspired words which actually fell from the lips of Christ when through John He sent a message to the Laodicean church, which without doubt represents the church of the twentieth century as surely as the church of Ephesus represented the church in the age of the apostles. Thus it is written to the people of our day; "Because thou sayest, I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked: I counsel thee to buy of Me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thv nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eye-salve, that thou mayest see." Rev. 3:15-18

These scathing words of rebuke should be studied with prayer, meditation and fasting; otherwise we will go right on believing that all is well. We will point to the abundance of our church buildings and the multitude of our programs for the good of mankind. We will rejoice in the company of converts we have made and add up the abundance of our financial wealth and, of course, come to the inevitable conclusion that all is well. We have need of nothing. All we need to do is wait for the day when we will be raptured out of all hurt, tribulation or suffering. Scoff if you will, but that is the way things are in our day.

While Israel was shouting and dancing around a golden calf that could neither hear nor see, touch, taste nor smell, a mindless nothing that could neither think nor walk nor understand, and while they shouted and acclaimed, "These be thy gods, O Israel, that brought you up out of Egypt," there was one man who was meeting with Jehovah Himself, beholding His glory and speaking to Him face to face. And verily, I tell you it is true that even in our day amid the lukewarmness, the temporal riches and satisfaction with the increase in goods, and the multiplication of proselytes there is a remnant who is separating itself from these abominations. They are obeying the urgent, almost terrifying command of God, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her sins nor receive of her plagues."

These elect people are living by the same faith that flourished in the heart of Abel. They are walking with God as Enoch in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation. They are becoming friends of God as Abraham. They, like David, are men and women after God's own heart, and because they are thus walking with God with such devotion, they, like Moses, are coming to know Him face to face.

Oh, brethren, beloved of God, may we cease our urgent plea with a reference to that beloved apostle, Paul, a man who knew the acts of God as few men had ever done - for it is written, "By the hands of Paul God wrought special miracles." Yea, his whole life was a miracle. But now hear him pray as He comes nearer to the end of His earthly journey! He does not pray for more power. He does not plead for more converts. He does not lay hold of God for greater miracles. He does not glory in past accomplishment nor dwell upon the wonders of his life for even a moment; but his prayer rends the heavens and reaches the heart of God as he prays, "That I may know Him and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings, being made conformable unto His death; if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead." That I may know Him! That is the important thing in all ages. Moses knew God face to face. He was no pet or favorite, for our God is no respecter of persons. He is calling out a people in our day, the age of lukewarm, self-satisfied Laodicea. To them He is saying, "If any man hear My voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and sup with him, and he with Me." And may I with all reverence add that this shall be a meeting face to face.

DAVID: THE MAN AFTER GOD'S OWN HEART

Of Saul, the son of Kish, it is written that he "was higher than any of the people from his shoulders and upward." I Sam. 10:23. Physically he was a splendid specimen, but spiritually it is to be feared he was a dwarf. By nature he was retiring. He made no effort to promote himself as king, which was very commendable, and, when the day came for his exaltation, he was nowhere to be found, for he had hidden himself among the stuff. I Sam. 10:21, 22 The Spirit of God would have us learn as we journey along through life that we must never judge man or woman by outward appearance. The sight of the eye and the hearing of the ear can be extremely deceiving. Man is prone to look upon the outward appearance, but the Lord looks upon the heart. We look upon the stature of a man or the beauty of a woman, deciding from their outward appearance that we have found the person we require only to discover later that the giant in body may be a midget in spirit or the beautiful face may belie a depraved nature, completely unreliable and undependable. Even the great Samuel himself, it would seem, needed to learn this valuable lesson. As the sons of Jesse passed before him, strapping in physique and handsome of face, Samuel said, "Surely the anointed of the Lord is before Him." To this the Lord replied, "Look not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature; for I have refused him: for the Lord seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart." 1 Sam. 16:7

Saul, though a good soldier, was rejected as king because he failed to carry out the mind of the Lord in every detail, and as time passed, the Spirit of the Lord departed from him and an evil spirit from the Lord began to trouble him. It was on the memorable occasion of David's remarkable victory over the swaggering, defiant Goliath that the demon of envy began to manifest itself in him. After David's signal victory over the mighty champion of Gath, Saul heard the maidens singing, "Saul has slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands." 1 Sam. 18:7 He hated the fact that more honor was ascribed to the young David than was ascribed to himself. Thus the evil spirit of envy began to work its destructive power within him, increasing more and more until it slew him.

"A sound heart is the life of the flesh: but envy the rottenness of the bones." Prov. 14:30 The mighty Stephen in his condemnation of Israel's unbelief declared. "The patriarchs, moved with envy, sold Joseph into Egypt." Acts 7:9 The wise man Solomon made this awesome assertion: "Wrath is cruel, and anger is outrageous; but who is able to stand before envy?" Prov. 27:4 It was not until the maidens sang, "Saul has slain his thousands and David his ten thousands," that the green-eyed monster of envy began to lift its ugly head in Saul's spirit. From that day on, it is stated, "Saul eyed David," a statement which in its analysis is hatefully significant. From that day forward David, innocent as he was, could do nothing right in the eyes of Saul and every best intention on David's part was looked upon and judged by an evil eye. Only those who have been beset by envious men can understand the diabolical working of envy. Destroy it, my friend, before it destroys you. Envy will turn the dearest friends into hateful, remorseless enemies. "Base envy withers at another's joy and hates the excellence it cannot reach." (Thompson). "An evil disease, say they, cleaveth fast unto him: and now that he lieth he shall rise up no more. Yea, mine own familiar friend, in whom I trusted, which did eat of my bread, hath lifted up his heel against me." Psa. 41:8, 9 Thus in his rejection mourned David, for said he, "It was not an enemy that reproached me: then I could have borne it: neither was it he that hated me that did magnify himself against me; then I would have hid myself from him. But it was thou, a man mine equal, my guide, and mine acquaintance. We took sweet counsel together and walked unto the house of God in company." Psa. 55:12-14 Little did David, the king of Israel, know that in all these things he was being made in the image of Jesus Christ our Saviour, as the sufferings of Christ were being filled up in him and their eternal benefits manifested in his own spirit.

David was man after God's own heart. Never need we imagine that he was a man without faults. The truth is his life was full of them. Never need we think he was without mistakes. "A man who has never made a mistake has never made anything." Like all mankind David was born in sin and shapen in iniquity. There is none righteous, no, not one. He, like all his brethren, had a carnal mind and a carnal nature which would plague and curse him wherever opportunity afforded - a fallen nature which had to be revealed before it could be crucified. When you think you stand, dear brother, take heed lest you fall. When we think we stand, imagining in our own judgment that we are making progress, it is the carnal mind that is telling us so. This awesome lesson poor David discovered to his crushing dismay after his carnal affair with Bathsheba, the beautiful wife of Uriah the Hittite, and his subsequent fraudulent deception in sending Uriah into the most dangerous field of battle that he might be slain. Such shameful manifestations of carnality at times appear in the lives of God's people that the hidden man of sin may be revealed and the deep-rooted carnality may be nailed to the cross in crucifixion with Christ and the new man "after God's own heart" perfected. Thus, when the awfulness of his hidden sin was made manifest to him by the parable of the prophet Nathan, David, the man after God's own heart, burst forth in bitter repentance, confession and prayer. "Have mercy upon me, O God, according to Thy loving kindness: according to the multitude of thy tender mercies blowout m' transgressions. Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin. For I acknowledge my transgressions: my sin is ever before me," Psa. 51:1-3. "Purge me with hyssop (bitterness) and I shall be clean: wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow." Verse 7 "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me." Verse 10

Oh that sinners would come to God with such a prayer as this in their hearts, a prayer that bespeaks the utter desolation of the spirit! It was this kind of repentance that Paul proclaimed when he said, "Godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of; but the sorrow of the world worketh death." 2 Cor. 7:10 Sinners do not need a handshake from an evangelist. They need godly sorrow for sin and a real repentance before God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ. That will do more in five minutes to establish a man on the road to heaven and sonship than all the sermons and programs the world has ever known. "A broken and a contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise." Psa. 51:17 The Holy Spirit has come to convince the world of sin and righteousness and judgment, and when He has done so, men and women who thoroughly repent of their sins return to them no more. The man who brushes himself up on the outside does so only to return as a dog to his vomit and as a sow to her wallowing in the mire.

The man after God's own heart wishes for nothing outside the will and mind of God. There is a place, which saints may reach in God where the mind of Christ dwells in them and controls their innermost beings. There His mind is their mind. His will is their will, and His purpose is their purpose. That place will not be reached but by trial, tribulation, temptation and suffering. It is the fellowship of His sufferings that makes us conformable to His death. The fact that a man may fervently testify to his devotion and consecration before God means very little. It is the fire that tries every man's work of what sort it is. The proud man is never aware of his pride; therefore the fire must reveal it. The covetous man knows not that he is covetous, but the fire will reveal it. Pride cometh before a fall and a haughty spirit before destruction. The envious man knows not that the bitterness and death of envy is cursing and poisoning his soul. He imagines rather that his trouble is not with himself, but with the one he envies. As Chapman said, "Envy is like a fly that passes all a body's sounder parts and dwells upon the sores."

We may be sure that, when Peter confidently affirmed, "If I should die with Thee, yet will I not deny Thee," he meant it with all his heart. The trouble was he did not know his heart. Paul spoke the truth when, speaking of his persecution of the saints. He said, "I thought I did God a service," but it was his to discover that his rebellion against Christ arose from the "man of sin" within him, who motivated not only his persecution of the saints but also his hatred for Christ.

"If we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged." 1 Cor. 11:31 But let us not waste our time commending our own self-righteousness, but rather judging our carnality and sin that we might be cleansed from it. The Laodicean church, that is to say, the church as it is in our day, has smugly settled down commending herself and arrogantly boasting, "I am rich and increased in goods, and have need of nothing," but the judgment of God is that she is wretched and miserable and poor and blind and naked. There is nothing good nor anything commendable that can be said for the church system in our day. Every word spoken in defense of a system that is rich and increased in goods and has need of nothing is a contradiction of God's judgment that the system is wretched and miserable, poor, blind and naked. When a Roman pope wryly remarked, "The church can no longer say, 'Silver and gold have I none,' " well did Thomas Aquinas reply, "Neither can it say, 'In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk.' "

David was a man after God's own heart. As we read his beautiful Psalms, we become aware of his intense inner relationship with God. We are led to believe that this illustrious man must have spent the greater part of his life either talking about God or communing with Him. As I have journeyed in my pilgrimage through life, I have discovered that the only person who can talk about God in sincerity is the one who has spent much time talking to Him. Paul once said, "There are many vain talkers whose mouths must be stopped," and John wrote, "They profess that they know God, but in works they deny Him." The man who communes with God will soon discover that he is becoming a man after God's own heart. There is one thing, however, that is infinitely more important than talking to God and that is listening to God. Communion is a two way street, but the better part is the part dear Mary chose when she sat for hours at Jesus' feet and listened to the living words He poured into her soul.

A. B. Simpson was a man of deep spiritual experience. I quote the following from his article LISTENING.

"A score of years ago a friend placed in my hand a book called TRUE PEACE. It was an old medieval message and it had but one thought - that God was waiting in the depth of my being to talk to me if I would only get still enough to hear His voice. I thought this would be a very easy matter and so began to get still. I had no sooner commenced than a perfect pandemonium of voices reached my ears, a thousand clamoring notes from without and within, until I could hear nothing but their noise and din. Some were my own voices, my own questions; some were my very prayers. Others were suggestions of the tempter and the voices from the world of turmoil. In every direction I was pulled and pushed and greeted with noisy acclamations and unspeakable unrest. It seemed necessary for me to listen to some of them and to answer some of them; but God said, 'Be still and know that I am God.'

"Then came the conflict of thoughts for tomorrow and its duties and cares; but God said, 'Be still.' And as I listened and slowly learned to obey and shut my ears to every sound, I found after a while that, when other voices ceased, (or I ceased to hear them), there was a still small voice in the depths of my being that began to speak with an inexpressible tenderness and power and comfort. As I listened, it became to me the voice of prayer, the voice of wisdom, the voice of duty, and I did not need to think so hard or pray so hard or trust so hard. That still, small voice of the Holy Spirit in my heart was God speaking in my secret soul; was God's answer to all knowledge and all prayer and all blessings, for it was the living God Himself as my life, my all.

"It is thus that our spirits drink of the life of the risen Lord and we go forth to life's conflicts and duties like a flower that has drunk in through the shades of night the cool and crystal drops of dew. But, as dew never falls on a stormy night, so the dew of His grace never comes to a restless soul. Oh, the calm! The rest! The peace which comes as we wait in His presence until we hear from Him!"
Be still! Just now be still!
There comes a presence very mild and sweet;
White are the sandals on His noiseless feet.
It is the Comforter whom Jesus sent
To teach thee what the words He uttered meant.
The willing, waiting spirit He doth fill;
If thou would'st hear His message,
Dear soul, be still!

The deep and blessed truth David left as an heritage for the saints of all ages could only have come to him through personal experience. No truth will ever grip us or bring transformation to our lives until it has become ours through personal experience. What blessing and transformation is ours when we come to know experimentally that which the Spirit speaks! "The Lord is my shepherd," David sang fifteen hundred years before our wonderful Christ preached the sermon found in the tenth chapter of John's gospel. "I am the good shepherd; the good shepherd giveth His life for the sheep." Oh weary frustrated soul, what a blessedness will be yours when you become aware that the Good Shepherd dwells within!

Tis the same dear Shepherd leads me
And He never shall forsake,
For He trod the path before me;
And He knows the way I take.

His guiding touch the touch that points the way before me;
His guiding touch shall lead me till I reach the goal.
I need but trust Him when my weary steps would falter;
His guiding touch shall be the anchor of my soul.
David, the man after God's own heart, taught us not to fret.

Fret is such a descriptive verb. It means to be vexed or annoyed or chafed, to be rankled or festered or agitated. "Fret not thyself because of evil doers... for they shall soon be cut down as the grass, and wither as the green herb." Psa. 37:1-2 So many of God's precious saints spend most of their time fretting. They remind me of a little verse I learned in school.

Among the thistles on the hill
In tears sat Little Sorrow.
I see a black cloud in the west;
Twill bring a storm tomorrow.
And if it storms, where shall I be
And what will keep the rain off me?
Woe is me! said Little Sorrow.

Dearly beloved, learn this: If you worry and fret, you cannot trust.

Then David taught us to trust in the Lord and do good, adding this precious promise: "So shall thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shall be fed." It was God who ran the world before you and I arrived in it and it will be He who orders the universe after we are gone. Why, then, should we not learn to trust Him to order all things according to His excellent wisdom now that we may live in peace before Him?

Instead of fretting and worrying and living in mistrust David, the man after God's own heart, said, "Delight thyself in the Lord, and He shall give thee the desires of thine heart." Those who learn to delight themselves in the Lord must first become devoid of all personal desires. To them the will of God is their meat and drink. They desire only what He desires; thus He gives them the desires of their hearts. God knows our every need and He has promised to supply all our needs according to His riches in glory. Are you having a hard time managing your affairs and your future? There is a blessed secret, which all saints should know, and somewhere in his pilgrimage David had learned this transformingly beautiful revelation. "Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also
Then this man after God's own heart taught us another precious secret - a disclosure very difficult for most of us to learn. "Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for Him: fret not thyself because of him who prospereth in his way, because of the man who bringeth wicked devices to pass." Psa. 37:7

Rest in the Lord! What a beautiful thing to do! But have we ever learned to do it? How often we place a sacrifice on the altar only to snatch it back again! How often we commit all things to the Lord and then fret and worry lest He may not look after it properly! I know whom I have believed," wrote Paul, "and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him." The song writer sang, "Leave it there! Leave it there! Take your burden to the Lord and leave it there." If we could only learn that Jesus Christ dwells within, and from His throne He is directing our steps, keeping our trust and bearing our burdens, what a different world it would be! Please take note that Paul did not say, "I know in whom I have believed," but "I know whom I have believed." There is a world of difference.

After exhorting us to trust and not fret, to delight ourselves in the Lord, to commit our way to Him and rest in Him, David offered one final blessed word of advice, a word of wisdom, which every saint can learn and practice if he will. Though it is difficult at first, it is a must, an essential, to all deep Christian experience. "Wait on the Lord." Verse 34. Dear Christian friend, to wait is the hardest thing we impatient people have to do. It must have been very difficult for Abram and Sarah to wait long years for the pledge and assurance given by God that their seed would be as the sand of the sea for number and as the stars of heaven for multitude. It must even have been an embarrassment to Abram to have his name changed to Abraham, meaning the father of a multitude, at a time when they had no children at all and when both of them were far past the age of childbearing. We may rush about to fulfill the promise, but God says, "Wait." "Though it tarry, wait for it; for it will surely come." "I waited patiently for the Lord, and He inclined unto me and heard me." Saint of God, begin today to wait patiently before God. It is a marvelous secret.

Psalm 22 is the Psalm of the crucifixion. "My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken Me?" Psalm 23 is the resurrection Psalm, the Psalm of the good shepherd. This is without doubt the most familiar passage among Old Testament writings. Psalm 24 is the Psalm of the kingdom. "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof; the world and they that dwell therein." "The kingdom is the Lord's, and He is the governor among the nations. All they that be fat upon the earth shall eat and worship: all they that go down to the dust shall bow before Him." "For the earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof." "The Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?"

Thus wrote the sweet singer of Israel, the illustrious head of the House of David, the man after God's own heart.

JOHN, THE DISCIPLE WHOM JESUS LOVED

Twice in scripture John is called the disciple whom Jesus loved. John 13:23 and 21:20 Unto those who love God the immutable declaration is freely given: "If a man love Me, he will keep My words: and My Father will love him, and We will come unto him and make Our abode with him." John 14:23 The great secret of spiritual illumination, comprehension and understanding is made manifest in this blessed statement of Christ: "He that hath My commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth Me: and he that loveth Me shall be loved of My Father, and / will love him, and manifest Myself to him." John 14:21 John was the disciple whom Jesus loved because Jesus was the Christ whom John loved. Man's love for God can never go unrequited. Our Father in heaven reveals His secrets only to those who love and honor Him. As the years pass by, there is an ever increasing unfolding of the unspeakable mysteries of God. With each and every revelation of His glory the spirit of man bows with ever increasing adoration before the inexhaustible wonder of what He is, what His purposes are, and the majesty by which He carries them through to such glorious conclusions.

"O Lord, our Lord, how excellent is Thy name in all the earth, who has set Thy glory above the heavens. Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings hast Thou ordained strength because of Thine enemies, that Thou mightest still the enemy and the avenger. When I consider Thy heavens, the work of Thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which Thou has ordained; what is man, that Thou are mindful of him? and the son of man that Thou visitest him? For Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honor. Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of Thy hands: Thou hast put all things under his feet." Psa. 8:1-6 With much adoring reflection the Psalmist admires the wonders of Him who has set His glory above the heavens and owns the earth as the work of His fingers, and who has honored man in that He has called him and ordained him to be placed over the work of His hands.

Men who would learn of God must first learn to love and reverence God. The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. We may assure our hearts that no man will make any discoveries in God until He, the Lord and creator of the universe and all things therein, has become sacred in His holiness, glorious in power, fearful in praises, doing wonders. It is when we see Him as He is that we begin to love Him, and it is when we begin to love Him that He comes to us to make His abode with us. There begins the revelation of His most glorious secrets to our hearts.

It was Mary of Bethany who sat at the feet of the Lord, and she it was who broke the alabaster box to pour the fragrant ointment upon His head and feet; and, when her ointment was outpoured upon Him, the whole house and all that was therein b asked in the fragrance of Christ's presence. A penny represented the wages of a day when Jesus was on earth, but Mary lavished three hundred pennies' worth of ointment upon Him, the labor of a whole year poured upon His blessed head, first because she loved Him for whom she knew Him to be and, secondly, to anoint Him for the burial she knew was soon to come.

"This ointment might have been sold and the money given to the poor," chided the covetous Judas, not because he cared for the poor, but because he carried the bag and helped himself to that which was put therein. What good, my brother, would it do to give to the poor and still have no love for God? Has not inspiration wisely spoken, "Though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not love, it profiteth me nothing?" Oh how much vile hypocrisy has come in these last days under pretense of helping the poor! Hypocrisy that has robbed the widow in the name of the poor, then stolen that which was put in the bag.

Man is always looking on the outward appearance of things, but the Lord ever looks upon the heart. The disdainful heart of man looks on through critical eyes and makes his carnal judgments, never knowing what blessed intention may have filled the soul of the one he judged. He goes on accusing the victims of his malice because he sees them in the same spirit he himself is in. He does not behold the motivating love of the widow who cast her mite into the treasury of the Lord, but because he is rich and can cast in much without concern, his ignorant heart neither knows nor considers that this poor woman, because of her devotion to Christ, has cast in all of her living. But He whose eye beholds the sparrow when it falls has not missed a heartbeat here, and His great mind, so full of equity and right, has judged that she has given more than they all. She had given her all and did not know that she had gained the love of her Lord, whose all seeing eye had seen her humble devotion; and methinks He commanded His angels to abundantly supply her every need.

How often during our lives we have marveled at the miracle of the loaves and fishes and told of Him whose anointed lips blessed the tiny loaves and the little fishes that with the blessing of Christ they should be multiplied to feed five thousand hungry men, besides the women and a multitude of children, that when they were filled and could eat no more, they took up twelve baskets full of fragments! But often in our telling of this blessed story the figure most forgotten is the little lad who gave his five buns and two little fishes, which his thoughtful mother had put up in a basket for his lunch when he asked her permission to go to the desert to hear the preaching of the mighty prophet of Galilee. Little is ever said of this little fellow, who was just as hungry as anyone there, but who gave to the gracious Saviour the lunch he might have eaten himself. Surely the lad's faith must have told him that, should he eat the buns and fish himself, he alone would be fed, but in giving it in love to Christ, the multitude would be fed. I doubt if He whose eyes behold and whose eyelids try the hearts of men would consider the alabaster box of ointment given by Mary or even the mite given by the widow to be a greater act of love than that of the little boy who let kind Andrew know that in his lunch basket he had five loaves and two little fishes that Jesus could have if He wanted them.

O barefoot boy with face of tan,
Blessings on thee, little man!
He who loves with purity considers not the gift of the lover but the love of the giver. Paul Douglas wrote, "When to the surprise of most people I was elected to the Senate, I was startled to discover the number of new friends whom my wife and I never suspected we possessed. The friends wished to express their deep affection by sending us presents and for almost a week the mailman and the express agents staggered up the stairs to our apartment with their arms laden with packages... My wife and I took counsel with each other and then returned all the parcels, collect." "The best thing to give an enemy is forgiveness; to an opponent, tolerance; to a friend, your heart; to your child, a good example; to a father, deference; to a mother, conduct that will make her proud of you; to yourself, respect; to all men, charity." (Balfour).

If the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom and the knowledge of the Holy is understanding (Prov. 9:10), then we have a very simple answer to all the problems of the world and all the problems that beset the children of God in their long journey out of darkness into the marvelous light of the Lord. "Wisdom is the principal thing," the wise man said; "therefore get wisdom, and with all thy getting get understanding." But wisdom is not learned in the schools of men, for that which is highly esteemed among men is foolishness with God. The world by its wisdom can never know God because the wisdom of man is but foolishness with God and the foolishness of God is wiser than men.

LOVE AND THE COMING OF THE LORD

Every hour that passes brings us nearer to the long awaited coming of the Lord. The second coming of Christ was the theme of the prophets, the promise of Jesus, the teaching of the apostles, the hope of the saints, and the answer to the agony of a groaning creation. It will come upon us sooner than we think.

The signs around in earth and air
And painted on the star-lit sky,
God's faithful witnesses, declare
That the coming of the Master draweth nigh.

As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the days of the Son of man. The earth was corrupt then; it is unbelievably corrupt now. The earth was filled with violence then; violence in our day has become a way of life. Eating and drinking, marrying and divorcing was their everyday manner of life, and what words could better describe the extent of our godlessness now? They were lovers of pleasure then; mankind is pleasure mad in our day. Every imagination of their hearts was only evil continually, but who can conceive of or imagine a people more godless than our nations have become?

Amid the abounding iniquity of Noah's generation there came a day when the skies grew dark with lowering clouds. The water poured in torrents from the sky as the fountains of the great deep were broken up. Floods overwhelmed the earth and swept the wicked all away. It is not my intention to do more than mention the fact that at the time of the flood, which is symbolic of the great tribulation, it was not the righteous who were taken away, but the wicked. The righteous were saved and spared and kept through the dreadful flood of waters, but the wicked were taken away from the earth. When our Lord spoke of the end of the age, He said that in that day two should be in the field. One would be taken and the other left. Two would be grinding at the mill. One would be taken and the other left. Two would be sleeping in one bed. One would be taken and the other left. We have always been told that it was the righteous who would be taken to heaven while the wicked remained for the tribulation, but I for one do not think this is the true interpretation. It is the wicked who are taken in judgment and the righteous who are spared for the glorious new age of the kingdom of God, which is to fill the whole earth with the knowledge of the Lord.

The coming of the Lord has a tendency to be a consternation to many people and, unless I am mistaken, the vast majority of professing Christians, because of their bondage to the world and the things therein, secretly hope that His coming will not occur in their day. There are also many believers who have experienced regeneration who do not look for the coming of Christ with any degree of anticipation. The reason for that, of course, is that their love for Christ is not a reality. There is no fear in love, but perfect love casts our fear.
Because fear hath torment, he that feareth is not made perfect in love. 1 John 4:18 It is not that such people are not saved. It is just that things other than Christ have filled their hearts. They have lost their first love. They walk afar off. Because of this, the coming of Christ does not fill them with anticipation, but fills them rather with dread and fear. Usually we will discover that Christians who walk in this manner have many things they want to accomplish in this life before the Lord comes. There are things they want to do, places they want to go, statuses they want to reach, and personal ambitions they want to fulfill.

The hope of some that the Lord will delay His coming until the gospel has been preached to more people and a few more souls have been saved is born of ignorance of the eternal purpose of God. It is very shortsighted and manifests a desire to delay the blessed hope until personal ambitions are accomplished. Do those who indulge in such reasoning never realize that, should Christ delay His coming in the hope of saving a few, greater by far would be the number of the condemned? The ungodly always outnumber the righteous many-fold. It is a strange paradox, indeed, that one should claim to fervently long for the coming of the Lord while secretly hoping that He will delay His coming. If that is not being of a double mind, then I know not what a double mind could possibly be.

"Now, little children, abide in Him; that, when He shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before Him at His coming." 1 John 2:28 Love and abiding are twin sisters that walk happily hand in hand. Jesus made this abundantly clear when He said, "If a man love Me, he will keep My words: and My Father will love him, and We will come unto him, and make Our abode with him." John 14:28 "If ye abide in Me, and My words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." John 15:7 There is no way that man can abide in God if he does not love God, and the opposite must also be the truth; no man can truly love God and still fail to be abiding in God and God in him.

To abide means to continue in one place; to dwell; to continue in some condition or state; to remain faithful and unchanging. The on again, off again, gone again Christian is not abiding in Christ. He is not loving Christ. He would be ashamed if the Lord should come. There is no constancy about him or his attitude. If he is a believer, he is saved, but he is saved "yet so as by fire." His works, because they are not done in love, are wood, hay and stubble and like them will not withstand the fire of judgment and testing that will try every man's work to discover of what sort it is. But the works of him who loves God and abides in Him, however trivial, are gold, silver, and precious stones, and they will abide the fire in the great day of trial.

It has never been my custom to withhold what little I know of the truth or counsel of God because of fear that friends and relations might become offended and withdraw themselves from me. We are to buy the truth and sell it not. Truth that is bought at such tremendous cost must not be sold for fear of the disapproval or the frown of men. What blessing would it be to either them or me should their works be burned up because part of God's counsel had been withheld from them through fear? Dare we refrain from reminding the people of God that the love of many is waxing cold and that their dreadful slumber like a paralyzing chill is creeping over their souls, producing a numbing torpor and the eventual sleep of death? This paralysis is being brought on by the abounding iniquity that is now in the world, concerning which the faithful apostle stated, "Because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold." The friendly outstretched hand of the world reaches eagerly to grasp our own, but, if we will look closely, we will find that it is a hand stained with the blood of the Christ of God. The lips of the world drop phrases smoother than oil, but the arrows of death are there to pierce the soul. The house of laughter and merriment may seem to be the place to go to indulge in revelry, intemperance, voluptuousness and epicurism, but it is the snare of the fowler, a trap for the unwary. The toils of death are there to destroy us in the fires of judgment.

In the parable of Solomon (Prov. 7) a loud, stubborn, whorish woman is made to represent the world system with all its entangling ways, offering so much but giving nothing but that which ends in sorrow, disillusionment and death. This whorish woman represents not only the world, but the entire religious system of the world as well. Babylon the great, the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth, is without question the world's religious systems, portrayed by Christ as a woman drunken with the blood of the saints and the martyrs of Jesus, and seated upon a scarlet colored beast, who secretly hates the whore, yet endures her abominations. This enlightening truth is clearly stated in Revelation, Chapter 17. Such are the abominable ways of the Babylon system. It is full of promises, abounding in fair speech, and refined in its cruel deception. The unwary are deceived thereby, following after her as an ox to the slaughter or a fool to the correction of the stocks. When they have partaken fully of everything the world, the flesh and the devil have to offer and the poisoned dart of death has pierced through their liver, they discover that all the fair promises were nothing more than a snare, set by that arch fowler, the devil himself, to capture their souls in his net and cast them down to ruin. Well did the preacher say, "She hath cast down many wounded: yea, many strong men have been slain by her. Her house is the way to hell, going down to the chambers of death." Prov. 7:26-27 We are now living in this day of unspeakable evil.

John was the disciple whom Jesus loved, but Christ Jesus, our Lord, places no restrictions upon His love. "If any man love Me. My Father will love him; and We will come unto him and will make Our abode with him." From J. B. Phillip's vivid translation of 1 John 2:15-17 we have these revealing words: "Never give your hearts to this world or to any of the things in it. A man can not love the Father and love the world at the same time. For the whole world system, based as it is on men's primitive desires, their greedy ambitions and the glamour of all they think splendid, is not derived from the Father at all, but from the world itself. The world and all its passionate desires will one day disappear, but the man who is following God's will is part of the permanent and cannot die."

Thus from the illustrious John we learn of God's eternal love for man and the glorious results that ensue from man's love for Christ our Lord.

JOB, NOAH, QUARTUS

JOB - NONE LIKE HIM IN ALL THE EARTH

Concerning the history of this illustrious saint very little is revealed. It is said that he lived in the land of Uz, which evidently was in eastern Arabia and thought by some to have been located near to Ur of the Chaldees, the country from which Abraham came.

The name of Job is mentioned once in the New Testament where he is referred to by the apostle James in these words: "Ye have heard of the patience of Job, and have seen the end of the Lord; that the Lord is very pitiful, and of tender mercy." James 5:11. He is also named by Ezekiel as being one of the three most righteous men who ever lived - Noah, Daniel and Job. Ezek. 14:14, 20 As to the period in time in which he lived nothing is said, but, as no mention is made of the law in the book, one might rightly conclude that he lived before the time of Moses. How long before it is impossible to say.

The books of poetry and wisdom are wisely placed in this order; Job, Psalms, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes and Song of Solomon. The book of Job, being experiential, is wisely placed first in order. The book of Psalms, being devotional, therefore follows experience in order. The book of Proverbs is practical and thus comes third. Ecclesiastes is largely the reasoning of the natural mind similar to the seventh chapter of Romans, but the Song of Solomon is a spiritual feast, comprehended only by mature saints intimately related to their Lord.

The book of Job begins with this brief but vivid description of the man himself: "There was a man in the land of Uz, whose name was Job; and that man was perfect and upright, and one that feared God, and eschewed evil." Job 1:1. His family consisted of his wife, seven sons and three daughters. He was a very wealthy man, owning seven thousand sheep, three thousand camels, five hundred yoke of oxen, five hundred she-asses and a very great household consisting no doubt of many servants, so that he was the greatest of all the men of the east.

If ever a man was flourishing in prosperity, it was this patriarch of Uz. Not only was he thriving in material things; he was mightily blessed in spiritual virtues as well. He was a man of great wisdom and honor, holding the respect of rich, poor and princes alike. When he went out to the gate of the city, where he sat with the elders, "the young men saw me, and hid themselves; and the aged arose, and stood up. The princes refrained talking, and laid their hand on their mouth. The nobles held their peace, and their tongue cleaved to the roof of their mouth. When the ear heard me, then it blessed me; and when the eye saw me, it gave witness to me."

Job 29:7-11 The greatness of Job far exceeded his temporal possessions, his wisdom and the respect paid to him by the multitude. His pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father was seen in that he blessed the poor and visited the widow in her affliction. To the blind he became as eyes and to the poor that were cast out as a father.

I am convinced that the report this man gave of himself was sincere and spoken in truth, though he was bewildered beyond belief that he could have come to such a wretched and woebegone state. In his sorrowful reminiscing he lamented, "I delivered the poor that cried, and the fatherless, and him that had none to help him. The blessing of him that was ready to perish came upon me: and I caused the widow's heart to sing for joy." Job 29:12-13 "I put on righteousness, and it clothed me: my judgment was as a robe and a diadem. I was eyes to the blind, and feet was I to the lame. I was a father to the poor: and the cause, which I knew not I searched out. And I brake the jaws of the wicked, and plucked the spoil out of his teeth." 29:14-17 "Unto me men gave ear, and waited, and kept silence at my counsel. After my words they spake not again; and my speech dropped upon them. And they waited for me as for the rain; and they opened their mouth wide as for the latter rain. If I laughed on them, they believed it not; and the light of my countenance they cast not down. I chose out their way, and sat chief, and dwelt as a king in the army, as one that comforteth the mourners." Verses 21-25

"Blessed is the man," said David, "that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful. But his delight is in the law of the Lord; and in His law doth he meditate day and night. And he shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf also shall not wither: and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper. The ungodly are not so; but are like the chaff which the wind driveth away. Therefore the ungodly shall not stand in the judgment, or sinners in the congregation of the righteous. For the Lord knoweth the way of the righteous: but the way of the ungodly shall perish." Psalm 1 "Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? Or who shall stand in His holy place?" The answer to that question is brief and beautifully to the point. "He that hath clean hands, and a pure heart: who hath not lifted up his soul to vanity, nor sworn deceitfully. He shall receive the blessing from the Lord, and righteousness from the God of his salvation. This is the generation of them that seek His face, O Jacob." Psa. 24:3-6

Hearken, my beloved brethren, you who seek to inherit the kingdom of God and share with Christ the administration of righteous government in that day of equity and fairness soon to come, has not God chosen the poor of the world rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom which He has promised to them that love Him? "Blessed be ye poor," Jesus said one day as He preached to the multitude in a plain. Luke 6:20 And on another occasion, as He preached the most wonderful sermon ever delivered - the discourse we know as the sermon on the mount - and His tones rang out in repeated blessing, He uttered this beautiful benediction on the poor in spirit: "Blessed are the poor in spirit: for their's is the kingdom of heaven." Matt. 5:3

Job, in befriending the poor, being eyes to the blind, ears to the deaf, a husband to the widow and a father to the orphan, became a prince with God and a benefactor among men. He prepared himself in acts of meekness for the kingdom, which he knew was prepared for the meek of the earth. Likewise did his longing eyes behold the far off resurrection day, of which in these sublime words he testified: "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that He shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God: Whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another," Job 19:25-27 What sublime words of faith are these as they rise like a fragrant incense from the troubled heart of a distraught saint as he sits in the dust and ashes of his fearful desolation!

How different was this wealthy man of the east, this man of whom the Almighty testified, saying, "There is none like him in all the earth!" What a contrast lay between the rich and powerful Job and those monsters whom James in his epistle rebuked with these stern words: "Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you. Your riches are corrupted, and your garments are moth eaten. Your gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days. Behold, the hire of the laborers who have reaped down your fields, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth: and the cries of them which have reapeth are entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth. Ye have lived in pleasure on the earth, and been wanton; ye have nourished your hearts as in the day of slaughter. Ye have condemned and killed the just; and he doth not resist you." James 5:1-6

Ours is an evil day when riches, luxury and prosperity are robbing millions of Christians of sainthood, thus denying them a place in God's kingdom of light. Christians, like the world, are becoming wanton in their ways. Seeking after prosperity, they vainly imagine that an abundance of temporal things is God's best will for them. They do not accept the truth that God hath chosen the poor of this world to be rich in faith. Grasping after the passing things of earth, they gradually lose their grip on the eternal. "There is that maketh himself rich, yet hath nothing: there is that maketh himself poor, yet hath great riches." Prov. 13:7

One day, while this good man of Uz was ministering to the Lord, shedding his showers of blessing on rich and poor alike, "the sons of God came to present themselves before the Lord, and Satan came also among them. And the Lord said unto Satan, Whence comest thou? Then Satan answered the Lord, and said. From going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it." Job 1:6-7 It was the apostle Peter who warned, "Your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour." 1 Pet: 5, 8 Satan is the accuser of the brethren who accuses them before God day and night. Rev.12:10 Little, indeed, do I understand this evil assignment to which Satan in the wisdom of God has been appointed. Neither do I fully understand why it is that in the process of our better making, yea, even our sonship, an adversary should be especially appointed to be the accuser of the brethren, to oppose them in their pilgrimage, and to resist their every advance in godliness. Should we have been permitted to appoint the methods that were to produce spiritual perfection, we would without doubt have chosen some easier path, but God, who in eternal wisdom is creating a Christ body, which is the fullness of Christ, Eph. 1:23 and 4:13, has ordained that both the head and the body of Christ should be tempted and tested in all points. It should be perfectly evident that only those who have endured the fiery trial of testing and temptation will possess the things pertaining to God that the complete reconciliation of the universe may be accomplished.

There will not be one son, one ruler, governor or prince in all God's holy universe save he who has entered his glorious estate through the door of temptation, suffering and tribulation. Every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lust and enticed. Neither you nor I could be tempted by any lust of the flesh if that lust were not already in our members. How then could we ever know that lust exists in us at all were it not for temptation and the fiery trial that is to try us?

From the beginning of the age Christians have assumed that it was their right, if not their duty, to speak evil of Satan, but the apostle Jude warned us that our unwise railing against Satan was not only ignorance, but error. Speaking of the Sodomites, he said, "Likewise these filthy dreamers defile the flesh, despise dominions, and speak evil of dignities. Yet Michael the archangel, when contending with the devil he disputed about the body of Moses, durst not bring against him in railing accusation, but said. The Lord rebuked thee." Jude 8, 9 If we bring railing accusations, then we, too, are become accusers, placing ourselves upon the same level as Satan himself, who is the "accuser of the brethren." The very fact that the Almighty in His wisdom permits Satan to exist at all should be cause enough to help us see that his evil work as the "accuser" has an important part to play in revealing the carnality and hidden sins of the saints that we might repent of our frailties and be cleansed from the deep-seated corruption that lies hidden and unrevealed even in the perfect and upright man.

The Lord need not have asked Satan, "Whence comest thou?" Well did He know that in his walking up and down in the earth Satan was considering some diabolical accusation against any and all who love God in sincerity and truth. Though Satan did not mention Job, the Lord, knowing Satan was the accuser of the brethren, asked this leading question: "Hast thou considered My servant Job, that there is none like him in the earth, a perfect and an upright man, one that feareth God and escheweth evil?" This, you will agree, is a most remarkable statement, revealing as it does the admiration and loving kindness of the Most High toward His saints and toward Job in particular. "My servant Job,"said God in approving veneration. "There is none like him in the earth, a perfect and upright man, one that feareth God and escheweth evil." Job 1:7-8 The Lord was justifiably proud of His servant Job as any father might be of a good and upright son. His pride was manifested in satisfaction, pleasure, enjoyment and delight. There was no immodesty, pomp or airs in the gratification He expressed toward this son, who was being brought to the realm of adoption. Beloved brethren, here is a question worthy of consideration and thought. In your walk with Christ you have sometimes suffered severely, have you not? Has the possibility, nay, the probability, occurred to you that, before ever that trial fell upon you, the Lord had spoken of His great love and satisfaction in you as He spoke of Job? You were unaware that you were under consideration at all. You did not know what good thing God intended to do on your behalf. Neither were you aware that the "accuser of the brethren" had accused you before the Father, sneering at your devotion with snide and disdainful accusations. Job was totally unaware that he was the subject of discussion between his Lord and the accuser of the brethren, nor did he know that a plan for his better making was already far advanced in the mind of God. The Lord needed not to ask the advice of Satan concerning his servant Job, but, because Satan would be used to bring this great trial upon him, therefore the Lord asked, "Have you considered My servant Job?"

Someone will ask concerning Job's perfection, "If he was a perfect man, was it possible for him to become more perfect?" There seems at first to be no answer to this question, but the truth is that all perfection, at least as we know it, is only relative. Perfection can be likened unto size, or smoothness or beauty. I have a friend who stands six feet eight inches in height. He is really a giant of a man, who makes other big men seem small by comparison. But then one day I saw a man whose height was eight foot six. Beside him my friend was almost a midget. So also it was with Job. There was none to compare with him in all the earth - perfect, upright and separate from evil - but dare we for even a moment compare his perfection to that of Him who is perfect in holiness, glorious in power, and fearful in praises? None dare display his ignorance by such a comparison.

No man can see God and live. Exod. 33:20 This statement requires spiritual understanding because it is equally true that no man can see God and die. Did our Lord Jesus ever preach a funeral sermon? Certainly not! Every funeral He came near was broken up by His raising the dead back to life again. When Jesus knew that Lazarus was sick unto death, He remained absent for two more days. John 11:6. Martha was right when she complained, "Lord, if Thou hadst been here, my brother had not died." Then she hopefully added, "But I know that even now whatsoever Thou wilt ask of God, God will give it Thee."

It is not the person who dies when a man sees God. It is his corruption and the carnal nature within him. It is carnality and sin. It is our links and bondages to the world that perish, for all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but of the world. Before we saw God, we bore the image of the earthly. Afterward we bear the image of the heavenly. Then we were in the image of the first Adam; now a transformation has taken place. We have been transformed into the image of the last Adam. There are bodies terrestrial and there are bodies celestial. The glory of the terrestrial is one thing; the glory of the celestial is another more glorious thing. There is one glory of the sun, another glory of the moon and another of the stars. Each star differs from the other in glory. So also it is in the resurrection. The imperfection of the terrestrial passes away. It has been exchanged for the perfection of the celestial. No man can see God and live as he once was, because from the ashes of his dead self a new man arises in the image of Christ. "In my flesh shall I see God," but that will not come until the worms have destroyed this corruptible. "For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory." 1 Cor. 15:53, 54 This then is the meaning of the statement, "No man can see God and live." He shall no longer live after the corruptible, but after the incorruptible. No more does he groan in this body of death, but delights in the body of his resurrection. Surely Job himself was aware of this mighty truth when in his grief and sorrow, criticized and belittled by men far beneath his stature, in plaintive longing he breathed out his unshakable faith, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that He shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." Job 19:25, 26

Saints of the Lord, how blessed it is to know that the more death there is to self the more life there is in God. "Death worketh in us," Paul said, "but life in you." The truth intended here is that, as long as the self life persists, we can minister life to no one, but when there is death to self, the world, the flesh and Satan, then we begin to minister life simply because the death that once worked in us has been replaced by the life of Christ.

"Hast thou considered My servant Job, that there is none like him in the earth?" the Lord enquired. Then from the lips of the accuser of the brethren came forth this slighting accusation: "Dost Job fear God for nought? Hast not Thou made an hedge about him, and about his house, and about all that he hath on every side? Thou hast blessed the work of his hands, and his substance is increased in the land. But put forth Thine hand now, and touch all that he hath, and he will curse Thee to Thy face." And the Lord with Job's eternal benefit in mind turned this man of God over to the power of Satan, but with this one restriction. "Upon himself put not forth thy hand." Never should we imagine that God was going about to prove a point to Satan. This whole dreadful tribulation into which the unwitting Job now entered was designed by the wisdom of the Lord that through suffering and death to the flesh Job would be brought to a level of perfection he had never once imagined as a possibility. This Godly man, who had known only success and prosperity for so many affluent years, was now to learn this hidden mystery: "He that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin; that he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God." 1 Pet. 4:1-2

There is a grievous deception captivating the minds of many a Christian, bringing them into bondage to the world and its impermanent and empty glory, thus hindering the spiritual life of many a saint. It is the error being propagated by thousands of preachers, who delight in assuring the people that the Lord wants nothing but prosperity among His saints. They should seek and have the best of everything the world has to offer - the best of homes, the best of cars, the best of furniture, the best of food, together with perfect health and complete absence of sickness. Such pleasing philosophy capitvates the natural mind, calling forth wide acclaim, willing consent and agreement. Because it is pleasing to the carnal mind, nothing suits him better, but, if we are going to enter the kingdom, we will discover that we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God. Acts 14:22; 1 Thess. 3:4; Rom. 5:3-5 I am not asking you to seek suffering, tribulation or persecution, but mark these words! Sooner or later, and that without fail, you will be called to affliction just as Job was. Your suffering will be very different from that which he endured, but it will surely come and you should not be amazed when it does. Then, after you have suffered a while, your Lord will establish, strengthen and settle you. Let no man be moved by the afflictions, which are certain to come, for thus saith the Lord, "For yourselves know that we are appointed thereunto." 1 Thess. 3:3 Those who have considered that long list of illustrious saints, whose record of suffering and affliction appears in Hebrews, chapter 11, must certainly be mightly convinced by the fact that without exception that great cloud of witnesses entered into their glory through the gates of bitter tribulation, suffering, affliction, condemnation, and misunderstanding on the part of their enemies and even their brethren. Yes, Satan had considered Job, that there was none like him in the earth. He had considered him well and, true to his appointment of accuser of the brethren, he had prepared his bitter accusations both against Job and against God, who loved Job and was bringing him to perfection. So Satan went forth from the presence of the Lord to destroy all that Job possessed at one fell swoop in a thunderstorm of unbridled violence, and destroy it he did with dreadful suddenness, incredible ferocity and unbelievable thoroughness. How can we better tell the story than to relate its awesome tragedy in the words of infallible scripture? "There was a day when his sons and his daughters were eating and drinking wine in their eldest brother's house. And there came a messenger unto Job, and said, The oxen were plowing, and the asses feeding beside them: and the Sabeans fell upon them, and took them away; yea, they have slain the servants with the edge of the sword; and I only am escaped alone to tell thee. While he was yet speaking, there came also another, and said, The fire of God is fallen from heaven, and hath burned up the sheep, and the servants, and consumed them; and I only am escaped alone to tell thee. While he was yet speaking, there came also another, and said, The Chaldeans made out three bands, and fell upon the camels, and have carried them away, yea, and slain the servants with the edge of the sword; and I only am escaped alone to tell thee. While he was yet speaking, there came also another, and said, Thy sons and thy daughters were eating and drinking wine in their eldest brother's house: and, behold, there came a great wind from the wilderness, and smote the four corners of the house, and it fell upon the young men, and they are dead; and I only am escaped alone to tell thee. Then Job arose, and rent his mantle, and shaved his head, and fell down upon the ground, and worshipped. And said, Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked shall I return thither: the Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord. In all this Job sinned not, nor charged God foolishly." Job 1:13-22

We cannot possibly speak too highly of the devotion and faithfulness of this saint of the Lord during this unspeakable trial of affliction. In one evil day Job, the beloved saint, was beset by the devil, bereft of his possessions, bereaved of his family and left destitute and naked as he was the day he came into the world, yet in all the evil that assailed him he proved his faithfulness and did not accuse God in any way. Let us here make this necessary observation: Had he not proved faithful in this first great trial of affliction, the second trial would never have come upon him, and the transforming blessing would have been lost both to Job and to us who have learned by his trial of affliction. It seems almost cruel to make the observation, but we can say with justification that, though the trial through which Job had passed was severe beyond words and his steadfast faithfulness had been vindicated beyond question, yet Job had not been transformed by the fearful losses he had suffered. He was still the same perfect and upright man who feared God and eschewed evil and of whom the Lord could still say, "There is none like him in all the earth." The righteousness of Job had been vindicated, but he had not been transformed nor had he advanced to any plateau of righteousness he had not hitherto known.

Behind the scenes, all unknown to poor, bereft Job, another trial was shaping up in which the accuser of the brethren was involved. More cruel accusations concerning Job's fidelity were being made by the accuser of the brethren, and the loving heavenly Father had determined in His own mind to eradicate from Job's very life and nature that one and only thing that could hinder him from attaining true sonship and the perfect image of the Lord. That one thing that must be destroyed in Job and in you and me is the flesh. It is the flesh and the flesh alone that lusts against the Spirit and all the works of the Spirit, it is fleshly lusts that war against the soul, 1 Pet. 2:11, bringing the soul into the dust of desolation and even into enmity with God, who is our Father. As heaven is higher than the earth, so the realm of the Spirit is higher than the realm of the flesh; and that higher realm cannot be reached until the flesh has been revealed and crucified and the spirit is released to soar to the realm of God.

Once again the question was repeated. "Hast thou considered My servant Job?" Once again the bitter accusation from the accuser of the brethren followed. "Skin for skin, yea, all that a man hath will he give for his life. But put forth Thine hand now, and touch his bone and his flesh, and he will curse thee to Thy face." And the Lord replied, "Behold, he is in thine hand; but save his life." Job 2:1-8 "Save his life" was the only restriction placed upon him. Satan could not go beyond that point. Afflict him howsoever he would, but spare his life he must. Let us here recall that upon the first temptation the Lord had said, "All that he hath is in thy power; only upon himself [that is, his flesh] put not forth thine hand." Touch not his flesh. Now let us here once more remember that it is only the flesh, and the flesh alone, that wars against the soul. The flesh, which is nothing more than the physical body of corruption, lusts against the Spirit and wars continually against the soul. To destroy Job's property had not lifted him above the perfection he already had, but now God's purpose is to destroy that one thing which keeps all mankind from coming into the image of God. The flesh must be completely destroyed. In this case, if not in all cases, the vessel used to destroy the flesh is to be Satan himself. If ever a man was delivered unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, it was the perfect and upright man of Uz.

So Satan went forth from the presence of the Lord and smote Job with sore boils from his head to his feet. He needed no persuasion to vent the full hurricane of his fury upon him until Job in the torment of his awful physical distress took a potsherd to scrape himself withal as he sat down among the ashes. Then said his accusing wife unto him, "Dost thou still retain thine integrity? Curse God and die." But Job replied, "Thou speakest as one of the foolish women speaketh. What? shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil? In all this did not Job sin with his lips." Job 2:9-10 Oh, to what lengths the Lord will go to deliver us from the power of our own flesh, that relentless enemy that caused our transgression in the beginning and now wars against every soul! Though we pamper and mollycoddle it luxuriously for a lifetime, it has nothing but death to offer us in the end.

It is not the purpose of this manuscript to attempt an examination of the discourse that follows in the next thirty-four chapters of the book of Job, though it undoubtedly is a measure of wisdom we never hear spoken of in our day. Much truth of great value can be learned from the philosophy of these ancient and venerable sages as they present their causes and accusations before each other. Like all worthy reasoning, however, it accomplishes absolutely nothing in the Spirit and brings us not one whit closer to God. True wisdom begins where the wisdom of the world ends. The wisdom of this world is foolishness with God, who takes the things that are not to bring to naught the things, which are that no flesh should glory in His presence. Thus through thirty-four chapters the philosophies of earth drag on until at last, when every man has exhausted his store of earth's wisdom and has fallen silent, in the prevailing stillness "the Lord answered Job out of the whirlwind, and said. Who is this that darkeneth counsel by words without knowledge? Gird up thy loins now like a man; for I will demand of thee, and answer thou Me. Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth?"
Thus began the interrogation of the Lord and thus the unrelenting grilling continued through the remaining pages of the book until the Lord had asked Job full forty questions, none of which he dare even attempt to answer. I cannot help but wonder what fools, who in their hearts declare, "There is no God," would say should the Almighty ask them that one question, "Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth?" Or the second, "Who laid the measures thereof or who hath stretched the line upon it? Whereupon are the foundations thereof fastened, or who laid the cornerstone thereof? Or who shut up the sea with doors, when it brake forth, as if it had issued out of the womb?" Oh, what fools do men become when they stand before God with their puny reasoning, declaring things about which they know nothing. "He taketh the wise in their own craftiness." He destroys their wisdom and brings to nothing the understanding of the prudent.

The more questions the Lord demanded of him the smaller poor Job shrank until the balloon of his earthly wisdom was forever deflated and he saw himself as nothing. As grass before the blazing sun he shriveled until nothing was left of that flesh which wars against the soul, for he had withered to dust and ashes. Ashes beloved is that which is left when all that can be burned has been consumed and dust is that useless nuisance which we wipe from the furniture in our houses. Thus it was that, when the Lord ceased to proclaim the wisdom of the eternal realm. Job burst forth in humble repentance and confession. "I know that Thou canst do everything, and that no thought can be withholden from Thee. Who is he that hideth counsel without knowledge? Therefore have I uttered that I understood not; things too wonderful for me, which I knew not. Hear, I beseech Thee, and I will speak; I will demand of Thee, and declare Thou unto me. I have heard of Thee by the hearing of the ear; but now mine eye seeth Thee. Wherefore I abhor myself and repent in dust and ashes." Job 42:1-6

How inexpressibly wonderful the transforming vision has been! "Now mine eye seeth Thee!" An experience he had never before known! No man can see God and live. Nothing was left of Job's old self but dust and ashes. In place of the old stood a repentant man transformed into a new man, and that new man was not in the image of Job, but in the image of the Christ of God. Never should saints despise the day of suffering. It may - and sooner or later will - bring us to dust and ashes, but from the dust and ashes of our crucified selves will arise a new man in the image and likeness of Him who created us. There was none like Job in the beginning, and it is doubly certain there was none like him in the end.

"And the Lord turned the captivity of Job, when he prayed for his friends: also the Lord gave Job twice as much as he had before. Then there came unto him all his brethren, and all his sisters, and all they that had been of his acquaintance before, and did eat bread with him in his house." Job 42:10,11 So the Lord blessed the latter end of Job more than his beginning, and, now that his travail and suffering was over, it could be said in a manner heretofore unknown, "There was none like him in all the earth."

We will never fully comprehend the mystery of suffering while yet we remain in this dark and evil age. Suffice it now to know that the sufferings of this present age are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us, while we look not at the things which are seen, for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal. A lifetime of experience is consumed before we learn to count it all joy when we fall into divers temptations, knowing this, that the trial of our faith worketh patience, but let patience have her perfect work that we may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing. James 2:2, 3. "Ye have heard of the patience of Job, and have seen the end of the Lord." And what a glorious end it was! None but God could have planned such a glorious end. "Think it not strange [therefore] concerning the fiery trial which is to try you. as though some strange thing happened unto you: but rejoice inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings: that, when His glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy." 1 Pet. 4:12-13

I asked for life and this is what He gave me.
My lot is hard; my tears flow like the rain.
I asked for hours gay with sunshine spattered.
But, lo, my waking hours are filled with pain.
How could I know that crushing brings forth fragrance
Like perfume from some crushed and bleeding rose?
That in the process of my better making
God used the method He approved and chose?

NOAH - THE MAN WHO ALONE WAS RIGHTEOUS IN HIS GENERATION

Noah was righteous in his generation and, since all others were consumed by the flood, we may be perfectly right in assuming that Noah alone was righteous in his generation. The scripture bears abundant evidence that the generation in which Noah lived was wicked beyond all generations since man has been on the earth. In his day the sons of God - that is the Adamites, for Adam was a son of God, Luke 3:38 - were carrying on the forbidden practice of intermarrying with the daughters of men - that is, the pre-Adamic races. No man can read the Bible, and especially the books of Nehemiah and Ezra, and still not know that race mixing is an abomination in the sight of God. That kind must produce after his kind. Gen. 1:11-21, is a law of the Lord which must not be broken to satisfy the lusts and reasoning of men. Even birds, insects and wild beasts have an inborn awareness of this law and faithfully keep it. How much more, then, should man understand God's law? But, as is well known, carnal, corrupt and fallen man must always be overstepping the law and the mind of God.

As a result of this forbidden union giants appeared on the earth, men of renown, great in stature and giants in crime and wickedness. They were not renowned in righteousness as was Noah, but renowned in evil and violence. They wrought havoc in the whole earth, and "God saw that the wickedness of man was great on the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually. And it repented the Lord that He had made man on the earth, and it grieved Him at His heart." Gen. 6:5-6, "And the earth also was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence. And God looked upon the earth, and, behold, it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth. And God said unto Noah, The end of all flesh is come before Me; for the earth is filled with violence through them; and, behold, I will destroy them with the earth." Gen. 6:11-13.

As Jonah was a sign to the Ninevites and as the Son of man was a sign to His generation, so Noah was a sign to his age; but our Lord Jesus Christ plainly placed the truth before us that both Noah and all his evil generation were to be an unmistakable sign to those of us who live in the villainous and vicious days just preceding the coming of the Lord; for "as the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." Matt. 24:37 Therefore the days of Noah and the universal evil of that day were especially intended to be a sign to us who live in the last hours of this iniquitous age. We see the evil that filled the earth in Noah's day coming to pass in like universal fashion in our day. When, therefore, we see the wickedness of Noah's day again filling the earth with woe, then may we know for sure that the coming of the Lord is nigh at hand. There will not be a great revival before the end of this age, as so many have taught, but instead evil men and seducers will wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived, both inside the church system and in the Babylon of the world as well. It will not be our purpose here to examine all the evil of the days of Noah, nor could we if we would disclose all the evil of our day. Nevertheless those flagrant transgressions are so outstanding that even the blindest person should understand that we are now eye witnesses of the truth that all the prevailing signs of Noah's day are glaringly fulfilled in our day also.

"As the days of Noah were, so shall the coming of the Son of man be." Now notice how Jesus fastened upon one sign that is not so much as mentioned in the Genesis record. Matt. 24:38 states that "in the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came and took them all away." They were eating and drinking, the scripture says. Now eating and drinking are lawful enough. So also is marrying and giving in marriage. But lawful things are our undoing when they are unlawfully managed. They of Noah's day became wholly taken up with their excessive eating, voraciousness and gluttony, and drinking. In their lust for pleasure they went to no end to satisfy their senses. Let us eat, drink and be merry was their attitude. When they should have been weeping for the miseries that were to come upon them, they were nourishing their hearts as in the day of slaughter.

Have you not noticed the incredible building of restaurants and the increase of people "eating out?" Eating and drinking, not only at meal times, but at all times, has become such a craze that it is a waste of time to try to describe it, because it is all too well known to the people of our age. We are inclined to joke about gluttony, but the scripture without hesitation places gluttony and drunkenness in the same evil category. "Put a knife to thy throat," said Solomon, "if thou be a man given to appetite." Prov. 23:2. And again he says, "Be not among winebibbers; among riotous eaters of flesh: for the drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty; and drowsiness [the result of gluttony and drunkenness] shall clothe a man with rags." Verses 20-21. It should not be hard to see that the unbridled trend toward eating and drinking for the sake of eating and drinking is in itself one of the most prominent signs that the end of the age is upon us.

The Book of Jasher, chapter 4, verses 16-18, gives this very interesting and scriptural sidelight concerning the days of Noah. "All the sons of men departed from the ways of the Lord in those days as they multiplied upon the face of the earth with sons and daughters, and they taught one another their evil practices, and they continued sinning against the Lord. And every man made unto himself a god, and they robbed and plundered every man his neighbor as well as his relatives, and they corrupted the earth and the earth was filled with violence. And their judges and rulers went to the daughters of men and took their wives by force from their husbands according to their choice, and the sons of men in those days took the cattle of the earth, the beasts of the field, and the fowls of the air, and taught the mixture of animals, one species with another in order to provoke the Lord; and God saw the whole earth and it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted its way upon the earth, all men and all animals."

Jesus also spoke of marrying and giving in marriage. He was not referring to the ordinary rite of marriage, but of marriage and divorce and remarriage as we see practiced everywhere in our day. In my childhood days here in Canada divorce and remarriage was almost unknown. In all our community I knew of no home that had been broken by divorce, nor were there any retarded or insecure children in our school. Probably there were some unhappy marriages, but they had married "for better or for worse" and so with that in mind they faced the issue. Please do not tell me there are no unhappy marriages today. Divorce and remarriage has only succeeded in adding fuel to the conflagration until the homes of our nation are filled with woe. What result may we expect when men and women pledge fidelity to each other, marry and bear children, then at the first sign of difficulty or stress they decide to dissolve their sacred partnership and divorce each other? Not only are the mother and father divided by this unseemly tragedy, but the family as well. But the tragedy does not end there, for in all probability they will both remarry, often times to someone who is in a situation similar to their own, until today it is not uncommon to find children who honestly do not know who their true parents are. The days of Noah were noted for this sort of marrying and remarrying till their world was filled with turmoil and woe. Lamentable as their dilemma was, their state of affairs did not exceed this same wickedness in our day. No lesser an authority than Jesus Christ Himself left this faithful witness that as it was in the days of Noah, so also it would be in the day when the Son of man should come.

Add now to divorce, remarriage, and second and third divorces the incredible increase of intermarriage among the races, blacks mixing with whites, Orientals intermarrying with occidentals, and we will see that our world is fast becoming an unseemly adulteration where nothing is pure and nothing is as God made it. The sons of God marrying the daughters of men and the daughters of God marrying the sons of men! God commanded that kind should be after his kind whether it be grain or bird or animal or man, and the moment we overstep that mark, we create sorrow, not only for ourselves but a thousand-fold more for our mongrelized children. There is never any thought in my mind of belittling or speaking evil of any of the races, but the whole thought of scripture and the whole plan of creation is that kind should bring forth after his kind, and all other than that is adulteration, because adultery is the mixing of seeds.

Now in the days of Noah this marrying and giving in marriage brought forth a race of people that filled the earth with violence. Surely it would be a waste of time to start pointing out evidences of violence in our day. Read one newspaper or listen to one newscast and we are brought face to face with the unspeakable and uninhibited violence of the hour in which we live. The earth is literally filled with violence - violence in the homes, violence on the streets, violence on the highways, violence in labor unions, violence on the screens, and violence in the schools. Nations continually resorting to violence are filling the world with gloomy despair. The people have become prisoners in their own homes to shield themselves from the brutality, the bestiality of the ferocity of this savage lawlessness. Even the locked doors of our homes are no guarantee against its outrage.
The earth also was corrupt in Noah's day, but could its corruption possibly exceed the graft, greed, shady dealings, immorality, sinfulness, decadence and looseness everywhere rampant in our day? Is corruption not found everywhere? In business, in morals, and in governments that "frame mischief by a law?" See Psa. 94:20 Is there no corruption in radio or in TV? Or when did the theatres and movies abandon the obscene? Corruption has become a way of life until it is literally true that the earth is corrupt. Even the lakes, the streams, the oceans, the air and the earth itself are polluted with man's corruption.

Of that iniquitous day it was also stated, "Every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually." As modern man considers the daily news with its violence, its spoil and inhumanity, together with the corrupt events that never reach the news, we are forced to the conclusion that the thoughts and imaginations of many hearts are only evil continually. Surely the reader must have noticed that some folks never think of any good thing that they can do. They delight in drugs and marijuana. They lay clandestine schemes to snatch the purses of old ladies whom they have seen cashing their meager pension cheques. They take wanton delight in entering a home to vandalize the life's work of the industrious, or, if they can, they will torture some innocent person to death. Never do they think of anything good. Their imaginations are only evil continually "Soon it is not enough for them that their knowledge of God is at fault. In the great struggle to which ignorance condemns their lives, they next give such massive ills the name of peace. With their child-murdering initiations, their secret mysteries, their orgies and outlandish ceremonies they no longer retain any purity in their lives or marriages, one treacherously murdering the next or doing him injury by adultery. Everywhere a welter of blood and murder, theft and fraud, corruption, treachery, riots; perjury of decent people, forgetfulness of favors, pollution of souls, sins against nature, disorder in marriage, adultery, debauchery. For the worship of unnamed idols is the beginning, cause and end of every evil." From the Jerusalem Bible, Book of Wisdom, chapter 14:22-27

All this lawlessness could be cured in a week were it not for the fact that evil men and seducers have surreptitiously withdrawn law and order from the statutes of the nation to such an extent that the criminal gets all the considerations while the innocent is held to ransom. "Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowship with thee, which frameth mischief by a law?" Psa. 94:20 As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the days of the coming of the Son of man - eating, drinking, marrying, divorcing and remarrying, and a world filled with the most unspeakable violence and corruption on every hand. Surely our day is a repetition of the days of Noah. Certainly these are days when the Son of man will come! Yea, except these days of poisonous gas and hydrogen bombs be shortened, there would no flesh be saved.

When our Lord was speaking of the days of Noah, He added one more dreadful sign, which has become widespread in our day. It is the sign of the sodomite. The same day that Lot went out of Sodom, it rained fire and brimstone from heaven and destroyed them all. The city of Sodom was noted for the sordid crime of homosexuality. It is from Sodom that the word takes its meaning. Under the law of God, sodomites were to be put to death. Lev. 20:13 This abomination has so spread over the nation in our day that more and more its defiling evil has become an accepted thing. The sordid condition and low estate of the men of Sodom is stated clearly enough in Gen. 19:1-11 People of this caliber are prone to violence. They are not sick; they are demon-possessed and God has given them a reprobate mind. This fact is clearly taught by Paul in Rom. 1:26-32. Let no one on earth think lightly of such evil. God will judge it and that right soon.

As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the days of the Son of man. In the days of Noah it was the wicked who were taken away and Noah was left to enter into the new age. In the days of Lot the wicked were destroyed and the righteous Lot preserved. So shall it be in the day of the Son of man. The wicked shall be taken away to judgment, but the righteous will enter into the kingdom age. When Jesus said, "Two shall be sleeping in one bed; one shall be taken and the other left", I think the meaning should be clear that it is the wicked one who is taken away and the righteous who is left to enter into the glories of the kingdom of God. Let us therefore walk in righteousness that, whether we wake or sleep, we may be accepted of Him. No saint of God need trouble himself about the things which are coming upon the earth, for it is certain that all who live and move and have their being in Christ will find themselves rejoicing and acceptable in His presence when He comes. I never trouble myself about the intricate details of eschatology, knowing that our heavenly Father will have prepared His people for each glorious event as it comes.
Noah was righteous in his generation. We may be reasonably sure that except for him no other family lived righteously when the flood poured its waters on the earth. According to the fifth chapter of the Book of Jasher all the righteous had died before the flood came that they might not see the evil that was to come. In studying the genealogies of Genesis, it is clear that Methuselah, who was a righteous man, died the same year the flood came.

There were but few who had not bowed the knee to the image of Baal in the days of Elijah, but there were some - seven thousand in all. Noah alone and his family were righteous when the flood overwhelmed the earth. Only Lot was righteous when the Lord rained fire and brimstone on Sodom. The Dead Sea now rests where those evil cities once stood. When the Son of man cometh, will He find faith on the earth? Will He find the faith? We can answer that question for no one but ourselves. Settle it therefore in your heart that you will walk with Christ in obedience to His will. The church system will continue on and on with its pitiful song and dance, but do not you go with it. Come out from among them and be separate. Come out that you be not partaker of her sins. Let us go unto Christ without the camp, bearing His reproach.

We cannot expect many Christians to heed the call to separation unto Christ. To romp along with the church crowd is far too easy and pleasing to the natural mind. But, if you will heed the voice of Christ and forsake these idols of gold and silver, of wood and stone and earth, this tower of Babel that men are building - all of which will be soon thrown down - and open the door to let Christ enter in, then He will sup with you and you with Him. Then God will be your Father and you will be His sons and daughters.

Our admiration knows no end for men who, like Noah and Elijah and a host of other saints, walked alone with God amid all the raging turmoil of unbelief in others, but we seem to think it strange when the Lord calls us away from the noisy, restless crowds of the church system to walk with Christ and fellowship with Him. You say, "We must have fellowship with the people," but how much fellowship have those people with Christ? I am sad to say that for the most part thousands of these "church people" are quite adept in avoiding any discussion about the rich things of God. They often leave you with an empty stare as though they wonder why you have nothing better to talk about. One of the great lessons to be learned in life is to refuse to follow the crowd. The crowd is usually, if not always, wrong. It was wrong in the days of Enoch, wrong in the days of Noah, wrong in the days of Moses, wrong in the days of Samuel, wrong in the days of Elijah, wrong in the days of Jesus, and the crowd will be wrong in the day when the Son of man cometh. Well said the mighty Stephen, "Ye stiff necked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost: as your fathers did. so do ye." Acts 7:51

Learn then not to be a follower of men. Learn from the illustrious Noah to live in communion with Christ. When all the world is worshipping at the shrine of some strange god, be ye walking with God far from them. You may not be called upon to stand as the only righteous person in the earth, but you may well be called to be one of a city or two of a family. Jer. 3:14 The Lord has many righteous scattered across the world and He knows where all of them are. The day is at hand when He will send His elect from the four winds from one end of heaven to the other, for that is where they are scattered. Then shall the righteous shine forth as the Son in His likeness.

The Lord will always have a witness in the earth. In every generation He has His righteous saints. In every age the wisdom of God passes into holy souls. She makes them friends of God. Over wisdom evil can never triumph. She deploys her strength from one end of the earth to the other.

Let us therefore, "put on the whole armor of God, that ye [we] may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places," that we may be found righteous in a generation such as was in the days of Noah.

QUARTUS, A BROTHER

The vast array of illustrious men and women of whom the Bible speaks is far too great to consider further under this heading. The beloved Paul, after naming such mighty heroes of faith as Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham and Moses, finally abandoned the effort to include them all, saying, "The time would fail me to tell of Gedeon, and of Barak, and of Samson, and of Jephthae; of David also, and Samuel, and of the prophets: who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens." Heb. 11:32-34 Thus his inspired pen continued naming in the briefest possible manner that heroic cloud of witnesses who for their faith were stoned, sawn asunder, tempted, slain with the sword; who wandered about in destitution, were mocked, torn by wild beasts, were afflicted and tormented, but who through their faith obtained a better resurrection.

Time would certainly fail us to tell of Moses, who, though he exercised absolute power over a great nation, was "meek above all men which were on the face of the earth." Num. 12:3 He was kind, not easily provoked, willing to yield rather than cause trouble, but not servile. He is the man who refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, thus despising and abandoning the throne of Egypt and choosing to suffer affliction with the people of God rather than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season, esteeming the reproaches of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt. Heb. 11:24-25

Time would fail me to tell of Rahab, the harlot, who through faith hung a scarlet cord in her window and perished not with those who believed not, or how this woman of low estate, because of her faith in God, came to be named among the progenitors of our Lord Jesus Christ. Oh, what a reward! Or what eloquence is sufficient to describe the faith of Ruth the Moabitess, who in her devotion uttered these never-to-be-forgotten words: "Whither thou goest, I will go: and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God, my God: where thou diest, I will die, and there will I be buried." Ruth 1:16-17 "Thy God shall be my God" was her word of devotion to the God of Israel, and through her faith in God this blessed woman, a descendant of Lot's oldest daughter, Gen. 19:38, entered that noble line of mothers through whom our Saviour came.

Time would fail us to tell of Isaiah, whose transforming vision of the Lord changed him into a new man, a mighty prophet with a message that has burned as a flame of fire through millenniums of time. Or Daniel, that man greatly beloved of his God; or Samuel, that mighty prince among the prophets of the Lord.

And what shall we say of that blessed and honored John the Baptist? Could words, be they ever so numerous or fitly spoken, excel the one statement of commendation uttered by Jesus Christ? "Of men born of women, there has not arisen a greater than John the Baptist." Here in the words of the Master John is placed as second to none among men of all time. The greatness of this man's ministry becomes clearly evident as we see towns and cities emptying themselves of their inhabitants as they make their way to the wilderness to hear his flaming message of the kingdom of God, and to be baptized of him in the river Jordan.

Great and mighty as was the ministry of this peerless man, in my opinion nothing he ever did manifested his true greatness so much as the fact that all who listened to his burning message left him to become followers and disciples of the Son of God. At last our eyes are treated to the pathos, yea, the plaintive sadness of the scene as this mighty prophet stands with two of his disciples - perhaps the only two he had left. He raises his arm and points a finger toward Christ and speaks: "Behold the Lamb of God!" And the two disciples, one of them the gentle Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, leave the old warrior standing alone as they go to follow Christ. The greatness of a man's ministry cannot be judge by the number of hearers who are following him, but by the number of his hearers who are following Christ. "He must increase, but I must decrease" was the theme of his whole life; and when the executioner's swishing sword severed his noble head from his body, it was that Christ Himself might become both Lord and Head of that true ecclesia, which is His body.

There is one man in scripture of whom two words are spoken. His name was Quartus, and he was said to be "a brother". Rom. 16:23 Among the more notable of Paul's acquaintances, such as Erastus, the chamberlain of the city, Quartus is referred to only as "a brother." We take it to mean he was a brother in the Lord. From time immemorial the disciples of Christ, though no relation to each other in the flesh, have been honored as brothers and sisters in the Lord. The first words ever spoken by a Christian to Saul of Tarsus were "brother Saul." Acts 9:17 The expression is frequently used in the New Testament, and it is both right and proper that we who are sons of God and brothers of Jesus Christ our Lord should recognize each other as brothers and sisters and it is right and proper that we should address each other as such. Jesus Christ Himself is the first born of many brethren. Rom. 8:29 Jesus was begotten of God. We also are begotten of Him and are members of His family. Christ is our brother and we His many brethren.

King Solomon said, "A friend loveth at all times, and a brother is born for adversity." Prov. 17:17 A friend may be a friend at all times while a brother may seem afar off, but when adversity strikes, a true brother will be at our side. The brethren of Joseph were in fear and trembling as he stood before them as the austere ruler of the land of Egypt, but when he drew aside the curtain of mystery with the words, "I am Joseph, your brother," even though they had done him wrong, wonderful assurance must have comforted their souls in the knowledge that all would be well.

It is probable, dear friend that neither you nor I will ever climb the noble hill of fame or get a long and lasting name. I for one have no desire for such a thing, but, if I may look upon you as a brother or a sister in Christ our Lord and you can look upon me as a brother and a member of that vast family of brothers of whom Christ is the eldest, the firstborn and the Head, what can we think of more desirable or blessed than that? Our relationship to Him is a blood relationship - not the blood of man, but the blood of God, which is the life of God. Ours is also a spirit relationship, because we are born of His Spirit. It is a body relationship, because we are members of His body, of His flesh and of His bones.

I do not know who Quartus was, but he was a brother. His name is not in the Who's Who book nor has it gone down in the pages of secular history, but Quartus was a brother. He may not have been a preacher of righteousness, a deacon, an elder, a door keeper or a janitor, but he was a brother. Divine inspiration has introduced him to the world as such, and will it not be a glorious moment if, when we enter the portals of the eternal realm, our elder brother, the Lord Jesus Christ, introduces us to the heavenly hosts as His brother? Most all of us smiled with pleasure when we heard of the boy who, when carrying his little brother on his shoulder, said, "He's not heavy; he's my brother."

THE CHRIST LIFE GREATEST PARABLE OF THEM ALL

When our Lord Jesus Christ ministered here on earth, His sayings and sermons were filled with parables insomuch that the scripture states, "Without a parable spake He not unto them." This is a notable characteristic of the ministry of our Lord, for, though the use of parables was common among the eastern peoples, it would appear that no one ever employed them to such an extent as He. The use of parables in teaching is a vivid, expressive manner of portraying the truth to God's elect. We are quite wrong, however, when we say that Jesus filled His sermons with parables so that all His hearers could understand His message. The real truth is the exact opposite to this. According to His own statement He spoke in parables that seeing, they might see but not perceive and hearing, they might hear and not understand. Luke 8:10; Matt. 13:10-15. Would you not say that this scripture teaches us that Jesus employed parables to hide the truth from those whose ears were heavy and whose hearts were engrossed with the cares of things material and temporal, but to reveal truth to those whose hearts were athirst for spiritual things?

There will be disbelief in the hearts of some when I affirm that God actually hides His truth from people whose ears are heavy and whose hearts are gross, but it is a true statement. Never will He cast the pearls of heaven before the swine of earth. He fills His word with dark sayings, concealing His truth in mystery, shrouding His purposes from the wise and prudent men of this age, and revealing them to babes in Christ who diligently seek them. It is written: "The preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved it is the power of God. For it is written, I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent." 1 Cor. 1:18-19 Then, having stated that He will destroy the wisdom of the wise, the question is straightforward asked, "Where is the wise? Where is the scribe? Where is the disputer of this world?" Well, where are they? There are plenty of men flaunting their worldly knowledge and disputing the very existence of God, disowning Him as their Lord and Creator to embrace the untenable humbug of evolution from nothingness, disputing the accuracy and inspiration of the Bible, though they may never once have read its message, and stating as facts things which cannot be proved. Where are all these disputers and vain talkers, these spiteful, proud haters of God? Hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world? Has He not declared that it shall come to naught? In the wisdom of God the world by wisdom knew not God (verse 21).
The wisdom of this world is foolishness with God; therefore the world's wisdom cannot lead us to Christ. But, when man by wisdom could not find God, it pleased God by the foolishness of the preaching of the cross of Christ to save all who would simply believe. 1 Cor. 1:20-22

To the Greeks wisdom was everything. They debated and discussed wisdom on every street corner and in the public places from morning till night and spent their time in nothing else than to hear or see some new thing. Acts 17:21 Yet they could not find God by their wisdom. The Jews on the other hand thought little of wisdom, but they required a sign. 1 Cor. 1:22 They were quick to demand of Christ, "What sign shewest Thou then, that we may see. and believe Thee?" John 6:30. The gospel of Christ is the wisdom of God though it be foolishness to carnal men. Therefore the Holy Spirit declares, "We preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumbling block, and unto the Greeks foolishness; but unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God." 1 Cor. 1:23-24

There is something that reaches far beyond all of earth's wisdom and all the might of her power, transcending the reasonings of man and every demonstration of potency or sign or wonder. That something is faith, born of the Holy Ghost, implanted in the spirits of men and women. Faith reaches out and grasps salvation from the hand of God while the wise, the influential and the strong of this world go empty-handed away. While wise men are proving that death ends all, faith lays hold of the resurrection of the dead. While the flesh is roting on the bones, faith cries, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and He shall stand in the latter days upon the earth: and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." Job 19:25 When the body is wracked with pain, the skin is being destroyed, and the flesh is in a state of corruption, faith pursues the prize of incorruption and, should we die without attaining, even then faith rests assured that God hath reserved some better thing for us that we might reach perfection together in a glorious resurrection unto life.

By faith Abraham believed God and it was accounted to him for righteousness. By faith Moses refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, esteeming the reproach of Christ to be greater than the abundant treasures of Egypt. By faith we understand that God made the worlds and perceive how He made visible things out of things we cannot see. By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain and received witness that he was righteous. By faith Enoch was translated that he might not see death, when all men around him were dying. It was by faith that Noah built an ark to preserve his household, when all men around him were scoffing and declaring that it could never rain, for hitherto rain had never fallen.

Faith is a spiritual entity. It is a creation of the Spirit of God. From no other source can it derive or come. Faith sees the invisible, hears the inaudible, comprehends the incomprehensible, grasps the impossible and makes that which is not to be that which is. Faith laughs at unbelief and turns a deaf ear to the carnal reasonings of the wise of this world. Faith cannot be explained even by those who have it. It is born of God and has its anchor fastened to "the Rock" within the veil. Faith itself is the substance of things hoped for; faith is the evidence of things we do not see. When faith abounds in the human heart, all our steps are sure and certain, while dashing waves become a pavement beneath our feet. Here in faith God is our refuge and strength. Here He is a very present help in trouble. Faith has no fear, though the earth be removed and the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea. When the waters roar and are troubled, faith sings of a river, the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God and the habitations of the most high. When the whole world is in a clamor of distress and turmoil even as we see it in our day, faith clearly whispers, "Be still and know that I am God. The Lord of hosts is with us. The God of Jacob is our refuge."

I have written these things concerning parables and faith because the things that follow are of utmost importance and cannot be received except by faith. As the years in their perpetual succession have passed as ghostly shadows away and the ever increasing wonder of the glory of God's Christ has come to blaze as a mighty sun in its strength, I have come to realize that not only did our Lord speak in parables, but His whole life from the time of His lowly birth to His ascension into heaven was in itself a parable and a mighty sign of wonders which were to come in the lives of believing men. The paramount theme of all Christ's sermons on earth concerned that glorious kingdom which is soon to come. Even His pattern prayer has as its first petition, "Thy kingdom come." The blessed coming of His kingdom will usher in the aionian day when God's will shall be done on earth as it is done in heaven and His mind will direct all things and bring every nation under the blessedness of heaven's perfect order.
The first miracle performed by Jesus was a parabolic wonder, setting forth the more excellent glory of the kingdom of God. By it He manifested how the truth of all preceding dispensations would become the life-giving wine of the kingdom of God, the living truth of that glorious age. If with meditation and prayer we seek to understand the many miracles and healings of Christ throughout His ministry, we will soon become aware that each in its turn unfolds a truth concerning that blessed age soon to come.

In Mark 1:21-28 the record tells how a man in the synagogue was delivered of an unclean spirit. It would not surprise me should I find that this man was the leader of the synagogue. We have no certainty that this was so, but it could very well have been. Many unclean spirits were in the synagogues in Jesus’ day just as many unclean spirits are in the professing churches now. False prophets abound on every hand. They have existed openly throughout the centuries. Christians have become so accustomed to their smooth talk that they fail to recognize deception when they hear it. God's people have become so accustomed to being tossed to and fro and carried away with every wind of doctrine by the sleight of men and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive, that they no longer have a genuine consciousness of what is right and what is wrong.

When the kingdom of God comes, Jesus will deliver the world of all falsehood. False prophets, false apostles, false pastors and false evangelists and teachers will be no more. He will deliver the synagogue of the unclean and the demon possessed by curing them and setting them free. His miracle in the synagogue on that long ago Sabbath morning was a parable of things which are to come in the great kingdom Sabbath, when nothing shall hurt or destroy in all God's holy mountain, for the knowledge of the Lord will fill the earth as the waters cover the sea.

When Jesus healed the lame man. He was actually demonstrating to the world and all therein that in the day when He shall reign all lameness of every sort will be healed and the lame made strong throughout His universal domain. His gospel was the gospel of the kingdom. Not only will the literally lame be made to leap as an hart, but in that day all lameness of spirit, soul and mind, so appallingly evident in our day, will disappear forever. Then will the scripture be fulfilled, "The lame take the prey. And the inhabitant shall not say, I am sick: the people that dwell therein shall be forgiven their iniquity." Isa. 33:23-24

Many blind were healed as Jesus preached His gospel of the kingdom of God, and many were the deaf ears that were unstopped. All through the dispensations of human government the eyes of mankind have been closed and their ears made dull of hearing lest they should see with their eyes and hear with their ears and understand with their hearts and should be converted and healed. Isa. 6:9-10 His healing of the blind and the deaf as part of the glorious gospel of the kingdom clearly bears witness to the truth that, when His kingdom comes, the eyes of the blind will be opened and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. The lame man shall leap as an hart and the tongue of the dumb shall sing.

We shall not attempt here to seek the spiritual meaning of all the miracles and wonders Jesus performed, but if the earnest seeker after truth will consider His miracles and healings one by one. he will see that Christ's gospel of the kingdom of God clearly demonstrated that a wonderful new age is coming, the glory of which man cannot possibly at present imagine, when not only will man be delivered from his physical woes, but every spiritual infirmity as well, of which blindness, deafness, lameness, dumbness, leprosy, withered hands, impotency and death are types. There is a new world coming in which all that Jesus began to do and to teach will be completed. The marvelous miracles of His ministry on earth are a parable in themselves of the wonders to be accomplished by the sons of God in that age when the curse is destroyed and the supernal glories of His kingdom are revealed to the world.

THE MIRACULOUS BIRTH

The birth of our Lord Jesus Christ was a miraculous birth. In all the history of the world no other than He was ever born by such direct intervention of the Holy Spirit. As the Spirit of the Lord in the beginning moved upon the face of the waters, dividing the light from the darkness and bringing forth a magnificent creation, so now to bring forth the Son of God, the author and head of a new creation, the Spirit moved upon a pure, chaste virgin who had never known a man, placing within her virgin womb the seed of the last Adam, the Christ, and author of all that is spiritual and eternal. In the birth of Jesus Christ the natural processes of conception were eliminated that God might be the Father of this blessed Son, not the father of His physical form alone, but the father of His soul, which He poured out unto death, and the father of His spirit, which in the hour of death He committed into the hands of God.

I believe the Bible to be the word of God. Its Author is divine. Its words are true, each and every one inspired by the Holy Ghost. When its sentences were written, holy men of God spoke and wrote as they were moved by the Holy Ghost. Its pages contain no errors, no scientific mistakes, no historical blunders, and no contradictions. Though for centuries the Bible has often stood alone against the error and miscalculations of men, in the end, when the mists of ignorance have cleared away and the light of truth has shone, its statements were vindicated and its word forever established. There is not one mistake or incorrect statement in it. The entrance of its words is life and its light shines brighter than a thousand suns. When heaven and earth are passed away and visible things have disappeared, that word will shine forth in the glory of its eternal truth. It will abide forever because it is the word of Him who is the way, the truth, and the life. The Bible is the only book ever written that dares to portray the future. Its portrayal of things yet to come has been and continues to be so accurate that unbelieving men are helpless to find an answer for its exactitude. The prophecies of Daniel have proved so free from error that unbelievers attempt to prove that this inspired prophet must have lived many, many years after the date recorded in Bible history. Where could we find an account so accurate as the words of Jesus concerning the last days in which we now live? Matt. 24:37 Or the inspired words of Paul as he describes the perilous times that will usher in the last days? 2 Tim. 3:1-5 May God grant grace to all His saints to reject every watered-down version of scripture, together with the confusing paraphrases of the Bible now pouring off the presses like a Niagara of deception to turn men and women away from the true faith and destroy the trust of boys and girls, whose nature it is to have faith in God.

The birth of Jesus was a miraculous birth. Thus the scriptures teach. His life-giving ministry was but a few months old when a man of the Pharisees, Nicodemus by name, approached Him by night to enquire the way of the Lord. It was to this earnest heart that Christ our Lord first broke the news of another miraculous birth, which was soon to be the heritage of every believing man and woman. "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God," He told the ruler of the Jews, and Nicodemus, gripped by astonishment and wonder, demanded in his incredulity, "How can a man be born when he is old?" Like millions of others the only birth he knew or understood was that natural birth by which natural parents bring forth natural children after the flesh. "That which is born of the flesh is flesh," said Jesus. That birth is a thing of the past. We can forget about it. But that which is born of the Spirit is spirit. The spiritual man that died in the first Adam was now to be made alive in the last Adam, for as in Adam all die, so in Christ shall all be made alive. From that time forward the Holy Spirit would begin to move on man's lifeless spirit, touching it with life eternal that it might be born from above. Millennia before, as that same blessed Spirit moved upon the face of the icy waters, God had said, "Let there be light," and there was light.

The most miraculous things that ever happened to you, my believing friend, occurred in that wonderful day when on bended knee you confessed your sins to Christ and, believing on Him, you were moved upon by the Holy Spirit to give you the knowledge of forgiveness. You felt forgiveness. Your life was changed. It was not a reformation; it was a transformation. It was not a confirmation; it was a conversion. It was not a new start; it was a new birth. Old things faded away into the past and all things became new. It was a new life, a new world, a new experience in God. You were born from above. You were born again.

There 'neath His cross Jesus gave me His pardon. Lifting my burden. He brought me into rest.

Through the endless procession of the centuries, advancing as they do only to drift like shadows into the past, Jesus Christ, God's blessed Son, miraculously born of the Holy Ghost, has by His almighty power brought forth a new creation of twice born men, an entire new race of sons of God, born of His Spirit, washed in His blood, joint heirs with Christ Jesus, members together with Him of a spiritual temple destined to be the eternal habitation of God through the spirit. This great spiritual household of twice born men is "My Father's house of many mansions." This is the temple of the Holy Spirit, the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. God is not building a mansion in the sky for you, my brother. He is building you into an eternal habitation for Himself and you, together with millions of other twice born men, are that holy temple, that glorious, celestial habitation of God through the Spirit. Let us then conclude that the miraculous birth of Christ Jesus our Lord was itself a parabolic miracle portraying the miraculous new birth of all the sons of God.

HIS MIRACULOUS LIFE

No life that was ever lived was like the life of Jesus Christ. No man spake like Him. No man had such wisdom, such power, such compassion and understanding. His life is the central theme of the ages. Every date we know is either B.C. or A.D. Even ungodly, communist nations reckon their time from the date of His birth and atheistic lawyers mark their documents, "In the year of our Lord." He was the beginning of the old creation and He is the beginning of the new creation. All things were made by Him and for Him. All things exist through Him and all things end in Him. All other christs are false christs. He alone is true. Mohammed is dead; Buddha is dead; Confucius is dead. They have no power to transform or change any who believe in them. But Christ is alive - alive forevermore. He lives His miraculous life in the hearts of believing saints, both transforming them and making them new creatures in Him. Only eternity itself will disclose the endless procession of saints that have been transformed by His almighty power. Multitudes that no man can number will stand at last by the crystal sea of life, praising to highest heaven the Christ who redeemed us by His blood, and the battlements of heaven and earth and all the universe will echo and re-echo as a multitude without number from every nation and kindred and tribe bless Him that sits on the throne and join in praise to the Lamb for ever and ever.

No might and no power that has ever existed has been able to diminish, crush or destroy the glory and gentleness of the Christ life and God's word declares that eventually that mighty Prince of Peace will gather into Himself everything in earth, everything in heaven and everything under the earth. Eph. 1:10

His glorious life was a miraculous life and those who have been born of His Spirit and washed in His life blood are kept by the power of God to live miraculous lives of purity and faith, shining as eternal lights in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation whose only trend is downward. In the light of this truth I now declare that the miraculous life of our blessed Lord was in itself a parable, vividly portraying the transformed lives of all those sons of God, whom He has redeemed by His blood and in whom He lives and moves and has His being.

THE CROSS OF CHRIST

On Calvary's brow my Saviour died; Twas there my Lord was crucified.
was on the cross He died for me
And purchased there my pardon free.

No words ever spoken were more certain than these. It is infallibly true that our Lord died on the cross. It was there that He shed His blood, and that blood is the life of the world. Through the blood of His cross all who believe have life today. Never was Jesus able to give eternal life to any man while life eternal flowed as blood in the veins of His own body; but when through marvelous grace that life blood was shed, eternal life was poured forth as fountains of living water upon the parched and thirsty souls of earth's repenting millions to such an extent that whosoever believeth on Him, as the scripture has said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. This spake Christ of the Holy Spirit, which they that believe on Him should receive, for the Holy Ghost had not yet been given.

I would be amiss if I failed to tell you that the cross of Christ was not a cross of wood. The cross of Calvary was no doubt a wooden cross, but the cross of Christ was something far more than a wooden beam. When in loving kindness our Lord exhorted the young seeker, saying, "Take up thy cross and follow Me," He was not making reference to a gibbet of wood, but to a cross that would identify his life with the life of Christ. The death of the cross is in some strange and wonderful way the gateway to the life of the cross. The cross of Christ had its beginning that day in heaven, when the Son of God, "being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: but made Himself of no reputation, and took upon Him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men; and being found in fashion as a man, He humbled Himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross."
The agonies of Calvary
Could not His love dismay.
He would not yield though God revealed
The price that he must pay.

Fierce as was His trial at Calvary, that fearful hour of agony and blood was but the final act of a life of the cross as step by step He descended from the majesty and glory of equality with God to the fearsome moment when He cried in anguish, "My God, My God, why hast Thou forsaken Me?" All the books in the world, though written with pens of gold, could never fully describe the everlasting accomplishments of His cross, nor could all the silvery tongued orators explain to the mind of man how He, who was rich, for our sakes became poor that we through His poverty might be made rich. Eternity itself will not be too long to sing the praises of such a One, who came from the bosom of God to shed His life blood that all creation might find life eternal in Him.

And now doth He say to you and me, "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus." The way up is down. He that humbleth himself shall be exalted, but the haughty shall be brought low. Listen to Paul as in the glory of Christ's triumph he gives this divinepronouncement: "God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me, I unto the world." Gal. 6:14

Every man and every woman will have to face the cross. If there be no cross, neither will there be a crown. We will have to face it in our own lives and, if I am not mistaken, we will have to face it every day we live. "For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." Phil. 1:21 Death to ourselves will be the greatest death we ever die. That death will never be accomplished by our vain struggling and trying, but it will be accomplished in that blessed hour when the Holy Spirit reveals to our hearts the truth that he revealed to Paul: "I am crucified with Christ." The world itself cannot contain the full truth of this precious statement, "I am crucified with Christ." We will never get crucified nor will we ever have faith to crucify ourselves. We will never go to an altar and accomplish this act by faith. The lesson we must learn, my earnestly seeking friend, is simply this: Before ever there was a world or a sinner in it, God Himself by His almighty power placed all men in His Son Jesus Christ and then, having done so, He crucified Him and, when He crucified Him, He also crucified me, because I was in Him. When He crucified His Son, He crucified you, because He had placed you in Him. All this took place before the foundation of the world. All men died in Adam and, because all men died in Adam, all men live in Christ, because God has placed all men in Him. "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." 1 Cor. 15:22. "But," you ask, "why is it then that all men are not saved?" The truth is that all men are saved, but all men have not yet believed, because God has not yet opened their eyes. All Christians are crucified with Him, but few, oh so few, have ever been told that crucifixion is an accomplished reality - accomplished by God Himself and left for us to accept and believe. Once the believer grasps this truth and seizes upon it by faith, then he understands that all of the old carnal realm with all its terrifying specters was a paper tiger, an alarming, petrifying panic, a phantom, a dead lion, no more real than a nightmare.

My brother, my sister, in that good and glorious moment when you see God by His almighty power placing all men in Christ, yea, even before the world began, and, having done so, He sent Him to the cross to be crucified, then you will know that, when Christ was crucified, you were crucified, for you were in Him. Then you will join with Paul and every participant of the revelation, saying, "I am crucified with Christ." Then you will be able for the first time in your life to reckon yourself dead unto sin, but alive unto God.

Cold is nothing but the absence of heat. Darkness is nothing but the absence of light. Death is nothing but the absence of life. Sin is nothing but the absence of righteousness. It is with these nothings, these no things that man is always battling. Wake up, my brother, my sister, to the realm of reality and life! His cross was a parable, a foreshadow of our own.

THE BURIAL OF CHRIST

Very few sermons having as their theme the burial of Christ have ever been spoken or written. Of this hardly credible omission I have been as guilty as others. Though we have carelessly overlooked its truth, it is a cardinal fact that the burial of Christ actually lies at the very heart of the gospel. That the very heart and hub of the gospel might be indelibly impressed upon our minds, let us ask ourselves the question, "What is the gospel?" It is possible that we may get a hundred different answers to this question, all of which may contain part of the truth, but Paul with the brevity and thoroughness always so evident in his inspired writing portrays the three principal and most outstanding facts of the gospel in these words: "Moreover, brethren, I declared unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand; by which also ye are saved... how that (1) Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures; (2) and that He was buried, and (3) that He rose again the third day according to the scriptures." 1 Cor. 15:1-4. This statement of truth, every particle of which is according to the Old Testament scriptures, is the heart, the pith, the core and quintessence of the entire gospel by which we are saved. It is the center of all truth. It is the mighty hub from which every spoke of truth proceeds and without which the universe of truth would certainly collapse as a wheel falls in pieces when its hub is taken away. The preacher who preaches a gospel without the cross is a fool. His idle words contain no heart of truth. His supposed gospel, which is no gospel at all, can never be more than a creed of reform that can never do more than wash the sow that will presently return to her wallowing in the mire. The preacher who preaches the cross, yet fails to identify himself and his people with the burial of Christ, inadvertently leaves both the Christ and the people in eternal relationship to the old Adamic life, and thus their connection with the first Adam is never fully broken. They are never quite done with the world and the flesh and the devil as we have known them, whose abominable power we have wrestled all our lives. Burial, my dear friend, is the last act of our present existence. It is the consummation of our old life, our old man, our old self, our Adamic nature. Here in burial the dust of our corruptible returns to dust and the green bay tree of our carnality is reduced to ashes, for "dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return." Here in burial ends the old creation and all that pertains to it. Burial ends all our connection with the old Adam, the old man, the old corruptible. In burial the stinking, rotten carcass of our old self is buried out of sight. It is the end of all that is old. When your friends and relatives walk away from your tomb, they know full well, if they know anything at all, that they will never again see you in corruption, but only in resurrection. Burial is the end of all that has been in the past. It is the kiss of death to all that pertains to the first Adam, the old man, the old nature, and all deceitful lusts. This is the terminus, the culmination and the climax. Here old things pass away in their entirety. They are buried and forgotten.

Now, just as the scripture forcefully shows that we can be completely identified with the cross of Christ, crucified with Him, so also the same gospel teaches our complete identification with Christ in His burial. When I tell you that before the foundation of the world the Father saw you and placed you in Christ and, having done so, He crucified Him, does not that fact shout the message that you are crucified with Him? Here in this wonderful knowledge faith grasps an accomplished fact and, believing, seize the truth of our identification with Christ, shouting aloud our new found experience, "I am crucified with Christ," all because we see and understand by revelation what Christ has done. It was when God revealed that fact to me, that I felt the old realm vanishing away, even as a dying man, knowing that the past is forever gone, fixes his hope on the resurrection side of the tomb.

I greatly fear, my brethren, that far too many saints have embraced the cross, but have left the smelly, Adamic body of sin lying around to spread its foul corruption. They are completely unaware of the vital necessity of burial and the tomb. We have already stated that it is in burial that all connection with the old realm is forever done away. Shall a man who has been identified by faith with the burial of Christ continue in sin? God forbid! If his faith is pure, that would be impossible. Does the drunkard crave his drink after he has gone to the tomb? Does the heroin addict writhe and crave for a shot to calm his torment? Is it not true that in the grave all ties with the past are broken insomuch that even one's wife or husband is free to marry another simply because we no longer exist as we once did? "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into His death? Therefore we are buried with Him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted (buried) together in the likeness of His death, we shall also be in the likeness of His resurrection: knowing this, that our old man is crucified with Him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin. For he that is dead is freed from sin." Rom. 6:3-7. See also. Col. 2:12-13. Do you see, my brethren, how completely we have missed the significance of the truth displayed in water baptism? This ordinance is above all else an act of identification. In it we are first identified with Christ in burial and, secondly, we are identified with Christ in rising from the dead. Though Christ sent Paul "not to baptize," (1 Cor. 1:17). Paul more than any other man taught us the vital significance of water baptism. Baptism indicates burial. It is identification with Christ in the tomb. Burial not only indicates but is a complete severance from our old life and the old realm. It is the finish, the finis, the fait accompli, the finale, the denouement, the conclusion, and the ultimate. It is the farewell to all that is old, the good morning to all that is new, if, as we have stated, the very heart of the gospel is this, "that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures; and that He was buried, and that He rose again the third day according to the scriptures," then it should not be difficult to see that of these three statements burial is the heart or the center. See yourself identified with Christ's burial as you have seen yourself identified with His cross and your old life will fade away into the silence of the tomb and into the voids of emptiness, and you, being now raised from death by the Father's glorious power, will lay hold upon newness of resurrection life. For, if we have been planted in the likeness of His death, we shall also be in the likeness of His resurrection. I shall venture here to say, for I know it cannot be contradicted, that the reason we are so grossly affected by all the concerns and affairs of this present evil realm and find ourselves so distressed about the welfare of our "body of death" is that we have not yet taken it to the burial. We have not wrapped our old Adamic man in grave clothes and cast him into the tomb, but our fingers still firmly clutch the weak and beggarly affairs of this present life. Naught that man or devil can ever do will affect you in the tomb, for that is the end, the omega of all that pertains to the realm of the first Adam.

It is this vital fact that Paul is announcing, yea, declaring, when he so clearly states, "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into His death? Therefore we are buried with Him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of His death, we shall also be in the likeness of His resurrection: knowing this, that our old man is crucified with Him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin. For he that is dead is freed from sin. Now if we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with Him: knowing that Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over Him. For in that He died, He died unto sin once: but in that He liveth, He liveth unto God. Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord." Rom. 6:3-11.

Oh what a realm of victory lies hidden in these inspired words! Oh what a termination is made to the world, the flesh and the devil in that we were first crucified with Him and then buried with Him, putting our old Adamic man both out of sight and out of existence forevermore! How sadly have the preachers failed by their presentation of a moral gospel, a gospel of do's and don'ts for the old man instead of bringing the glorious message that our old Adamic man and all that concerns its sinful self, together with all its works of the flesh, were first nailed to the cross in crucifixion, after which the dead carcass of our old self was taken down, wrapped in the cloths of the dead and buried out of sight in the tomb. Here identified with Him in burial we bid farewell to the old creation, farewell to the first Adam, farewell to carnal ordinance, and farewell to the flesh and all its lusts. This heart of the gospel truth is both indicated and clearly demonstrated in the act of water baptism. We will not be likely to hear baptism preached in this manner, but lay hold upon its truth. It is with the heart that man believes unto righteousness, but it is with the mouth that confession is made unto salvation.

In Christ we are circumcised. The flesh is cut away. This is "the circumcision made without hands, inputting off the body of the sins of the flesh through the circumcision of Christ: buried with Him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with Him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised Him from the dead." Col. 2:11-12

If ministers of the gospel would halt their man-made programs and their abominable clamor for money, together with all worldly show and preach instead that saints can be identified with Christ in death, in burial and in resurrection, it would be a short season until the fields of God would be waving with ripened and mature saints. We shall come, therefore, to the conclusion that as in all other events in Christ's life and ministry His burial and entrance into the tomb are in themselves parables of events which may be accomplished by faith in every saint of God.

THE RESURRECTION UNTO INCORRUPTION

It may not be hard to convince mankind that Jesus died and that He was buried, for who among men does not die and who will not be buried? But when we speak of the resurrection of the dead, we enter a new realm entirely, for no man other than Christ Jesus our Lord has until now experienced the glory of the resurrection. Lest this statement should be misunderstood, we must explain here that there is a difference between being raised from the dead and resurrection. There are those who were raised from the dead as Lazarus was, or the widow's son or Dorcas, but these good people were raised again to resume their lives in their corruptible bodies. They all died again, but in resurrection the corruptible body puts on incorruption; neither does it die any more. Luke 20:35,36. Being raised from the dead, though a remarkable miracle, is in fact little more than the healing of leprosy or cancer or any other mortal ailment. The leper, though healed of his incurable disease, will presently die of old age or some other disease. The person healed of cancer or tuberculosis will also die or go to the grave because his healing was in reality a short new lease on this corruptible existence in the body of flesh and blood. But Jesus was the first fruit of the resurrection. He was not raised in corruption, but in incorruption. He was not raised in weakness, but in power. He was not raised a natural body, but a spiritual body. This corruptible had put on incorruption (1 Cor. 15:54), and eventually the incorruptible would put on immortality. Reference will be made to incorruption later in this article.

Every reader should make himself as familiar as possible with the treatise on the resurrection found in 1 Cor. 15. No other chapter in the Bible so completely describes the glory of the resurrection. Here the writer displays its meaning, emphasizes its necessity, and clearly manifests our identification with Christ in resurrection. In seeing the wonder of it, we should never lose sight of the ever, prominent place the resurrection of Christ had in Paul's own teaching. The message of the apostles was full of the glory and power of the resurrection. The apostles were not men who walked about like priests in drab attire and with mournful faces, with crosses dangling from golden chains about their necks. Above all else they were witnesses of the resurrection. 'Tis true they preached the cross, but the glory of their message was that Christ was neither dead nor upon a cross, but alive forever more. He had been seen alive by the women, by the apostles, by the men on the road to Emmaus. In a special manner He had revealed Himself to the dubious Thomas and again to the disciples after their disastrous fishing expedition. Then He was seen by over five hundred brethren at one time. Later still He was seen by Paul in a special revelation and still later He was seen on Patmos by the beloved John, who, beholding His more excellent glory, fell at His feet as one dead. Christ proved Himself both resurrected and alive after His passion by many infallible proofs. Acts 1:3 I suppose that not least among those infallible proofs is the undeniable truth that in our day, even while this message is read, Christ Jesus is alive, bearing vital witness within our spirits, transforming our lives and giving us the spirit of sonship.

Let us give ear to Peter as his lips pour forth resurrection life in his tremendous sermons after Pentecost. Notice that his message was not only Christ crucified, but above all else Christ risen from the dead. "Ye men of Israel," he cries, "hear these words; Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by Him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know: Him, being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain: Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death; because it was not possible that He should be holden of it." Acts 2:22-24 The apostle then goes on to show how the prophecy of David, Psa. 16:8-11, is a prophecy of the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. "For David speaketh concerning Him, I foresaw the Lord always before my face, for He is on my right hand, that I should not be moved: therefore did my heart rejoice, and my tongue was glad; moreover my flesh also shall rest in hope: because Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell, neither wilt Thou suffer Thine Holy One to see corruption. Thou hast made known to me the ways of life; Thou shalt make me full of joy with Thy countenance." Acts 2:25, 31 Again, in his sermon after the healing of the lame man at the temple gate. Peter attributed that marvelous miracle not only to Jesus Christ, but to the resurrected Christ, for he said, "Ye denied the Holy One and the Just, and desired a murderer to be granted unto you: and killed the Prince of life, whom God hath raised from the dead; whereof we are witnesses." Acts 3:14-15 "Unto you first God, having raised up His Son Jesus, sent Him to bless you, in turning away every one of you from his iniquities." Acts 3:26 When Luke wrote to the governor Theophilus, in the very introduction of his letter he makes this remarkable statement of fact: "To whom also (the apostles) He showed Himself alive after His passion (crucifixion) by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God." Acts 1:3

If my purpose here was to give proof of the resurrection, I would continue to give more of those infallible proofs, but the intention here is not so much to give proof of the resurrection as to show that the resurrection of Christ from the tomb was in itself a tremendous demonstration of the manner in which all His beloved saints will be raised on that great day when all who are in their graves will hear God's voice and come forth in life.

When Christ our Lord arose from the dead, He was raised not in corruption but in incorruption. That which is incorruptible is beyond the power of corruption, decay or death. God Himself is said to be incorruptible and we are said to be born of incorruptible seed by the word of God that liveth forever. Death has no power at all over the incorruptible. Thus of the resurrection of the dead it is written: "It is sown in corruption; it is sown in incorruption: it is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power: it is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body." 1 Cor. 15:42-44 This corruptible must put on incorruption. The body of the corruptible man is the body of death, but the body of the incorruptible man is the body of the resurrection, a body beyond the power of death. When our Lord rose from the dead, He arose incorruptible. He had no blood as we know blood. The blood and water which had ebbed from His body in death was now manifest as life, the life of God, life incorruptible and eternal.

In the incorruptible body of His resurrection, our Lord often communed with men. For forty days He spoke with them concerning the kingdom of God. Acts 1:3 Though He no doubt hid His glory from them, the glory of His resurrection and His incorruption was the glory He displayed to them on the mount of transfiguration. This body of glory and incorruption is the body of the resurrection. When the kingdom of God appears in the fullness of its glory on the earth, the sons of God will be manifest to the world and the living nations of the earth in the glory of their resurrection. Being children of the resurrection, they will be seen as incorruptible beings and they will rule the world and all the nations in it as resurrected and incorruptible men. Just as Jesus had power after His resurrection to appear or disappear, to manifest Himself or to hide His identity, ascend to heaven or to return to earth, instruct concerning the kingdom or even eat and drink if He wished, so also will these resurrected and incorruptible sons have power. I have already stated that all things that were done and accomplished by our Lord were vivid manifestations of those things which His sons will do, for said He, "The works that I do shall ye do also; and greater works than these shall ye do, because I go to My Father."

The church in its hour of corruption has been claiming to have done "the greater works", but this is not so. The greater works will appear when this corruptible puts on incorruption and the sons of God are manifested in their resurrection glory. When we consider how marvelous and powerful is the glory of the resurrection unto incorruption, it seems to be but little wonder that these mighty sons will introduce a world wherein dwelleth righteousness. If the lone Jesus of Nazareth, while yet straitened by a corruptible body, so marvelously affected the entire world, what then may we expect when a vast family of brothers in the image of His resurrection appear to reign in righteousness over all the earth?

HIS ASCENSION INTO HEAVEN

The resurrection from the dead, glorious beyond description, was, however, not the final act of our Lord's ministry nor the end of that wonderful parable of His life as He by example unfolded the surpassing radiance of heavenly things to come. Beyond the realm of incorruption and resurrection one more scene was yet to unfold before their wondering eyes as He passed from the excellent realm of incorruption to the more excellent glory of immortality. Jesus Christ ascended into heaven into the unapproachable light and into immortality. I shall not be able to prove this to the satisfaction of prying minds and unbelieving hearts; nevertheless, to the believer the truth is forever settled that beyond the glory of incorruption lies the more excellent glory of immortality. As surely as Paul has said, "This corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality," so it shall be accomplished in its time.

It was a glorious day beyond compare when the incorruptible Jesus Christ led His disciples out as far as Bethany and there, while speaking to them, He lifted up His hands and blessed them. "And it came to pass, while He blessed them, He was parted from them, and carried up into heaven." Luke 24:51 Up and up He went, ascending, ascending, ascending into the light which no man can approach; ascending far above principalities, far above all power, all might and all dominion. Unto the Father's right hand He went, ascending into the light of immortality of which supernal realm Paul wrote, "Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see: to whom be honor and power everlasting. Amen." 1 Tim. 6:16 No man hath seen nor can see, for flesh and blood cannot enter that realm; but, my brethren, just as surely as Jesus our Lord ascended beyond the realm of incorruption into the light which no man can approach, which is the light of immortality, that light which is God Himself, so this mortal must put on immortality. The scripture is loud in its marvelous proclamation of this truth, and so shall it be. 1 Cor. 15:53
In the book concerning the precious blood, I showed as clearly as I was able that the blood of Christ is the life of God and that the life of God is the light of God. Thus plainly did our Lord progress upward from the blood of His mortality to resurrection life, and, having been seen of men for forty days in incorruption, He ascended into the light of immortality. The Son, who had come forth from the Father into the world, had now left the world and gone to the Father, and thus it shall be for us all when at last our orbit and our journey is complete.

You are the body of Christ. You are the temple of the Lord. You are the sons of God. You are the habitation of God through the Spirit. You are the temple that has been in meticulous and laborious building since this age began. One day as I read the exceedingly marvelous description of the New Jerusalem, which is a description of the bride of Christ, to my amazement I read these words: "And I saw no temple therein." Said I to myself in consternation, "What has become of the beautiful temple which for two thousand years God has been building with such infinite care?" Then, reading the passage further, I found these words: "For the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple."

Rev. 21:22. My friends, can you grasp a little of the glory of this statement? Dare to believe it, for it must be true. The temple, which we are has ascended into the light of immortality to be absorbed in God and made one with the light which no man approacheth. Thus it is written, "I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world: again, I leave the world, and go to the Father." John 16:28 That which has borne the image of the earthy shall certainly bear the image of the heavenly. Amen.
INTRODUCTION

The seven chapters of this book are not intended to complement each other in the development of one theme. Each chapter has its own theme and we hope it will present the reader with much food for thought and meditation. Thus the title, Seven Baskets Full, is borrowed from the miracle of the loaves and fishes as recorded in Matt. 15:37.

It is of great importance that the multitude be fed, but the throng is always inclined to leave as inedible those precious fragments that are in truth strong meat to the maturing sons of God. We are living in an hour of great importance. Let us cast no fragment away nor neglect anything that we know to be truth. No word from God is unimportant; neither is it the right of any man to pick and choose between truth he likes and truth he dislikes. Those who eat what they like and discard the fragment can never be called either people of faith or lovers of truth.

CHAPTER ONE
THE SIX STATEMENTS OF MALACHI

The prophet Malachi was sent by God to preach to the remnant of Israel who had returned from the captivity of Babylon. It was indeed a grave and troublesome time for them, for, though they had followed Ezra and Nehemiah out of the bondage, sorrow, and night of their captivity, even the blindest men can see that there was not a spirit of national revival among them by any means. The Spirit of God had burdened many with a great longing to leave Babylon and return to Israel now that the opportunity was afforded them, but though many had willingly left behind all they possessed in that kingdom of captivity to return in hope to their native land, the evidence suggests that only a very few of them had any true understanding or delight in the things of God. Perhaps it is too much to expect that a people who had been in captivity for a period of seventy years, deprived of their worship and forced into the corruption and idolatry of the Babylonians, would have much understanding of the plans and purposes of the true God. Those brave souls who follow the true God regardless of Baal or the gods of Pharaoh or Nebuchadnezzar are always in the infinitesimal minority. God never leaves Himself without a witness. He always has His remnant who has never bowed a head nor bent a knee either to Baal or to any of earth’s systems. We may have to spend days in travel to reach them, for they are always scattered to the four winds, unrecognized by the world and frequently unknown to each other as were the seven thousand in Elijah’s day.
As literal Israel in the days of Ezra and Nehemiah returned from literal Babylon, so today spiritual Israel is returning from a spiritual Babylon to that Zion, which God is now preparing for His own. The parallel is this: As they returned in much blindness and misunderstanding, so also today there is much lack of understanding among the many who are now leaving the dreary traditions of the past with all the slavish forms of religion and monotonous ceremony. When Israel came out of Egypt, they were not ready to enter the land of Canaan, but with rebellious minds they groped in the wilderness and in their hearts often turned back to Egypt. So also it is now. But he who putteth his hand to the plow and looketh back is not fit for the kingdom of God. When Jesus said, "As it was in the day that Lot went out of Sodom, so shall it be in the day of the coming of the Son of man," He added these significant words: "Remember Lot's wife." Let none of us be like unto her who turned her eyes from the mountain before her to look with longing and regret toward that city of destruction from which she had so recently escaped. It is not the fact that we start the journey to the celestial realm that is important. It is not that we continue in the way for a week or a month or a year. The thing that really counts is that we continue year after year pressing on through mists or rain, o'er crag and torrent, through darkness and troubled seas, through misunderstanding and resentment until we reach the goal and seize the reward, the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. The world is full of spiritual "drop-outs", people who ran well or "also ran", but because of adversity were hindered in the race and turned back as a dog returns to his vomit or a sow to her wallowing in the mire. Let us look diligently lest any man fail of the grace of God, lest any root of bitterness springing up trouble us, and thereby many be defiled; lest there be any fornicator or profane (worldly) person as Esau, who for one morsel of meat sold his birthright, for we know how that afterward, when he would have inherited the blessing, he was rejected; for he found no place of repentance, though he sought it carefully with tears. Heb. 12:15-17

The prize that lies before the saints of God who are leaving the blinding traditions of the past and who are on the march to Zion is much greater than the hope of the Jews who returned to Zion with Nehemiah or of their forefathers who left Egypt with Moses, for "Ye are come to Mount Zion and the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and church of the firstborn which are written in heaven, and to God the judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling that speaketh better things than that of Abel." Heb. 12:22-24 Therefore, let us be sure we do not refuse to hear the voice of God, for, if those who refused to hear those who spoke on earth did not escape, how little chance of escape is there for us if we refuse to hear the One who now speaks from heaven? Then His voice shook the earth, but now He promises, "Yet once more I will make to tremble, not the earth only, but also the heaven." This means that in the final shaking all that is not permanent, that is, everything that is merely "made", will be removed and only the unshakable things will remain. Since, then, we have been given a kingdom that is unshakable, let us serve God with thankfulness in the ways, which please Him, but always with reverence and holy fear, for it is perfectly true that our God is a burning fire. Heb. 12:25-28

If we are going to turn back at the first sign of difficulty, it is best never to start at all, for it is better never to have known the way of righteousness than, having known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto us. It should not matter a straw to us how other men walk in their heavenly pilgrimage. We must be unmoved though all men forsake us, yet for all this steadfastness we must all admit that our hearts are made sick with remorse and our hands hang down when we see a man or a woman begin to run well, only to halt his pace and turn back again. It is always a test to our own endurance and a sad and bitter disappointment to hear that someone has returned to Egypt or to Babylon, for by so doing they prove that they were vacillating in the beginning. It is not enough to say, "Though all men forsake the Lord, yet I will not." It is better far to be silent, yet still pursuing, than to make great boasts and afterward return to the bondage of the weak and beggarly elements of the world.

In the days of Malachi the spiritual state of Israel was mediocre in the extreme. Though they had turned their backs on Babylon as many are now doing, they needed a personal relationship with God. They needed to be prepared for the coming of the Lord, for that, after all, is the true purpose and the principal reason why the Spirit of God is now with great care separating a people unto Himself. The true church is not a sect, a denomination, or a group of any kind, organized or unorganized. The true church is a people who have heard God's voice and have separated themselves unto Him. You and I are not wise enough to know wheat from tares or sheep from goats in the spiritual realm; therefore, to circumscribe any group of people either small or great, saying, "This is the true church and these are the members of His body", is but to deceive oneself and indulge in the idiocy of believing that tares are wheat and goats are sheep. As good and evil have mingled together throughout the entire dispensation of grace, it is small wonder that we do not discern between him that serveth God and him that serveth Him not. Think it not strange that this separation is now going on in our midst, for Jesus forewarned us, saying that He would send His angels in the end of the age to divide the wicked from among the just.

The whole prophecy of Malachi was given to prepare the people for the coming of Christ. "Prepare ye the way of the Lord" is the burden of his message. It is remarkable that in his prophecy he referred to John the Baptist, who came to prepare the way for the first coming of Christ, Mal. 3:1, and then later to Elijah, the prophet, who is to come before the great and dreadful day of the Lord to prepare for the second coming of Christ. Mal. 4:5.
In the message of Malachi six withering accusations were made against the people of God. These same six cardinal sins are found everywhere among Christians in our day. All of these faults need our prayerful consideration and our earnest repentance, for we, as they, have come out of captivity bearing much of the image of Babylon upon our souls.

There is a great fault among the people of God, which could be corrected merely by earnest thought and resolve. It is this: We are ready and anxious to hear all manner of wonderful things; we are all willing to embrace the great and marvelous promises of God; we present ourselves among the crowd that is hoping for sonship; we anxiously wait for the glories of the coming kingdom, but we hate to have the gross disorders of our lives pointed out to us. We loathe to be called upon to change our ways or to order our lives after a different fashion that we may be worthy of the kingdom of God, for which we also suffer. There is not a more wonderful chapter in all the Bible than the sixth chapter of John. It holds within its storehouse the glowing hope of eternal life and incorruption, yet in verse 66 we are treated to the pitiful sight of seeing men who had walked with Christ now turning away and walking no more with Him because of a truth that He gave them. As long as these men were feasting upon loaves and fishes, they were zealous disciples, but the moment Jesus exhorted them with these words, "Labor not for the meat which perisheth", they began to be offended. Then, when He explained that He Himself was the true bread from heaven, they sulked, "How can this man give us His flesh to eat?" They then began to engage in arguments, asking all manner of impertinent questions. They made foolish comparisons between Christ and Moses and, when He finally told them that no man could come to Him except it were given him of the Father, then from that time they went back and walked no more with Him. John 6:65-66 Oh, how badly they needed this truth: "Blessed is he whosoever shall not be offended in Me."

Our besetting trouble is that, when we follow God out of an old order as Israel followed Moses out of Egypt, we, as they, expect everything in the new realm to be very much as it was before. We rejoice in new-found liberty and deliverance from the hated bondage of the past, but, when we discover that our ship must sail through stormy and uncharted seas and our path is thorny and fraught with grave difficulty, we begin to surmise, imagine, and complain and wish we had never started the journey. We have put our hand to the plow but we have looked back and judged ourselves to be unworthy of the kingdom of God. We cannot plow a straight furrow by constantly looking over our shoulder. We must disregard the past and keep our eyes on the marker at the other end of the field. The Israelites who followed Moses with joy and gladness through the waters of the Red Sea did not know that in a few hours they would be parching with thirst in a waterless desert, nor did it ever enter their minds while they ate abundantly of the flesh pots of Egypt that they would soon faint without food in a dreary, treeless wilderness. It is when these unexpected things happen that men begin to imagine that they have made a mistake. Then either in heart or in reality they turn back to the bondage from whence they came. How often in my life I have seen men and women start well. For a few weeks or months they show encouraging signs of fortitude and understanding only, alas, to weakly turn back when the unexpected happened and the blessings they so earnestly expected were long delayed.

Do we indeed think that we are doing something great and wonderful to be still clinging to the same spot we were when God found us twenty or thirty years ago? Do we boast that we are just the same now as we were then? Have we never read, "Therefore, leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on to perfection, not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works and of faith toward God, the doctrine of baptisms and the laying on of hands and of the resurrection of the dead and eternal judgment"? These truths should have been experienced and passed by many years ago, and "this will we do, if God permit," Heb. 6:1-3 There is a fearful warning to all God's people who undertake the journey into the deeper experiences in God to become partakers of the Holy Spirit, the good word of God, and the powers of the kingdom age, for if, after partaking of these wonderful realms of truth and experience, they fall back again, there remaineth no more repentance, but they like Esau, having missed the blessing, will never again in this age be given the opportunity to re-enter. Let us therefore fear lest, a promise being left us of entering into His rest, any of us should seem to come short of it, and let us labor therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief. Heb. 4:1,11 I for one am all delighted to see men and women start their journey to the richer and deeper things of God, but it is much better never to have known the ways of righteousness than, having known it and walked in it, to return as a dog to his vomit and as a sow to her wallowing in the mire.

Let us therefore fortify ourselves against all shock and become immune to offence. Let us be like the hardy pioneers, who find a way where no way exists to become the very founders and fathers of nations. All that we are and all that we ever were and all that we ever shall be must come under the supreme reign of Christ that we might bow to His will and authority in all things. Let us not therefore be offended, but rather with earnestness and devotion prepare the way of the Lord.

STATEMENT (1) "I HAVE LOVED YOU"

To each of the following six statements from the prophecy of Malachi the people impertinently reply to God as though they were the very quintessence of innocence. The prophecy begins with these words: "I have loved you, saith the Lord. Yet ye say, Wherein hast Thou loved us?" God is continually manifesting His great love toward us, but so often His love goes unrecognized and unrequited. Even while He is bestowing His great love upon us, we are inclined to imagine in our unbelief that He has forgotten us altogether. Oh, how long will it be before God's people can see the wisdom and kindness of God in long delaying the answer to our prayer? If the Lord answered every prayer we pray, we would be naught but spoiled children, knowing nothing of true faith or hope or trust, understanding the value of nothing, demanding only those things our carnal minds desire. Our hearts would be devoid of any thought for the will or purpose of God and our lives would manifest no love for Him at all. We would be like those ne'er-do-well sons who, having wealthy fathers, are granted their every demand, who value nothing, respect no one, love none but themselves and come to their end behind the bars of judgment.

Now in answer to the ungracious question, wherein hast Thou loved us, please notice the answer of the Lord. "Was not Esau Jacob's brother? Yet I loved Jacob and hated Esau, and laid his mountains and his heritage waste for the dragons of the wilderness," Mal. 1:1-3 At first thought this appears to be a simple case of favoritism on the part of God, but it is not so. Esau, the first born, was a man of the earth, a man of flesh, a man who was much more concerned with the emptiness of his belly than with the birthright of the Lord. Now that is not first which is spiritual but that which is natural and afterward that which is spiritual. Jacob was opposite to Esau in every respect. He greatly desired the birthright and he was perfectly willing to go to any length to get it. He cared nothing for the red pottage that was prepared for dinner. He was more than willing to endure an empty stomach if only he could possess the birthright. Though Jacob has been soundly condemned by multitudes as a conniving crook, it was his desire of spiritual things that God loved. God cared not a whit for the crude methods of this man but, looking upon his heart, He saw there his burning desire for eternal things. Therefore God loved Jacob, even before he was born.

Jacob and Esau were two different men in nature, but their two natures exist in every man. They are called the flesh and the spirit. They war continually with each other. The flesh lusts (wars) against the Spirit and the Spirit wars against the flesh. They are contrary the one to the other so that we can never do the things we want to do. We cannot do the carnal things that we would do because of the Spirit, and we cannot do the spiritual things we want to do because of the flesh. One or the other must be conquered and subdued. If the Spirit is subdued by the flesh, or the Esau nature, we become completely carnal men, caring only for the things that concern the physical body of flesh. If the flesh is crucified by a walk in the Spirit, we become spiritual men, caring only for the will of God.

The love of God is manifested toward us in that He longs with great desire to lay waste the strongholds of the Esau nature. He loved the Jacob nature, for, all its imperfections notwithstanding, it is the beginning of the Israel nature, which is the nature of sons. He hates the Esau nature and has made every provision that it may be conquered and put to death. It is during this death process that we are so likely to forget the love of God and misunderstand His judgments toward us. We will be inclined to think that, because God allows many failures and misfortunes to befall us, He has forgotten us. Christians will be at pains to tell us that our suffering is a sure sign of God's displeasure with our life. Nothing could be further from the truth. He has forgotten nothing, but while we, in our ignorance are trying to build up and establish the mountain of Esau, which is the flesh, God's purpose is to lay it waste and leave it to the dragons of the wilderness, or to the realm of Satan. The natural man wants to build up the natural, the visible, the audible, and the tangible. In short, we want to build up Esau, but God has purposed that we should become princes with God, heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ. Therefore in love He lays waste the mountain of Esau within us.

We must learn that our light affliction, which is but for a moment, is working for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, while we look not on the things that are seen but on the things which are not seen, for the things which are seen are temporal but the things which are not seen are eternal. When God is permitting great adversity to dog our steps, it is because He loves us and is laying waste the mountain of Esau within us. When financial difficulties beset us, it may be He is delivering us from the very love of money, which is the root of all evil. When illness comes, it is that we might see the frailty of the flesh and all that is physical, for those who suffer in the flesh learn to submit themselves to God who judgeth righteously. Thus they flee from the realm of the visible and temporal to lay hold upon the invisible and eternal. When trusted friends forsake us, it is that we may learn never to trust in man, whose breath is in his nostrils, but in the living God who sticketh closer than friends or brothers, holding us fast when mothers and fathers forsake us. Psa. 27:10 Thus then saith the Lord, "I hated Esau and laid his mountains and his heritage waste for the dragons of the wilderness. Whereas Edom saith, We are impoverished, but we will return and build the desolate places; thus saith the Lord of hosts, they shall build, but I will throw down; and they shall call them the border of wickedness, and the people against whom the Lord hath indignation forever, and your eyes; shall see and ye shall say, The Lord will be magnified from the border of Israel." Mal. 1:3-5

Our heavenly Father never, never does anything without well-planned and eternal reasons. Therefore there is omniscient wisdom hidden beneath His determination to subdue and crucify the Esau nature within us. The reason is this: There is coming a day when the sons of God will subdue all things and bring everything into subjection unto the Father. Christ must reign until all enemies are under His feet. 1 Cor. 15:24-25 Let us therefore face this solemn fact that all who will reign with Him must first of all be subject to Him and be ruled by Him. Those who will be used of God to subdue all things must first of all be subdued. Those who are to subdue the enemies of Christ must first of all have all the enemies of Christ subdued within themselves. Never let this truth depart from you either day or night, for, if God should give men power to subdue who have not themselves been subdued, they would not be one whit superior to all those tyrannical dictators of the past, who in their lust for power trod their enemies under their bloody feet, rejoicing only in their bombastic and dictatorial spirit and the groveling servitude of the people.

The following quotation from Dr. George Watson, entitled "Subdued," will plainly illustrate what our true position should be. "Before God can launch us into the breadth and sweetness of His service and entrust to us great things for Himself, we must be perfectly subdued in every part of our nature to His will and the disposition of His mind. We must be subdued in our hearts, in our minds, in our words, in our tempers, in our manners: subdued through and through so thoroughly that we will be flexible to all His purposes and plans. We must be subdued that harshness, severity, criticism, sluggishness, laziness, impetuosity, and all wanting our way, even in religious matters, must be subdued out of us. Conversion will not finish this work and perhaps not in one case out of a thousand will the second work of grace produce this complete condition of teachable subjugation to God's will. Being able to preach strong sermons on sanctification will not do it, or having charge of camp meetings, or conventions, or Bible schools, or the writing of books and editing of papers on Christian holiness will not prove adequate for this.

We must be subdued, not merely in our own opinion, not merely think ourselves subdued, not only in the esteem of our friends and fellow-workers, but subdued so perfectly that the all-seeing eye of God can look us through and the omniscient One knows that we are subdued. God must conquer the man that He can trust with His great thoughts and plans."
There is infinite difference between the spirit of Nebuchadnezzar, who demanded that all men dance to his tune and at the sound of his music fall down to worship his abominable image, and the spirit of Moses, the servant of God, who, though he stood in the place of God before the people, Ex. 4:16, yet stood between God and the rebellious people in agonizing intercession so that the fierce wrath of God was turned away and the nation spared from being consumed from the face of the earth. (See Exodus chapter 32.) This man, who had power to rule with a rod of iron, was himself ruled by the slightest breath of the wisdom of God. Nothing but eternal love dominated his life. He needed no sword to deter him. He demanded not the groveling servitude of his people nor rejoiced in the helpless pleading of his enemies. The true spirit of those glorious sons of God who shall reign with Christ in the kingdom of the Father may be clearly seen in these words: "He shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears; but with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity the meek of the earth: and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked. And righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins." Isa. 11:3-5

No greater hope was ever set before the ransomed of the Lord than the hope of being members of His body of sons to reign with Him in the great regeneration. But even Jesus Christ Himself sweat great drops of blood in the garden of Gethsemane that His own will might be subdued that only the will of the Father might exist in him. Let us therefore lay aside every weight. Let us seek to be rid of self and self-will. Let us lay waste the mountain of Esau until day and night the Spirit speaking within us continually repeats, "Thy will be done, Thy will be done."

STATEMENT (2) WHERE IS MY HONOR?

"A son honoreth his father, and a servant his master: if then I be a father, where is Mine honor? And if I be a master, where is My fear? saith the Lord of hosts unto you, O priests, that despise My name. And ye say, wherein have we despised Thy name? Ye offer polluted bread upon Mine altar; and ye say, Wherein have we polluted Thee?" Mal. 1:6-7

Our long years in captivity in Babylon have erased the sense of true righteousness from our minds. They were offering polluted things upon God's altar, yet they had become so blind that, when accused of God, they replied with surprise and injured feelings, "Wherein have we polluted Thee?" Though they had good animals in their flocks, they offered to the Lord the things they wanted to be rid of - the blind, the lame, and the sick. Verse 8 They had become respecters of persons. Verse 9 Like the preachers and people of our day, they had become so money-minded that none of them would kindle a fire upon the altar or shut a door for naught. Verse 10 They did not serve God with a willing heart nor because of an indwelling love. They said, "Behold, what a weariness it is! And ye snuffed at it, saith the Lord of hosts; and ye brought that which was torn and the lame and the sick: Thus ye brought an offering: Should I accept this of your hand? saith the Lord." Verse 13

We can readily see from the above quotation how halfhearted all their worship was, how weak and sickly their devotion to God. What a weariness it was to their fleshly minds to have to serve God at all! They snuffed at it, the prophet declares, just as an unwilling donor would who gives to charity out of a disgruntled heart. God was a dead issue with them and all their feigned worship was only because it was required of them. Their worship of God was on a level with their willingness to pay income tax. They did it, not from an overflowing heart, but from a grudging, stingy, and unwilling spirit that was hateful in the sight of the Lord.

With apologies to the writer I would like to quote a paragraph from a recent letter, which puts this attitude of mind about as concisely as possible. "Dear Sir: I just wanted to write you a few lines to tell you what a blessing your books have been to me. For so long I have been content with just going to church every Sunday and telling myself that God should be thankful I take out that much time for Him. Now, thanks to the love that God has for His creation, He has seen fit to open my eyes and show me myself and to show me that there is no life outside of trying to live daily in God's will." Signed B.C.

The thought so aptly expressed in this paragraph could be written by any one of millions and millions of professed Christians. Must I do this? Do I have to do that? Why can't we do the other thing? What a weariness it is to serve the Lord! Polluted bread upon the altar is the symbol of this "half-hearted form of godliness, this luke-warmness that has spread like a specter over the professing church. It is a form of godliness, but it denies the power of godliness. So-called Christianity has so crowded God and His glory off into a corner that they have shoved Him right outside the door of their hearts. John saw a true picture of our day when He saw the blessed Lord standing without and saying to the individual, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock; if any man will hear My voice and open the door, I will come in to Him and will sup with him and he with Me." Rev. 3:20.

Polluted bread upon the altar is the result of worshipping God with a heart that is more interested in things than it is interested in Him - things of life, things for the house, things for the body, innocent delights of youth and things we cherish so! The general testimony of millions is this:

I cannot give it up, this little world I know;
The innocent delights of youth and things I cherish so.
'Tis true I love my Lord and long to do His will,
But, Oh! I can enjoy the world and be a Christian still.

Yes, I think that last line may be very true. You can enjoy the world and be a Christian, but you will be a worldly Christian. All that is in the world is lust of the flesh (appetite), the lust of the eyes (avarice), and the pride of life (ambition), and "the world passes away and the lusts thereof, but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." "Never give your hearts to this world or any of the things in it. A man cannot love the Father and love the world at the same time, for the whole world system, based as it is on men's primitive desires, their greedy ambitions, and the glamour of all they think splendid, is not derived from the Father at all but is from the world itself. The world with all its passionate desires will one day disappear, but the man who is following God's will is part of the permanent, and cannot die." 1 John 2:15-17 (Phillips).

"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." Worship polluted by the carnal mind is not pure and does not come from a pure heart. The carnal mind is perhaps the most religious thing in the world, but it never worships the true God. It only makes a god out of things. Its worship toward God is feigned worship to which it only consents because of the insistence of the spirit within. Thus it corrupts and pollutes the worship of the Spirit. Under the Law of Moses people were not permitted to wear garments of wool mingled with linen. Not that there is wrong in either one, but the type is real, for wool is derived from animals while linen comes from a plant. They were not to plow with an ox and an ass in the same yoke, for an ox is a clean animal, but an ass is unclean. "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers" is the New Testament parallel. We may hate to hear it said, but the deplorable, undeniable truth is that the existing church system is packed with unbelievers. This we discover the moment we venture one step beyond their stagnant philosophies.

To be pure is to be free from mixture or contact with that which impairs or pollutes; containing no foreign or vitiating material; free from adulteration; clear, clean, genuine, and stainless; free from defilement, innocent, chaste, and unsullied. Pure is a strong word denoting positive excellence of a high order. One is innocent who knows nothing of evil and has experienced no touch of temptation; but one is pure who with knowledge of evil and exposure to temptation keeps heart and soul unstained. Virtue refers to right action, purity to right feeling. Therefore blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God. Blessed are the undefiled in the way, for they are called to an inheritance undefiled, incorruptible, and that fadeth not away. Let there be no more polluted worship, but let us honor God with a pure heart.

STATEMENT (3) "YE HAVE WEARIED ME"

"Ye have weaned Me, saith the Lord, with your words. Yet ye say, Wherein have we wearied Him? When ye say, Every one that doeth evil is good in the sight of the Lord, and He delighteth in them." Mal. 2:17 The Lord fainteth not, neither is weary, yet here is a place where the Lord says, "Ye have wearied Me." God's people have indeed sunk very low when in their blindness and darkness of heart they call good evil and evil good. In our questionings of God’s judgment we have become a weariness to the Lord.

The tree of the knowledge of good and evil is ever before us. It has been in the garden of our hearts for six thousand years that we might learn to choose the good and refuse the evil. But have God's people really learned? Only a few, I fear, for even now the vast throngs of the church system still think evil is good and good is evil. "Woe to them that call evil good and good evil; that put darkness for light and light for darkness; that put..."
bitter for sweet and sweet for bitter. Woe to them that are wise in their own eyes and prudent in their own sight... which justify the wicked for reward, and take away the righteousness of the righteous from him!" Isa. 5:20-23. At this very moment men are acclaiming denominationalism and sectarianism as good, but it is evil in that it turns the hearts of men away from God, causing them to take refuge in traditions that have been handed down from age to age until in this age of grace men have repeated the gross and damning error of Pharisee and Sadducee in that they have made the truth of God of none effect by their tradition. When the children of the Lord should be grown to the full stature of spiritual manhood, they are still weak and insipid children.

When they should be partakers of strong meat, which is for men, they are still sucking the breasts for the milk of babes. When they ought to be teachers, they have need that one teach them which be the first principles of the oracles of God, and are become such as have need of milk, and not of strong meat, for every one that useth milk is unskillful in the word of righteousness, for he is a babe. Did not Paul say that, while the sectarian spirit remained and one said, "I am of Paul, I am of Apollos, I am of Cephas, and I am of Christ", they are still babes? 1 Cor. 1:12 It was for this very reason that he found it necessary to feed the Christians milk and not meat, for their sectarianism had kept them in spiritual infancy. 1 Cor. 3:1-4 If you want to remain a spiritual baby, an infant, and a child, all you have to do is remain among the denominations, for you will still be feeding on the same old milk, the same old sermons, the same old songs, and the same old ritual until the day you die. This is a weariness to the Lord; yet ye say, "Wherein have we wearied Thee?" Ye have thought that evil is good in His sight.

The world and the church system are at this very hour lauding and acclaiming to the skies the rapid and almost unbelievable growth of the Ecumenical Movement. Roman priest and Protestant preacher are enfolding each other in an embrace of death as they benignly extend their arms, not only to each other, but to Moslem, Mohammedan, and any other cult that will drunkenly gulp the wine of fornication from the golden cup in the hand of the swaggering harlot of Babylon. Rev. 17:3-6 This rising hellish tide of evil, full of all names but His, men call good. The goodness of it is acclaimed by the man on the street, the preacher in the pulpit, and the pope in his palace. It is acclaimed by cardinals and world-renowned evangelists. No wonder God is weary and even now has turned His head away from this seething melting pot of human traditions and doctrines of men and has set His eyes of love on a people who know each other only by the Spirit and whose only communion is found in their mutual oneness and unity with the Father.

Thus man goes blindly on, acclaiming evil as good and calling good evil, delighting in huge crowds, international conventions, fabulous church buildings, gigantic programs, world-wide efforts, great preachers, mighty healers, sign and wonders. Everything must be large, giant and super and nothing small or meek or lowly. What a weariness it is to God and how His soul adhors it!

STATEMENT (4) "RETURN UNTO ME AND I WILL RETURN TO YOU"

"Return to Me and I will return unto you. But ye say, Wherein shall we return?" Mal. 3:7 This fourth point in the prophecy has been left without much elaboration. Whatever their need may have been in the dark days of Malachi, our need today is to return unto the Lord. The greatest need of this hour is that Christians should be brought to realize that they have wandered far away from God. They need to discover that, like the prodigal son, they have spent all. They have become worldly minded, not only in acting like the world, but in thinking like the world. Almost all Christians have spent the years of their Christian lives living in riotous fornication with either the mother of harlots or one of her daughters until the church system has become full of the names of blasphemy, but the name of Christ they know not, neither do they know Him.

Men and women must abandon this mad rush of religion and come before God in quiet meditation and prayer, looking to God and looking to His word that they might clearly see how far away from God this sectarian religion has led them. God has no pleasure in it. He has pleasure only in those who love Him and seek to know Him. “The ox knoweth his owner and the ass his master's crib, but Israel doth not know, and My people doth not consider.” Isa. 1:3. How dreadful a statement that is - that even a dumb ox should know his owner and a dumb ass should know his stall, yet God's people, the sheep of His pasture, know not the voice of the Lord! They know the doctrines of denominations. They can recite the records of great men or rhyme off their litanies and creeds, but, if they met Jesus on the street, nothing within them would respond or bear witness to Him. Oh, how we need to know Him and the power of His resurrection and the fellowship of His suffering! Oh, how we need to say with Paul, "That I may know Him!"

Listen to that blessed apostle as he recounts in detail his illustrious religious past. "Circumcised the eighth day, of the stock of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, an Hebrew of the Hebrews, as touching the law a Pharisee; concerning zeal, persecuting the church; touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless." Phil. 3:5-6 This is indeed a very impressive array of first class religion, but it was worth nothing, even less than nothing, when it came to knowing Christ. Hear then as he continues his story. "But what things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ, yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus, my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things and do count them but dung that I may win Christ, and be found in Him not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith, that I may know Him and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings, being made conformable unto His death." Phil. 3:7-10 I do not want to unchristianize anybody, but God grant that millions may see that there is a vast gulf of difference between knowing about Christ and knowing Christ. Millions know about the resurrection, but few know aught of its power. We have preached the death of Christ but have never ourselves been conformed to it. Never have we died to the world or its systems, to the flesh or to earthly loves that we might live in newness of life with the risen Christ. We are far too much like Mary and Martha who amid their tears of sorrow said, "I know that He will rise again in the resurrection at the last day", but who knew not that the lowly man who stood weeping by their side was Himself the resurrection, nor did they know that the tears He wept that day were shed, not in sorrow for Lazarus who had died, but for the living who knew not that He was the resurrection and the life. He longed to dispel the darkness of their hearts that they might see that all who would believe on Him, though they were dead, should yet live and whosoever liveth and believeth in Him should never die. Oh, Thou blessed and wonderful Christ, who wept for man's unbelief and slowness of heart, Thou shall soon weep no more, for there ariseth a people in the earth who crave no more for theories and traditions, but only to know Thee. They have returned from their lost wanderings in the forests of traditions that they might know Thee who art both the resurrection and the life. Of them it shall be said, "Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another and the Lord hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before Him for them that feared the Lord and that thought upon His name. And they shall be Mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up My jewels; and I will spare them as a man spareth his own son that serveth him. Then shall ye return and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth Him not." Mal 3:16-18

STATEMENT (5) "WILL A MAN ROB GOD?"

We have probably noticed by now that each accusation made by the Lord against these erring people is consistently followed by a question calculated to show their injured innocence in hope of justifying themselves before God. "Ye have wearied Me," saith the Lord, "yet ye say, Wherein have we wearied Thee? "Return unto Me; but ye say, Wherein shall we return?" "I have loved thee; but ye say, Wherein hast Thou loved us?" And now, "Ye have robbed Me; but ye say, Wherein have we robbed Thee? Mal. 3:8. The answer is swift and clear: "in tithes and offerings."

It will not be our purpose to go over the whole history of tithing from beginning to end, vainly striving to answer the questions of every disserter. The people of the church today are just like the people of Israel of yesterday. All those who wish to evade their duty will find a clever way to circumvent every command of God. Our blessed Lord continually faced this wretched hypocrisy in his day and with scathing denunciation rebuked the Pharisees with these words: "Howbeit, in vain do they worship Me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men, for, laying aside the commandments of God, ye hold the tradition of men, as the washing of pots and cups: and many other such like things ye do. And He said unto them. Full well ye reject the commandment of God that ye may keep your own traditions. For Moses said, Honor thy father and thy mother; and, Whoso curseth father or mother, let him die the death: but ye say, if a man shall say to his father or mother, it is Corban, that is to say, a gift, by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me, (or, I have given God what I owed you), he shall be free." Mark 7:7-11

It is simple and pleasing to the carnal mind to seek a way to avoid all the commandments of God to one's own satisfaction at least, but I greatly fear the story will be different later on when we discover that obedience to all God's will was in reality a test of true stewardship. We are always writing our examinations without knowing we are doing it. We are taking our tests for kingship and authority all unawares. Do not hide behind the cunning teaching so pleasing to the carnal mind that tithing belongs only to the dispensation of law, for tithing did not begin with Moses. It began with Abraham, who lived four hundred and thirty years before the law, who was justified by faith even as you are, Rom. 4:3, and who himself gave tithes to Melchisedec, Heb. 7:10, Gen. 14:20, after whose order Christ Jesus came.

Tithing is positively the only method of giving authorized by the scripture. What some call giving in the Spirit is in most cases "Corban". It is a modern excuse for disobedience to God. Surely, if a man gives in the Spirit, his giving should at least exceed his tithe, but of all those who make this claim it will generally be found that their so-called giving in the Spirit is always much less than their tithe would have been. Just as the Pharisees of old evaded their duty to their parents by saying, "It is Corban," so Christians of all ages have evaded their duty to tithe by their own personal way of saying, "It is Corban." Tithing is a business partnership into which God freely enters with His people. God does not need a cent of my money, for the silver and gold are His possessions together with the cattle of a thousand hills, but by this blessed partnership, the fairest and noblest ever devised, I receive ninety percent of the increase and God receives the remaining ten percent. As if to challenge all men to prove His worth in a partnership, He says, Prove Me now herewith, saith the Lord, if I will not open the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive. I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the fields, saith the Lord of hosts. And all nations shall call you blessed:" Mal. 3:10-12

Some with evil intent have started tithing in hope that they would immediately find riches, but this is not the spirit of tithing at all. The hope of personal gain should never enter the picture nor corrupt the heart. God will take care of that as it pleases Him when He sees sincerity and faithfulness in your heart. I know for certain that many men who make no profession of salvation whatever have been temporarily blessed by God because they have faithfully tithed.

Now should someone reply that, since God has called us out of the church systems, he has now no place to put his tithe, I think we might well reply that in a world as needy as ours where two billion are hungry and ill-clad and millions are starving and naked, where multitudes are blind and sick and helpless, having none to care at all, it should never be difficult to find a place for God's tenth, which is His share of the partnership. To deny Him what is His is to rob God. Jehovah Himself has declared it so. Christians should avoid all the grandiose schemes promoted by high, pressure preachers, for in most cases they are a farce and a ruse designed solely to get possession of their money. There are, however, worthy organizations who attend continually to the work of mercy and who do a great good in relieving the distress of many. My own experience has been that God will give direction where we are in darkness in any of these things. It is required of stewards that a man be found faithful, not successful, but I do not believe any man can be found faithful who puts in his own pocket the tenth that belongs to his partner, the Lord.

STATEMENT (6) "YOUR WORDS HAVE BEEN STOUT AGAINST ME"

"Your words have been stout against me; Yet ye say, What have we spoken so much against Thee? Ye have said, It is vain to serve God: and what profit is it that we have kept His ordinance, and that we have walked mournfully before the Lord of hosts?" Mal. 3:13-14

Indeed, there are times when it seems that it is the proud who are happy and well off. They that work wickedness are set up and they that tempt God are delivered. (See verse 15) But here is the patience and faith of the saints. It takes patience and faith to know that our reward does not come in this age, but in the age, which is to come. It takes patience and faith when we see the righteous cut off with no man laying it to heart, while the wicked grow strong and spread themselves like the green bay tree. It takes patience and faith to keep on walking, when others are turning back and seem to be prospering in their rebellion. It takes endurance to keep climbing, when others are heedlessly, carelessly sliding back. This is the patience and faith of the saints. "The Lord whom ye seek shall suddenly come to His..."
temple, even the messenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in: behold, He shall come, saith the Lord of hosts. But who may abide the day of His coming and who shall stand when He appeareth? for He is like a refiner's fire and like fuller's soap: And He shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver: and He shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness. . . . And I will be a swift witness against sorcerers, and against the adulterers, and against the false swearers, and against those that oppress the hireling in his wages, the widow, and the fatherless, and that turn aside the stranger from his right, and fear not Me, saith the Lord of hosts." Mal. 3:1-5

"TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN"

Many centuries ago Solomon said, "Of the making of many books there is no end", Eccl. 12:12, and it was John the apostle who stated, "I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written." As surely as the Lord is omniscient, there is no end to His understanding and the revelation of His truth. Month after month and year after year truth flows like an ever widening river of life making the words of Jesus literally true: "He that believeth on Me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. This spake He of the Spirit, which they that believe on Him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given." John 7:38 In this natural world "all the rivers run into the sea, yet the sea is not full." Eccl. 1:7 But in the spiritual world the opposite is true, for the boundless ocean, which is God Himself flows into all the rivers, filling them to the brim with an inexhaustible supply of wisdom and understanding, counsel and might, knowledge and reverence for the Lord. This is exactly what Jesus told us, for the rivers of living water that were to flow forth from the belly of believing man were to be the direct result of the indwelling Holy Ghost which was given to man, for He spoke of the Spirit, which had never before been given in any measure of fullness, and even unto this day we have received but the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts.

We felt it to be the mind of the Lord to turn aside from the many subjects that should be considered to write a simple exhortation to all whom it may concern that by God's grace we might better find our way in this most important hour when all the diseases, both physical and spiritual, of a sick, confused world are swelling up like a painful, malignant boil to fester into one diabolical head - antichrist himself, who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is of God or that is worshipped so that he, as God, sitteth in the very temple of God, showing himself that he is God. 1 Thess. 2:4. Any man today with an ounce of understanding must certainly be able to see that the systems of this world, both political and religious; have been caught in the throes of an irresistible force that is sweeping them relentlessly on like dust and corruption caught up in a cyclone, that all the world might worship the beast that had the deadly wound and did live, and that no man might buy or sell except he has the mark of the beast or the number of his name. This dread climax is sure and unalterable. No force of arms can stop it nor prayers of saints delay it, for God, in whose hands the nations of the world are but dust in the balance, has declared that thus it shall be. Let us not, then, waste our time trying to delay and hinder that which omniscient wisdom has declared must be, but let us rather take fast hold on that calling and election to which we are ordained that we may have one head, even the Lord Jesus Christ, whom God hath appointed the heir of all things, whose kingdom shall be an everlasting kingdom which shall never be destroyed.

We have lived so long as natural men in a natural world with a natural environment that to be converted and begin to live as spiritual men requires nothing less than a birth from above, for, if we have spoken of earthly things and men believe not, how shall they believe when we speak of heavenly things? Nevermore shall we enter the womb of our mother to be born a second time of the flesh, but the Spirit of God, that bloweth where it listeth, moveth even now upon the face of the deep, rousing men to resurrection and life, unlocking the closed mind, and giving the mind of Christ to those who adore Him that men might speak the wisdom of God which none of the princes of this world know and dispel the dim shadows of night from men's eyes that they might see heaven opened and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man. Then the lips of them that sleeps shall speak, for from the cocoon of our death comes forth a new creature that no longer crawls as a worm upon its belly but, borne up on the winds of the Spirit, it inhabits a new and heavenly realm henceforth to live as spiritual men spiritually and not as natural men naturally.

Though some may disbelieve it, the truth is that all spiritual men must and will appear to be mystics. It is not because they try to be so, but it is because they are so. They cannot help being oddities and misfits here because they do not belong to this world, Jesus said, "Ye are not of this world, even as I am not of this world." Therefore, because we are not of this world, we will always be strangers to it. We are foreigners and wanderers in a strange country. Our speech will always betray us. Our actions and customs will always reveal us. Our communications with the spiritual realm will mark us. The things we love will unmask us. Our lack of interest in all that belongs to this present realm will give our identity away. We will always feel that we do not belong in this realm and that we neither can belong nor wish to belong. "They that speak such things declare plainly that they seek a country. And truly, if they had been mindful of that country from whence they came out, they might have had opportunity to have returned. But now they desire a better country, that is, an heavenly: wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God, for He hath prepared for them a city." Heb. 11:14-17

There are several definitions of a mystic, but the one I like best is this: One who has been initiated into a mystery. Now when we realize that a mystery is something incomprehensible in its nature, something that can never possibly be understood apart from divine revelation, then consider how wonderful a thing it is to be "initiated into a mystery." Blessed be the man who has thus been enlightened by the Spirit of God! But such a man has no ability to disclose the truth revealed to him until the Holy Spirit in loving kindness draws aside the darkening veil and reveals the hidden truth that those who hear might understand. It is said of Jesus, "Then opened He their understanding that they might understand the scriptures." Luke 24:45 The heavens are closed because our minds are closed. Thus we grope in darkness and thus we remain until by the miracle of divine revelation our understanding is enlightened. We have tried to teach, educate, instruct, and explain, but, whether we know it or not, we miss the mark, for nothing is revealed until the Lord reveals it and nothing lives until the Lord makes it live. We may earnestly preach that man should repent, but no man can feel his need of repentance until God reveals his sin to him and grants him a spirit of repentance. We have tried to make men believe, but a man cannot believe unless God gives him believing faith, for faith is not of ourselves; it is the gift of God. Eph. 2:8 We have been exhort ed to turn our faith loose, but we have no faith to turn loose unless and until it is given of God. Then nothing can withstand it.

A spiritual man will always be an oddity in this world, not because he tries to be so as some have foolishly done, but because he is different from all other men. While the world and most of the Christians walk after the dictates of the flesh, the spiritual man walks after the dictates of the Spirit. His whole life on earth clearly testifies that, "as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." Such a man no longer seeks to please himself as others do, but his constant prayer both night and day is, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" He does not have a multitude of requests to continually present to God, for he knows that even the prayer that sounds best may have come from the selfishness of human desire, but, having brought himself into complete harmony with God's will, he prays, "Not my will, but Thine, be done."

The natural mind does not know what is good or what is evil. It does not know that the house of mourning is better than the house of feasting, or that sorrow is better than laughter, for by the sadness of the countenance the heart is made better. If such an evil as pain or sickness brings us nearer to God, then it is no longer evil, but good and is no more worthy of rebuke. To the spiritual man the will of God is not a cross but a crown, for it is his daily delight. It is his meat and drink, his joy and satisfaction. Withhold such a man from the will of God and he would die of utter longing. He has learned the meaning of the text, "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after Thee, Oh God." He has found that the soul who thirsts after God's will does literally pant after God. He thirsts after the fountains of living water and hungers for the righteousness of the Lord. His soul is often sick with longing and he breaks out into all manner of exclamations even as Solomon who cried, "Stay me with flagons; comfort me with apples, for I am sick of love (love sick)." Songs of S. 2:5

As a spiritual man progresses in the will and understanding of God, the realities of Gethsemane are borne in upon him. No longer with eloquent oratory does he describe the crushing hour Jesus endured in the garden but, having himself borne some of its agonies, he is loath to speak of it at all except to those who understand, for, if he ventures to speak of such sacred things to those who understand not, his words will seem but idle tales and his voice, echoing from the hollow emptiness of their stony hearts, will return void in his face. Few men know the bitter agony of the crucifixion of the human will, and neither do they see that from its dead and crucified self has one in the very image of God risen within henceforth to love and embrace only those things that belong to His divine purpose. Well did Paul say, "Ye have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sin."
Let not those who enter into the secret of God’s presence imagine even for a moment that other Christians will understand, for they will not. Tell them ever so earnestly, but they cannot hear. From this day forth the spiritual man will be a speckled bird. Jer. 12:9. Even while he tells them, their eyes will be heavy with sleep and he will seem to them as one who has taken leave of his senses. This in a measure is true, for the celestial realm is beyond the realm of time and sense. The people who listened to Paul cried. “Paul, thou art beside thyself; much learning doth make thee mad.” To this he replied, “I am not mad, most noble Festus, but speak forth the words of truth and soberness.” Acts 26:24 Perhaps Paul had this same accusation in mind when he wrote to the Corinthians, “If we be beside ourselves, it is to God.” 2 Cor. 5:13

It is undeniable truth that all the world lives after the flesh. The flesh and the flesh alone is the motivating power of the present world order. Everything from pins to battleships is for the sake of the physical body of flesh and not one thing devised by man exists except for the satisfaction of one or all of the five senses of the human body. “From whence come wars and fightings among you? Come they not of the lusts that war in your members? Ye lust and have not. Ye kill and desire to have, and cannot attain.” The banquettings, feasts, and abominable idolatries of the earth are all for the sake of the five senses of the body, and who is so foolhardy that he would dare to deny that the physical, corruptible body is a body of flesh?

All the gold on earth is not enough to buy a spiritual experience. Therefore, all the wealth possessed by man is laid up for the flesh and the flesh alone. Wealth can cater so much to the comfort of the flesh and the poverty of the spirit that it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God. All the diamonds of Africa could not alone for one sin nor bring one moment of the peace that comes from faith in the cleansing blood of Jesus Christ.

Let us not imagine that it is only the unbelieving world that lives after the flesh. The undeniable truth is that the vast majority of believers live far more after the flesh than after the Spirit. They hate to hear it and the majority of Christians refuse to admit it, but it is so. They sing “Sweet hour of prayer”, but most believers neglect to even hold family worship. They are conversant with their business affairs and even church affairs, but strangers in communion with God. They sing, “Oh, for a thousand tongues to sing my Saviour’s praise”, but their minds are filled with the latest hits, and, while they sing, “Blest be the tie that binds”, they allow the least offence to sever them.

A man is not spiritual because he has quit all worldly pleasure. The reverse is true. The natural, the carnal, and the sinful have departed because of the abundance of his spiritual life. When his time becomes absorbed in the realm of reality, which is the realm of the Spirit, he does not have either stomach or heart for the weak and beggarly things of this life. If he tries for a moment to enter into them, he finds his heart drifting away from them because he belongs to a different realm and a different country, even a heavenly country. These light and frivolous things of the passing fail to interest him because they belong to the natural while he belongs to the Spirit. All his hopes and aspirations have fled from this world to lay hold on the things that belong to the realm of reality where he shall abide forever. Both the world and worldly Christians will think it strange that he runs not with them to the same excess of riot, speaking evil of him, but they must give an account to God, who is ready to judge both the living and the dead. Even the memory of the days in which we did the will of the flesh should be sufficient for us, for then we walked in lasciviousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquetings, and abominable idolatries. See 1 Pet. 4:1-4 People who spend their time feasting their minds, their eyes, their stomachs, and their ears on the sordid things of this passing age are unaware that the man who has suffered in the flesh has ceased from sin that he should no longer live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God. The worldly minded find much of their transient pleasure by dishonoring their own bodies in every possible way, in eating and drinking to excess, by enflaming the body with strong drink, by doping it with foul-smelling tobacco, or by adventuring upon all manner of sex orgies. These are all enemies of the soul that endlessly and unremittingly war against the Spirit. The man of God must purge himself from all these that he may be a vessel fit for the habitation of the Holy Spirit.

The spiritual man is peculiar because he has meat to eat that others know not of. So real was that heavenly meat in the experience of Jesus that, when weary and hungry He sat on the well in Samaria, He refused natural food, for His communion with God had supplied His need for both food and drink, and, when at last they offered Him food, saying, “Master, eat,” He needed it not, for hunger, thirst, and weariness had departed from Him as the indwelling Spirit of God quickened His mortal body. The life-giving Spirit was to Him both food and drink, though other men had still not discovered the truth of the words, "My Father giveth the true bread from heaven." John 6:32

The hour is coming and now is when the sons of God, who are coming into the image of the firstborn Son, Jesus Christ, will find themselves living in a spiritual realm completely independent of the bondage of all that is earthly. It is clear to be seen that Jesus, even while He lived among men being found in fashion as a man, proved that sons of God are in all things independent of the bondage and power of this present world system. Always after the hour of His baptism in the Jordan the heavens were opened to Him and all the lasting and eternal benefits of that realm were His, never to depart from Him. When He ministered, the angels of God ascended and descended upon Him. Is it any wonder that no power of man or devil could stand before Him? He manifested His authority over every disease known to humanity. The might of the most terrible demons was overcome with no more than the touch of His finger. Cf. Luke 11:20. Howling winds were calmed to gentle breezes at His rebuke, and violent raging seas whimpered like babies and fell asleep at His bidding of peace. He paid not His taxes by the labor of His hands. The wild beasts of the wilderness were as pets in His presence. The soldiers who were sent to fetch Him returned without Him, saying, "Never man spake like this man!" The violent mob who accosted Him in the garden fell helplessly before Him, obeying His command to let the disciples go free. John 18:2-9. And, when at last Pilate demanded, "Know you not that I have power to crucify Thee", He made him tremble with the words, "Thou couldst have no power at all against Me except it were given thee from above." John 19:10, 11. Of death also He said, "No man can take My life from Me, but I lay it down of Myself," and, though death was permitted to hold Him for a little moment, He arose in exaltation, bearing in His omnipotent hands the keys to both death and hell. Now with triumphant voice He cries, "I am He that liveth and was dead and, behold, I am alive forevermore!" Was there ever a question He could not answer? Was there ever a cunning plot He did not discern? Did ever thoughts live in the hearts of men unknown to Him? No! He knew them all, for He was the Son of God. This, then, is the heritage of sons, and it is high time we ceased to grovel about as other men, living in bondage to all manner of corruptible things. It is time to realize that there is an heavenly realm where sons of God may live far above all principality and power and might and dominion and every name that is named, not only in this age, but in that which is to come.

The unspiritual Christian struggles to keep alive all the things that God has ordained must die. He lays fast hold on the temporal things of this passing world. He hates to be reminded that his years are passing and that age is increasing because he unconsciously knows that each passing year will mean a shortening of his stay in the realm of the flesh, which he dearly loves. He hates the thought of death because to him death is the end and not the beginning. Even Solomon himself could not convince such a man that the hour of death is better than the hour of birth. Neither could such a one be persuaded that the house of mourning is better than the house of feasting. Eccl. 7:1, 2 His life after the flesh has convinced him that youth is better than old age and folly is better than wisdom. Eccl. 7:3, 4

In meditation I have come to the conclusion that the spirits of all men were with the Father before they came forth from the womb. When a tiny baby is born into this world, his spirit has recently come forth from the presence of the Lord, but he remembers it not because a veil has been drawn over his mind. Heaven has been closed to him by his incarnation or en-flesh-ment and he sees the realm of spirit and reality no more until his days of travail in the flesh are done and his spirit through death returns once more to God who gave it. Eccl. 12:7. See then how much better is the hour of death than the hour of birth, for in birth we come forth from God's presence, but in death we leave the world to go to the Father. John 16:28

As long as our eyes remain closed to the celestial realm, we will always lay fast hold upon the fleeting things of this temporal world. Seeing nothing beyond this realm, we will struggle to hold fast to it. We will dread the appearance of every gray hair, knowing not that the hoary head is evidence of increasing wisdom and that the wrinkled face is the evidence that we have borne His yoke upon us, having passed through our wilderness, our Gethsemanes, and our Calvaries. The afflictions of this life leave upon our flesh and our spirits as well the marks of the Lord Jesus. The beloved Paul knew they were the marks of the Lord Jesus and he made no effort to hide or to erase them, but, bearing them with great pride, he said, "From henceforth let no man trouble me, for I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus." Gal. 6:17
When king Solomon described the heavenly bridegroom, he said His hair was as black as a raven, Songs of S. 5:11, but, when John beheld His glory on Patmos, he said His hair was white as wool. Rev. 1:14 How glorious that is, for between the vision of Solomon and the vision of John lay Gethsemane and the cross, a life of sorrow and acquaintance with much grief. Recently in our journey we stopped for lunch at a restaurant. Three women sat at a table nearby. From their appearance we judged that they were a mother and daughter, and grandmother. The daughter looked young because she was only about eighteen. The mother looked matronly because she was, perhaps, fifty. But the grandmother looked ridiculous because she was evidently trying to look as young as the grand-daughter. Her wrinkled face was smeared with rouge and lipstick to simulate youth, her gray hair was dyed, she had plucked and arched her eyebrows and used eye shadow in profusion. The clothes she wore were suitable for a twenty-year-old lass, and her efforts at animated and youthful conversation were sickening to behold. She deceived no one but herself, poor lady, and I am sure she did not deceive herself either. But that is what I mean. Not knowing the realities of the Spirit, mankind, believers and unbelievers alike, are loath to see the visible and unreal slipping away. If indeed there were any truth to the frequent tales of ghosts that inhabit cemeteries, I suppose it would be because these spirits, having known naught but the unreality of the flesh, desire to return to it again. Even the flesh of swine was more acceptable to the demons at Gadara than no flesh at all.

A wonderful experience awaits the child of God when for the first time in life he sees that "our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." As long as a man sees every difficulty, every adversity, set back, sickness, bereavement, or failure as nothing more than the wicked hand of the devil hindering his progress in life, that man will always be a disconsolate, miserable, faithless, and unbelieving Christian. But, when he learns that these afflictions are sent in mercy and love from the hand of God and that they are not against him but for his eternal benefit, then the golden gates of a whole new realm of spiritual understanding and experience are wide open before him. There was a vast difference in the understanding of poor sorrowing Jacob and the oft stricken Paul. While Jacob mournfully wailed, "Joseph is not, Simeon is not, and you will take Benjamin away also and bring down my gray head with sorrow to the grave; all these things are against me." Gen. 42:36 Paul, who knew affliction as few other men have known it, triumphantly exclaimed, "All things work together for good to them that love the Lord, to them who are the called according to His purpose." Rom. 8:28

To see that our affliction is working for us and not against us is a most valuable revelation of truth. It is something that all people should learn and especially those who are the called in this particular hour. I suppose that many Christians were dismayed that such an indispensable man as Paul should spend years shut up in a dingy jail. Then, as now, no doubt the people thought this a master stroke of Satan to hinder the gospel, but it was not so. Paul's frequent imprisonments were from the hand of God and not from the hand of Satan. It was from these dank prison cells that his choicest epistles were written to bless and enlighten the saints and leave a heritage of spiritual truth for all ages to come. Paul did not fear his years in prison, for he well knew that, when evil men fastened him securely in the inner prison, binding him with chains and putting his feet in stocks, the angel of the Lord would bring him out if that were God's will, or that, when men left him for dead, God could raise him up again.

It is the visible things that are temporal. It is the invisible things that are eternal. Things, however thin, have two sides to them - the visible and the invisible. The visible side is what we see now - the pains, the tribulation, the distress, affliction, sickness, persecution, misunderstanding, and a thousand difficulties. But the invisible side, the thing that is hidden from us now, is the thing that affliction is producing. The invisible things are eternal things. While the outward man is suffering wear and tear and pain, the inward man is receiving fresh strength from God every day. The transitory troubles which we suffer are winning for us a permanent, glorious, and solid reward out of all proportion to our pain, for those who understand are looking all the time, not at the visible things, but at the invisible. The visible things are transitory, passing, and unreal, but the invisible things are permanent, enduring, and real. The man who spends his life bemoaning his afflictions is a loser, but the man who has learned that this affliction is producing an eternal weight of glory is a victorious winner indeed.

Evil cannot come to a good man either in life or in death. Evil only seems to come. "The steps of a good man are ordered of the Lord." The damning condemnations that men of ill will intend should do him harm, God intends for good. By His hidden and eternal wisdom God is ruling over all the forces of darkness, making the wrath of man to praise Him, proving to such a rebel as Pharaoh that even he was raised up by the Lord for his ignoble task. Exod. 9:16 "What can ever separate us from the love of God? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? It is for God's sake that we are killed all the day long and are accounted as sheep for the slaughter. Nay! In all these things we are more than conquerors through Him who loved us. For I am persuaded that neither life, nor death, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus, our Lord." Rom. 8:35-39 Phillips Translation

Oh, the depths of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable are His judgments and His ways past finding out! For who hath known the mind of the Lord? Or who hath been His counselor? Or who hath first given to Him and it shall be recompensed to him again? For from Him everything comes, by Him everything exists, and in Him everything ends; glory to Him forevermore. Amen and amen!

It should not be necessary at this hour to have to prove to any man that we are living in momentous days. All men instinctively know this to be true whether they be men of God or men of the earth. As the stirrings of spring come to the trees of the wood and as the urge of migration comes to the birds of the wild, so the awesome sense of a coming age is settling down upon all mankind. The feeling that, "something is going to happen" is expressed so often by many who make no profession of godliness whatsoever. It is like the troubled feeling that gripped Jerusalem at the time Jesus was born in the manger of Bethlehem. Matt. 2:3 Turmoil is everywhere. Like some phantom and evil spirit it has crept into all phases of life on a universal scale. The individual is confused. The homes are confused. The governments are confused. The United Nations is confused and has no more true unity than oil and water. Distrust, intrigue, and suspicion are rampant among them as they sit together and tell lies at one table. Dan. 11:27

The present visible church system with all its vast confusion of sects, denominations, ists and isms is not the true church at all, but is the confusion and disorder of Mystery Babylon, into which confusion the saints of God have been carried captive even as Israel was carried captive to Nebuchadnezzar's Babylon long ago. As the end of this age draws near, more and more efforts will be made to unite all religious systems. The so-called Protestant denominations will find a confused and unholy union with Rome, that mother of harlots and abominations of the earth. This union is taking shape with ever increasing haste before our very eyes. Day after day new innovations will come until the day the sordid union is complete. Almost every day now one may read of united meetings, ecumenical councils, or papal pilgrimages in which countless throngs bow before this modern Belshazzar of Babylon. Small wonder Jesus said, "I have come in My Father's name and ye received Me not. Another shall come in his own name; him ye shall receive."

Not only do we hear of united gatherings, but already the harlot and her daughters are building temples together. Only recently I received a clipping through the mail which we here quote in full: "Britain's first inter-religious church with facilities for Anglican, Free Church, and Roman Catholic congregations will be dedicated next June at Keele University in Staffordshire. A similar "Unity Church" for the three bodies is also planned for London Airport at a later date. The Keele University church will have three chapels grouped around a central altar. The work is already well advanced on the building, which will cost about $235,000. Each church will contribute toward a university special fund which will finance the project." We are not only to see union between Protestants and Catholics, but already overtures are being made to bring in the other religious systems of the world that they all may drink from the same cup of confusion and all commit fornication in one unholy bed.

Many Christian people who have had a real experience of justification and many more who have received the baptism of the Holy Spirit are deceived into believing that their little group will escape the arms of this great octopus. But this is not so, for the whole visible religious system is going to be swept into the seething cauldron. Many of the so-called full gospel people will enter into this union because they will soon hear of high-ranking churchmen laying claim to all manner of miraculous power. They will profess to speak with tongues, heal the sick, and perform miracles. Bishops, cardinals, and perhaps even popes will make all manner of apostolic professions so that many thousands will be deceived, thinking a great revival has come, and thereby, if it were possible, even the elect themselves would be deceived. Christians, alas, have become so miracle minded that they imagine that anything supernatural is necessarily of God. Do not be deceived by this, for, when antichrist is revealed, he will be a miracle worker, and he will come with all power, and signs, and lying wonders, and all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish, because they did not love the truth. 2 Thess. 2:7-12

We are living in an hour of great deception. We are in a time when the world and the professing church system is stacked full of false prophets, false teachers, false apostles, false evangelists, false shepherds, and false miracle workers. Men with false gifts, claiming to be some great ones, are abroad everywhere. There is no end to their abominable claims. False prophets are forever predicting things that do not come to pass or prophesying in such a way that they would appear right whatever may transpire. False deliverers, who are themselves helpless captives of some besetting sin, are professing to deliver people from all manner of evil.

Did not Jesus tell us that in the last day there would be false prophets and false christs and that many would come in the name of the Lord, saying, "I am Christ"? Did He not tell us that they would say, "Lo, here, and lo, there"? Did He not warn us that they would say He is in the wilderness, or He is in the desert or in the secret place? And did He not say, "Go not after them?" Matt. 24:23-26 I am frankly amazed that during the last year I have heard of at least four different places being prepared in the deserts of the United States for a refuge for people in the great tribulation. The strange thing is that many are preparing to go to such places. Go, if you wish, but you will find it a farce in the end and no refuge at all. David had the true secret when he said, "God is my refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble (tribulation); therefore will we not fear though the earth be removed..." Psa. 46 And again he said, "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty." That is where no evil will befall us nor plague come nigh us. That is where ten thousand will fall at our right hand and a thousand at our left. That is where the terror by night will not alarm us nor the arrow by day slay us. Only with our eyes shall we behold the reward of the wicked. Psa. 91. Elisha knew this refuge when the hosts of the Assyrians came to take him. Jesus knew it, too, when he said, "Know ye not that I could now pray to My Father and He would send more than twelve legions of angels?" This is the refuge we must have. Learn to dwell in the secret place of the Most High God and you will not be running to some false refuge in the desert when trouble starts. Remember the words of Jesus! When they say, "He is in the desert," go not forth.

In spite of all the years we have been in the church system, strangely enough very, very few people even remotely understand what the true church really is. We have been writing concerning the visible and the invisible, and we have considered at some length the words of Paul when he said, "The things that are seen are temporal, but the things that are not seen are eternal." This same truth applies to the church. Man has been prone to see the visible thing upon which is inscribed the letters C-H-U-R-C-H. This he divides into endless segments, giving each segment a different name until there are so many names that we would be hard put to it to count them all. This vast visible confusion man calls the church. But the thing which man calls the church is by no means the thing that God calls the church, for, while man is looking at some visible temple he has built, God sees the true church rising on the foundation stone which is Jesus Christ Himself.

The true church always has been a mystery, invisible to the eyes of man but clearly seen by the eyes of God. The word 'ecclesia', from which the word 'church' is derived, simply means 'called out'. It is called out of the world; it is called out of sin; it is called out of Babylon; and it is called out unto Christ. When Jesus said, "My sheep know My voice and they follow Me", it should be perfectly clear that the ones who are the 'called out' are the ones who know His voice and who follow Him. The true church consists of the called out ones, the people who know the voice of Christ and are following Him and Him alone. "They are not all Israel who are of Israel, but in Isaac shall thy seed be called." Even so they are not all church who appear to be church, but those who are disciples of Jesus Christ. Until we see the church as a wheel within a wheel, we will never discern the true church or the true body of Christ. The visible system means nothing. It is our hidden relationship to Christ that really counts. Man has placed tremendous emphasis on his association with sects, which erroneously call themselves the church. To be joined to them means absolutely nothing. If you could make yourself a member in good standing with every one of them at once, it still would mean less than nothing. The only thing that counts for anything is your union with Christ in the Spirit. Make certain of this above all else. Those who are united to Him, whether still in bondage to a system or whether they be free men, are the one true ecclesia, the one true church.
Jesus said, "I know My sheep and am known of Mine." It is to them that eternal life is given. They alone have the promise that "no man can pluck them out of the Father's hand." Great blindness has come over the world in that only a very 'little flock' discerns that the true, mystical, and invisible body of Christ is a separate entity from all the man-made systems that parade under the banner of the church. So degenerate has the understanding become that it is commonly believed that, if a person is not a member of one of these organizations, he is no better than a heathen and is completely outside the pale of the church. My spirit, soul, and body fiercely rebel against all such crude and uninspired understanding, for the opposite is the truth. All who are made free by the Spirit of God, who know His voice and are joined to Him in the Spirit, are the church of God in truth. These are moving farther and farther away from the confusion of all human systems and human understandings which bind men in chains of tradition and blind their eyes with scales of unbelief.

Whether we wish to receive it or not, the hour is coming and now is when even the angels of God will proclaim through the heavens, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her plagues." While man is building great Babylon on the one hand and her mysterious power is rising to hitherto unheard of heights, God on the other hand is preparing her terrible judgment. All nations have drunk of the wine of her fornication and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her and the merchants of the earth are waxed rich through the abundance of her delicacies. It is in this tremendous hour of her great triumph, when the religious leaders of the earth imagine in their carnal minds that they have at last solved the religious differences of the whole world by casting them all into a common melting pot, that God is calling to His people even as He called to Lot in Sodom, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues; for her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities. Reward her even as she has rewarded you and double unto her double according to her works; in the cup which she hath filled fill to her double. How much she hath glorified herself and lived deliciously, so much sorrow and torment give her for she saith in her heart, I sit as a queen and am no widow and shall see no sorrow. Therefore shall her plagues come in one day; death and mourning and famine, and she shall be utterly burned with fire, for strong is the Lord God who judgeth her."

Revelation, chapter 18, deals with the fearful destruction of the system that is so rapidly coming to its fullness in our day.

In the world system and the existing church (I fear the two are wed) the day of the individualist is gone. Everybody, every nation, every religion, is being thrown into one melting pot to be either melted together or frozen together in one vast sea of humanity from which the Beast himself shall rise. But let us not forget that, while all this is going on, God has a chosen people, a peculiar people, an elect people who are joined to Him in perfect unity of spirit and mind, and who are joined to each other, not by physical presence, but by this omnipresent Spirit. Most of these people have never seen each other's faces, yet they are one, for spiritual unity does not depend on the close proximity of physical beings but upon the unity of the Spirit in Christ. All who are one mind with Him are one mind with each other, regardless of distance. Paul once said to the Colossians, "Though I am absent in the flesh, yet am I with you in the Spirit, joying and beholding your order and the steadfastness of your faith." Col. 2:5

In the days of Elijah, the prophet, all Israel was following the prophets of Baal, but unknown to Elijah and all unknown to each other there were seven thousand people who had never bowed the knee to Baal, but were sincere servants of the Lord. With which one of these two companies did Elijah belong? Was he one with that vast, visible, confused religious system which was preaching and prophesying all about him, or was he one in heart and soul and spirit with that hidden seven thousand whom he had never seen nor heard of before? Well do we know the answer to that question. Elijah was one heart and one soul with that invisible number in whose presence he had never been, for they were one spirit with the Father and therefore one spirit with each other. The physical unity of crowds and congregations means nothing. The unity of the spirit means everything.

There is an election today in the four corners of the earth. There is a spiritual body of Christ forming. They are like Jonah, who could not be assimilated by the monster of the sea. They are like the three Hebrew children, upon whose bodies the raging fires of Nebuchadnezzar's furnace had no power, or like Daniel, who stood unharmed in the den of lions. They are like those oppressed and afflicted Jews who, though scattered among all the nations of the earth for thousands of years, have resisted assimilation, remaining always a peculiar people unto God. As the Jew cannot become one with the nations that surround him, neither can we spiritual Jews become one with the denominations which surrounds us, for they, too, are nations.
Let none fear to be an individual before God.
Let us not fear to be individuals in our community.
Let us not fear to be sheep among goats or wolves.
Do not be afraid of being different.
All who are one with Him must be different because He is different.
New occasions teach new duties;
Time makes ancient good uncouth.
They must upward still and onward
Who would keep abreast of truth;
Lo, before us gleams her camp fires.

We ourselves must pilgrims be, Launch our Mayflower and steer boldly Through the desperate winter sea, Nor attempt the Future's Portal With the Past's blood-rusted key.

"LET US"

The Epistle to the Hebrews is a book of books for this vital hour, which immediately precedes the universal splendor of the kingdom of God. The devout, inspired reader of this sublime truth is carried by the spirit of revelation into fathomless depths and precipitous heights as the unfolding revelation, like the rays of the morning sun, comes stealing o'er the meadows of the heart, melting away the winter snows of death that glittering streams of life might flow in desolate places, bringing forth food to him that eateth and flowers to perfume and gladden the heart of man. None but the omniscient Holy Spirit, full of all the wisdom and understanding of the universe, could take the whole purpose of God toward man and blaze it on a written page as clear as the noonday sun that all who have eyes to see may see, yet hide the whole plan as in thick darkness from those who have eyes but see nothing save those weak and beggarly elements that belong to a passing age. They know not that man's life in this realm of death is but a vapor that appears for a little time and is gone. It is like a flower of the field that for a moment sends forth a sweet perfume, but whose petals fade on the morrow, or like the green grass that shows its beauty today, but tomorrow is withered with the east wind.

It will not be our purpose now to attempt to unfold the wonders of this book, but rather to present twelve of its most important exhortations. Though no book in all the Bible contains greater depth of truth, it is a most solemn fact that, because of this, no book in all the Bible is so replete with exhortations to steadfastness. The reason for this must be clearly understood by us all, for it is better never to have known the way of righteousness than, after knowing it, to turn from the holy commandment and return as a dog to his vomit or as a sow to her wallowing in the mire. God requires very little of the heathen who never has heard of the one true God, or that He gave His Son a ransom for all, but it is impossible for those who were once enlightened and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost and of the powers of the age to come, if they shall fall away, to renew them unto repentance, seeing they crucify the Son of God afresh and put Him to an open shame. That which bears fruit is blessed of God, but slack, half-hearted, and back-slidden devotion bears only thorns and briars and is rejected of God. Let none of us who have escaped the bondage of the harlot church system be like those Israelites who, having escaped the slavery of Egypt, in their hearts turned back again, nor yet like those who, fearing the giants of the promised land, perished in the sickening wilderness of their own inexcusable unbelief. Those unbelieving ones who partook of the corn, the wine, and the grapes of Canaan, (see Num. 13), yet turned back into the wilderness, were not in an hour as important as the hour in which we now find ourselves, for they were but types and forerunners of us who, having escaped sin's slavery, have partaken of the first fruit of the Holy Spirit and the power of the kingdom age to come. Those who partook of grapes and then turned back can scarcely be considered so wretched in their state as those who have partaken of the Holy Spirit, the good word of God, and the power of the coming age, yet have turned back to the old ways for fear of the unknown lest they become a gazing stock. Beware of unbelief, the deceitfulness of riches, or the lust of other things entering in, for these choke the word and it becomes unfruitful.

The first exhortation - let us therefore fear lest, a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it, Heb. 4:11, - follows quickly the revelation given in chapter one, and we may say that Hebrews, chapters two and three, both concern themselves with mighty exhortations lest by any means the glorious things disclosed to us in chapter one should slip away from us. For this reason he says, "Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard lest at any time we should let them slip." Heb. 2:1 The things which we have heard are the awe-inspiring things spoken of in chapter one, which we must now pause for a moment to consider, for, if we miss the truth of chapter one, there is little object in reading the rest of the book at all, for its message will be lost to us.

The man who opens his heart to God’s eternal purpose will find himself sailing away on a limitless ocean of eternal truth, for God will open His mind to him, but the man whosteadfastly abides by the blinding and studied traditions handed down from generation to generation by pope and priest and preacher will find himself stalemated in the sucking quicksands of human tradition from which there is no escape. Human philosophy has fast closed the gates of spiritual understanding, blinding the eyes and darkening the minds of men, lest they should see with their eyes and hear with their ears and understand with their hearts and be delivered from the net in which their feet are taken. The doctrines of men have made the word of God of no effect. Thus men live and die, never daring to believe that limitless understanding awaits them just beyond their confining horizons of human traditions.

During the past many years my heart has developed an ever, increasing love for God. It is not that obnoxious, sickening sentimentality that human beings call love, but a love that has its foundation in understanding. We can never love God simply because we are told to love Him or taught that we should love Him any more than we can love a person just because we are told to do so. I sincerely doubt that we can truly love God because He first loved us or because He delivered us from death or hell; but of this I am certain, that once a man begins to understand the fathomless depth of God’s purpose, a new appreciation will fill his life. Then he will begin to understand the meaning of all things. He will see the purpose of the fall, the meaning of redemption, the reason for temptation, tribulation and tears, for "when wisdom entereth into thine heart and knowledge is pleasant unto thy soul, discretion shall preserve thee and understanding shall keep thee." Prov. 2:10

It is the unfolding of His eternal purposes that fills the heart with love for God, for by His purposes come understanding and appreciation. "What is man that Thou art mindful of him? Or the son of man that Thou visitest him? Thou madest him a little lower than the angels; Thou crownest him with glory and honor and didst set him over the works of Thy hands." But some will say, "Are not these promises made with reference to the Lord Jesus Christ, the only begotten of the Father?" Yes, indeed they are, but have we not learned that He is the firstborn of many brethren? The glory that God gave Him He has given to us who are joint heirs and sons of the Father. Is it not clear that the first begotten Son of the Father, who is the brightness of God’s glory and the express image of His person, is the head of all the sons of God who by infinite grace shall come into that same image throughout the ages, that they might share His glory and reign with Him in the kingdom of His Father? Did that first begotten Son pray in vain, "Father, I will that these which Thou hast given Me be with Me where I am"? Did He say in vain, "The glory which Thou gavest Me I have given them, that they all may be one as Thou, Father, art in Me and I in Thee, that they may be one in Us, that the world may believe that Thou hast sent Me"? Oh, no, these were not idle words nor vain prayers. These were the outspoken purposes of God purposes, which He held in His divine mind before the ages ever began. This is the wisdom that the Lord possessed in the beginning of His way, before His works of old. "I (wisdom) was set up from everlasting, from the beginning, or ever the earth was. When there were no depths, I was brought forth; when there were no fountains abounding with water. Before the mountains were settled, before the hills, was I brought forth; while as yet He had not made the earth, or the fields, or the highest part of the dust of the world. When He prepared the heavens, I was there. When He set a compass upon the face of the depth; when He established the clouds above: when He strengthened the foundations of the deep." Prov. 3:22-28

It was by wisdom and knowledge that all the plans of God were formed. Nothing was ever left to chance. All things work according to the counsel of His omniscient mind and hasten to do His will. Thus even the wrath of man praises Him. The rebellious man in his vain imagination thinks to thwart God’s purposes only to find in the end that he was but a senseless tool in the hands of the Almighty to accomplish a purpose whether noble or ignoble. Was it not so with the wicked and rebellious Pharaoh of whom God said, "For this cause I raised thee up, that I might show My power in thee and that My name should be known in all the earth."? Rom. 9:17 And even Michael the archangel brought not a railing accusation against Satan, knowing full well that he, too, was a necessary part of God's plan. He railed not against him, but said, "The Lord rebuke thee," Jude 9 Man in his blindness and ignorance is forever judging other people, never learning that in a great house there are not only vessels of gold and silver, but of wood and earth. Some are to honor and some to dishonor. 2 Tim. 2:20 Who are we, therefore, to judge another man's servant? To his own master he standeth or falleth, for God is able to make him stand. Rom. 14:4

If you will prayerfully read the first chapter of the book of Hebrews, believing with all humility that everything there spoken of God's glorious Son, Jesus Christ, is also spoken of that vast family of sons who by infinite grace are coming into that same image of Christ, then for the first time in your life you will begin to understand the book of Hebrews. Then you will also understand why the apostle repeatedly warned and warned again to steadfastness, exhorting over and over again to walk in great fear before the Lord.

"God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by His Son." He is speaking, not in prophets, but in Son. God's beloved Son consists of Christ Jesus, the head of the sons, together with that many, membered body of sons, of which we in the last days are the beautiful, anointed feet. Mary of Bethany anointed both the head and the feet of the Son of God, for both belong to the one body. John the apostle saw the head (Jesus) as white as wool and the feet (the many sons) as brass burned in a furnace of fire. Rev. 1:14,15. It is of this complete Son he speaks, and it is in this Son that God is now speaking in these last days and will speak in that glorious age that lieth at the door. God has appointed Him (the Son) to be heir of all things. For Him He made the worlds and formed the ages. Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord!

The sons of God have inherited a greater glory than angels, for unto which of the angels said He at any time, "Thou art My son; this day have I begotten thee?" And again "I will be to him a Father and he shall be to Me a son." Heb. 1:4-5 Of the angels He saith, "Who maketh His angels spirits and His ministers a flame of fire, but unto the Son He saith, Thy throne, oh God, is forever and ever; a scepter of righteousness is the scepter of Thy kingdom. Thou hast loved righteousness and hated iniquity: therefore God, even Thy God, hath anointed Thee with the oil of gladness above Thy fellows." Heb. 1:6-9

In the light of such glorious hope is it any wonder that David said, "What is man that Thou art mindful of him, or the son of man that Thou visitest him? Thou madest him a little lower than the angels; Thou crownest him with glory and honor and set him over the works of Thy hands." Psa. 8:4-6, Heb. 2:6-7 And is it any wonder that the apostle, seeing all these glorious truths by the Spirit, said in solemn warning to us, the heirs of this glory, "Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip"? And again "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation which at first began to be spoken by the Lord and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him, God also bearing them witness both by signs and wonders and with divers miracles and gifts of the Holy Ghost according to His will?" Heb. 2:1-4.

It is not unto angels, glorious in wisdom and strength, that God has assigned the glory of the coming age, but unto the sons of God. We do not at this moment see all things under the feet of the sons of God. Quite the opposite, to be sure! But we do see Jesus, the head Son, the first begotten, crowned with glory and honor, and seeing Him, we rejoice in hope of the glory of God, for we know of a certainty that as sure as He is crowned, we shall also be, for He who sanctifieth (Jesus) and they who are sanctified (the sons of God) are all of one, that is, they all have one Father. For which cause He is not ashamed to call them brethren, saying, "I will declare Thy name unto My brethren; in the midst of the church (the called-out) will I sing praises unto Thee, and again - here am I and the children (sons) which God hath given Me." Heb. 2:11-13 With such glorious hope in view what manner of persons ought we to be?

Let us therefore fear. Heb. 4:1 The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. The wisdom of the world is foolishness with God because there is no fear of the Lord in it. The fear of the Lord is not terror or dread; neither does it imply being afraid, but the fear of the Lord is founded on deep and reverent respect for all that God is and does. The wicked make a mock of God and His awful power. They joke at sin and belittle righteousness. There is no fear of God before their eyes. "Eat, drink, and be merry," they say, "for tomorrow we die", caring not at all that after death men shall be judged according to the deeds done in the flesh. It is with deep regret, however, that we must confess that lack of fear and open disrespect for the promises of God are not confined to the ungodly. Their wickedness can be understood and often overlooked because God has never spoken to them nor opened their darkened minds. Well we might say with Jesus, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." But the glaring fact, which causes me endless concern and untold groaning in the Spirit is that among the professing Christians, unbelief is rampant. Christians do not stand in awe of the mighty promises of God. There is no fear in their hearts that through unbelief and just plain carelessness they will come short of the promises of God.

Is it any wonder that Paul, after having explained the eternal hope of sonship which is so great a part of God's plan of salvation, said, "Therefore, we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard lest at any time we should let them slip; for, if the word spoken by angels was steadfast and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward, how shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation"? Heb. 2:1-3 I tell you the truth out of a heavy and continually burdened heart, I greatly fear that many who read the truths contained in this book are merely given a nodding mental assent to them. Many have a tiresome way of trying to incorporate these glorious truths into their theology without the slightest effort to have their lives transformed by the truths they read. It is only a condemnation to a man to learn of the mind of Christ if he is unwilling to put away his own carnal mind that the mind of Christ may dwell in him. What, indeed, is the value of learning of the greatness of God's will if our own will remains uncrucified? It is only condemnation to learn of sonship if we do not lay hold of that very spirit of sonship, which continually cries, "Abba Father!" and yields to God as His obedient sons in everything. It is those alone who are led by His Spirit that are sons of God, not those who play with spiritual gifts and all manner of pretended ministries, for one may speak with the tongues of men and angels and still be no more than sounding brass or a clanging cymbal. Sonship comes to none without dreadful loneliness and much chastening, for the Father scourgeth every son whom He receiveth.

Many, I fear, are learning the truth of Mystery Babylon, yet, like men beholding their natural faces in a mirror, they go away and forget that the mirror showed them the need of cleaning up. It is better never to have known the way of righteousness than, having known it, to turn from the commandment delivered unto us. Would God that we prodigal sons, who have devoured our living with the harlots of Babylon, would now all arise and go to the Father, leaving forever the swine pens of organized religion, the husks of human theology. Then would God say, "Bring hither the best robe and put it on him, for I will be to you a Father and ye shall be My sons and My daughters."

The hour is at hand when the last call to sonship will be given. Those who have not treated with respect each revelation that has been given them will find their lamps have gone out. Then will the doors be shut against them for the age. Let us therefore fear lest, a promise being left us of entering into His rest, any of us should seem to come short of it.

Let us labor. Heb. 4:11 "Let us therefore labor to enter that rest." It may seem peculiar to be asked to labour to enter rest, but it is an undying truth.

Heaven is not reached by a single bound,
But we build the ladder by which we rise
From the lowly earth to the vaulted skies,
And we mount its summit round by round.

If any man thinks he can attain the great and precious promises of God without applying himself to them, he will find himself doomed to bitter disappointment, for it cannot be done. The path to sonship is a steep, uphill climb. You will find yourself groaning while other Christians shout. You will be weeping while others are laughing. You will be heavy while others are light and gay. You will suffer adversity and shipwreck while others sail through peaceful seas. You will be friendless and alone while other Christians are the life of the throng. The folly of pursuing such a toilsome path will be vividly pointed out to you by friend and foe, for there are much easier ways and much good company to cheer you along. But forget not that it is the way of the cross that leads home. It is the strait gate that leads to life, but the wide one that leads to destruction and loss. When the journey becomes almost unbearable with the difficulties, the crosses, and the heat of the way, then consider Him who endured such contradiction of sinners against Himself, lest ye be weary and faint in your minds; for ye have not yet resisted unto blood in your strife against sin. Heb. 12:3

The important thing is never to flag nor fail, faint nor grow weary, for it is infinitely better to be found laboring to enter into His rest than to take the easy way with the crowd only to find in the end that it leads irretrievably to destruction. Refuse not, therefore, to labor, for it is the very thing, which is used of God to eliminate the half-hearted.

Let us hold fast. Heb. 4:14 "Seeing then that we have a great high priest that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast our profession without wavering." "He that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed. Let not that man think that he will receive anything of the Lord. A double-minded man is unstable in all his ways." Jas. 1:6-8 God has no pleasure in the man who, like a wave of the sea, is tossed to and fro and carried about with every wind of doctrine by the sleight (meaning sleight of hand) of men and cunning craftsmanship whereby they lie in wait to deceive. He is interested only in speaking the truth in love that in all things we may grow up into Him who is the head, even Christ. Eph. 4:14-15

The visible church system, which is not the true church at all, is holding fast to many things that should have been discarded centuries ago. The Pharisees of Jesus’ day held the doctrines of men for the commandments of the Lord. So now Christians adhere to many things, which in reality are only hand-me-downs from the papal throne. Tradition would not be so serious if it were not for the damning fact that these doctrines hold the people in spiritual infancy and immaturity, forbidding them to ever attempt to leave the cradle of immaturity and go on to perfection. We have said before and now repeat that the man-made term Full Gospel is one of the most crippling terms ever devised. Those who use it vainly pride themselves with the notion that they have received every blessing God has offered to man in this age. How often I have heard them say, "There is nothing more; we believe in justification by faith, the baptism of the Spirit, the coming of the Lord, and divine healing." This they call Full Gospel. Why, the truth is that these blessings belong in the very nursery of Christian experience. They are only the first principles of the doctrine of Christ. Heb. 6:1,2. Perfection is far beyond them.

It is not enough for a man to give mental assent to the Bible revelation of sonship, or the mind of Christ, or the will of God. We must hold fast to such a confession, laboring continually to enter it, proving ourselves in much patience, in afflictions, in necessities, in labors, in watchings, in fastings, by pureness, by knowledge, by longsuffering, by kindness, by the Holy Ghost, by love unfeigned, by the word of truth, by the power of God, by the armor of righteousness on the right hand and on the left, in honor or dishonor, in face of evil report or good report. Though looked upon as deceivers, yet our sole defense is truth. 2 Cor. 6:4-8.

It is better never to have known the way of righteousness than, having known it, to turn from the holy commandment. Therefore, let us hold fast, unshakable and immovable, to the hope that is set before us whether it be the hope of sonship, the hope of the kingdom, or any joy that is set before us. There is an anchor that reaches within the inner veil, which takes fast hold of Christ, the forerunner who has already for us entered heaven, even Jesus, made a high priest forever after the order of Melchisedec.

It is always easy to drift along with the crowd, but the crowd is never right. Never, never have confidence in the acclaim of the crowds. They will carry you on their shoulders today and carry you on a cross tomorrow. These things I speak with truth and soberness from knowledge born of experience. Jesus never had confidence in man, for "He knew what was in man."

Do not hold fast to reputation, fame, traditions, doctrines, or crowds, but, proving all things, holdfast to that which is good. 1 Thess. 5:21 Holdfast to sound words. 2 Tim. 1:3 Hold fast in confidence firm to the end. Heb. 3:6. Above all let us hold fast our profession (confession) without wavering.

Let us come boldly. Heb. 4:16. "Let us come boldly to the throne of grace that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need." There is an unholy boldness, which is founded upon ignorance, that presumes to step where angels fear to tread. It is a boldness not founded on wisdom or godly fear, but on presumption. It is ready to boast of its laurels, to stand before God with its demands, pretending to be on excellent terms with the Lord. It is obviously rampant in prayer, especially among those who delight in long public prayers, who loudly present a multitude of demands before the Lord with neither respect for His divine will nor knowledge of His purpose. This thing God hates. There is a holy boldness, which has its foundations in the wisdom of God. It stands praying, "Not My will, but Thine be done." It takes its firm stand with respect and fear, knowing by holy faith that Jesus Christ has entered for us into the very presence of God, having obtained eternal redemption for us through the blood of the everlasting covenant.

Nothing can bring so much boldness to our prayers as the knowledge that we are approaching in the divine will, that the promises we claim are not only written in the word of God, but have been made real and living to us by His indwelling Spirit. When the inner man witnesses to the rightness of a cause, there is not only holy boldness before the throne of God, but also holy boldness in the presence of our enemies. The boldness that comes from the knowledge of God's will is like the holy boldness displayed in the hearts of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, who refused to bow down to the Babylonian image, though they knew full well that the burning fiery furnace awaited them. Thus with boldness and assurance they answered the enraged king, "O Nebuchadnezzar, we are not careful to answer thee in this matter. If it be so, our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace, and He will deliver us out of thine hand, O king. But if not, be it known unto thee, O king, that we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image that thou hast set up." Dan. 3:16-17

When anyone embarks upon the ocean of God's eternal promises, he is questioned immediately by friend and foe, but it is not to men he owes a satisfactory answer. It is before God he stands. Let us therefore come boldly and walk boldly without faltering or consenting to do things occasionally to please some carnal friend who sees naught but his childish tradition. Let your sincerest testimony be, "I do always those things which please the Father."

Let us go on to perfection. Heb. 6:1. The prize of the high calling of God is "in Christ Jesus." Ye are the body of Christ and members in particular. To be found in Him, not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing, is the ultimate prize. This in itself is the high calling. May the Spirit of God open the eyes of all who read to see that the oft repeated expression, in Christ, is not merely an all-embracing term including within itself all professing Christians. Of all God's callings the in Christ calling is the high calling, for to which of the angels said He at any time, "Thou art My Son; this day have I begotten thee"? Heb. 1:5 But of the Son He saith, "Thy throne, oh God, is for ever and ever; and the scepter of righteousness is the scepter of Thy kingdom; Therefore God hath anointed Thee with the oil of gladness above Thy fellows." Vs. 8-9 Sonship is the hope of all creation. Bringing many sons to glory is the eternal purpose hidden in the heart of the heavenly Father, but now revealed in the last times for us who by the power of God are reserved unto so great salvation.

Perfection has nothing to do with outward show or even outward testimony. It is a condition of the heart that is ever forging forward o'er mount and glen, o'er crag and torrent, completely oblivious to every thought except to gain the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

Let us lay aside every weight. Heb. 12:1. The eleventh chapter of Hebrews is a remarkable panorama of men and women who, in their search for perfection, were willing to lay aside every weight and the sins, which beset them. We are living in an age which is cursed with many weights that not only impede our progress to the distant peaks of God's high calling, but stop us dead in our tracks. Many a man has begun to run well who, after making a good start, has become involved, not with sin, but with weights. He becomes so involved in the affairs of business that he has no time for prayer and meditation. No new inspiration floods his soul. He becomes business minded, money minded, and consequently worldly minded. The cares of this world, the deceitfulness of riches, and the lusts of other things entering in choke the word and it becomes unfruitful. Thus he trades a mess of pottage for a birthright. The little dialogue, which took place between Jacob and Esau long ago is taking place in the lives of Christians every day.

There is another weight that is no less damning and even more deceitful. Many have started the long journey toward sonship, but have turned their eyes aside to behold the glamour of the harlots of Babylon. They become more and more involved with the backslidden church system. They fill their lives with her activity and embrace the bosom of her doctrines until the hope of the high calling of God vanishes from their spirits. When will men learn that the swaggering thing that calls itself the church is not the church at all? Every day we live the evidence becomes clearer that all the religious systems of earth, whether pagan or Christian, are openly flirting with each other. They are even now preparing to give all their power and authority to the beast who had a deadly wound in the days of the Reformation, but whose deadly wound is now healed. That is why all the world, both pagan and Christian, is wondering after the beast, and falling down more and more to worship at his image even as they worshipped the image of Nebuchadnezzar.

Committing adultery with this harlot system is an enormous weight that will drown men in perdition and blind their eyes to the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Be not deceived by this lecherous woman. "Let thine eyes look right on and thine eyelids straight before thee." Prov. 4:25

Let us run. Heb. 12:1. Laying aside every weight naturally precedes running with patience, for what man can run a race who has not first stripped for the race, laying aside his garments and every encumbrance that he may press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus? They who run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize. In the races of earth only one can win, but the race we run is not a race for any earthly prize. It is a spiritual race for a spiritual prize. Therefore, the prize is not confined to one, but many may win, even all who have heard the call of God. So run, therefore, that ye may obtain.

There will come times when our running will seem more like a slow walk, but, if we walk in the light as He is in the light, we shall have fellowship with all who are thus pressing on. Then again even our walk may seem to have to come to a standstill, but did not Paul say, "Stand, therefore, having your loins girt about with truth"? The race we have entered does not depend on speed but upon faithful plodding. Never look back to see what others are doing, for he who putteth his hand to the plow and looketh back is not fit for the kingdom of God. In this hour when the world is turning into a literal Sodom, preparing itself for dreadful destruction, let us who are fleeing to the mountain of God's high calling remember Lot's wife, who ceased from her fleeing, her running, and her walking to look back with longing eyes to the city of destruction, for she became a pillar of salt, preserving for all time the ghastly testimony that all who look back have judged themselves unfit for the kingdom of God.

Let us go forth. Heb. 13:13. "Wherefore Jesus also, that He might sanctify the people with His own blood, suffered without the gate. Let us go forth, therefore, unto Him without the camp, bearing His reproach." Let us go forth! What tremendous words are these! Perhaps this exhortation is more applicable to our times than to any other time in history. It was outside the camp of the world's religious systems that Jesus suffered. As Israel put Him forth outside their camp, crucifying Him on Calvary's hill, even so now He stands without. Within the camp you may find religion, but without the camp you will find Him. The confining walls of religious systems have never been able to confine Him. The fools of earth have thought to build their walls high enough to contain Him, but they are like the men in the legend of the wise men of Gotham, who built a wall to keep a lark in their garden. No sooner was their wall finished than the lark had flown away, and no sooner have men built their denominational walls than Christ is to be found, not within their narrow confines, but without the camp.

It is always a reproach to go without the camp unto Him because those foolish religious bigots think they have Him cornered within their walls. Without exception they imagine that they have the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, but He who is the truth has departed from them and stands without their camp. They have become like the frog who lived in a well who firmly believed that he possessed all the water in the world, refuting all arguments that without were ponds and lakes, rivers and oceans. So these vain dreamers have taken up their position behind the high walls of their sect, reproaching all who, in their longing for Him, have climbed beyond the wall whether it be denominational, undenominational, or interdenominational, and have gone without unto Him, bearing His reproach.

The visible church system is crucifying Christ every day. It is staggering like a drunken man in his own vomit. Isa. 16:14. The tables they spread are full of vomit. Isa. 28:8 Will men forever return as dogs to their vomit and sows to their wallowing in the mire? 2. Pet. 2:22 The hour has come when we must heed the call, "Come out of her, My people" Rev. 18:4 Why do men and women insist that they must assemble together with a system that has dethroned Christ? Why in their ceaseless quoting of Heb. 10:25 - "not forsaking the assembling of yourselves together" - do they close their eyes to Paul's exhortation, "Wherefore come out from among them and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you and ye shall be My sons and Sonship is promised only to the comeouters, the people who separate themselves from harlot systems and go without the camp unto Christ. If you must assemble, then assemble with the ones and twos, for where two or three are gathered in His name He is in the midst. There is today & first fruit company heeding God's warning and leaving Babylon, but the hour is at hand when even the angels will fly through the heavens, proclaiming this message to all who dwell on earth: Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her plagues. Rev. 18:1-4

I am stricken with utter amazement when I see how willingly Christians pass up their hope of the high calling of God that they might be sitters at ease in Zion. It is so easy to pause in the race to listen to canned sermons, to hear people sing, or to enjoy the inspiration that comes from being with any crowd, but, after it is all over, the face of Christ has not been seen, for He abides without the camp. Let us, therefore, go unto Him without the camp, bearing His reproach.

Let us consider. Heb. 10:25. Let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works. There is in the heart of every true child of God a delight in seeing other people making progress toward sonship. We should always be ready to stir a man up both to love and to good works. Paul in his day saw a great value in assembling together for the purpose of exhorting one another. Please do not try to convince me that the modern type meeting where people continually repeat their prepared acts of worship, singing hymns and listening to sermons, is the assembling of which Paul speaks. How much exhorting one another have you ever seen in this modern merry-go-round? You know as well as I do that this was not what Paul had in mind. The early church did not indulge in the farce and fanfare we have today, which is a disgrace both to the intelligence of man and the wisdom of God. Church meetings have become a place for the propagation of human programs and the gathering of huge offerings, a convenient place to rob the poor of his mite, to devour widows' houses in the name of some ambitious scheme to evangelize the heathen or to buy a gospel tent. Innocent and well-meaning people foolishly trust these money-mongering monsters, never dreaming that their gifts are fattening the bank rolls of these covetous men who deceive people with pretended dreams and visions, prayer for the sick, and promises of financial blessing to those who give generously. Well did Peter say, "Through convetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you: whose judgment now of a long time lingereth not and their damnation slumbereth not." 2 Pet. 2:3

Furthermore, if you will lift the deceitful curtain of religion, you will discover that these so-called places of fellowship are hives of discontent and distrust, places of bickering, backbiting, strife, jealousy, and envy. Just as surely as God called His people out of Egypt and out of Babylon, He is now calling, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her plagues." Well did Isaiah the prophet speak of this evil day when he said, "From the sole of the foot even to the head there is no soundness in it, but wounds and bruises and putrefying sores? They have not been closed, neither bound up, neither mollified with ointment... Except the Lord of hosts had left a very small remnant, we should have been as Sodom and we should have been like unto Gomorrah. When ye come to appear before Me, who hath required this at your hand, to tread My courts? Bring no more vain oblations; incense is an abomination unto Me; the new moons, and Sabbaths, the calling of assemblies, I cannot away with; it is iniquity, even the solemn meeting... And when ye spread forth your hands, I will hide mine eyes from you; yea, when ye make many prayers, I will not hear. Your hands are full of blood... Thy silver is become dross, thy wine mixed with water: Thy Princes (preachers) are become rebellious and companions of thieves: every one loveth gifts and followeth after rewards. See Isa. 1. This whole picture is a true portrait of the existing church and the greedy vultures who cunningly divest the people of their money in the name of their programs, which for the most part are deception.

This is not the assembling of which Paul spoke. All such assembling is wrong and nauseating in the sight of God. If you must assemble, find some man or woman who loves Christ, for they that feared the Lord spake often one to another. Have we forgotten the words of Jesus when He said, "Where two or three are gathered in My name, there am I in the midst of them"! There can be far more pure edification and exhortation when two or three earnest souls commune than where a thousand people are gathered to listen to robed choirs and prepared addresses. Men have thoroughly lost the simplicity as it is in Jesus Christ. Well did Jesus say, "In vain ye worship Me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men." Let us not only give the word of exhortation, but let us hear it as well, provoking one another, not to anger, but to good works, to love and devotion to the Lord.
Let us have grace. Heb. 12:28 "The grace of God has appeared to all men, teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world, looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour, Jesus Christ."  Titus 2:11-13

Let us have grace, even the grace of God, for the grace of God teaches us how we are to live in this present age, causing our hearts to look for that wonderful and blessed hope, the appearing and revelation of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Let the grace of God dwell in you richly, for grace is of God. The indwelling Christ is in reality the grace of God; apart from Him no grace is offered unto man. It is His abiding presence within that transforms our lives into His image and likeness. The more the life is controlled by Christ, the more His grace dwells in us; and the more grace dwells in us, the more His grace is manifested to all mankind. Grace is not only the unmerited favor of God, but grace adorns the heart of man with beauty and honor, dignifying the life with harmony and serenity. It is the regenerating and sanctifying power of God within, keeping our hearts in the love of God that we might serve Him with reverence and godly fear.

If there was ever a time when men should avail themselves of the grace of God, it is now. May we like Abraham, Noah, and Lot find grace in this darkest hour of the world's night? Let us look diligently lest any man fail of the grace of God, lest any root of bitterness springing up trouble us, and thereby many be defiled, or lest there be any fornicator, as Esau, who for one morsel of meat sold his birthright. For ye know that afterward, when He would have inherited the blessing, he was rejected, for he found no place of repentance though he sought it carefully with tears.  Heb. 12:15-17 There is abundant grace available for us all in these difficult days when God is trying the hearts of men, separating them as sheep from goats that His sheep might follow Him to green pastures and still waters of His kingdom.

Let us draw near. Heb. 10:22 "Draw nigh to God and He will draw nigh to you" is the word of the Lord. To stand without may seem humility to some, but when Christ has opened wide the door into the sacred presence of God, humility bids us enter in. The Father has given many exhortations bidding His children draw near unto Him, but there is also the unholy readiness in the carnal heart to accomplish some other thing first, to covet greedily that which belongs to this visible realm of death and unreality. The vast majority of Christians are exactly like those men who were bidden to the feast. "Come," said the Lord, "for all things are now ready." But they all with one consent began to make excuse. The first, intent on pleasure, said, "I have bought a piece of ground and I must needs go to see it." The second, intent on business, said, "I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to prove them." The third, presenting the family excuse, arrogantly slammed the door against the invitation saying, "I have married a wife and therefore I cannot come."  Luke 14:16-24 These three excuses - pleasure, business, and family connections - have robbed more people of the hope of sonship than all else combined. In fact, these three things are so all-embracing in this present world that nothing lies outside them. Because men love the visible, they never behold the invisible, and because the visible is tangible to their physical senses, their spirit is never permitted to dwell in the realm of reality.

The Lord, being angry at their paltry, rude, and arrogant refusal to enter in, sent to the streets and lanes for the poor, the maimed, the halt, and the blind - people who had neither business nor pleasure nor earthly ties. In they came from byways, streets, and hedges, maimed and blind to the things of this present world, but capable of seeing the invisible, Publicans and harlots came, cleansing their hands and purifying their hearts, turning their backs on the visible and unreal and sitting down with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob in the kingdom of the Father.

We are without doubt in the end of the age. Everywhere great Babylon is rising in greater power. Protestants and pagans alike are looking with wondering eyes toward Rome, that great mother of all harlots and abominations of the earth. Even now all the world is wondering after the beast, the beast that had the deadly wound (in the days of the Reformation) and did live. All those who would draw nigh unto God must come out of her, for she is drunken with the blood of the saints and strewn with the bones of the martyrs of Jesus. Let us then draw near to Christ, making Him our Lord and Head, having our hearts cleansed from an evil conscience and our bodies washed with pure water.
Let us offer praise. Heb. 13:15 "By Him, therefore, let us offer the sacrifice of praise to God continually, that is, the fruit of our lips giving thanks to His name." Praise is comely. It is like martial music to foot-weary soldiers, inspiring the soul with faith, filling the heart of God with love and admiration for His faithful ones. What greater lesson can any man learn than to praise the Lord for all things and in everything to give thanks? Honest heartfelt praise to God is a sure sign that we are learning that "all things are working together for good to them that love God and are the called according to His purpose." Rom. 8:28. "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away; blessed be the name of the Lord," said faithful Job. "Oh, that men would praise Lord for all His goodness and for His wonderful works to the children of men," said David. "I have learned in whatsoever state I am I am to be content," said Paul. "I have learned how to be full and to be hungry, to abound and suffer need; I can do all things through Christ which strengthm eth me." Let us speak to ourselves in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in our hearts to the Lord, for this is a tremendous source of spiritual victory and progress. By so doing walls are broken down, the mouths of lions are stopped, the violence of fire is quenched, and enemies are scattered.

In this awesome hour of the world's darkest night when unspeakable insanity abounds in high places, when religious systems are looking with covetous eyes toward great Babylon, let us who are of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus come out of it all unto Him.

Let us fear lest we fall short of the promise He made us.
Let us labor to enter into that blessed rest.
Let us go on to perfection, leaving the initial doctrines behind.
Let us draw near in full assurance of our faith.
Let us consider one another to provoke each other to faith and good works.
Let us lay aside every weight and the sins that so easily beset us.
Let us run with patience the race set before us.
Let us go forth unto Him without camp, bearing His reproach.
Let us have grace that we may serve God acceptably.
Let us offer the sacrifice of praise, giving thanks to His name.

IF ANY MAN

The Lord our God is the Lord of all the universe. Beside Him there is no God. From Him everything comes; by Him everything exists, and in Him everything ends. "God, that made the world and all things therein, seeing that He is Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands; neither is worshipped with men's hands, as though He needed anything, seeing He giveth to all life, and breath, and all things; and hath made of one all nations of men for to dwell on the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation". Acts 17:24-26 In Him we live and move and have our being. We also are His offspring and ought not to think that the Godhead is like unto gold or silver or stone, graven with the art of man's device. Likewise He has appointed a day when He will judge the world in righteousness by that man, Jesus Christ, whom He has ordained, and He has given us assurance that He liveth in that He raised Christ from the dead.

It should not seem strange to discover that God, who made the world and all things therein, should have a secret purpose, wise and glorious, for every man on earth, seeing He has given life and breath to all things. "My substance was not hid from Thee, when I was made in secret, and curiously wrought in the lowest parts of the earth. Thine eyes did see my substance, yet being unperfect; and in Thy book all my members were written, which in continuance were fashioned, when as yet there was none of them." Psa. 139:15-16 If, therefore, God fashioned us in His own mind and wisdom when we did not yet exist, like an image in a piece of stone before the artist has cut it out, then we have perfect assurance that day after day the gradual but eternal fashioning is proceeding as it pleases Him. At times our souls cry out in despair at the grotesque and horrible image of self we see before our eyes, but, while we betimes sink into gloom and almost despair, the heavenly architect and master builder is fashioning with fierce heat and telling blows a vessel of His own choice.

Nothing useless is or low;
"I am the Lord, and there is none else, there is no God beside Me: I girded thee, though thou hast not known Me: that they may know from the rising of the sun, and from the west, that there is none beside Me. I am the Lord, and there is none else. I form light, and create darkness: I make peace, and create evil. I the Lord do all these things."  Isa. 45:5-7

Once the believer embraces the truth that God almighty and all-wise controls the world and all things therein, his heart will find rest in the majesty and faithfulness of the Lord. I know of nothing that will bring such peace as the perfect knowledge that before all things, above all things and in all things is the faithful, all powerful, all merciful God, full of loving kindness and tender mercies. His eyes behold, His eyelids try every thought and act of man. Eternity itself will not mar His patience or cause His loving kindness to cease.

In every creature God has made from the enormous blue whale, weighing one hundred and thirty tons, to the most infinitesimal speck of an insect He has placed the law of self-preservation, and we would not be wrong to say that even the law of reproduction, inherent in the animal kingdom and in the plants as well, is largely based on the law of self-preservation. The law of self-preservation is a divine law. By it the Lord not only preserves Himself but expands Himself through the vastness of the creation He has made. Even the formation of the body of Christ, that many-membered body of God’s sons, is an expansion of the Godhead. Together with man’s desire to preserve himself the Lord has placed a thirst for God and an inexpressible desire to know Him and return to the glory of His presence within him. God, who made the worlds and all things therein, is at present dealing in particular with one special part of His creation. In the beginning the Father said, “Let Us make man in Our image and after Our likeness.” He prepared the earth as a dwelling place for the man He was about to make and placed all things and all creatures in that earth at the disposal and behest of man. That man might be in the image of God, he must first be brought to an experimental knowledge of good and evil. Therefore the creature was made subject to vanity before he was created. Likewise also the full plan of redemption was laid. Rom. 8:20. Thus, when the human family was brought into being, the Creator knew full well that after centuries and millenniums of time He would present all mankind faultless before the throne of His glory to take his place in Christ as ruler and lord of the universe.

Now, just as the Lord has placed the instinct of self-preservation in every creature, so has He placed in man the desire and instinct to worship God and come at last into His image. However far a prodigal may have wandered, his thoughts continually return home. That which we call conscience is nothing less than the Spirit of God following man whithersoever he goes. Not only is it with him, but in him. “Whither shall I go from Thy Spirit? or whither shall I flee from Thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, Thou art there; if I make my bed in hell, behold, Thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea: even there shall Thy hand lead me, and Thy right hand shall hold me. If I say, Surely the darkness shall cover me; even the night shall be light about me. Yea, the darkness hideth not from Thee; but the night shineth as the day: the darkness and the light are both alike to Thee. For Thou hast possessed my reins: Thou hast covered me in my mother's womb.” Psa. 139:7-13 Oh that men might learn, whether they be saints or sinners that the almighty Father continually possesses our reins! As a rider reins his horse with bit and bridle or a pilot guides an ocean liner with a very small helm, so the Lord holds our reins, guiding us through life’s fearful tempest safely into His desired haven.

Many are the precious promises our Lord has extended to mankind. His promises are as limitless as Himself. Who could ever comprehend the vastness of His love or fathom the prodigality of His tender mercies? Who can grasp the extent of His wisdom or measure the expanse of His immutable purpose?

Eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him, but He has revealed them to us by His Spirit, for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God.

For centuries His loving call has been to "any man" and every man. It is undoubtedly true that special promises have been made to chosen vessels, but faith placed in the heart by the Holy Spirit reaches over every obstacle to grasp the richest promise. Did not the Queen of Sheba come from afar to hear the wisdom of Solomon? And the harlot Rahab - did she not believe and perish not? The Syrophoenician woman, too! Can we not hear the beautiful words of Christ, "O woman, great is thy faith; be it unto thee as thou wilt." Did not the Roman centurion find deliverance for his demoniac son? And Cornelius also - did not God hear his prayer and send Peter to him that he might be saved and filled with the Holy Ghost? Well might we once again repeat the words of Peter, spoken on that glorious Pentecostal morning, "The promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." Acts 2:39

IF ANY MAN THIRST

There was a feast in Israel well known as the Feast of Tabernacles. As the Feast of Passover found its fulfillment in the crucifixion of Christ, the Lamb of God slain to take away the sins of the world, and as the Feast of Pentecost found its fulfillment in the mighty outpouring of the Holy Spirit, so the Feast of Tabernacles will find its fulfillment in the second coming of the Lord. First He comes secretly to believing men. We see the sign of His secret appearing in John 7:10. "Then went He also up unto the feast, not openly, but as it were in secret." Then He entered into the temple and taught. Verse 14 Finally, on the last great day of the feast, He revealed Himself publicly to all the people, crying in the temple, "Ye both know Me, and ye know whence I am." Verse 28. Later during His mighty sermon He stood and cried with a voice that arrested the attention of all around, "If any man thirst, let him come unto Me and drink. He that believeth on Me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. This spake He of the Spirit, which they that believe on Him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given..." Verses 38-39.

There is a thirst in the heart of every man for the fountains of living water. The vast majority of mankind has mistaken the thirst they have for living water to be a thirst for some temporal thing. Vainly they imagine that thirst can be satisfied by partaking of the stagnant waters of earth's cisterns. Like lost sheep they wander through the wilderness of life seeking satisfaction and finding none. Place after place they roam in their pitiful search for the fountain that satisfies, but find it they never can until at last they come to Christ. "I will give unto them the water of life freely" is His promise to "any man". He becomes all in all to every searching heart. When Jesus comes, the thirsty soul finds the fountain of living waters. There his thirst is slaked forever. Henceforth the river is in him, springing up unto eternal life.

David in his longing mused, "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after Thee, O God. My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God; when shall I come and appear before God?" What a tremendous cry this is for the water of life! That cry is as much in the heart of a king as in the heart of the man in the gutter. The abundance of temporal possessions dismally fails to satisfy the longing of the spirit. Christ alone can satisfy the inner man because the inner man is not natural or physical, but spirit. When deep calls unto deep, then all his waves and billows flow over our thirsty souls and we are satisfied with the water of eternal life.

If lost and hopeless man, stained with the vilest sin, will call on the name of the Lord, saying, "My soul thirsteth for Thee; my flesh longeth for Thee in a dry and thirsty land where no water is," then he will experience His power, His loving kindness and tender mercy and his lips will worship Christ for His unending joy and peace. "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy, and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price." Isa. 55:1 Poor, sin-laden mankind, impoverished in spirit, is forever spending money for that which is not bread and laboring for that which satisfieth not. They queue up before the liquor stores to buy wine and strong drink that can do no more than dull their senses. They throng the places of pleasure or trapse badly to the harlot's house in their unending longing to satisfy the thirst that is within them. They fill their lives with the vanity of things and more things, only to find that all they have attained rises to mock them in the end. How often of late I hear folks speak of the Shah of Iran — a man in possession of billions of this world's wealth, but sick unto death, homeless, without a country and unwanted by all except those few who think his presence may add somewhat to their own storehouse! This is the way of the world. No satisfaction can be gained from its fountains, for all its potions are libations of death. "If any man thirst, let him come unto Me and drink."

Our Lord had been preaching in Judaea and, as usual, He had met with the suspicion and mistrust of those perennial, unbelieving Jews. He therefore left Judaea, John tells us, John 4:3, and departed into Galilee. I have often wondered at the statement, "He must needs go through Samaria." Probably we may advance a dozen reasons why He must needs go through Samaria, but I like to think His omniscience told Him that a woman was there who long had thirsted for satisfaction, but had never found it though many a time in her searching she drank of the broken cisterns of this sad world only to find her thirst unslaked and her longing unsatisfied.

The day was hot and the journey long. Both Jesus and His disciples were weary and thirsty as they approached the little city of Sychar. On this spot, centuries before the patriarch Jacob had bought a plot of ground for his son Joseph. Here he had dug a well and drank thereof, himself and his cattle. Centuries had come and gone since then and now Jesus had come, weary with His journey and athirst from the burning heat of the noonday. It was, we are told, the sixth hour of the day. Tired and thirsty and having nothing with which to draw water, He sat thus on the well until presently there came a woman of Samaria with her water pot to draw water. I have often been filled with admiration just to see how Jesus wisely unfolded the deepest truths to congregations of one or two. It was to an earnest man who came to Him by night that Jesus disclosed the eternal truth, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." It was to a sobbing Mary and a heartbroken Martha that He said, "I am the resurrection and the life." To Peter and James and John He showed the vision of the Son of man coming in His kingdom and it was the solitary John on lonely Patmos who saw the surpassing glory of the Alpha and the Omega. Now again the Saviour stands, talking to a woman who is thirsting for living water, but knows not it is living water she needs. Ah! Me thinks this may be the reason He "must needs go through Samaria." No one ever thirsts for Christ without His knowledge of it, or will they call upon Him for bread and their hunger not be satisfied.

He satisfies the longing soul;
He fills the empty place.
His love is over all;
I'm enraptured by His grace.

"Give Me to drink," He requested, knowing as He did that a request for help often turns the most grudging stranger into a condescending friend. But the woman, poor soul, more concerned with her petty cavil than with the need of this weary man, objected, "How is it that Thou, being a Jew, askest drink of me who am a woman of Samaria, for the Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans?" Though she knew it not, this was the very question Jesus was expecting; therefore He replied, "If thou knewest the gift of God and who it is that saith to thee, Give Me to drink; thou wouldest have asked of Him, and He would have given thee living water." The natural mind is very dark and without understanding. Only the Holy Spirit can awaken it. Human efforts to enlighten men to their need of God will always fail. Only to Christ is power given to open the blind eyes of sinful men even as the scales fell from the vision of Saul when Jesus purged them away. "Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again," He was telling her, "but whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life." But the woman, seeing no ray of light through the darkness of her understanding, replied, "Sir, give me this water, that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw." John 4:13-15

Perhaps you have wondered why Jesus left off speaking of the water of life to say, "Go, call thy husband, and come hither." It was because she was not yet fully awakened to her spiritual need. She knew not that she was a sinner in need of a Saviour and those who are not awakened to their need can never understand beyond the natural realm. All she had seen until the present was the possibility that she might somehow avoid the task of trudging to this well for water. "I have no husband," the woman replied. It was when Jesus told her, "Thou hast had five husbands; and he whom thou now hast is not thy husband," that conviction of sin began to be awakened in her and with it came the spiritual knowledge that this man was no ordinary man, but a prophet of the Lord. When at last her debatings were at an end, with the wistfulness of a rising hope she ventured, "I know that Messiah cometh, and, when He is come, He will tell us all things." To this our Saviour replied, "I that speak unto thee am He." The woman, seemingly dumfounded with amazement, forgot her errand, dropped her water pot and ran off to the city, saying to the men, "Come, see a man, which told me all things that ever I did: is not this the Christ?"

I know not how the Spirit moves, convincing men of sin.
Nor how, unworthy, Christ in love redeemed me for His own; But I do know that, if any man thirst and come to Christ for drink, the water He will give will be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life. Unto thirsting souls who now read these lines, to you the word is spoken. "If any man thirst, let him come unto Me and drink."

About 1733 the Spirit of the Lord began to deal with a young man by the name of George Whitefield. Whitefield had been taught, like many others, that God's favor could be gained and salvation earned by doing many good works. From the writings of one, Henry Scougal, he learned that works were of no account in God's sight. What he needed was to be born again. In search of this experience he gave up everything of any pleasure to him. He even left the fellowship of the Holy Club. Nothing he tried was of any avail. In his search for God he drove himself harder and harder until his health began to break. In the end, when nothing he could do or pray was of any help to him, he threw himself upon his bed and cried aloud, "I thirst." According to John Pollock in his popular biography of George Whitefield, it was the first time in his life that he had ever called out in utter helplessness. Pollock goes on to describe what happened next:

"He became aware that he was happy, as he had not been happy for nearly a year. Instinctively he knew why. He had thrown himself at long last, blindfolded and without reserve, without struggle or claim, into God's almighty hands. And Someone seemed to say, "George, you have what you asked! You ceased to struggle and simply believed - and you are born again!" The sheer simplicity, almost the absurdity, of being saved by such a prayer made George Whitefield laugh. At that laugh the flood-gates burst. "Joy - joy unspeakable - joy that's full of, big with glory!"

IF ANY MAN LOVE ME

"If any man love Me, he will keep My words: and My Father will love him, and We will come unto him, and make Our abode with him." John 14:23

When any man thirsts after God, coming to Him in penitence, humility and faith, a very definite work of regeneration takes place within him. Because the penitent has believed, he is washed from his sin by the power of the life blood of Jesus Christ. Paul in his epistle to Titus speaks of this experience as "the washing of regeneration, and the renewing of the Holy Ghost." Titus 3:5 When a soul dead in trespasses and sins is touched and renewed by the Spirit of God, this is the new birth. That newborn soul is both regenerated and renewed. In the words of Jesus, he is born again. We are born again not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God which liveth and abideth forever. Paul has so well said, "By grace are ye saved through faith: and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast." Eph. 2:8-9

There are thousands of people today claiming to be born again who have never really believed on Christ nor experienced the regenerating power of the Holy Spirit within, making them new creations in Christ Jesus. The frequent and careless use of the term born again among loose living and totally unregenerate people in our day is nothing less than a wicked attempt by Satan, that enemy of all righteousness, to belittle and annul the reality of the born again experience and to bring it into the dust of disrepute. When ungodly entertainers, together with men and women of corrupt lives, claim to be born again, they bring disgrace and disrepute on one of scripture's holiest terms so that unbelievers will say, "If he is born again, then I don't want the experience."

Nebuchadnezzar, that lofty king of Babylon, carried the holy vessels of the Lord's house in Jerusalem to the temple of his mindless, heathen gods in far away Babylon, and his wicked grandson, Belshazzar, in his debauchery and drunkenness brought those same holy vessels into that voluptuous carousal known as Belshazzar's feast. There his indulgent wives, his dissolute lords and his intemperate army generals drank wine from the Lord's holy vessels as they praised their gods of gold and silver that can neither hear nor see nor talk. That night Babylon fell and Belshazzar himself was slain. The new birth in all its regenerating purity is far above the principalities and powers of this godless world. Though evil men and seducers, waxing worse and worse, would surreptitiously drag its glory in the dust, that holy experience, remaining pure as God is pure, belongs wholly to men and women who are washed from the filth of this present age in the blood of Jesus Christ our Lord.
"If any man love Me, he will keep My words," Jesus said. Are you having difficulty in your Christian experience? Do you lose the victory and fall into the same old pit from which you were digged? The secret of your victory, or lack of it, is in loving Christ. In whatsoever degree your love for Christ is manifest, in that degree, will your victory also be. In scripture we are told that John was the disciple whom Jesus loved, but I'm sure Christ's love for John was not a matter of favoritism. Our Lord was simply requiting the love John had for Him. Jesus loved Lazarus and Martha and Mary, but, wherever mention is made of that blessed trio, there is indisputable evidence of their personal love for Christ.

"If any man love Me, he will keep My words" John 14:24 Is that not exactly as we would expect it to be? Could we, in fact, expect anything less or anything else than this? Would we not rightly conclude that, when men and women love God, they will be faithful to Him and express their fidelity to Him in every test? Yea, verily, it is so. Those who love Christ long to be with Him where He is, not that they are anxious to die or even leave the body, but rather because they know they will be completely satisfied when they see Him as He is. "Every man who hath this hope in him purifieth himself even as He is pure."

He who is born of the Spirit has already tasted of the resurrection. Resurrection comes first to our spirits and finally to our physical bodies as well. "You hath He quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins," Paul said. What words could better express a resurrection from the night and death into which we had fallen and into which Adam fell in the Garden of Eden? "It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing." Neither the flesh nor any of its works will ever avail to draw us nearer to God. The same Spirit that raised up Jesus must also dwell in you and me. And, says Paul, "If any man hath not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His ... but if the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in you." Rom. 8:9, 11 Here is a promise of physical resurrection from the dead at the end of the age and of physical healing at the present time.

"If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature," that is to say, a new creation. Old things have passed away and, behold, all things are become new! There is no fact concerning the new birth more pertinent than this: It must remain forever true that, when Christ comes into a life, the world with its affections and lusts loses its grip and an entirely new life ensues. If one who professes conversion continues in sin and unclean habits, there is good reason to doubt that he truly repented in the first place. There is certainly no reason to believe he is born again. If there is one thing above all else that must follow the new birth, it is a complete change and transformation, not only in the manner of living, but in spiritual attitude and outlook. The chains fall off, the power of sin is broken, the heart is free and love for Christ rules the life.

Once you were dead in sin. Now you are alive in Christ. Once you were lost. Now Christ has found you. The sinner does not find Christ. It is Christ who finds the sinner. It is He who seeks the lost until He finds him. Man never thirsts for God until the Lord creates the thirst. Man will never come to Christ until the Father draws him. The grace of God must be received by faith. Saving faith is not your faith. It is God's. That is why Paul said, "By grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast." It is of faith that it might be by grace.

This resurrection life in Christ must never be buried and consumed in the world and the things of earth. So many Christians even in old age seek with dogged tenacity to establish themselves in the affairs of this passing life. The more they seek the things of earth the colder grows their love for Christ. The word of God is very pointed in its instruction here, stating with definiteness and emphasis, "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God." Col. 3:1-3 We have died to sin and the passing show of earth, and have been raised to a new life in Christ. Because of this we should turn our attention, and above all our affection, to things above, and not to the things on the earth. Mortify - that is put to death - the things that are of the earth; fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry. Put off all these: Anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth, and lie not one to another seeing you have put off the old man with his deeds. It is not our putting off of these evil things that saves us, but we put them off because we are saved, as James so pointedly said, "I will show you my faith by my works." Men who continue in their sin have never truly repented and never truly believed, but as a dog returns to his vomit and a sow to her wallowing in the mire, so these, being unwashed and unregenerate, return to their old sins. We, having repented and believed, have put on the new man, which is Christ. In Christ we depend on neither circumcision nor uncircumcision nor any other work. His grace has made us new creatures. Christ has become all in all.

Since, then, we have put off the old man and his nature, together with all his deeds of uncleanness, and have risen with Christ, put on therefore as the elect of God mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, longsuffering and such other beautiful graces as belong to the resurrected life. Col. 3:12 Above all things, the Spirit bids us, put on charity (love), which is the bond of perfectness. Col. 3:14

We have now come again to our starting point. If love is the bond of perfection and perfectness, we can see with clearness why Jesus said, "If any man love Me, he will keep My words." We cannot gainsay that. If, therefore, we are not living victoriously, we must conclude that we are not loving Him as we ought. Our love for God is manifest in a love for all the things of God. If we saturate our lives with corrupt reading, profane stories and worldly associations, we will become exactly like these same corrupting influences. Evil communications corrupt good manners. The reverse can never be true. If on the other hand we saturate our lives with the word of God, seasoning it continually with prayer, we will become like Christ, because Christ and His word cannot be separated.

Behold the book, whose leaves display
Jesus, the truth, the light, the way.
Read it with diligence and prayer;
Search it and thou shall find Him there.

"If any man love Me, he will keep My words." But how can we keep His words if we have not first hidden them in our hearts? Beautiful is the promise, "If any man love Me, he will keep My words," yet I think no promise can excel that which follows: "My Father will love him, and We will come unto him, and make Our abode with him." John 14:23 The precious promise continues: "Abide in Me and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in Me. ... He that abideth in Me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit... If ye abide in Me, and My words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you... As the Father hath loved Me, so have I loved you: continue ye in My love... These things have I spoken unto you, that My joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full." John 15

The promises proffered the man or woman who loves God are simply endless. Christ, having said, "This is My commandment, that ye love one another as I have loved you," promised an entirely new relationship when He said, "Ye are My friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you. Henceforth I call you not servants; for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth: but I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of My Father I have made known unto you." John 15:14-15 Verily, verily it is true! "If any man love Me, him will My Father honor."

IF ANY MAN HEAR MY VOICE

"Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear My voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with Me." Rev. 3:20

Towerings truths appear throughout the Bible, standing as beacon lights to guide our footsteps and illumine our pathway as we walk this celestial way. No other book ever written has the inherent wisdom to disclose the future with unerring accuracy, giving light to the wayfarers and understanding to all who reverence and receive it.

When John wrote to the seven churches of Asia, he sent the prophetic message, which Jesus Christ had given him. It appears that at the time of his writing there were only seven churches in Asia. The spiritual condition in these churches and their standing with God differed greatly. We may be sure that the message sent by Jesus to these churches applied to each of them personally, but we may be equally certain that the message was prophetic and was intended to portray the spiritual condition of the church throughout the age of grace. If the things written there were intended only for the local churches of that day, then it would be difficult to see any reason for their being included in scripture at all. The message does, in fact, portray all the great events of eschatology. The truth is that these seven churches, each in its turn, represent the spiritual condition of the church throughout the age of grace. The last church, Laodicea, represents the spiritual condition of the church in the end of the age. Very little of good was spoken to this lukewarm church of the last day. She prided herself in that she was rich and increased in goods and had need of nothing, but she knew not that she was wretched and miserable, poor and blind and naked.

One cannot imagine words that would more exactly describe the church system of the twentieth century. Like men in a dream the church imagines herself to be full, but will awake to find herself empty. The thirsty man dreams he drinks, but awakes to find himself parched. The blind man dreams he sees and the naked man imagines himself clothed. Those who believe the world is now in the midst of a great revival are deceiving themselves. Scripture bears abundant witness that in the end of this age it will be difficult to find faith anywhere on earth. Darkness will cover the earth and gross darkness the people. There will be a famine, not of food or water, but of hearing the word of God. In our day Bibles can be bought in the dime store and sermons can be heard any hour of the day or night, but practically no one, the preachers in particular, is hearing the word of God. As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be when the Son of man comes. Few were listening then; few are hearing now. As it was in the day that Lot went out of Sodom, so shall it be when Jesus comes.

Never in the history of the world has there been so much preaching and so much human effort, or so many multi-million dollar steeple houses on the street corners, or so much church membership, or so much effort to convert the world, but Christ, locked out of their grandiose schemes, stands outside.

> When Jesus came to Kensington, They would not give Him pain. They simply passed Him on the street And left Him in the rain.

It is not my purpose here to explore in detail the present condition of the church system, but when Jesus sent His message to the wealthy church of Laodicea, which boasted that she was rich and increased in goods and had need of nothing, He portrayed Himself as one standing outside and knocking at the door. He was not within, as He should have been, but on the outside. Behind the doors that were locked against Him they were preaching about Him and singing about Him and building for Him, but He himself they had left outside. My dear friends, if our Lord Jesus Christ were to come into the churches of our day, there would be a revolution. The first thing he would need to do would be to drive out the money changers, overthrow the pulpits and chase out the puppeteers, cast out the human programs, and clean out the basement kitchens, recreation rooms and gymnasiums. The whole church system of our day is built on the programs and efforts of the flesh rather than the glory of the Holy Spirit. Many will dislike me for saying these things, but that is of little consequence. The truth is that Christ is outside the church system and His Spirit is not in its works. "A wonderful and horrible thing is committed in the land; the prophets prophesy falsely, and the priests bear rule by their means; and My people love to have it so." Jer. 5:30-31 When therefore the message was sent to the church at Laodicea, which represents the church at the end of the age, Jesus Christ is seen standing outside. The message of Christ at the end of the age is not to the church as a whole, but, because the church as a whole has rejected Him, to the individual believer. With His patient but challenging message He calls, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear My voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with Me."

When the glory of the Lord departed from the temple in the days of Ezekiel, it did so after this manner. The shekinah, which was the glory of God's presence, dwelt between the cherubims in the house of the Lord, but, after Ezekiel was shown how the house of God was profaned, he saw the glory of the Lord remove from between the cherubims and stand over the threshold of the house. Ezek. 10:4 Next he saw the glory remove from the threshold to the door of the east gate, Ezek. 10:19, which was in the midst of the city. Then finally the Spirit removed from the city of Jerusalem entirely and stood upon the mountain which is on the east side of the city. Ezek. 11:23

This picture is so relevant to our day! All that ever happened in Israel was written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the scripture might have hope. Rom 15:4. In this we have a picture as exact as anything could be. The glory and power of God has been replaced by human effort and organization.
Preachers vainly think that money and programs will suffice, but they will not. It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing. The temple worship in Israel carried on as before. Though Ichabod was over the door and the glory of God had departed, Israel neither knew nor cared. This same unspeakable tragedy is now in evidence in the Laodicean church of today. Because she is lukewarm, she is being spewed from the mouth of the Lord. Christ is no longer within. He stands without. Programs have pushed him aside. The glory of God has been changed into an image, fashioned after the design of men. They have discarded the upper room in favor of a supper room. They have rejected the power of the Holy Spirit and adopted education and oratory in its place. They have forgotten that the wisdom of the world is foolishness with God. They imagine God to be such an one as themselves.

If Jesus Christ is on the outside of the system, is it any marvel that His elect saints should be found there, too? You can bring in your money and wealth and human talent, but don't bring a revelation from heaven. It just won't be tolerated. In this day of Laodicea Jesus Christ is calling, not to the crowds but to the individual, whether he be saint or sinner, "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock. If any man will hear my voice, I will come in to him." I do not want to make the scripture say something that it did not intend to say, but it is not unreasonable to state that, when Jesus comes in to a man, the real truth is that He comes into the man, for He, who once dwelt with men, shall be in them. John 14:17 The mystery hid from ages and generations, but now made manifest to His saints, is that Christ "is in you" is the hope of glory. Col. 1:26-27 In the wilderness God dwelt in the tabernacle, but not in the people. The message of the New Testament is that the Holy Spirit dwells in the people and not in a building made with hands. "The most High dwelleth not in temples made with hands." Acts 7:48 We are now permitted to experience what the prophet foretold: "I will dwell in them, and walk in them: and I will be their God, and they shall be My people." 2 Cor. 6:16

In the mad and often frantic rush to build bigger and more elegant buildings and introduce more sophisticated social programs Christians compromise more and more, hoping to hold the worldly-minded young people, under-toning all that is true so that no one will be offended. The church of Laodicea has left no room for Jesus, but has pushed Him and His gospel right out the door. This will naturally be vociferously denied. Nevertheless, it is true to the pattern clearly defined in Rev. 3:14-22. "Who is blind as he that is perfect, and blind as the Lord's servant?" Isa. 42:19 Not too long ago a worldly-minded woman with whom I am acquainted, having attended one of these grand gospel meetings, enlightened me thus: "You see," said she, "They don't preach from the Bible any more. They preach on topics." I did not reply, but she was right! I do see, and the deduction she made was for the most part true. When you listen to the vast, expensive T.V. or radio programs, how much truth do you hear? A little bit about healing, a few threats of hell and damnation, promises that, if you come to the Lord, He will save you, and the rest of the time concerns John Doe and his program and how badly he needs your money to carry it on. Is it any wonder that the glory has departed?

Though the lukewarm church of Laodicea has no room for Christ and His glory, the promise given here to the individual is matchless, priceless and incomparable. No more exalted promise could have been given to mankind. If any man hear my voice, I will come in to him, and sup with him, and he with Me." To sup with Christ is to commune with Him. It is to fellowship with Him and to freely partake of His Spirit. "I am the bread of life," Jesus said. John 6:48 And again, "This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die." Verse 50 "I am the living bread which came down from heaven: if any man eat this bread, he shall live forever: and the bread that I will give is My flesh, which I will give for the life of the world." Verse 51

There are so many things written in God's word that beggar description, defy understanding and challenge explanation, but their mystery can be revealed and made shining clear by the illumination of the Holy Spirit. The heavenly truth, "Whoso eateth My flesh and drinketh My blood hath eternal life, and I will raise him up at the last day", cannot possibly be explained to the satisfaction of the natural mind. The natural mind will collaborate with the unbelieving Jews to scornfully argue, "How can this man give us His flesh to eat?" But, while their dispute rages and their vociferations become more clamorous, the believing soul carries off the victory, partaking of Him by faith, dining at His celestial table and slaking his thirst at the fountain of living waters. That heartbroken pair who at eventide trudged wearily from Jerusalem to Emmaus were bowed down with despondency, heartache and unbelief until Jesus the Christ came to sup with them. The moment He blessed the bread and broke it for them, their eyes were opened and they knew Him.
As it was in the days of yesteryear, so it is now today. "If any man hear My voice, and open the door, I will come in to him and sup with him." And did you notice that in the verse quoted above that same beautiful phrase is repeated again? "If any man eat this bread, he shall live forever." O that God's people might see that eternal life, which He is and of which we partook when we first believed and by which we are sustained, is not affected by the grave! Once eternal life enters the believing heart, it cannot end. Eternal life is no more affected by the grave than it is affected by the realm of death, that always surrounds us in this present evil world. Those who partake of eternal life can never die. The life that now dwells within will blossom soon in incorruption and immortality. Whether we walk earth's realm of death or whether we be buried in some tomb, we are yet in the chrysalis stage. The pupa is still enclosed in its capsule of death, from which in the resurrection morning it will burst forth, not in corruption but in incorruption, not in mortality but in immortality. Saints should not lose heart and be bowed down with wonder and unbelief because the journey is long and the process slow and often painful. The incorruptible seed will soon burst forth from the cocoon of death into the glorious, incorruptible freedom of the sons of God.

If Christians could only learn that the realm in which we now move and have our being is the realm of death and that the grave itself is nothing more than part of this earthly realm, then they would perceive how it is that eternal life cannot be affected by the grave. The natural man is no more dead in the grave than he is when he is walking about. Once we partake of eternal life, there can be no end to it. We have been told so often that death ends all. The truth is that death ends nothing but itself. To the redeemed partakers of eternal life death is just the casting off of the grave clothes. The cocoon is not the end of the butterfly. It is merely the end of the worm. Once we see that, we shall triumphantly exult, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" If, then, I must walk though the valley of death on my journey to the fullness of eternal life, so be it. I will fear no evil in that.

This morning, as I was considering this beautiful text, "If any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him", the mail brought a most remarkable letter. I hope the writer will not deem it ill that I quote a paragraph of it for your edification. The letter came from a chiropractor still practicing his profession at the grand age of ninety years. As I read his beautiful letter, I was unusually impressed to see how exceedingly true are the words of Christ, "If any man hear My voice and open the door, I will come in to him, and sup with him, and he with Me." I quote the following paragraph from the letter of this blessed saint of fourscore and ten years:

My dear brother and sister Hawtin:

"I feel sure now that you will not be offended or that I am not jumping to conclusions when I thus address you, for the Holy Spirit testifies within me that I am your brother in Christ. Waves of glory well up within me when I realize (in such a limited way) what I am becoming in Christ. I am not very demonstrative, but I am so very thankful that the Holy Spirit has placed me just where I am and has given me this quiet, peaceful little sanctuary where I am alone with God and can lift my hands and voice to him in adoration and praise during the evening periods from 9.00 p.m. to one or two in the morning. These quiet times of prayer, reading and meditation are more and more precious as the days and weeks go by. I retire as soon as I have finished with my last patient and sleep for a couple of hours and then arise, eat an apple (for I have had nothing to eat since noon and then simply) and then proceed with studying. I have followed this program for some months now and it works better for me than to sleep until four or five and then try to study. I am amazed at the progress and growth that has taken place during these sacred hours."

The above paragraph was quoted because it did not seem possible to have written anything that could state with such simple clarity the blessing of opening wide the door that Jesus might come in to dine. Here as nowhere else, privately and alone, spiritual edification and the understanding of heavenly things begins and continues. It is small wonder that so many of God's dear saints are lonely people, yet who can be lonely or alone when Jesus dines thus with us? I exhort all God's saints in this lukewarm age of Laodicea to open wide the door that Jesus may enter in to fill our beings with light and understanding.

We have already briefly considered the text, "If any man love Me, he will keep My words." This is a most wonderful truth. However, the remainder of the verse reads thus: "And My Father will love him, and We will come unto him and make Our abode with him." It is gloriously true that, "if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him and sup with him", but happy indeed is the man who has learned that, if he loves Christ, He will come in to abide with him forever. No longer will He be a guest in his heart, but he will honor Him as the Host of that spiritual temple which he is. He will take the crown of honor and glory and place it upon His worthy head that He may reign as King of kings in the kingdom within him, shedding His light, teaching His ways and sanctifying him through His truth. This Lord of humility, who so gently knocks at our door, is to become our first and greatest love. Our heart will burn within us as He opens His eternal truth and reveals the purposes, which were in His mind before anything was.

He tells me of the years that went before me
When heavenly plans were made for me to be;
When all was but a dream of dim conception,
To come to life, earth's verdant glories see.

In this evening hour of the age, in which Laodicea, swelled with carnal pride, proclaims, "I am rich and increased with goods and have need of nothing", knowing not at all that she is wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked, let him who would be wise open the door that Christ may come in to abide, bringing with Him all the fruits and graces of the eternal realm to adorn the temple which he is forevermore.

"If any man think that he knoweth anything, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know. But if a man love God, the same is known of Him." 1 Cor. 8:2 The man who knows the most is the man who best understands his own ignorance, but the man who thinks he knows is the man who will discover in the end that he knows nothing as he ought to know. The gross imperfection of human knowledge is always evident. "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned" 1 Cor. 2:14 "For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him? Even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God." 1 Cor. 2:11 Never, never try to pry into the things of God with the natural mind, for "the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God." Never enter into an argument concerning the things of God. God will not be present in your argument, but will leave both you and your adversary in darkness. But, if you will say, "Lord, open mine eyes that I may behold wondrous things out of Thy law", then the Lord will open your eyes. If you will pray, "Lord, reveal the truth of this difficult text", presently you will find its mysteries unfold and your understanding will be enlightened.

There is much subtle truth in these words of Jesus: "For judgment am I come into the world, that they which see not might see; and they that see might be made blind." When the Pharisees, who thought they knew just about everything, asked, "Are we blind also", Jesus replied, "If ye were blind, ye should have no sin: but now ye say, We see; therefore your sin remaineth." John 9:39, 41 Had these people been willing to say, "We know nothing yet as we ought to know", and so confess the darkness of their human understanding, then would the Lord have removed the scales from their eyes and the truth would have been made known to them; but because they said, "We are not blind. We see", then the Lord had no choice but to leave them in darkness. Many blind were healed by the power of Christ, but only those who knew they were blind and asked that their eyes be opened. If, therefore, we confess our blindness and lack of wisdom, the Lord will give us the wisdom that is from above, but if we say, "I see; I know; I understand", we will discover in the end that we knew nothing as we ought to know.

We love the preaching of the cross because we have found it to be the power of God unto salvation to every one that believes. For this reason we glory and exult in it. But to them that perish the preaching of the cross is foolishness, because there seems to be no wisdom in it. The corrupt and carnal mind will often ask, "Why could God not have saved the world some other way?" They cannot grasp the truth that "except a com of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it brings forth much fruit." Neither do they perceive that only by death could Jesus Christ "shed forth" eternal life to all creation. Acts 2:32,33; Titus 3:6. Never did Jesus give eternal life to any man before His blood was shed. The life is in the blood, but when He died, eternal life was shed abroad with the promise, "Whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely."

The preaching of the cross is foolishness to the natural man, but thus saith the Lord: The wisdom of man is foolishness with God. "For it is written, I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and the cleverness of the clever I will thwart. Where is the wise man? Where is the scribe? Where is the debater of this age? Has not God made foolish the wisdom of the world? For since, in the wisdom of God, the world did not know God through wisdom, it pleased God through the folly of what we preached to save those who believe. For the Jews demand signs and the Greeks seek wisdom, but we preach Christ crucified, a stumbling block to the Jews and folly to the Gentiles, but to those who are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God. For the foolishness of God is wiser than men and the weakness of God stronger than men." 1 Cor. 1:18-25 R.S.V.

The sermon preached by Paul on Mars Hill and recorded in Acts 17:22-34 is believed to be the second most eloquent speech ever made, but it accomplished very little and made but few converts, because the whole sermon was an appeal to the wisdom of man. It may have been a difficult lesson for the apostle to learn, because he, too, was a man of great learning; but when Paul left Athens and came to Corinth, he abandoned forever all dependence upon human argument and the wisdom of this world. "I came NOT with excellency of speech or of wisdom, declaring unto you the testimony of God. For I determined to know nothing among you, save Jesus Christ, and Him crucified." 1 Cor. 2:1-2 That, beloved friend, is the wisdom of God. "I was with you in weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling," he wrote, "and my speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power: that your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God." 1 Cor. 2:3-5

In verse six Paul begins to introduce a further wisdom. It is the wisdom that comes by spiritual revelation and can be imparted only to those who are coming to perfection and who walk in humility with Christ. It is not for the proud or the scornful, nor is it for any kind of public display. "Howbeit we speak wisdom among them that are perfect: yet not the wisdom of this world, nor of the princes of this world, that come to nought: but we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom, which God ordained before the world unto our glory." Verses 6-8 Here is an exceedingly great truth. Here is wisdom, which the world has never learned; neither can they ever know it or learn it. Furthermore we must confess that the wisdom, which God ordained before the world unto our glory is a wisdom, which only a handful of Christians ever come to know. So many Christians are like little children playing with their toys. They become so involved with their activities, their doctrine, their experiences, their joys and sorrows that they never become acquainted with the eternal wisdom which God ordained for us before the world was. The things which eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man are never revealed to them, because they are inclined to imagine that they know all there is to know and understand all there is to understand. Because they say, "We see", therefore they remain blind.

Though I loved God from the beginning of my walk with him and rejoice greatly in the salvation He imparted, I must confess that it was not until the Holy Spirit began to unfold the hidden mysteries, ordained before the world began, that I really became enraptured with an ever deepening, ever widening love for the Father, who purposed all things from the dawn of creation and who now manifests His power in gathering all things into Himself. When He revealed by the wisdom of His Spirit that "of Him and through Him and to Him are all things", Rom. 11:36, or, as Goodspeed translates it, "From Him everything comes, by Him everything exists, and in Him everything ends", then my love became ever increasing and shall know no bounds at all.

From his storehouse of spiritual understanding Paul says, "Among the pure we do impart wisdom, although it is not a wisdom of this age or of the rulers of this age, who are doomed to pass away. But we impart a secret and hidden wisdom of God, which God decreed before the ages for our glorification. None of the rulers of this age understood this; for if they had, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory. But, as it is written, What no eye has seen, nor ear heard, nor the heart of man conceived, what God has prepared for those that love Him, God has revealed to us through His Spirit. For the Spirit searches everything, even the depths of God." 1 Cor. 2:6-10. R.S.V.
Not many saints have been wise according to worldly standards. Not many were powerful. Not many were of noble birth. But God chose what is foolish in the world to shame the wise. God chose what is weak to shame the strong. God chose what is low and despised by the world to bring to nothing the honorable and the mighty that no man might boast in His presence. Jesus Christ is the source of all true wisdom and understanding; therefore let him that boasts boast in the Lord. If any man love God, the same is known of Him. Knowledge puffeth up, but charity edifieth. The wisdom of the world puffeth up, but the love of God buildeth up. Knowledge with conceit fills the mind with wind, so that it is puffed up, and often tends to be hurtful to others as well as ourselves, but love edifies ourselves and seeks to build up others. He that knows most best understands his own ignorance and grasps the imperfection of all human nature. He who thinks himself a man of knowledge and is vain about it has reason to suspect that he knows nothing aright or as he ought to know. The man who loves God is taught of God. He drinks deeply of His Spirit and the Spirit in turn reveals the things, which eye cannot see, nor ear hear, neither can enter the heart of man.

A wise old owl sat in an oak.
The more he saw, the less he spoke.
The less he spoke, the more he heard;
God make us like that wise old bird!

Here within the confines of one text we have the true secret of understanding. First, "If any man thinketh he knoweth anything, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know", and second, "If any man love God, the same is known of Him."

In all the world there is no greater darkness than that which encompasses the man who is ignorant of his Maker and his Maker's purpose. All the dreadful turmoil and strife in the world in our day has come upon us because practically none of the leaders knows anything of God's will. God is not in all their thoughts, nor is He in any of their actions. While they profess to know God, in works they deny Him, being abominable and disobedient and unto every good work reprobate. The solutions to the world's problems are actually exceedingly simple. There is nothing complicated about our problems if we would take God's way, but, because man is intent upon dethroning the Lord and Creator of the universe and putting Babylon's god of gold on the throne, all becomes confusion. Because carnal man does not want to retain God in his knowledge, the Lord has given him a reprobate mind to do the things, which are not convenient. You wonder continually why the politicians make such utterly stupid decisions about almost everything? It is because God has given them over to a reprobate mind to do those things that are not convenient. Rom 1:28.

But, if any man love God, that man is known of God. Centuries ago there lived a man, Abraham by name, who loved God and walked with Him. We know him as one of the patriarchs, but in everyday life he was, in fact, a very successful rancher. The Bible tells us of the great herds of cattle he possessed and of his herdsmen and riches. Many times, no doubt, he himself rode the range and branded the cattle, doing the many other menial chores that always accompany the life of cattlemen. We conclude, then, that even Abraham, the great father of the hosts of Israel and the recipient of the everlasting covenants of God, was in fact a very ordinary man, who in his daily life loved God and walked with Him. Paul has just told us that, if any man love God, God knows that man, and this is a statement of complete truth. It was true in the case of Paul. It was true in the case of Abraham; and it is equally true of you and me.

Hear the record concerning Abraham: "And the Lord said, Shall I hide from Abraham that thing which I do; seeing that Abraham shall surely become a great and mighty nation, and all the nations of the earth shall be blessed in him?" Gen. 18:17-18 Consider what a great and all encompassing statement that is. Take time to meditate upon it, for it is wonderful. But also hear the words, which follow and see the true reason why the Lord placed so much confidence in this man. We have already said that Abraham loved God and walked with Him. Therefore, the Lord says of him, "For I know him." Is that not exactly what Paul is telling us when he says that, if we love God, He knows us? On the occasion of the destruction of Sodom, Lot is placed among the righteous. He too was very rich and powerful, but Lot, alas, had far more love for the well, watered plains of Jordan than he had for his God. Of Abraham the Lord said, "I know him", and this is what He knew about him: "He will command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the Lord, to do justice and judgment; that the Lord may bring upon Abraham that which He hath spoken of him." Gen. 18:19 "If any man thinketh he knoweth anything, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know." "If any man love Me, My Father will love him, and We will come unto him, and make Our abode with him."

IF ANY MAN SAY

"Then if any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is Christ, or there; believe it not. For there shall arise false christs, and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect. Behold, I have told you before. Wherefore if they shall say unto you, Behold, He is in the desert, go not forth; behold, He is in the secret chambers; believe it not." Matt. 24:23-26

Our Lord, in this passage, is warning all mankind and His elect in particular of the ever increasing power of deception that will darken the earth at the end of this age to deceive, if possible, even the very elect. Many among us are puzzled as to whether or not the elect can be deceived, and I am by no means certain, but whereas Peter wrote, saying, "Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure," would this not indicate that, should we become slack and indolent concerning our election and thus fail to run the race with patience and diligence, we as others may find ourselves deceived? There is one correct state of mind and only one for every saint to maintain. It is this: "Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect: but I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus." Phil. 3:12

The parable of the ten virgins gives proof enough that many grow careless about their walk. They allowed sleep and slumber to take over their lives to such an extent that they neglected to have the oil of the Spirit in their vessels. Then, when the bridegroom came, they were unprepared and tried hastily to buy oil to replenish their dwindling supply.

Perhaps we are wasting words by reiterating that we are now living in the end of the days, foretold by Daniel the prophet. Desperate days are upon the world and, by the time this writing is read, there will be ever increasing sorrow. There is only one place of true safety. It is not among the blind multitude of Laodicean Christendom. It is not in the temple, the church building or the tabernacle. Neither is it in the dens and caves of earth. It is in the secret place of the most High. It is where saints abide under the shadow of the Almighty. There in that holy habitation our spirit can abide safely. There none need fear, though earth be removed and the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea. There the Lord is our fortress. He is our God; we may safely trust in Him. He will deliver us from the snare of the fowler and from the noisome pestilence. He will cover us with His feathers, and under His wings shall we trust. His truth shall be our shield and buckler. We need not fear the deadly arrows by day nor the destruction that wastes at noonday. A thousand shall fall at our side, but it shall not come nigh us. Only with our eyes shall we see the reward of the wicked. "Because thou hast made the Lord, which is my refuge, even the most High, thy habitation; there shall no evil befall thee, neither shall any plague come nigh thy dwelling." See Psalm 91

Learn to dwell in the secret place. Find time when the day is young to wait on the Lord. Place the word of God before you as you kneel before Him. Let Him unfold His mysteries as you read. Feel His overshadowing power and know the blessing of His abiding confidence within yourself. Should our Lord Jesus tarry longer, the darkness without will greatly increase, as evil men and seducers, already thick about us, increase more and more.

Concerning the statement, "This know also, that evil men and seducers will wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived", you will notice that such people are not only intent on deceiving others but are themselves deceived, and as a natural consequence of their deception they forge confidently ahead, endeavoring to deceive all who will heed their deception. They have, in fact, come to believe they are right. There are few people in all the world who actually believe they are deceived. It would be presumptuous here to attempt to write down numerous guidelines against error. There is something more important than that. Jesus told us that false prophets would come and that their coming is to be a sign of the end of the age. Do not go to your neighbor or some preacher to get a human opinion. You will probably get the wrong answer. There is a much better way than this to know good and evil. Instead of seeking human opinions, go directly to your Father in heaven. He will make the truth known to you.
"Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they be of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world. Hereby know ye the Spirit of God: every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God: and every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God: and this is that spirit of antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come; and even now already is it in the world." 1 John 4:1-3

Every Christian has, or should have, an unction from the Holy One. The word unction really means anointing. As one would anoint our head with oil for healing, so Jesus Christ has anointed us with the Holy Spirit, who is here likened to oil. This anointing is that we might know all things. Therefore the apostle by the Spirit says, "Ye have an unction from the Holy One, and ye know all things." 1 John 2:20.

John did not mean that we would know everything in the world. The Holy Spirit shows us and makes us perceive only those things that are necessary for us to know. If we will keep in union with the Holy Spirit, depending on Him for instruction, He will give us an inner witness as to whether the spirits are of men or Satan or God. All who read should take solemn warning that in these days of darkness and deception there are many who seem to be saying the right thing, but whose spirits are altogether wrong. They may be likened to the soothsayer who, in the days of Paul, called out in public for many days, "These men are the servants of the most high God, which shew unto us the way of salvation." What this young woman was saying was true enough, but her spirit was wrong and her heart was not right with God. After several days of this Satanic advertising, Paul was so disturbed by the spirit that motivated the girl that he turned to her and cast the spirit from her. Here surely is an excellent example, showing us that the unction from the Holy One does teach us all things that we may know in our spirits what is right and what is wrong, and thus discern both good and evil. Never permit a man or a woman to sell either themselves or their programs to you. You will be deceived if you do.

The Holy Spirit must always be our teacher. We have no need that any man teach us, "but the anointing (unction) which ye have received of Him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man should teach you: but as the same anointing teacheth you all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in Him." 1 John 2:27

There is a world of spiritual truth in the word abide. "Abide in Me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine, no more can ye, except ye abide in Me." John 15:4. We must therefore conclude that every work that is begun outside the purpose and plan of God is a useless program. Like a dead branch it is cut off from the vine to wither away. Letter after letter comes to my desk with a gift envelope enclosed, begging shamelessly for help to carry on some grandiose program. Many of these people are working themselves breathless with one man-made scheme after another. May I ask you this: If Christ sent them to do the work, why did He not supply its needs without their begging and pleading for human aid? Why would the Lord not lay the need of His work on the hearts of the faithful if the work is of Him? Has His word not told us that the Lord will supply all our needs according to His riches in glory by Christ Jesus? Phil. 4:19. If the Lord sent these messengers, would He not supply their need as He did for His disciples? Luke 22:35. The Lord never intended that His ministers would be mendicants, beggars, and bums. If He will not supply their need, would they not be perfectly justified in laying down their tools and quitting? I certainly think so. If God is going to tell me to do a work and then leave me to my own resources, to beg and plead with men, and often sinful men, to accomplish it, then there is undoubtedly something wrong somewhere. God's people should never be deceived by the reasoning of these self-appointed promoters of God's work. The whole thing smacks of human fraudulence and hocus-pocus trickery. This type of work is carried on outside of the plan of the Lord. It may appear good, but it is of the flesh and smells of the flesh. How often I have heard preachers describe their great work of soul-saving, healing, missions, Bible schools, ad infinitum, and then have them say, "This is a work of faith, and unless you people get behind me with your finances, it will go under. God is depending on you." How sad a statement that is and how well it reveals their fraud? "In the latter days ye shall consider it perfectly. I have not sent these prophets yet they ran: I have not spoken to them, yet they prophesied." Jer. 23:20-21. Never depend on what men say. Depend on the Spirit to guide you and teach you all things. He is truth and will guide His people into all truth.

Jesus said, "If any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is Christ, or there, believe it not." If they shall tell you that Christ is in the wilderness or the desert, go not forth. If they say He is in some secret chamber, believe it not. In these dread days it is of ever increasing importance that the elect should separate themselves from the Babylon of the church system. This confused harlot, drunken with the blood of the saints, rich and increased in goods and having need of nothing, adorned with gold and silver and costly array, lounging in plush pews and entertained by elegant choirs, eloquent orators and super-star entertainers is the greatest deceiver and false christ in the world. If we are to be received as sons of God, our first command and obligation is to sever all relationship with her. Rev. 18:4,5. The effect of revelation and newly discovered truth flourishing in the heart of the believer is often lost to him, simply because he will not separate from this harlot system and come out from among them and be separate. How, you ask, can a system that is so attractive from without be so evil within? Do you not know that harlots are always unclean, no matter how beautifully they bedeck themselves? Go their way at your peril and the same rotting disease that curses them will soon be devouring you also. The promise of sonship is only to those who come out from among them. "Be separate," Paul says, "and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." 2 Cor. 6:17 Such challenging promises are not to those cushioned believers who delight themselves in plush churches and interesting programs, who keep the program afloat with gymnasiums, food, fun, and fellowship, and a hundred other fleshly notions. This promise flings down the gauntlet, challenging saints to heed the voice of Christ: "Come out! Be separate! Touch not the unclean thing!" To all such the promise is sure, "I will be a Father to you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters."

Disobedience to the call to come out from among them constitutes rebellion against the Lord. In scripture the word iniquity means rebellion and disobedience. Many who have been called have not been chosen simply because they walked in disobedience, heedless of the voice of the Spirit calling them to abandon the harlot system and abide in Christ. It is the Holy Spirit, the anointing, the unction that teaches that which is right and that which is wrong, that which is of Christ and that which is not.

Beware, then, of what men say in these evil days. Remember that Jesus warned us that there would be false prophets. False prophets are always saying, saying, but beware of what they say. Do men ask, "Where are these false prophets?" Don't look for them on the street or in the desert. The existing church system is full of them. You will find them standing in the pulpits Sunday and week-day. They are highly thought of and highly paid. They are as sure they are right as were the prophets of Baal. They are also positive that the solitary Eljahs are wrong. As evil men and seducers wax worse and worse, these prophets with their false gospel add to all manner of delinquency. Consequently the world sinks deeper and deeper into sin and, while it sinks, these men imagine we are in the midst of a world-wide revival. We are, but it is not a revival of faith in Christ; it is rather a revival of the very sins that caused Sodom to be devoured with unquenchable fire and that brought the flood on the world of the ungodly in the days of Noah.

"Let no man deceive you, for that day shall not come except there be & falling away first." That falling away is here now. It is everywhere. It is in the government, in the palace, in the courts of law. It is in the universities and colleges. It is in the homes, on the streets, and worst of all it is in the church system. It is in the pew and in the pulpit. It is in the hearts of the populace. The man of sin, the Antichrist, is very evident in the world, but few see him or recognize him. He who opposeth and exalteth himself above God and all that is worshipped so that he, as God, sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is Vicarius Filii Dei - that is, vicar of Christ or instead of Christ - is not recognized for what he is, but is lauded as the greatest religious leader of our day. Beware lest any man deceive you, saying, "Here is Christ," or, "Lo here," or "Lo there," or "Lo, He is in the secret chamber."

Paul taught us that in the last days there would be many lying signs and wonders. 2 Thess. 2:9. He taught that these signs would be with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish, because they did not love the truth, and, because they did not love the truth, the Lord sends them strong delusion that they all may be condemned, who loved not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness. Beware of what men say in these last days. Beware of things that look good and are not. Beware of false christs, false prophets and deceivers. There is one mediator between God and man - the man Christ Jesus. If, therefore, any church says that theirs is the one way to God, it immediately becomes a false christ. Believe them not.

In these perilous times such as the world has never known, if any man thirst or hunger or if any man lack wisdom, guidance or perception, let him come to Christ, who giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not. "If any man thirst, let him come unto Me and drink."
CHAPTER FIVE
WORKERS TOGETHER WITH GOD

The Lord has purposed to create through His Son Jesus Christ an entirely new race of men. The first Adam was made a living soul and all his children are like unto him, but the last Adam, the Lord Jesus Christ, was made a life, giving Spirit, 1 Cor. 15:45, and all who are partakers of Him are like Him, for "He that believeth on Me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly (that is, his innermost being or his inner man) shall flow rivers of living water. This spake He of the Spirit, which they that believe on Him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given, because that Jesus was not yet glorified." John 7:38-39

Just as surely as He is a life, giving spirit, so also shall they be who, believing on Him, forsake the deadness of Adam's race to become heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ. As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. Every man will partake of this glory in his own order or in his own company. The initial company is called the first fruit, the members of Christ's body. The second will be those that are His at His coming, and the third company will appear at the end, when Christ has delivered up the kingdom to the Father. Cf. 1 Cor. 15:23,24

It needed neither faith nor grace to become members of the family of the first Adam. We were born into that family without any choice that we know of, partaking freely of its death and bondage, its carnality and its proneness to sin. "Behold, I was shapen in iniquity; and in sin (rebellion) did my mother conceive me", was the tearful lament of the Psalmist, Psa. 51:5, and it may be truthfully said that every writer of the inspired Bible echoes the same refrain. "All our righteousnesses are filthy rags," says Isaiah. "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God," says Paul. "When He (the Spirit) is come, He will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment," said Jesus. And so on and on goes the condemnation teaching us beyond all doubt that in Adam all die.

Let no man vainly think that by refining or reforming the old nature he can make himself acceptable with God. There must be a birth into a new family, even the family of God. There must be a rebirth of the spirit and this will be followed by a rebirth of the soul and finally a rebirth of the body as well, for even this corruptible must put on incorruption. And when this corruptible has put on incorruption and this mortal has put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, "Death is swallowed up in victory." Then shall every voice in that new creation joyfully sing, "Oh death, where is thy sting? Oh grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin; and the strength of sin is the law. But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." 1 Cor. 15:55-57

Faith unites the soul to Christ as a wife is united to her husband. As she becomes bone of his bone and flesh of his flesh, a member of her husband's body and through him a member of his family, so also all who believe into Him become members of Him, being bone of His bone, flesh of His flesh, and spirit of His Spirit. For by (in) one Spirit are we all baptized into one body... and have been all made to drink into one Spirit. 1 Cor. 12:13 The God of all grace in His mercy and loving kindness has made this great redemption to rest upon His Son, Jesus Christ. It is the grace of God that brings salvation to the individual and it is the same grace of God that brings the individual to salvation. There is no desire in man to serve God, for his nature grows ever more corrupt and wicked, but God in His loving kindness undertakes the work of conviction and places in the unregenerate heart a desire for forgiveness and unity with God. It is not man but God who puts within the penitent heart the prayer, "Have mercy upon me, O God, according to Thy loving kindness: according to the multitude of Thy tender mercies blot out my transgressions. Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin. For I acknowledge my transgressions, and my sin is ever before me." Psa. 51:1-3

I would to God that the clearness of understanding that filled David's heart would possess all God's people today as he continued, "Against Thee, Thee only have I sinned, and done this evil in Thy sight: that Thou mightest be justified when Thou speakest and be clear when Thou judgest." The wisdom of God leaves no stones unturned to convince us that we are sinners indeed and that God is clearly right in pronouncing judgment upon us. The fall of a righteous man into some beggarly iniquity is often permitted of God to convince him that there is none righteous, no, not one.

I am sure that many sermons have been preached on the kindness of God, but I must admit that I have never yet heard one. Perhaps such woeful lack and omission is due to the fact that tradition has taught us to regard God as a sort of stern bookkeeper, never so delighted as when He finds some evil which He may mark down against us. But God is full of kindness and His mercies endure unto every generation. His kindness is the kindness of love, full of grace and pity because it is full of all wisdom and understanding. It is from His loving kindness and tender mercies that the grace of God flows, bringing salvation through Jesus Christ to all the world and to all the universe as well, for He is kind to the unthankful and to the evil. Luke 6:35

The kindness of God appeared when the world was in its direst need. Before ever judgment falls, the God of all grace and kindness remembers mercy. "For we ourselves also were sometimes foolish, disobedient, deceived, serving divers lusts and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful, and hating one another. But after that the kindness and love of God our Saviour toward man appeared, not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to His mercy He saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost; which He shed on us abundantly..." Titus 3:3-5

It was at the time when one would think that the judgment of God should irrevocably fall that His kindness toward us was manifested. Even in the days of Noah the longsuffering of God waited while the ark was preparing. And in the days of Sodom the angels of the Lord were sent to retrieve all that could be called righteous, and others besides. Even so it is now in this the end of the age when every sin of Noah's day is manifest among us and unto them are added the iniquities of Sodom and Gomorrah, together with the sins of the Canaanite and the Amorite. Yet God in loving kindness and tender mercy manifests His grace and longsuffering toward the earth, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance.

"... Thou art a God ready to pardon," said Nehemiah, "gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and forsookest them not. Yea, when they had made a molten calf, and said, This is thy God that brought thee up out of Egypt, and had wrought great provocations; Yet Thou in Thy manifold mercies forsookest them not in the wilderness." Neh. 9:17-18

Men in their distress have howled against God, saying, "Surely I don't deserve such chastisement as this!" Ah, ignorant man! Charge not God with foolishness, for the smiting of the righteous Lord is an excellent oil and a great kindness. Our trouble lies in the fact that we are setting our affections upon gaining a little earthly kingdom for ourselves. We are determined to accomplish the desires of our own hearts, and we have forgotten that we are not our own; we are bought with a price. We who are being prepared for His body, for His sonship, and for the government of the world when the times are ripe for it must have no ambition but His purpose, no love but what He loves, and no kingdom but His kingdom. "Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth; keep the door of my lips. Incline not my heart to any evil thing, to practice wicked works with men that work iniquity: and let me not eat of their dainties. Let the righteous smite me; it shall be a kindness: and let him reprove me; it shall be an excellent oil which shall not break my head..." Psa. 141:3-5 The calamities that come upon us come from the kindness and love of God, for when calamity comes, earth recedes. Our love of the passing begins to fade away like mists before the rising sun, and we relinquish our hold on things that are not enduring to lay hold on life that it may be our joy and crown forever.

There is a moment in the springtime of our lives when we foolishly imagine that we have the world by the tail with a down hill pull. Life, the world, and all things in it seemed to be a glittering plaything, a bowl of cherries, a lovely bunch of coconuts as we greeted each new day with new health, new life, new strength and new ambitions. But every man in his own order soon begins to discover that the thing he thought would be the glittering prize brought only momentary satisfaction. Gradually we awoke to discover that things are not as we thought they were. Something had gone wrong with our little glittering world of make-believe. Things were not going to go as we had planned. The world was not going to dance to our will as a yo-yo in our hand. God had higher thoughts than that we should live after the world, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and the mind. He has greater and much more enduring things in store, for "Thou, O Lord, hast made us for Thyself and we are restless until we rest in Thee."

Thus it is a great kindness that God should smite us with the smiting of correction that He should correct us with the rod of great affliction and spare us not at all for our crying. Full well He knows that ancient truth, "If thou beat him, he will not die, but thou shalt deliver his soul from hell." For "whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth and scourgeth every son whom He receiveth. If we receive not chastisement, whereof all are..."
partakers, then are we bastards and not sons. The man who cannot receive the chastening rod without charging God foolishly is a bastard and not a son. He is a man without a wedding robe, one who has climbed up some other way, but has not entered through the door, which is Christ. God is far more concerned about preparing us for sonship and our particular place in His body than He is in momentarily pleasing us with the trinkets of our own choosing. I am fully aware that the mushrooming, snowballing delinquency of our present day with its ever increasing sin and violence must be laid at the door of parents who are delinquent and lax in authority and chastening, who have discarded the instructions of Solomon to embrace the stupidity of psychologists. Let none ever imagine that God has yielded to the demands of men, for His method of producing sons is ever the same. "Whom the Lord loveth He correcteth and scourgeth every son whom He receiveth."

"Oh how great is Thy goodness, which Thou hast laid up for them that fear Thee; which Thou hast wrought for them that trust in Thee before the sons of men! Thou shalt hide them in the secret of Thy presence from the pride of men: Thou shalt keep them secretly in a pavilion from the strife of tongues. Blessed be the Lord; for He hath shewed me His marvelous kindness in a strong city. For I said in my haste, I am cut off from before Thine eyes: Nevertheless Thou heardest the voice of my supplications when I cried unto Thee."

Ps. 31:19-22 From the loving kindness of God for all His creations flows forth His grace in unmerited favor to all creation; for after that the kindness and love of God our Saviour toward all men appeared, not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to His mercy He saved us, by the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Ghost, which He shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Saviour, that, being justified by His grace, we should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life.

O soul, tossed by the tempest of life, frustrated by the oft repeated chastenings of the Lord, for His sake "killed all the day long", suffering temporal loss, and bereavement too heavy to bear, forsaken and grieved as a widow in her youth, behold the loving kindness of the Lord as He speaks these words to your heart! "For a small moment have I forsaken thee; but with great mercies I will gather thee. In a little wrath I hid My face from thee for a moment; but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the Lord thy Redeemer." Isa. 54:7-8

The grace of God has a teaching all its own. We have perhaps listened to carnal minds propounding the grace of God as opposed to the law of Moses, but I fear greatly that many of them have received the grace of God in vain, knowing neither what they speak nor whereof they affirm. The apostle Paul, to whom the entire dispensation of grace was given as a gospel which he calls my gospel, Rom. 2:16, gives us the precious heart of the teaching of grace in these inspired words; "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world; looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ; Who gave Himself for us that He might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto Himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works." Titus 2:11-14

That happy soul who is made partaker of the grace of God, so far from hoping to use such infinite grace for an occasion to the flesh and thus receiving it in vain, has found that by the grace of God all that Christ has becomes the property of the believer. Just as He is, so are we in this world. The believer becomes an heir of God and a joint heir with Christ. When Jesus Christ gave Himself for us, He willed to us all the possessions of heaven and eternity. He made us partakers both of the divine nature and of all the graces and virtues of that blessed nature.

Christ possesses every blessing of eternal salvation. This by grace He bestows upon the believer. The soul possesses every vice and sin as a member of the family of the first Adam, but these by God's grace become the property of Christ the redeemer, being atoned for by His blood and swallowed up forever in Him. "For He hath made Him to be sin for us, who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him." 2 Cor. 5:21 Thus he who receives God's grace is not only delivered and cleansed from all sin, but is made a partaker of His glory, His majesty, and His honor. The strange paradox now ensues that he who has been made free, being delivered from the slavery of sin, by God's grace now voluntarily becomes a love slave of Jesus Christ, serving freely, joyfully, and gratuitously. "Therefore it is of faith that it might be by grace; to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed; not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all." Rom. 4:16

Instead of grace teaching that we, being free from the law, may now live as we please, the grace of God teaches us to deny ungodliness and worldly lusts. Ungodliness has increased many fold during the last years, not only in the world, but in the church system as well. We are now living in the day of which Paul was speaking when he said that men would be lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. 2 Tim. 3:4. Was there ever an age during the last six thousand years to which such a saying would be more applicable? The whole world, especially the western world, is pleasure mad, and even Christians for the most part love pleasure and the things of this present life more than they love God. All too often conversation is filled with the affairs of this present life, their books, their pastimes, and their friends, their business, their homes and their dress, but how often they become dumb as oysters at the very mention of the eternal things they ought to know. While the names of the stars of the sport and entertainment worlds are household words with them, the Bible is a back shelf book and its life-giving truth is scarcely known.

But for all this these people have a form of godliness and forms of godliness are greatly increased. Ever since the beginning of the Ecumenical movement belonging to a church has become the popular thing. As one society woman flippantly said, "It's chic to be born again." Such frivolous talk is as a jewel of gold in the snout of a swine or the crackling of thorns under a pot. Pseudo revivals seem to be the order of the day, for, wherever the limitation of truth is rampant, both force and power are stolen from reality. Whenever a true prophet speaks in the name of the Lord, Satan raises up false prophets that their very existence will annul the truth. There was one prophet of God in Israel in the days of Ahab, but there were four hundred prophets of Baal. The average is not dissimilar today in this wicked Babylon of confusion in which we dwell. For every man today who speaks the pure truth from God there are four hundred who prophesy lies to please the pleasure loving throng. Long ago the weeping prophet Jeremiah lamented in these terrible words: "A wonderful and horrible thing is committed in the land: the prophets prophesy falsely, and the priests bear rule by their means; and My people love to have it so: and what will we do in the end thereof?" Jer. 5:30-31 How often I have heard prophesies flowing from the mind of man, effusing words of butter and honey intended only to please the person or persons to whom they were directed! How often sermons were preached to curry the favor of the rich or honor those who have greater prestige! "Therefore hear, O earth: behold, I will bring evil upon this people, even the fruit of their thoughts, because they have not hearkened unto My words, nor to My law, but rejected it." Cursed be the lips of him who thus turns the grace of God into lasciviousness, denying the only Lord God and the Lord Jesus Christ. Lasciviousness (wanton desire) is but the work of the flesh and has nothing to do with the grace of God, which teaches us to deny both ungodliness and worldly lusts as well.

Furthermore the grace of God teaches that we should live soberly. The word of God has much to say about sobriety, which teaches us to realize the importance and seriousness of life as opposed to those who are immoderate, impassioned, and intemperate. It is not without purpose that Paul fervently exhorted the Christians, saying, "Ye are all the children of light and the children of the day: we are not of the night nor of darkness. Therefore let us not sleep as do others; but let us watch and be sober." 1 Thess. 5:5-6 And again in verse 8: "But let us who are of the day be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love; and for an helmet, the hope of salvation." To the bishops he wrote, "A bishop must be sober." 1 Tim. 3:2 He exhorted the wives of the deacons, saying that the deacons wives must be sober and faithful. 1 Tim. 3:11 The aged men also were to be both sober and grave. Titus 2:2 "Therefore gird up the loins of your mind; be sober and hope to the end." 1 Pet. 1:13 "But the end of all things is at hand: be ye therefore sober and watch unto prayer." 1 Pet. 4:7 Your adversary the devil as a roaring lion walketh about seeking whom he may devour; therefore, be sober and vigilant. This, then, is the message of the grace of God, that He appeared to all men, teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world. Furthermore the grace of God teaches us that we should live as people who are looking for that blessed hope and for the glorious appearing of our great God and Saviour, Jesus Christ. Titus 2:13 Many have been the inspired warnings concerning the hour in which we live, for we live in an hour when men can say with a measure of truth, "Since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the foundation of the world." We are living in a day when it is easy for the heart to become engrossed with the cares of this world and the deceitfulness of riches and the lusts of other things entering in. It is easy to allow the heart to be overcome with surfeiting and drunkenness and all the ways of the world. But it is in just such a time as this that our blessed Lord will come. Therefore let your lamps be burning and your loins girded with truth, and be like those who wait for their Lord, lest coming suddenly He find you sleeping. Thus the grace of God has appeared to all men, teaching us to deny all fleshly lust and ungodliness, to live soberly in the midst of this crooked and perverse generation, all the time looking and waiting for that blessed hope that cannot long be delayed.

We are without doubt living in one of the most awkward and distressing periods of human history. The prophet Daniel spoke of the wearing out of the saints of the Most High. Dan. 7:25 Possibly we do not yet understand the fullness of his meaning, but surely every man who is pressing toward the kingdom of God must have found that his very path seems to be paved with quicksand, and, were it not for enduring faith and patience, all would be engulfed in the sucking whirlpool that is the spirit of this age.

A worldly saying readily upon the lips of almost all people is this: "I couldn't care less"; and in this saying they speak the truth, for there never was such a careless age as this. It matters not in what direction you look, you will find rampant carelessness and indifference. While once men preached the gospel at the risk of their lives, now people "couldn't care less" what you preach. If you speak the truth, who cares? If you preach error, that is your privilege. Whereas under the law of Moses a necromancer was put to death, today they interview him on the radio, and nobody cares. Men couldn't care less about your political beliefs and they couldn't care less about your spiritual beliefs. This, of course, is supposed to be a good thing, but be fully warned that, good as it may seem, it is a dangerous thing, because without opposition we become easy prey to indifference. We grow careless and cold, and the Lord at His coming finds us sleeping.

It was tragic when martyrs were burned to death for the truth's sake, but such trying persecutions proved that divine metal was in their souls. They knew where they stood. Their hope was in God alone. Their spirits were not in bondage to the pleasure god of the day. Either men were out and out for God or else absorbed in the wretched and sordid doctrines and errors of the day. But in this age in which we live, the most deceptive of all times, indifference fills the very atmosphere and people couldn't care less what we think or teach or preach or believe. Whether we worship God or the devil, the indifferent of this age couldn't care less. Is it any wonder that the congregation at Laodicea, which represented the church at the end of the age, was described as lukewarm, neither hot nor cold and ready to be spued from the mouth of the Lord?

Let us therefore watch and be sober. Let us learn to know God and fellowship with Christ, for herein lies our only safety. If men know what hour the thief will come, they will watch and not suffer their house to be broken into, and if men know from what direction the thief is approaching, they will also watch and be ready. But in this present hour falsehood parades in the garments of truth. Wolves are ever present in the garments of sheep. Even devils are being transformed into angels of light. There are false apostles, false miracle workers, false teachers, false evangelists, and false pastors. People are preaching without a message. They are writing things not worthy of the paper on which they are printed. There seems to be a craze, an insanity, hi the hearts of people to purport to speak in the name of the Lord. Everyone has a doctrine, everyone has a program, and the vast majority are filled with a desire to gather a group about themselves in hope of personal gain.

Let us steadfastly refuse to become followers of men. Rather be ye followers of God as dear children and walk in love as Christ has loved us. There was a day when men felt they could not be saved at all unless they belonged to the Pope's church, however dissolute he may have been, but the Reformation changed the minds of millions, teaching them that the just live by faith, for it is by the grace of God that we are saved through the merits of the precious blood of Christ, which was shed for the sins of the whole world and without which no man can be saved. But time has taken its fearful toll, for God's people have become entangled with the multiplied harlots of the Babylon system until today they are more entangled and ensnared by denominations, sects, religious leaders, and religious rites than they were in the dark ages of Romanism, that debauched and unchaste mother of all harlots and abominations of the earth.

The bondage of tradition has so captivated the minds of Christians that they know not that a man can walk with God separate and apart from doctrines of men and traditions that make the word of God of none effect. Not only can we walk apart from them but being apart from them is our only hope of spiritual progress. The law of retrogression is at work in every religious system as surely as the rock decays and the dead tree returns to dust. How then do you ever expect to progress with God while your life is buried in the retrograde traditions you have embraced so long? I know of a truth that, the moment the chains of tradition begin to fall from your ankles, your feet will begin to tread in the paths that Jesus trod. No longer will you plead, "Lord, we know not whither Thou goest, and how can we know the way?" But you will hear Him saying to your deepest spirit, "I am the way! I am the door! I am the shepherd! I am the truth! I am the life!" Search no longer for truth, but come to know Him apart from all systems and sects and you will know the truth and the truth will set you free, for he whom the Son makes free is free indeed.

Old things are rapidly passing away and, behold, all things are becoming new. As the dispensation of law passed away with the coming of Jesus and the outpouring of Pentecost, so also this present age of grace is now waxing old and is almost ready to vanish away. He taketh away the first that He may establish the second. As the days die and fade away into each other, so the dispensations also die and fade into each other as noiselessly as the evening comes back when day is done. When the age of the law came to an end, all the things of the law had to be put away -the priests and the high priests, the assemblings, the gifts and the offerings, the sacrifices of sheep and goats with the wave offerings and drink offerings. Even the glory of the temple had to be done away as our Lord said, "There shall not be left one stone upon another that shall not be thrown down", and even the beautiful veil was rent in twain from the top to the bottom.

The dispensation of the grace of God is also ending now and the glory of the kingdom morning is at hand. This age has waxed tired and old and is ready to vanish away. Its ministers must all disappear. Its buildings, maintained with so much pride and expense, are to be done away with, not one stone left upon another. The song services and the Sunday Schools together with the foolishness of preaching, 1 Cor. 1:21, will soon disappear and in its place will come the righteous government of the precious sons of God, for the law shall go forth from Zion and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem.

As I was earnestly looking to the Lord for the truths to be written in this chapter, a tried and trusted friend from another city appeared unexpectedly at our door. During the hour at our disposal he poured into my heart a message so true that I felt it to be the will of God that I should pass the gist of it on to you in conclusion.

"Have you ever noticed," he said, "that, when we were first saved, the Lord did almost everything for us? He saved us and filled us and kept us. But now that we are growing older in Him and becoming more mature, the Lord does nothing for us without our co-operation and we become workers together with Him." For many years we have taken the attitude that to work together with God was merely a matter of working as a missionary or a minister, and having God work with us and we with Him. But that, it seems, is a very small part of the truth.

In the long process taken by the Lord to bring His people to perfection and to chasten them in sonship, we are thrown into many, many difficult circumstances, for what son is he who receiveth not chastisement? Therefore, when God's people fall upon times of great difficulty and trial, they should immediately recognize this as a fiery trial and plan of testing into which God Himself has brought them. Instead of our fighting to escape the trial and cursing the day that such a thing ever came upon us, we should realize that this is the hand of the Lord preparing our heart in some special and peculiar way to bring us into the image of Christ. It is here that faith teaches us to "think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you: But rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when His glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy." 1 Pet. 4:12-13 This, then, is the time to work together with God and co-operate with Him that His work in us may be accomplished for our eternal betterment and His eternal glory.

Many manifestations of such co-operation with God shine forth from the experience of God's people in all ages to brighten our path and enrich our understanding. No passage of scripture should be more familiar to us than the story of Paul's thorn in the flesh. For centuries theologians (if there are such) have debated bitterly and long as to what Paul's thorn really was, but in so doing they have missed the true lesson the Spirit of God was teaching. Because of the abundance of Paul's revelation, there was given him by God a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet him lest he should be exalted above measure. 2 Cor. 12:7-10 It seems very clear that Paul did not at first understand the fierce trials that continually beset him, (see 2 Cor. 11:24-33), and like all Christians he reasoned within himself, concluding no doubt that this tiresome messenger of Satan was something he could well do without, for it was a hindrance to his ministry, and, so far from being a blessing, it was, he thought, an embarrassing restriction and a curse to him. For this reason he says, "I besought the Lord thrice that it would depart from me", but the Lord, pitying his ignorance, revealed to him that it was for his good that this evil thing was ever present with him, saying, "My grace is sufficient for thee, for My strength is made perfect in weakness." Now the moment Paul understood in the spirit that this great affliction, the buffeting of the devil, was in the purpose of God, he immediately changed his attitude and, crying with joy, he said, "Most gladly therefore will I take pleasure in distresses, in necessities, in afflictions, that the power of Christ may rest upon me, for when I am weak then am I strong."

See now how quickly this great apostle cast aside his doubts and his fervent, useless prayer to begin a lifetime of understanding co-operation with God, working together with Him in the full knowledge that God's strength is made perfect when man is the weakest. Would that all God's people would understand their afflictions thus. Then would they cease from continually pleading for deliverance from the buffeting of Satan and the infirmities of the flesh, and, bowing in understanding before Him, they would humbly inquire of God that He would acquaint them with His infinite purpose that they might co-operate with Him in it. What infinite lessons would be learned! What depths of understanding would be ours if we would recognize the hand of God in all things that all things might work together for good to them that love God without being continually hindered by our lack of understanding! God's people have become pitifully dull of understanding. The blinding tradition of an apostate church system has divorced them from the truth to such an extent that only a paltry few ever see God's hand working for His glory in our distress of our affliction. So warped and withered has their understanding become that times without number they bring God's people under condemnation by convincing them that their adversity in business, their illness in body, their bereavement or loss, was proof of God's disfavor and displeasure, but such dwarfs have never learned that "when I am weak, then I am strong."

Well may we imagine the cries of distress wrung from the hearts of Christians when the apostle Paul was cast into jail, his life and ministry denied to the church, and himself shut away in a dank cell where he appeared to be of no value to anyone. But in the course of life God had taught this man many lessons, and here in the prison cell, shut away from the world, separated from Christians, but ever in the presence of God, he spent his time writing letters to the churches. What would we do without the epistle to the Ephesians or the epistle to the Philippians, which were both written from his prison cell? What would we do without the epistles to the Corinthians, which were written in weariness and painfulness and with the added spiritual burden of all the congregations? If Paul had done nothing during his lifetime but preach sermons, which people think are so important, we would not know much of him today and little indeed would be the teachings of the dispensation of grace. But, because of his afflictions, he wrote epistles, and, because of the awkwardness of travel, he wrote letters to the congregations and, because of his imprisonments and separation, he wrote the marvelous messages of God which we have readily at hand today. What a loss the whole world would have suffered had this man not learned to co-operate with God in his afflictions as well as his abundances, being a worker together with Him that the blessing of the Lord might flow out and out through all the ages!

These lessons had to be learned by Paul just as they have to be learned by you and me. Have you not read this verse? "I have learned in whatsoever state I am to be content." Phil. 4:11. Have we learned this lesson? It is a lesson of vital importance, especially to those elect ones who must delight themselves in the understanding that all things are working together for their good. But to those who separate their affliction from the plan of God there is no such thing as working together with God, neither is there true co-operation with God.

After this the apostle continued, "I know both how to be abased, and I know how to abound. Everywhere and in all things I am instructed both to be full and to be hungry, both to abound and to suffer need. I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." Verse 12, 13 We cannot possibly overestimate the vital importance of thus working together with God and going along with Him in the eternal purpose He is working in us. If all things are working together for good to them that love God, then, when sickness comes, there must be some good in it and its effects must be working some eternal good in us that we might be tried in the fire, receiving the exact heat that will mould us and make us after His will. Dare we say that no good can come to us through sadness and bereavement? The Lord has said, "Sorrow is better than laughter, for by the sadness of the countenance the heart is made better." Eccles 7:3 Sadness and tribulation wean our hearts away from this age, fixing it to the eternal realm where reality dwells without alloy and that forever. King David in his bereavement uttered these marvelous words. "I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me." 2 Sam. 12:23
There are things other than suffering, affliction, and poverty with which God tries His people. We have known people who were faithful and true to God while they remained under extenuating circumstances, but afterward, when their sickness was exchanged for vibrant health or their poverty exchanged for riches, they no longer served God with the love and fullness of consecration that they had known before. Therefore the Psalmist has said, "If riches increase, set not thine heart upon them". Psa. 62:10 I see nothing wrong with God's giving a man riches and honor if that man will recognize that this, too, is a circumstance into which God has brought him for a definite purpose and so, co-operating with God and working together with Him, he will seek to know what God will have him do and what God will have him learn.

It is hard for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God. It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom. But I do not think that this will apply if that man recognizes his abundance as a trial of his faith, a condition into which the all-wise God has brought him. If he sees this great truth, he will refuse to use his wealth for an occasion to his flesh, but will humbly work together with God that God's divine purpose might be revealed in him, and that he might be faithful and just in his abundance. Men who are faithful in poverty are often unfaithful with riches, for those who are in poverty make God their source and supply, but they who are rich are inclined to trust in uncertain riches, forgetting that "he that trusteth in riches shall fall". Prov. 27:24

We think of the beauty and wonder of the life of the patriarch Joseph, but we would also do well to think of the things he suffered that he might be thus perfect before God - the unreasonable hatred of his brethren, the bitter hate and envy that sold him into slavery, his being auctioned off in the slave market and his purchase by Potiphar, his temptation at the hands of the amorous and passionate wife of his master, his unjust imprisonment where his feet were hurt with fetters and he was laid in irons, and finally the greatest of all temptations when he was elevated to be the second ruler in the land with all its riches at his disposal, the people bowing the knee before him. In all these things he was faithful, as in poverty so also in riches and honor. Surely he had learned to be a worker together with God. As he stood before his brethren, who had sold him into slavery but now trembled in fear at his feet, he was able to say, "Fear not. You meant it for evil, but God meant it for good." Gen. 50:15-21 This is the kind of co-operation and understanding that is required of God's sons.

Hear further as the apostle enlarges the theme of working together with God, saying, "We then, as workers together with Him, beseech you also that ye receive not the grace of God in vain ... but in all things approving ourselves as the ministers of God, in much patience, in afflictions, in necessities, in distress, in stripes, in imprisonments, in tumults, in labors, in watchings, in fastings: By pureness, by knowledge, by longsuffering, by kindness, by the Holy Ghost, by love unfeigned, by the word of truth, by the power of God, by the armor of righteousness on the right hand and on the left, by honor and dishonor, by evil report and good report: as deceivers and yet true; as unknown, and yet well known; as dying, and, behold, we live; as chastened, and not killed; as sorrowful, yet always rejoicing; as having nothing, and yet possessing all things." 2 Cor. 6:1-10

It is certainly high time for the saints of God to quit playing religion and come instead to the understanding of the Almighty. It is time for saints to work together with God, working out their own salvation with fear and trembling. It is time to believe that all is God that worketh in us, both to will and to do His good pleasure. Therefore do all things without murmuring and disputing that "ye may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world; holding forth the word of life: that I may rejoice in the day of Christ, that I have not run in vain, neither labored in vain." Phil. 2:12-16

PARTAKERS OF THE HEAVENLY CALLING

When men seek the face of the Lord with fasting and prayer, He sends His Holy Spirit to dispel the darkness of the natural mind that ever hangs as a cloud about us that He may reveal to our wondering eyes the things that are nearest and dearest to His great heart. In all matters of revelation and spiritual understanding it is impossible to overestimate the intrinsic value of the Holy Spirit, who comes to take the things of God and show them unto us. Two worlds exist all about us - the natural world and the spiritual world. The natural realm is the realm of man, but the spiritual realm is the realm of God. The natural man cannot understand the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, for they are spiritually discerned.

Men of the world have told me that the Bible sounds silly, and I suppose to them it does, since God has said it is "foolishness unto them". The truth of the matter is that the Bible could be read a hundred times twice told without shedding a ray of light on a skeptical and unbelieving mind. In fact, many atheists and skeptics have read the Bible many times over, yet, because they read in unbelief, banishing the help of the Holy Spirit from their hearts while depending entirely upon their carnal minds, the Lord withholds His light and understanding from them. Thus they find themselves more in the dark and more unbelieving afterward than they were in the beginning.

It is "when He, the Spirit of truth has come" that men are guided into all truth. It is He who convicts the world of sin and of righteousness and of judgment. He it is who takes the things of God and reveals them unto us.
Furthermore it is He, the Holy Spirit, who, after revealing truth to our darkened hearts, miraculously transforms the believer into the very truth he sees. The Spirit of God reveals to the believer’s heart what the truth of God is and what the mind and will of God is and, having done so, He makes him partaker of that truth so that he, by beholding the truth, actually becomes the truth he beheld. He reveals salvation to us and we become "the saved" He reveals His plan of redemption and we become "the redeemed" He reveals His eternal purpose of sonship and we become the "sons of God's These things concern His heavenly calling. As a flower opens to the light of the sun, so eternal purposes unfold in the light of the Holy Spirit and we, seeing and believing them, embrace them and become partakers of them. "Without faith it is impossible to please Him: for he that cometh to God must believe that He is, and that He is a rewar der of them that diligently seek Him... By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went. By faith he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise... Through faith also Sarah herself received strength to conceive seed, and was delivered of a child when she was past age, because she judged Him faithful who had promised. Therefore sprang there even of one, and him as good as dead, so many as the stars of the sky for multitude, and as the sand which is by the sea shore innumerable."

Heb. 11:6-12 When we behold truth by the Spirit and begin to fervently believe it and move irresistibly toward it, though at first it appeared to be a long, long way off, eventually the arms of our spirit embrace it and we become partakers of the heavenly calling, actually changed into the very image of the truth we saw.

In my opinion Heb. 11:13 is one of the most remarkable verses concerning faith that ever was written or spoken. It displays as nothing else can how fervently saints must follow truth and revelation by faith before they actually become partakers of the glory they see.

"These all died in faith,
Not having received the promises,
But having seen them afar off,
And were persuaded of them,
And embraced them,
And confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth."

Oh what eloquent words of trust and fidelity are written here! To see the promise of God afar off, to be persuaded that what was revealed is truly our inheritance, to embrace that promise with a grip that even death itself cannot unloose, and then to confess it to ourselves, to our God, and to all with whom we associate!
Confession of such eternal verities cannot be made by mere say so or by some momentary confession or trip to an altar. Credence is not added to our testimony by our loving the world and all that is in it and building for ourselves treasures on earth as though we hoped to remain here forever, but confession is made that we have embraced these hopes when by our lives rather than by our words we testify that we are strangers and pilgrims dwelling in tabernacles, passing as transients through the earth, looking as Abraham did for that beautiful city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God - the New Jerusalem of which we have hitherto fervently spoken. While we dwell in this world, we walk in a strange land. We can neither sing its songs, rejoice in its activity, nor weep at its fall.
"By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down,
Yea, we wept when we remembered Zion.
We hanged our harps upon the willows in the midst thereof.
For they that carried us away captive required of us a song;
And they that wasted us required of us mirth,
Saying, Sing us one of the songs of Zion.
How can we sing the Lord's songs in a strange land?
If I forget thee, O Jerusalem,
Let my right hand forget her cunning.
If I do not remember thee, let my tongue
Cleave to the roof of my mouth;
If I prefer not Jerusalem above my chief joy."
Psa. 137.

We are today in the climax of the ages. The ragged ends of all previous dispensations are come down to us who live in this hour just preceding the coming of the Lord. Now is the hour when promises kept hidden from the foundation of the world are to be fully revealed and entered into by the saints of the Lord.

We are seeing the climax of man's rule. The next thing in order is the reign of Christ with all His sanctified sons. There is an election according to the grace of God who will be made partakers of God's heavenly calling, and that elect throng must give diligence to make their calling and election sure. There are millions of people who are saved, yet see nothing whatever beyond the simple fact of their justification. To them, to be saved is sufficient. To press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus has never once crossed their minds or stirred their hearts to deeper consecration. Never once have they fervently laid aside every weight nor joyfully entered into the fellowship of His sufferings that they might be made conformed unto His death in hope of obtaining a better resurrection. It is not to such as these that I now write, but rather to that little flock of elect folk who, seeing the promise afar off, have embraced it, confessed it, and laid hold upon it. It was unto these our Lord Jesus spoke when He said, "Fear not, little flock: it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."

The world today is full of that shoddy, lukewarm Laodi-ceanism. Everywhere we look we see it. False teachers, false prophets, and false christs abound. Hollywood singers and entertainers make themselves rich by crooning and recording our beautiful hymns, which once were written in the shadow of the cross. Preachers are making themselves millionaires by their flamboyant deception, using charity and mercy as a pretense to rob the widow, the simple, the well-meaning. I hate it all, with all their conniving, and cast it far from me. Such deception is not of the truth. It is no nearer to light than darkness and no nearer to Christ than Belial. It is the dread confusion of Babylon from which every saint is obliged to flee. Amid all the confusion of the hour there is a little flock standing as sheep among wolves. They care not for the flamboyant humbug of the hour, but, having seen the promises afar off, they are pressing through the surging waves of humanity toward that heavenly mark, the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. These are they who follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth. They lean hard upon Christ. His Holy Spirit dwells in them. They are partakers of His mind.

They know His will. They have laid aside every weight and the sin, which does so easily beset them. They are running the race with patience. They rejoice in the hope before them. They are patient in tribulation that strikes them. They continue instant in prayer to God, and He comforts them and upholds them by the right hand of His righteousness. To them the Spirit speaks in words of everlasting comfort, "Fear not, little flock; it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."

The Spirit of the Lord has been speaking to my heart. He is urging me to become a true partaker of the heavenly calling. It is never easy to explain in the words of men the glories we see in the Spirit. Earth's languages are totally inadequate to explain spiritual things. Furthermore, it is an indisputable fact that, though the world's most devout teacher should explain the things of the Spirit to the world's most diligent student, that student could never see the truth except the Holy Spirit took the truth that was spoken and revealed it to him. I know for certain that there are some Christians who could write a book about sonship and receive one hundred percent for their effort, and yet those same people have not seen the truth of sonship nor do they possess the Spirit of sonship, which is so essential. We may have all the technique of a truth, but if we lack the Spirit of that truth, our words become idle tales. Many people have told me that their group is in the sonship message, but somehow their words leave me cold. They leave me feeling that to them sonship is nothing more than another message to be bandied about from one carnal preacher to another, but a few days ago I received a letter from an old, old lady. The writing on the page was shaky and difficult to read, but the message and the spirit of the letter spoke clearly of one who was becoming a partaker of the heavenly calling. Her letter was not a masterful composition, but the Spirit bore witness that the glory she had seen afar off she was now becoming.

I pray that the Spirit of God will grant me help to expound the thing that is in my vision and that He, being doubly gracious, will take these things of God and reveal them unto every believing heart. The apostle Paul, writing to the Corinthians, made this wonderful statement: "We all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord."

2 Cor. 3:18. In his masterful way Paul is telling us here that we become what we see — that is to say, whatsoever glory may be revealed to us by the Holy Spirit, we who by faith earnestly lay hold of that truth and press fervently toward it will actually and truly be changed into the very image of the truth we saw and, beholding, we will become exactly what we saw. Now I know that this may seem an incredible statement, but the verse we have read and quoted above is as definite a statement as can be made, declaring that we, beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into that same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord. Why, brethren, this statement is true even in the natural realm, for is it not certain that evil communications corrupt good manners? And do people not tend to become like those with whom they associate? How much more, then, must this be true when saints, beholding the glory of the Lord, are transformed by the Holy Spirit into the image of that glory they see!

Our Lord Jesus Christ was not merely a man who always spoke the truth. Neither was He a man who had come to the knowledge of the truth because He had burned the midnight oil as He pored over old manuscripts and documents of the law. Jesus Christ was different from all other men in this regard, for, while some others had learned truth and been taught truth, Jesus Christ was truth; and because He was truth, it was absolutely impossible for Him to ever speak in error. Thus, when His disciples asked Him a hard question, His answer came not from His years of learning, but from the very fountainhead of truth itself. And when doctors of the law, with scribes and Pharisees, were gathered together to entangle Him in His words, they were utterly demolished before Him — not because of His intensive studies, but because He was truth and all the truth that ever existed dwelt in Him. That the truth that He Himself was came not by learning finds remarkable confirmation in the astonished question of the learned men, "How knoweth this man letters, having never learned?" Learning has its benefits, undoubtedly, but spiritual verities do not come by learning; they come by revelation. That is why I insist that many thousands of Christians who rather flippantly talk about the sonship message often know nothing about it, for while their knowledge of it has come by letters and learning, its glory has not been revealed by the Holy Ghost.

Only last summer the marvelously sacred hymn, Amazing Grace, became number one on the hit parade. Is it not a shameful thing that those unsanctified Hollywood professionals with their lilting voices and their sound effects, who were responsible for degrading this holy hymn into a hit, were actually men and women who knew nothing at all of amazing grace? So, you see, it is not enough to speak of a sonship message or amazing grace, but what we see must be revealed by the Spirit of God or we do not truly see it at all. "I am the truth," said Jesus; thus the truth He spoke flowed from that holy well of truth, which He was. To speak one word in error was impossible to Him who is the truth.

Long centuries ago, when our Saviour stood on trial before Pontius Pilate (though it was not He who was on trial, but the whole world), Jesus came forth after His scourging wearing a purple robe and a crown of thorns on His innocent head, and Pilate said unto the people, "Behold the man!" I wonder if perchance he understood the significance of the words he spoke? It would seem to be certain that he did not. Yet in those words lie hidden a secret so great that properly understood will form a gulf as far removed as heaven is from earth between those Christians who behold Him and those who do not.

"Father, I will," prayed Jesus, "that they also whom Thou hast given Me, be with Me where I am; that they may behold My glory, which Thou hast given Me:" John 17:24 Oh that we might behold the Lord, for "we all, with open (unveiled) face beholding as in a glass (mirror) the glory of the Lord, are changed into that same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord." No man can see God and live, the prophet says; yet surely even the blindest man must know that no man can see God and die. So what takes place when men behold the Lord? It is the old, the corrupt, the carnal, the sinful that perishes and dies while the beholder himself is changed into the same image of the Lord.

The prophet Isaiah is not the least among the prophets. In fact, it would appear that he was among the greatest. We may not know for certain how many years he prophesied, but we do know that after many years a great transforming experience came into his life. It happened in the same year that king Uzziah died. Uzziah seems to represent something in the life of this great prophet. Perhaps Isaiah had depended upon the king far more than he realized just as you and I lean heavily upon things and people instead of casting all our weight of care upon the everlasting arms of the Lord. So it was that the prophet wrote, "In the year that king Uzziah died I saw also the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and His train filled the temple. Above it stood the seraphims: each one had six wings; with twain he covered his face, and with twain he covered his feet, and with twain he did fly. And one cried unto another, and said, Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts; the whole earth is full of His glory. And the posts of the door moved at the voice of Him that cried, and the house was filled with smoke." Isa. 6:1-4

Now see the effect this vision of the Lord had upon this great man of God and see how in the light of God's glorious face his own glory became wretched and undone. Thus he continues the account of his vision. "Then said I, Woe is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips: for mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts." Thus shall it be with any man who beholds the glory of the Lord. He will find his own glory "turned into corruption" and he will cry from the bitterness and disappointment of his own soul. "Woe is me, for I am undone! for I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips: for mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts."

Surely the godly Job, whom the Lord Himself said was a perfect and an upright man, one who feared God and eschewed evil, must have been very disillusioned and disappointed with himself when, after affirming through almost forty chapters the story of his own righteousness, he finally beheld the Lord. Then from the misery and repentance of his own disillusioned heart he cried out, "I have heard of Thee with the hearing of the ear, but now mine eye seeth Thee; wherefore I repent in dust and ashes."

And what shall we say of Daniel, that man whom God placed with Noah and Job as the three most righteous men of all time? Ezek. 14:14,20. What, I ask, shall we say of him, who in fasting and prayer for three weeks ate no pleasant bread, nor allowed flesh or wine to enter his mouth, said, "In the four and twentieth day of the first month, as I was by the side of the great river, which is Hiddekel; then I lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and behold a certain man clothed in linen, whose loins were girded with fine gold of Uphaz: his body also was like the beryl, and his face as the appearance of lightning, and his eyes as lamps of fire, and his arms and his feet like in color to polished brass, and the voice of his words like the voice of a multitude. And I, Daniel, alone saw the vision: for the men that were with me saw not the vision; but a great quaking fell upon them, so that they fled to hide themselves. Therefore I was left alone, and saw this great vision, and there remained no strength in me: for my comeliness was turned in me into corruption, and I retained no strength." Dan. 10:3-8

The thing that is woefully lacking in our day is true repentance of sin, and men do not repent of sin when they have no vision of the glory of the Lord. I do not hesitate to say that most of the preaching in our day is poppycock. Sinners do not turn to the Lord just because we tell them they should do so. Neither do they see a transforming vision of Christ because a few "kids", clad in jeans and laden with mops of hair, surrounded with blasting loud speakers, wiggle their hips and scream into microphones, "You don't know what you're missin'." Cursed be their hard rock! Should heaven be filled with such raucous racket as that, the saints would all beg to be excused. If anything could be hell for me, it would be so if I were obliged to listen to that unholy racket forever! My ransomed spirit longs to dwell eternally where angels harp with their harps and heavenly voices fill the universe with transforming harmony forever. The glory of God is more revealed in the thundering of
In these perilous times of declension and apostasy that now cover the earth in thick darkness, it is well that the heart of every faithful saint should become increasingly aware of the unspeakable holiness, the greatness, the omnipotence, the faithfulness and truthfulness of that one true God who humbles Himself to behold the earth. The apostle Paul spoke of an awesome day of deplorable declension that would come upon the church in the last days, a falling away unequalled in the annals of the church. It would be an apostasy so completely deceptive that none but the very elect would be able to discern its Satanic mystery.

The saints at Thessalonica, like all other true saints, were longing with a very deep and earnest desire for the second coming of the Lord Jesus Christ. It is right that this fervent longing should be the burden of every saint of the Lord, but it cannot be denied that sometimes our earnest desire may give rise to an expectation that is not altogether scriptural. The hope becomes father to the interpretation. Thus teachings arise that are born of the desire of the natural mind rather than the inspiration of the mind of God. Unless we walk softly, our patient waiting for Christ becomes impatience and we are inclined to grasp upon events, which appear to be indisputable signs of His near coming, only to find that our signs were not as well founded as we had hoped. Well do I remember when the world staggered beneath the weight of the great depression of the 1930's. The planet and all things on it seemed to suddenly fall apart. Thousands of earnest and well-meaning saints believed that this was the certain herald of the coming of Christ. I still believe it was one of the sorrows to come at the end of the times of the Gentiles. This was indeed the beginning of great tribulation. Preachers became busy picking men such as Mussolini, Hitler and Stalin as antichrists, and indeed they were, but these tyrants, like so many before them, perished and the world continued on its tremulous course because God's appointed time had not yet fully come.

The precious saints at Thessalonica, like true believers of all ages, were looking through the distress of their tribulation with earnest longing for the kingdom of God and the coming of the Lord. No doubt these afflicted saints of long ago, even as we, believed they saw indisputable signs that the end of the age was near at hand. They did not know that centuries had yet to pass in wearisome succession before the end of the days, spoken of by Daniel, would come and the saints would stand in their lot triumphant. For this reason the apostle Paul by the wisdom and inspiration given to him wrote to the saints of his day warning them that they must not believe that the day of Christ was then at hand. I am positive that Paul himself did not know when the end of the age would be, nor did he know the time of Christ's appearing, for that knowledge is kept from men, but he did have knowledge of certain events that were to transpire before that notable day could possibly come. Therefore he wrote to those waiting saints in the following words: "Now we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto Him, that ye be not soon shaken in mind, or be troubled, neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by letter as from us, as that the day of Christ is at hand. Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, shewing himself that he is God. Remember ye not that, when I was yet with you, I told you these things? And now ye know what withholdeth that he might be revealed in his time. For the mystery of iniquity doth already work: only he who now letteth (hindereth) will let, until he be taken out of the way. And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of His mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of His coming: even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: that they all might be damned (condemned) who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness." 2 Thess. 2:1-12.

Among the many signs, which in these last days point to the near coming of the Lord there are two that are most outstanding. Unfortunately these two go largely unnoticed. We hear a great deal about violence, the break down of morals, the rampaging divorce rate, the appalling murder of unborn infants, which far exceeds the criminal slaughter of babies carried out by either the frightened Pharaoh or the brutal Herod. We see the rise of corrupt and evil men in government, refusing to uphold the law and introducing all manner of corruption. We see the rise of Communist dictators and many other ominous things, all of which are perfectly obvious. These can scarcely be placed in the category of deception. Even the most unthinking Christian should recognize such abominations as evidence that the end of the age is at hand. These terrible crimes have come upon us as a direct result of the great falling away from the faith. When Paul wrote this message to the saints at Thessalonica, he spoke of two great deceptions, which would arise in the last days, both of which are deep mysteries only perceived by serious minded people who are living close to God. The mystery of iniquity, spoken of in chapter 2, verse 7, is the mystery of lawlessness and rebellion. This unspeakable lawlessness is rampant in the world, but it is equally rampant in the church system. The two great mysterious happenings are these: (1) A great falling away from the faith and (2) the revealing of that man of sin (verse 3) or that Wicked (verse 8), the lawless one. (Verse 8 margin).

An incredible apostasy such as is here described arose in the church about 300 A.D. with the rise of the papal system. The papal system with its succession of popes fulfilled this image of lawlessness as one after the other they sat in the temple of God showing themselves to be God, claiming themselves to be Christ's representative on earth. The rise of this system gave birth to the gross apostasy of the dark ages, but, terrible as this period was in which church history records the martyrdom of millions of saints, it was not the complete fulfillment of the apostasy of which Paul speaks in his epistle to Thessalonica. The spirit of iniquity or lawlessness was in the world even in the days of the apostles. It was at work then and its iniquity, like leaven, has increased down through the ages. It has yet, however, to come to its final great and terrifying climax. We are now seeing a falling away from the faith, a falling away from the Lord, which I would think must certainly be unprecedented in church history. I listened in disbelief on the morning of Feb. 9, 1978, to a CBC news report that told of a gathering of bishops and other high authorities of the Anglican church in St. Paul's Cathedral, London. The report indicated that they threw a wine party, openly declaring that they no longer believed that Jesus Christ was the Son of God, blasphemously affirming that there was insufficient proof for this doctrine. Then on Feb. 19, on the program "Concern", one of the high, ranking authorities from London explained to the world how Christianity could get along without Christ. According to him, we would have to recognize Buddhism, Mohammedanism and other pagan religions and take the best out of them all.

When a nation like Great Britain, who at one time was world leader in defense of the faith and whose greatness was built upon the word of God, openly allows her state church to deny not only God's written word, the Bible, but the living Christ of God as well, then this is certainly apostasy on a very grand scale and it is no wonder that since 1945 she has lost her Empire and has shrunk to a third rate power. This is a falling away to such an incredible degree that there are no words written or spoken that can adequately describe the enormity of its scope.

Now you surely have noticed how Paul clearly made this statement: "The mystery of iniquity doth already work: only he who now letteth (hindereth) will let (hinder), until he be taken out of the way. And then shall that Wicked be revealed..." The question we must settle in our minds is this: Of whom is the apostle speaking when he says, "He who now hindereth will hinder until he is taken out of the way"? This question should not really be difficult to answer. Our Lord Jesus Christ once told the saints, "Ye are the salt of the earth." Among the important uses of salt is its use as a preservative. A second function is its ability to savor. A very few grains of salt will savor a whole meal and change it from a bland and unpalatable meal to a gourmet's delight. That is why Jesus said, "If the salt (which is the saints) has lost its savor, wherewith shall it be salted."

It is the life of Jesus Christ in the saints that makes them the salt of the earth. These blessed saints of God, who for centuries have lived and moved in the Holy Spirit, are the salt of the earth and the preservative of the church. It is they who have given the church its savor. It is they who have preserved it from decay and rottenness. Those precious elect ones have been a light shining in the darkness of the world. Their doctrine and their teachings have kept the professing church from complete apostasy throughout the darkness of the ages. Just as the prophets of long ago rebuked the apostasy of Israel and Judah and time and again turned the nation back to God and the paths of righteousness, so the presence of these elect saints in the church system has been the salt of the earth, the savor of Christianity and the preserver of all that is good and right. They have defended the faith, upheld righteousness and kept the professing church from utter apostasy and desolation through the ages. These blessed ones have exalted the word of God, translating it into many tongues and sending it forth to be a light to all nations of earth. It was they who through gross darkness sought for light. It was they who prayed for revival when all was lost, and God answered their prayer, sending showers of latter rain to revive the earth and bring life and light to millions. It is they who have hindered the Satanic mystery of iniquity and workings of Satan. It is they who time and again have withstood the jeerings of athiests.
and overcome the carnal reasonings of evolutionists, together with the oppositions of science falsely so called. No antichrist or mystery of iniquity could rise to its full stature while these elect of God remained in the church system. Did not the presence of Lot in the corrupt city of Sodom preserve that city from destruction until that one righteous man dwelling among them was taken out of the way? Can you not hear the angels as they urge Lot to depart from Sodom, saying, “Haste thee, escape thither: for I cannot do anything till thou be come thither?” Gen. 19:22 Is it not remarkable that, as long as God permitted Lot to remain in the city, even the angels were powerless to overthrow it? And did not God keep back the flood in Noah’s day until this elect man and his family were safely in the ark and the doors were shut? As long as he was among them the fearful waters of tribulation were stayed, but once he was removed, the desolating floods immediately devastated the earth. Paul in this epistle spoke of a day to come when he who hindered the working of Satan would be taken out of the way, and after their removal “that Wicked” would be revealed, and the system we know as the church would become utterly corrupt and utterly deceptive.

During the past years a call ever increasing in its intensity has been going forth to the true saints of these last days. The trumpet call has been, “Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her sins.” God's people have heard the Spirit’s call, "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." 2 Cor. 6:17-18 In response to the Spirit’s call men and women, feeling the spirit of sonship burning in their hearts, have obeyed and have fled from the bondage of the denominational system, which has now become a spiritual Babylon. They have gone unto Christ without the camp, bearing His reproach.

The church system of our day is a deafening confusion of voices, a trumpet giving an uncertain sound. Her sermons more often than not are without a God-given message and have become as meaningless as the speeches in Hyde Park or the rantings of Pershing Square. The Babylon system is a harlot system. The city wherein righteousness once dwelt has become a harlot. Stationed on every principal street she calls to passersby to join her in her adultery. Long centuries ago king Solomon by inspiration described her activity in the words of this strange parable. I shall quote from Prov. 7:1, 6-27, every word of which seems to apply to the modern church system as in our day we see her compassing land and sea to make a proselyte, presenting her persuasions on every street corner. Her husband, who should be her head, has departed from her, but, usurper as she is, she brazenly continues without his headship or leadership. The further she goes the more wretched she becomes. Addressing his thoughts to sons, Solomon spake thus: "My son, keep my words, and lay up my commandments with thee... At the window of my house I looked through my casement, and beheld among the simple ones; I discerned among the youths a young man void of understanding, passing through the street near her corner; and he went the way to her house in the twilight, in the evening, in the black and dark night. (A picture of the present day.) And, behold, there met him a woman with the attire of a harlot, and subtil of heart. She is loud and stubborn; her feet abide not in her house: Now she is without, now in the streets, and lieth in wait at every corner. So she caught him, and kissed him, and with an impudent face said unto him, I have peace-offerings with me; this day have I paid my vows. Therefore came I forth to meet thee, diligently to seek thy face, and I have found thee. I have decked my bed with coverings of tapestry, with carved works, with fine linen of Egypt. I have perfumed my bed with myrrh, aloes, and cinnamon. Come, let us take our fill of love until the morning: let us solace ourselves with loves. For the good man is not at home; he is gone on a long journey: he hath taken a bag of money with him, and will come home at the day appointed. With her much fair speech she caused him to yield, with the flattering of her lips she forced him. He goeth after her straightway, as an ox goeth to the slaughter, or as a fool to the correction of the stocks; till a dart strike through his liver; as a bird hasteth to the snare, and knoweth not that it is for his life. Hearken unto me now therefore, O ye children, and attend to the words of my mouth. Let not thine heart decline to her ways, go not astray in her paths. For she hath cast down many wounded; yea, many strong men have been slain by her. Her house is the way to hell, going down to the chambers of death."

It is true that this picture of the harlot woman aptly describes the common street walker who has plied her trade for centuries, but this is merely the primary interpretation. The true significance of the passage goes far beyond that. The harlot in question here is firstly that adulterous nation known as the house of Israel, who for centuries played the harlot against her God. Hosea 4:1-2 In the second place this harlotish woman represents the church system of the last days, represented in the book of Revelation as the church of Laodicea. Christ, her head, has gone on a long journey into a far country to receive a kingdom and return. Luke 19:12 The heavens have received Him until the times of the restitution of all things. Acts 3:21 The church, no longer honoring Christ as her head, plays the harlot with her lovers and becomes Mystery Babylon the great, mother of harlots and abominations of the earth. Notice the following likenesses. This encounter took place between the harlot and a young man. Now a young man in scripture represents a son of God. See 1 John 2:14 The word of God (Christ) dwells in him and he has overcome the wicked one. But this strange, church woman is lurking near at hand, neither knowing nor caring about sonship. She flatters with her words, seduces with her beauty, attracts with the odor of her perfume, and, beguiling the silly ones, she leads them to her house. You will note further that the time this seduction takes place is in the twilight, in the evening, and in the black and dark night. I know of no descriptive terms that would more aptly describe the present hour, in which darkness covers the earth and gross darkness all the people. Surely verse nine is prophetic of the hour in which we live.

It is the evening of this present age. It is the twilight of man's degenerate day. A church system that has rejected Christ as its head has entered into the black and dark night. Let there be no mistake about that.

There met him a woman with the attire of a harlot. Verse 10 The story of such a beguiling deception as this would be headline stuff for the newspapers or for one of Hollywood's corrupt movies. Nothing would be so entertaining to carnal audiences or give them so much pleasure as would the story of how a harlot woman beguiled this promising young man, a son of God. Fools make a mock of sin and gloat over its corruption, but wise and good men regard it as a melancholy story and mourn for the loss it entails. This mistress of all the arts of wheedling understood only too well how to use her caresses and fine words to win her convert. She lies in wait at every corner. She has decked her bed and herself, not with the simplicity of the gospel truth, but with the coverings of the world, the tapestry, and the fine linen of Egypt. She does not own Christ as her Lord and Head, but speaks of Him merely as the good man of the house. Verse 19.

Perhaps it would be wise to leave the interpretation of each of these powerful verses to the prayerful mind of the reader. Suffice it then to say that the truths being brought to our attention here are the true facts easily observed in the present day church system. That I will be accused of bitterness and harshness I have no doubt. I care not for this. My true concern is for those elect people who are under continual pressure to again become entangled with the yoke of bondage. The strong net of sectarianism and denominationalism condemns the saint to bondage with little growth in grace or in the knowledge of Jesus Christ our Lord. Would God that you, my brother or sister, would take time to consider whether or not you have grown in grace and in the knowledge of Christ through the years! Have you been condemned to feed on a few stock sermons from paid preachers who have never placed any real goal before your eyes or set forth that all encompassing purpose in God's dealing with men? If this is the case, then it is time to awake and obey God and come out where you can tune your ear in to the Holy Spirit and learn the unspeakable things of Him, which are unlawful for a man to utter.

We are now seeing the final great falling away in the church system. Two dreadful forms of apostasy are rampant in the earth. One is an apostasy that denies the veracity and inspiration of the word of God. It denies the virgin birth and the true Sonship of Jesus Christ. It preaches evolution, higher criticism and social reform, and even provides vast sums of money to promote rebellion and revolution against all established order. Under this category appear many of the adherents of the old, line denominations, the World Council of Churches, and the entire Ecumenical Movement.

The second kind of apostasy and the more deceptive of the two is found in that vast hodge-podge of individuals, sects and denominations from Protestantism and Roman Catholicism who claim signs and wonders, speak in tongues, worship the virgin Mary, raise millions of dollars to build guttering buildings, and in general fulfill the pattern laid down for them in Paul's sermon on the great falling away of the last days. 2 Thess. 2:9,10. "Even him whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish ... and for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie."

It is neither my manner, my custom, or my delight to spend my time in words of condemnation. I am old enough and should be wise enough to know that buried deep in the most paganized pile of corruption imaginable some true believer or son of God may be found. It is also true that even corrupt prophets such as the money hungry Balaam can often pour out words of truth as their rebellion is overruled by the Spirit. I shall not therefore take further time to make comparisons or to refer to groups or individuals, but instead we must allow God's word to speak for itself and let the Holy Spirit likewise speak for Himself.

There are three classes of people in the world today. There are the many who are called, the few who are chosen, and the vast multitude or the majority who are neither called nor chosen. This may come as a shock to many of God's people who still believe that all the world can be won to Christ in this age, but what I have just stated is the truth. In all ages from the very beginning of time this fact stands out as indisputable. From among the teeming millions of earth the Lord in all ages has called many. Never in human history do we have any indication that He ever called them all. The truth may have gone to them all, though there is very little evidence that it did, but only a small number heard the call of God's Holy Spirit and actually responded to it. To the truth of this fact the word of God bears abundance evidence, for it is written, "Whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the firstborn among many brethren. Moreover whom He did predestinate, them He also called; and whom He called, them He also justified: and whom He justified, them He also glorified." Rom. 8:29,30. Step by step and with indisputable wisdom the wise apostle shows how God in His eternal wisdom chooses and separates His people according to His grace and the calling given them before the world began. Of the teeming millions of earth there are first those comparatively few who are foreknown. From these there is a predestination. From these predestinated ones He calls many to sonship. Of these many proceed to justification and of these others proceed to the glory of the image of His Son. It must seem evident to any earnest reader of this passage that at each new advance into truth and revelation referred to here some go forward to the next grace and some remain where they are. Among the billions of earth a certain company who was foreknown was selected and attained the first step. Out from among them a certain company was predestinated to be conformed to the image of Christ. From this multitude the Lord calls many and the rest remain as they were. Out from among the called He chooses another company, for many are called, but few are chosen. These went on to justification and finally to glorification, or the image of Christ.

These are God's elect. We would not be wrong in saying they are the very elect. In all ages and in every dispensation the Lord has had a people whom He calls the elect. The word elect is used concerning certain angels. 1 Tim. 5:21. It is used concerning God's chosen nation Israel. Isa. 65: 9,22. It is used concerning Jesus Christ. Isa. 42:1. Finally it is used to describe those blessed saints who have been both called and chosen to sonship, who by the grace of Christ achieve supreme triumph, having passed from death to life and from the power of sin and carnality unto God. Peter describes this blessedness in these words: "Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ: Grace unto you and peace be multiplied." 1 Pet. 1:2.

In the first part of this chapter we have been considering the spiritual condition of the Laodicean church system, which according to scripture and according to fact has in these last days sunken so low spiritually as to become one with the world system. The glory and power of God has become a thing lightly esteemed. Mankind in general, together with the church system, has lost its sense of awe and godly fear. This deplorable loss of respect for God and the noxious weed of impiety that has flourished by its side has become the father of a thousand lesser evils until a whole new and evil philosophy of what a Christian is and ought to be has sprung up world wide. As soon as a Christian loses his sense of the incomparable majesty and holiness of God and his consciousness becomes devoid of the divine presence, he can no longer walk in the fear of the Lord. He begins to imagine God to be such an one as himself, as the scripture has said. "Thou thoughtest that I was altogether such an one as thyself." Psa. 50:21. The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom and the knowledge of the holy is understanding. Therefore, when the fear of the Lord departs from the human heart, then even the beginning of wisdom has also departed. To prove to oneself that the fear of the Lord has departed from the church system nationally, all one needs to do is walk into a large congregation on a Sunday night. Listen and you will hear a babble of voices as the people chat about every imaginable thing from gardens to ball games while waiting for the minister to announce a hymn. They do not know that the presence of the Lord has departed from them nor do they know that He has no interest whatever in their forms and ceremonies of worship. "Now consider this, ye that forget God, lest I tear you in pieces and there be none to deliver. Whoso offereth praise glorifieth Me: and to him that ordereth his conversation aright will I shew the salvation of God.” Psa. 50:22-23

Long ago the prophet mourned, "This people draweth nigh unto Me with their mouth, and honoreth Me with their lips; but their heart is far from Me." Matt. 15:8 This sad condition, you must understand, arises from the tragic loss of the sense of the majesty, glory and power of the Most High God. We cannot walk blithely and irreverently into God's presence. We dare not come before Him rough shod. He will not accept the worship of our lips when our hearts are far removed from Him. "Take off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground" should be the reverberating echo in the heart of every saint. The continual consciousness of the divine presence, not only at given times of special worship, but at all times day and night should ever abide with us. Redeemed men, realizing the greatness of God, the majesty of His power, and the glory of His presence will walk in reverence and godly fear before him.

God is Spirit and they that worship Him must worship in spirit and in truth. When Christians lose their sense of the majesty and holiness of God, they lose their spirit of worship and, when they lose their spirit of worship, they are no longer able to withdraw inwardly and shut themselves in with the Spirit. They no longer know what it means to walk in the Spirit. The self-confident, bustling worshipper has lost all understanding of the meaning of the words "be still and know that I am God." Such marvelous phrases do not ring the bell of worship in their hearts. The adoring utterance, Abba, Father, no longer escapes as holy incense from their hearts because the consciousness of the majesty of God no longer holds them in awe. They are far too concerned with bustle and noise. To be up and doing, they imagine, is what the Lord demands. They visualize God to be someone like themselves and fancy that God is overjoyed that they are prophesying, casting out devils, and doing many mighty works. Little do they know or care that this unspiritual bustle of activity may one day evoke the words of Christ, "I never knew you: depart from Me, ye that work iniquity."

At the present time the existing church system appears to be making significant gains all over the world. Probably more people go to church than ever before in history, but, while numbers increase and costly buildings are erected in ever increasing and lavish profusion, while world wide efforts costing billions are the thing of the day, the people for the most part have lost their sense of the majesty of God. Presidents talk glibly about being born again; they speak with tongues, honor the pope, and even join their voices with those who hail Mary as the mother of God. Full well do they fulfill the words of Jesus, spoken to the church of Laodicea, the final church of this age. "Thou sayest, I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing: and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked." Rev. 3:17

Long centuries ago the Corinthian church had fallen to a very low spiritual ebb. Though they were exceedingly zealous of spiritual gifts, 1 Cor. 14:2, especially prophecy and speaking with other tongues, some of them were indulging in sin which was not even named among the Gentiles. 1 Cor. 5:1 Amid all their zeal for outward show, they had become puffed up with spiritual pride, chapter 5:2, losing completely their sense of the majesty and glory of God. The wise apostle knew that their dreadful spiritual loss spelled disaster and judgment. Therefore he wrote this grave and somber warning: "I fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtlety, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ. For if he that cometh preacheth another Jesus, whom we have not preached, or if ye receive another spirit, which ye have not received, or another gospel, which ye have not accepted, ye might well bear with him." 2 Cor. 11:3-4 Another Jesus! Another spirit! Another gospel! Are not these very solemnizing words? Is it possible that in some instances in our day the Jesus that is being preached is another Jesus and not the Jesus Christ of the Bible? Yes, indeed, it is possible. It can be so, it has been so, and many cases it is so today. If the Jesus you preach is not the holy, harmless, undefiled and only begotten Son of God, then he is another Jesus. If your Jesus was not the Jesus who was born of a virgin, he is another Jesus. If he is not the son of Abraham and the son of David, he is another Jesus. If the blood he shed is not the only remedy for and cleansing from sin, he is another Jesus. If he did not die, if he was not buried, if he did not rise triumphant from the dead, if he did not ascend bodily into heaven and if he is not coming again, then he is another Jesus. If your preacher denies all or even some of these cardinal truths, then the Jesus he preaches is another Jesus, and not the spotless Christ of God. Furthermore his spirit is another spirit and not the Holy Spirit.
Long ago the apostle John wrote, "Believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they be of God." If one receives another Jesus, how simple a matter it is that he should also receive another spirit. There is a spirit rampant in the church system that is causing abominable confusion. The Holy Spirit's message for the last days is, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partakers of her sins." Rev. 18, 4 But there is another spirit in our day seeking to unite in one vast conglomerate all the harlot daughters of Protestant denominationalism with the mother of harlots, which is Rome. The whole thought is not born of holiness and purity nor is there any desire for a pure personal relationship with Christ. The burning ambition of the hour is to unite all as one at all costs. The godless great men of the world are bending every effort to bring all mankind under a one, world government. The rich men of the earth are determined that it shall be so. Even now, as you read these lines, they are skillfully maneuvering all nations into financial collapse through rampaging inflation and, having accomplished this end, they will introduce a dictator of their own choosing. Political Babylon is determined to establish a godless one, world government, but they are no more determined to be one than religious Babylon is determined to be one great united harlot system. For a little moment they will both succeed and in that moment the religious harlot will sit astride the beast of the political system, Rev. 17:3, but her abominable triumph will be short lived and of small duration, for the beast will hate the whore and burn her with fire. Rev. 17:16

The specter of world government draws nearer by the hour. Even now the ten nations of the European Common Market are preparing to establish their first government. It cannot be by mere chance that at the same time the Anglican Church, together with many other Protestant denominations, is feverishly seeking ways and means of uniting with Rome. Even at this moment the Ecumenical Movement is sweeping the lifeless churches of Protestantism into union with each other in anticipation of eventual union with Rome. While this effort is progressing among the lifeless denominations, the eloquently named Charismatic Movement with its imagined gifts and spiritual excitement is successfully uniting the evangelical Protestant denominations with the mother of harlots.

In spite of all the signs and wonders of which they speak, I cannot believe this move to be a true spiritual revival. In every great spiritual awakening since Pentecost there has always been an accompanying increase in law, order and morals, even among the ungodly. During the great revivals of George Whitefield, Benjamin Franklin, who was not a believer, remarked, "It seems as though the whole world has become religious." Such is not the case with the spurious revivals of our day. The world continually sinks lower and lower into sin and ever increasing degradation, guzzling its strong drink, sucking its cigarettes, committing adultery, sodomy and incest, marrying and divorcing, murdering its unborn infants, blowing its mind with drugs, increasing daily in violence and murder until it has become a seething mass of godless corruption and immorality. All the while the professing church declares, "I am rich and increased with goods and have need of nothing. I have wealth. I have riches and honor. I have billions in property, all tax free. I have spiritual gifts and signs and wonders." But she knows not that she is wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked.

God's counsel to all those who are joy-riding along with the system is: "Buy of Me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eyesalve, that thou mayest see." Rev. 3:18 The gains of the church system have practically all been external gains and the fearful loss has been internal. The beauty of the life in the Spirit has been exchanged for the luxury of fine temples with comfortable pews. The songs, which once swelled from hearts filled with God's Spirit are now on the hit parade, being popularized by unsanctified professionals from Hollywood or Las Vegas. It is an enormous, degenerating calamity! It is an abomination that maketh desolate! The prayer of saints, "That I may know Him", is precious to the listening ears of our Father in heaven. Though all the riches of the world were ours to own and hold, we are poverty stricken and naked if we have lost our personal relationship with God and are no longer awed by the sacredness of His presence. If in our minds we hold all the wisdom and knowledge of the world, yet, being devoid of the fear of the Lord, we are pitifully ignorant and destitute of all true wisdom, for the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom and the knowledge of the Holy is understanding. It is impossible to keep our hearts right and our spirits sound if our heavenly Father is not to us "glorious in power, fearful in praises, doing wonders." Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever: a scepter of righteousness is the scepter of Thy kingdom. Thou hast loved righteousness, and hated iniquity; therefore God, even Thy God, hath anointed Thee with the oil of gladness above Thy fellows. And, Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the work of Thy hands: They shall perish; but Thou remainest; and they all shall wax old as doth a garment; and as a vesture shall Thou fold them up, and they shall be changed: but Thou art the same, and Thy years shall not fail." [Heb. 1:8-12] It would be well for every reader to meditate on the purifying transformation that becomes the heritage of all men who begin to see God as He really is. Is it not a most remarkable thing that Job, the greatest man in the east, one who feared God and eschewed evil, a man of such character that the Almighty God Himself spoke proudly of him, Job 1:8, should, after receiving a great revelation of the holiness of God, cry out in the agony of his soul, "I have heard of Thee by the hearing of the ear: but now mine eye seeth Thee.
Wherefore I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes." Job 42:5-6 Such abhorrence of oneself is always the result of a true revelation of the holiness and majesty of God. When a man beholds the glory of God, all his own righteousnesses become as filthy rags. When I survey the wondrous cross On which the Prince of glory died, My richest gain I count but loss And pour contempt on all my pride. A. W. Tozer in his book, The Knowledge of the Holy, made these weighty assertions: "What comes into our minds when we think about God is the most important thing about us. The history of mankind will probably show that no people has ever risen above its religion, and man's spiritual history will positively demonstrate that no religion has ever been greater than its idea of God. Worship is pure or base as the worshipper entertains high or low thoughts of God.

"For this reason the gravest question before the church is always God Himself, and the most portentous fact about any man is not what he at a given time may say or do, but what he in his deep heart conceives God to be like. We tend by a secret law of the soul to move toward our mental image of God. This is true, not only of individual Christians, but of the company of Christians that composes the church. Always the most revealing thing about the church is her idea of God, just as her most significant message is what she says about Him or leaves unsaid, for her silence is often more eloquent than her speech. She can never escape the selfdisclosure of her witness concerning God.

"A right conception of God is basic, not only to systematic theology, but to practical Christian living as well. It is to worship what the foundation is to the temple; where it is inadequate or out of plumb, the whole structure must sooner or later collapse. I believe there is scarcely an error in doctrine or a failure in applying Christian ethics that cannot be traced finally to imperfect and ignoble thoughts about God. It is my opinion that the Christian conception of God current in these middle years of the twentieth century is so decadent as to be utterly beneath the dignity of the Most High God and actually to constitute for professed believers something amounting to a moral calamity. "Perverted notions about God soon rot the religion in which they appear. The long career of Israel demonstrates this clearly enough and the history of the church confirms it. So necessary to the church is a lofty concept of God that, when that concept in any measure declines, the church with her worship and moral standards declines along with it. The first step down for any church is taken when it surrenders its high opinion of God." End of quote.

How dread are Thine eternal years,
O everlasting Lord!
By prostrate spirits day and night
Incessantly adored!
How beautiful, how beautiful
The sight of Thee must be,
Thine endless wisdom, boundless power
And awful purity!
Oh, how I fear Thee, Living God,
With deepest, tenderest fears,
And worship Thee with trembling hope
And penitential tears!
There are many mysteries spoken of in the word of God. They are called mysteries because no other word would adequately describe them. We read of the mystery of godliness, the mystery of iniquity, the mystery of the translation of the saints in Christ, the mystery of the kingdom, and many others. Again we read of "Mystery, Babylon the Great, Mother of harlots and abominations of the earth." It has always been a trait of human nature to want to delve in mysteries, but there are many mysteries, which have scarcely ever been noticed. Indeed, it is completely impossible to fathom them in any degree except by the revelation of the Holy Spirit.

It is my purpose just now to write about that one great mystery which is called Mystery Babylon, but for the sake of making ourselves acquainted with the thought of mystery, let us consider briefly one or two of the other mysteries, which perhaps are more readily understandable.

"Great is the mystery of godliness," wrote Paul. "God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, received up into glory." There are many mysterious things about godliness that even godly men can never understand. What strange mysterious element is there to godliness that keeps a man pressing relentlessly on toward an invisible mark when both friend and foe tell him he is a fool to continue thus wasting his life and his time, when his manner of living brings him nothing but persecution, tribulation, lone-someness and friendlessness? The inner urge of godliness that makes him endure a cross, despise shame, go to prison or to the stake, scoff at tribulation, and count every loss to himself a gain for Christ is in itself nothing less than a fabulous mystery, a mystery that can never be explained in this world and scarcely in the world to come. The glory of this mystery is worthy to be written on pages of silver with ink of gold, but none of earth's philosophers could trace with a golden pen such sage, deathless truth as lies hidden in the "mystery of godliness." Only with the finger of God can such truth be written and then alone on pages not less worthy than the incorruptible heart. Great is the mystery that God was manifest in the flesh, that God was justified in the Spirit, that God was preached unto the Gentiles, and that God was received up into glory.

The mystery of iniquity, the mystery of lawlessness and rebellion - what a mystery it is! As we cannot explain the mystery of godliness, neither can we explain the mystery of ungodliness. Lawlessness has been in the hearts of men ever since the day in Eden's lovely garden when Adam fell. What is this mysterious thing that is called rebellion against God? Who on earth can understand or explain it? Why did Cain kill his brother? Why did Ishmael mock Isaac? Why was Joseph hated of his brethren? Why were the prophets slain, the Christ crucified, the apostles murdered, and the saints martyred? Why is it that four times in the annals of history bloody mysterious men - Pharaoh, Haman, Herod, and Hitler - arose on the world's gloomy horizon with a diabolic, barbaric, bloody plan to systematically destroy from the face of the earth the people God had chosen? What mysterious lawlessness is it that makes boys destroy the nests of beautiful song birds, or throw stones through the windows of vacant buildings, or scratch the paint on a new car, or a thousand other mischievous things? It is a lawlessness that has its root in mystery and none can explain the reason for it. How very often have delinquent young men and women, arraigned before a court, been asked to give their reason for committing some senseless crime, only to reply with a foolish look on their faces and a ridiculous shrug of the shoulders in the senseless words, "I don't know." In that, indeed, they spoke the truth, for they themselves do not understand the strange working of the mystery of lawlessness within them.
Rev. 17:2-6. While the beloved John was exiled on lonely Patmos, the very breath of the Spirit bore him forward over two thousand years of time to disclose before his wondering eyes the glories and the desolations that were to climax this age in which we live. John, who fell as one dead before the feet of Him who stood arrayed in resplendent glory in the midst of the seven candlesticks, now found himself standing in wonder and amazement before the great Mother of harlots and abominations of the earth. This mysterious woman is given the full and complete title of unrighteousness, Mystery Babylon the Great, Mother of harlots and abominations of the earth.

How great must have been the wonder of this man of God when his eyes beheld the great whore, sitting astride many waters. (The waters signify people: see Rev. 17:15) The kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication. He was carried away in the Spirit into the wilderness, and saw a woman sit upon a scarlet colored beast, full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns. “And the woman was arrayed in scarlet and purple color, decked with gold and precious stones and pearls, having a golden cup in her hand full of abominations and filthiness of her fornication. And upon her forehead was a name written; Mystery, Babylon the Great, Mother of harlots and the abominations of the earth. And I saw the woman drunken with the blood of the saints and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus; and when I saw her, I wondered with great admiration.” Rev. 17:2-6

Gen. 11:1-9 Long, long ago when man was still young and the earth was one language and one speech, the people wandered into a plain in Shinar near the mouth of the Euphrates River. In this place was Ur of the Chaldees from which Abraham was later called, Gen. 11:31, and in which still later the mighty kings, Nebuchadnezzar, Cyrus, and Darius, were to reign in splendor in Babylon. Centuries previous to this Adam had basked in the glories of Eden in this same region of the rivers Euphrates and Hiddekel. What an historic region this was, indeed! Perhaps no other spot on earth has had more to do with the destinies of man than this region, and history with its types and shadows that had its cradle there will one day rock the earth as its mysteries unfold.

So the inhabitants of earth wandered to Shinar, the land near the Persian Gulf, and these people, lest they become dispersed from one another on the face of the earth, decided to build a city and a mighty tower that would reach to heaven. With adobe brick baked and burned and slime for mortar they set about the impossible task of building a tower which would reach right up to heaven itself. With what zeal they set about their task and with what labor and travail they inched their weary way toward the skies! Poor little earth-bound man with his feeble trowel and unstable mortar will never reach those realms immortal. Not by sweat of face and labor of hands can such glories be attained, but only through faith in blood incorruptible, speaking better things than that of Abel, can we rise on the omnipotent arm of the Spirit into the realms that are eternal.

It was in mercy that the gracious Father came down from His throne to see the work they were doing. Gen. 11:5. Well did He know that the tower, which they struggled to build that day, was but the harbinger of many, many more such similar and fruitless attempts through succeeding ages. Indeed, they would not build again with slime and brick, but with vast and varied means of self-righteousness would man in future years try to span the gulf between himself and God and seek to rise by his own effort from the lowly earth to the vaulted skies. And so God came down to see their work and what He saw displeased Him greatly. Therefore with one stroke He garbled and confused their language so that none understood the speech of his neighbor. Every man went about babbling sounds unintelligible to all but himself and his own family. All work was disrupted; everything was deranged. Discomposure, disturbance and de-organization reigned unchallenged. Disconcerted and perplexed people shuffled about amid the topsy-turvy insanity of the hour and sought with haste to scatter themselves abroad on the earth to free themselves from the demented and chaotic throng. When the confusion and disorder had died away and the whole of humanity was scattered abroad, God Himself gave the place a name - Babel (or Babble) - a name that would fitly describe for all time the age-lasting confusion that would exist for the world of mankind who would henceforth try to bring unity and a way to the realms of God by the efforts of the carnal mind.

Here at Babel, which means confusion, we have the beginning of the great mystery of Babylon, which is to follow through each succeeding generation, ever widening its scope of power and influence until it sits astride the whole earth, full of wealth and swaggering in drunkenness from the blood of the saints, still as religious as ever, still seeking to build a tower to heaven, but still the eternal mystery of confusion and disorder, the Mother of harlots and abominations of the whole earth. Here at Babel, then, began the idea of trusting in some visible work of man's hands to bring unity and oneness of speech.

Full forty years Israel had wandered in the wilderness, but at long last they had passed over Jordan and were now in the glorious land promised to Abraham in the long ago. The manna of the wilderness ceased as soon as they passed over Jordan and they rejoiced in the fruit of that wonderful land of promise. From here on they were to have a new Captain, even the captain of the Lord of Hosts. The directions for capturing the city of Jericho were simple, indeed, and without the loss of a man the city fell into their hands. Greatly did they rejoice over their victory, and it was with joyful confidence that they sent a small army of men the day following to capture the little city of Ai. But their joy was short-lived, for the men of Ai came out and fought against them and beat them back, and thirty-six men of Israel fell before them. There was a reason for this defeat, and with what breath-taking interest is the story told in Joshua, chapter 7. "Israel hath sinned," said God, "and therefore cannot stand before their enemies." So lots were cast to find the sinner and Achan of the tribe of Judah was taken. And Joshua said to Achan, "My son, give, I pray, glory to the Lord God of Israel and make confession unto Him, and tell me now what thou hast done; hide it not from me." And Achan answered Joshua and said, "Indeed, I have sinned against the Lord God of Israel and thus have I done: When among the spoils I saw a goodly Babylonish garment and two hundred shekels of silver and wedge of gold, I coveted them and took them, and, behold, they are hid in the earth in the midst of my tent."

So here it is so very soon! A goodly Babylonish garment, together with the other two things that always go with it - silver and gold. Here is the garment of Babylon throwing confusion and disorder into the ranks of the people of God and making them lose the victory and flee before their enemies. Five times in this seventh chapter God spoke, saying, "Israel hath sinned in the accursed thing." Verses 11, 12, 13, 15

I must speak with the utmost solemnity here. I must invite all men to sober thought. Did you ever see it fail? The moment God begins a mighty work of grace and power and unity, someone begins to covet the Babylonish garment. He secretes it away into his tent to hide it there. The very thing that was to have been destroyed he secretly saves, and with it he starts to build another tower, another language, and another nation to add to the universal confusion and disorder that is manifest everywhere in the church. It is difference of language above everything else that makes the many nations of earth. It is literal Babylon that separates brother from brother and makes them more hateful than a foe. It is spiritual Babylon that separates Christian from Christian, destroying unity and dividing purpose and making all speak a different language. It is spiritual Babylon that divides the people of God, making them foreigners and strangers, none speaking intelligibly to the other.

Some years ago I learned with indelible thoroughness the great distress and confusion that comes from difference of language. We had driven into Paris at evening just when the streets were thronging with people bent on getting home from work as quickly as possible. The broad ways buzzed with noisy cars and buses and the sidewalks thronged with pedestrians. I was a stranger and a foreigner in the city, a man of different speech. I did not know where I wanted to go nor did I know how to get there. I could not speak French nor did I know how to make myself understood. While thousands young and old waved and chatted, laughed and talked, asked their questions and received their answers, I might as well have been on Mars or the moon for all I could understand. While I contemplated my first move, I realized that even the color of a man's skin cannot divide him from his fellow man as hopelessly as the language he speaks or does not speak. There will always be divided nations as long as different language exists. There will always be denominations, sects, and confusion as long as men hide the accursed Babylonish garment in their tent. The denominational (sectarian) spirit that always seeks to build that which is visible and the Babylonish (Babel) spirit are one and the same thing.

In reading the story of Achan, how for his sin both he and all that appertained to him were stoned with stones and burned with fire until Israel was completely ridded of both the Babylonish garment and those that had a desire for it, one is reminded of the final destruction of that great system as recorded in Rev. 18:9 "And the kings of the earth who have committed fornication and lived deliciously with her shall bewail her and lament for her when they shall see the smoke of her burning, standing afar off for fear of her torment saying, Alas, Alas, that great city Babylon, that mighty city, for in one hour is thy judgment come."
I do not believe there is any way to explain, imagine, or understand the many ways this mystery of Babylon works. Even before the apostles of Christ had gone to their eternal reward, the sectarian system had set in among the saints of the Lord and many people were wearing the Babylonish garment. They were becoming disciples of Paul, of Apollos, of Cephas, and of many others. The Babble had begun and the mysterious harlot was raising her ugly head.

But the spirit of Babylon goes much deeper than sects and denominations. It is a mystery, the spirit of which seems to be deep-rooted in the heart of man. It is like an octopus with many arms reaching in all directions. If it cannot catch us with one of its arms, it will enfold us with another. It is like a demon, which, being cast out, will return with seven other demons more powerful and cunning than itself. We do not have to look for the spirit of Babylon in some great and powerful denomination; we will find it in our hearts if we look close enough. Mystery, Babylon, is in the forehead.

If any man will follow God and walk in the glorious light of revelation and truth as it falls on his pathway, it will not be long before he finds himself at odds with his fellow Christians. We can follow this thought from the death of Abel at the gate of Eden to the present day. Follow the memoirs of the patriarchs, the prophets, the apostles, the reformers right down to our day and the story is always the same. We cannot walk with God and walk with men, too. It is impossible. When the whale could not assimilate Jonah, it vomited him out. When the system, the sect, or denomination cannot assimilate and digest us and make us a part of itself, it will vomit us out as sure as God is in His heaven.

This is not the thing that frightens me, however. The thing that fills my heart with consternation is this: no sooner has the revelation of God delivered us from the power of Babylon than we begin to cast our eyes about us, and count noses to find out who is with us and who is against us, and what material we can find to build another tower of Babel. This in itself is the Babylonish, sectarian spirit reaching out another of its octopus-like arms to enfold us and bring us back to itself. We wake up to find we have not come to Mount Zion, the city of the living God, but have just wandered down another street in Babylon itself. We have changed one Babylonish garment for another and we are still part and parcel of the same devouring monster. To call ourselves undenominational is not enough. We must have the name of Babylon erased from our foreheads by the mind of Christ and a new name written there, even the name of the City of God.

You must have noticed that Mystery, Babylon, is described as the mother of harlots. Now it is only sound reasoning to say that, if a certain harlot is the mother of harlots, she must have a number of daughters all of whom are harlots like herself. When John saw this great mystery, Babylon, he saw her sitting on a scarlet colored beast, having seven heads and ten horns. John stood and wondered with great admiration at what he saw till the angel spoke and asked, "Wherefore didst thou marvel? I will tell thee the mystery of the woman and of the beast that carrieth her, which hath seven heads and ten horns." Rev. 17:4-7 Then in verse 9 he says, "And here is the mind that hath wisdom. The seven heads are seven mountains on which the woman sitteth." As far as I know, there is only one city in the world situated on seven mountains and that city is Rome. Rome, which in 316 A.D. made Christianity the state religion of the entire Roman Empire, and began to wed Christianity with paganism. Though many are loath to believe it, I do not believe anyone can successfully deny that all Protestant sects sprang originally from this one mother. Though this is all a great mystery, I declare these harlotish daughters are being born every day and the kings and priests of the earth are committing fornication with them. A royal priesthood is made up of kings and priests, and it is the kings and priests that are involved with this Babylonish woman and her daughters.

The call of the Lord today is, "Come out of her, My people, and be not partaker of her sins." But verily I say to you that we will need much more wisdom than the wisdom of man to be set free from this octopus that holds Christendom in its many entwining arms. The wisdom of man will praise God for its deliverance from one of the harlots of Babylon even while it is fondly embracing another. While men are praising God for deliverance from one arm of the octopus, they are being enfolded by another, and while they rejoice that they have found their way out of the darkness of one of the streets of Babylon, they awaken to find they are walking down another.

Forgive me if I boast a little, for this boasting is not the kind that savors of pride, but rather brings great sadness to my heart. There may be many men in the world qualified to speak of these things, but few have been more qualified by experience than I both to see and discern the many ramifications of the Babylonish system. I was born into the system many years ago. I walked its streets and wore its garments before I ever knew Christ as my personal Saviour. The denomination was everything. It mattered little how men lived or whether they had any personal experience with God. The thing that mattered was whether or not they were church-goers. They did not hide the Babylonish garment in their tent; they wore it with pride. Neither did they hide the talents of silver and the wedge of gold. The more they contributed to the organization the better Christians they were. Then one day I found Christ and my heart was filled with joy because of a love I had for Him. I wanted to be near Him and point other men to Him. He was to me the center of all things and the most important person in all the universe. It was not long, however, before I saw that I was falling into another sect. They wanted me to speak their language and help to build their tower. Was I going to join them? Was I going to preach for them? Was I going to wear their garments? Was I going to be distinctly theirs? But God was leading me on, delivering me from the prisons of Babylon, opening the rusty gates, and leading me out into the broad ways of His grace divine.

Perhaps it was a miracle. I do not think it was chance. I learned that men could be baptized with the Holy Spirit. So I sought and found this blessed new experience in God, and joys flowed like a river as the Comforter came in. But here again the arms of another daughter of Babylon began to enfold me. Was I going to join their Church? Was I going to preach for them? Was I going to take out papers and credentials? This time I was persuaded, and I did, and for seventeen years thereafter I was a faithful slave of the organization, speaking its language and building its visible tower. But I was never fully satisfied, though I loved the work, I loved the people, and I loved the students of my old Bible School. Many dozens of them went out to minister far and wide and many found their way to distant and foreign lands. I am sure their rewards will be many, indeed.

All the while there was a longing for a freedom which I did not know, a relationship with God that I did not have. Many times I taught the people that some day God would send a revelation of truth, but the very denomination we had so faithfully built would not be able to receive it. When finally that revelation did come, they were not able to receive it, and those of us who did receive it were vomited like Jonah from the belly of the denominational whale, thrown up upon dry land, for we had sickened his stomach.

God does not leave us in a dry land for long if we are bound to be one with Him. Should my life be very long on earth, I shall never be able to forget the glory, the awe, the reverence, the holiness, and the power that came to our classroom as we waited on God that glorious 13th of February, 1948, when God began to do a new thing that was destined for a time to shake the church system all over America. How we sang the songs of deliverance! How the praises of God echoed down the corridors of the soul and re-echoed among the battlements of heaven! Music of heavenly choirs of earth went sweeping up the sky steeps while angels stood at heaven's gates and swept their harps of gold. Day after day, month after month the celestial wonder continued. Heaven came down our souls to greet and glory crowned the mercy seat. People came for thousands of miles to drink at the ever flowing fountain of life and it looked for a time as though the walls of Babylon were to be broken down and the whole church would come marching to Zion.

But the Babylonian captivity was not yet over. As I look sadly in retrospect now, I can see with clearness that the great and blessed move of God was not two years old before the sectarian spirit began to show its ugly head and men began to hide the Babylonish garment in their tents, together with the silver and the wedge of gold. Much as we may despise the Babylonish garment, let me use this pun: The moment the gold gets its wedge in, we are on the way back to Babylon. It is true that we vociferously denied that we had become a sect. Oh, no! Not we! We had no name; we were not registered with the government as a sect and never would be. We had done away with many of the institutions that had characterized other sects. Gone were the Bible Schools. Gone were the church buildings. Gone were the hireling pastors. Gone were so many things that would have identified us with either the Mother of harlots or any of her daughters. The old Babylonish garment was well hidden deep beneath the earth of the tent, but it was there none-the-less, and the whole move was becoming more and more enfolded by another tentacle of the great octopus. Stricter and more rigid became the teaching and the discipline. There was to be no fellowship with anybody who was not within the confines of our ever, narrowing circle. We were the true church. We were the elect. We stood on the foundation and all other men stood on sinking sand. No man must cast out a devil unless he followed us. No teaching was worth the time it took to tell it unless it originated with us. We were the most spiritual people in the world. We were going to reign in the kingdom and even now we were beginning to reign. We had the gifts of the Spirit, and we were going to "call the shots" in the tribulation.

We had been taught that we were journeying back through the churches of Revelation, journeying back from Laodicea to Ephesus. But we did not know that like Ephesus we had lost our first love, and must repent and do the first works over again. We did not remember that one of the dreadful marks of the church of Ephesus was that it was characterized by false apostles, Rev. 2:2, who were not apostles at all, but liars. We did not know that through the years false apostles had crept in among us, men who were apostles in name only, who had never founded anything in their lives but were building on the foundation of others. We did not know that the doctrines and deeds of the Nicolaitanes (which God hates, Rev. 2:6) were prevalent among us. The word Nicolaitanes is formed by two Greek words: nikao which means to conquer and laos which means the people or the laity. This doctrine had reared its ugly head to the extent that the people had no voice in anything. The elders were no longer fathers, but men who were to carry out the will of those who were lords over the heritage of God. Everything was cut and dried and firmly enfolded in the arms of another of the harlot daughters of the Babylonian system. We boasted of the gifts of the Spirit, but what had become of them? Where were the healings? Where were the miracles? Where was the faith, the gift of languages, the word of wisdom, the word of knowledge? The only thing that was left was prophecy and it became a weariness to the flesh, flowing continually from the mind of man and scarcely ever having any fulfillment. Prophecy that has no fulfillment comes from one of two sources: from the mind of Satan or from the mind of man, but never from the mind of God. How often I have listened to people fumble for words as they prophesied, thus giving the lie to their words having been inspired of God. How is the faithful city become a harlot! It was full of judgment; righteousness lodged in it; but now murderers. Isa. 1:21

I shall never cease to thank God that I was vomited out of the belly of this whale also, for we never know the depths to which we have sunk until we are able to view Babel at a distance. Then and then alone our hearts give thanks to God for deliverance from another of the harlot daughters of Babylon. My heart can sing with David, "My soul is escaped as a bird from the snare of the fowler, the net is broken and I am escaped." Nevertheless, one is scarcely delivered from his bondage until another arm of the Babylonian octopus lies waiting to enfold him again. Therefore we may well ask, "What are we to do?"

The natural mind is ever seeking something visible and tangible. It loves to look around and say, "This and that belongs to me and I belong to it. This is in my circle, that does not belong." It loves to be able to count noses and number the people. It loves to be able to circumscribe a certain group and say with evident pride, "This is the church. All who stand on this foundation are the church. All who do not are not the church." I often wondered why it was that God was so angry with His servant David, for his transgression in numbering Israel. I do not wonder about that any more. David wanted something he could see with his natural eyes, something he could circumscribe, something he could count as his, something he could depend upon for safety. He had forgotten that only God knew who were really his. He did not remember that God saves not by many or few. The dreadful anger of God against his action brought destruction to many of those whom David had counted and great was the slaughter among the people of the Lord. 2 Sam. 24

The hour has come for us to realize that only the Lord knoweth them that are His. Only the Lord can gather the tares out of the wheat. Only the Lord can separate the sheep from the goats. Only the Lord can call His sheep by name and lead them out. Only the Lord can look into the four corners of the earth and call forth His elect. Who, then, am I to circumscribe anything? I must learn to know men, not by what they say, what they believe, where they are, or least of all because they are members of a certain group, but by that strange witness that made Jesus say to Peter, "Thou are Peter," and by that same spiritual revelation that made Peter say to Jesus, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God". How often we have been shockingly disappointed in men! It was because we knew them only after the flesh and we did not know them after the Spirit. We accepted them because they were inside a certain circle and said they belonged to "the move". Yes, indeed, they may have been inside the circle and they may have been in the move, but where were they in God's eyes? That is the important question.

During the last few years I have become increasingly aware that many who appeared to be in the move were not in it, and many who appeared not to be in it were chosen and elect of God. Paul gave us the inside picture of a wonderful truth when he declared, "Henceforth we know no man after the flesh; yea, if we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now henceforth know we Him no more". If Samuel had gone by outward appearance, he would certainly have chosen one of the brothers of David rather than David to be king over Israel. Fine men of stature and character though they were, he rejected them all because he had no witness of the Spirit that they were the elect of God, but when David passed before him, he poured the oil upon him because the Spirit of God witnessed that this was one of the elect of the Lord whom He had chosen to kingship. Because this is a spiritual thing, it cannot really be explained in words; it must be spiritually discerned and understood. But of a truth I tell you that there is no other way on earth among men whereby we can escape the clutching arms of the harlot daughters of Babylon except to flee away from all that is visible and natural and be joined eternally to that blessed company who are imbued with the mind of Christ. Oh, if only I could explain that to have the mind of Christ dwelling in us has nothing whatever to do with any sort of reformation, imitation, impersonation, representation, semblance, or copy. Rather it is death to the old and resurrection to the new. The mind that dwelt in Christ was the Father's mind, and the mind that we are to "let be in us" is the very same mind that dwelt in Him. There and there alone is the "body spirit". We will never escape from the multitudinous confusions of Babylon until the mind of Christ dwells in us and we are joined in spirit and in mind to those who have the spirit and mind of Christ. Physical and visible unions can never be real, much less permanent. That glorious company of Zion are those who have the Father's name in their foreheads.

Our personal association with the lovely and wonderful Jesus is the one and only thing that is important. Our association with visible towers no matter how strong, how high, or how numerous means nothing at all, but serves only to associate us with mystery, Babylon, the Mother of harlots and abominations of the earth. After years of association with the visible church and after a ministry of transcending greatness, the beloved Paul prayed from the depths of his soul, "That I may know Him." Let human voices repeat it. Let angels mighty in glory and strength shout it from the gates of Paradise - our personal association with Jesus is the one thing of transcending importance. As long as the age abides, no group of people will ever be found, all of whom have God's name in their foreheads. Mystery, Babylon, will always be found among them. Concentrate on your personal relationship to Him. Know no man by the size of his stature or the multitude of his words. If we are not knit together in Spirit, we are not one at all.

Many years ago, before Christ became Lord of my life, I became a member of a secret order. They taught us secret signs and ways by which we were to identify ourselves to strangers who were also members of the same order. We had a sign which we could pass to a stranger which given, meant, "I am; are you?" If the stranger was a member of the same order, he returned a sign, which meant, "I am." This may well serve for the secret societies of the earth, but it is not by the flashing of secret signs that we know Christ or those who have His name in their foreheads. It is by an inner revelation to the heart that the glad answer is given, "I am."

How my heart thrilled with glory and praise as I read the blessed account in John 1:35-49. That passage must have been written as a definite example for all those who have made their personal relationship with Christ the object of supreme importance. It reads: Again the next day after John stood and two of His disciples; and looking upon Jesus as He walked, he said, "Behold the Lamb of God!" And the two disciples heard him speak and they followed Jesus. It was not conversation, teaching, association, or study that forced the inspired words from the lips of John, but rather the same Spirit that made him leap in his mother's womb when once, thirty years before, the salutation of Mary had sounded in the ears of Elizabeth. And now in full-blown manhood this rough dweller of the wilderness, standing with girdle of skin and bearded face, thrills with the witness of the Son of God while his lips move with prophetic exactness, "Behold the Lamb of God." And the two disciples who stood by his side, feeling the same impelling witness, strode off to follow Jesus and be His disciples. "And Jesus turned, and saw them following." Not a word had He uttered and yet they followed. They followed not from outward persuasion but from a witness born from within. That is the personal association I mean - one born of an inner light, an inner witness, a knowledge that He is the Son of God. Many a one has been taught the story of Jesus and can repeat from memory the account of His miracles, His death, His resurrection, and even speak of His coming again, who has never had an inner witness that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God.

"Then Jesus saw them following, and saith unto them, What seek ye? They said unto Him, Rabbi, where dwellest Thou? He saith, Come and see, and they abode with Him that day." Though foxes have holes and birds have nests, where does this man dwell who has nowhere to lay His head? He dwells in God and God dwells in Him, and They abide in the hearts of men and women like you and me whose lips have uttered the exultant shout of the Spirit as He witnesses within, "Behold the Lamb of God."

One of the disciples who heard John speak and followed Jesus was Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, who went to seek for Peter and tell him of Jesus. Sing, O my soul, and shout, O ye heavens, for the inward assurance of his words to Peter. "We have found the Messiah." And he brought him to Jesus. Wonder of wonders, the Spirit witnesses again, for Peter is the man who in the face of the fallacious misconception of the multitude declared, "Thou art the Christ; Thou art the Son of God." Jesus replied, "Flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto you, but My Father which is in heaven." Matt. 16:17

"The day following Jesus would go forth into Galilee and findeth Philip and saith unto him, "Follow Me!" Philip findeth Nathaniel and saith unto him, "We have found Him of whom Moses in the law and the prophets did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph." And Nathaniel saith unto him, "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?" Philip saith unto him,

"Come and see." Jesus saw Nathaniel coming and saith unto him, "Behold an Israelite, indeed, in whom is no guile." Nathaniel saith unto him, "Before Philip called thee, when thou wast under the fig tree, I saw thee." Nathaniel answered and saith, "Rabbi, Thou art the Son of God. Thou art the King of Israel."

The above passage deserves pages of explanation, but can we not see that it is filled with the spirit of revelation? Can we imagine our reaction should a stranger meet us on the street and command us to follow him as Jesus commanded Philip? It would need much more than a command to make me follow. It would need a revelation, and a revelation it was that made Philip leave all and follow this stranger. It was revelation that made him say they had found Him of whom Moses wrote, and it was the same inner witness that filled the tongue of Nathaniel with the eager words, "Rabbi, Thou art the Son of God; Thou art the King of Israel."

Our association with a system means nothing. Our association with Christ means everything. Our association with Jesus means order and eternal life. The kingdom of God cometh not with observation. It is only Babylon that can be observed. The kingdom of God is invisible to all fleshly eyes, but it is visible to the eyes of the Spirit.

Since the hour man became separated from the glories of the invisible realm, he has sought to put his confidence in the visible realm. When man could no longer see God, he made gods out of wood and stone and bowed down to them. It mattered not that they could neither speak nor hear nor see. He wanted something that he could see with his eyes of flesh, and of which he could say, "These be thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt." "According to the number of thy cities were thy gods, O Judah, and according to the number of streets of Jerusalem have ye set up altars to the shameful thing, even altars to burn incense unto Baal." Jer. 11:13

But the mystery of Babylon is more deep-seated than visible things like images, sects, and denominations. It is something that has become apart of the mind. The name, Mystery, Babylon, was written in the forehead of this woman that sat on many waters.

Rev. 17. It was something in her mind and in her heart. It was her name. It was her constitution and make up. She could not think nor live without it. To have the name of God in the forehead is to have the mind of Christ. Therefore to have the name Mystery, Babylon, in the forehead is to have the very mind of this mysterious system that loves the visible and loves to point to some earthly thing and say, 'This is the tower that leads to heaven.'

Babel! Babel! Babel! This strange mysterious realm of confusion, multiplied languages, tongues, sects, denominations, organizations, ists and isms has so thoroughly become part and parcel of the thinking of the whole Christian world that nothing makes sense without it. If we must go to the hospital, we are asked for the name of our denomination. If we join the army, we are asked for the name of our denomination. If we mention religion, someone will ask us what denomination we adhere to.
John saw the great harlot sitting on many waters. Rev. 17:1. Then in verse 15 he said, "The waters which thou sawest where the whore sitteth are peoples and multitudes and nations and tongues." It only takes half an eye to see that this is a universal system that sits astride the whole earth. "For all nations have drunk of the wine of her fornication, and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth have waxed rich through the abundance of her delicacies." Rev. 18:3.

This mysterious system is to be finally and irrevocably destroyed. In David's prophecy of the Babylonian captivity of Israel, Psa. 137, he says, "O daughter of Babylon who art to be destroyed." The destruction of the earthly system is sure, and has been in the heart of God Himself from the time of its beginning at Babel. Isaiah by prophetic vision also saw the destruction of this mysterious system. "For thus hath the Lord said unto me, Go, set a watchman; let him declare what he seeth. - And behold, there cometh a chariot and a couple of horsemen. And he answered and said, Babylon is fallen, and all the graven images of her gods hath he broken to the ground." Isa. 21:6, 9 See Jer. 51:8. But the climacteric of her fall comes in the vision of John. The great fall actually takes place at the moment of the sealing in the foreheads of the second one hundred and forty four thousand, elect and chosen out of the whole earth. When this glorious act is complete, then the system, which has in its forehead (mind) Mystery Babylon, comes to a cataclysmic destruction. Rev. 14:8. See also verses 1-8. The importance of the destruction of Mystery Babylon is emphasized greatly by the fact that Revelation 17, 18, 19:1-6 are taken up with the fearful destruction of the system, the mourning of those who are part of it, and the rejoicing of the saints and the heavenly hosts.

While the destruction of this great harlot system is the cause for dreadful weeping and remorse to those who loved her, Rev. 18:16-19, it is the time of jubilation for those who know nothing but a personal relationship with Jesus Christ. "Babylon is fallen," shout the prophets. "Babylon is fallen," cried mightily the angels. Rejoice over her, thou heaven, and ye holy apostles and prophets, for God hath avenged you of her. "And after these things I heard a great voice of much people saying, Alleluia; Salvation and glory, and honor, and power unto the Lord our God; - For He hath judged the great whore which did corrupt the earth with her fornication, and hath avenged the blood of His servants at her hand. And again they said, Alleluia, and her smoke rose up forever and forever. And the four and twenty elders fell down and worshipped God that sat on the throne saying, Amen, Alleluia. And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, Alleluia, for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth." Rev. 19:1-6. And they shall see His face, and His name shall be in their foreheads.

There is no truth, which concerns each one of us more vitally than the present truth regarding "Mystery Babylon". I have not written at length on this subject for the sake of condemning someone else or of heaping disrepute on the heads of denominations and sects, calling them Babylon, disorder and confusion while at the same time trying to justify myself. Babylon as I see it today is not the same picture I saw ten or twelve years ago. Then I saw just the outward form of sectarianism. Now I see it as something far more deep-seated than that. Today I see it as Mystery Babylon, something that is written right in the forehead of all Christendom, something so deep-rooted and so deep-seated that Christians are unable to think except in terms of established orders, sects, denominations, creeds, assemblies, doctrines, meetings, communions, baptisms, programs, campaigns, preachers, missionaries, tracts, healings, gifts, personal work, radio and television programs, offerings, drives, invasions, publications, Sunday Schools, Bible schools, alms, church buildings, special numbers, special speakers, etc., etc., etc., etc. But after they have finished a whole lifetime of this feverish church activity, how many people are there who have ever taken time to wait on God long enough to hear Him speak and to have Him divulge His will to their seeking hearts? I tell you of a truth that any man or woman who will take time to wait on God in fasting and prayer, seeking God's mind and God's eternal will—that man will find himself drifting away from all these aforementioned things and from there on the mind of Christ will be his program, his quest, and his eternal joy.

Our Lord Jesus Christ painted a parabolic picture of our present Babylonish system when one day He summed it all up in these words: "Not every one that saith to Me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to Me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in Thy name, and in Thy name cast out devils, and in Thy name done many wonderful works? Then I will profess unto them, I never knew you: Depart from me, ye that work iniquity." Matt. 7:21-23 Just imagine that! After such a list of plausible works these people still do not know God and God does not know.
There is a very great error in the earth that is keeping men in the bondage of Babylon. Let me put it as clearly as I can in these words. It is abundantly evident to both Christian and non-Christian that the enormous, iniquitous, calamitous confusion of sects and activities by which the existing church is held in captivity is in truth Mystery Babylon the great. The confused sinner on the street will tell us so and the confused Christian in the system will admit it as well. But it is not enough for us to point to the system and call it Babylon. The important thing for us is to see by revelation that we too, are bound and chained by that mysterious harlot, Babylon. Do you realize that the great holy man, Daniel, was once the third ruler of Babylon? The wonderful thing was that he knew he was in Babylon and his heart ached and longed for the time when he would return to beautiful Zion. Even when the decree was signed that no man should make any request of God or man but of the king only, Daniel went to his house and three times each day he raised his window toward Jerusalem and kneeled down and made request to God that he might be delivered from Babylon, its king, its system, and all that pertained to it, and that he might return to Jerusalem, that/ree city which is above and is the Mother of us all. Dan. 6:10 Gal. 4:26

Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego were also among the chief princes of Babylon, but they, too, realized where they were and would not bow down to the image of that system. They would gladly go to the burning fiery furnace rather than bow down their knees to the Babylonian image. Even while the great Nehemiah delivered the cup into the hand of the king, his heart was crying for Jerusalem because the gates of that city were burned with fire, Neh. 1 and 2, and he requested of the king that he might return and rebuild them.

Now the thing that distresses me is this: Thousands of people who call the existing system Babylon still do not know that they are dwelling there themselves and that the name, Mystery Babylon, is in their minds. Few teachings I have ever been privileged to give have provoked more comment than the teaching regarding Mystery Babylon. Some of the comments and testimonies I have received were a great help and encouragement to me, but I am sad to say that others, who were loud in their praise of the truth of the message immediately proceeded to tell of their association with the system in some form and this proved that they had missed the real import of the message and the truth it was to convey. That is the great error that is binding Christians to this system and keeping them away from the mind of Christ. With their heads they know it is Babylon, but they have never seen it with their hearts by a spiritual revelation. Once you see by a revelation from God what I am talking about, you will find yourself obliged to separate yourself from the Babylonish woman and be joined unto Christ in the Spirit. It would do us all abundant good to meditate on these words, "He that is joined to a harlot is one flesh, but he that is joined to the Lord is one spirit." 1Cor. 6:16 The harlot is the system and is of the flesh; the Lord is Christ, and union with Him is a union of the Spirit.

As soon as the truth of this revelation dawns upon you, you are immediately thrown into a turmoil of frantic wonder, trying to imagine where you are going to find fellowship, where you will find a church home, what will your children do, what will you do for activity, what will happen to the sinners and to the heathen, and what about a thousand other questions that will fill your mind. But that, my friend, is because you have been married to the system so long that you cannot think in any terms but its terms. You have been joined by the carnal mind to this woman so long that you don't know how you can live without her. You are like a man who, after being married to u woman for many years, finds that his marriage is illegal. You have been joined to a harlot, but you must forsake her to be joined to Christ in the Spirit. After all, the true church consists of those who are one with Him in the Spirit. In the world today there are approximately nine hundred and twenty-five million church members. Most of these dear people are married to the church and have its name written in their foreheads, but I gravely doubt that from Pentecost until now there have been one hundred and forty-four thousand who have been joined to Christ and have His name in their foreheads. Is it any wonder then that the angels of God cried to the saints, "Come out of her. My people, and be not partaker of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues. For her sins have reached unto heaven and God hath remembered her iniquities?" Rev. 18:4-5 The whole system is doomed to destruction. As sure as God is in heaven, Babylon is going to fall. Nothing can be done to save her, redeem her, or help her. We must come out of her or we will receive her terrible judgments.

It is not against Christians themselves that the dreadful anathemas of the Book of Revelation are proclaimed, but against the harlotish system that has captivated our minds and made us bow in worship at its idolatrous shrine, binding us in slavery to a thousand activities, demanding of us tithes of rue, anise, and cummin, while forgetting judgment and truth. Christ is truth.

We have been spoiled through philosophy and vain deceit, the traditions of men, the rudiments of the world, and we have forgotten Christ. Please read Col. 2:8 The church system has stolen our minds, put its name in our foreheads, and made us think that gain is godliness and that to be devoted to the church makes one a man of God. We have got the whole thing backwards and there is nothing to do but forsake it and seek to be joined to Christ and Him alone. Let His mind dwell in you. Let the other mind be erased and cleansed away by the blood of Jesus and purged by the eternal Spirit. You will discover a glorious thing when for the first time in your Christian life you find your ear deaf to the seductive voice of the harlot and her many daughters, who have made all nations to drink of the wine of her fornication, and find your ear open to the eternal wisdom that flows from the lips of Jesus Christ saying, "This is the way; walk ye in it."

No one realizes better than I do that to teach these things is to cut away the very ground from beneath my feet, for it would seem to leave me without a church, without a congregation, and without a ministry; and I suppose it will leave you in the same predicament. But have we forgotten that "that which thou sowsest is not quickened except it die?" Have we forgotten that the ministry of John the Baptist had to decrease so that the ministry of Christ could begin and increase? Have we forgotten that "except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone, but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit?" Do we not know that the stinging breath of death is followed by the excellent glory of the resurrection just as surely as day follows night and spring unfolds her leaves of glory when the icy bitterness of winter's death is past? Why are we so fearful to obey God and come out from among it all and separate ourselves unto Him? One man who has partaken of the mind of Christ could do more to transform the world and bring in the kingdom than the combined efforts of all the carnal Christians on earth. The carnal mind can never bring in the kingdom because its ways are enmity against God.

I do not want to "hedge" nor "beat about the bush" in what I am saying, but I want to speak my earnest convictions with clarity and assurance. After months of meditation and separating myself unto God, putting my life and my frail ministry on the altar, I have come to the conclusion that to be Joined to Christ in sonship demands our separation and divorce from every last vestige of the Babylonish church system. It should be abundantly clear that the true church is, after all, composed only of those who are joined in unity with Christ, and has nothing whatever to do with denominations, systems, sects, creeds, groups with a name, groups without a name, crowds, congregations, or anything else. Many Christians are inclined to point to Rome and call her Babylon. Others will go so far as to include apostate Protestant denominations; others can see that even the so-called fundamentalists are actually snared also by the Babylonish system and they, too, have the name of Babylon on their foreheads. But this is not enough. We must go right down the line and include all groups large or small, both with a name and without a name. Indeed, we must include any group or activity whatsoever about which our spiritual life has become centered.

What a universe of truth is contained in the words of Col. 2:8. "Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit after traditions of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ." Let us notice these statements one at a time. Beware lest any man spoil you. Spoil in this instance means to rob or plunder. Spoil us of what? Why, they rob us of our personal, intimate wholehearted relationship to Jesus Christ. They rob us of His mind and plunder us of His blessed will so that we become taken up wholeheartedly with things, things, things, a thousand things, but our personal relationship with Him is forgotten in the feverish excitement of accomplishing these things for God. Tens of thousands of Christians have a less intimate relationship with Christ today than they had thirty or forty years ago when they first came to know Him. They have been spoiled; they have been robbed of even their first love because things, things, things that concern the existing church system have taken His place in their lives. Let us look still closer at this scripture. Let us ask a second question. We have noticed that we have been spoiled of OUT personal relationship with Him, but how are we robbed? What method is used by Satan to rob us so that we do not know Him? Paul gives us the answer by naming four things we have followed instead of Christ: philosophy, vain deceit, traditions of men, and the rudiments of the world.

Practically all sermons preached today are merely the philosophy of the preacher, and practically all the philosophy of the preacher is the tradition of men handed down from one generation to the next. These philosophies and traditions of the church become the established doctrines of the sect and men become so zealous in propounding them that they fail to seek His face, come to know His will, or be partakers of His glorious mind. Thus through a lifetime men go on preaching, propounding, contending, and arguing their traditions, which have become their doctrines, until they become like the Pharisees of old. They make the word of God of no effect by their traditions. They become thoroughly spoiled and robbed of their vital association and relationship to Him.

I suppose tens of millions of sermons have been preached to show people how they ought to live, what they ought and ought not to do, what they should wear, what they should eat, where they should go, and just about everything that can be imagined. But there is a simple remedy for all this that is utterly contrary to the multitudinous traditions and the idle philosophies and teachings of our day. It is found in Psa. 119:2-3 "Blessed are they... that seek Him with the whole heart. They also do no iniquity; they walk in His ways." That is a simple answer to all godliness, for men who seek Him with all their hearts will never need to be told how to live righteously. They will do no iniquity and they will walk in His ways.

During the past years a desire has come into my heart that has filled me with longing to see a remnant of God's people in this, the end of the ages, put the Babylonish harlot away and be joined to Christ in the Spirit and joined to Him alone. Everywhere I have advocated that even small groups of people should drop their usual church meetings and spend the time in coming to know Him, partaking of His mind, seeking His will, and growing in Him. Perhaps some have been greatly afraid that this course will give opportunity for an occasion to live after the flesh. No doubt it will in the lives of some, if that is where their treasure lies, for if a man is a spiritual goat, his goat nature will show up sooner or later and in my opinion the sooner the better. But if a man is a spiritual sheep, then he will follow Christ, for "My sheep know My voice and they follow Me and a stranger will they not follow." The traditions of the centuries have taught us to keep sheep and goats, wheat and tares together, but in the end of the age they will be separated.

Many of us have the false notion in our minds that by years of coddling, cajoling, persuading, training, and discipline we can transform a goat into a sheep. After many years of trying to do so we may think we have succeeded, but some day, just when we think we have him trained to be a gentle sheep, he will see his opportunity when our back is turned to show himself as much a goat as ever he was. Dogs return to their vomit because they are dogs, and sows because they are sows return to their wallowing in the mire. There is every evidence in the New Testament that at the end of the age these elements of good and bad, true and false, wheat and tares, sheep and goats are going to be divided one from the other. Nothing can stop this process. The lines are being drawn closer every day. The only thing we need decide is whether or not we are living in the end of the age. We would have to be very blind, indeed, not to know that we are in the last hours of this dispensation. Even the man on the street will tell us that the end is near, even at the doors. The nations of the world are knowingly speeding their own destruction, yet, while they know they are preparing their own dreadful doom, they are being impelled forward to their destruction by powers they cannot explain.

Some will be very quick to point out to me how unscriptural I am in advocating fewer church meetings and more communion with Christ. They will be quick to quote the scripture, "not forsaking the assembling of yourselves together as the manner of some is, but exhorting one another and so much the more as ye see the day (end) approaching." Now there are many things we should say about this:-Firstly, there is only one true basis for assembling ourselves. Our Saviour gave us this basis when He said, "Where two or three are gathered together in My name, there am I in the midst of them." The vast majority assemble, not in the name of the Lord, but because of tradition. All their lives they have assembled at certain times and to them it would be sacrilege not to do so. Others assemble for the sake of making proselytes and others for the sake of furthering their particular doctrine. If honest confession could be made, I would find that almost all are assembling in the name of their particular denomination whether they have a name or not, and most certainly all are assembling for the sake of building up their particular work. God commanded Israel to offer sacrifices, but when it became a form and a tradition, He afterwards told them that their sweet savors were a stink and that He would not accept their offerings. He said their solemn assemblies were iniquity and, when they lifted up their hands to praise the Lord, He hid His eyes from them; and when they made many prayers He would not hear them. Isa. 1:15. What could be more direct than this statement? "Bring no more vain oblations; incense is an abomination unto Me; the new moons and Sabbaths, the calling of assemblies, I cannot away with; it is iniquity, even the solemn meeting." Isa. 1:13 Does not this description of Israel's gatherings and assemblies perfectly fit the existing church today? Read all of Isa., Chapter 1. It is a perfect picture of our modern Babylon.

Yes, it is true that Paul told us to assemble ourselves, but he never imagined that the church would make a religion out of assembling themselves as Israel had done of old. Yet thus it is. We are continually drawing nigh to God with our lips, but our hearts are far away from God. We try to praise, but our minds are not on God. They are wandering over the face of the earth.

They try to prophecy, but their prophecies are coming out of their own heads and find no fulfillment because God has not spoken.

I feel I have the mind of God when I say that it is perfectly right to forsake all such assembling. It is a weariness to the heart of God and He does not delight in it at all. With my whole heart I believe that once we have forsaken this Babylonish tradition and have given ourselves over to true unity with Christ, then and then only will God show us how to gather in the name of the Lord in spirit and in truth. When our minds are one with Him and all earthly program and tradition has vanished away and He takes His royal seat upon the throne of our hearts, then we will be able to assemble in His name. Any other kind of assembling is an abomination to the Lord. It is not His will; it is not His command; He has no delight in it. Why should we assemble for the sake of assembling? Why preach because it is the custom to do so? Why prophesy because it is expected in every meeting, or sing when there is no song from the Lord? This is confusion and disorder. But as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God.

Let us make the mind of Christ our quest. Let us become one with the will of God, for that is the ground and the foundation of the kingdom. Let us divorce ourselves from the harlots of Babylon, for the angels of God with trumpet voices are proclaiming, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partakers of her sins and that ye receive not of her plagues, for her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities." Rev. 18:4-5. We are being asked to come out of a system in which there is everything for the flesh and nothing for the Spirit. Read the following list, verses 12-13, and be convinced. "The merchandise of gold and silver, and precious stones, and pearls, and fine linen, and purple, and silk, and scarlet, and all thine wood, and all manner of vessels and ivory, and cinnamon and odors, and ointments and frankincense and wine and oil, and fine wheat and flour, and beasts, and sheep and chariots, and slaves and souls of men." All this belongs to the visible and natural and cannot enter into the realm of Spirit.

"And after these things I saw another angel come down from heaven, having great power; and the earth was lightened with his glory. And he cried mightily with a strong voice, saying, Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage for every unclean bird. For all nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth are waxed rich through the abundance of her delicacies."

"And I heard another voice from heaven, saying, Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues. For her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities." Rev. 18:1-5.

BELSHAZZAR'S FEAST

THE LAST DAYS OF BABYLON

Many centuries ago the apostle Paul, speaking of the end of the age and the resurrection of the dead, wrote these awe-inspiring words: "But of the times and seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you. For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. For when they shall say, Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape. But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief. Ye are all the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness." Thess. 5:1-5
It is most significant that the apostle warned that the day of the Lord would come as a thief in the night, verse 2, but in verses 4 and 5 he states with assurance that, because certain ones are not of the darkness nor of the night, but are children of the light and of the day, therefore the day of the Lord need not come upon them as a thief. So also did our Lord Jesus Christ exhort His disciples to beware of surfeiting and drunkenness and the cares of this life lest that great day should come upon them unawares. Luke 21:34.

The Lord is a God of great kindness, slow to anger and plenteous in mercy, who does not always chide nor keep His anger forever. Terrible as God's judgments shall be as they fall in justice upon the earth, yet before judgment He always remembers mercy, warning with indispensible signs that His wrath is about to fall, for there may be some who will be wise and repent and give Him glory.

Jesus warned us of surfeiting and drunkenness, and Paul said, "They that are drunken are drunken in the night and they that sleep, sleep in the night." The drunken stupor into which the professing church has fallen is not the drunkenness of him who is inebriated with wine, but the drunkenness that comes by being carried away with the cares of the world and the spirit of the age until men are stupefied and intoxicated with the thing the world calls business and the whirl of trash they call religion.

The signs that portend the end of this present age are so numerous that one knows not where to begin to enumerate them. New and startling events so quickly replace the old that the ink on the page is not dry before all that has been proclaimed is out of date and pushed off into history to make room for the rapidly developing drama. It will not be our purpose now to enumerate or call attention to the startling events of the hour in which we live, for they are for the most part already well known. They glare from every headline and blare from every radio. Things thought impossible months ago have now taken place before our eyes and many more will transpire in the coming months. The last days of Babylon are now upon us. The great image seen in vision by Nebuchadnezzar is about to fall. For thousands of years it has cast its awesome shadow over the whole earth, and now it rises to the greatest height ever known. But vast as is its power and authority in the world, men seem to have forgotten that it is standing upon feet of clay. Just one tap from the stone cut without hands from the mountain and the whole mighty structure will fall to become as the dust of the summer threshing floor. Dan. 2:34,35. Then shall heaven and earth resound to the joyful cry, "Babylon is fallen, is fallen," and the smoke of her burning will go up unto the age of the ages. Never more will she be rebuilt and never more will her image overshadow the nations, but the stone cut from the mountain, the Lord's Christ, will fill the whole earth. Thus shall a kingdom be set up that shall never be removed.

The wonders of the book of Daniel have intrigued men, women and children for hundreds of years and, though the things written therein have been sealed until the time of the end, its pages have been a refreshing delight to men of all ages. But now, as the end approaches, the seals that kept its wisdom hidden from our eyes are being torn away. The charming bud is bursting into a flower of revelation, unfolding to our wondering eyes the things long hidden from our sight.

The great Nebuchadnezzar, under whose rule Babylon had risen to unbelievable heights of power and glory, had long since passed away and now his dissolute grandson, Belshazzar, sat on the throne, basking in the glory that had fallen to his lot. Daniel, the aged prophet, ninety years old when Babylon was captured by the Medes and Persians, had outlived its kings, his life resembling that of the sons of God who, though journeying in the very heart of Babylon, are never defiled by it nor become a part of it. In like manner as he lived through the reign of these Babylonish kings unto the reign of Cyrus, the anointed of God, Isa. 45:1, so shall those undefiled sons do who now walk amid the confusion of this age, ready to pass into the glory of the kingdom ruled and governed by Jesus Christ.

Historians have it that, at the very moment the great feast of Belshazzar, Dan. 5:1-4, was at its height, the Medes and the Persians, led by Cyrus, were at the very gates of Babylon, and it is in this setting that the sordid story of Belshazzar begins. "Belshazzar the king made a great feast to a thousand of his lords, and drank wine before the thousand. Belshazzar, whiles he tasted the wine, commanded to bring the golden and silver vessels which his father Nebuchadnezzar had taken out of the temple, which was in Jerusalem; that the king, and his princes, his wives, and his concubines, might drink therein. Then they brought the golden vessels that were taken out of the temple of the house of God, which was at Jerusalem; and the king, and his princes, his wives, and his concubines, drank in them. They drank wine, and praised the gods of gold, and of silver, of brass, of iron, of wood, and of stone." Dan. 5:1-4.

At the moment when this drunken orgy was at its height, a hand without noise or tumult wrote on the plaster of the wall: mene mene, tekel, upharsin. Mene, both in Hebrew and Chaldee, means, "He has numbered and finished," and being twice repeated signifies the certainty of it. Tekel in Chaldee means, "Thou art weighed," and in Hebrew means, "Thou art too light." Upharsin or pharsin in Hebrew signifies Persian, and peres in Chaldee signifies dividing. Thus Daniel, giving the interpretation by the Spirit of God, said, "God hath numbered thy kingdom, and finished it. Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting. Thy kingdom is divided and given to the Medes and Persians." Dan. 5:26-28.

There is a very special significance in Belshazzar’s feast. Indeed, there is a very special significance to everything that concerns the reign of this evil man, some of which we wish to point out in the following pages. There is, however, one thing, which is of special importance about this man. It is this: he, being the last king of Babylon, was responsible for that dissolute orgy which in type signifies the corrupt and devilish joining together of political and spiritual Babylon at the close of this age.

It has never been my delightful privilege to add fact upon fact to prove a point, but rather to state the truth as it is that men be not persuaded by argument, but enlightened by the Spirit of God that all those who see may understand and those who see not may become blind. What use is there if a man be persuaded through argument only, for then his head is convinced while his heart still lusts after evil things. Many men and many women I have found who are forever proclaiming the message of sonship, but the truth of sonship is not in their hearts. It is in their heads only; therefore they, not possessing the spirit of sonship, give themselves to proving their false position instead of crying, "Abba Father."

For many years now we have earnestly taught that before the end of the age all religious systems would unite under one head, that this would include Catholics and Protestants together with other systems of religions such as Buddhism, Hinduism, Moslemism, and even Judaism. Impossible as this sounded years ago, today one would be hardy indeed to deny that it is taking place before our astonished eyes. Long ago Paul said, "He who now letteth (hindereth) will let until he be taken out of the way; and then shall that wicked be revealed, whom the Lord will consume with the breath of His mouth and destroy with the brightness of His coming." This scripture has been fulfilled, for the letting or hindering influence has been taken out of the way. That influence is the influence of the maturing sons of God, the true spiritual body of Christ. God is delivering them from the systems of Babylon, and now all restraint to evil is taken out of the way. Thus in the last few years there has been an enormous increase in every form of evil and with it there has been a coming together of all the religious systems of the earth. Throwing all reason to the wind, they cast their arguments and theories aside in their clamor for unity. The scripture is being fulfilled before our eyes: "Behold they shall surely gather together, but not by me." Isa 54:15

Not only are we about to see the joining of all religious systems, but yet another wonder is about to take place before the end. Political Babylon, which, like spiritual Babylon, is one vast morass of filth, corruption, and confusion, is going to be joined in unholy wedlock with religious Babylon. Then shall the abominable harlot of religious Babylon, drunken with the blood of saints and martyrs of Jesus, sit boldly and wantonly astride the beast of political Babylon, and, though the political beast hates this religious whore, their corrupt power will sway the whole earth until men shall cry, "Who is like unto the Beast? Who is able to make war with him?"

I shall not hesitate to predict while yet freedom of speech remains that the Roman Pope, after whom all the world now wonders, is presently to become the sole dominating head of religious Babylon. He will exalt himself above God and all that is worshipped and, sitting in the temple of God, will show himself that he is God. 2 Thess. 2:3-4. Think it not strange that this should be, for even in the days of Martin Luther, Pope Leo permitted the blasphemous Tetzel to declare, "The Lord our God no longer reigns. He has resigned all power to the Pope." (See Life and Times of Martin Luther, page 93.) After he is firmly established in the saddle, sitting as head and father of religious Babylon, another wonder will take place and either he or one appointed by him will become head of the United Nations (political Babylon) and thus become the universal head of political Babylon. This whole picture is vividly stated in Rev. 13. The beast, which was wounded unto death in the days of Martin Luther is now being healed and will thrive mightily in his revived power until all the world wonders after the beast. And it was given unto him to make war with the saints and to overcome them, and he opened his mouth in blasphemy against God. Rev. 13:1-10

After this John saw another beast coming up out of the earth, Rev. 13:11-18, exercising all the power of the first beast and causing all people to worship the first beast whose deadly wound was healed, deceiving them that dwelt on the earth by means of the miracles he had power to do. Though the United Nations is now weak and feeble and ready to die, the hour is coming when one shall stand at its head who has such power that all will say, "Who is like unto the Beast: who is able to make war with him?"

This uniting of religious and political power is the final stage of the mystery of Babylon. It is the uniting of the iron and the clay. Never forget that this fearful image here depicted is standing on feet of clay. It is ready to crumble into dust at the smiting of the stone cut without hands from the mountain.

Consider now the feast of Belshazzar that we may observe the things that shall come to pass in these last days, for the book of Daniel was written for the time of the end, and until the time of the end it was sealed up and shut away from the minds of men that it might be a special treasure in our days. Dan. 12:9.

Belshazzar, with the armies of Medo-Persia knocking at his very gates, thought himself perfectly secure. There was no need to call his people to fasting as did the king of Nineveh. Who, thought he, was able to make war with him? No power on earth could break down the mighty gates of his city. No battering rams could penetrate the walls upon which six chariots could race abreast. So instead of calling a fast he called a feast, a feast to his lords and ladies, his wives and concubines, and the captains of his army, men, which had distinguished themselves in the defense of the city. And they ate and drank and made themselves giddy with wine as if to dare the almighty God to do His worst against them.

At the height of all this drunken revelry a new and obscene thought entered the mind of this king of confusion. He would now rise to far greater heights of omnipotence by bringing under his control all the holy vessels of the Lord. He would bring religion and government together under his own headship. Surely such excellent wine as he drank should be drunken from holy vessels! Therefore he commanded that the holy vessels which Nebuchadnezzar had carried from Jerusalem and placed in his storehouse should be brought that the king and his princes, his wives and his concubines should drink therein. Then were the holy vessels brought into the orgy and the king and his princes, his wives and his concubines drank therein and praised, not the God of heaven, but the gods of gold and silver, brass and iron, wood and stone. Dan. 5:1-4

There is much more than mere drunken frolic here. Here is a definite affront to the God of Israel and to His people, who are themselves in truth the holy vessels of the Lord. This is, indeed, the very spirit of Babylon which profanes sacred things and makes a jest of them. They want to drink their ungodly wine from the Lord's vessels to make an outward show of religion and spirituality. How true is the picture as described by the Psalmist! "By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down, yea, we wept when we remembered Zion. We hanged our harps upon the willows in the midst thereof. For they that carried us away captive required of us a song; and they that wasted us required of us mirth, saying, Sing us one of the songs of Zion." Psa. 137:1-3 Sacrifligiously they alienate those things which are dedicated to God, affronting the Lord Himself and bidding defiance to His deity, for they glorified Him not, but praised the gods of gold and silver and brass and iron. Dunghill worshippers they are and dunghill deities they worship.

What a fearful prediction is laid up in this story and with what wonder do we see it being enacted before our very eyes! We do not expect the saints of God to be blessed by the things that follow, but they serve to show that we are at the very hour when the cup of Babylon's iniquity is full and that great city is about to fall.

This desecration of the holy and dedicated things so clearly seen here in the story of Belshazzar's feast is rampant everywhere in our day. Because man is spirit as well as flesh, he finds it impossible to get along without some form of religious observance; but because ungodly men, dominated by the lusts of their bodies, know nothing of worshipping God in spirit and in truth, they drag the holy vessels of the Almighty into the realm of the flesh that they might mingle their drink in them and praise a visible god, even though it be only gold and silver, wood or earth. Are you aware of the abominable spirit, which persists everywhere perpetuating the notion that to have some form of religion is all that is necessary? It is immaterial whether you are a Catholic, a Protestant, or a Moslem just so long as you belong to something. Every effort is being made to drag the vessels of the Lord into the world’s disgusting orgy. Churches, which long ago were dedicated to God and were buildings in which one could feel the sacredness of God’s presence are now often pastored by ungodly men as wicked in heart as Belshazzar himself. For the sake of gathering a spurious congregation they hold dances in their basements, introduce what they call off beat singing, dramatic acts, contemporary music, sing-alongs, coffee shops and night clubs where young people can eat sandwiches, drink coffee, sing lively, spiritual (?) songs, and in general have a real bang up time in the flesh. One of the latest notions is the drive-in church. Here busy people who have no time to worship God and kneel before their Creator in dedication and repentance can cater to their carelessness and salve their consciences by maintaining an outward show of religion by driving in to buy coffee and soft drinks, eat sandwiches and doughnuts, and hear a meaningless sermon that affects no one and changes nothing.

This is the wickedness and corruption of the last days. This is the abominable sin of Belshazzar, the last king of Babylon, who, not satisfied with the sordid filth of his own flesh, must now drag the vessels of the Lord into his dissolute manner of life. Let us drink from the vessels of the Lord. Yea, let us fill the vessels of the Lord with the wine of our own choosing that we may eat and drink, dance, laugh, clap our hands, and stagger in disorderly confusion and ribald dissipation, praising the gods of our own imagination that can neither hear nor see, think nor walk. The whole iniquitous idea of the present hour seems to be bound up in the wickedness of making commonplace all holy things by dragging them down to the plane of mortal man that they might be our playthings. There is among men today an unholy desire to corrupt holy things by lowering them to the common level, to kick in the face everything that is sacred, and make it the common property of all. Let all men drink of the cup and eat at the table of the Lord. Let the drinker, the smoker, the adulterer, the blasphemer, and the homosexual stand in the pulpit and preach to the people. Let them all drink freely of the vessels of the Lord and praise the gods of gold and silver, brass, iron, and earth, for are not these the very ingredients of the Babylonish image? Let them praise them or any other god they choose, for we are all one, think they, and there is no difference anywhere.

Only recently it was the man who attended church and made a profession of godliness who was the object of gibes, wise-cracks, and persecution, but there has come a change in the last decade. Church-going has become the popular thing. It matters not what or where, but you must belong to something. Your manner of life matters little just as long as you make a show of drinking from the vessel of the Lord. The man who for conscience sake feels obliged to obey God and separate himself from this feast of Belshazzar is now beginning to be the unpopular man and is beginning to feel the sting of his separation. School children are being asked on Monday morning whether or not they attended Sunday School. If not, why did they not? They are being refused permission to play on school teams or join the boy scouts unless they are members of a Sunday School. Grown men are being asked about their church affiliation when they make application for work. I think we should be able to see in this very trend the coming of the day when men will not only be refused work if they cannot prove membership in a religious denomination, but they will also be refused the right to buy or sell unless they bear the image of this beastly system.

There is yet another way in which the holy things are being dragged into Belshazzar’s abominable feast. During the last few years there has been much talk of spiritual gifts and speaking in unknown tongues. While I am a believer in spiritual gifts and have myself spoken with tongues on many occasions, there is an alarm sounding within that tells me that much of what we are now seeing is not the work of the Holy Spirit, but a sinister deception by which many people are being deceived.

Not all people are willing by mere legislation or juggling of doctrines to throw in their lot with Babylon. There are many people who have had experience with God in years past and who have borne in their souls the keen edge of persecution and the hate of the religious world while they walked in the light of God. These people do not willingly cast aside all they have to throw themselves into the arms of the beast religion as the cold and formal do who have never known God. But do not be unwise to the tactics of Satan, for the mystery of iniquity is already at work, “even him whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs, and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish, because they receive not the love of the truth that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion that they should believe a lie: that they all might be condemned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness.” 2 Thess. 2:9-12

There is something startling about the words, "with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness," because they let us know that, whether one is absorbed in dead, lifeless religion or has had great experiences with God, we will be faced with deception on the level on which we are. To some Christianity has never been anything more than a lifeless profession while to others it has been a life. The dead and lifeless willingly submit to whatsoever their leaders proclaim, while others are deceived by the false signs and wonders performed to deceive and lead them away captive to the mystery of iniquity. When speaking with tongues and prophecy get to the place where these phenomena are a fit subject for T.V. interviews and demonstration as they have recently been, then know that they have been dragged from the realm of God's holy temple into the realm of Belshazzar's ungodly feast. When the things that concern the glory of God are made a public display for general amusement and debate, then we may be sure they are no longer the things of God, but the working of Satan for the purpose of deceiving those who are willing to be deceived by it.

Long ago when Simon the sorcerer saw that by the laying on of the hands of the apostles the Holy Ghost was given, wicked covetousness sprang up in his carnal heart. Never in his life of sorcery and sleight of hand had he ever seen anything that awed the public like this. In his eyes this amazing power of Peter and John was a trick of tremendous value to a public showman such as he and was well worth all the money he could afford, for, cost what it would, it would return him many fold in gain. Already he had "bewitched the people of Samaria, giving out that himself was some great one: to whom they all gave heed from the least to the greatest, saying, This man is the great power of God." Acts 8:9-11 So he came to Peter and John and, offering them money, said, "Give me also this power that upon whomsoever I lay hands he may receive the Holy Ghost. But Peter said unto him, Thy money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money. Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter; for thy heart is not right in the sight of God." Acts 8:19-21

No, indeed, his heart was not right with God, for he thought to do as Belshazzar had already done to bring the holy vessels of the Lord into the realm of the sordid, the commonplace, the evil, and the bawdy. He was like some of the wretched prophets of our day who offer their lying and eloquent prophecies for money, who pray for the sick, not from compassion, but for the hope of reward that will come in the envelope when the request is made. Ah, cursed and perverse generation! Who shall deliver you from the wrath to come who offer strange fire before the Lord to bewitch the people, who make fervent appeals on behalf of the poor to fill your own coffers, who imagine gain is godliness and the acclaim of the people to be acceptableness with God?

In Egypt long ago there appeared a hateful thing. Moses, the servant of God, had been sent before Pharaoh with power and signs and wonders so great that almost any man seeing them would believe that God was speaking. But, alas! When Moses cast his rod upon the earth and it became a serpent, the magicians of Egypt, crafty, clever, and cunning men who knew not God, also cast their rods upon the ground before the eyes of Pharaoh and in the presence of Moses and they became serpents. By devilish duplication they annulled the work of God and made the power and glory of God a commonplace thing. They stripped it of sacredness and made it profane. They cast it from the realm of the Most High to the realm of the most low, from the realm of truth to the realm of error. And thus did these wretches always, even attempting to turn the dust of the earth into lice, which, being an act of creation, they could not do. Ex. 8:16-19

The spirit of corruption is manifest in the religious world today and that on every hand. Religious men are performing miracles without the power of God, producing lying signs and wonders to deceive the unware, praying for the sick, speaking in tongues, and prophesying all manner of things, giving out that they are some great authority and all the world should listen to them; but when it comes to the proof of their ministry, they cannot begin to show even the power of the common magician. I for one am totally unimpressed by men who, intent upon proving their power with God, tell strangers their names and addresses, their telephone numbers, their physical ailments, their business, together with their past history. While this to most people is sure proof of the genuineness of a man and the great power of God in his life, all this proves exactly nothing. More than once I have seen witches and wizards who made no claim to godliness whatsoever do all these things, blindfolded, in the public square. Why are God's people so gullible? Why do they always go by the outward appearance of power and authority and very seldom by the witness of the Spirit? Why do they shout AMEN at the first sign of a miracle? There is a Spirit within God's people that should bear witness to the truth. It is the Spirit of truth that discerns between all good and evil and testifies only of Christ. It does not wait to see a miracle before it accepts a man, but will breathe its fervent amens even in the presence of those in whom the Spirit dwells.

Be not deceived by signs and wonders, for lying signs and wonders will pervade the earth in the last days. Men will call down fire from heaven, but believe it not, for many deceivers are gone out into the world who are not content to drink wine from the flasks of their own sorcery but must attempt to drink it from the vessels of the Lord, because they know how gullible God's people are. Be not followers of men, but followers of Jesus Christ. His paths are strait and straight and lonely, but there is no deception in them.

The apostle Jude by the wisdom given him of God wrote many things that should shock men today with the awful reality of the hour in which we live - an hour when the precious things of God are being dragged into the realm of the ungodly, an hour when men are not content to be adulterers, fornicators, lesbians, homosexuals, and drunkards, but when these same reprobates must also be church members, take communion, speak in tongues, perform miracles, and talk about sonship and the great revelation from God. Dare not to tell me that I am exaggerating or that I am misinformed. These things are surely so! "For there are certain men crept in unawares who were before of old ordained to this condemnation. Ungodly men, turning the grace of God into lasciviousness and denying the only Lord God, the Lord Jesus Christ. I will therefore put you in remembrance, though ye once knew this, how that the Lord, having saved the people out of the land of Egypt, afterward destroyed them that believed not." Jude 4-5

There is a base and sordid evil in the world today: the revelation of God, that can be understood only by those who have the Spirit, is being proclaimed by men who understand only with the natural mind. This must be the hateful thing of which the apostle spoke, saying, "These speak evil of those things which they know not; but what they know naturally, as brute beasts, in those things they corrupt themselves." Jude 10. When a man by revelation grasps the glory and wonder of a truth revealed to him by the Holy Spirit, then lives are transformed and saints are drawn closer to God in a walk of faith and love and true godliness, but when natural men with natural minds seize upon some precious and holy truth, they drag it into the realm of their own sordid walk, turning the grace of God into license and lasciviousness, corrupting the precious things as they like Belshazzar drink their wine from the vessels of the Lord. Woe to them for they have gone in the way of Cain, and run greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, and perished in the gainsaying of Core. The way of Cain is the hatred of the true way. The error of Balaam is the error of using the things of God for profit, which error fills the cup of Babylon to the brim. These people, good as they may appear to the public eye, clever deceivers that they are, are in reality "spots in your love feasts, for they feast with you, feeding themselves without fear: clouds they are without water, carried about with winds (doctrines): trees whose fruit withereth, without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots; raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame; wandering stars to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness forever (for the age)." Jude 11-13

To illustrate how the precious vessels of the Lord have fallen into the hands of modern Belshazzars who corrupt the revelation of the Lord, it should be clearly evident to all that for decades men and women who have never had a personal experience of conversion and who have never tasted of the new birth, John 3:3, without which no man can see the kingdom, many of whom still swear, drink, smoke, and indulge in the excesses of the world, have ceaselessly preached the kingdom of God and that on every street corner in the nation. It is not that the kingdom of God is a lie, for indeed it is the truth that binds all previous ages into one, but, because it has been a truth that men know naturally as brute beasts, they corrupt themselves in it. See Jude 10. For many years men have preached and written about the restitution of all things, which is not only a truth, but truth sublime. But, alas, many who caught a glimpse of this wonderful truth have turned this grace of God into lasciviousness, for they say, "If all things are to be restored, then let us eat and drink and be merry and enjoy ourselves completely after the flesh, since we will be saved anyway." So they corrupt themselves in the truth because they see it not by the Spirit but by what they know naturally as brute beasts. But, when by the Holy Spirit one sees truly the eventual gathering of all things into Christ, then for the first time in his life he sees the purpose of God in all things, and, once a man sees the purpose of God, he longs to ally himself with that blessed purpose, for his heart goes out in ceaseless love to God who maketh all things to work after the counsel of His will. Therefore, "ye beloved, building up yourselves on your most holy faith, praying in the Holy Ghost, keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life." Jude 20

"As it was in the days of Sodom, so shall it be in the days of the Son of man." Luke 17:28-30 The days of Sodom are upon us. They are now officially here. Loathsome as it is to even mention the base and sordid corruption of Sodom, for God has declared that it is a "shame even to mention the things that are done by them in secret," Eph. 5:11-12, for all that we must not close our eyes to the vivid signs of the times which hang like a hateful pall all about us. I say the days of Sodom are officially here because of the recent sickening news from London as follows: "Members of Parliament, voting freely without party ties, approved Friday a bill legalizing homosexuality between consenting adults in private. The result of Friday's vote was greeted with applause from the public gallery, packed to overflowing." "Powerful voices, including the Archbishop of Canterbury, have been raised in favor of reform, but the latest move to liberalize Britain's moral laws, coming amid a spate of reforming zeal on subjects like abortion and stage censorship, is bound to provoke fresh argument from those who feel that the new permissive mood abroad in the country will undermine social values among young people."

Thus it is, then, that the only Commonwealth of Nations on earth, the nation that has been used above all others in the propagation of truth, now by an act of Parliament officially embraces the filth of sodomy, which has been the downfall of many nations. Thus the sodomite becomes a respectable member of society, and no doubt a respectable Christian as well. Cursed be such a declaration and cursed be such a generation, for they, "even as Sodom and Gomorrah and the cities about them in like manner, giving themselves over to fornication and going after strange flesh, are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire." Jude 7 Woe to them, for God has given them up "to uncleanness through the lusts of their own hearts to dishonor their own bodies between themselves: Who changed the truth of God into a lie and worshipped and served the creature more than the Creator who is blessed forever. Amen. For this cause God gave them up to vile affections: for even their women did change the natural use into that which is against nature, and likewise also the men, leaving the natural use of the woman, burned in their lusts one toward another; men with men working that which is unseemly and receiving in themselves that recompense of their error which was meet. And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind to do those things which were not convenient." Rom. 1:24-28. So the days of Sodom are officially here.

The greatest sin of Noah's day and that which caused the fearful conditions described in Genesis, chapter 6, was the sin of mingling that which was of God with that which is of men. The sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair, and they took them wives of all that they chose. Gen. 6:3 The result of this unholy union was that children were born to them, which were of old, men of renown, and God saw that the wickedness of man was great on the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually. "And the Lord said, I will destroy man whom I have created from the face of the earth." See Gen. 6:4-6

The days of Noah are here again, for the seed of God has mingled with the seed of men, and from that wicked mixture has come forth on every hand mighty men which are in our day men of renown.

The days of Sodom are here, for mankind has not only given himself over to the fleshly goddess of rampant sex but, not content with his abuse of that which is holy, has also gone after strange flesh. Women have changed the natural use into that which is contrary to nature, and the men, leaving the natural use of the woman, have burned in their lusts one toward another. Rom. 1:26-27

The last days of Babylon are here, for the holy vessels of the Lord have been made the playthings of the world. The sacred hymns are being jazzed up and desecrated in what is described as Christian night clubs. The gifts of the Holy Spirit are made subjects for panel discussions by the world on radio and T.V. Healings and miracles, whether false or true, have been made a drawing card for the crowds, which are then bled of their money by the modern Balaams. Says one rich socialite, "In our circle it is chic to be born again." Ah, hateful, hateful feast of Belshazzar!
Thou art weighed in the balances, O Babylon, and found wanting. Thy kingdom shall be taken from thee and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof, for even now Cyrus, the anointed of the Lord, is at the gates. Thou, O Babylon, shall be destroyed and laid even with the ground, and never shalt thou be any more.

In that same night in which Belshazzar held his corrupt ungodly feast he was slain. Even while the blasphemously drank wine from the holy vessels of the Lord God of heaven, the Medes and Persians were battering at the gates of the mighty city which Nebuchadnezzar had built. No army on earth could batter down the walls of his city, thought he, for her fortresses were too strong, her walls too high, and her gates too unyielding. So he drank and made merry and praised the gods of gold and silver. He had not learned the truth, "Except the Lord keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain." Drunken people often imagine that they have no problems. The poor imagine themselves rich and the miserable imagine themselves happy. "I can drink or leave it alone," they boast, and know not that their fool's paradise is indeed a horrible pit where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched. The drunkard does not know that he is the annoyance of modesty, the trouble of civility, the spoil of wealth, the distraction of reason, the brewer's agent, the tavern's benefactor, the beggar's companion, the constable's trouble, his wife's woe, his children's sorrow, his neighbor's scoff, and his own shame. Let us eat, drink and be merry, "for all is well."

So Belshazzar, the king and head of government, was drunk and his lords and ladies and captains were drunk with him. Need we now remind ourselves that the great harlot Babylon of the last days is described in these dread words: "And I saw the woman drunken with the blood of the saints and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus." Rev. 17:6 And do you not think it most significant that John beheld this same woman, arrayed in purple and scarlet and decked with gold and precious stones, having a golden cup in her hand? Just as Belshazzar wickedly drank from the golden vessels of the Lord, so also this woman is seen with a golden cup. Her feast is like his; they are both drunk, both religious, both blasphemous, and neither one aware that they are weighed in the balances and found wanting and that even now the kingdom is to be taken from them.

The almighty God, the Lord of heaven and earth, suffereth long and is kind. He is gracious and full of loving kindness and tender mercy, but He will not hold back His wrath forever. His judgments will come swiftly and without revoke or appeal. To the mighty ocean He said, "Here shall thy proud waves be stayed," Job 38:11, and to mighty nations and wicked systems He declares, "Thus far and no farther shalt thou go." Let men build up their systems if they will, for the Lord will cast them down. Let them swagger with the drunken harlot and cry, "Peace! Peace!", when there is no peace. Let them come together, both Catholics and Protestants with Moslems and all the rest to build a tower so mighty and strong that it will reach unto heaven itself, but know this, O vain man; the Lord God almighty has already come down to see the tower you are building and has sent His mighty angels to cry against it, saying, "Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage for every unclean and hateful bird. For all nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth have waxed rich through the abundance of her delicacies."

Rev. 18:2-3 And to you, the people of God, He calls with the voice of a trumpet, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her sins and that ye receive not of her plagues, for her sins have reached unto heaven and God hath remembered her iniquities... Therefore shall her plagues come in one day, death and mourning and famine; and she shall be utterly burned with fire; for strong is the Lord who judgeth her." Rev. 18:4-8

I feel it my God-given duty to speak personally and with fervent appeal to every reader of this book. We are without doubt at the end of the age. The last days of the Babylon system are even now upon us. We have come to the feet of the image. Gone are the kingdoms of the golden head, the silver shoulders, the belly of brass, and the legs of iron. The image of Babylon is now standing on its rotten feet, part of iron and part of clay. Dan. 2:31-35 Political Babylon and religious Babylon are becoming more and more one. Confusion reigns world-wide regardless of never ending peace conferences. Destruction, and that irrevocable, awaits, for when men shall speak of peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them as travail upon a woman with child, and they shall not escape.

I beseech you that you will not be among those unwise lords and ladies of Babylon who, even while the army is at the gate, cry peace and safety, for the handwriting is on the wall. This whole system of which we have been a part for so long has been weighed in the balances and is found wanting. The kingdom is going to fall and be divided, and woe to us if we remain in it until we are partaker of its plagues. It is time to heed the word of God and come out. Come out of her with all her enormities into which she has sunk and in which she drunkenly staggers that we be not partaker of her sins and her plagues. Come out and walk with Jesus Christ. Learn to know His voice and never to depend on man whose breath is in his nostrils and can in a moment of time be snuffed from him. Lean not upon me, but upon Him, for it is He who liveth and was dead, and, behold, He is alive forever more.

Verily, verily, I say unto you that men can know Christ. They can know Him personally, hear His voice, and follow Him. They can receive of Him eternal life and never perish, neither is there any might in the universe that can take them from His power. Oh, that men would know the Lord! Oh, that they would cease from their dependence upon men, even upon good men! Those who follow Him walk like Him. Those who talk to Him talk like Him. Those who hear His voice think like Him. Those who see Him are changed into that same image and likeness of the only begotten of the Father.

The prophets of God in the Old Testament and in the New Testament foresaw the destruction of this world's system as a time when blood would flow like rivers of red water. John saw a battle line two hundred miles long, involving two hundred million men of all nations of earth. He described it as a winepress from which the blood flowed to the horses' bridles. Rev. 14:20 The prophet Ezekiel foresaw the day when men would fall upon the mountain and in the field, and so great would be the slaughter that the passengers would stop their noses while they bury the dead for seven months, and fowls would eat the flesh of captains and mighty men. Ezek. 39:1-24

Even now it is rumored that Russia is planning to orbit two hundred megaton bombs that can be exploded at high altitude over America at any given moment. This would disrupt all communication in twenty-four hours as well as wipe out sixty percent of the population. The strategy would be the same as that at Pearl Harbor with suddenness and complete surprise. Is it any wonder God has said, "Sudden destruction cometh upon them, and they shall not escape?"

As I write these things, I feel a special urge to tell the people of God that the last days of Babylon are here. The cup of iniquity is full to the brim. The wrath of God has come up in His face and fury is in His countenance. His anger will break forth as a flaming fire, coming as a snare upon all those who dwell on the earth. The patience of God will endure the blasphemies of men only a short time longer, for why should the almighty God endure forever the blasphemy of a harlot system which desecrates every holy thing, which makes light of His word, calling it myths and fables, whose ministers insist that man came from polliwogs and that monkeys were our fathers, and take the sacred songs of Zion, jazzing them up in night clubs while they laugh and joke and drink their coffee and wine? I tell you the whole system is weighed in the balances and found wanting. It is to be destroyed and never shall it rise any more.

Dare any man look at the world and condemn it of sin? I tell you all the sins of the world will be required at the hands of this drunken harlot church system toward which God now calls with a final call, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her plagues."

"And thou, O Belshazzar, hast not humbled thy heart, though thou knewest all this; but hast lifted up thyself against the Lord of heaven; and they have brought the vessels of His house before thee, and thou and thy lords, thy wives, and thy concubines have drunk wine in them, and thou hast praised the gods of silver and gold, of brass and wood and stone, which see not, nor hear, nor know, and the God in whose hand thy breath is and whose are all thy ways, thou hast not glorified." Dan. 5:22

WHERE DO THEY WORSHIP, WHO COME OUT OF BABYLON?

It was a long walk from Judea to Galilee, and the record states that our Lord was weary with the journey when at last He and His disciples paused to rest at the well at Sychar. This was a famous well. Centuries before, Jacob in his wanderings had dug it and from it had watered his thirsty cattle. Nearby lay the parcel of ground, which Jacob had purchased from the sons of Hamor. Gen. 33:19 The ground was given to his son Joseph for a possession and here the Israelites, after entering the Promised Land, had buried Joseph’s bones. Joshua 24:32. The well, which Jacob dug three hundred years before the exodus, is there unto this day. It is covered by a stone vault into which a visitor is let down by a strait hole. Then, removing a broad flat stone, he discovers the well itself. It is dug in firm rock about nine feet in diameter and about thirty-five feet in depth and has some five feet of water in the bottom. Little did Jacob know that the well he dug for himself and his lowly cattle was destined to be graced centuries later by the presence of the Son of God, nor could he have thought that its refreshing water was later to be the text for one of the most remarkable expositions ever to bless the ear or to refresh the soul of a weary and thirsty humankind.

Jesus departed into Galilee. So the evangelist wrote; and my soul has oft times mused with pleasure on these words that follow: "He must needs go through Samaria." Why He needed to go through Samaria the record does not say. Perhaps some hostile folk had refused to let Him pass their way or perhaps they had hidden Him depart from some city as the Samaritans later did when they would not receive Him because His face was as though He would go to Jerusalem. For this hostility James and John, the sons of thunder, sought leave to call down fire upon their inhospitable heads. Luke 9:54. I prefer to believe, however, that as Philip was directed of the Spirit to go to Gaza by the desert road because a eunuch of Ethiopia, a man of great authority and prestige, was prepared of God to receive the gospel, so Jesus by the Spirit knew that a sin-benighted woman, predestined and foreknown from the world’s foundation, would that very day come with her empty vessel to draw water from Jacob’s well, but find instead that living water, of which if a man drink, he will never thirst again. This is the water of which our Saviour cried, saying, "If any man thirst, let him come unto Me and drink. He that believeth on Me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. This spake He of the Spirit, which they that believe on Him should receive..." John 7:37-39

It was high noon, the sixth hour of the day, when our Saviour and His disciples, wayworn with the toil and heat of the journey, came to Jacob’s well. Perhaps they drank of its cooling water. We cannot tell, but now they had gone away to the village to buy food while Jesus remained behind to keep an appointment predestined and arranged from the foundation of the world. "Give me a drink," said the Lord, the fountain of living water. The Samaritan, surprised at this request from a Jew, suspiciously questioned, "How is it that Thou, being a Jew, askest drink of me, who am a woman of Samaria, for the Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans?" "If thou knewest the gift of God," said Jesus, "and who it is that saith unto thee, Give Me to drink, thou wouldst have asked of Him, and He would have given thee living water." Back and forth the blessed dialogue went of Jacob and his well, of Jacob and his cattle, of water from wells of which men must drink and drink again and of living water which, once received, springs up forever unto life eternal. "Whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst," He told her, "but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life." We speak the truth in Christ when we say that that which was revealed to the woman as a well of water is now revealed in greater glory for all the saints to see - a river of the water of life proceeding out of the throne of God. "And He shewed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb. In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations." Rev. 22:1-2

The benighted woman could not understand such words of life, for her soul was dead in trespasses and sins. Conviction of sin had never seized upon her. Because she had had no revelation of sin she felt no need of a Saviour. It was to awaken the woman both to her need and to her sin that Jesus said, "Go, call thy husband, and come hither." "I have no husband," she slyly evaded; but He, who knew all things, in grace replied, "Thou hast well said, I have no husband, for thou hast had five husbands, and he whom thou now hast is not thy husband." "Sir," she replied in wonder, "I perceive that Thou art a prophet." This was the first light that had ever dawned on her darkened spirit and with the revelation her true conviction of sin began. "Our fathers worshipped in this mountain," she affirmed, "but ye say that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship." Here Jesus, the Son of God, master and giver of all truth and understanding, brought forth from the eternal storehouse of God’s wisdom an answer of peace that would settle her mind, together with yours and mine, as to where and how mankind should worship God. And I am certain that the message was not given to her alone, but to us at the end of this age who, being called out of Babylon, are enquiring, "Where shall I go to worship God?" Learn quickly then, Oh virgin daughter of Babylon, that thy God, the creator of the universe, dwells not in temples made of brick and stone; neither is He worshipped there.
Jesus said unto her - and we can readily see the urgency of His words - Woman, believe Me, the hour cometh when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father... But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth; for the Father seeketh such to worship Him. God is a Spirit: and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth." John 4:21-23

During the past months well-meaning and devout Christians have constantly asked this question: "If we leave the church system and come out of Babylon, where will we go to worship?" It is in reply to this question and in the hope of giving God's people the rest that comes with a true understanding that I will direct my thoughts in the following pages. "For the Lord giveth wisdom: out of His mouth cometh knowledge and understanding. He layeth up sound wisdom for the righteous: He is a buckler to them that walk uprightly. He keepeth the paths of judgment, and preserveth the way of His saints. Then shalt thou understand righteousness, and judgment, and equity; yea, every good path. When wisdom entereth into thine heart, and knowledge is pleasant to thy soul, discretion shall preserve thee, understanding shall keep thee; to deliver thee from the way of the evil man, from the man that speaketh froward things." Prov. 2:6-12 I warn you here that the church system is full of men and women who speak froward (perverse) things.

"Where shall we worship?" was the question besetting the mind of this woman at the well. "Our fathers worshipped in this mountain, but ye say that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship." Forgive me if I am perverse in surmising, but have we not reason to suppose that her distracting question, coming where it did, was in reality a rather clever attempt to dodge the true issue and direct the conversation into some controversial channel less personal and much less vital? What had places of worship, whether they be mountains or cities, to do with repentance and conversion or with partaking of the water of life? Was not her question an effort to side-step the true issue at stake? There was, however, some justification for her clever foot work, for she had never been converted, as you and I have been. She had never partaken of God's Spirit as you and I have done. God, to her, was someone far away in some distant and cold heaven who had little or no interest in the affairs of men. She may, therefore, be excused for associating buildings and places with worship, even as millions in outer darkness do in our day. "Ye worship ye know not what," Jesus in kindness informed her; and I fervently pray to our Father in heaven that the Holy Spirit will fasten these words as a nail in a sure place in the minds of all who in the end of the age now read them. From the abounding word of truth that hourly stirs within my soul I now testify that all men in our day who in their blindness associate worship with places, whether they be cities, denominations, tabernacles, steeple-houses, camp-meetings or any of the like, are worshipping "they know not what." Let these mighty words of the Saviour sound as a trumpet blast within your soul! "Believe Me, the hour cometh when ye shall neither in Jerusalem nor in this mountain worship the Father; but the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth, for the Father seeketh such to worship Him."

We must take very special heed to what our Saviour spoke on this most important occasion. "Woman, believe Me!" It was seldom, indeed, that our Lord asked men to believe Him. He was the truth, and, because He could speak no lie, it was not His custom to ask men to believe that what He spoke was the truth. Men often say "believe me" because inwardly they know that their hearers may have reason to disbelieve them, but, when He who is the truth and cannot lie makes reference to His own truthfulness by saying, "Verily, verily, I say unto you," then great importance must be attached to what He says. "Woman, believe Me," He said. "The hour is coming." And I shall not hesitate to add that the hour of which He spoke is of special significance to us who live in this the end of the age. In no way can we avoid the conclusion that we are now living in the age of Laodicea. This is the period of lukewarmness. Wherever we may go we mingle with those crowds who are neither hot nor cold and are doomed to be spued out of the mouth of the Lord. We cannot avoid the conclusion that Laodicea and the Christians of this period are identified with, if not identical to, that whore and her harlot daughters, which God calls Mystery Babylon. Her system is full of false prophets, false apostles, false pastors, false teachers, false gifts, false healers, and every abomination and evil. She is drunk with the wine of her fornication; she is full of the blood of God's saints. She walks hand in hand with the world and the political Babylon, which it is. I need not tell you of her abominations, for it is plain that she is naked, unashamed, and lies in the bed of adultery with the world, the flesh, and the devil. This is an hour of Impenetrable darkness when darkness covers the earth and gross darkness the people, and no man knows his way, for that darkness has blinded his eyes. Wars never cease. Crime is on the rampage and increasing at an appalling rate every
"The hour is coming," said Jesus, "and now is when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet in Jerusalem, worship the Father." It is an indisputable fact that from time immemorial men have been prone to associate their worship of God with places and things. It is also painfully true that, as time passed by and love waxed cold, the places and the things became more important than God Himself. Christians are disposed to imagine that, because they met God in such and such a room or building, they will find Him there again. They are not unlike the German lady who, having received a wonderful experience of salvation at a camp meeting altar, returned the next night leading her husband, Charlie, to the exact spot where she had knelt the night before. After he knelt at the altar, she stood back to survey him carefully; then, stepping to his side, she whispered, "Shust one foot farther north, Sharlie." You may smile at the innocent ignorance of this young convert that led her to believe that to meet God her husband must kneel just where she had knelt. We can easily overlook her innocence and lack of understanding, but do not we who are Christians of many years disclose an inexcusable lack of understanding when we ask, "Where can we go to worship God"? Was it only to the woman at the well that this word was spoken, "Neither in this mountain nor yet in Jerusalem shall men worship the Father"? Or was it to us also and to us especially that He spoke - even to us who in this Laodicean period now hear Him calling aloud, "Come out of her, My people?"

Centuries ago, when the children of Israel wandered in the wilderness, they grew rebellious against God and spoke against Moses. The account is written in Numbers 21:1-10. To correct their rebellion the Lord sent fiery serpents among them that bit the people, and when they cried unto Moses, he was told to set up a brazen serpent upon a pole. "And Moses made a serpent of brass and set it upon a pole; and it came to pass that when a serpent had bitten any man, when he beheld the serpent of brass, he lived." The brazen serpent of brass should not have been kept after the people were healed. The Lord had given them no instructions to keep it. Like Mt. Sinai it had served its purpose and should have been forgotten and left behind. But this they did not do. We read that almost one thousand years later King Hezekiah did that which was right in the eyes of the Lord. "He removed the high places, and brake the images, and cut down the groves, and brake in pieces the brazen serpent that Moses had made: for unto those days the children of Israel did burn incense to it." 2 Kings 18:4 Terrible idolatry, you say! And we reply, Amen! But isn't that just like people? Isn't that just like the twentieth century Christians who cannot be persuaded to dissociate themselves from places and things? From buildings, which they call churches, from denominations, from altars, from ordinances, the repetition of repentance and the continual laying on of hands? Why have the words of Paul faded from our ears and from our spirits that we can no longer hear him say to the mature, "Therefore, leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on to perfection; not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God, of the doctrine of baptisms, and of laying on of hands, and of resurrection of the dead, and of eternal (aeonian) judgment." Heb. 6:1-2 I say with all respect and fear that repentance, baptism, laying on of hands, and all the things Paul mentioned, good and true as they are, must be recognized as nothing more than first principles of our experience. They must be looked upon as the kindergaten of Christian experience. When in school you learned that c-a-t spelled cat, you were learning the first principles of reading and writing. When you learned that 2+2=4, you were learning the first principles of mathematics. Even Einstein had to learn that 2+2=4. First principles are truth, but I dogmatically affirm, for I do not see how I can be contradicted, that, once we have learned that 2+2=4, we have learned it and cannot be taught it again as long as we live! It is a fact. It is established. It cannot be altered. We must leave this first principle behind, and go on to things we do not know. It was this very thing that Paul was teaching when he exhorted the Hebrews to leave the first principles and go on to perfection. Why then do Christians waste their lives trying to re-tell and re-learn and re-do every first principle of the doctrine of Christ?

The Jews at the end of the dispensation of law were stubborn and unreasonable about giving up the tradition they had held for some fifteen hundred years, but not one whit more stubborn than Christians who for two thousand years have almost worshipped sectarianism, doctrines, ordinances, Sunday Schools, and all codes of their religion. To the Jews the temple and its ordinances meant everything, and even today they blindly ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost: as your fathers did, so do ye."

They were in reality naught but the works of their own hands. "And they made a calf in those days, and offered sacrifice unto the idol, and rejoiced in the works of their own hands. Then God turned and gave them up to worship the host of heaven; as it is written in the book of the prophets, O ye house of Israel, have ye offered to Me slain beasts and sacrifices by the work of their own hands. "And they made a calf in those days, and offered sacrifice unto the idol, and rejoiced in the works of their own hands. Then God turned and gave them up to worship the host of heaven; as it is written in the book of the prophets, O ye house of Israel, have ye offered to Me slain beasts and sacrifices by the space of forty years in the wilderness? Yea, ye took up the tabernacle of Moloch, and the star of your god Ramphan, figures which ye made to worship them: and I will carry you away beyond Babylon. Our fathers had the tabernacle of witness in the wilderness, as He had appointed, speaking unto Moses, that he should make it according to the fashion that he had seen. Which also our fathers that came after brought in with Jesus Ramphan, figures which ye made to worship them: and I will carry you away beyond Babylon. Our fathers had the tabernacle of witness in the wilderness, as He had appointed, speaking unto Moses, that he should make it according to the fashion that he had seen. Which also our fathers that came after brought in with Jesus (Joshua) into the possession of the Gentiles, whom God drove out before the face of our fathers, unto the days of David; who found favor before God, and desired to find a tabernacle for the God of Jacob. But Solomon built Him an house. Howbeit the most High dwelleth not in temples made with hands; as saith the prophet, Heaven is My throne, and earth is My footstool: what house will ye build Me? saith the Lord, or what is the place of My rest? Hath not My hand made all these things? Ye stiffnecked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost: as your fathers did, so do ye." Acts 7:41-51.

If we give consideration to the above passage, we cannot avoid the conclusion that the whole history of Israel was darkened by the heathenish practice of their forgetting God while they delighted themselves in temples and tabernacles and idols of their own making. It was well nigh impossible for these stiff-necked people, uncircumcised in heart and ears as they were, to think of God or of worship apart from places and things that were in reality naught but the works of their own hands. "What house will ye build Me?" the Lord demands. "Or what is the place of My rest, since heaven is My throne and earth is My footstool? Hath not My hands made all these things, ye stiff-necked and uncircumcised in heart and ears?"

It is a dreadful thing of almost unpardonable dimension that these Israelites were so dull and blind in spiritual understanding that they could not conceive of God or worship apart from their tedious, wearisome forms and ceremonies, most of which they did not understand nor did they care to learn their meaning. Well spoke the prophet Isaiah, saying, "To what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices unto Me? saith the Lord: I am full of the burnt offerings of rams, and the fat of fed beasts; and I delight not in the blood of bullocks, or of lambs, or of he goats. When ye come to appear before Me, who hath required this at your hand, to tread My courts? Bring no more vain oblations; incense is an abomination unto Me; the new moons and Sabbaths, the calling of assemblies, I cannot away with; it is iniquity, even the solemn meeting. Your new moons and your appointed feasts My soul hateth: they are a trouble unto Me; I am weary to bear them. And when ye spread forth your hands, I will hide Mine eyes from you: yea, when ye make many prayers, I will not hear: Your hands are full of blood." Isa. 1:11-15. Dreadful as was the blindness of these stiff necked and unbelieving Jews, their darkness was light when compared to the blindness of Christians who in this age of Laodicea cannot grasp the truth our Saviour taught when He said, "The hour is coming, and now is, when neither in this mountain nor yet in Jerusalem shall men worship the Father; but the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth, for the Father seeketh such to worship Him." Never in any age could these words of truth apply as they do now. This is the age and this is the hour when the spirit of God is calling His saints, saying, "Come out! Come out!! Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partakers of her sins. Come out from among them, and touch not the unclean thing. Come out and deliver thyself from the abominable mass of confusion where men and women worship they know not what. Flee from the place where worship is neither in spirit nor in truth. Come out of Babylon! Come out unto God! Come out and join that universal throng of true worshippers who worship God in spirit and in truth."

There is a place in God ten thousand times more real than any natural realm where saints may dwell. There is a true temple; not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. It is the mystical temple, which is His body. There is a church which is the true church. It cannot be seen of men. Its happy saints dwell in the realm of the spirit, and, because they do, they continually worship God in spirit and in truth. I anticipate that many will ask, "How do we worship God in spirit?" But this you will not discover until the hour comes when you learn that neither in this mountain, nor in Jerusalem, nor in the church system, nor in the denomination, nor in the mass, nor in the ordinances, nor in any such thing do men worship the Father. When you have departed from all these things and broken these idols from off your neck and cast their image from before you, then you will see no man but Jesus only, and then only will you understand what it means to worship in spirit and in truth. When this wisdom is sweet to your soul, then like the woman of Samaria you will drop that jug with which you for so long a time drew natural water from a natural well, and you will run off as she to unashamedly declare, "Is not this the Christ?"

Before we proceed to other things, there is yet another statement that fell from the lips of Christ, which is of utmost importance in this vital hour of decision. It is this: "The Father seeketh such to worship Him." Just think of those words! "The true worshippers... shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth, for the Father seeketh such to worship Him." John 4:23 Men have always imagined that there was strength in crowds. The truth is there is great weakness. Nothing is so fickle, so mindless, or so divided as a crowd of people, and because of this divided state and sectarian spirit Paul said to the Corinthians, "Ye come together not for the better, but for the worse." Cor. 11:17 That fact is more potent and true in our day than it was then! But the Father is seeking not crowd worshippers, but true worshippers who worship Him separate and apart from all outward show. His eyes run to and fro through the whole earth to find those whose hearts are right in His sight. There is a realm where Christ is all and in all. There is a "place by Me" where we stand upon a rock. Exod. 33:21 There is a path that the vulture's eye hath not seen. Job 28:7 There is a church of the firstborn whose names are written only in heaven. Heb. 12:23 There is a place outside the camp of Babylon's vain worship and pseudo-church. Heb. 13:13 "Therefore let us go unto Him without the camp, bearing His reproach," and there we will be His sons and daughters who worship none else but God, and there we will worship Him in spirit and in truth.

During the past years since God has moved upon me to call men out of Babylon, well-meaning folk have written me stating how well they saw the truth of the message, "but," said they, "I think I will stay in the system (church, they called it). I can do more there to help people see the truth of the message." There are two pitfalls I have found in this faulty reasoning. First, such people never do come out, but sink deeper and deeper into Babylon's mass of confusion and finally disappear and are heard of no more. Secondly, I am convinced that those who decide to remain in the system are like Lot's wife. They have never been seen by revelation that Babylon is the whore that sitteth on many waters, Rev. 17:14,15, for, if they had, they would flee from her. The Father is seeking true worshippers. He desires not worshippers who associate God with systems. Neither is He seeking the fellowship of those who are either followers or worshippers of the great men of this age of confusion.

It is a blessed day for any man when he makes the discovery that the realm which Jesus called "in spirit" is the secret place of the Most High, spoken of by David in Psa. 91:1. It is not an imaginary place, a figment of man's imagination, but a place of reality where saints of God may dwell. We who have fixed our hopes in Christ must certainly believe that heaven is a place, and that we share a part in its more excellent glory, but the hour is at hand when the saints will know that heaven itself with all its reality is in fact and in truth the realm of the spirit.
These things are hard to utter, because Christians abide so much in the natural realm that it is almost impossible for them to believe that the spirit realm is an abiding and an eternal reality. To most of God's people the natural realm is the realm of reality and the spiritual realm is the realm of shadows, mists, visions, dreams, and unreality. The natural man (and most Christians are pitifully natural) receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, for they are spiritually discerned. Paul wrote to the Corinthians concerning visions and revelations from the Lord, and, after reading his words of inspiration, I am entirely convinced that that which men speak of as a vision is in fact reality, and that which men call reality is in fact only a vision, for that which is seen is temporal, but that which is not seen is eternal. 2 Cor. 4:18

"It is not expedient for me doubtless to glory," said Paul. "I will come to visions and revelations of the Lord. I knew a man in Christ above fourteen years ago, (whether in the body, I cannot tell; or whether out of the body, I cannot tell: God knoweth;) such an one caught up to the third heaven. And I knew such a man, (whether in the body or out of the body, I cannot tell: God knoweth;) how that he was caught up into paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for a man to utter. Of such an one will I glory: yet of myself I will not glory, but in mine infirmities." 2 Cor. 12:1-5 What is this third heaven of which Paul speaks but the realm of the spirit? Does not God's word clearly show that man is spirit, soul, and body? Does not the tabernacle built by Moses clearly show that there are three rearms where men live and worship - the outer court, which represents the natural realm; the holy place, which represents the soulful realm; and the holy of holies, which is the spiritual realm? "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty." Is not this secret place the realm of the spirit where God is our refuge and our fortress and our eternal dwelling place? So Paul was caught up into the third heaven, the holy of holies, the realm of the spirit, where heaven is open and angels ascend and descend upon sons of men. That realm is not "Far away in some region old,

Where rivers wander o'er sands of gold,"

But "the word of God is nigh thee, even in thy mouth," nearer than hands or feet. It is the realm of the spirit, the realm from which the veil of our own flesh has always separated us. In that realm of reality and blessedness, the third heaven, the apostle both heard and saw things that were unlawful for him to utter. Why do you suppose it was unlawful for him to utter such things? Simply because he was speaking to men who dwelt in a lower realm, most of whom had never passed beyond the realm of the flesh where they worshipped God in the outer court of spiritual experience. It would not have been unlawful for Paul to have uttered the things he heard and saw had he been speaking to men of like experience with himself. John or Elijah or Daniel would have understood him, and I am certain that many humble little ladies in our day, unknown, unrecognized, and unsung by the world about them, would have understood every word he had to say; for "many shall come from the east and the west and the north and the south, and shall sit down with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob in the kingdom of God," while many that should have entered in will be left standing in the outer court of their fleshly religion and their denominationalism, saying, "Lord, Lord, open unto us."

Have you ever wondered why the epistles of John seem hard to understand and almost contradictory at times? Have you noticed how in one breath he says, "If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves," and in the next sentence he says, "He that sinneth hath not seen Him, neither known Him"? How often natural men with natural minds have tried to explain that paradox! The answer is extremely simple when we grasp the fact that this beloved disciple had long ago ceased to dwell in the realm of the flesh where so many others dwell, or yet in the rearm of the soul, but his writing and speaking was all from the realm of the spirit, the holy of holies, the secret place of the Most High, where he continually abode under the shadow of the Almighty. In that secret place of the Spirit there is no sin. That is the realm where the saints have "seen Him" and "known Him". From that glorious inner realm of reality he wrote to those who still remained in that outer realm where self and sin have not been crucified and where all who say they have no sin deceive themselves and the truth is not in them. Let all who read these words consider what I now say. While at this moment the vast throngs of professing Christians live their lives in the outer court, there are at this moment, scattered in the four corners of the earth, those who dwell continually in the realm of the spirit. They have passed beyond the veil, which Christ has opened for them. They dwell in the light, which no man can approach. The realities which they hear and taste, touch and smell and see, are unlawful to be uttered to Christians who live without, for to them such realities are but the unreal and ghostly phantoms of the mystics. "Thou art beside thyself," cried Festus with a loud voice as Paul explained his heavenly vision; "much learning doth make thee mad." But Paul replied, "I am not mad, most noble Festus, but speak forth the words of truth and soberness." Acts 26:24-25

On a wonderful day in the long ago a disciple by the name of Philip went in search of his brother, Nathanael, and said to him, "We have found Him of whom Moses in the law and the prophets did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph." Nathanael asked, "Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth?" To this Philip answered, "Come and see," and he brought him to Jesus. Jesus saw Nathanael coming to Him and said to him, "Behold, an Israelite in whom is no guile!" Nathanael said, "Whence knowest Thou me?" Jesus answered and said unto him, "Before that Philip called thee, when thou wast under the fig tree, I saw thee." Nathanael answered and said unto Him, "Rabbi, Thou art the Son of God; Thou art the King of Israel." Jesus answered and said unto him, "Because I said unto thee, I saw thee under the fig tree, believest thou? Thou shall see greater things than these. Verily, verily I say unto you, hereafter ye shall see heaven open and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man." John 1:45-51

Blessed realm of reality! Blessed land of the spirit! Here in thy heavenly chambers, the secret place of the Most High, shall men worship the Father, for they who worship Him must worship in spirit and in truth, for the Father seeketh such to worship Him. Ask nevermore, O child of God, "Where shall I worship, or where shall I go when I leave Babylon?" For neither in this mountain nor yet in Jerusalem shall men worship the Father; but the true worshippers must worship in spirit and in truth, for the Father seeketh such to worship Him.

Dispensationally speaking the church age is over. Like all other dispensations it has run its fleeting course, fulfilled its aeonian purpose, and is ready to vanish away. The night cometh when no man can work. The storm clouds of tribulation are filling the sky. Man's six days of labor are almost over. Gross darkness, even darkness that can be felt, precedes the dawn of the seventh day when the Sun of righteousness shall arise with healing in His wings, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying; neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things have passed away.

"Of the writing of books there is no end," Solomon said, and John in his wisdom added, "If all the books were written that should be written, I suppose even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written." But in this interval, while we wait, the Holy Spirit has left us some important instruction, showing how men ought to live and walk before God and how they ought to teach their children the great and important things so essential to spiritual growth and maturity. Our Lord Jesus Christ gave us the simplest and most workable form of church order when He said, "Where two or three are gathered together in My name, there am I in the midst of them." Matt. 18:20

This is the best form of assembling that has ever been known to the saints of God. Under such a wise and blessed order a man and his wife, worshipping God in spirit, reading the Bible together, praying together, and communing together are in reality a complete church unit and a local church. And if that man and wife have been blessed with a family, then they have a better and more complete church to rear and nurture in the fear of God. Sunday School is a poor, sick, unscriptural substitute for family worship. It is a manmade institution less than three hundred years old. It is a crutch devised to substitute for fathers and mothers who shirk their God-given responsibility for the upbringing of their children in the ways of God. By it they relinquish their own ministry to some outsider who knows little about their children and often cares even less.

It is the God-given responsibility of Christian parents to personally teach their children the truth and bring them up in the way they ought to go. I am appalled at the lack of parental concern displayed among Christians. The abounding disobedience, disorder, and delinquency now sweeping the world like a plague can be easily traced to the evil doctrine of self-expression. "In myself there dwelleth no good thing"; therefore, "expression can only be evil. Parents, walking in the darkness of that evil rule, contribute as none else to the disobedience and delinquency of their children. Teach your child right from the cradle that your word is law. Let your child know from infancy that you do not speak twice. A child must know experimentally that whatever you command must be done now, without hesitation, argument, or back talk, and without any pouting or tears. Never threaten or argue with a child, but carry out the required and necessary punishment without ado, hesitation, or anger. You will discover, when you follow this rule, that obedience will be spontaneous and genuine for a life-time. Your child will be a credit to you and to the nation as well. All the violence and destruction that is in the world today has sprung from that evil product of the carnal mind - self-expression; and the pitiful thing about it is that we are now living in a period when even the judges of the land are men who were brought up under that delusion.
of self-expression. The result now is that the supposed rights of the criminal are respected more than the rights of the innocent. Democracy was never designed for the insane, the criminal, or the juvenile. Responsibility comes only with age and experience.

I cannot begin to tell how much I owe to the steadfast goodness of my own mother. She has gone to be with the Lord now, but it was not until after she departed this life that I began to realize what a tremendous influence her life had been. She was a quaint little English woman who in all her years in Canada never lost her delightful accent. We all loved her dearly and often indulged in some good-natured teasing, which Ma heartily enjoyed. When we would kid her about how little she was, she would draw herself up to her full height of four feet eleven inches and say with a wry smile and a twinkling eye, "I'm just the way the Lord made me." There was, of course, no reasonable argument against so profound a statement, so the jesting usually ended there. Ma had a most unusual way of teaching us things we needed to know, and the singular thing about it was that we never seemed to realize that she was teaching us at all. Sometimes I wonder if she knew herself how indelibly she was impressing a truth upon our impressionable minds. Ma had a proverb, a song, a poem, or a scripture for absolutely every situation that could possibly arise, she was an excellent mimic and was often inclined to be a clown, and, though I think I could count on one hand the number of times she punished me for my wrong-doing, her word was law and her promises irreversible.

Brothers, though born for adversity, seem always to be getting into a jangle about something, and our household was by no means free from such manifestations of brotherly love. But our row would be hardly started when along would come Ma with the calming words, "I say! I say, boys! You mustn't quarrel like that!" Then with elocution worthy of the vaudeville she would recite these lines:

"Let dogs delight to bark and bite,
For 'tis their nature to;
Let bears and lions growl and fight,
For God has made them so.
Now, little children, never let Such angry passions rise.
Your little hands were never made
To tear each other's eyes.
Let love through all your actions run;
Let every thought be mild.
Be like that blessed virgin's Son,
That sweet and holy Child,
Who grew as gentle as a lamb;
And, as His stature grew,
He grew in favor both with man
And God the Father, too."

I don't know how she managed it, but before she was finished with the verse, we boys had forgotten our quarrel and had been taught a lesson that would never escape us throughout our earthly pilgrimage. No Sunday School teacher that ever lived could impress me as she did, and I think this is true of each and every mother if she will apply herself to the wonderful task God has given her instead of shirking her God-given responsibility or shifting it to the shoulders of someone else.

Ma taught us never to say "can't", or to even imagine that there was any task or job too big or too hard to be done. Any man or woman who has been raised in the delightful environment of a prairie pioneer will know some of the almost insurmountable difficulties that arise from day to day. Sometimes we were about ready to quit and say it couldn't be done, but that was always where Ma came in with her potent and ever ready proverbs. So, when I would say, "Oh, Ma, I can't do this," she would reply with her delightful English accent, "Now, George, where there's a will there's a way." And sure enough sooner or later a way to surmount the problem would be found, and not only that problem but the many, many more that would present themselves through the years that were to follow.

"Somebody said it couldn't be done,"
But he with a chuckle replied
    That maybe it couldn't, but he would be one
    That wouldn't say 'no' till he tried.
So he buckled right in with a trace of a grin
    On his face; if he worried, he hid it,
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
    That couldn't be done, and he did it."

Ma had a great sense of justice and she wanted us to know that we were in no way superior to anyone else. She knew that rich men were not superior to poor men, but that God had chosen the poor to be rich in faith. It may have been with that thought in mind that she often sang this song we always loved to hear and with an anointing that seemed peculiar to herself.

They played in a beautiful garden,
    Those children of high degree.
Outside the gates the beggars
    Passed on in their misery.
But there was one of the children
    Who could not join in the play,
And a little beggar maiden
    Watched for him day by day.

Once he had given her a flower,
    And, oh, how he smiled to see
Her thin white hand through the railing Stretched out so eagerly.
She came again to the garden;
    She saw the children play;
But the pale, pale face had vanished,
    The little feet gone away.

She crept away to her corner
    Down by the murky stream,
But the pale, pale face of the garden
    Shone through her restless dream.
So the high born child and the beggar
    Passed onward side by side;
For the ways of men are narrow,
    But the gates of heaven are wide.

Ma taught us that the Bible was God's holy word and that every bit of it was true. She taught us that Jesus, who lived among men long ago, was divine and the Christ of God. She taught us:

    Thou shall have no other gods before me.
    Thou shall not take the name of the Lord Thy God in vain.

    Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy.
    Honor thy father and thy mother.
    Thou shalt not kill.
    Thou shalt not steal, (not even a pin).
    Thou shalt not bear false witness.
    Thou shalt not covet.
    Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.
All these commandments are truth. They are the word of God and, because they are truth, they cannot pass away, but must abide forever. We who are under grace are no longer under the law, because the law is written in our hearts. I can think of nothing more profitable for a boy or a girl than for them to be taught that these Ten Commandments are not only the law of God, but they are the very heart and nature of God as well.

Ma never waited until we were old enough to understand. Well she knew that children have far greater capacity for spiritual understanding than anyone could begin to imagine. So she taught us to pray long before we were old enough to understand the meaning of the words we were saying, let alone the meaning of the sentences. Before we were tucked into bed at night, she taught us reverently to kneel and pray:

"Gentle Jesus, meek and mild,
Look upon a little child.
Pity my simplicity,
Suffer me to come to Thee.
Fain I would to Thee be brought;
Gracious God, forbid it not.
In the kingdom of Thy grace
Grant a little child a place."

Amen.

When we were tiny boys, we used to love to crawl into bed with Ma for a few minutes in the morning, before it was time to rise. It was on one of these playful visits to her bed that she and my brother, Phil, taught me how to recite the Lord's Prayer. We might well suppose this to be an instance of no significance, but it must have made a deep impression upon a little boy of only two summers, since I still remember it sixty years later.

I will not weary my readers with a longer dissertation of the impressions she left with us. Time and space will not permit me here to tell of how she taught us to keep away from strong drink and how the beautiful poem, Jennie Gray, was often recited to impress upon us the dire calamity that comes to people who indulge in strong drink. Nor can I tell how the poem, Ayrey Scheffer, the story of a poor boy who became a world-renowned artist because of his great diligence and devotion to God, inspired me to aspire to higher things. Too numerous to mention were her proverbs: Fine feathers make fine birds.

Handsome is as handsome does.
Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might.
Willful waste makes woeful want.
Satan finds some mischief still for idle hands to do. So deeply did all these things impress us that, when we grew older and fiercer temptations came our way, we did not ask ourselves what the Sunday School teacher would think or what the preacher would say, but the question that blocked each wayward path was, "What would Ma think?"

Two nights before she went to be with the Lord she loved in her ninetyeth year, I sat beside her bed and talked with her for a long time. Her mind was brilliant and clear. She seemed to feel some sorrow that her life had not been more worthwhile. I took her hand in mine and said, "Ma, maybe you think your life has not amounted to much, considering all those pioneer years of dearth and hardship on our old farm, but I want you to know that because of you the gospel of Christ has gone all over the world." She looked at me with a strange look of incredulity in her eyes, and then she said, "You mean because of you three boys?" And I said, "Yes, Ma, that's what I mean." Perhaps it was only my fancy, but I thought she looked happier for that. Then she prayed for all the family and every relation she could think of. She prayed for the body of Christ and her voice, strong and triumphant, filled the building. But in the morning she was so weak that she could scarcely speak and a few hours thereafter her soul was borne upon the perfume of earth's drooping lilies to the land where flowers never fade.

I have undertaken to relate these things that all who read might know the tremendous influence one lowly, humble, almost unknown individual can have, not only on a family but on the world as well. My good brother, my good sister, please never ask again, "Where shall I worship when I come out of the church system?" Once you begin to walk in the Spirit, all such things are vanity. The value of assembling in congregations has been grossly overrated by Christians of every century, but the inestimable value of the "church which is in thy house", Col. 4:15, has been sadly under-estimated. It is the rottenness of the church system (I do not say of the church), together with the degradation and erosion of the home life that has brought the world to its present evil estate. I am one hundred per cent convinced that every emphasis should be put on home life. Here let mothers and fathers rear their children in the nurture and admonition and fear of the Lord. The church system today, as in all generations of the past, is full of personalities who, though they desire to be teachers, understand neither what they say nor whereof they affirm. 1 Tim. 1:7 How easily can we see the abiding influence of godly parents in these words from Paul's letter to Timothy: "When I call to remembrance the unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and in thy mother Eunice, and I am persuaded in thee also." 2 Tim. 1:5 Here we have three generations of unfeigned faith - a godly grandmother, a godly mother, and a godly son. That is wonderful. It is right and as it ought to be. The disintegration of the home life is wrecking the nations of the world. Fathers and mothers have gone far astray. They have gone awhoring after every temporal thing - lavish homes, luxurious automobiles, expensive playthings, trips abroad, boats, cabins, and countless other luxuries. To attain all these temporal and passing fancies the inestimable value of the home life is neglected. Mothers, forsaking their God-given responsibility, go to work as well as the fathers. Everything, even God Himself, must give way to their lust for temporal things and the result of this erosion of home life is not only a generation of delinquents, but a world so sordid, violent, and evil that it is no longer a fit or safe place to live.

Mr. Husband and Mrs. Wife, it is time for you two to get together and talk things over in the fear of God, because the course you are now pursuing will disqualify both you and your family from among the faithful to whom the kingdom will be given. Husbands and wives, according to the ordinance of Almighty God, are one unit, yes, even one person. The "thus saith the Lord" concerning the matter is simply stated in these inspired words: "For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh." Eph. 5:31 It is a great mystery, we know, yet in spite of such divine revelation and truth as this comes the monstrous evil of women's liberation to captivate the simple minded. What fiendish evil and devilish deception it is to pretend that male and female are somehow rivals at enmity and in antagonism with each other! Male and female were ordained by God to complement each other, each having his God-given place and calling, for as the woman is of the man, so is the man by the woman, but all things of God. 1 Cor. 11:12

Hear the word of the Lord and take heed, all women who hope to attain to God's high calling, for thus saith the Lord, "I will therefore that the younger women marry, bear children, guide the house, and give none occasion to the adversary to speak reproachfully." 1 Tim. 5:14 "The aged women likewise, that they be in behavior as becometh holiness, not false accusers, not given to much wine, teachers of good things; that they may teach the young women to be sober, to love their husbands, to love their children, to be discreet, chaste, keepers at home, good, obedient to their own husbands, that the word of God be not blasphemed." Titus 2:3-5

Here now is a "thus saith the Lord" for husbands. "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave Himself for it... So ought men to love their wives as their own bodies. He that loveth his wife loveth himself. For no man ever yet hated his own flesh, but nourisheth it and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the church." Eph. 5:25, 28, 29 And again, "Ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath, but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." Eph. 6:4 And let this saying apply to husbands also: "If any provide not for his own, and specially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel." 1 Tim. 5:8

It is required of stewards that a man be found faithful. If faithfulness is required of stewards, how much more, then, shall it be required of sons? Faithfulness was required of Moses and of Jesus Christ, our Lord, and so shall it be required of us that we perform with faithfulness and devotion the thing that God has given us to do. If all the husbands in North America would take the responsibility of providing for their homes and if all the married women would quit their jobs and return to their God-given place of guiding the home and bringing up their children, delinquency would drop to almost nothing within a year. And if fathers would take upon themselves the responsibility God has given to them and to them alone to love their wives and love their children, to insist on obedience and godliness and lead the church in their own house, the blessing of God upon our nation would abound beyond compare.
I write with great plainness of speech because I seek not yours, but you. I covet not followers, but that men should become devoted disciples of Christ, our elder brother. Let husbands and wives then consider the matter together with earnest devotion, and let them return to the Lord and follow His ways, and He will surely bless them and reward them as His word has promised to do. It is time for us all to consider our ways. It is time to remember with devotion that we are members of that particular citizenship known as Christians. It is impossible for Christians to walk hand in hand with the world and become one with its system and still retain their unity and standing with God. I care not what our past experience has been or how up-to-date our belief seems to be. We will never attain to mature sonship as long as we love the world. As for the church system, how can we walk hand in hand with it, since it walks hand in hand with the world?

Husbands, there is one special word for you. Immeasurable truth lies in the words, "Husbands, love your wives and be not bitter against them." I am both a husband and a grandfather, and I know by experience that the surest way to gain the love, respect, and the obedience of your children is to sincerely love their mother. A husband's love for his wife should be continually manifest around the home, and that in the sight and presence of the children, by kind and loving words and deeds, by fond embraces, by thoughtfulness and thankfulness and consideration. You will find immediately that your children will join you spontaneously in this great joy, and your family will be knit with a bond that cannot be broken. Home is no place for austerity, quarrels, unkind words, and coldness.

Furthermore, we must reject as from the devil all the silly, childish talk about the "generation gap". Have you ever thought what a calamity it would be if there were no generation gap? There has to be a gap between generations, and we are fools if we try to bridge it. Let the children play and let us who are older smile knowingly and lovingly and with appreciation at their joy, but let us not try to be one of them. In the first place we cannot; we don't want to be children. In the second place they don't want us to be. Children and young people do not want parents to become pals. They want their parents to be good, solid, old Dad and Mom, their ever, present source of strength, security, safety, and good advice and chastisement, upon whom they can always depend.

I earnestly pray that the eyes of our understanding may be greatly enlightened as we read together the remaining lines of this article. Surely the blindest man on earth must be able to see that upheavals enormous and incredible are shaking the entire world. Every form of government is reeling like a drunken man. The religious systems are shaking, particularly that system which, for the want of a better name, is called the church. The upheaval, the disorder, the confusion of human notions and human doctrines, the blasphemous acts, the hordes of false teachers, false pastors, false prophets, false evangelists, and false apostles is at its absolute height. Well did the prophet Isaiah say, "They err in vision; they stumble in judgment, for all tables are full of vomit and filthiness, so that there is no place clean." Isa. 28:7-8

It was at the very height of all this dreadful disorder and confusion that the apostle John saw a woman give birth to a son who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron, and the woman, fearing lest she should be overcome and swallowed up by the dragon of religious systems, fled into the wilderness, where she was fed of God for 1260 days. We are seeing those days right now. There may be a double or a triple fulfillment to this prophecy as with all others, but know this: there is a company of spiritual people who today are living in a spiritual wilderness, separate and apart from the confusion, disorder, and blasphemy of the present day religious world. They have not gone out into a literal desert to live in trailers and tents as some misguided people are saying we should do, but they have separated themselves unto God. From Him and from Him alone they drink of the inexhaustible fountain of living waters, and from His hand they receive their daily bread.

Centuries ago our Lord Jesus said, "When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, stand in the holy place, (whoso readeth, let him understand), then let them which be in Judea flee into the mountains. Let him which is on the house top not come down to take anything out of his house; neither let him which is in the field return back to take his clothes." Matt. 24:15-18 No scripture is of private interpretation. Each one ascends from the natural to the spiritual in understanding. Therefore, I affirm that in our day we now see the abomination that maketh desolate every sacred thing standing tall and stately and blasphemous in what were once holy places. It is time to flee without delay to the mountain of God without trying to salvage either things or people from that house which must be abandoned. "But to what mountain shall we flee?” you ask. I reply, "Did not Isaiah say by the Spirit, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and He will teach us His ways, and we will walk in His paths"? Isa. 2:3 The Lord Himself is our high and holy hill. He is the mountain of which it is written, “There shall be an handful of corn in the earth upon the top of the mountains...” Psa. 72:16

Beloved and elect people, chosen of God and precious in His sight, can you not see that we are now in the end of the age? Is it not perfectly clear that the end of this age cannot possibly be as it was in the beginning? When the Son of man cometh, will He find faith on the earth? My answer is this: He will find faith only in those elect people who, in answer to the call, "Come out of her, My people," have in obedience gone unto Him without the camp, bearing His reproach. His faith will be found only in those who have obeyed His voice and have come out of the bondage and corruption of Babylon into the glorious liberty and freedom of God's holy mountain.

Those who have come out of Babylon are sometimes mystified as to how they should instruct their children in the ways of God. Tradition has for centuries erroneously taught us that our instruction must be found in listening to the oft repeated and usually juvenile sermons of a preacher several times a week. But is it not true that even his sermons are purported to be taken from Bible texts? Do you not have a Bible in your house? Has not God said, "It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing: The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life"? Need any man starve, then, for want of the word of God? Is it not a thousand-fold better and more desirable to have the Holy Spirit as your instructor rather than a college graduate, who is only really implanting sectarian tradition in your brain?

I know of no better way to conclude this writing than to read that most enlightening exhortation given by Moses to the children of Israel. In these words of scripture Moses taught the fathers in Israel how they were to instruct their children in the ways and truths of God throughout the centuries of their early pilgrimage, and shall we not call to mind in our day that all these things are written for our instruction upon whom the ends of the ages are come? "And these words, which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart. And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thy house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up. And thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thine hand, and they shall be as frontlets between thine eyes. And thou shalt write them upon the posts of thy house, and upon thy gates. And it shall be, when the Lord thy God shall have brought thee into the land which He sware unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, to give thee great and goodly cities, which thou buildest not, and houses full of all good things, which thou filledest not, and wells digged, which thou diggest not, vineyards and olive trees, which thou plantedst not; when thou shalt have eaten and be full, then beware lest thou forget the Lord, which brought thee out of Egypt, with a mighty hand. And the Lord shewed signs and wonders, great and sore, upon Egypt, upon Pharaoh, and upon all his household, before our eyes; and He brought us out from thence, that He might bring us in, to give us the land which He sware unto our fathers. And the Lord commanded us to do all these statutes, to fear the Lord our God, for our good always, that He might preserve us alive as it is at this day. And it shall be our righteousness, if we observe to do all these commandments before the Lord our God, as He hath commanded us." Deut. 6:6-14,20-25

We should also notice how Joshua in like manner instructed the fathers and mothers and made it their solemn responsibility to tell their children the things of God and explain all questions to them as they were asked. Parents should always remember that, as soon as a child is old enough to ask a question, he is at that moment old enough to receive a correct answer without evasions, fairy tales, or lies. "And Joshua said unto them, Pass over before the ark of the Lord your God into the midst of Jordan, and take you up every man of you a stone upon his shoulder, according unto the number of the tribes of the children of Israel; that this may be a sign among you, that when your children ask their fathers in time to come, saying, What mean ye by these stones? then ye shall answer them that the waters of Jordan were cut off before the ark of the covenant of the Lord; when it passed over Jordan, the waters of Jordan were cut off: and these stones shall be for a memorial unto the children of Israel forever... Then ye shall let your children know, saying, Israel came over this Jordan on dry land. For the Lord your God dried up the waters of Jordan from before you, until ye were passed over, as the Lord your God did to the Red sea, which He dried up from before us, until we were gone over. That all the people of the earth might know the hand of the Lord, that it is mighty: that ye might fear the Lord your God for ever." Josh. 4:5-7;22-24

The commandments of God, worn in their day as frontlets between their eyes and carried on their bosoms, must now in our day of grace be carried in our spiritual mind, which is the mind of Christ, and hidden in our hearts. How much better should we who have Christ within be able to instruct our children and give them an answer for the eternal hope within us, and that with meekness and godly fear!

Fathers and mothers, you have grievously erred in that you have neglected the family altar. Because you have neglected to gather your family around a common altar for prayer and the reading of the Bible, decay and disorder have set in to such an extent that it is now hard to correct it. I exhort you, therefore, to repent of this neglect of your duty as God's priest and change your way. Father, you are the head of the household. Therefore let all fathers be exhorted to call their families together at the breakfast table. Read the word of God in company, then kneel together and take time to pray. You will be amazed at the results. You will be fed in this wilderness and you will be strong in grace and in the knowledge of God.

Great moves are under way to form a world government and irresistible efforts are being exerted to form a world church. Both these things draw nearer by the hour, and, when they are complete, they will compose the two great beasts of the Revelation, one political, heading up the nations under Anti-Christ, the other religious, rising from the Charismatic and Ecumenical movements. As Belshazzar in the days of Daniel conceived the wicked thought of dragging the holy vessels of the Lord into his corrupt and drunken orgy, so the world today mingles things sacred with its mad orgy, even pretending that Christ was a hippy. Conversely the church system takes a heathenish delight in dragging the filth of the world into all places once deemed sacred, even indulging in rock masses dancing to hippy tunes both at and on their communion tables, where they assemble not for the better, but for the worse.

Mene Mene, Tekel Upharsin is the handwriting on the wall. Thou art weighed in the balances and found wanting is the decree against the godless system. Let us, therefore go unto Hun without the camp, bearing His reproach. Let us flee to His mountain where we shall be taught of the Lord.

THE LORD IS MY SHEPHERD

The long day of toil was over for David, the stripling son of Jesse. The sun had kissed the Palestinian hills a fond good night and was gone beyond the western horizon to bless and gladden other lands. The Lord with rosy pigments painted the glowing sunset on the canvas of the sky while Mother Nature with gentle fingers drew the shades of night across the windows of heaven.

Deep shadows creep along the country lanes;
The birds are winging homeward to their nests.
Bright little lights wink out from window panes,
   And bid the weary toiler home to rest.

And, when each sheep had passed beneath the shepherd's rod and not one lamb was found to be missing, David, the shepherd and sweet singer of Israel, sat down to meditate, to sing and to play. The song the Holy Spirit inspired his shepherd heart to sing was this:

   The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.
   He maketh me to lie down in green pastures:
      He leadeth me beside still waters.
   He restoreth my soul:
      He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
   Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death,
I will fear no evil: for Thou art with me; Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me.
Thou prepares! a table before me in the presence of mine enemies:
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life:
And I shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever.
—Psa. 23.

With the possible exception of the Lord's Prayer we would be right in saying that this psalm is the best known, the most frequently quoted and dearly loved of all the writings of the holy scriptures. "All scripture is given by inspiration of God and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." 2 Tim. 3:16-17
Because all scripture is given by inspiration from God and is profitable in so many ways, every child of God should seek to fill his heart and mind with all its holy truth. The great benefit in storing the word of God within the heart is manifested in that it cleanses the spirit, enlightens the eyes, and gives knowledge to the simple and understanding to the saints who walk in the ways of the Lord. As I waited before God this morning, the words of this psalm came like a ray of dawn over the meadows of my heart. For months I have been praying that the Lord would especially lead me, together with all His elect people, in these perilous times that herald the close of the age. Surely everyone who has a serious thought must know how important it is in these days of tribulation to be led by the Holy Spirit. Make no mistake about it! Let the message ring clearly within our hearts, for God has declared, and none can alter the decree, "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." Rom. 8:14 They are the ones who will be possessors of the mind of Christ and they will stand tall among God's sons on that wonderful day when He speaks this word to all creation: "Here am I and the children (sons) whom Thou hast given Me." "Ye which have followed Me, in the regeneration when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of His glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel. And everyone that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for My name's sake, shall receive an hundredfold, and shall inherit everlasting life. But many that are first shall be last; and the last shall be first." Matt. 19:28-30

In the twenty-third psalm it can be plainly seen that the Holy Spirit is taking the events in the working day of a shepherd in Israel as an inspirational basis for the words of the psalm. Each event and activity of the shepherd's day was turned into a delightful allegory, vividly portraying a spiritual truth, every one of which should comfort our hearts as daily we walk through this valley of the shadow of death. It has always been a delight to me to discover how men and women from all walks of life find spiritual meaning from the details of their own occupation. The farmer tells of the miracle of a seed that was planted in the ground. He speaks of the preparation of the soil and the marvelous increase of the harvest. In his work he sees the corn of wheat that falls into the ground and dies and beholds the increase that comes forth in its image. The physician speaks of the marvels of the body - the head, which is Christ, and the body, which we are. The architect thinks of the wonders of God’s creation and how all things are designed by Him, and we can hear the astronomer breathing forth the words: "When I consider Thy heavens, the work of Thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which Thou hast ordained; what is man that Thou art mindful of him? And the son of man, that Thou visitest him? For Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of Thy hands; Thou hast put all things under his feet." Psa. 8:3-6

It is no wonder, then, that Jesus spoke of ravens, and sparrows, and lilies, and corns of wheat that fall into the ground and die, of sunrises and sunsets, of fig trees, and hens that gather their little ones under their wings; of shepherds and sheep and folds for flocks, of men who build their houses on the sand and others who build upon the rock; of sowers that go forth to sow their seed in every place, and of oxen that are led away to the watering on the Sabbath day, and much more besides.

Thus spoke David, the shepherd son of Israel, as he likened the varied activities of his day to our earthly journey through the valley of the shadow of death to the eternal abode in the house of the Lord, of which I will later speak more particularly. David was a shepherd and he knew that sheep have very little sense of direction. "All we like sheep have gone astray," said Isaiah the prophet, Sheep, left to themselves, are prone to wander and go astray. This young man, who so early in life had learned the hardships of a pastoral life, knew full well that the greatest requirement in a shepherd is to have a shepherd's heart. He had learned by experience that great truth uttered centuries later by Jesus, the Son of God, "The hireling fleeth, because he is an hireling, and careth not for the sheep." John 10:13 This David is the man who, as a stripling, stood before king Saul of Israel, declaring his ability to fight with Goliath of Gath, and the words he uttered were these: "Thy servant kept his father's sheep, and there came a lion, and a bear, and took a lamb out of the flock; And I went out after him, and smote him, and delivered it out of his mouth: and when he arose against me, I caught him by his beard, and smote him, and slew him. Thy servant slew both the lion and the bear; and this uncircumcised Philistine shall be as one of them, seeing he hath defied the armies of the living God. David said moreover, The Lord that delivered me out of the paw of the lion and out of the paw of the bear, He will deliver me out of the hand of this Philistine. And Saul said unto David, Go, and the Lord be with thee." 1 Sam. 17:34-38

David had a shepherd's heart. He was no hireling or striker who would not work an hour overtime without double pay. Many a night he had sought for sheep that had gone astray and many a day he had bound up the sores of the wounded, pouring in oil and wine to heal them. Thus it was that as he thought of his work as a shepherd of sheep, the Spirit reminded him that there was one great shepherd in heaven on high who was the leader and pastor of all mankind. With his heart bursting with the truth of the message, methinks he picked up his harp and sang in the Spirit, "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want." What David was singing for himself he was singing for all those who put their trust in the Lord, for Jesus Christ the Son of God has declared Himself to be the Good Shepherd, who giveth His life for the sheep.

During the months that have passed there has come into my heart a longing to be rid of all unnecessary and superfluous things - unnecessary words, unauthorized works, and all human programs. The scripture is very explicit in its statement, "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." The things we do and say when we are thus led by the Spirit of God are never idle, useless, or superfluous, for the Lord is our shepherd. As the days pass swiftly by and we find ourselves treading the path that leads through this present valley of the shadow of death unto the sunlit hills of the kingdom age, many things give us much concern as we go. Paul once described the difficulties of the way by saying, "When we were come into Macedonia, our flesh had no rest, but we were troubled on every side; without were fightings, within were fears." 2 Cor. 7:5 However brave our hearts may be, we soon discover that all who are called to the sonship which His gracious foreknowledge has ordained will find themselves encompassed by enemies and in the good fight of faith often thwarted, defeated, and beset by many fears until we learn to trust, not in ourselves, but in the living God, who raises even the dead. We must learn that it is through our tribulation and seeming defeat that we begin to see our true calling. We must come to understand that God has not called many wise men after the flesh. He has not called many mighty nor many noble. If, indeed, He has, I do not seem to know who they are, and, when such are called of Him, all their earthly glory must be abased.

Rather than call wise men after the flesh, God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise - that is to say, the things which the world deems foolish - even as it has been written, "The foolishness of God is wiser than men: and the weakness of God is stronger than men." 1 Cor. 1:25, 27 Even the preaching of the cross is foolishness to them that are perishing, but to us who have been saved such preaching is the power of God and the wisdom of God. Thus it follows that, after mankind has made the discovery that he cannot be saved from sin or delivered from death by his own wisdom, but through the foolishness of the faith we preach he finds peace and forgiveness with God, then the cross, which hitherto had seemed foolishness and a stumbling stone to his earthly wisdom, is found indeed to be both the wisdom of God and the power of God. "There was a little city and few men within it, and there came a great king against it and besieged it and built great bulwarks against it. Now there was found in it a poor wise man, and he by his wisdom delivered the city; yet no man remembered that same poor man. Then said I, Wisdom is better than strength: nevertheless the poor man's wisdom is despised, and his words are not heard. The words of wise men are heard in quiet more than the cry of him that ruleth among fools." Eccles. 9:14-18

"The Lord is my shepherd," David sang, and centuries later Jesus, the son of David, the Son of God and the promised Redeemer, re-echoing the truth that David spoke, said, "I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth His life for the sheep." Many were the perils of sheep in the Holy Land. There were wolves and bears and lions, poisonous snakes, thorn bushes, rushing streams, cliffs and rocky terrain. The shadow of death was ever present. It is into such a shadow as this that we through the wisdom of God are being led from day to day. Whether we are ready to accept it or not, the fact remains that the difficulties of the way are ordained by the wisdom of God, and these light afflictions, which are but for a moment, are working for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen; for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal.

"He that entereth by the door is the shepherd of the sheep. To him the porter openeth; and the sheep hear his voice and he calleth his own sheep by name, and leadeth them out." John 10:3 These words are founded upon the fact that in the near east sheeplands often were built to accommodate the flocks of several shepherds, but there was never any danger of the sheep becoming mixed or lost to their shepherd because each one possessed that God-given instinct to know the voice of its own shepherd. They steadfastly refused to follow a stranger. That is why Jesus said, "A stranger will they not follow, but will flee from him: for they know not the voice of strangers." John 10:5. At the beginning of each day "the sheep hear his voice, and he calleth his own sheep by name and leadeth them out. And when he putteth forth his own sheep, he goeth before them, and the sheep follow him, for they know his voice." John 10:3-4

Many centuries ago the apostle Paul wrote, "There are, it may be, so many kinds of voices in the world..." 1 Cor. 14:10. To that statement of truth we can say a very sad Amen. There were many voices in the world in his day, and I think their number must have multiplied an hundred fold in our day. Voices! Voices! Voices calling us here and there to do this or that, everyone with a doctrine, with a tongue or a revelation, but so few who follow Christ, knowing only His voice! "I am of Paul, I am of Apollos, I am of Cephas, and I am of Christ" was the divisive clamor of the Corinthian church, and Paul, rebuking their factious spirit with the severity of which he was capable, enquired of them, "Is Christ divided? Was Paul crucified for you? Or are ye baptized in the name of Paul?" I suppose that even the Corinthians would have been horrified at such suggestions as these. Nevertheless they still persisted in their schisms as the Christians do today. Paul did not stop with this scathing rebuke! He showed them the wickedness that lay beneath all this variance and rift within the camp when he said with no uncertain voice, "Ye are yet carnal; for whereas there is among you envying, and strife, and divisions, are ye not carnal and walk as men? For while one saith, I am of Paul; and another, I am of Apollos; are ye not carnal?" 1 Cor. 3:3-4

Oh that God's people would consider that Paul and Apollos and all other men who are called of God are nothing more than ministers by whom they believed and not a Christ to be followed! When Christians follow a man, however good that man may be, they make him a false shepherd, a false prophet, and a false Christ because they persist in following him instead of following Christ and being joined to Him who is the only head of the body. This wicked spirit of "I am of Paul, I am of Cephas, I am of Apollos" fills the world today. The names of sects, denominations, and famous men are legion and every one of them becomes a false Christ because each and every one of them conveys the impression to his followers that only if they follow his particular way can they be saved.

Christians today for the most part are not following the Good Shepherd. They are following religious systems, and those who are not following systems are following famous men. It makes my heart ache when they talk to me or write to me, and I am usually struck dumb in their presence as I listen to their childish prattle. If men and women become followers of me, what will they do when I pass from this earthly scene? However true I may have been before God, doubtless I have become a false shepherd to them if they have followed me instead of Christ. Well meaning people often write me, requesting me to tell them the story of my life, explain my background, my religious persuasions and all the rest. I am not particularly ashamed of my past, but I see nothing special about it. It is no more worthy of praise or comment than is theirs who write. I, too, am a sheep of His pasture. I seek, as they, to follow the Lamb whithersoever He goes. What can any saint desire more than this, since He is the Shepherd of us all, who has given His life for the sheep that He might give His life to the sheep?

Some years ago I went to visit an old friend who lay dying in the hospital. We had been farmer boys together down on the Saskatchewan prairies. In his mid-thirties the year 1935 he had been converted in a meeting my wife and I held in a little country schoolhouse. "Brother Hawtin," he said, "God has given me a word of wisdom that I would like to pass on to you." These are the words he spoke: "Look not at the past; it is forgotten. Nor peer into the future; it will yet unfold. But live today in the eternal present, for where the Lord is it is now, today." I was so impressed with these words that I hastened to write them down lest I should forget them, and for some hours I walked in a daze as they gripped my heart. Oh that God's people would forget the past and all the blunders and errors and sins of the way! The past is a thing forgotten just as surely as He has buried our sins, never to be remembered against us any more. We have been redeemed by the blood of the everlasting conveant. The will He made He confirmed by the shedding of His own blood, signifying that He died that He might give His life to us. How good it would be if preachers who have been saved from lives of sin would cease from the vanity of advertising their past crimes to draw crowds to their meetings! Do they not know and will they never learn that "it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret"? Eph. 5:12. It is not the parading of the rottenness of the flesh that brings men to Christ. But Jesus showed the way when He said, "I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto Me." He calleth His own sheep by name, and leadeth them out. And when He putteth forth His own sheep, He goeth before them, and the sheep follow Him, for they know His voice. And a stranger will they not follow, but will flee from him, for they know not the voice of strangers.

We are living in perilous times. I doubt that in all time since the foundations of the world so many strange voices have been heard calling the saints to follow them. I speak the solemn truth when I tell you that there is some inborn wickedness in the heart of every man, whether small or great that craves for disciples to follow him. We can almost hear the hurt in the soul of Paul, who, after speaking to the elders of the church of Ephesus, warned them of this danger in the following words: "I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them." Acts. 20:29-30. What an obnoxious situation this is! Yet we must face the fact that every denomination and sect from the least to the greatest is a sheep stealer and all the great names in this sick, abortive, modern evangelism are continually seeking to draw away disciples after themselves. Seek to follow only Christ, my brother, and, when you follow only Him, you will make the blessed discovery that you are not only in harmony with God, but in fellowship with every believer who also follows only Him.

It was never my privilege to be a shepherd of natural sheep, but I had a very dear friend who had spent most of his life hi that occupation. He could interest me by the hour, telling me the remarkable ways of sheep. It should be in our interest to know that, though healthy sheep follow only the voice of the shepherd, a sick sheep will follow the voice of a stranger. This, then, must be the reason Christians follow organized religion instead of following Christ and Him alone. They have become sick from starvation and spiritual malnutrition. They have lost their grip on Christ, the Good Shepherd, and they have turned to following hirelings whose care is not for the flock, but for the fleece for building up their own earthly kingdom.

I wish I could tell you some simple formula by which all men could know the voice of the Good Shepherd and by which they could easily distinguish it from every other voice, but no such simple formula exists. We come to know the voice of Christ only by hearing it. Just as a mother can distinguish between the voices of her children by continually hearing them, so also by hearing do we come to know the voice of Christ as distinct from other voices. It is a spiritual understanding, which cannot be mistaken if we live in contact with Him. He it was who said, "My sheep know My voice." There is only one way they could possibly know that voice and that is by hearing it in the depths of their spirit. Again I say it is a spiritual thing — not that He speaks in audible tones, for He seldom does, but there is an inner voice that comes from an inner contact, and I can explain little more than that.

If we would hear the voice of Christ speaking to our spirit within, it is of utmost necessity that we give ourselves to seasons of fasting and prayer. Fasting cleanses the body and enlightens the spiritual eyes of a man, bringing light and understanding to his heart. Fasting has the effect of breaking the bondages that tie us to this corrupt world system and all the things that belong to it so that our spirit is liberated from the flesh to go out to meet with God. Fasting loosens us from the power of the flesh, which is the physical body. All passions and desires of the physical flesh resist and stand in the way to hinder the growth of the spiritual man.

A healthy person can easily fast for ten days or three weeks, not only without harm to the body, but with very much spiritual benefit. Diseases of all descriptions can be cured by a long fast simply because the body has time to rid itself of the poisons it has accumulated for decades. But the physical blessing is as nothing compared to the benefit attained in the spirit, for in fasting and prayer the inner man hears the voice of God and comes to know hi secret the sound of His voice and not the voice of strangers. You will have trouble the first time or two you fast; make no mistake about that. The eating habit holds your inner man far more in bondage to the flesh than you ever dreamed possible. Indeed, your communion with God during the first five or six days of a fast may seem to be less than nothing, but it is afterward that the benefit will be realized. Even Jesus, when He fasted forty days, was tempted sorely of the devil, and I suppose the sorest temptation of them all was this: "If Thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread." The temptation to break your fast by eating is very real, especially with beginners in fasting. It is a temptation that should be resisted with great spiritual resolve. You will probably feel as though you are ready to die, but your condition is well described in the words of Paul, "Though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day." 2 Cor. 4:16.

Learn to listen to the voice of Christ and by listening you will discern that it is the voice of the Good Shepherd. Give ear to His voice much more than you do to the clamoring voices of men. You will be surprised, when you wait before Him, to see just how many wonderful things He will drop into your heart. His voice is a still, small voice that can only be heard when all other voices are stilled and when personal ambitions fade from your heart. When the soul is hushed, the spirit stilled, and the ceaseless demands of the body are put to naught, then the voice of the Good Shepherd is heard speaking in His holy temple, which is your inner man, revealing His truth, manifesting His will, and transforming the spirit into the image of Him that created it. Someone once said to a man of God, "I would give all the world for an experience like yours!" "That is just what it cost me," the man replied, and that is true.

The more you live in communion with Christ the more obvious will be the voice of strangers. I cannot explain this inner knowledge. You must experience it for yourself. The man who lives in harmony with the Spirit of God is able to smell the rottenness of the flesh, even at a distance. I have heard unholy men praising the Lord, but my spirit recoiled from them — not that I knew their manner of life, but I sensed the emptiness of their spirit. I have heard men preach good sermons, but I knew they had neither part nor lot in "this inheritance." Never give heed to a showy outward appearance however good it may look or sound, for false prophets wear rough garments to deceive and grievous wolves come dressed in sheep’s clothing. Learn to know the voice of strangers. If they are out of touch with Christ, the Spirit will not bear witness to them. Once the Spirit has failed to witness for them, you must steadfastly refuse to try to persuade yourself to favor them. I do not mean that you must always understand a man's message or that his message must harmonize with old tradition, for often times words that you do not understand may have the joyful ring of truth. They will be in harmony both with God's word and the Holy Spirit within you.

"The night is far spent; the day is at hand. Let us therefore cast off the works of darkness and let us put on the armor of light. Let us walk honestly, as in the day; not in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and envying. But put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh, to fulfill the lusts thereof." Rom. 13:12-14

"When He putteth forth His own sheep, He goeth before them; and the sheep follow Him, for they know His voice." John 10:4 Not all people are the Lord's sheep. Jesus Himself once said, "Other sheep I have which are not of this fold." They were His because by His blood He purchased the whole world, for God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them. The completion of that reconciliation, however, takes ages of time, though the price has been paid for every man. Not until the dispensation of the fullness of times will God gather the "all things" into Christ. Eph. 1:10. Christian people make a great mistake when they imagine that it is God's will to gather all mankind into the fold now. God has no such intention. His intention is first to gather in an elect "in Christ" company. How good it would be if men could see, however dimly, the implications of the term in Christ! It means so much more than simple justification by faith! To be in Christ means to be included among those many brethren of whom it is written, "Whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son that He might be the firstborn among many brethren." Rom. 8:29 These are the true body of Christ and the fullness of Him that filleth all in all, Eph. 1:23, or, as Weymouth says, "The completeness of Him who everywhere fills the universe with Himself." We have been guilty of using the term in Christ with deplorable looseness. There is a primary sense in which all Christians are in Christ because they are believers and are justified, yet on closer examination the in Christ are shown to be a very elect sonship company, all born of God, who are being transformed into the very image and likeness of Jesus Christ, that first begotten Son.
It is not God's intention nor is it even God's will to bring all mankind into the fold during this present age. This sad notion that the Father would, if He could, save all men in this age has thrown the entire age of grace into turmoil and disorder. Well-meaning people have worked themselves into nervous breakdowns in their efforts to get all men and all nations to receive Christ now, in this age. They have added greatly to their confusion by teaching the ridiculous and untenable doctrine that would have us believe that all who are not partakers of God's grace in this age will be lost and that forever more. The utter stupidity of this widely accepted doctrine was set forth with great clarity by the apostle James, who, standing before the apostles at Jerusalem, plainly declared God's intention, first for this present age and secondly for the age to come. These are the inspired and indisputable words He spoke: "Simon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles (nations) to take out of them a people for His name. And to this agree the words of the prophets; as it is written, After this (after He has taken out a people) I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up: that the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles, upon whom My name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things. Known unto God are all His works from the beginning of the world." Acts 15:14-18

The passage quoted above unfolds the plan of God, first for this age of grace - that is, to take out a people for His name, which simply means the in Christ people. After this company is made complete during this age of grace, the Lord will return (verse 16) and set up the tabernacle of David that is fallen down. This simply means that Christ and the in-Christed sons will set up the kingdom and reign on the throne of David over all the earth in one glorious kingdom, in which all will be set right. During that age of righteousness the residue of men will seek the Lord. The word residue simply means the remainder or surplus after a part has been separated or otherwise treated. (Funk and Wagnall's Dictionary). How beautifully clear and simple that is! It is the lifting up of Him that brings men to Christ. The elect are being prepared, not to go to heaven, but to reign with Christ in the kingdom of God, during which time the residue of all mankind will seek the Lord.

Should there be any doubt remaining concerning God's intention for those blessed ages to come - the kingdom of God and the fullness of times - such doubt is fully allayed by that one last sweeping statement, "And all the Gentiles (nations) upon whom My name is called." I shall not try to differentiate here between the two phrases the residue and all the Gentiles, but I think this passage, as translated in Weymouth's original, throws much light upon it. This is what he says. "Afterwards I will return, and will rebuild David's fallen tent. Its ruins I will rebuild, and I will set it up again; that the rest of mankind may seek after the Lord - even all the nations which are called by My name." The rest of mankind includes all nations of men on the face of the earth which are not Israel nations - Chinese, Japanese, Indians, Africans, and many others. The nations which are "called by My name" are the Israel nations, all of which at the present time are nominally Christian nations with the exception of a small segment of Judah.

Now you are going to demand, "But what about the people who have already died and have passed from the scene without even hearing of Christ?" I reply in the words of Paul: "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?" What is the resurrection for if it is not for judgment? And what is judgment but pure justice? What is more just than that the eyes of the blind should be opened and the ears of the deaf unstopped, and that they should hear that one true message, "that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed unto us (the in-Christed) the word of reconciliation"?

2 Cor. 5:19. Oh that Christian people might pray for the spirit of understanding that they might see that our omniscient God knows His own business! He knows what He is about. His purposes have not been foiled and frustrated by a devil who was created by God Himself for the specific purpose of resisting His will. The devil was a murderer from the beginning. He never was the anointed cherub that we have erroneously made him to be. He has no power at all except what has been delegated to him that God's people may be made strong in resisting evil and that they may be complete overcomers in all things. Temptation is an absolute necessity to strong spiritual growth. We cannot be overcomers without temptation. God never intended His people to be pansies, but mighty pillars of strength, capable of overcoming evil in God's name and fully equipped to restore the whole universe to the image of God. Let Christians abandon Babylon's nonsensical notion that would liken God and Satan to two powerful and clever wrestlers, contending with each other for the universe and the souls of men. Only God is almighty! Only God is omniscient, immutable, omnipresent and eternal! The mightiest nations are but dust in the balances with Him and, when they have fulfilled their purpose, they are dusted off as a woman would dust her mantel-piece. "...The most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever He will, and setteth up over it the basest of men." Dan. 4:17 Mighty nations who defy God are permitted to continue only as long as He wills. Then they are dusted off as chaff from the balances when their baseness has served its purpose in purifying the people of God.

Learn, oh man of God, that it is the Lord who rules. It is the Lord who purposes and who brings His purposes to pass. None can stay His hand or say to Him, "What doest Thou?" His will is supreme in all earth and heaven and, when He says He is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance, then let us preach no sermons about God's will being frustrated by the puny will of man. When He says it is His will that all should come to repentance, then rest assured that His will shall be carried out in every detail and that every knee shall bow to Him and every tongue shall confess to God that Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father. No man can say that Jesus Christ is Lord except by the Holy Spirit.

Perhaps I have wandered away from my subject, but I have done so that it might be seen that the Good Shepherd is faithfully doing His work. He is the shepherd of all mankind and will faithfully gather the last sheep into the fold. The Lord is not satisfied even when ninety and nine are in the fold. He seeks the lost until He finds it and will bring them all in their own appointed time and in their own order. The church system - Babylon, which is confusion and disorder - has taught that the majority of men will be lost, and this is supposed to be "good tidings". The system has taught and still is teaching that for every one that will be saved ninety-nine will be lost. They have reversed the parable of the ninety and nine. Matt. 18:12 They have one sheep in the fold and ninety-nine lost, not only in the hills, but in hell, and that forever. The words forever, everlasting, and eternal do not belong in the Bible. The words aion and aionian, from which these words are translated, mean age or age-lasting and have nothing to do with forever and ever. It is impossible for an age to be forever simply because an age belongs to time.

This is the day and the dispensation when Jesus, the good and great shepherd of the sheep, is calling His own sheep by name. "If any man think that he knoweth anything, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know. But if any man love God, the same is known of Him." 1 Cor. 8:2-3 The people who love God are the ones Christ knows by name. He has a special eye for them; they are the special objects of His care. They are being prepared now above all others. Not that He does not love all others, but rather that their time for special calling and attention has not yet arrived. The time for the other sheep will come, but first of all He must take out a people for His name.

See then what the Good Shepherd is doing in this present hour. These sheep, which He knows by name, are being led out. He "leadeth them out"; He "putteth them forth". John 10:4 I cannot resist repeating the fact that we are living in the end of the age. All the governments of the world are Babylon. All the church systems of the world are Babylon. The Roman system is Babylon. The Protestant system is Babylon. The former is the mother of harlots; the latter, the harlot daughters. The union between the two systems is Babylon the great. All is confusion. All is disorder. That the whole world system, whether political or religious, is collapsing even the blindest man can see. Every pillar is rotten, every foundation standing on sinking sand. Riches are corrupted. Garments are moth-eaten. "The gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them is a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire." James 5:3 The governments are rotten to the core. The morals of the people are collapsing. Families and homes are broken down. Famines and pestilences stalk the earth with increasing horror. Earthquakes are becoming more severe. Hail stones as large as soft balls have fallen here in Saskatchewan. Men's hearts are failing them for fear and for looking after the things that are coming on the earth, for the power of the heavens is shaken. If there ever was a time when mankind needed a shepherd, it is certainly now!

Let us notice this truth more closely. "He calleth His own sheep by name and leadeth them out." This is the day John saw at Patmos in which, at the end of the dispensation of grace, Christ would be calling, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partakers of her sins." Rev. 18:4 Every man that will heed that voice is being led out, led out of the world and out of the systems to follow God. I am sure that any man who will face the present situation honestly, prayerfully viewing the course of the age as it really is, will hear the voice of God calling, "Come out from among them and be separate."
Because I am constantly exhorting Christians to abandon the church systems, people are continually telling me that I am bitter against the system. There is no truth in that. I have nothing to be bitter about. I simply see the situation as it is portrayed in God's word, and practically everything I say is nothing more or less than a repetition of what the scripture has repeatedly stated. Can you condemn me for calling it a harlot system when God's word describes it as such? Is it wrong to call people out of a building that is collapsing, even though that building be the Tower of Babel itself? I must confess I care very little what people say or think, but I care greatly for the message that God has put in my heart.

Those who are called by His name are being led out, and, as it is said in verse 4, "When He putteth forth His own sheep, He goeth before them, and the sheep follow Him and they know His voice." Be assured of this: The Good Shepherd of the sheep, who is calling us to come out, has also promised that He will go before us, and those who will obey Him may assure their hearts that, when they start to follow Him separate and apart from the disorder and confusion of all systems of religion, they will come to know Him more intimately in a few short weeks than in all their previous lifetime. Surely the blindest man can see that there is no spiritual growth in the church system! Their tendency is always backward. What denomination since time began has gone forward to greater light and understanding? Only in numbers do they increase. In all else they backslide until their people have a name that they live, but are dead.

"When He putteth forth His own sheep, He goeth before them." These are the words of Jesus, that great Shepherd of the sheep, and how similar they are to the words of David, who said, "He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside still waters. He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake"? Here, walking in the light of His presence, we find ourselves treading in green pastures. There is plenty of food in God's word and the amount left over increases with the increase of the number who eat it. The more there are to eat it the more there is left over. It is like the loaves and fishes which, when blessed, fed the hungry multitude - five thousand men besides at least as many women and several times as many children - but when they had eaten all they could after their three days of fasting, there were left over twelve baskets full.

There is much beautiful truth in the words of David, "He leadeth me in paths of righteousness for His name's sake." Shepherds of the east are very careful about their names. They do not become good shepherds by having a bad name. They do not want to be known as hirelings nor cowards in the face of danger. They do not want to be careless of their sheep, leaving them sick, in danger, of half starved. This is what David had in mind when he wrote the words, "for His name's sake." And let us remember that this whole psalm is prophetic. It is really referring to Jesus Christ. He who leads His people out has a special eye for them for His own name's sake. The Good Shepherd lays down His life for the sheep. This is the ultimate in goodness, and all else that we could mention is secondary to that. All the riches of God in Christ Jesus come to us through the death and, above all, the resurrection of the Good Shepherd of the sheep. "The young lions do lack and suffer hunger, but they that seek the Lord shall not want any good thing." Psa. 34:10

David ended his beautiful psalm with these words: "I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever." For want of space we must regretfully pass over much of the teaching and beauty of this psalm to conclude with the significant words, "I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever." The house of the Lord is really the body of Christ. House in scripture very frequently means household. For instance, we often read such statements as these: "There was war between the house of Saul and the house of David," or "Is there any left of the house of Saul?" Also we often read of the house of Judah or the house of Israel. The meaning cannot be mistaken. It means family or household. Thus it was that, when David said, "I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever," he knew that he was a member of God's family and thus a member of God's household. He knew that he was a part of that mystical body of Christ, that company of younger sons that were to be born. The house of the Lord is "the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." 2 Cor. 5:1 It is the place of which Jesus spoke when He said, "In My Father's house are many mansions." John 14:2 It is the place of which Paul spoke when he said, "Ye are God's husbandry, ye are God's building." 1 Cor. 3:9 This is the house Peter so beautifully described when he likened the elect believers to stones in God's house, saying, "Ye also as living stones are built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ." The very corner stone of that house is none other than the first perfected Son, Jesus Christ, who Himself was of the household of David. Matt. 1:1. Our Lord Jesus Christ referred to His own body as the temple of God, saying, "Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up," John 2:19, and explains that He spoke of the temple of His body.

John 2:21. Every saint should remember that "His body" does not consist only of the flesh and bones which formed the human tabernacle of Jesus of Nazareth, but of that whole household of His saints, who by one Spirit are baptized into one body. "There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling: One Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all..." Eph. 4:4-6

It is true that there is but one body and that body is the body of Christ. It is true there is but one baptism, and of that one baptism the apostle has said, "By one Spirit are ye all baptized into one body ...and have been all made to drink of one Spirit." 1 Cor. 12:13 Therefore we are "members of His body, of His flesh, and of His bones." Eph. 5:30 This is His glorious body. He who is the beginning, the firstborn from the dead, is the head of His body, the church. Col. 1:18. He is not head of denominations and sects that call themselves the church, but He is the head of the true church, the true ecclesia that are called out to follow Him, who are baptized into His body and made members of His house, the holy temple of the Lord.

We must forget about denominations and sects when we speak of the body of Christ, for they are not the church but the harlots of the Babylon system. There is but one body even as there is but one Spirit and one God and Father of all. Learn to see beyond the visible things of man's building into the realm of the invisible, for there we will see the house God is building. The works of man shall be thrown down so that there will not be one stone left upon another, but the house of God shall never fall. The mystery of the true church, the body of Christ, is the mystery that has been hid from ages and generations. It is the secret of God's mind from the beginning, but that secret is now being made manifest to His saints, “to whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles (nations); which is Christ in you, the hope of glory.” Col. 1:27. God hath put all things under the feet of Christ (we saints who live in the end of the age are the feet), and gave Him (Christ) to be the head over all things to the church, which is His body, the fullness of Him that filleth all in all. Eph. 1:22, 23. The true church, the true body of the saints, composes the fullness of Christ.

101 We must learn by the Spirit that Christ consists of both head and body. Jesus Christ, the oldest Son is the head. The head is first born. The elect and chosen sons are now coming into His likeness—they are the body. Without them there would be no fullness or completeness of Christ any more than a man would be complete if he were a head without a body or a body without a head. It is this glorious body that is going to fill the universe with the government of God. It is His glorious body that filleth all in all, or, as Weymouth so beautifully puts it, "God . .. has appointed Him universal and supreme Head of the church, which is His body, the completeness of Him who everywhere fills the universe with Himself." Eph. 1:23 (Weymouth).

This is "My Father's house", the house of many mansions, of many, many living stones. This is the house of which David spoke, saying, "I had rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness." Psa. 84:10. To this statement my soul sings a thousand Amens. This is the house of which the good shepherd of Israel sang when he saw its glory at journey's end. "I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever."
The subjects about, which one could write are almost as numerous as the stars of the heavens. They are numberless because the thoughts of God are numberless. They are inexhaustible because the Lord Himself is inexhaustible. But faith must come from what is heard, and what is heard must come from the lips of Christ. Fathomless wealth lies in the wisdom and knowledge of God. His judgments are inscrutable, His methods hidden in mystery, His thoughts beyond human understanding. Neither man nor angel has ever been His counselor. Who has ever given anything to Him for, which he will have to be repaid? Everything comes from Him. All creation lives by Him and every inhabitant of the universe ends in Him. Honor, glory and praise be unto Him through all the generations of the ages of ages. Amen!

As we see the final day approaching and as this present age with all its turmoil and distress rushes toward its conclusion, there is but one thing of truly lasting value. It is that we might be found living in harmony with the Lord as we look unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith, beholding Him continually and by our beholding being changed into His glorious likeness.

The entire dispensation of the grace of God has been an age of strife. Nations have raised their armies and on blood soaked fields of battle have fought each other to the death over principles or to take a spoil. Mighty empires, born of war and bloodshed, have edged their irresistible way across the landscape, engulfing all in their gory paths, yet they in turn have faded and passed from the scene as a lurid dream in a fitful night. Great Babylon rose to the height of her glory and power under the invincible King Nebuchadnezzar, destined to become the golden head of a body of empires which were yet to follow, and when her warfare was accomplished and all nations lay beneath her marching feet, the hand of God wrote doom upon her walls while Belshazzar in his irreverent affront to the Lord of hosts mockingly supped wine in the presence of his lords from the vessels of the God of Israel. Even while they drank, the hand that wrote upon the wall inscribed the fateful words. "Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin. Thou are weighed in the balances and found wanting." While he quaffed his wine and gloried in the safety of his city, all unknown to him the armies of Media-Persia, having turned the great Euphrates from its course, were entering beneath the city's towering walls.

Media-Persia, the silver shoulders of the image Nebuchadnezzar saw, for a time held her marvelous sway, but her two horns were broken by the might of Greece, the ram with the notable horn between his eyes. Greece, in the short time she endured, stamped all beneath her ruthless feet until the horn of her strength was broken and she, having served her purpose, fell, her brazen glory crushed beneath the iron legs of ancient Rome. Thus in dust lies the glory of mighty men. The Pharaohs, the Nebuchadnezzars, the Alexanders, and the Caesars each in turn enjoy their little day of triumph, but the wind, ever blowing where it listeth, passes over them and they are gone, their earthly triumph enduring but a moment and then passing away to be no more, while they that put their trust in the Lord abide as mount Zion which cannot be removed.

I sit on the brink of ocean as I watch
The heaving bosom of the deep,
My seat a throne midst sculptured crags
That through the ages lonely vigil keep.
And on the moving loom of sands below
The shuttles with their dripping fingers play,
And throw the broken waves against the rock
To weave a watery carpet from the spray.
The Sun goes down; and mother nature draws Across the skies the curtains of the night;
Dissolved horizons melt into the dark.
The vast expanse of ocean fades from sight
Save down below where heaving waves inhale
The full of ocean's power while they roar
Defiance at the rock that will not move
And spill their broken whitecaps on the shore.

In God's dear book mankind is like the sea:
A moving, restless mass of weary men.
Accomplishments are fantasies of time.
Empires, like waves, rise but to fall again.
And through the watches of the bygone years,
Midst idle boasting of a man-made calm,
The braggart's words, like nature's thunder voice,
Have only been the heralds of the storm.

Thou ceaseless, moving sea, thy restlessness
Responds to pull of moon in realms afar;
The planets beckon — but you cannot rise;
The pull of earth has kept you where you are.
The seething ocean of mankind has felt
Two spheres contending long for its rebirth,
The upward pull of heaven and its Lord,
The downward pull of sin and self and earth.

What mysteries are buried in thy graves,
Unbroken secrets locked up in thy deeps,
Covering with impenetrable dark
Thy sandy bed where proud Atlantis sleeps.
Where are the mighty kings of yesteryear?
Where are the great, the noble, and the wise?
Where are the ancient empires proud and strong
That dared defy the Master of the skies?

Engulfed beneath the flowing tides of men
Are buried the proud empires of the past.
Though waves of generations roll and break,
Their godless human systems cannot last.
Men build their Babel towers but to find
The seas of retribution wash away
And bury deep in dark oblivion
The godless things they plan and do and say.
The mighty Medes their battle flags unfurled
To find a place of glory in the sun
And proudly trampled 'neath their marching feet
The crumpled might of once great Babylon!
The tidal waves of Greece rolled out of the west
And, as the waters of its rage recede,
It carried back with fate's relentlessness
The smashed and broken empire of the Mede.

'Til by the side of Tiber's winding banks
A sleepy giant girded for the fray,
And Caesars laughed and scoffed at heaven's Christ,
While legions thundered down the Appian way!
And Roman eagles screamed defiantly
And tore to shreds the vaunted might of Greece;
Then turned with blood drenched hands of war Against disciples of the Prince of Peace.

The heavens trembled; and the ocean tide
Of human waves rolled once again in rage
And buried in the shifting sands of time
The proudest, mightiest empire of the age.
So perished Rome, her forum voices stilled;
She met her doom in God's appointed hour.
Oh, Christ, can man distort Thy purposes
And take to self Thy glory and Thy power?

And so throughout the march of ages past
The tide of empire flows — then ebbs away.
The pomp and grandeur of its yesteryear
Are buried in its shifting sands today.
But strong and firm throughout the passing years
I see a Rock that stands out on the shore,
A Rock of ages, cleft for you and me,
A Rock that will endure forevermore!

Oh, Christ, our life, our strength, our Rock divine,
Before Thy might the oceans stand in awe.
No decrease Thine; for this increasing Stone
Was chiseled from the mountain Daniel saw.
The raging, tumbling seas of time may roll
'Til earth's proud empires crumble and decay,
And Thou alone shall triumph, Prince of Peace,
When all the storms of life have rolled away.

Charles S. Price.

We see, do we not, how quickly the world passes and all the lusts thereof erode away with it? Poor, insignificant, little man builds his mighty empires, kingdoms which he in vanity thinks will last while time abides. Yet, even while he looks, he sees them sinking beneath the shifting sands and ebbing with the restless tides away. None of us will build our empires or glory in the rhythmic tread of marching feet. Such glory, were it attainable, is far too short lived and temporal for me. Man that is born of woman is of few days and full of trouble. He cometh forth like a flower and is cut down. He fleeth as a shadow and continueth not. Though affliction cometh not forth of the dust, neither doth trouble spring out of the ground, yet man is born unto trouble as the sparks fly upward. Therefore let us look unto God and unto Him commit our sacred cause. They that seek the Lord shall be delivered from all their fears.

Centuries ago the disconsolate and troubled David wrote, "They looked unto Him, and were lightened: and their faces were not ashamed. This poor man cried, and the Lord heard him, and saved him out of all his troubles." Psa. 34:5-6 What blessings accrue to those faithful saints who through long experience have learned the secret of always looking unto Jesus! Those who continually look unto Him are looking to a realm much higher than their own and they remain untouched, undefiled, and unsullied by the abounding iniquity that is about them on every hand. It is far too easy in such an hour as this to furtively cast our eyes about us only to behold the travail of a world sunken deep in sin and held in the relentless coils of every human system. It was when Peter saw the boisterous waves about him that he began to sink beneath them on that memorable night when Jesus walked the water of stormy Galilee. While Peter looked at the Christ and beheld His glory, the heaving waves were a pavement for his feet; and so will be the stormy waves of this present evil world to us, if we behold not them, but Jesus Christ. The troubles that surround us on every hand will fill our lives with gloomy doubt and sorrow. It is only when we turn our eyes away from them and look unto Him that we are lightened and our faces are unashamed. We soon become aware that it is not easy to forget the sorrows that roll like sea billows about us. It is no light matter to be unmindful of a body racked with pain or the torture of some nagging disease bent on relentlessly tormenting its victim. It is always a matter of human concern when things go wrong and the best made plans of life falter, lose their way, and come to naught, but, could our eyes be opened in that hour, we would see the outstretched hand of Jesus, waiting to lift us up. The moment we discover that earth's vanities are unreal and cannot sustain us, we look unto Him, and, in looking, we are lightened and our faces are unashamed.

There's a story in the Bible,
You have heard it, too, no doubt,
Of the waves and sinking Peter
And the Lord who helped him out.
There are many points to gather
From this incident, I know,
But the one to me that's clearest
I'll endeavor now to show.
Keep your eyes upon Jesus and not on the waves;
Keep your eyes upon Jesus; He so sweetly saves.
Keep your eyes upon Jesus and not on the gale;
Keep your eyes upon Jesus, and you'll never fail.
How bravely Peter started
In his walk of faith that night!
But how quickly he was sinking
When he turned from faith to sight!
While his eyes were fixed on Jesus,
He defied the wind and wave.
It was when they marred his vision
He so quickly cried, "Lord, save!"

Among the famous wax works of Madame Taussaud in London, England, stands a simple touching scene of the British general, Wellington, in deep meditation as he viewed the lifeless body of the once great Napoleon. The dramatic scene was molded from the event as it actually happened. As one looks upon the waxen figures of these two men, who in life had fought each other so fiercely through many a bloody day, Napoleon lying in death and Wellington a sad and thoughtful onlooker, one can imagine the reflections that filled his quiet meditation in that hour. There is no look of hate or resentment on Wellington's face, but rather the saddened appearance of one who has seen the fruitlessness of human struggle. What glory now are all the campaigns of violence and bloodshed? What joy in the silence of death are the victory shouts of yesteryear, the defeat of armies, the acclaim of men, and the caresses of admiring women? Have you never thought as you have gazed upon the ashen face and folded hands of one who lies in death how fruitless and useless are all our wars and contentions? How vain have been our strivings about doctrines and our insistence upon little technicalities, which we in ignorance deemed so very important! How often my own heart has been saddened as I have listened to preachers wasting their time from pulpit or air, contending over some point of difference among brethren, and when they were through with all their supposedly indubitable proofs, they had accomplished nothing at all except to fortify themselves behind the crumbling walls of their own ignorance and misunderstanding. As we gaze upon the lifeless forms of men who have spent their lives in strife and contention, we see the vanity of all our own belligerency. "Avoid foolish questions," said Paul, "and genealogies, and contentions, and strivings about the law; for they are unprofitable and vain. A man that is an heretic after the first and second admonition reject; knowing that he that is such is subverted, and sinneth, being condemned of himself." Titus 3:9 It might do us good to remember that after six thousand years of killing and being killed the roaring lions are almost extinct, but the gentle lambs are counted in billions.

A message is filling my heart today and with it there is an unspeakable longing that the eyes of every saint of God be turned to behold the face of Jesus Christ. My dearly beloved brethren, I speak the truth when I tell you that man is made to see and serve only one master at a time. He cannot serve God and Mammon. He cannot love the world and still love the Lord. He cannot partake of the table of the Lord and the table of devils, and he cannot exalt a man and exalt the Lord Jesus at the same time. That which is of the earth is strictly earthly and that which is above is heavenly and abides in an exalted realm. While our admiring eyes are entranced by the apparent greatness of a gifted man, we receive only what man can offer, and this has no power to transform the soul or lift us up above the strife of earth. But saints who learn to look only to Jesus Christ behold as in a mirror the glory of the Lord, and, looking unto Him, their faces are lightened and they are changed into that same image of Christ.

It is only natural that our hearts should be saddened when friends we have long loved and with whom we have walked in communion for years turn from us, drawing away the shoulder of their strength and denying us the love and spiritual sinew we have learned to appreciate so much, but these things will happen and, in fact, must be that we may learn not to trust in man but in God, who raises man from the dead. Every earthly dependency shall be swept away like sand from beneath our feet, for our heavenly Father is teaching us that we will always be the heirs of disappointment while we put our confidence or our trust in anything less than Himself. Times without number we find ourselves building high hopes of this brother or that sister. We feel assured in ourselves that sonship will be their portion. From outward appearance we conclude they have gained the victory over themselves, the world, the flesh, and the devil, but with what bitter disappointment are we beset when in consternation we discover that these apparent towers of strength are weaklings like all other men, so devoid of roots and moisture that, when the burning sun shone upon them and scorched them, they withered and soon faded away to be seen no more at all. And thus will it always be while we anchor our confidence in the strength or veracity of human beings. I am sure the Lord often allows His people to build high hopes on the strength of someone else, and, when we have foolishly believed them to be unshakable and unsinkable, He lets them fall before our eyes to become a troubled fountain and a corrupt spring that our trust might be in the living God and in Him alone. He that putteth his trust in the Lord shall be as mount Zion, which cannot be removed, but abideth forever.

It is the will of God that man should look only to Him. I do not mean that we should not love and appreciate our brethren, but we must never fix our confidence or hope in man lest we be ashamed. We must not pin our admiration upon men, who have been sustained, but upon God, who sustained them. Neither are we to admire men who have gained the victory, but God, who made them victorious. There exists a great cloud of witnesses who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens, were mocked and scourged and imprisoned, were stoned and sawn asunder, were slain with the sword, and wandered about destitute, afflicted, and tormented, but for all the glory of their wonderful victory we are instructed to build neither upon their personal faith nor upon themselves. All the teaching of scripture instructs us to seek after the God who helped and sustained them and who is faithful to all who put their trust in Him. Who among us can refrain from rejoicing that some have waxed valiant in fight and have gained the victory? But they would not have gained it had they been left to their own resources. A man's sufficiency is of the Lord. It is He who is our strength and our exceeding great reward. Let us not therefore rejoice in Daniel, but in God, who was with him in trouble.

What are we going to do when brethren fail and fall out by the wayside? Well, my brethren, if you have your eyes on them, you, too, may fall out with them. Your first thought may be to turn aside to unravel their difficulties for them, and I do not say it is wrong to do this, but you must not be swayed nor turned from your own steadfastness because you have seen the weakness of someone else. Your trust is not in men; neither are you to depend upon the weakness or strength of any other. Let your eyes look right on and your eyelids straight before you. Turn not to the right hand or to the left. It is quite possible you have misjudged your comrade's place in the body of Christ. It is God alone who knows the ministry of each and every vessel He has chosen and He will assure that that worthy place in Him is fully attained. If we have the right understanding and fix all our hopes in Christ, we will never be unnerved by the sudden fall of another. Sorrow will grip our saddened hearts, but we will not be overwhelmed, neither will we be weakened because of the weakness of man. He who has spiritual understanding has the witness in himself and will be unaffected by the strength or weakness of another. God's people must reach such a high plateau in their walk with God that, should the earth be removed and the mountains carried into the midst of the sea, and should the waves roar and be troubled while men of might and faith fall like ninepins all about them, they themselves will not be troubled nor shall fear grip their hearts, because their faith and confidence is founded not on man, but upon the Father of lights and understanding, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning.

"There is a river, the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God, the holy place of the tabernacles of the most High. God is in the midst of her; she shall not be moved: God shall help her, and that right early." Psa. 46:4,5. It is the Lord of hosts who is always with us. It is the God of Jacob who will help us early. Do we not read with heavy hearts the words of Paul when he wrote, "At my first answer no man stood with me, but all men forsook me:" but are we not made to rejoice by the next sentence, "Notwithstanding the Lord stood with me"? 2 Tim. 4:16. It fills our hearts with sadness to hear the great apostle say, "Know this that all who are in Asia have turned away from me." We wonder how such an apparent tragedy could be, but Paul, like all other saints of God, had to learn not to trust in men, whose breath is in their nostrils, but in the living God that raiseth men from the dead. There may come times in your life when no man will stand with you. Fear them not, for such dread hours come that you might learn that the Lord is standing with you, and, once you have learned that secret, you will be unaffected by either the strength or weakness of other human beings. These are lessons we must learn in life. Towers of strength will continue to collapse all about us until we have learned to keep our eyes steadfast upon the face of Christ. Then and then only can we say, "God is my refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore will we not fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea." Psa. 46:1-2

King David was a prophet and a man after God's own heart. Few men who have walked the journey of life were ever afforded a better opportunity to see and know the weaknesses and frailties of men than he. He knew the dreadful fear and uncertainty of having to flee for his life, and that for many years, from the face of King Saul, a man who should have felt deeply indebted to him. He knew the bitterness and disappointment of the loss of his familiar and intimate friend, Ahithophel, with whom he held the closest communion, walking in company together unto the house of God. "Yea, mine own familiar friend, in whom I trusted, which did eat of my bread, hath lifted up his heel against me." Psa. 41:9 He knew the sadness that only a father can know when he found his own son had deceitfully plotted against him and was leading the nation in rebellion to dethrone him. See 2 Sam. 15:1-6 His bitterness, too, was greatly increased when he was told that his friend, Ahithophel, was with the conspirators. 2 Sam. 15:31 "Lord, be merciful unto me," he sobbed from the deep of his despair. "Heal my soul; for I have sinned against Thee. Mine enemies speak evil of me. When shall he die and his name perish? And if he come to see me, he speaketh vanity: his heart gathereth iniquity to itself; when he goeth abroad he telleth it. All that hate me whisper together against me: against me do they devise my hurt. An evil disease, say they, cleaveth fast unto him: and now that he lieth he shall rise up no more." Psa. 41:4-8

Sorrows like sea billows rolled over this man, bowing his head down as a bulrush in the fierceness of the east wind. Sorrow has a strange way of magnifying itself against us like a terror in the night so that "when it rains, it pours." No sun appears in many days and there seems to be no way out of the ever increasing dilemma of tribulation that has loosened itself upon us. Yet it is in the time of man's affliction that he calls upon the Lord, lifting his heart up to God to behold His righteous face. O that the saints of God would remember, when storms of trial and affliction burst upon them, that back of the darkling clouds the face of God, shining as the sun in his strength, is waiting to smile through upon them, turning their miserable hour of sorrow and heartache into the glad tomorrow of joy and understanding.

I walked a mile with pleasure. She chattered all the way,
But left me none the wiser for all she had to say.
I walked a mile with sorrow, and ne'er a word said she;
But, oh, the things I learned from her when sorrow walked with me!
As we walk the journey of this life, we learn that man is never at his best in the midst of prosperity. In prosperity we say, "I shall never be moved," Psa. 30:6, but it is not in prosperity but when earthly treasures fail and floods like sea billows roll over our souls that we discover what unbelief really exists in our hearts. Undoubtedly it is for this very reason that the Spirit of the Lord allows great tribulation to come upon all the children of men. Many people who read these lines have often had their heads and their hearts bowed down with grief that few could share, but you will discover soon that those who have shared a sorrow like your own are the ones who can reach you a helping hand. "God is our refuge and strength and a very present help in trouble, because in all their affliction He was afflicted, and the angel of His presence saved them." Isa. 63:9 "He knoweth our frame; He remembereth that we are dust." He knoweth our frame because He has shared our frame. Thus the wise apostle was able to reason, "We have not a high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." Heb. 4:15

It is the Lord who is our light and our salvation, and, since this is so, whom shall we fear and of what shall we be afraid? When evil men assail us with their perfidious and demeaning slanders, it is they - not we - who stumble to their inevitable fall. Should an army encamp against us as one did against Elisha, we need have no fear, and should war be waged against us, in this also we may be confident. None of these light afflictions carry the weight of a straw though for a little moment they loom larger than the earth itself. The pertinent point that really concerns us is only this: All things are working together for our eternal good because we have been chosen of God. On the day of trouble He shelters us within His shrine. He sets us safe upon a rock and will lift our heads up in victory high above all our foes. In the time of trial we can hear our own hearts calling, "I will seek Thy face in righteousness. Thy face, O Lord, do I seek. O Thou eternal Lord, do not hide Thy face from me nor turn me away in Thy anger. Do not abandon me nor forsake me, O God my Saviour. Even though my father or my mother or my brethren forsake me, Thou, Lord, wilt take me up and care for me in my time of distress. Teach me the way of the Lord and lead me in a plain path beside still waters. Leave me not to the fury of my foes and let none of them thwart me in my purpose to seek Thy face and behold Thee in Thy righteousness. Let my soul be brave as I wait for the Lord, for I shall see the face of God in the land of the living."

"Judge me, O Lord; for I have walked in mine integrity: I have trusted also in the Lord; therefore I shall not slide (backslide). Examine me, O Lord, and prove me; try my reins and my heart. For Thy loving kindness is before mine eyes: and I have walked in Thy truth. I have not sat with vain persons, neither will I go in with dissemblers. I have hated the congregation of evil doers and will not sit with the wicked. I will wash mine hands in innocency: so will I compass thine altar, O Lord," Psa. 26:1-6

Do we not see from all these things how all men look unto Jesus in time of trouble? Is it not when tribulation spreads its dark wings over us that we seek His face in prayer, searching His word to find the truth and help and comfort that only He Himself can bring? When we speak of looking unto Jesus, we may be beset with that sentimental soap that is inclined to appeal to some sort of romantic feeling within us. We think of glorious experiences and we have a right to do so, but I fear we may discover that, while our soul is in glory with Him, we ourselves may be found sitting in some dungeon, standing in the lion's den, or walking through a fiery furnace. The Marechale (Evangeline Booth) from her gloomy prison in France sang:

"Best beloved of my soul!
I am here alone with Thee,
And my prison is a heaven since Thou sharest it with me."

It matters little what has inspired us to seek the face of the Lord. The end result is what should concern us, for all who seek shall find and all who behold Him, even though it be through a glass darkly, are being changed into that same image, steadfastly progressing from one level of glory to another.

Christian men and women must learn to think of themselves as a totally different sort of people. We are indeed a peculiar people, for, once the blood of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, has cleansed us from all our sin, we have become new creatures in Him. We are not today the same as we were yesterday. When our hearts were washed clean, at that moment our nature was changed. Our ambitions altered their course. We were lifted by Christ to a heavenly realm we had not known heretofore. The things we once loved and our souls lusted after we now begin to hate, and the things we once hated and skillfully avoided we now begin to love and cherish. “The course of bad men leads through darkness dim. They cannot see what makes them stumble; the course of good men, like a ray of dawn, shines on and on to the full light of day!” Prov. 4:18 (Moffatt) So much do we become the inhabitants of a new realm that we discover we are no longer true citizens of this present evil world. We have acquired a new citizenship, given to us by the grace of God. We become citizens of the heavenly realm, both exercising and enjoying the rights of citizens of that higher realm. When men travel to a foreign country, they become aware that they are not citizens of that country. They may be and usually are treated with great courtesy and hospitality and made to feel very much at home; nevertheless, they are not at home and, because they are not citizens, they cannot exercise the rights of citizens. It is when their feet turn homeward and once more tread their native soil that they know they are citizens and are home once more. Many times, when returning from a country not my own, I have felt I would like to climb the flagpole and sing with all my heart, "O Canada! My home my native land! True patriot love in all thy sons command", and this same joy of citizenship I have seen in the hearts of men of other lands and sensed the evident thrill within them as they neared their native shores. And this is how it ought to be.

Breathes there a man with soul so dead
Who never to himself has said,
This is my home, my native land,
Whose heart has ne'er within him burned

As home his footsteps he has turned? So, when we give our hearts to Jesus Christ, we become citizens of a new country, even an heavenly country, and we ought henceforth to think of ourselves as citizens of that realm — not citizens by naturalization, but citizens by a new birth. Christians ought no longer to think of themselves as mere inhabitants of earth, but should steadfastly look for a city that hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God. Far too often, I fear, people regard salvation as a sort of free passport to a heaven that will be theirs when they are reluctantly through with this present world, but this ought not to be. They should think of themselves as no longer belonging to this evil world or any of its human systems, but citizens of an heavenly realm with all its supernal glories.

An ambassador from one country to another, even while abroad, remains subject to the laws of his own country. He cannot be arrested or tried in the country to which he has been sent; neither is he made subject to their laws. He can, of course, be sent home if he does not walk and live as an ambassador ought to do, but he is not subject to the laws of that country in which he is an ambassador. The Lord has told us plainly that we are ambassadors of Christ, beseeching men to be reconciled to God. We are not citizens of earth. We are citizens of the heavenlies. Neither are we to be governed by the laws of earth. We are to be governed by the laws of heaven, for we are citizens of that realm. We realize without a doubt that any man who lives in harmony with the laws of heaven will certainly be in harmony with the laws of earth; nevertheless, he is not under any of them because he is an ambassador from the realm above. I think Jesus was showing us this principle when he sent Peter with the money to pay their taxes, taxes in fact, which He did not owe.

By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place, which he should afterward receive for an inheritance, obeyed, and he went out, not knowing whither he went. By faith he sojourned in the land of promise as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise, for he looked for a city, which had foundations, whose builder and maker is God. See Heb. 11:8-10. These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but, having seen them afar off, they were persuaded of them and embraced them and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth. Verses 13,14. The fact that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth clearly shows that they were not citizens, but foreigners and pilgrims just passing through as strangers in this present world. "For they that say such things declare plainly that they seek a country. And truly, if they had been mindful of that country from whence they came out, they might have had opportunity to have returned. But now they desire a better country, that is, an heavenly: wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God: for He hath prepared for them a city." Heb. 11:14-16.

Abraham, as he wandered across the wilderness of this world seeking the country to which God had called him, confessed that he was not a citizen of this present world, but that he was seeking a country which God had promised him. What a beautiful example this really is of the truth we are trying to show — that we are citizens of God's heavenly realm and not citizens of the realm in which we now dwell! So much was Abraham involved in glory of this hope that dwelt within him that he spent his whole life living in tabernacles, or tents, with the other heirs of the promise. Never once during all his life did he seek to sink his roots down in this present evil world of desire to live as a citizen of it, but he went about as a stranger, continually seeking that glorious heavenly realm that God had promised to him, for he looked for a city which had foundations, whose builder and maker was God. What can that be but the new Jerusalem of Revelation 21?

Those who thus walk in the Spirit, embracing their high and holy calling and knowing that their citizenship is in the heavens, should especially direct their attention to the wonderful truth found in Heb. 11:13 This is a veritable bastion of faith and yet every statement in it appears to set forth some distressing trial, which one unlearned would think to be ruinous to faith. We will therefore enumerate these six beautiful points here set forth as evidences of real and pure faith.

(1) These all died in faith,
(2) Not having received the promises,
(3) But having seen them afar off,
(4) And were persuaded of them,
(5) And embraced them,
(6) And confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims in the earth.

Christians have been badly taught by shallow thinkers that faith must immediately grasp the promise and bring it home right now. But faith seldom works that way. It sees the promise afar off. It becomes persuaded of its truth. It embraces the promise with the embrace of love and confesses its belief with joyful anticipation. Faith is perfectly willing to die without receiving the promise, knowing that God, who cannot lie, is the God of the resurrection, raising the dead to life again and bringing to pass things that man deemed to be impossible. That was the attitude of Abraham when he offered his son Isaac on the altar.

Thus we repeat that Christians should live as citizens, not of this world, but of that which we have seen by promise, though it be yet very far off. We are not of the world, but God has chosen us out of the world, and thus we should live and move and have our being, always beholding the face of the Lord in pure faith and confidence, knowing that God, who cannot lie, will bring to pass His every promise. Our pure attitude of heart and mind means a great deal to our faith, and our steadfast outlook on life will often prove whether or not we are truly seeking a heavenly country. It was this unsullied attitude of heart that made Job cry out, "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away; blessed be the name of the Lord!" Many years later Paul wrote to the Hebrew Christians, saying, "For ye had compassion of me in my bonds, and took joyfully the spoiling of your goods, knowing in yourselves that ye have in heaven a better and an enduring substance. Cast not away therefore your confidence, which hath great recompense of reward." Heb. 10:34-35 If those blessed people who took joyfully the spoiling of theirs goods had been worrying about their citizenship in this present evil world, I am sure there would have been no joy among them when they were robbed of their goods, but, because they knew that above in heaven, where their citizenship really was, they possessed a better substance than they possessed here, they were filled with joy - a joy that was enduring and could never be spoiled or plundered by the spite and greed of evil men who have their portion only in this life.

Throughout this chapter we have been trying to show the infinite blessing of looking unto Jesus, and how can that be better accomplished than by our constant attitude of living in His presence as citizens of His glorious realm? We should not need any special revelation from God to show us that we live continually in His presence. The emphatic Bible teaching of His omnipresence should teach us that, and, because we have that knowledge, our daily care should be to practice the presence of God. By this I mean that we should hourly live in the knowledge that He is ever present. He is with us and dwells within us just as Jesus has said. He is at hand to hear, to lead, to direct our hearts and our thoughts into the patient waiting for Christ. We should believe that when we read His word He is speaking to us. His Spirit is instructing us and bringing illumination to the sacred pages. Our hearts should be assured that when we ask His guidance He will willingly give it to us, providing we have no mind of our own to interfere. We are always in God's presence, for in Him we live and move and have our being. Therefore our lives should manifest that attitude of heart, which eagerly confesses that He is constantly at hand. How better can we look unto Jesus than to live daily in an attitude of response toward His mind and will? How enlightening it is to pray and praise, and what illumination comes as He unfolds the secrets of His truth to our searching spirit! The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him. We are never sufficient of ourselves, but our sufficiency is of God.

It is recorded in the book of Exodus (Chapter 34, verse 29) that, upon Moses’ return to the congregation of Israel after he had gone up into Mount Sinai to receive the covenant of the law, the skin of his face shone with the glory of God and he hung a veil over his face so that the children of Israel would not behold the glory that was slowly fading away. Now when Paul was commenting on this remarkable incident in the life of Moses, he said, "For if the ministration of death, written and engraven in stones, was glorious, so that the children of Israel could not steadfastly behold the face of Moses for the glory of his countenance; which glory was to be done away (or was fading away); how shall not the ministration of the spirit be rather glorious? For if the ministration of condemnation (that is, the law) be glory, much more doth the ministration of righteousness exceed in glory." 2 Cor. 3:7-9 What Paul is actually teaching is this: By the law is the knowledge of sin and sin brings only death, but by Jesus Christ is the knowledge of righteousness, the end of which is life, resurrection, and glorification. Paul is therefore saying that if one look at the law that ministers only death to sinners was so glorious that the countenance of Moses literally shone with the glory of God, then how much more glorious is a look at life itself? We know that the only source of life in all the universe is that one Son of God, Jesus Christ, of whom it is written, "« Him was life, and the life was the light of men."

How I wish God's people could understand the law. The law is holy and just and good. The law is the very nature of God. He who sees it knows full well that it can be kept only in the heart of Jesus Christ and it will also be kept hi you and me because Christ in you and in me is the hope of glory. A man who truly loves God keeps every sentence of the law, not because his carnal nature strives to do so, but because the law has become part and parcel of his new nature by the indwelling Christ. To accomplish this God has changed our nature and transformed us from sinners under death to saints under life. The law of God, written on the tables of the human heart, is the only true freedom that exists, yet its purity brings death to those who live in the realm of death just as life-giving sunlight brings instant death to a protoplasm. Sin cannot live in the light which no man can approach unto; therefore, the law is death to sin but life to all those in whom it dwells. Whether the law brings life or death to us depends entirely upon whether we live in the realm of death and sin or in the realm of life and righteousness.

Our subject here is not looking unto the law, but looking unto Jesus, for even that which was made glorious (that is, the law) had no glory at all by reason of the glory that excelleth. The glory that excelleth is the life in Christ Jesus. Surely, if that which speaks death to sinners is glorious, that which speaks of incorruption, immortality, and eternal life to saints is much more glorious. Can we wonder, then, that we are exhorted to always be looking unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith, who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despised the shame and is set down at the right hand of the majesty on high?

"With this hope in our hearts we are quite frank and open in our ministry. We are not like Moses, who veiled his face to prevent the Israelites from seeing its fading glory. But it was their minds really which were blinded, for even today when the old agreement is read to them there is still a veil over their minds — though the veil has actually been lifted by Christ. Yes, alas, even to this day there is still a veil over their hearts when the writings of Moses are read. Yet if they turned to the Lord the veil would disappear. For the Lord to whom they could turn is the Spirit of the new agreement, and wherever the Spirit of the Lord is, men's souls are free. But all of us who are Christians have no veils on our faces, but reflect like mirrors the glory of the Lord. We are transfigured by the Spirit of the Lord in ever-increasing splendor into His own image." 2 Cor. 3:12-18 (Phillips).

"But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord." 2 Cor. 3:18 (King James Version). Behold the infinite value of looking unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith.
In the life of any man there are special times of great importance - days that are more than just ordinary days, hours that are important above other hours, events that have far-reaching effects and decisions that alter the whole course of a life. These momentous times transpire throughout the lives of all of us, making indelible impressions upon our lives, our personalities, our experiences, and often deciding our eternal goal. However important an event in life could be or however great its effect, it would be hard to find any time more important than these two hours - the one at the beginning of life, which we call birth, and the other at the ending of life which we call death. Without the former there could be no life or experience at all and without the latter, whether by the way of the grave or by crucifixion, there could be no entrance into the magnificent glory that God has prepared for those who love Him.

In like manner also during the life of a dispensation there are many, many glorious hours, many important times and changes, that are ordained of God to have their lasting and momentous effect not only on the age itself but, more important still, upon the course of the lives of all those people who inhabit the age, for it is not with time that God is dealing, but with people. How could we possibly overestimate the transforming power that gripped and shook the entire dispensation of grace when the words, the just shall live by faith, came flooding like a river of light into the heart of Martin Luther, inspiring him with faith and power that was destined to revolutionize the entire Christian world and loose the chains of ecclesiastical tradition that had cursed it so long? And what can we say of Wesley and Whitefield, Huss, Finney, Moody, and a host of others who in their day transformed whole nations, turning them from the path of judgment to the path of peace and from darkness to light?

Nevertheless, of all the glories of the dispensation of grace none shines so brightly as those events that shook not only the earth but the universe as well at that magnificent hour which closed the gates on the dispensation of law and flung wide open the portals of the dispensation of grace. Never has the earth been shaken with such a ministry as that of the only begotten Son of God. Never did mortal eyes behold such power. Never had ears heard such words of wisdom. Never had the oppressed found such judgment or sinners such pardon, for He had been anointed to preach the gospel to the poor, to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives and recovery of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that were bruised, and to preach the acceptable year of the Lord.

Momentous as was His glorious life, greater still were the events that shook the universe when "mid rending rocks and darkening skies" that life was laid down and a fountain was opened in the house of David for sin and uncleanness and the way prepared back to the Eden of God. There on either side of the river and in the midst of the street thereof blooms forever the tree of life with its twelve manner of fruits, and the leaves of the tree are for the healing of all the nations.

However, the death of the Saviour must not be considered alone, for, were it not for the breath-taking wonders of the resurrection morning, our faith and hope in Christ would be in vain and we would yet be in our sins and all who died in Him would have perished. But He rose from the grave and walked again the lowly realms of earth in the sight of His disciples and before many witnesses until at the end of forty days he stood with five hundred beloved brethren who heard His blessing and watched in awe as the glory of God enfolded His being and lifted Him to heaven in their sight. How long they stood gazing into heaven I do not know, but they stood as men transfixed until two shining ones stood by them with this message: "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing into heaven? For this same Jesus that was taken up from you into heaven shall so return in like manner as ye have seen Him go."

Then came the transforming glory of Pentecost as the Holy Ghost with the sound as of a mighty rushing wind fell upon the waiting company filling all the place where they were sitting. Tongues of fire sat upon them all. It was the same glorious fire that Moses had seen in the burning bush, the same that had fallen upon the sacrifice on the wilderness altar, the same that had fallen in judgment in the days of Elijah. It was the fire of God; yea, it was God, for God is a consuming fire. It was not for show or excitement that the fire was manifested, but to transform men of weakness to men of power and change sons of men to sons of God.

The one time shrinking Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, How boldly he is preaching unto the gathered host;

TREASURES OF TRUTH, Volume 21, Pearls of Great Price [George R. Hawtin] ~ BOOK 11
Three thousand souls were added unto the church that day.
And many went rejoicing while journeying on their way.
Five thousand more were added and many priests beside;
When Pentecost was active, disciples multiplied.

These were the momentous events that heralded the coming of the age of grace. The best wine, however, was reserved until the last at the wedding supper in Cana, so we must interpret that incident with the understanding that God has reserved by far the best and greatest thing unto the end of this age. Wonderful and glorious as were those mighty acts of God which brought this age to its birth, I feel sure we may say with reverence and deepest respect that those great events were but the dawn of a greater day, the seed of a greater harvest, and the infancy of an eternal maturity that will fill and govern all things. That beginning was the little stone cut out of the mountain that was to smite the image of this world system, rolling on and on to fill the earth with the knowledge of God and with the judgment and equity of the Lord until nothing shall hurt nor destroy in all Zion's holy mountain; neither shall any say, "Know the Lord", for all shall know Him from the least to the greatest. None shall cry, "Show me the Lord", for the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea. Neither shall any man rob another nor the oppressed cry for vengeance upon the oppressor, for all the earth shall be filled with the justice, equity, judgment, knowledge, and truth of the Lord.

It is true that evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived until men will question whether there is any faith on the earth at all, but the point we so often miss is this: while the world without is sinking deeper and deeper into gross darkness, God is preparing His deliverer in the womb, for thus the word of God declares. "And there appeared a great wonder in heaven; a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars; and she being with child, cried travailing in birth and pained to be delivered. And there appeared another wonder in heaven; and behold, a great red dragon having seven heads and ten horns, and seven crowns upon his heads, and his tail drew the third part of the stars of heaven and didst cast them to the earth; and the dragon stood before the woman which was ready to be delivered for to devour her child as soon as it was born. And she brought forth a man-child who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron, and the child was caught up to God and to His throne; and the woman fled into the wilderness where she hath a place prepared of God that they should feed her there a thousand two hundred and three score days." Rev. 12:1-5

So it is clear to us all that, at the very moment when Satan's night has filled the earth with gross darkness, God's deliverer, the man child, the 144,000 sons, is brought forth. Though the many-headed dragon with his ten horns of power is standing in gleeful anticipation to devour God's mighty deliverer, whom He hath ordained to shepherd the nations throughout the entire kingdom age, yet at the very moment of his birth he is caught up to the realm of the Spirit beyond the power of any harm. I do not believe that this man child was caught away out of the world, for it is he who feeds the woman in the wilderness (verse 6), but he is caught up into the open heavens to walk in a realm unopened and unavailable to men who live in the flesh.

Why should it be deemed a thing impossible that a Son of God should live and move and have his being in a realm foreign and unknown to ordinary men? Did not Jesus while still on earth declare that He was in heaven? He said, "No man hath ascended up to heaven but He that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven." Jno. 3:13 Heaven is not a place far removed. Heaven is a realm all about us, separated and unseen because of the veil of the flesh behind which we continually dwell. But Jesus did not live after the flesh. He lived in such communion with God that He was able to say that, though He had come from heaven, He was also in heaven. If we had not so limited the glory and power of the word of God, we would have known long ago that it was this very truth Paul had in mind when he declared that "our conversation (or citizenship) is in heaven." Phil. 3:20 And it is from heaven that we look for the Lord Jesus, who shall change our vile bodies that we may be fashioned like unto His glorious body. Though the apostle Paul remained on the earth until he was known as Paul the aged, many years before he, too, had been caught up into those waiting heavens where he walked the elysian fields of the glory of God, both hearing and seeing that which dare not be uttered this side of the veil of flesh.

When John was exiled on the lonely Isle of Patmos, he suddenly found himself standing in a realm that far exceeded the glory he had seen on the mount of transfiguration. There they had been sore afraid. Matt. 17:6-7 But here on Patmos such a heavenly realm was opened to him that he fell as dead. Rev. 1:17 Surely one would think that no greater glory could be given to a man than the effulgent glory he beheld at that wonderful moment. Yet, though thus caught away into such unspeakable rearms, he again heard a voice calling him up yet higher saying, "Come up hither and I will show you things which must be hereafter. Immediately I was in the Spirit; and behold, a throne was set in heaven and One sat on the throne, and He that sat on the throne was to look upon like a jasper and a sardine stone: and there was a rainbow round about throne in sight like unto an emerald." Rev. 4:1-3

Are we to gather from this that John had left the earth? Or had he entered that realm which, though unseen, is all about us? That which is seen with the mortal eye is only temporal, but that which is unseen is eternal. No! John had not left the earth. He had been caught up to God's throne. Rev. 4:2-3 So it was that John in the Spirit saw that the man child was also caught up to God and His throne, and just as John remained to bring his revelation to the world, so also the manchild, the sons of God, the 144,000, though caught up to God's throne, will minister to the woman in the wilderness and shepherd the nations with a rod of iron for the entire dispensation of the kingdom.

As we draw nearer to the end of the age and as the darkness of the evening covers the earth as it did in the days of Noah, there is an ever increasing conviction within that those elect of God who are to attain the blessedness of true sonship will experience more and more the blessedness of breaking through to the heavenly realms until that glad day finally comes when they are caught up to meet the Lord in the air and, being thus forever with the Lord, they will dwell no more on human planes but will walk with Christ in the glory of the resurrection. Human minds have not been made to understand or even imagine the glory that God is preparing for the age that lies just ahead of us, but that purpose will find its expression in the manifestation of the sons of God.

In the Lord Jesus Christ we find God's ideal of sonship. He was a Son in whom God was well pleased. But I am sure that I speak the truth when I say that it is God's purpose and God's will that all who are coming to sonship will be like Him. Just like Him! Exactly like Him! For God will dwell in them and walk with them, and they shall be His people and God Himself shall be their God. When we shall see Him, we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is.

Jesus Christ is the first born of many brethren. Rom. 8:29. Weymouth translates it, "Those whom He has foreknown He has also predestined to share the likeness of His Son that He might be the eldest in a vast family of brothers." The world is yet to be ruled by sons of God, a vast family of 144,000 sons, each one having God's name in his forehead, each possessing the mind of Christ and governing the world according to the will of God. It is impossible for any man to imagine the impact on the world of the life of that one lonely, rejected Son of God who came two thousand years ago - not to do His own will, but the will of Him who sent Him. How then are we to imagine the glory of a millennial reign in which such a vast company of sons in the very image and power of Christ shall govern the earth in righteousness and equity for a thousand years?

It is not the body of the bride that is being brought to perfection today. It is the body of the bridegroom, the sons of God, for Adam was first formed, then Eve. But that vast family of sons has one Son as its head, and that one Son is the firstborn of them all, the Lord Jesus Christ.

The seal of the living God in the forehead undoubtedly means that those who have been thus sealed have been made partakers of the mind of Christ. Those who receive the seal of the beast in their foreheads have undoubtedly partaken of the mind of the beast, but those whom God has sealed have partaken of the mind of God. No man can do anything in the name of Christ until he has partaken of the mind of Christ. Then and then alone dare he say, "I do this in the name of the Lord Jesus." People today, especially those whom we call ministers and preachers, are far too flippant about using the name of Jesus Christ. They pray long prayers strictly out of their own minds and end with the time worn phrase, "We ask it all in the name of Jesus Christ". But they did not have the mind of Christ. They prayed only because it was part of the ceremony of a public service. Perhaps they had even prayed for something and asked amiss, that they might consume it on their own lusts. They demand healing "in the name of Jesus". They try to perform miracles in the name of Jesus, and for the most part they have no more of the mind of Christ about the matter in question than did the seven sons of Sceva, who stood over the demon-possessed man and cried, "We command you to come out of him in the name of Jesus whom Paul preacheth." Acts 19:14
Now here is something that possibly you have never heard before. While meditating on such things one day, the words of the third commandment, "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain", were made real to me in a way I had not hitherto seen. It seems clear to me that the use of God's name in profanity amounts to little more or less than a crude, cheap, thoughtless form of blasphemy used strictly by a world of unbelievers. But to take God's name in vain is a common sin among believers who, having no true knowledge of the mind of Christ nor of having discovered the will of God, thoughtlessly and carelessly pretend to act in His name and use His authority when indeed they have no authority from Him. The mere fact that millions of prayers do go unanswered is proof enough of this forgery of His name, for Christ Himself has promised that whatsoever we should ask in His name, believing, we should receive. Thus it was that the sons of Sceva called over the demon the name of Jesus and the demon, knowing they were using God's name in vain, said, "Paul I know and Jesus I know, but who are you?" And he leaped on them and they fled away wounded and naked.

To sign the name of another man on a check without the power of attorney is forgery, and to use the name of Jesus without having the mind of Christ is also forgery, and the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh His name in vain.

We should never attempt to ask anything in His name until we have taken time to empty our souls of self and selfishness and we know beyond a doubt that He has put His mind and will in our minds. Then and then alone may we ask in His name. If Christians would only take time to listen to God's voice, they would find that ninety-nine percent of their prayers and the vast majority of their good works are filled with hidden desire for some selfish aggrandizement. Why do we see all this excitement about physical healing today? Does it spring from genuine compassion for the sick or are such things as fame, money, pomp, crowds, and luxury involved? Do our frantic efforts to gain converts arise from a passion for men's souls or is the desire to gain proselytes the underlying principle? We will have to learn to speak truth to ourselves in the inner parts before we are able to have the mind of Christ about anything, and without the mind of Christ we cannot use the name of Christ except in vain.

We are now living in one of the most important hours the world has ever known. It is an hour of special importance to all who are filled with the longing to become sons of God, because all who are to share His glory and all who will reign with Him in His kingdom will be people who have one head and one only, and that one head is the Lord Jesus Christ. We are at the hour when all other heads and all other leaders must be taken away that He may be head of every man. All other lords must lose their authority that He may be Lord. All allegiances to other authority must be broken that He may become the supreme head of His body. There and there alone is unity, and it will not be found in any other place nor by any other method.

It is very, very easy for a reader to respond with an amen to such a statement as we have just made, but it is not enough just to respond with an amen! We are going to have to go through the suffering of being beheaded of all earthly heads. Let us not in any wise deceive ourselves, for there will be very few who will read these lines who do not have some other head besides Jesus Christ.

Paul, writing to the Corinthians, was explaining to them that there is one God the Father and one Lord Jesus Christ, but he wisely interpolated the sentence in brackets, "(there be gods many and lords many)". 1 Cor. 8:5. Well he knew that every man in the world has some kind of a god whether wood or stone or gold, and well he knew also that the vast majority of Christians have some lord that they place ahead of Christ. We will all be quick to deny this assertion, but because of the seriousness of the hour in which we live we would be much wiser to earnestly consider it with fasting and prayer until the Spirit of God points up our idols to us.

There are far too many lords and gods in the Christian world for any man to even attempt to name them all, but let us earnestly consider this question. Why is it that the Christian world has departed so far from the simplicity of a man's personal walk with Christ? Is it no longer necessary to know Him and love Him and know His voice, to possess His mind, and to walk in His will? Why are there practically no people in the world who, like Enoch, "walked with God", or like Abraham, who "walked before God and was perfect", or like David, who dwelt in "the secret place of the Most High"? Is it not because our lives have been crowded full with the abominable rush and bustle of church activity until day after day and evening after evening we are expected to be at some meeting where we go through the ritual of a church ceremony that all too often is devoid of freshness, sincerity, or revelation and has become a meaningless form? Such things do not help our relationship to Christ. They are stumbling stones and a hindering influence. Christians have become so rushed and crowded and herded into the idea of throwing their weight behind church programs, missionary programs, radio programs, revival campaigns, tract campaigns, prayer chains, and the support of a dozen different men who claim to be God's man of the hour that they have no time to listen to the voice of the good Shepherd, and so can never discern between His voice and the many other voices in the world.

I think God must have been teaching Elijah this very lesson when he was in a state of unrest and frustration before God because the work of the Lord seemed to be falling to pieces and Baal was prospering. But God showed him that there was something more important than noise and excitement, and that was to hear and know the voice of God. "And he said, I have been very jealous for the Lord God of hosts, for the children of Israel have forsaken Thy covenant, thrown down Thine altars, and slain Thy prophets with the sword; and I, even I only, am left, and they seek my life to take it away. And He said, Go forth, and stand upon the mount before the Lord, and, behold, the Lord passed by and a great and strong wind rent the mountains and break in pieces the rocks before the Lord; but the Lord was not in the wind; and after the wind an earthquake, but the Lord was not in the fire; and after the fire, a still small voice. And it was so, when Elijah heard it, that he wrapped his face in his mantle and went out and stood in the entering in of the cave, and behold, there came a voice unto him and said, What doest thou here, Elijah?..." 1 Kings 19:10-13 If we are going to learn to know the gentle voice of Jesus, we are going to have to forget about the excitement of the earthquake, the winds, and the things that are calculated to attract and hold the crowds, for God is seldom in such things. We are going to have to quit worrying about the trend of the age, the rise of communism, and what the prophets of Baal are doing. We are going to have to learn to get alone with God in some cave of His choosing and listen to what He has to say, hear what He plans to do, and understand His program for the end of the age. We must quit worrying about what men are going to do and discover what God is going to do. Man can never do more than propose, but God has the power to dispose of any human plan or force and throw it into discard the moment He is through with it.

The reason Christians are so feverishly rushing about is that they know nothing of God's purpose. Preachers claim to believe the prophecies that concern the end of the age, yet show their unbelief by frantically trying to reverse the very thing God has said would be. They do not know the mind of Christ. They have not knelt in Gethsemane and yielded their wills to Him that He might reveal His will to them. It is by no means easy to yield our will to God, for our will is very strong. It is not easy to yield our mind to God, for our mind is full of its own personal ambitions and desires that have been mistaken for God's will. We will never be free from them until we follow Christ to the Garden of Gethsemane.

I want to testify to a great truth in this way. When the day comes that you enter the Garden of Gethsemane, your experience will be identical with that of Christ. You are going to find that you will have to leave all your disciples and all your friends and all your relations at the gate of the garden. You are going to find that, while you are sweating as it were great drops of blood in your agony to become one with His will, all your friends, all your disciples, and all your relations will be heavy with sleep. You will try to rouse them up to the seriousness of the hour, but they will only stretch and yawn and fall asleep again. You are going to have to go through it alone, and were it not for the angels of God who are sent to strengthen you, you would die as far as man is concerned, and many would be glad to see it so. Furthermore, when the agony of coming into God's will is over, you will be betrayed. You will be hated. You will be sold. You will be stripped. And you will undoubtedly be crucified.

I am not writing these things for the sake of sermonizing. I write them as a witness to my own personal experience, for I could lead you to the very spot where I knelt in my Gethsemane. I could name the disciples who slept and yawned at the gate and who in spite of my urgings only fell asleep again. I could repeat the words of hate that followed my surrender and I could lead you to the very room where I was betrayed and stripped and sent away empty and alone. Your experience may not be identical with mine, but it will be like that of your Lord. There is no other path to the will and mind of Christ. Terrible as may be the hours of your Gethsemane, you need not fear it too much, for it is there that earthly heads are removed and He becomes Head and Lord indeed.
Here is a story of a Gethsemane from the book of Genesis. "And Jacob was left alone and there wrestled a man with him until the breaking of the day. And when he saw that he prevailed not against him, he touched the hollow of his thigh; and the hollow of Jacob's thigh was out of joint as he wrestled with him. And he (the man) said, Let me go, for the day breaketh. And he (Jacob) said, I will not let thee go except thou bless me. And he (the man) said, What is thy name? And he said, Jacob, (i.e. the crook, the supplanter, the cheat). And he said, Thy name shall be no more Jacob but Israel, for as a prince thou hast power with God and with men and hast prevailed ... And Jacob called the place Peniel, for I have seen God face to face and my life is preserved, and he passed over Peniel and the sun rose upon him and Jacob halted upon his thigh." Gen. 32-24-31

It costs us something to change from Jacob, the supplanter, to Israel, the prince, but it is the beginning of a whole new world and a whole new life of resurrection. It brings us into the will of God, the mind of Christ, and it makes Christ our head, and not man.

Can we not see then from all these things that every one of us has had gods many and lords many? Can we not see that for years our own course has been dictated by man, programs, denominations, sects, activities, and because this has been the case, Christ has never been our head? Why is it that so many people have backslidden and gone out into the world the moment they have been separated from all this activity? It is because this has been their head rather than Christ. On the other hand why is it that some, when separated from all these things, are found to grow stronger and more mature in God? It is because they have made Christ their Lord and He is never separate from them, neither does He leave nor forsake them. They can say with David, "God is my refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble; therefore will we not fear though the earth be removed and the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea; though the waters thereof roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof. There is a river the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God. God is in the midst of her; she shall not be moved; God shall help her and that right early." Psa. 46:1-5

I am saying all these things because I know that the human heart is deceitful and desperately wicked. Those who are guided by it will say Amen! Amen! to the most profound truths and dynamic statements, but, after hearing them, continue on with their rush and program and their "gods many and lords many" with confident assurance that the truth has no reference to them. It all reminds me of the man who boasted to his Quaker friend that he never wasted a moment of his time. "Why," be bragged, "I read while I am eating. I study during my lunch hour. I study while I ride the street car, and I even study while I am shaving." His friend eyed him without expression for a moment, then dryly asked, "When does thee do thy thinking?" You see, the man studied so much that he knew nothing but the thoughts and minds of other people and had no communion with his own soul. This is the fearful pit into which Christians have fallen. We have become so bogged down with the plans and purposes of men and organizations that these things govern us completely until Christ is neither our head nor our Lord except in name only.

A short time ago a brother related this little story to me and it added much to my understanding. He said that during a time of great distress, after there had been much upheaval and division in the church, he had been greatly troubled in spirit, not knowing which way to turn. In his distress he went to the Lord and asked, "How am I to know what the body of Christ really is when there is so much division?" The Spirit asked him as only the Spirit can, "Do you know who the Head of the body is?" To this he replied, "Yes, Jesus Christ is the Head of the body." The Spirit spoke again, saying, "Well, everything that is joined to the Head is the body." From then on my friend had no more questions about the body of Christ, for the answer he received was the only true answer. The body of Christ does not consist of this group or that group, this sect or that denomination. It has nothing to do with holding to this idea or that idea or any such thing. The body of Christ consists of that company who have made Christ their one and only Head. These have His mind. They have passed through His Gethsemane and walk in His will. None other need lay claim to sonship than these, for sons of God are they who are led by the Spirit of God. They do not rush about the country doing what seems good and right to them. They move only as the Spirit moves them.

There was a rugged man two thousand years ago who came in the spirit and power of Elijah to prepare the way of the Lord and to make straight a highway for our God. No man then alive in Israel had ever heard of such a ministry as he possessed, for no prophet had appeared in Israel for four hundred years. His message, like his life, was very simple and easily understood. He had no elaborate advertising, no choirs, orchestras, stately buildings, or advance agents. He had no soft attire or luxury hotels, but he had come by the will of God and in God's time. He did not seek the crowds. The crowds sought him. Towns, villages, and cities were emptied of their inhabitants, who went out into the wilderness to hear his message and be baptized of him.

We can think of many great instances in the life of John the Baptist that shine like suns on the pages of holy writ. He had proclaimed to the vast throngs, "Repent for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." He had seen soldiers, priests, and common people come by thousands to his baptism. He had beheld the Spirit descending from heaven upon the Son of God and had cried with the voice of a trumpet, "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world." He it was who held the Saviour in his strong young arms and immersed Him in the waters of the Jordan River. He had seen the Spirit descend like a dove upon Him and had heard the voice of God thunder from the sky, "This is My beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." Ah! What excellent glory this man had seen of whom Jesus had said, "Of man born of woman there hath not arisen a greater than John the Baptist."

There is, however, another instance in the life of this man, which to me seems the greatest of them all. Things had not been going so well for John since Jesus had appeared on the scene, and I think it was with a little resentment that his disciples approached him one day and objected. "He to whom thou bearest witness beyond Jordan, the same baptizeth and all men come to Him." John 3:26. But John answered and said, "A man can receive nothing except it be given him from heaven. Ye yourselves bear me record that I said I am not the Christ, but that I am sent before Him. He that hath the bride is the bridegroom; but the friend of the bridegroom, which standeth and heareth him rejoiceth greatly because of the bridegroom's voice. This my joy, therefore, is fulfilled. He must increase, but I must decrease." How could man ever speak more significant words than these? Herein lies the true secret of making Jesus Christ the Lord and Head of your life. He was not filled with animosity because another was more honored than himself, but he rejoiced in that one great principle of the kingdom, that Christ is the Lord and Head of all.

Now does it not seem significant that John decreased until one day, while kings and lords made merry with wine and dancing, an executioner was sent by the king to behead him? The truth I see so clearly is this: If Christ is going to increase and become our Lord and head, then all other heads must be taken away, even our own. There shall no longer be gods many and lords many, but there shall be one God, even the Father, and His Son, Jesus Christ. When John died, they asked for his head; they did not ask for his body. But when Jesus died, they asked for His body and did not ask for His head, that He might be the head and we might be the body. "And I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus and for the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark in their foreheads, and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years." Rev. 20:4 "I must decease, but He must increase" is the first law of sonship.

There are very few men in the Christian world today who look with pleasantness upon a decreasing ministry. No, indeed, it is not so. The whole idea seems to be to gain more prominence, more followers, more radio stations, bigger buildings, and, of course, more money. All this is foisted upon a gullible people as the will and mind of God, but it is usually the work of an organizer who has himself become the head of his own little kingdom and longs to increase more and more.

I was not called of God to spend my time exposing the evils of our day and it always goes against my nature to expose what is wrong. It is much more blessed and useful to spend time teaching positive truth. There is, however, no question but that we are in the end of the age. There is no doubt that the mystery of iniquity is at work. The church system is held in disrespect by the world of unbelievers and rightly so, because for the most part she does not represent either Christ or His apostles. The faithful city has become a harlot, and she is full of bastard sons. The way of the Lord she does not know. Her ministers speak lies in the name of the Lord. Their methods are the methods of the world and not the methods of Christ. They teach the traditions of men for the commandments of the Lord. She has become the habitation of devils and the hold of foul spirits. She is full of the merchandise of gold and silver and precious stones. She is decked in fine linen with all manner of ornaments. She is head over heels in debt with her costly buildings. The kings of the earth commit fornication with her and the nations of the earth have made themselves drunk with the wine of her fornication. We are about to see the grand alliance of the mother of harlots with her numerous daughters. Romanism and Protestantism will soon be one. I do not believe it will stop at that, for a harlot will flirt with all she can deceive.
Other religious systems such as Buddhism, Mohammedanism, and Confucianism will be wooed into the camp until all nations have drunk the wine of her fornication and the harlot system will sit astride the whole earth. Rev. 18:1-24. There is only one thing to do with a system like that. None can reform her. She is doomed to destruction. So we must come out of her that we be not partaker of her sins.

I do not believe that the glorious church without spot or wrinkle can remain part of the harlot system. That glorious church is an invisible mystery, composed of people who are joined to the Lord in the Spirit. It is a thus saith the Lord that he which is joined to an harlot is one flesh, but he that is joined to the Lord is one spirit. 1 Cor. 6:17-18 Henceforth we know no man after the flesh. Yea, if we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now henceforth know we Him no more.

Of late I have felt the tremendous pressure of the Spirit upon me. My heart is filled with the ever, growing belief that we are very near to some outstanding event in the plan of God. Many, many people have written expressing the same conviction, and others have written to tell of experiences in the Spirit that must foreshadow the great manifestation of the sons of God. This is a time of preparation. This is a time when we should all seek the grace of God to anoint our eyes with eye salve that we might see things as they really are. Surely this must be the hour spoken of by Ezekiel when he saw the man with the inkhorn sent forth to put the mark of God on all those who sighed and cried because of the abominations in the midst, for the abominations are great, indeed, and the sighing because of them is increasing by the hour.

Let us consider further the importance of making Christ our Head. Would it be possible for any man to reign in the kingdom if he did not possess the mind of Christ? And could he possess the mind of Christ if he had not made Christ his only Lord and Head? If only one man could reign in the kingdom still possessing his carnal mind, it would be no time at all until the kingdom itself would be corrupted and become identical to all the kingdoms of the past. Those worthy to reign in the kingdom of God will not reign to carry out their own wills. They will reign to carry out the will of God in every minute detail. Jesus Christ was the first manifested Son of God. He was a perfect example of what all the reigning sons will be. Jesus never did His own will. He did only "the will of Him who sent Him". The works that I do are not mine but the Father's," He said. "I do only those things that please the Father." That is the attitude of the first manifested Son of God and that will be the attitude of all that vast family of sons who reign with Him, having God's name in their foreheads. These will shepherd the nations with an iron rod. These are filled with the same mind that was in Christ and, because of this unity with Him, they will bring the whole world into a reign of a thousand years of peace, justice, righteousness, and equity such as could never be imagined today. The lame man shall leap as an hart, the tongue of the dumb shall sing, the blind eyes shall be opened, and the deaf ears shall be unstoppen. The wilderness shall be a fruitful field, and springs of water will bless the desert. The lion shall lie down with the kid and the wolf with the lamb. The cow and the bear shall feed together, the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and nothing shall hurt nor destroy in all God's holy mountain, for the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea.

I am firmly convinced that all who take part in that blessed reign of the kingdom will have to be prepared for it in this present age. We cannot live after the traditions of a Babylonish church and expect to be ready to reign with Christ. The business of partaking of the mind of Christ must be accomplished here and now. Let us not be mistaken or deceived in a matter of such importance as this. It is the duty of every man who has this hope in him to purify himself even as He is pure. I firmly believe we should avail ourselves of every possible means of grace to cast off systems and traditions of men, to free ourselves from religious entanglements that forever hold our minds captive to their dreary ritual of activity, and which deny us the right and the time to partake of the mind of Christ.

One of the greatest men to walk the earth in recent years was the late Dr. Chas. S. Price. Few men have been so wonderfully used of God in the salvation of souls and the healing of the sick. Whole cities were shaken to the foundation by the impact of his revival meetings. The largest buildings were packed to overflowing. He was in demand everywhere all the time. Then God began to speak to him in a different way, calling him aside unto Himself, filling his heart with revelations of the age to come. As he followed God into new realms, his friends urged him to keep on with the big meetings and chided him for drawing aside. But as one brother chided him for preaching less than usual, he quietly said, "God told me that I had to get off that merry-go-round." How precious it is to find great men who are willing to lay down the work of a life-time that they might follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth.

It must be positively stated that the first and most important step in attaining sonship is that Jesus Christ shall become Head and Lord of the individual life. When it comes to sonship, God is not dealing with crowds or nations or groups. He is dealing with individuals. God will sift through multitudes of people to find one son and, when He has found him, He will take him unto Himself and through suffering teach him obedience, patience, wisdom, understanding, sound judgment, and righteous government. Wisdom is the principle thing; therefore get wisdom, and with all thy wisdom get understanding.

Consider well how God in centuries past separated the sons He was preparing to do His will. To Abraham He said, "Come out from thy country and from thy kindred and from thy people unto a land that I shall show thee." See also how Joseph was separated from all his people to suffer rejection and misunderstanding until the appointed time. Moses, too, was separated from Pharaoh's house and all his brethren for forty years. John the Baptist was in the wilderness until the day of his showing unto Israel and Paul was sent to the desert of Arabia. What a lonely man King David must have been when all Israel was dutifully offering their sacrifices and offerings on the temple altar. David's experience in God made all those things old and distasteful and ready to vanish away. As he watched the sacrifices and offerings being continually made, his heart broke within him and he cried in the loneliness of his spirit, "Thou desirest not sacrifice, else would I give it; Thou delightest not in burnt offerings. The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit; a broken and a contrite heart Thou wilt not despise." Psa. 51:16-17 Many people today feel the same about the dreary round of church activity as David felt about the ritual and ceremony of Israel's worship. They have lost all heart for it. They find no satisfaction in it. Their hearts are reaching far beyond forms and ceremonies to the realm of the mind and will of God, to the realm where Jesus Christ is Head and they can follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth. It is not those who faithfully follow ritual who are sons of God, but as many as are led by the Spirit of God they are the sons of God. Rom. 8:14

Sons are selfless beings. They have made Christ their Head. Their own will and their own mind they have crucified and no longer exist. They are so one in the will of God and in the joy of fulfilling it that they could be happy anywhere on earth or in any circumstance whatever. They can say with Paul, "I have learned in whatsoever state I am to be content," or with David, "If I make my bed in hell, behold Thou art there." There is a joy in fulfilling the will of God that can never be found in fulfilling the human will. All who love the human will become disgustingly selfish. They know nothing of sympathy, kindness, or generosity, but they have become a kind of demi-god, enslaving themselves also as they build up their little paper kingdom that will collapse and disappear with themselves. But the man who does God's will has made himself part of the permanent and will, like God, abide forever and ever.

The utter selflessness of the first begotten Son of God is seen in Mark 10:45 "The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto but to minister and give His life a ransom for many." The marvelous grace and selfless love of Christ is seen in every phrase of that wonderful verse. The Son of Man came... not to be ministered unto... but to minister... and to give His life a ransom for many. This is indeed the manifestation of a life in which God was both Lord and Head.

By way of contrast with this lovely selfless life of consecration to the will of the Father let us notice Christ's own description of the ministry of His day, who had inherited Moses' seat of authority. Matt. 23:2-10 "They bind heavy burdens and grievous to be borne and lay them upon men's shoulders; but they themselves will not move them with one of their fingers. All their works they do for to be seen of men; they make broad their phylacteries and enlarge the borders of their garments, and love the uppermost rooms at feasts and the chief seats in the synagogues, and greetings in the markets, and to be called of men, Rabbi, Rabbi, (Reverend, doctor, cardinal, most reverend, very reverend, God's man) but be ye not called Rabbi, for one is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren. And call no man Father upon the earth: for one is your Father, which is in heaven. Neither be ye called masters; for one is your Master, even Christ."

All manner of teaching and instruction will never persuade man to make Christ his Lord and Head, With instruction there must be a spirit of revelation upon the hearts of all who hear; otherwise darkness remains and blindness hides the truth from our eyes. Men hear and do not understand. They see and do not perceive, for their hearts are waxed gross and their ears are dull and their eyes have been closed. To try to understand spiritual things with the natural mind only brings greater darkness. For this reason Paul prayed that God would give the people the spirit of wisdom and understanding in the knowledge of Him. How greatly we all need to pray this prayer!

While looking to God for a suitable conclusion to this chapter, there came a deep impression to my heart that there is one thing above all others that hinders men and women from making Christ their Head and thus partaking of the mind of Christ. That one thing of which I speak is our reluctance to stop the thing we are doing, lay it down and wait for direction from Jesus Christ, our Head. Is this too big a task for you? Then you may as well forget about sonship, the mind of Christ, or the Headship of Christ. The people who lived under the dispensation of the law were not able to attain the blessings of the age of grace until they were completely willing to lay down every ritual and ceremony of law and discard it all as a thing waxed old and ready to vanish away. Sonship and the blessings that go with sonship belong to the kingdom age - the age that is now dawning. We cannot attain to that relationship with Christ by trying to revive, regenerate, and rejuvenate the things that belong to a dispensation that is passing away. We are going to have to lay them all down and wait for His direction.

Christ cannot become our Head as long as something or somebody is taking His place. There was a time in our spiritual infancy when it was God's will for us to be under tutors and governors and in bondage to the elements of the age. Gal 4:1-4 But now that the fullness of time is come, God is sending forth the Spirit of His Son into our hearts that we might receive the adoption of sons, or full sonship. Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son.

When the age of grace dawned, it was well nigh impossible to shake the Jews loose from the rituals of the Old Testament. They loved those rituals and without them they seemed to be sailing uncharted seas. So also it is now. Those seeking sonship are hard put to it to leave off the old ways. Without the traditions and the tutors and the governors of the past two thousand years they fear their little boat will sink beneath the angry waves, but fear not! Christ the Lord, the Pilot and the Head, is walking on the angry waters. Invite Him into the boat and immediately you will be at the other shore. "Then they willingly received Him into the ship; and immediately the ship was at the land whither they went." John 6:16-21 "These are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth. These were redeemed from among men, being the firstfruits unto God and the Lamb " Rev 14:4

THE INNER MAN

There must come a time in the life of every chosen son of God when the inner man is enlightened by the Spirit of revelation that he may see what is the hope of his calling and what the riches of the glory of God's inheritance in His saints. Woe unto us, for the thickening fogs of human understanding and the multiplied traditions of the elders have so clouded our minds that we have spent our lives chasing for some will-o'-the-wisp that has no part in reality and no place in God's eternal plan.

Long, long ago Solomon wrote, "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death." Prov. 14:12 Though the world at large follows this way, it is not confined to the unbelieving alone. The overwhelming majority of believing Christians who possess the assurance of sins forgiven devotedly follow the way that seemeth right. The way that seemeth right is the way of natural understanding. It is the way of human learning, the way of tradition. We may be technically right in our interpretation of a Bible text, yet be walking the way that seemeth right, for that which touches the outer understanding only is of no value to the inner man.

It was on the sixth creative day that God proclaimed His eternal edict, "Let us make man in Our image and after Our likeness." Before we meditate in greater fullness upon these words, let us first settle in our hearts that the mighty fiat that went forth from God's lips that day has neither changed nor been rescinded in the least degree. It is God's purpose now, as it was then, to make man in His own image and after His likeness. The fall of man, bemoaned by preachers of all ages as an enormous tragedy with irretrievable losses, has never been bemoaned by God as such, but confessed by Him to be one of the steps by which the revelation of God would be known in such completeness that it could never under any circumstances be destroyed and by which man should come into the image of God. "What if God, willing to show His wrath, and to make His power known, endured with much long-suffering the vessels of wrath fitted to destruction: and that He might make known the riches of His glory on the vessels of mercy, which He had afore prepared unto glory." Rom. 9:22-23 Oh, what depth of majesty of understanding is displayed in the words of Paul: "The creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him who hath subjected the same in hope. Because the creature itself shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God." Rom. 8:20-21 How contrary are these words of inspiration to the way that seemeth right! Man has never been able to see with his natural mind how God through crushing brings forth fragrance, how breaking brings forth a spirit that is whole, how resurrection bursts forth from the tomb of death, how sonship is born of the pangs of travail, or how God's awesome curse produces His mightiest blessing. But on and on goes foolish man with his natural understanding, preaching the tragedy of the fall and even the tragedy of the cross, knowing not that the almighty God, the all-wise Lord, with neither let nor hindrance is unfolding an eternal plan by which all mankind shall come into His image.

Shatter, Oh God, the dismal mists of our human understanding that we may see beyond our pain to the triumph at the end of Thy purpose! Grant, if it be but dimly, that we may hear as John heard every creature in heaven and in earth and under the earth and in the sea saying, "Blessing and honor and glory to Him that sitteth on the throne and unto the Lamb for endless ages." Rev. 5:13 As the storms of life beat mightily upon our souls to crush them, and crippling infirmities beset our bodies to break them, let us be melted in the fire, for we shall shine in Thine image and Thy glory at last!

When God made man in the beginning. He made him above all else a spiritual being. It is true that He gave man a body and it is true that He made him a living soul, but important above all else is that man was a spirit. His spirit was in God's likeness, in God's order, in God's image, and in God's class. It is right here in the very beginning that all human knowledge, tradition, and reason must end that the revelation of the Almighty might give us understanding lest we perish in our ignorance. We will never, never be able to answer the question, "What is man", until we abase all human understanding, cast aside preconceived ideas, discard tradition, and abolish all forms of human philosophy.

Man is a very presumptuous creature who attempts not only to build towers that would reach to heaven but to invade the stratosphere, forgetting that God has made him to dwell on the earth and has appointed the bounds of his habitation. With his fleshly mind he attempts to understand God, who is spirit and cannot be understood nor comprehended by anything or any creature that belongs to a purely natural realm. Man cannot understand himself. He has, indeed, made some strides in his understanding of the physical body because the body is physical, but to understand the mind is impossible because the mind has a spiritual element as well as a natural element. But the human spirit is beyond natural understanding because the spirit is in God's order and God's class and God's likeness.

I do not think we can speak too strongly of this truth, for, unless we begin to see by the Spirit's revelation what we are, we will be forever bound in the prison house of despair. The bars of the flesh will hold our spirit in forever and the floods of the carnal mind will encompass us round about even as the body of the great fish encompassed Jonah. The depths closed round about him and the weeds were wrapped about his head. The earth with her bars is about us forever. While we are in this condition, all God's waves of truth and billows of revelation pass over our heads. We are cast out of His sight and look not toward His holy temple. We observe lying vanities and forsake our own mercies. As Jonah cried to God out of the corruption of the fish's belly, even so now, Oh God, our spirits cry to Thee that they may be delivered from the stinking hell of this belly of flesh that day by day strives to digest and assimilate our beings to make us food for corruption!

When God made man in the beginning, He made him above all else a spirit being. It is true that the man was given a body from the dust of the ground, but this in itself was not of greatest importance. The great truth was that God breathed into the man the spirit of life and an entirely new creation came forth in God's image, the spirit being predominant in every respect. Man was created a companion of deity. His mind (or soul) was ruled completely by his human spirit which was in God's perfect image. Thus the man had a spiritual mind. His spiritual mind ruled His body, keeping his body in a state of incorruption, transformed by the spiritual mind that was in him. Compare Rom. 12:2. Because man's spirit was in God's image, he was in God's class of being. He was not only a companion of God but a son of God. The wisdom that filled his mind was not wisdom gained as ours, by the five senses of a corrupt physical body, but it was the inherent wisdom that flowed freely from his spirit, which was created in God's order and God's likeness and which had come forth from God, the Father of spirits. This first man was spirit ruled; I mean, he was ruled by his own spirit within him, which was in God's image, God's order, God's class, and God's likeness. It could say in truth, "I and my Father are one."

It is impossible for me to explain the glory of such a thing as this because we are staggered and blinded by the magnificent light of a realm that long ago passed away. Nevertheless, the moment we understand that man in the beginning was created above all else a spirit and that that spirit was in God's likeness and was God-like, then we can understand for the first time in our lives the true meaning of the saying, "Walk in the Spirit and you will not fulfill the lusts of the body (flesh)." Gal. 5:16

It was not necessary for Adam to learn anything, for his spirit, being in the likeness of God, inherently possessed the wisdom and understanding of God. "Whence hath this man this wisdom" could have been asked of him as it was asked of Jesus, Matt. 13:54, and he (Adam), possessing the wisdom and likeness of God, ruled with authority over nature itself, all things being subject to him and under his control. Winds and waves were obedient to him as they were to Jesus, for he knew the secrets of the winds, their goings forth and their habitations. His body depended not upon the trees of the garden for subsistence, for the spirit within was the life thereof, and thus in union with the Father of spirits he had meat to eat that we know not of. When the animals were brought to him, he named them all - not with tags and titles as we do, but with names that described their innermost nature, ability, and purpose. He named them even as God Himself would have named them, for his spirit was the very breath of God. Gen 2:7

Somehow I feel it is wrong to say that man has a spirit. There is a sense in which this statement is right, but the real truth is that man is a spirit. Instead of thinking of man as a creature that is a body and has a spirit, let us rather see him as a spirit that has a body, at least until such time as the wisdom of God teaches us the unity of spirit, soul, and body which is the true man. There is, alas, at the present time no unity between the spirit and the body, for the flesh (body) lusts and wars against the spirit and the spirit wars against the flesh and these are contrary the one to the other so that we cannot do the things we would. Gal. 5:17

The body is the outward man. It is seen with the outer eye, for the eyes of our head have the ability to see only hard and tangible things. All our lives, unfortunately, we have been consumed with and concerned for the outer man of flesh and bones. All the industry of the world operates for the sake and benefit of this flimsy animal of flesh that for a moment flourishes as the grass and as swiftly passes away. The great burden of this message does not involve the things that concern the outward man, which is the body of flesh, but the things, which concern the inner man which is the spirit. Please take notice that when referring to the human spirit we are using small letters to differentiate between the spirit of man and the Spirit of God. Time and again, when the Bible speaks of the spirit, reference is being made to the re-newed human spirit, re-generated and re-created and re-born in God's image. Failure to recognize this has landed us in such a fog that we seldom find a man who knows how to walk in the Spirit. Once it is made clear that to walk after the flesh is to walk after the dictates and passions of the corrupt physical body, then it will be easily seen that to walk after the Spirit is to walk in the wisdom and understanding, the counsel and holiness of the regenerated human spirit that is recreated in God's wonderful likeness and image. Naturally such teaching as this comes as a shock to our minds and I question not that some will listen no further to what I have to say, but those who heed will begin to find the order and government of their lives coming from a new throne where God's image is supreme and no longer from the corruption of fallen flesh now motivated by the mind of Satan.

The human spirit is called the hidden man of the heart. That is why Peter said, "Whose adorning let it not be the outward adorning of plaiting the hair and wearing of gold and putting on of apparel; (This is the adorning of the outer man, that corrupt enemy of God, the enemy of the re-born human spirit, which is the true man.) but let it be the hidden man of the heart." 1 Pet. 3:3-4. The hidden man is the re-born human spirit. Because he is hidden, we never see him. We never search him out. We pay no attention to him. We drown him in corruption and earthly activity and hearken not to his voice of wisdom and understanding. He is the hidden man and we, corrupt fools that we are, let him remain hidden while we live after the outward man and the outward world.

The apostle Paul, like Peter and all other spiritual men, understood the difference between the outward man and the hidden man. But Paul describes this hidden man as the inner man, saying, "For I delight in the law of God after the inward man." Rom. 7:22 The inward or inner man is the human spirit, which is the true man, though at present he is the hidden man of the heart. "For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ... that He would grant you, according to the riches of His glory, to be strengthened with might by His Spirit in the inner man, that Christ may dwell in your hearts (your spirits) by faith, that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the length and breadth and depth and height and to know the love of Christ that passes knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fullness of God." Eph. 3:14-20 What a fathomless prayer!

Adam in his unfallen state was spirit, soul (mind), and body just as we are, but because his spirit was predominant, his mind was filled with the wonderful wisdom of his spirit, which spirit was in the beauty of God's image and likeness. Thus he had a spiritual mind. In this blessed state he was scarcely, if at all, dependent upon the five senses of the physical body, for in union with God he lived and moved and had his being. It was not until after he fell that his spirit lost contact with God's Spirit and, as a branch cut off from the vine withers away, so his spirit cut off from God's Spirit lay dead in trespasses and sins. Cf. Eph. 2:1

God has made the human spirit to be totally dependent for life upon the Holy Spirit. It is like the branch of a tree which, though possessing abundant life while it is joined to the tree, withers and dies when it is severed from the stem. In sublime parabolic language our Lord Jesus said, "I am the true vine, and My Father is the husbandman. Every branch in Me that beareth not fruit He taketh away: and every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit. Now are ye clean through the word, which I have spoken unto you. Abide in Me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine, no more can ye, except ye abide in Me. I am the vine, ye are the branches: He that abideth in Me and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit: for without Me ye can do nothing. If a man abide not in Me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered; and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned." John 15:1-6

It may take six thousand years to learn the lesson of abiding, but in the end every man from the garden of Eden to the gates of Paradise will know that in Him is life and the life is the light of men. They will know that the source of life abides in the vine and not in the branch, and that, separate from God, even the human spirit lies dead in trespasses and sins. As a storage battery, cut off from the generator, loses its life and lies dead, so the human spirit, cut off from its source of life in God, lies dead in trespasses and sins. But as a battery, reconnected to the source of life, can be recharged, so the spirit, receiving Christ, is grafted again into the true vine and is regenerated and re-born and resurrected by the life of God.

The time has certainly come for some true revelation and spiritual understanding concerning the human spirit. It is time for deep spiritual meditation together with some satisfying looks into God's word. Until the human spirit is brought into the proper relationship with God, it cannot be set free from the overpowering corruption of the carnal mind, and, if it cannot be set free from the bondage of the carnal mind, then the war between the flesh and the spirit will continue to rage all the rest of our lives. Paul did not say in vain, "The flesh lusteth (warreth) against the spirit, and the spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary the one to the other; so that ye cannot do the things that ye would." Gal 5:17

The scripture clearly shows that man is a tripartite being. Man is a trinity. He is a spirit, he is a soul, and he is a body. His spirit is after God's likeness. His body is temporal after the likeness of the earth, and his soul possesses both physical and spiritual elements. It is like the spirit on one hand and like the body on the other. Any man with an ounce of understanding knows that there is more to man's mind than the gray matter we call the brain. The brain, which is physical, is the seat of the mind, which is spiritual. When you understand this fact, you will clearly see that the mind of man can be influenced and governed either by the spirit, which is God's image, or by the corruptible body of flesh with its endless temporal demands. The man whose mind is governed by his regenerated spirit, re-born and re-created in God's image, has a spiritual mind. But the man, whether saved or unsaved, whose mind is governed by the Jive senses of his physical body has a fleshly or carnal mind, for carnal means fleshly.
I shall not enter into that battlefield of futile controversy in which earthly minds match wits in a vain endeavor to identify the tree of life and the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, but I do know that within every man these two trees exist, for "if you live after the flesh, ye shall die, but if you through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live". Rom. 8:13 So to live after the flesh is to partake of death and to live after the Spirit is to partake of life. Well did Jesus say, "The power of life and death are in the tongue", for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaks; therefore, if the words pouring forth are of the Spirit, there is a river of living water, but if from the carnal mind, there is a river of death.

When God brought forth in Adam an entirely new kind of creation, he was predominately spirit. The spirit was breathed into him. That spirit came forth from God and was God. It was in God's image and likeness in wisdom, righteousness, holiness, understanding, counsel, and might. As was God's Spirit, so also was Adam's spirit, for in the image of God He created him. Just as Jesus Christ was said to be the brightness of God's glory and the express image of His person, so also was Adam. But with great reverence and eternal respect I must point out that our matchless Lord came to the earth in the form of sinful flesh, in the physical form of fallen man. He who was in the form of God and thought it not robbery to be equal with God made Himself of no reputation, took upon Himself the form of a servant and was made in the likeness of men, and, being found in fashion as a man, He humbled Himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Phil. 2:5-8. Thus in the wisdom of God was this wonderful Christ, the last Adam, manifested to the world on a lower level than God did manifest the first Adam. That first Adam did not come as sinful flesh. His spirit, created in God's image, ruled his mind and thus he had a spiritual mind. And his body, being under the control of his spiritual mind, knew the blessed and wonderful lightness of incorruption. Paul spoke of the transforming power of the spiritual mind when he said, "Be not conformed to the world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your minds, that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God." Rom. 12:1-3 As our bodies will one day be transformed by our spiritual minds, so Adam's body knew the blessedness of that transfigured state because of a mind created new in God's image.

I freely confess that I cannot identify with certainty the tree of life nor the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, but wisdom is a tree of life to them that lay hold upon her, Prov. 3:18, and wisdom teaches us that it is "the Spirit that maketh alive and the flesh profiteth nothing." It teaches us that if we live after the flesh, we die and, if we live after the Spirit, we live. It teaches us that from the regenerated spirit gushes forth the life-giving stream of love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faithfulness, meekness, and temperance, but from the flesh flows the sullen river of death polluted with adultery, fornication, uncleanness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, and heresies. The Spirit is life unto life, the flesh is death unto death.

We will not know how light and celestial Adam was until that blessed day when we experience our own transformation. What a breathtaking view was given to Peter and James and John as on the Mount of Transfiguration they beheld the Son of God in His kingdom as His face shone like the sun and His garment was white as the light! The first Adam came in this unfallen state, but left the world a sinner in corruption, but Jesus, the last Adam, came in the form of sinful flesh and ascended to heaven transfigured.

There stands before us still today the tree of life in the midst of the garden of which God says, "It is the Spirit that giveth life ", and there stands also the tree of death of which God says, "If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die." As long as Adam lived after the dictates of his spirit, he partook of the tree of life, but the moment he yielded his mind to the demands of his flesh, in that same moment he died. "In the day you eat thereof, thou shalt surely die", God warned him, and in this our day we have the same warning: "If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die, but, if ye through the Spirit do put to death the deeds of the body, ye shall live."

I strongly feel that the things of which we now speak are particularly given as a revelation to those who have followed the Lord out of the confusion of the harlot systems of religion. None but they can hear them, for that ancient and wicked system is both born and sustained of the carnal mind. Therefore, let us give heed to these things, for from henceforth the temple of our minds will have a new landlord, even the reborn spirit, born again, renewed, and regenerated after the exact image and likeness of God's Holy Spirit. The old landlord, the flesh, the corrupt human flesh, is to be evicted from his place of rulership. No longer will he restrain the spirit in the prison house of the carnal mind, bringing forth death to the entire man, but the mind, being ruled by the regenerated and renewed spirit in God's image, will begin to transform our mortal flesh. It is here that we begin to understand the words of Paul, "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service, and be not conformed to the world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your minds... Rom. 12:1 When the flesh rules, we have a carnal mind, bringing forth the fruit of death. When the re-born spirit rules, we have a spiritual mind in God's image, bringing forth fruit unto life.

The Lord would not have told us the story of the garden of Eden and of the fall of man had He not wanted us to know the secret of life and death. Therefore, let us say again with all emphasis that man in the beginning was made in God's image. The spirit that was breathed into his nostrils was the very breath of life - nothing less than a spirit given by God, part of God, and in the image of God, in the class of God, after the order of God, making him a son of God. The mind that was in Adam was ruled by the spirit that God gave him and thus his spiritual mind both thought and lived in the realm of God, and his mind in turn kept his body in a state of blessed incorruption, dependent upon nothing but the life, giving spirit within. Well he knew the truth, "If the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ shall also quicken your mortal body by His Spirit that dwelleth in you". Rom. 8:11 It is a woeful scientific fact that today the average man is capable of using only five percent of his brain power. Thus is illustrated the terrible depths of degeneration and death that followed when the spirit was dethroned and the flesh began to rule his mind.

Many secrets has God hidden from the children of men. He reveals only those things that are necessary and never more than is necessary. Thus are the glorious mysteries hidden from the prying eyes of the wise men of this world that "seeing, they may see and not perceive, and hearing, they may hear and not understand." God reveals His secrets by His Spirit, for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God. He maketh wise the simple and bringeth to nothing the understanding of the prudent, for not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty and not many noble are called, but God has chosen the weak things to confound the mighty and the things which are not to bring to naught the things which are, that no flesh should glory in His presence. While learned scribes and Pharisees, parading in their robes of office, fain would stone Mary for the Babe that grew in her virgin womb, Elizabeth rises to call her blessed while her own unborn child leaps for joy. Spirit calleth to spirit and deep calleth to deep, even as in water face answereth to face.

We shall not know for a little while all the things that transpired in Eden as this blessed first man, possessed with a spirit in God's image, rejoiced before God with his spiritual mind while his body, light and incorruptible, was a vehicle of his spirit, depending not on earthly things. I do not fully know why God decreed in His eternal plan that this superb creature of His own creation should become subject to vanity and futility that he might know by experience the desperate sorrow, travail, hopelessness and death of a life that is lived after the demands of corruptible flesh and not after the spirit. Do not enquire of me how such a man could ever fall, for this secret God has hidden from the children of men. But of this I am sure: When at last the secret is made known, we will see a creation in God's image - not in the innocency of babyhood, but in the innocence of perfection and of knowledge so great that sin can never more affect any part of the universe.

One verse of scripture may often pass over a great period of time and a great series of events. Genesis 1:1,2 is a prime example of this very thing. "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth. And the earth was without form and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep." Without doubt there is an infinite period of time and innumerable events between the first verse and the second. "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth", but He did not create it void in the beginning, for Isaiah says, "He created it not a waste (not void)." Isa. 45:18 (R.V.) But somewhere before Adam, the earth became a void waste and darkness fell upon the face of the deep. We mention this to show that God in wisdom withheld many details, for the world itself could not contain the things that should be written, but we are given only the things we need to know and the rest is left to revelation when the time and need arises.

Thus when God made Adam He placed him in the garden and, before ever Eve was brought forth, God commanded the man, saying, "Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat: but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Gen. 2:17 We will know in some future day what dread thing occurred that caused a deep sleep to come upon Adam, a sleep from which he never fully awoke, for in sleep all things are shut out from us. We see not nor know; neither do we understand. The hungry man sleeps and dreams he is eating. The thirsty man wades in pools of water, but wakes and his thirst remains. How dreadful is that sleep in which man still slumbers! In it all eternal realities are shut out from us and we know only those hard and lifeless things of a temporal realm. In our sleep of death the things that are real have been shut out from us, for it is the eternal things of the spirit that are real. We walk as men in a dream, touching, tasting, hearing, seeing and smelling only temporal things that pass away - things that are not real, things that are ever changing and never remain the same. That which is ever changing is not real, but is like unto the grass of the field which today is and tomorrow has vanished away.

There is a hidden reason why God said of the man whom He made, "It is not good that man should be alone," Gen. 2:18, for He had already said that God saw everything that He had made and, behold, it was very good. Gen. 1:31 Be that as it may, a deep sleep came upon this man who was male and female in one perfect Son of God. He was like unto those who shall at last be called "in Christ", for in Him (in sonship) there is neither male nor female. We are wrong when we think and teach that 'in Christ' male and female will be disregarded. The truth is that 'in Christ' male and female will be rejoined and reunited. Marriage is only a symbolic rejoining of male and female. It is only a symbolic rejoining of Christ and the church or of the sons of God company and the bride company. And this in turn is the mystic herald of the rejoining of God to all His creation, for He shall dwell with them and walk with them and God shall be their God and they shall be His people.

When man put forth his hand to partake of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, at that very moment his spirit went dead. At that very moment his spirit was cast from the throne room of his mind, a new ruler took the throne, and his mind began to be ruled by the five senses of his physical body. Thus his mind, being dominated by the demands of his body, became a carnal mind. The spirit alone can maintain contact with God. The flesh has no more ability to contact God than a lump of clay or a piece of stone. Neither can the fleshly mind contact God, for the fleshly or carnal mind is interested only in the things that concern the physical body - what it can taste and smell, feel, hear and see. While Adam's mind was spiritual, he cared only for God and his spirit gave life to his body, but when his mind became carnal and the spirit was dethroned, he cared only for the things of his body. He was body minded, flesh minded, and carnal minded. So tremendous is this fact that one can clearly see that every industry in the world of whatsoever sort it is operates and exists either directly or indirectly for the sake of the five senses of man's body of flesh. Take these five senses of the flesh away and every industry in the world would stand still in one day. Not that the five senses of the flesh are sin, but, being of the flesh and belonging only to the body, there is no life in them and all who live in bondage to them surely die.

Now the spiritual mind is taught of the spirit, but the carnal mind is taught, not of the spirit, but by the five senses of the body. Everything that a natural man learns during his life on earth is taught him by the five senses of his body. There is no exception to the rule, and when man goes beyond what his senses teach him, he enters the realm of speculation as Darwin did. A baby may be born into the world with a perfectly good and normal brain, but if the child is born deaf and blind, lacking even the sense of touch, we call him an imbecile, for, though his brain is sound, he cannot be taught anything because all human knowledge comes through the five senses of the body. Have you ever watched a baby as he toddles about investigating everything within sight and reach? Everything touchable he touches and by this he learns the meaning of hard and soft, hot and cold, pleasant and unpleasant. He tastes everything he can taste, for by this he learns sweet and bitter, good and bad. His mind is educated by the things he sees, by the things he hears, and the things he smells. All his knowledge through life must come through these five channels, but the things of God knoweth no man, for they are spiritually discerned.

Do not pass lightly over the statements of Gen. 3:6 for here the serpent is making his appeal to the senses of the body. He is calling Eve's attention away from the things of the spirit to the things of the flesh. "When the woman saw that the tree was good for food and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took the fruit thereof and did eat." Here we have the appeal to the eyes, the appeal to the stomach, and the first mention of gaining knowledge through the physical senses, for the wisdom they were to gain was not spiritual wisdom, but flesh and body wisdom, which is not wisdom but foolishness and a mad dream.
No sooner had they made this discovery after the flesh than their eyes were opened into a new and sordid realm of death. To their amazement and dismay they found that the transfiguring glory of the spirit that clothed them as a house from heaven was now departed from them, and they, who but moments before were clothed upon with heavenly glory such as our Lord displayed, whose face did shine as the sun, whose garments were white as light, whose earthy was swallowed up by that which is heavenly, now found themselves but corruptible flesh, capable of desiring only corruptible things. As he who is dressed in filthy garments is ashamed in the presence of a king, much more were these ashamed who, now naked and undressed of God's glory, saw their eternal shame. Then did their fleshly minds seek to clothe themselves with garments of their own making, knowing not that the righteousnesses that come from the flesh are but filthy rags and all who stand before God clothed therein are ashamed. Then heard they "the voice of the Lord God walking in the garden in the cool of the day: and Adam and his wife hid themselves from the presence of the Lord God among the trees of the garden. And the Lord God called unto Adam, and said unto him, Where art thou? And he said, I heard Thy voice in the garden, and I was afraid, because I was naked; and I hid myself." Gen. 3:8-10

Let us not pass over this truth until the Spirit of God reveals to our hearts the awful tragedy of a human spirit dead in trespasses and sins, a spirit dethroned, a spirit asleep. But I think we need not hesitate to use the word dead, for that is the word so often used by the inspired writers of the Bible. Did not Paul say, "You hath He quickened (made alive) who were dead in trespasses and sins!" Eph. 2:1

One of the most damning tragedies among God's people is their utter blindness in understanding what the carnal mind really is. In spite of all the millions of sermons preached about carnality and the carnal mind practically all miss the point, for the carnal mind is blind to its own state and only the revelation of the Holy Spirit can awaken us to its condition. A sleeping man knows not that he sleeps and a dead man knows not that he is dead. "She that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth." 1 Tim. 5:6. It is like two men who hear the gospel. Both hear that they are sinners, One with his fleshly mind accepts the fact and talks about it. He knows he is a sinner and even jokes about it. You have often seen men like that. But the other man hears that he is a sinner and by the revelation of the Spirit the awful truth is fastened upon him, so he, falling down upon his knees, confesses to God, seeking the cleansing of the blood of Christ and the renewing of the spirit within him. The carnal mind is nothing more nor less than the mind that is ruled by the demands of the physical body, those demands being made through the five senses. Every man at work today, whether he knows it or not, is working to earn money to buy things to see, hear, taste, touch and smell, and every industry in the world caters to these five demands which arise from the physical body. You may have the audacity to say to me as some have already done, "Who in the world does not know this?" But that is just the point. We know this with the carnal mind and joke about it like the sinner, but the curse of a life governed by the body has never been revealed to your spirit, for then you would know that "if you live after the flesh you will die, but if you through the spirit do put to death the deeds of the body, you will live." It is not only the unbelieving world that lives after the flesh. Saved people do, too, because the manner of the operation of the carnal mind has never been revealed to them, and thus the spirit, even though now regenerated, does not sit upon the throne of their minds, but lies in bondage to the demands of the body.

The revelation of what the flesh is, is the greatest revelation of my life. The moment I saw that the flesh is nothing more or less than the corruptible human body of flesh, whether it weighs a hundred pounds or three hundred, then I saw immediately that the fleshly or carnal mind is the mind that is dominated by the five senses of the body. Thus all the desires of the carnal mind are for the body, catering to all its passions and fulfilling all its demands. From this mind come evil thoughts such as adultery, fornication, uncleanness, gluttony, drunkenness. Cheating and fraud originate there and every form of selfishness and greed. Men hoard millions of dollars in banks and holes in the ground lest some day their bodies should be in want and their physical man deprived of the luxuries of life. The carnal mind is very religious, for it dreads the thought of any form of suffering or loss in another world. The carnal mind wants to go to heaven, for there it hopes to loll in ease forever beyond the reach of any distress.

This carnal mind, this fleshly mind, is an enemy of God. It is not subject to the laws of God, neither indeed can be, so that they that are in the flesh (that have fleshly minds) cannot please God. Rom. 8:8 Or "those who are in a sensual state cannot please God." Rom. 8:8 (Emphatic Diaglott). The moment this truth is made real to you by the Spirit of God, causing you to see it as it really is, at that same moment you begin to lose interest in all earthly things, for all these things that are physical and belong to the realm of the body are passing away. "All flesh is as grass, which today is and tomorrow is not. For the sun is no sooner risen with a burning heat than the grass withers and dies." As grass withers and dies before the sun, so does the flesh die before the fire of the Spirit. From henceforth let those who see these things live, not to love the passing things of this age, but to be associated with them only where necessity demands. Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world: for all that is in the world is the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life. The pride of life is the satisfaction felt by the carnal mind in its possession of all these things.

Furthermore, those who see what the fleshly mind is not only lose interest in it until it becomes totally obnoxious to them, but at that same moment a new interest arises. The moment they turn their eyes away from the earth, they begin to look at the sky, and the moment they look away from the carnal, they begin to behold the spirit. Right here all their desires begin to center around eternal things. As they begin to hate the passing and the unreal, they embrace and love the permanent and the real. Then do their hearts know and doubt not this truth: "That which is seen is temporal, and that which is not seen is eternal." They have found a priceless treasure hid in a field of corruption. They have sold all lesser pearls and obtained the pearl of great price.

Man with a carnal mind grovels along through his life on earth little better than a beast who cares only to preserve his body. He may, indeed, belong to that fraudulent thing that men are now calling the great society, in which it is hoped poverty will be done away and every man will have abundance, where the carnal mind grows bigger and stronger and the spirit more dormant and debased. But be it known that all who will inherit the kingdom must be born again.

Now that we have seen that the spirit lies dead in trespasses and sins and that there can be no spiritual mind while we are in this condition, we can understand those mysterious words of Jesus, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." John 3:3 We cannot see it, we cannot understand it, and we cannot enter it, for the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; neither can he know them, for they are spiritually discerned. Therefore, ere man, dead in sins, can come into God's presence to behold the things of God, there must be a re-birth of the human spirit. It must be re-born, re-generated, and re-newed after the image of Him who created it in the beginning. Just as God breathed upon Adam in the beginning and he became a living soul born from above, so His Spirit must breathe on us now that our spirit, dead in trespasses and sins, may be re-born to partake anew of the image of our Creator.

Though we cannot speak in detail here, know this: from the Spirit of God comes forth the re-born human spirit, from the re-born spirit comes forth the re-born mind, and from the re-born mind comes forth the re-born body. For this very reason Paul, speaking of the body, said, "Be ye transformed by the renewing of the mind that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God." Rom. 12:1-2 The good will of God is done when the spirit is re-born. The acceptable will of God is when the mind is re-born and becomes a spiritual mind. But the perfect will of God is when the body is transformed by the renewed mind. Thus the spirit, the soul (mind), and body are re-born in God's image.

The new birth is strictly a New Testament experience. It did not belong to the age of the law. In all ages there are a few elect people who attain to the experience of a coming age even as David did, who refused to offer sacrifice and offering, but saw the truth of the re-newed and re-born spirit, saying, "Thou desirest not sacrifice; else would I give it"; and again, "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me." Cf. Psa. 51:10, 16, 17 Then there was Enoch, who in the dispensation of conscience knew the glory of translation to heaven. But certain experiences belong to certain dispensations and people as a whole must wait for them. Many people are shocked when I tell them that even the twelve disciples of Jesus were not born again or even truly converted until after the resurrection. They could not be born of the Spirit because the Spirit was not yet given, for Jesus was not yet glorified. John 7:39 We remember well the conversation Jesus had with Peter when He said, "Simon, Simon, behold, Satan hath desired to have you, that he might sift you as wheat: But I have prayed for thee that they faith fail not: and when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren." Luke 22:31-32 This should not shock our understanding, for, as we said above, the born again experience is a New Testament experience and the age of the law was not finished until Calvary nor the new dispensation of grace fully begun until Pentecost.

No man can be born again in spirit until the Holy Spirit of God from heaven touches the human spirit and renews its life. This is exactly what happened after the resurrection of Jesus. On the resurrection morning
Jesus said to Mary, "Touch me not, for I am not yet ascended to My Father; but go to My brethren and say unto them, I ascend unto My Father and your Father, and to My God and your God." John 20:17 That very morning He ascended to heaven as the High Priest into the Holy of Holies with the blood of atonement, for He had said, "It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you, but if I depart, I will send Him unto you." John 16:7 The very same day at evening our Lord had returned from the Holy of Holies hi heaven. Standing hi the midst of the disciples where they were assembled, the doors being shut for fear of the Jews, He said, "Peace be unto you. And when He had so said, He showed unto them His hand and His side. Then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord. Then said Jesus to them again, Peace be unto you: as My Father hath sent Me, even so send I you. And when He had said this, He breathed on them, and saith unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost." John 20:19-22 It was right here that they experienced the new birth. This was not a promise of Pentecost. This was not a baptism of the Holy Ghost. This was the Holy Spirit of life from God, touching their spirits, re-generating and re-newing that which hitherto lay dead in trespasses and sins. The sixth dispensational day had begun for them and God was saying once again, "Let Us make man in Our image." They were born again. Their spirits were re-born by the touch of God's Spirit. Life from above had come and their souls sang the joyful song, "You hath He quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins."

Long centuries before, on the day that the Almighty Lord made Adam, He breathed into his nostrils the breath of life and the man was born from above, born of God. Now centuries later our blessed Lord breathed again on men alive in body but dead in spirit. The breath he breathed was not mere wind. It was the breath of God, the life of God, and the Spirit of God. It came from God and it was God. It made their spirits alive, re-created in God's image, re-born of incorruptible seed by the word of God that liveth and abideth forever.

But some will ask, "Why then are folk thus born from above not perfect right away?" Ah, yes! But we have underestimated the fearful enemy with which we contend. I do not speak of the devil as many will at once suppose. Our greatest enemy is not the devil, but the corruptible flesh. Do not imagine for a moment that this enemy who so long has ruled the mind of man, holding it hi complete subjection, will now step down from his throne to willingly yield the mind to the newborn spirit. If we imagine this can be, we will be deceived and die in our corruption, for the moment our spirit is re-born from above, war is declared - a war that unregenerate people know nothing about. The spirit of man, so long deposed and held by the flesh in the prison house of death, now seeks possession of the throne from which he was deposed, even the throne of the mind; but the re-born spirit finds the power of the flesh firmly entrenched in the mind, and the mind, desiring on the one hand to do the will of God, is held hopelessly captive to the will of the flesh on the other. Thus war is declared and the battle is joined, the flesh warring against the beautiful desires of the newly born spirit and the newly born spirit warring against the corrupt desires of the flesh.

I must tell you an awful fact here. Once the war is on between the flesh and the spirit for possession of the mind, a double mind exists, desiring on the one hand the fullness of a life in the Spirit, but torn on the other by the demands of the flesh. How true were Paul's words when, speaking of this war to the death, he said, "The flesh lusteth (wars) against the Spirit and the Spirit against the flesh; and these are contrary the one to the other; so that ye cannot do the things that ye would." Gal. 5:17 It is true both ways. The spirit cannot have its way because of the flesh, and the flesh cannot have its way because of the spirit. The mind is the battleground and has become like a servant with two masters, each with contrary minds, so that there is no peace.

It is this warlike turmoil that Paul is describing in the seventh chapter of Romans. "For that which I do I allow not: for what I would, that I do not; but what I hate, that do I." Verse 15 "For I delight in the law of God after the inward man: But I see another law in my members (in my flesh) warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members," i.e., the body of corruptible flesh. Then he cries in anguish, "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" (Or from the power of this dead corruptible body that rules my mind). We should be eternally thankful that Paul's thought and revelation does not end where the scholars ended the chapter, for it is in the next verses, Rom. 8, that the secret strategy for victory over the flesh is given. The law of sin and death is not the law of Moses nor any other law that God has given, but rather the power of the flesh, which makes its own laws, ruling the mind and defying every law of God. The law of the Spirit of life (Rom. 8:2) is the law of the re-born spirit, which delights in every law and every commandment and all the will of God.
We cannot be too emphatic now in saying that this re-born spirit within us is re-created in God's image and after God's likeness. It is once again in communion and accord with God. Furthermore, it is indwelt by the Holy Spirit and Christ the hope of glory inhabits it. Our spirit is re-born of incorruptible seed by the Word of God, Jesus Christ, who liveth and abideth forever. As was Adam's spirit in the beginning, ours has now become. Refuse to budge from that position, for that which was dead in trespasses and sins is now thoroughly alive and ready to do battle and take possession of the mind. Failure to recognize this cardinal fact has been the cause of millions of Christians remaining carnal and in bondage to the flesh all their lives. They have never been overcomers and are not prepared to sit with Him in His throne. Our spirit is re-born. We delight to do the will of God after the inner man, and this is the point from which we start, for the law of the Spirit of life will fully make us free from the law of sin and death which is in our members. Reference to the Spirit is made nineteen times in Romans chapter 8. Sometimes the reference is to the Holy Spirit and sometimes to the re-born spirit. But we are not to make too sharp a distinction here, for the Greek word for spirit here is pneuma, meaning wind and making no definite distinction between the Spirit of God and the re-born spirit of man. They, dwelling in each other, are well beyond distinction. Christ in us is now the truth.

It is here that the great secret is revealed. "This I say then, walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfill the lusts of the flesh." Gal. 5:16 What spirit does he mean? He simply means that we are now henceforth to walk after the direction of our re-born spirit. That spirit is now in the image of God, created in righteousness and holiness. It is indwelt by the Holy Spirit and by Christ who has made it His throne. It is in God's image and God's class and God's order. It loves only God and His law. All its dictates are according to the will of God. It loathes everything that is of the flesh and seeks to dominate and rule the mind after the will of God, casting down imaginations and every high thing that exalts itself above the knowledge of God and bringing it into subjection to Christ. This power is now part of us and it is the real us, for it is God that worketh in us both to will and to do His good pleasure.

His servant ye are whom ye obey, whether of sin unto death or of obedience unto righteousness. "They that are in (or after) the flesh cannot please God, but we are not in the flesh but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you... And if Christ be in you, the body (the flesh) is dead because of sin, but the Spirit (your re-born spirit) is life (is alive) because of righteousness." Rom. 8:8-10 When the glory of this truth dawns upon the believer and he is convinced that his own spirit is now born again and renewed in God's image, his first desire should be that the re-born spirit may now take full possession of his mind that his mind may also be re-born. But alas! He will find that the flesh is still in possession of the mind, firmly entrenched, through years of domination. Neither will it yield a fraction of his possession until routed by the spirit. It was the flesh that crucified Christ. It is now Christ who will crucify the flesh.

Failure to understand what we have here stated has caused millions of Christians to doubt their experience, for they do not understand why it is that at times they seem to be two distinct people. The same tongue that blesses God also curses men, and from the same fountain flows forth both sweet water and bitter. Cf. James 3:9-13. Learn quickly then that the re-born spirit must now possess the mind and renew it that it may in turn renew the body, for this is the path of immortality.

Behold the truth contained in this nugget. "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit." When wheat falls into the ground, it is not the inner life that dies. It is the outer shell that cracks open and perishes that the inner life may spring forth in a new creation. The outer shell is the flesh. The inner life is the spirit. The kernel of wheat, which we are, is cast into the ground. God is using every method in suffering and tribulation to crack the outer shell that the spirit may spring forth and death be swallowed up of life.

Hear, O child of God, and live, for why should you perish holding that which is not?
In the proceeding chapter we saw that the human spirit, once dead in trespasses and sins, is now re-born, re-generated, and re-newed by the power of the Holy Spirit. It is born again after the image of Him who created it in the beginning. Once again the human spirit is in God’s image and God’s order and a partaker of the divine nature. The re-born spirit, now repossessed by the Spirit of God has become the habitation of God. It is the dwelling place of Jesus Christ, who has come to make His abode with us. John 14:23

It is the re-born spirit and the spirit alone, which is able to understand the things of God, "for the spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God." 1 Cor. 2:10 The deep things of God pass our outer ear as unintelligible sounds and they are rejected by the natural mind as utter foolishness, for the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, for they are spiritually discerned. 1 Cor. 2:14 This is a revealing statement. It definitely shows that the spirit discerns and understands that which the natural man rejects as foolishness. What a world of truth lies in the statement, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him. But God hath revealed them unto us by His Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God." 1 Cor. 2:9-10 It is the re-born spirit, indwelt by the Spirit of God that both understands and searches the deep things of God. It is the re-born spirit that grasps and comprehends with delight and understanding the things revealed by the Holy Ghost.

Among the ninety-nine propositions of the reformer, Martin Luther, was this: "It is not in the power of man's will to choose or reject whatever is offered to it." This is a truth of tremendous importance. Even the things you are now reading cannot be received by the natural mind. How wise then is the child of God who prays, "Open mine eyes that I may behold wondrous things out of Thy law." The realm of the re-born human spirit is a realm far beyond the thoughts, let alone the understanding, of the ordinary Christian man or woman, and with them we include without hesitation that proud and deluded lot who vainly imagine themselves to be manifested sons of God. With them we may also rightly include all those who believe in spiritual gifts, who may or may not have been baptized with the Holy Spirit. While spiritual blindness has been the blight of countless millions of Christians, spiritual pride has been the downfall of the rest.

Let men now cast aside their pride of attainment. Let them debase their titles of degree. Let the learned lawyer cry woe to himself, for in refusing to enter into the spirit realm, he has taken away the key of spiritual knowledge and the door remains securely locked. Woe to the scribes and Pharisees! Woe to the doctors of divinity and church members who shut up the kingdom of God against men, who enter not in themselves and with their carnal reasoning deter those who would enter! Woe to those who shut up heaven against men, who devour widow's houses while they cover their wickedness with prophecies and prayer for the sick! Cursed, cursed generation, full of pride and human knowledge, answering that which thou understandest not and explaining that which thou knowest not! "O my God, incline Thine ear and hear; open Thine eyes, and behold our desolations, and the city which is called by Thy name: for we do not present our supplications before Thee for our righteousnesses, but for Thy great mercies. O Lord, hear; O Lord, forgive; O Lord, hearken and do; defer not, for Thine own sake, O my God; for Thy city and Thy people are called by Thy name." Dan. 9:18-19

Let this be our prayer of repentance as we turn our souls away from the pride and arrogance of a wicked system that loudly proclaims, "I am rich and increased in goods and have need of nothing", but knows not that she is miserable and wretched and poor and blind and naked.

Man is a trinity - spirit, soul, and body (flesh). Of these three the spirit is the greatest, for it is the spirit that giveth life and the flesh profiteth nothing. John 6:63 As faith without works is dead, so also the body without the spirit is dead. Yet it is for the body of flesh that men live. It is for the body that men toil all their lives - to clothe it, to feed it, and to give it comfort. It is for the body that all the wars of history have been fought, for war comes from covetousness and greed, and upon what else can the fruit of covetousness be bestowed but the body? "Dust thou art, and unto dust shall thou return" was spoken not of the spirit but of the body, for "the spirit returneth to God who gave it" Eccles. 12:7, and cannot pass away because it is an eternal element.

Many years ago I became almost fascinated with the study of the tabernacle built in the wilderness by the children of Israel. I learned its every measurement by heart and could describe in detail the composition of every part of it. There was scarcely a scripture concerning this wonderful structure in either Testament that had not been committed to memory. For many years it was little more than a Bible subject, a cold type out of the past that had found its fulfillment in Christ, but to my amazement I discovered that practically every New Testament truth is described in detail in the hidden depths of the tabernacle. It matters not whether the truth concerns the unity of the body of Christ or the plan of redemption, whether it concerns the witness of God or the witness of man, all are included and come flooding across the meadows of the heart whenever His Spirit draws a new veil aside.

As we behold man today - body, soul, and spirit, a wheel within a wheel within a wheel - so was the tabernacle of old - the outer court (body), the holy place (the soul), and the holy of holies (the human spirit). Into the outer court all Israel could come. One did not need to be a special personality to enter there. Even the outer gate itself was wide and low. But to enter the holy place, which was the second realm, one must be a priest of the priestly tribe of Levi, for this was a new realm with a new light, the realm of incense, prayer, and communion. Here the world could not come, and even the religious multitudes of Israel were forbidden. Let it be known to every child of God that we are not all on the same spiritual level, for while some are happy to abide in the outer court, others have found their way into the holy place of communion, of prayer, and of the flickering light of the candlestick. For, as there is one glory of the sun, another of the moon, and another of the stars, so also there are levels of glory and experience among the people of God.

Beyond the holy place stood the holiest of all. This was the realm of the spirit, and whatever else this holiest place signifies, it also signifies the realm of the re-born human spirit. Into this realm no ordinary priest could come, but only the high priest once a year, for this was the holiest of all realms. Here was no ray of sunlight as in the outer court, here no light of a flickering candle as in the holy place, but the shekinah, the light of the presence of God, flooded this windowless room with a glory so bright that even the high priest dared not enter without intricate preparation, and then never without the sacrificial blood lest he die. Here was the realm of the shekinah; here was the ark of the covenant, which was the most inclusive type of Christ, for it is Christ in our inner man that is the hope of glory. Within the Ark of the Covenant lay the pot of manna, that spiritual bread which He is and which He has given for the life of the whole world. There also lay the two unbroken tables of stone, the law of God written within the heart, and the rod, resurrection, that budded, blossomed, bloomed, and brought forth almonds in one night. And there above the mercy seat stood the cherubims of glory, as the angels sat one at the head and one at the feet where the body of Christ had lain. John 20:12.

Ah, what a realm this was and how wonderful it would have been to see it! But, though that typical tabernacle has long since passed away, its sublime truths still live in a temple not made with hands, even the temple which we are. This is a true type of the universal body of Christ which has now been long in forming, but while we behold that true tabernacle of His spiritual body, let us never lose sight of that individual temple which we are, for as the body is one and has many members, so also the body of Christ consists of many members, which we as individuals are.

Come, then, with boldness into this new realm, this sphere of the re-born spirit, this region where Christ sitteth, this clime where we see only by the light of God and not by the light of human study and learning. Here they need not the light of a candle, neither the light of the sun, for the Lord God giveth them light. Leave forever that fleshly plane, that realm of the carnal mind of which James wrote, saying, "From whence come wars and fightings among you? Come they not hence, even of your lusts that war in your members? Ye lust and have not: ye kill, and desire to have, and cannot obtain: ye fight and war yet ye have not, because ye ask not. Ye ask and receive not because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts." Jas. 4:1-3. Have you ever known an assembly of people without wars and fightings, many prayers and few answers? This is the portrait of Christians everywhere. Even the prayer of the carnal mind is tainted with the desire to consume the answer on itself.

The dread infirmity of God's people is this: Though the spirit has been re-born, the body and mind have remained much as before. We have walked after the outer man instead of following the inner man. We have never heeded the instruction of Paul, "If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit." Gal. 5:25 Neither have we learned that, though the Spirit is life because of righteousness, the body remains dead because of sin. Rom. 8:10 The moment we believed on Christ, our spirit became alive and received the righteousness of Jesus Christ, but our body remained in its condition of death and our minds remained carnal because we continued to permit them to be governed by the demands of a physical world and a physical body. How blessed it would have been had we quickly learned to give our minds over to the blessed woosings and leadings of a regenerated spirit, recreated and reborn in God's image! We are in exactly the condition of the individual described in Rom. 7:22 "I delight in the law of God after the inward man (the reborn spirit), but I see another law in my members (the members of my body of flesh) warring against the law of my mind and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members." Consider these words with great care and you will see that the mind is kept in bondage to the body, and the spirit, though regenerated, is not in control, but in bondage.

It is not my wish to press the truth of the re-born spirit beyond reason, yet because of our limited understanding on the matter, we must pursue it a little further. Your first impulse may be to reject what I am writing because almost all previous teachings regarding the spirit have been so obscure. "The husbandman that laboreth must be first partaker of the fruits. Consider what I say, and the Lord give thee understanding in all things." 2 Tim. 2:6-7 The tragedy is, however, that though many husbandmen have labored, very few have partaken of the fruit, and thus the instructors are as confused as the instructed. We have been raised under a generation of hirelings who understand neither what they say nor whereof they affirm. 1 Tim. 1:7 Let us therefore pray for the spirit of understanding.

Weymouth's translation of the eighth chapter of Romans is most enlightening because he spells the word spirit with a small "s" except in those places where it is clear that the reference is to the Holy Spirit. For this purpose, then, we will quote a few verses of this chapter to show the place of the re-born human spirit in our walk with God.

"There is therefore now no condemnation for those who are in Christ Jesus; for the Spirit's law - life in Christ Jesus - has set me free from the law of sin and death. For what was impossible to the Law - thwarted as it was by human frailty - God effected. Sending His own Son in the form of sinful humanity to deal with sin, God pronounced sentence upon sin in human nature; in order that in our case the requirements of the Law might be fully met. For our lives are ruled, not by our lower, but by our spiritual nature. If men comply with their lower nature, their thoughts are shaped by the lower nature; if with their spiritual nature, by the spiritual. Thoughts shaped by the lower nature (flesh) mean death; thoughts shaped by the spiritual (spirit) mean life and peace. For thoughts shaped by the lower nature mean a state of enmity to God. They do not submit to God's law, and indeed cannot... You, however, are not absorbed in such things, but in things spiritual, if the Spirit of God is dwelling in you; whereas if any man has not the Spirit of Christ, he does not belong to Him. But if Christ is in you, though your body is dead because of sin, yet your spirit has life because of righteousness... Therefore, brethren, it is not to our lower nature that we are under obligation to live by its rule. If you so live you are on your way to death; but if, by the power of the spirit, you put merely bodily habits to death, you will live." Rom. 8:1-10,12,13. (Weymouth).

Reading the above scripture, you will notice how by the use of a small "s" where the words spirit and spiritual refer to the human spirit an entirely new light is shed on the passage. Now we are brought to see that to walk in the flesh is to walk after the dictates of that fallen, dead, corruptible part of ourselves which is like unto the dust, but to walk in the spirit is to walk after that God-like part of ourselves, the re-born spirit, the inner man recreated and renewed and indwelt by Jesus Christ Himself. To walk after the flesh is to walk after the corrupt outer man. To walk after the spirit is to obey the thoughts and leadings coming from the inner man.

It should not be difficult to tell from what source a thought comes. The scripture above says, "Thoughts rising from the lower nature mean death, and thoughts shaped by the spiritual nature, mean life and peace." The love of the flesh is always selfish; the love of the spirit is unselfish. Paul's prayer for the removal of the thorn in the flesh was largely from the lower nature, but the understanding, which followed was by the spiritual nature. The carnal mind insists on the removal of the thorn because it bothers the flesh, but the spiritual mind, seeing the benefit of the crucifixion of the flesh, rejoices in infirmity, in distresses, in tribulation, in persecution, knowing that when the outer man of the body is weak, the spiritual man in God's image is strong. We live in an hour when Christians have literally gone awandering after physical healing. He who advertises himself as a healer of the body gets a vast following, but he who dares to preach the crucifixion of the flesh is forsaken, even by his friends. Yet it is the crucifixion of the flesh by the power of the Spirit that will at last mean the salvation of the body.
When our blessed Lord walked the lowly realms of earth, He ever made it plain that He was one spirit with the Father. "I and My Father are one," He said. The same spirit that was in the Father, or, I should say, was the Father, was also in the Son. When He said, "I do always those things that please the Father", understanding teaches us that it could not have been otherwise, for the Spirit that possessed the one possessed the other. The same Spirit that was and is the mind and counsel of God reigned in the mind of Jesus Christ and that so completely that our blessed Lord affirmed that the works He did were the Father's works and the words He uttered were the Father's words. So complete was this oneness that when Philip said, "Show us the Father and it sufficeth us," He answered, "He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father."

His whole life was walked step-by-step and hour by hour in the will of Him that sent Him. It was not a slavish servitude to ritual and tradition, but a joyful carrying out of His own will, for His own will and the will of the Father were exactly the same thing. If for a moment there seems to have been a clash between the will of the Son and the will of the Father in Gethsemane, let us remember that He who knew no sin was about to become sin for us and bear the guilt of every human that ever lived. But even here there was no clash of wills, but the simple, beautiful, and positive submission, "Not My will but Thine be done."

We could easily fill the rest of this volume speaking of the perfect unity of the mind of the Son with the mind of the Father, and it may well be concluded that no reader would ever doubt for a moment the reality of that unity. The purity of that blessed oneness is not hard to understand. How could two possessed with one Spirit and one mind be other than one in thought and deed, will and action, truth and love, power and might? The Spirit of the Son was the Spirit of the Father, and it was the Spirit and not the body that ruled the mind of Christ. In all the New Testament there is not one single evidence that physical concern for Himself was ever allowed even for a moment to be predominant. His Spirit ruled and reigned in His mind and, as a result, even His physical body knew no sickness and could never have died had He not laid His life down. "I have power to lay it down and power to take it again," He said, and thus He also did.

Now while we are considering such wonderful unity as this, does our heart not say, "Oh, to be like this!" But let me promise you here and now that this same blessedness that He enjoyed, saying, "I and My Father are one," is also laid up in store for you and me, and had it not been for the ignorance and blindness of our hearts, we would long ago have seen the truth and walked after its precepts.

By the use of vivid contrasts our minds are often taught great truths. It was for this reason that the apostle Paul used a most extraordinary contrast to display to the slow, dull minds of the believers the marvelous oneness of the re-born spirit with the Spirit of God. Therefore he said to the Christians at Corinth, "What? Know ye not that he which is joined to an harlot is one body? for two, saith He, shall be one flesh. But he that is joined to the Lord is one spirit." 1 Cor. 6:16-17 This is a most remarkable statement, and it would be well to pause in your reading for deep meditation and prayer, for here we are being told by divine inspiration that the same oneness of spirit that exists between God the Father and Jesus Christ the Son also exists between the born again human spirit and the Spirit of God. No longer does the human spirit lie dead in trespasses and sins, but, being re-newed after the image of the Creator, is joined to the Lord and is one spirit with the Father.

The great trouble with these Corinthians as with all other Christians is that, though their spirit has been renewed and regenerated and was in reality one with the Lord, their body with all its corruption was still ruling on the throne of their minds. It is with a measure of astonishment that Paul says, "Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived; neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners shall inherit the kingdom of God." 1 Cor. 6:9-10 All these are the works of the flesh, every one of them, and they show the awfulness of a mind ruled by the dictates of the corrupt flesh that is never satisfied, not even by the fulfillment of its lusts.

It is here at this very point that God's people come into bondage. Instead of being taught to walk softly after the loving direction of a re-born, re-created, and re-newed spirit in the very nature of God, they start like Pharisees to lay down a multitude of rules and regulations for the flesh to keep, but the flesh being unregenerated and the mind being still fleshly and carnal, they find themselves subject to a bondage that they can neither understand.
nor abide in. By their rules and regulations they try to overcome the desires of the flesh and thus their whole religious experience becomes a matter of do's and don'ts which neither assist in the crucifixion of the flesh nor change the attitude of their carnal mind.

The true deliverance comes when we recognize that it is the reborn spirit that is important and the chief personage of our being. Henceforth we are not debtors to live after the unregenerate flesh but debtors to live after the regenerate spirit. If you walk in the spirit, you will not fulfill the lusts of the flesh. Those who follow with delight after the impulses and leading of a re-born spirit discover that the desires of the flesh will fall away simply by disuse, while the whole nature blossoms out in the newness and freshness of a spirit regenerated and made one with God, for that re-newed spirit, being of one essence with the Father, loves the Father and can tolerate nothing but His will. The mind is thus renewed and becomes a spiritual mind, and the body, thus subjected to the spiritual mind, begins to partake of transformation that sickness and corruption may depart from it.

It is of no value to conquer the flesh by the discipline of the fleshly mind, for as a wound inflicted upon the body of a dying man begins to heal, so also the wounds inflicted upon the flesh by the carnal mind also heal, and the last state is no better than the first. It is the spirit that makes alive and the flesh profiteth nothing at all. Therefore, we are debtors, not to the flesh to live after the flesh, for if we live after the flesh, we will die; but if we through the spirit (the reborn spirit) do put to death the deeds of the body, we shall live. Rom. 8:13 Please notice how this passage uses the terms flesh and body interchangeably, demonstrating that they are one and the same thing.

We sometimes read books and listen to sermons advocating the imitation of the life of Jesus, but with all love and respect for our wonderful Lord I must tell you that it will do you no more good to imitate the life of Jesus than to imitate the lives of the scribes and Pharisees. Imitation changes nothing and smells of hypocrisy and insincerity. Some years ago the famous comedian, Charlie Chaplin, sang a ballad as part of his comedy. Being highly commended by one for the excellence of his voice, he replied, "The truth of the matter is I cannot sing at all. I was imitating Caruso." Imitation helps nothing and proves nothing. Indeed, one with a soul as black as night could imitate Jesus and by the word of the Lord many will do so and succeed in deceiving many. Even Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light and his ministers into ministers of righteousness. Do not try to imitate Christ or any other person. It changes nothing but leaves you and sometimes others empty, disappointed, and deceived. The change must corns from the inside, from the re-born spirit, recreated and repossessed by the Spirit of the living God.

All too often God's people adorn the outer man with attire thought consistent with godliness, but the mind has not changed and the spirit is not ruling. Indeed, all too often the spirit itself has never known the joy of re-birth. God's people are continually held in the cruel bondage of tradition. Christians, they think, must do certain things or must not do certain things. When will God's people ever learn that it is not what we do or do not that counts but what we are. He whom the Son sets free is free indeed, not free to follow his own will and do as he likes, but free to follow the will of God and do as He likes. The bondage of labor from the standpoint of duty will all be over and the bondage of love will have begun.

Have you ever noticed the beautiful freedom in which Jesus moved? Yet He was not in bondage to any tradition or any law. He moved about from day to day shoulder-to-shoulder with the greatest traditionists the world has ever known. Scribes and Pharisees paraded about attired in their gowns of office, their sharp eyes a watch continually for every minute infraction of the law as they poked their inquisitive noses into the whys and wherefores of everything; but for all this their hearts were often as black as hell itself, full of envy, murder, and jealousy. They were in bondage to every custom and tradition and determined that nothing should interfere with the monotonous ritual they carried on day after day. Their outward forms were not the true index of their inner life, for they, like whitened sepulchers without, were full of dead men's bones within. Outward form often cloaks corruption within and seeks to hide the true condemnation in the heart.

On more than one occasion our blessed Lord openly and purposely clashed with their tradition. He healed the sick on the Sabbath days, for it was right to do good, to save life and deliver on any day. He stood by without rebuke and watched His disciples rub out the corn to eat on the Sabbath, for He well knew that the Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath. He ate and drank with publicans and sinners, for He was more pleased with their sincerity than with the insincerity that adorned the ritualism of scribe and Pharisee.

The spirit must be released from the bondage of the subtle tradition that flows in an endless stream from the carnal mind. It must be released from tradition that it may be free to carry out the will of God in all its blessed and holy aspects. Jesus was not at all religious; He was spiritual. He adhered not to form and ritual, but was in all things led by the Spirit, which made Him one with the Father. It is difficult to be religious and spiritual too. It is impossible to adhere to codes and still be led by the Spirit. Spiritual men always go far, far beyond the confining realms of religious systems. That is why they are soon cast out of any organization with which they have become entangled.

The word of God bears abundant evidence that the outward man of the flesh and the inward man of the spirit are not in accord with each other. They are enemies in fact, for the flesh lusts against the spirit and the spirit against the flesh, and these are contrary the one to the other so that we cannot do the things we would. Do not pass lightly over this statement, because it is a tremendous revelation to our own hearts, declaring as nothing else can the reason for all our difficulty in carrying out God's will in our lives. Here lies the reason for all spiritual failure. Here is the cause of all failure in God's work. A house divided against itself cannot stand, and here we have a divided house, the spirit and the flesh in one and the same man, divided one against the other and warring with vise-like grip unto death. It is a civil war within, two factions, the flesh and the spirit, warring for possession of the mind, the regenerated spirit warring against the flesh and the corrupt flesh warring against the spirit. "I delight in the law of God after the inward man, but I see another law warring against the law of my mind and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members (in my flesh). Rom. 7:22-23

It should be evident that this condition must be dealt with as soon as possible, for what life can be as it ought to be while there is war within? We must now affirm with all emphasis that no Christian is exempt from this condition, and those who do not know it exists are by all means in great blindness and possibly great spiritual pride.

Long ago David spoke of enemies that compassed him on every side. Our first thought is of Philistines, Edomites, or political foes, but these he could overcome. Our real enemies are within ourselves. Take your pencil and draw three circles, one within the other. Then name the inner one the regenerated spirit, the second one the soul or mind, and the outer one the body or flesh. Then you will see that the reborn spirit is compassed by the carnal mind, and the mind is compassed by the corrupt and fallen flesh. These will keep you "all your life time subject to bondage" unless the spirit is set free. It must have been to this very condition that the Psalmist referred when he sang, "My soul is escaped as a bird from the snare of the fowler; the net is broken and I am escaped." Psa. 124:7

It should be evident, then, that if we are to attain a spiritual walk, the spirit must be delivered from these confining walls, these enemies that hem the reborn spirit in and keep it ineffective. "The lusts of the flesh and the desires of the mind," Eph. 2-3 hold the spirit captive so that we can never do the things we would. As long as the spirit is in this bondage to the outer man, confined and walled in by the unbroken flesh, all our labor is ineffective, for when men meet us in this condition, they do not meet the inner man, which is renewed after the image of God, but they meet the outer man, which is corrupt after the deceitful lusts. Therefore, even the words of life we speak in sincerity from our spirits are largely obscured, tainted, and obliterated by the outer man which men meet. Is it any wonder that Paul cried, "Oh wretched man that I am! Who shall deliver me from the body of this death (this dead body)?" This is the problem that all face, especially those who are ordained to sonship for the age to come.

Christ in us is the hope of glory, and if, when meeting us men meet the Christ, who now dwells in our reborn spirit, tremendous results would ensue. But, instead of meeting the inner man, they meet the outer man, unbroken, uncrushed, and unrenewed. Christ must be lifted up. The mind and the flesh must also be reborn and renewed, deriving their life from the spirit and made love slaves of Jesus Christ. What a conversion this is! Long ago some Greeks came to Philip, saying, "Sirs, we would see Jesus." Matt. 12:20-24. When Philip and Andrew brought the request to Jesus, He replied with a statement of such wisdom that eternity itself could scarce unfold its depths. His answer was, "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit." Now when a grain of wheat is cast into the ground, it is not the inner life that dies, but the outer shell. As soon as the moisture cracks the shell open, the life within springs forth, shooting roots downward and bearing fruit upward, first the blade, then the ear, and afterward the full corn in the ear. Do you see the secret mystery hidden here? The outer shell, the flesh, must be broken before the Christ life is seen, and when that has come to pass, we will discover that, just as Jesus testified, "He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father." So we will be able to say, "He that hath seen me, hath seen the Son."

There are many people today talking about and claiming sonship who know nothing whatever of the breaking of the outer shell that the Christ who lives in the reborn spirit may appear. The things that will soon happen universally must first happen individually. Christ must reign until He has subdued all things in the universe unto Himself, but first He must subdue all things in us, His chosen sons - first the spirit, then the mind, and finally the body, that Christ may be all and in all.

We have now come to the most important part of this truth. How does the Lord accomplish this breaking of the outer man that it might be brought into subjection to the Christ nature within? It is here that Christians always cringe, for God's great work of breaking the power of the outer man is by suffering, tribulation, distresses, and all manner of affliction. Sadly I tell you that the vast majority of God's people literally hate to hear this. They do all in their power to preserve the outer man who is corrupt after the deceitful lusts. But God has ordained that the outer man shall be crucified that it may fall into the ground and die. We try with all our might to wriggle out of our sufferings. We listen attentively to foolish, unbroken preachers who insist that we have no need to suffer because Jesus suffered for us. But writhe and wriggle as we may God goes steadily ahead with His plan for breaking the outer man, bringing it into subjection to the will of God.

Why do the righteous suffer? This has been a paramount question in the minds of Christians of all ages. All manner of answers have been given, most of them entirely wrong. How often we have heard some green unbroken person declare that our sickness or our business failure or our desperate heartache proves there is sin in our lives or that we are not right with God! It proves nothing of the sort, but rather that God in love is dealing with us as with sons, breaking the outer shell that the inner life, even Christ within, may shine forth in the glory of the resurrection. When suffering and tribulation pour like a sullen river across your pathway, never forget this divine word of wisdom and knowledge: "Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom He receiveth." Heb. 12:6 Never in all history has there been a true son of God who received not chastening. Indeed, divine wisdom has declared, "If we receive not chastening, then are we bastards and not sons." Heb. 12:8 The man who can stand by and declare that our suffering proves God's wrath against us knows nothing at all either of the word of God or of spiritual experience. Such unchastened babes as this should not attempt to crawl from their cradles to tell maturing sons the ways of God.

There is a beautiful story told in the gospels of a woman who came to Jesus in the home of Simon the leper and, as He sat at meat, she broke an alabaster box of precious ointment and poured it on His head; and the whole house was filled with the odor of the ointment. The disciples murmured at the waste and said it could have been sold for much and given to the poor, but Jesus replied, "Why trouble ye the woman? for she hath wrought a good work upon Me. For ye have the poor always with you; but Me ye have not always. For in that she hath poured this ointment on My body, she did it for My burial. Verily I say unto you, Wheresoevery this gospel shall be preached in the whole world, there shall also this, that this woman hath done, be told for a memorial of her." See Matt. 26:6-13

It is when the alabaster box is broken that the sweet odor comes forth. It is when the outer man is broken that the re-born spirit fills all things with the fragrance of God. We may spend our whole life feeding the poor and doing commendable things, but after we are finished there are just as many poor as before. But when the alabaster box, our outer man, is broken and the spirit in which Christ dwells pours forth in rivers of eternal life, men find meat and drink that they knew not of, for "he that believeth on Me, as the scripture has said, out of his innermost being (inner man) shall flow rivers of living water."

There is nothing wrong with giving to the poor or alleviating their hunger. It is a good thing to do, but one does not even have to be in touch with God to give alms. Indeed, the carnal mind rejoices greatly in such acts that do not require a broken heart, for it is like the Pharisee who prayed, "Lord, I thank Thee that I am not as other men, adulterers, unjust, or even as this publican. I fast twice in the week; I give tithes of all I possess." We can do all these things and still remain unbroken, our spirit hemmed in by its enemies. The whole world today is full of religion, but what good, pray tell, is religion? And if some longing hearts are crying, "Sirs, we would see Jesus", how can they see Him? Though He abides in our reborn spirit, He cannot be seen until the veil of the flesh is rent in twain and the alabaster box broken that His fragrance may fill the whole world.

In the eleventh chapter of Hebrews we read the thrilling story of those mighty heroes of God who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of aliens... Heb. 11:33-34 Oh, how we would love to be like them! But hold a minute until we hear the story of the tribulation they endured for the breaking of their outer man, the breaking of their alabaster box that the perfume might forever flow forth. They had trial of cruel mocking and scourgings, yea, moreover of bonds and imprisonments; they were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword; they wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins, being destitute, afflicted, and tormented. They wandered in deserts and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth. Heb. 11:36-38 This is trial of faith. This is the breaking that releases the spirit, the dying that brings forth much fruit, the wounding that heals, and the killing that makes alive.

We must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God, for he that has suffered in the flesh has ceased from sin that he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God. Cf. 1 Pet. 4:1-2 What a magnificent truth this is and what a blessed comfort to all those precious saints who suffer as they climb the mountain to sonship! Cease then from your murmuring, your whining, your grumbling and doubting, and be no longer like a little child who yells with pain before ever the rod falls upon him. Suffering and tribulation, when received from the hand of God, wean the soul away from the passing things that we have loved so long so that our hearts, unhindered by the flesh, may embrace with love the eternal will of God. How often I have heard men cry amid their suffering, "Why does God do this to me?" Or, "I may be wicked, but I don't deserve this!" Ah, foolish man, your spirit is imprisoned by your flesh and your loving Father is driving away the enemies that hem you in that Christ may shine forth in the glory of the Father. Then shall your mind also be renewed that the mind of Christ may dwell in you, and your body, changed by the renewing of the mind, shall be fashioned at last in the likeness of His glorious body.

Brethren, the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit. Gal. 6:18.

ASCENDING

When our Lord said, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God", He was ushering in a whole new realm of spiritual truth, for He was unfolding the truth of what really happened in man at the beginning of his day. Man, having partaken of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, had not only fallen into sin, but his spirit also had become dead and without contact with God. The Lord had departed from him and his own spirit, once alert and alive to all heavenly things, ruled over and indwelt by God's Spirit, now through disobedience lay in chains of darkness, dead, inert, without understanding, and having no fellowship with God. Only yesterday his body had been the temple and habitation of God and his God-like spirit had been lord of his body and of his mind. His mind was light and spiritual, knowing continually the effulgent glory of the Lord. It understood the mysteries of God. The depths of the human spirit responded to the depths of the Spirit of God and there was a continual oneness and fellowship as the spirit of man rejoiced in the celestial mountains of the Lord.

"The Spirit searcheth all things," said Paul, "yea, the deep things of God." The heights and depths revealed by the Spirit of God to the unfallen spirit of man were immediately comprehended by him, for his spirit was one essence with that of the Father even as a branch is one essence with the vine. His mind was light and spiritual and responded with glorious alertness to the things of the Spirit. There was no veil of the flesh, no corruption, no carnal mind. No thought need be given for tomorrow and the things thereof, for all was one glad eternal today. There was no need to instruct the spiritual mind, for all the answers lay within its blessed self and sprang into life the moment they were touched with that life which is from above.
"Let there be light and there was light" was the order of the day, and no dark shadows ever hung about that must be dispelled and dissipated before the glory of the Lord shone through. Now we see through a glass darkly, but then face-to-face is the future anticipation of all who are coming into Christ, but Adam, who fell, could have spoken the same words of the past. In his fallen state he could see but darkly, but "then", in his unfallen state, he saw face to face.

Not only had the mind of man been light and celestial as it was ruled by the glory of the spirit but the physical body, too, being transformed by the spiritual mind, was much more akin to the body of Christ's resurrection than the body of weakness, which we now endure. No sickness or disease ever touched it or defiled it, for it rejoiced daily in the transforming power of a spiritual mind. Cf. Rom. 12:2 But when the spirit, alas, lay dead in trespasses and sins no longer to rule the mind, then the mind itself became the victim of the physical body of flesh. Ruled and dominated by the flesh, now fallen to the state of beasts, the mind became a fleshly mind ruled by the carnal, which is the flesh. No longer did the physical body receive life from the life-giving spirit, but it was forced to sustain itself with food, which the beasts did eat. Of necessity it now exchanged the fruit of the Spirit for the fruit of the trees, the meat of the word for the flesh of beasts, the bread of life for the bread of the oven, the water of life for the desert streams.

Our blessed Lord spoke the promise that heralded our return to more glorious things when He said to the Jews, "I am the bread of life. Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness and are dead. This is the bread that cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof and not die. I am the living bread which came down from heaven; if any man eat this bread, he shall live forever; and the bread that I will give is My flesh, which I will give for the life of the world... Whoso eateth My flesh and drinketh My blood hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day. For My flesh is meat indeed, and My blood is drink indeed. He that eateth My flesh and drinketh My blood dwelleth in Me, and I in him. As the living Father hath sent Me, and I live by the Father, so he that eateth Me, even he shall live by Me. This is that bread which came down from heaven: not as your fathers did eat manna and are dead: he that eateth this bread shall live forever." John 6:48-58.

With what words of wisdom did our Lord instruct the woman at the wayside well when He spoke of a return to the living water which He is! The woman had said to Him, "Art Thou greater than our father Jacob who gave us the well and drank thereof himself and his children and his cattle? Jesus answered and said unto her, Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again, but whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst: but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life." John 4:13-14

How dreadful was the change from the bread of life to the bread of death, and with what woe did they slake their bodily thirst with physical water who once had drunk the life-giving water of the Spirit and were satisfied! If the spirit of him who is thirsty is revived a little as his body partakes of literal water, how much more, then, is the body of man transformed when his thirsty spirit drinks of the Spirit of God and thirsts no more forever! It seems to me that man who thus drinks of the water of life, which is God's Spirit, not only has his thirst forever slaked, but he himself becomes a fountain from which rivers of living water ever flow, for "in the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, saying, If any man thirsty, let him come unto Me and drink. He that believeth on Me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly (his inner man) shall flow rivers of living water. But this spake He of the Spirit which they that believe on Him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given, because that Jesus was not yet glorified." John 7:37-39

All who drink with their body drink only natural water from natural fountains, thirsting again and again, but they who drink with their spirit drink of the living water which He is, and they shall never thirst again, for the water that they now drink is in them a well, a fountain, a river of water springing up into eternal life.

It is only the reborn spirit that knows how to partake of the living water, which He is. Should we instruct the natural mind forever concerning the things of the Spirit, it would never understand, for the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God. They are foolishness unto Him; neither can he know them, for they are spiritually discerned. All the teaching and instruction of the colleges and universities of the world touch only the natural mind but can never touch the spirit. Even forms of righteousness and codes of ethics taught by natural minds to natural minds are of no profit to the spirit, for the man who depends upon his personal righteousness, as the Pharisee did, is worse off than the deepest sinner who beats his bosom and cries, "God be merciful to me," because he, going about to establish his own righteousness, has put his spirit beyond the realm where it can receive the righteousness of God.

When God calls to man, He calls not to the outer ear of the natural mind. He makes no appeal to human wisdom or human reason, but rather He calls to the spirit, the inner man, the human spirit. He calls beyond the natural mind and the natural reasoning. He speaks a language to the spirit that the outer man cannot comprehend nor understand. It is the "Lazarus, come forth", spoken to the dead spirit, and the dead spirit of man, hearing the voice of the Spirit of God, comes forth born again, in newness of life, still bound, alas, hand and foot by the grave clothes of the flesh and the carnal mind from which it must be loosed and let go free. One of the saddest things of the present hour is found in the fact that, whether we like to believe it or not, the church system of the present day is filled with men and women whose spirits have never heard the voice of God. We wonder what is wrong with our young people. We have taught them well. We have taken them to church. We have taught them the Bible. But still we know there is something sadly lacking. Why do they not lay hold upon the things of God as we once did? It is because they have become second and third generation Christians. They follow the precepts of their parents and give mental assent to the things they have been taught, but their spirits have never been re-born. Their inner man has never heard God's voice. They may have had their emotions stirred and they may have shed some tears, but that does not constitute an experience with God or a new birth.

In our school readers there was a little verse that said,
Who hath seen the wind?
Neither you nor I;
But when the trees bow down their heads,
The wind is passing by.

So it is with the Spirit of God, who moves as a wind over the unregenerate heart. For the wind (Spirit) "bloweth where it listeth and thou hearest the sound thereof, and canst not tell whence it cometh or whither it goeth: so is everyone that is born of the Spirit." Though many years have passed since my spirit was reborn, I am still at a loss to explain it, but the trees of spiritual experience are bowing down their heads, proving beyond a doubt that the wind is passing by. Why, the very day the wind of God's Spirit blew over the lifeless desert of my spirit, a transformation began. Old things began to strangely disintegrate. Bright new things were born and new interests from another world began to move in and take possession. The earth was without form and void, and darkness hung like a shroud upon the face of the deep, but the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters, for God had said, "Let there be light," and there was light. Jesus Christ, the light of the world, had shone into our hearts, giving the light of the glory of God from the face of Jesus Christ. There is an experience in the spirit which comes to men who believe on Christ, for He is the resurrection and He is the life, and all who believe on Him are justified from all things and righteousness within has begun.

There is really nothing complicated about the new birth. When a man is born again, his spirit becomes alive. Jesus Christ, who is the resurrection and the life, has been received into the human spirit and the spirit that was dead in trespasses and sins receives the life of God from the Christ, who has come to abide with him forever. He has been strengthened with might by His Spirit in the inner man. The human spirit has heard the voice of God and has come forth from the grave of death in response to the voice of resurrection. John 5:25,26 The words of Paul, "You hath He quickened (made alive) who were dead in trespasses and sins," Eph. 2:1, have become a reality and the spirit of man has become the habitation of the Spirit of God.

Death can no more live in the presence of Jesus Christ than darkness can abide in the presence of the sun. No funeral sermon was ever preached by Jesus Christ. Whenever He attended a funeral, the tears of sorrow were turned to pearls of rejoicing, for He always raised the dead to life again, and I suppose that, had He that blessed day in Bethany but called, "Come forth", instead of "Lazarus, come forth," every grave would have burst open and yielded up its dead. "In Him is life" and the life is the light of men, and everything He touches springs forth into life. Life and light are one and they cannot be separated. Death and darkness are also one and where one abides so also the other. When light comes into the presence of darkness, it is always the darkness that flees. Darkness, however dense, cannot overcome light. A tiny candle burning in the window on a dark night can be seen for miles, because the darkness cannot overcome the light however feeble the light may be. Thus as light and life are one, and death and darkness are one, so then as light dispels darkness, life expels death, for death cannot overcome resurrection life, but without hesitation must give up its captive.

I do not know where darkness goes when the light shines forth. It does not go anywhere, for it no longer exists. The same is true of death. It does not go anywhere, but when life comes it just ceases to exist at all. Thus we may boldly say, "Oh, death, where is thy sting? Oh, grave, where is thy victory?" The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death, death in all its forms, the first death and the second death, and they shall be no more. "And there shall be no night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun, for the Lord God giveth them light."

Those who are thus raised from the dead by the glory of the Father now walk in the newness of life. Rom. 6:4. The life that begins when Jesus comes is an entirely new life. It is lived in an entirely new realm with an entirely new attitude. All its aspirations are for things above and not the things of the earth. All its treasures are in heaven, not so much heaven as a place, but heaven as a spiritual realm. All its love is toward God. All its mind is exercised in Christ. The will of God is its constant theme and the very breath it breathes. It has a new love as different from the loves of earth as day is different from night. This new love is the old love that was in the beginning before man fell. Its interests are centered in God and not in the things of the earth. The love of man is always selfish, but the love of God is benevolence.

This newness of life is of ever increasing importance and should be cherished now above all else. It is the life of the Son of God in the inner man and, because it is the life of the Son of God, it is therefore the very life and spirit of sonship. The hope of all creation is the manifestation of God's sons. Even now while I write the whole creation is in restless upheaval, waiting and groaning for their manifestation and for their government. The whole kingdom of God is the very essence of this new life, which has now begun, and all the magnificent triumph of the kingdom age will be the result of the newness of life in those who reign with Christ in His kingdom.

With the coming of this newness of life into our spirits and the living of an entirely new life as a result, we must rid ourselves of tradition and the multitude of useless theories that have shackled and chained our spirits throughout the ages past. As the years have passed, the religious systems of earth have added bondage to bondage and chain to chain until at this the end of the age God's people are bound hand and foot with the grave clothes of doctrines, traditions, theories, organizations, and ten thousand things that go along with the program of carnal systems. You long to be free to walk in the newness of life? Then in one fell swoop tear off those binding shackles to walk a free man in newness of life, to sit with Christ as Lazarus in heavenly realms.

We are living in the closing hours of this dispensation. We live in an hour when the earth is filled with violence of every sort. Business is now run by violence as authority vacates to threats of violence. There is violence in the streets, violence on the highways, violence in the dockyards and on the picket lines. Governments are overthrown by violence and violence has become a way of life. Wisdom has vanished and madness has taken its throne. But the kingdom of God will know no violence, but righteousness, joy and peace in the Holy Ghost.

The new life that has begun in our inner man will now begin to take possession of our mind, and we must let it do so. There is a new birth for the mind just as surely as there is a new birth for the spirit. When Paul said, "Let this mind dwell in you that was also in Jesus Christ," he showed that there is newness of mind just as surely as there is newness of spirit. The carnal mind is a dead mind. It exists in death and all its thoughts lead to death. To be carnally minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life and peace. There is a carnal mind and there is a spiritual mind. The rebirth of the mind is as important as the rebirth of the spirit, but I am constrained to say that thousands of people who have known a rebirth of the spirit have never known a rebirth of the mind, and as a consequence the church systems have many people who have known a rebirth of their spirits, but whose minds still grovel in the corruption of religious systems and who are always filled with consternation about the things of earth.

Men have never been able to understand the teaching of Jesus when He said, "Take no thought for tomorrow, what ye shall eat or what ye shall drink or wherewithal ye shall be clothed." It is not natural for man to take no thought for tomorrow. It is not normal for him to cease from worrying about earthly things. It is not natural to cease from worry because worry and trouble are the way of the natural mind. But there is a place in God where taking thought ceases, where dependence upon the wisdom of man and the arm of flesh is no more. There is a place where redeemed men live and move and have their being in God, knowing that in Him are all things. This kind of life has nothing to do with slothfulness or laziness, but just as in newness of life there is no dependence upon the old, so in newness of mind there is no dependence upon the carnal ways of the world. There must come a time and that right now when the truth, "In Him we live and move and have our being", is a reality and not just a pleasant statement from the pages of our dead theology.

When the children of Israel left Egypt, they faced an entirely new way of life. But they, as we, were terrified by the wilderness that faced them. There were no gardens or paying jobs out there. There were no wells sparkling with water. Even the seething fleshpots that had been provided for them in Egypt were gone. There was nothing out there but sand and dreadful heat, so in their hearts they murmured and desired to return to the old staple ways they knew so well. But God was out there all unknown to them to be their food and drink, their clothing, their shelter from the heat and their pillar of fire. There on the sand came angels' food that would sustain them for forty years, a cloud to shield their heads at noon and a pillar of fire give to them light in darkness. As soon as we say to a man, "Take no thought for tomorrow," he is immediately terrified at the prospect, but this confidence will come with the newness of the mind just as new life came by the newness of the spirit.

Many years ago, when we were still in the Egypt of denominationalism, it had fallen to my lot by the will of God to be principal of a Bible College. The attendance had grown in a phenomenal way until it was necessary to build a large dormitory to accommodate the students. We were then in the heart of the depression when people had almost forgotten what money looked like, but God had told us to build and build we did. While I was looking to God in prayer over the impossibility of the task, the words of Heb. 11:1 flooded over my mind. "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." I raised my hands in praise to God, for He had revealed to me that faith is substance and by it the substance of the visible world was formed out of nothing. Surely the same faith that framed the worlds could frame this little building, too. So there by faith it stood, the evidence of things not seen.

Many were the struggles that followed, and to this day I cannot tell where the money came from to build. The date for opening the fall term had come long before the building was completed, and I shall never forget the consternation it caused me as I lay in bed at night wondering what we could possibly do to accommodate all those people who were coming to school that fall. I was so troubled that I arose in the chilly night to pray, and kneeling beside the bed, began to plead with God for help. I have always been thankful to my wife who, awakening from sleep, saw me kneeling in my night attire and, knowing how cold the night was, threw a blanket about my shoulders. It gave me the feeling that there was at least one soul in the world who was concerned. I had not prayed long until the Spirit of the Lord arrested my prayer of unbelief and made me stop. Then these thoughts from God overwhelmed me. "Who was it that told you to build this building? Who is it that is sending all these students?" He seemed to say. I knew it was the Lord, so with an entirely different mind I said, "Lord, it was not my plan to build this building. It was Thine. I did not ask these students to come. Thou art sending them. It is all Thy plan and Thou must undertake for it." I went back to bed happy at heart and fell asleep immediately. Needless to say, the Lord saw us through.

We are always taking thought for tomorrow. We are always terrified because of the wilderness. But the new mind that is born of the new spirit moves in God. How easy it is to worry about what people say and what they think! There is always somebody to offer good advice though it may be as carnal and old order as anything could possibly be. But, if we are going to walk in the newness of life and in the newness of mind, we may no longer listen to the vain reasonings of men and women who still follow the dictates of the old mind. The carnal mind always takes thought for tomorrow, for its very existence depends upon the things of tomorrow, but to the spirit there is only one glad today, for it has entered the eternal realm. It is part of the eternal and cannot die. "Never give your hearts to this world or to any of the things in it. A man cannot love the Father and love the world at the same time, for the whole world system, based as it is on men's primitive desires, their greedy ambitions, and the glamour of all they think splendid, is not derived from the Father at all, but from the world itself. The world and all its passionate desires will one day disappear. But the man that is following God's will is part of the permanent and cannot die." 1 John 2:15-17 (Phillips)
So, you see, we belong to the eternal realm in which there is no night and therefore no tomorrow, a realm in which we cannot pass away, a realm in which we only abide in God. Oh so often people write to me asking me to pray that they will get better jobs and more money, but, my dears, do you not know that God has made the poor of this world rich in faith? They are rich in faith because their faith has been tried, and the trial of our faith is more precious than gold that perisheth, for when it is tried in the fire, it will be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ. Let us cease to take thought for tomorrow. Do not fear to tithe the mite you have, for that is a manifestation of faith. The man who does not have enough faith to give God what belongs to Him will never have faith enough to take no thought for tomorrow. The no thought life has nothing to do with carelessness or laziness, but with the new realm of the spirit where men derive their life from God.

God's people are still lacking in understanding. Oh, how few have any true conception of their relationship to Christ the divine, risen, eternal Son of God. They do not know that, when He died, we died in Him. When He rose, we rose in Him. Because He lives, we also live. He ascended on high and we have ascended with Him far above all principality and power and might and every name that is named, not only in this age, but in that age which is to come. It was in this blessed knowledge that Paul said, "I am crucified with Christ." Gal. 2:20 And again, "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above." Col. 3:1 It was for this reason Jesus said, "Because I live, ye shall live also." And again, "If ye abide in Me, and My words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be given you."

All these truths have been acknowledged by Christians as doctrines, but pitifully few have ever grasped their significance to reach beyond the rears of theory to enter into the realm of experience. Is it not true that, while multitudes are repeating the scripture, "I am crucified with Christ," at the same time they are putting themselves into years of financial bondage to obtain the very things that belong to the realm they claim is crucified. While God's people load themselves down with debts and obligations, they fall under the yoke of men, in bondage to the lenders of money and the collectors of usury, for the scripture has said, "The borrower is servant to the lender." Prov. 22:7 As long as we remain a servant of man, we are no longer free to serve God with singleness of heart. We will have a worry on our mind that demands our attention and service is divided. No man can serve two masters, for he will either love the one and hate the other, or else he will cling to the one and despise the other. We cannot serve God and mammon. Mammon is the god of riches.

We read the words, "If ye then be risen with Christ." This we propagate as a doctrine and we profess to believe it, but only a few, pitifully few, have seen this to be a living truth and not a dead doctrine. Only a few who are saved really, honestly seek the things that are above where Christ sitteth on the right hand of the Father, but prefer rather to set their hearts on things of earth while their conversation concerns the furniture in their home, cars, hair-do's and dress. The man whose life is truly absorbed in eternal things finds it hard to waste his time in idle conversation and silly talk, for his mind is always drifting off into celestial realms where he sits with Christ in the Spirit. "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also", and, conversely, where our heart is there will also our conversation be. We cannot deceive God and we cannot deceive spiritual men, for, as a sow returns to her wallowing in the mire, so the carnal mind instinctively falls back to the things of a natural realm. There alone can it feel at home. But he who is truly risen with Christ is ever seeking the things that are above, and his conversation slips as naturally to higher ground as the conversation of the carnal falls into the pit of corruption. "By my God I have run through a troupe and by my God I have leaped over a wall." Psa. 18:29 The upward pull of resurrection life has become greater than the downward pull of the realm of death. There is coming a day when all the in Christ company will be "caught up" and I cannot help but say that many are being caught up now as they sit with Christ in heavenly realms far above the common conversation of earth.

Identification of man with his Lord is only realized when it is personally appropriated. That is what Paul meant when he said, "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling, for it is God that worketh in you both to will and to do His good pleasure." Those who would sit with Christ in heavenly realms must do more than play with theological toys. It is not enough to have a preacher expound the theory of our position in Christ. It is not enough to walk out of the church door and exclaim, "Was not that a wonderful sermon?" These truths must be revealed to us by God's Spirit and received with all seriousness of heart and mind. They must be entered into with joy, and with gladness we must be prepared to accept whatever tribulation and suffering may come our way in consequence. We must cast aside our garments and run unto Christ as the blind man did at the revelation of Him. We must leave the ship and the fishes and cast ourselves into the sea as Peter did. We must sacrifice the oxen and follow the Spirit as Elisha did, for he who putteth his hand to the plow and looketh... back is not fit for the kingdom of God. If we love anything on earth more than we love Him, we cannot even be His disciple, much less sit with Him in heavenly realms.

"Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth My word, and believeth on Him that sent Me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life." John 5:24 Or, as Moffat says, "He has passed from death across to life." It is not enough to talk of identification with Christ's death. There must be, not only identification with His death, but identification with the glory and power of His resurrection, "for if we have been planted together in the likeness of His death, we shall also be in the likeness of His resurrection." Rom. 6:5 The Christ that was buried was the same Christ that arose from the dead, but have we considered how utterly different He was? He who was crucified through weakness now lives by the power of God. He was utterly freed from all the confining influences of a natural world because His body was raised a spiritual body. One moment He was saying to Mary, "Touch Me not, for I have not yet ascended to My Father," John 20:17, but later, having ascended and returned, He was saying to Thomas, "Reach hither thy finger and behold My hands, and reach hither thy hand and thrust it into My side." John 20:27 Beneath the Passover moon He walked with the disciples on the road to Emmaus and, vanishing from them, appeared to the disciples in Jerusalem, who sat behind locked doors for fear of the Jews. Time and distance were things of the past for Him, for He had entered into a new realm, even the realm of the resurrection, the realm of the eternal where distance, time, and prison bars are no more.

Perhaps our minds are still too dark to see it, but the truth is that those who identify themselves with Him to live by the power of His resurrection begin to live far above and beyond the boundaries of natural law. They begin to live beyond the possibilities of the natural man. They manifest the beauties of the divine nature and divine character. Even their standards of life are all divine. They are no longer concerned with the letter of the law, but with the spirit of it. They know that their association with Christ is better than all whole burnt offerings and sacrifices. Their lives are no longer ordered by a set of rules, but by the love of Christ that constraineth them.

We are always plagued and troubled because we try to hang on to the old realm. We are loath to let it go. We seem determined that things must remain as they always were - our attainments, our achievements, our denomination, our set of doctrines, our human understanding of things, our splendid life after the natural and as members of the great society. It cannot be this way, for as long as we try to live the resurrected life while we still remain on the death side of the tomb, we are going to be disappointed. It cannot be done. Those who have shared the likeness of His resurrection have come in to a new realm. They live on the resurrection side of the grave. They belong to a higher order and a new country.

I have often packed in preparation for a long journey, taking cases full of clothes, travelers' checks and expensive cars, continually bothered with food and lodging and crossing of borders, and I have smiled to myself as I have seen the little birds flock up for their journey south. They take neither scrip nor money. They worry not at all about their food. They need no conveyance or gasoline to drive it. They cross the border without interview at customs, and all because they live in a realm where God is everything, though perhaps they know it not. But we poor things, who know the doctrine and the truth, are bound hand and foot by every earthly circumstance, never able to move a mile without trouble and expense. Is it any wonder that Jesus said, "Consider the lilies, how they grow; they toil not neither do they spin, and yet Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed as one of these." Consider the ravens who have no storehouse or barn, yet the heavenly Father feedeth them. And again, "Consider the sparrows, that two are sold for a farthing, and yet not one falls to the ground without My Father, and are ye not much better than many sparrows?"

It is time for God's dear people to begin to ask Him for light and understanding as to their true position in Christ. It is not enough to read my writings. It is not enough to hear sermons. It is not enough just to read the Bible. There must come a moment when the spirit of revelation and understanding like rays of dawn come stealing over the meadows of our hearts, giving the light of God from the face of Christ, making truth live and understanding flourish.

I have known very ungodly men who loved to sing, "Take time to be holy; speak oft with the Lord." Yet they never took time to be holy and never spoke with the Lord. Too many of God's people are just like that. They know the way it should be, but the glorious light has never fully shined in their hearts, bringing them the knowledge of God from the very face of Jesus Christ. Long ago Paul said, "When it pleased God, who..."
separated me from my mother's womb, to reveal His Son to me, immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood." Cf. Gal. 1:15-16. What a world of truth lies in that saying! Once God reveals these glorious things to our heart, we are spoiled forever for all that is past. We are sickened by all the old things that once held us, and even conversation about them is a weariness to our spirits and a heaviness to our hearts. Denominationalism is gone as in spirit we dwell in the mystical body of Christ. Human effort has passed away in the omniscient and omnipotent purpose of God. "Where is the wise? Where is the scribe? Where is the disputer of this world? Hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world? For after that in the wisdom of God the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe. For the Jews require a sign, and the Greeks seek after wisdom; but we preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumbling block, and unto the Greeks foolishness; But to them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ, the power of God and the wisdom of God." 1 Cor. 1:20-24

While we hang on to our human comprehensions and our mortal possessions and attainments, we live in unbelief and close fast the door to spiritual understanding and spiritual attainment. How many millions of Christians are missing the glory of the resurrection and the wonders of walking with Him in spiritual realms because they insist on holding their man-made doctrines that have been handed down by insipid old professors who struggle to master spiritual things with their natural minds! Who on earth can understand with the natural mind such words as these? "Except ye eat My flesh and drink My blood, ye have no life in you," "Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness, and are dead, but whosoever eateth the bread that I shall give shall never die." Who with the natural mind can comprehend the saying, "Take no thought for the morrow"? Don't worry about food or clothing, for our Father recognizes our need of all these things. When men try to understand such truths naturally, they make fools of themselves, because they try to accomplish in the natural realm the things that can only be done in the spiritual realm. We should not be living on such a low plane that we will always be affected by material things. Let other people live in the sordid realms of distress and worry, but Christ is saying to us, "Come up here and live with Me. Come up here and sit where I sit in the spiritual realm, far above all earthly things." God's people should not live in the flesh and try to get the Spirit of God to serve them and help them. They should live their lives in the Spirit and in communion with God. Then the things of the natural realm would be subservient to the Spirit and they would have mastery over them.

Only recently I received a wonderful letter from a sister who long had sought healing for her body, but she had sought without success and with no help from God. Then in her disappointment the light of God shone into her heart. In the light of her revelation she saw that her real trouble was not a sick body, but a sick spirit. It was in the inner man where the real trouble lay. Then to her amazement as her spirit began to be healed and become one with God, her outer man was also healed and she became strong and well in body. I have been convinced for years that herein lies the trouble with millions of Christians. Because they are more interested in the body of flesh than in the spirit, they run hither and thither seeking healing for their bodies, and ninety-nine times out of the hundred they go away disappointed in spite of all the eloquent claims to the contrary. The trouble is not with the body. The trouble is with the spirit, for "if the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal body by His Spirit that dwelleth in you."

I have little confidence in healers and healing meetings, not because I do not believe in healing, for I do. Great, long healing meetings are a man-made invention, and, if we would only admit it, are in most cases an utter farce, filled with fraud and trickery, the sleight of men and cunning craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive. Certainly some are healed, largely because of their own faith and not the faith of some highly advertised man. There is not one word of scripture that would lead one to believe that either Jesus or the Apostles ever advertised great healing meetings. Their healings were all spontaneous, on the spot, and by definite direction of the Holy Spirit. They were as likely to heal a man on the highway as in the synagogue. These man-made institutions are not the way of the Spirit, and we will find it so in the end.

Child of God, do not allow circumstances to become your master. Do not make yourself a slave to your environment. Your life in the Spirit is dependent upon the eternal, illimitable possibilities of His divine nature and not upon the confining powers of your own humanity. The Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead is dwelling in you, bringing within your reach all the possibilities of the resurrection and an abundant life in Him. He who has given His life for us now is giving His life to us. Stop trying to imitate Him. Stop trying to be like Him. Let Him live and move and have His being in you, as you live and move and have your being in Him. Then all that He is will be manifest in you, for because He lives, you shall live also. The resurrected Jesus brings the abundant life within and there is no life apart from this. The life of Christ is not an imitation of Jesus of Nazareth. It is the life of the resurrected Christ living in you.

There is an evil spirit in the world today that has permeated, not only the world, but the church as well. We have substituted education for regeneration and materialism for spirituality. We have imagined it was enough to be able to explain a doctrine without thought of appropriating its truth, and we have deceived ourselves into believing that, if the church system was prospering materially, all was well. But this is a lie and a "way that seemeth right to men, but the end thereof is the way of death."

The living Christ must be everything, Christ in you and you in Christ. In the beginning was the Word, and in the end also shall be the Word. That word is the Logos, the living speaking Christ.

There shall come a time and that right soon when heaven is more real than earth, and the realm of the Spirit more real than the realm of the flesh. This is not only desirable, but completely possible. I am forever being reminded by well-meaning people that no reference need ever be made concerning the flesh, but all we need to do is speak of the Spirit. While there is a measure of truth in this, there is also a measure of fatal error. May I now remind you that, before sailing the glorious depths of God's ocean, it is necessary to raise anchor, throw off the restraining lines that hold us to the shore, and launch out into the deep. As long as we waste our time viewing the sordid activities and corrupting nonsense of film stars instead of communing with Christ, we need never expect to enjoy any of the wonders of which I have spoken. The mouths of fools feedeth upon foolishness, Prov. 15:14 and all unknown to us the face of Christ becomes strangely dim, prayer loses its power, love waxes cold, revelation dries up, the real becomes unreal, and the unreal becomes real. Spiritual conversation ceases. It is right here that we lay aside the hindering weights to work out our own salvation with fear and trembling.

We live at this moment on the very brink of Jordan that flows between this age and the kingdom of God. This is an hour of tremendous importance. It is an hour of trial and temptation such as the world has never known. Christians are tempted in a way hitherto unknown to God's people. They are not killed and persecuted in caves and dens in the earth, but placed in a position where the superabundance of the flesh with all its ease and luxury can cause the face of Christ to grow strangely dim. Happy is the man who has little of this world's goods. It is so very easy, while we wait, to say, "My Lord delayeth His coming. All things continue as they were." It is so easy to become involved with the world in eating and drinking and surfeiting, being drowned with the cares and deceitfulness of riches and the lusts of other things entering in to choke the Word (Christ), making it unfruitful. While men are looking for tribulation to come on the earth, they have been blinded to the fact that right now all about us there is tribulation such as never was before and never will be again. Because of the abundance of the flesh and the affluent societies men are poverty stricken in spirit and starved for the want of spiritual bread.

Let us now lay aside every weight and the sin that doth so easily, beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith, who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the majesty on high.

IT IS THE LORD

"After these things Jesus shewed Himself again to the disciples at the sea of Tiberias; and on this wise shewed He Himself. There were together Simon Peter, and Thomas called Didymus, and Nathanael of Cana in Galilee, and the sons of Zebedee, and two other of His disciples. Simon Peter saith unto them, I go a fishing. They say unto him, We also go with thee. They went forth, and entered into a ship immediately and that night they caught nothing. But when morning was now come, Jesus stood on the shore: but the disciples knew not that it was Jesus. Then Jesus saith unto them, Children, have ye any meat? They answered Him, No. And He said unto them, Cast the net on the right side of the ship, and ye shall find. They cast therefore, and now they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fishes. Therefore that disciple whom Jesus loved saith unto Peter, It is the Lord, Now when Simon Peter heard that it was the Lord, he girt his fisher's coat unto him, (for he was naked), and did cast himself into the sea. And the other disciples came in a little ship; (for they were not far from land, but as it were two hundred cubits), dragging the net with fishes. As soon then as they were come to land, they saw a fire of coals there, and fish laid thereon, and bread. Jesus saith unto them, Bring of the fish, which ye have now caught. Simon Peter went up, and drew the net to land full of great fishes, an hundred and fifty three; and for all there were so many, yet was not the net broken. Jesus saith unto them, Come and dine. And none of the disciples durst ask him, Who art Thou? knowing that it was the Lord." John 21:1-12

We may well wonder if ever before in human history twelve men had endured a more grievous trial than had the disciples of our Lord during those frustrating weeks from the Passover to the outpouring of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost. The blessed Christ had said much to forewarn and forearm them of the ominous perils which were to come, but it seemed His assurances served yet the more to fill them with wonder and dread, for they neither knew nor understood the meaning of the things He spoke. He told them He would die, but what small comfort was that to men who in their hearts cherished the hope that He would now restore the kingdom to Israel as the prophets of old had spoken. Even after He was raised from the dead, their minds were still filled with this hope as they questioned, "Lord, wilt Thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" Acts 1:6 It was but little that their hearts were uplifted by His reply. "It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in His own power. But ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you ..." Acts 1:7,8. A beautiful promise, indeed, but scarcely the one they had hoped to hear!

When Jesus announced His coming death and resurrection in these words, "The Son of man is delivered into the hands of men, and they shall kill Him; and after that He is killed, He shall rise the third day," they understood not that saying and were afraid to ask Him. Mark 9:31-32. It was for this plain statement of truth, so ominous and terrifying in its import, that poor Peter in his consternation "took Him, and began to rebuke Him, saying, Be it far from Thee, Lord: this shall not be unto Thee." Matt. 16:22. "Thou savorest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men," said Jesus; but it is left for us to understand that Peter's unsavory rebuke sprang from his lack of spiritual understanding. How often have we in like manner thought that good was evil and evil was good, putting light for darkness and darkness for light!

The promise of His rising from the dead served only to raise more questions in their minds. To us the resurrection is history. To them it was something almost beyond belief. For a man to die all could believe; but for the dead to rise was contrary to all reason. They remembered that Jesus had raised the dead, but for the dead to be raised without Him present to raise them was beyond their understanding. So they questioned among themselves what the rising from the dead should mean. Mark 9:10 Next there came the troublesome prediction to fill their hearts with fear and amazement that one of their own number would betray Him. Even as they did eat, He said, "Verily I say unto you that one of you shall betray Me. And they were exceeding sorrowful, and began every one of them to say unto Him, Lord, is it I?" Matt. 26:21-22 Then, after the supper was over and the traitor had gone out from their midst, they sang a hymn in the midst of their grief. O God, I wonder what strange words of devotion their choking voices hymned, or could it quench the blinding tears that crowded o'er their sight! After the song was ended, they walked in company to the Mount of Olives. But their woe was far from ended, for if they had thought harshly of the traitor, they now had solemn cause to doubt themselves, though such a thought they could not entertain. "All ye shall be offended because of Me this night," Jesus said, "for it is written, I will smite the shepherd, and the sheep of the flock shall be scattered abroad." But Peter, the ready spokesman for them all, lacked not assurance that "though all men shall be offended because of Thee, yet will I never be offended." No strength was given to their fainting hearts to be warned by Him who never spoke in error, "Before the cock crow, thou shalt deny Me thrice." The silence of the Lord upon hearing the steadfast avowal of Peter and the others, "Though I should die with Thee, yet will I not deny thee", seemed only to emphasize the emptiness of their words and magnify the weakness of their flesh. Many years later Paul proclaimed the secret of all steadfastness when he said, "We were pressed out of measure, above strength, insomuch that we despaired even of life: but we had the sentence of death in ourselves, that we should not trust in ourselves, but in God which raiseth the dead." 2 Cor. 1:8-9 The passing years have taught me that all my vowing to do or not to do, to be or not to be, served nothing at all but to bring unnecessary condemnation upon my own head. The lesson all must learn is this: "It is God that worketh in us both to will and to do of His good pleasure." The fidelity of these brave disciples was beyond all question, but their trust was in themselves and in their own strength and devotion. They had not learned as yet that all-important truth, "The flesh is weak." Matt. 26:41 They did not know that willing spirits, leaning for strength upon the flesh, would find it naught but a broken reed that would pierce the hand of him who leaned upon it. Though this is not my theme at present, I shall pause to say that God is not interested in our strength. He is not even interested in helping us to be victorious or to overcome. He is interested in being our strength, our enablement and our victory. Men who think they stand, depending the while upon their own veracity and strength, will find themselves in the end to have miserably failed. But our failure need not be without a blessing, for in failure do we learn that strength is not in ourselves, but in the living God.

It was in the midst of all these shocking revelations of things which must shortly be that Jesus gathered them about Him to give them a truth that would cause them to stand, "though the earth be removed and the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea; though the waters thereof roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof." "Let not your hearts be troubled," He said. "Ye believe in God, believe also in Me." O troubled heart, weary and oppressed by the frowning face of misfortune, simple trust in God will calm life's stormiest sea. It will cause the iron gates of your prison house to swing open of themselves on their squeaking hinges. When life's storm clouds lower upon you and some spiritual Euroclydon, Acts 27:14, lashes the waves of your sea into fury, when neither sun nor moon nor stars appear for many days and all hope of being saved is lost, and naught seems left to do but abandon your ship to the violence of the waves, if you still believe in God, there will stand beside you the angel of the Lord, whose you are and whom you serve, and you will hear Him say those words so oft repeated in holy writ: Fear not!

"Ye believe in God," Jesus said, "believe also in Me." The Father's house, of which He spoke, is the true body of Christ. The many mansions are the individual believers in that dwelling place of God. O Spirit of the Lord, let Thy people see that trial, affliction, temptation and tribulation are necessary parts of Thy plan to weed out, to tear down and scatter abroad all that is pretentious or profane, and to gather, strengthen, and sanctify all whom Thou hast chosen from the beginning of the world!

Judas had betrayed the Lord as Jesus had said, but now the betrayal was past; the denial a bitter fact. Peter had denied the Lord as Jesus had said, and all had fled. The Lord had been lifted up on the cross according to the plan of the ages. He had lain in the earth three days as He said, and now incredible stories were coming from all directions, saying that He was alive and had been seen of the women, of the eleven, and of the two who walked to Emmaus. He had appeared to them and breathed on them, saying, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost." Still their hearts could not grasp the staggering truth that He was alive forevermore, and that all the troublous happenings were the plan of the Lord after all.

"I go a fishing," said Peter, not knowing what else to do. "We will also go with thee," the others had volunteered; and though they toiled all through the weary night, their nets were still empty in the morning. And, when a man shouted from the shore, "Have you caught anything, boys?" they had answered, "Nothing." "Cast your nets on the right side of the ship, and ye shall find," He told them, and, though I suppose they did so reluctantly, they did obey, for what could they lose by the trial? And immediately their nets were full. "It is the Lord," gasped John to Peter, who, upon hearing that it was the Lord, pulled his fisher's coat about him and plunged into the lake to swim to Jesus. We will not continue the narrative here. You can read it better from the twenty-first chapter of John. But it is upon John's words that I would tell my story: "It is the Lord." It is the Lord! Many thoughts I will relate will be familiar to you and will, I am sure, fall in well with your own personal experience in God, for if "thou incline thine ear unto wisdom, and apply thine heart to understanding; ... then shall thou understand the fear of the Lord, and find the knowledge of God." Prov. 2:2, 5 "When wisdom entereth into thine heart, and knowledge is pleasant unto thy soul, discretion shall preserve thee, understanding shall keep thee." Prov. 2:10-11

It is of utmost importance to all who love and fear God that we should become acquainted with His ways as early and as quickly as possible. Many thousands of Christians are like the princely patriarch, Israel, who, notwithstanding a lifetime of experience with God, and in spite of all the dealings of the Lord with him, was still at times unable to recognize the mighty hand of God directing his affairs and the affairs of all men. Few men have experienced more bitter trial than this man Jacob, who, nearing the end of his sojourn, testified, "Few and evil have been my days." I may be wrong, for who am I to condemn him, but it seems to be a pity that he of so much experience should at the height of his trouble say, "All these things are against me." Gen. 42:36 There is a better secret for us to learn when tribulation overwhelm the soul. It was taught by another prince with God who after a lifetime of tribulation wrote to all saints of light, "We know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them that are the called according to His purpose." Rom. 8:28 This was the same man who, triumphant in his sufferings, used the story of his fearful tribulation as definite proof of his ministry and apostleship. "Seeing that many glory after the flesh," he said, "I will glory also. For ye suffer fools gladly, seeing ye yourselves are wise. For ye suffer if a man bring you into bondage, if a man devour you, if a man take you, if a man exalt himself, if a man smite you on the face... Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one. Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice suffered I shipwreck, a night and a day have I been in the deep; in journeyings often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils of mine own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren; in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness. Beside those things that are without that, which cometh upon me daily, the care of all the churches. Who is weak, and I am not weak? who is offended, and I burn not? If I must needs glory, I will glory of the things which concern mine infirmities. The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which is blessed for evermore, knoweth that I lie not. In Damascus the governor under Aretas the king kept the city of the Demascenes with a garrison, desiring to apprehend me: And through a window in a basket was I let down by the wall, and escaped his hands." 2 Cor. 1:18-33

Dare we venture even to think that such calamities as these are working together for good to them that love God and are the called according to His purpose? Yes, indeed, these are the things that are working together for good, not only in the life of this princely man, who was called of God to be an apostle, but in your life and mine tribulations such as these are working together for eternal good; and it will be the greatest possible blessing to all who enter into a spiritual understanding of this great, eternal fact. Then we will know the meaning of these words of inspiration: "When wisdom entereth into thy heart, and knowledge is pleasant to thy soul, discretion shall preserve thee, and understanding shall keep thee."

It is to be regretted that in our day many persons greatly lacking in understanding are proclaiming a false message when they tell the people that it is the will of God for all men to be prosperous and free of adversity. By cunning craftiness and for personal gain they teach the people that God wants all bodies healed and all poverty banished from the land. All this is deceitful rubbish that has its source in the corrupt fountain of the carnal mind. Where do we find even in secular history that great men arise through ease and plenty? Is it not so that the greatest musicians and composers the world has seen were raised under the eye of tyrants, and poets, too, in struggle and difficulty and poverty? Was the road easy for Washington? Or for the revered and honored Lincoln, whose history in brevity was this: Failed in business in 1831; defeated for the legislature in 1832; failed again in business in 1834; his sweetheart died in 1835; defeated in the election of 1838; defeated for Congress in 1843; defeated again in 1846; and again in 1848; defeated for the Senate in 1855; defeated for vice-president in 1856; defeated for the Senate in 1858; elected president in 1860; assassinated in 1865. His was a hard and awesome preparation for the grueling years of guiding a great nation through its most troublous period. Tribulation, anguish, and disappointment dog the footsteps of both men and women whose work concerns even the affairs of this life. How much more, then, should these necessary trials prepare the hearts of those whose ministry concerns the ages to come and the restitution of all things! Have we often prayed for patience? Why then are we amazed when tribulation comes our way? Has not God said, "Tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and experience hope"? And is not hope among the greatest blessings in the spiritual world, since hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost?

God has His own way of making saints and bringing sons to the scene of adoption. It is by way of the cross and tribulation. And we will further say that God by the use of the same instruments - the cross and tribulation - easily weeds out those who are not fit for the kingdom of God. My brother and my sister, let me tell you with all faithfulness that the trials and heartaches for which you have been blaming the devil are not the work of the devil at all, but are the work of God. It is the Lord, working in you both to will and to do His good pleasure. Everywhere I have been the vast majority of Christians are forever attributing to the devil trials and testings that actually come from the wisdom of God for our eternal good and betterment. Learn quickly, child of the Lord, that Satan has no power but by the permissive will of Jehovah, and, if you abide in faith and confidence in your trial, you will learn that much blessing has accrued to your account, and you have grown more perfectly in the image in God. Which man would you much prefer - the self-righteous Job before his fierce and fiery tribulation or the Job who stood clothed in God's likeness after the fierceness of his fiery trial was ended? I know what your answer must be. Therefore, I beseech you to consider not your present light affliction, but behold instead the eternal weight of glory it is working for you. Some years ago a man sat in my presence, pouring into my ears a tale of grief and woe. Business had failed; sickness had come; death had struck; and sundry troubles more. After pouring out his woe, he sobbed in the bitterness and rebellion of his soul, "I may be a bad man, but I don't deserve all this." Poor fellow, deluded, impatient, and ashamed, completely lacking in spiritual understanding, he did not know that the faithful Father was giving him the greatest opportunity of his life. He did not understand that tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and experience hope, and that hope maketh not ashamed. To him tribulation seemed to be the punishment of God. Therefore it was not working patience, but impatience; not joy, but bitterness, bringing no blessed experience, producing no hope, but shame and sorrow and unbelief.

Oh that men in their hours of turbulent trial or affliction would only realize that He who is calling from yonder shore, "Children, have you any meat," is the Lord! They need not ask Him who He is, knowing that it is the Lord. The same afflictions which we endure are accomplished in our brethren who are in the world. 1 Pet. 5:9. Surely, then, we need not think strange concerning the fiery trial that is to try us as though some strange thing happened unto us, but rather rejoice insomuch as we are the partakers of Christ's sufferings, that, when His glory shall be revealed, we may be glad also with exceeding joy. "If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye, for the Spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you."

"And what shall I more say? For the time would fail me to tell of Gideon, and of Barak, and of Samson, and of Jephthae; of David also, and Samuel, and of the prophets: who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens. Women received their dead raised to life again: and others were tortured, not accepting deliverance, that they might obtain a better resurrection: And others had trial of cruel mockings and scourgings, yea, moreover of bonds and imprisonment; They were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were slain with the sword: they wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins; being destitute, afflicted tormented; (of whom the world was not worthy); they wandered in deserts, and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth. And these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise; God having provided some better things for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." Heb. 11:32-40 Do you think these men and women could say in their affliction, "He is the Lord"? Yea, verily they knew, and "look joyfully the spoiling of their goods", knowing that they had a better and more enduring substance laid up for them in heaven.

The things, which are seen, are temporal and the things which are not seen are eternal. But am I not right in saying that almost all people deem the opposite of this to be true? The things which are seen are thought by most to be the real things, and the things that are not seen are scarcely worth our attention at all. Yet these are the things that shall endure forever and grow stronger and greater as the ages come and go. Anything in the world that can be analyzed by the five senses of the body is temporal and unreal. Whatsoever we can see with our eyes, touch with our hands, hear with our ears, smell with our nostrils, or taste with our palate belongs to the realm of the temporal and is essentially unreal. I say it is unreal because temporal things are always changing and never remain the same. The flower, which today is in the field is withered tomorrow. The magnificent building, so admired and honored by passers-by, begins to fall into decay the very moment the workmen gather up their tools. The young man who delights in his strength today discovers grey hair appearing on his brow tomorrow and in a few short years his strength has decayed and withered as a leaf. Full well do the words inscribed on a lonely tombstone describe our temporal plight.

Stranger, take heed as you pass by;
Every industry in the world, without one exception, exists because of the demands of the five senses of the body - seeing, hearing, tasting, feeling, and smelling - and yet all are temporal and all are passing away. But love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faithfulness, meekness, and temperance are the graces of God, that, though unseen, are eternal, and these are the things which the Spirit of God in infinite love desires to perfect in our lives.

Now if we set the things that are temporal side by side with the things that are eternal, we will soon learn that whatsoever is done to bring temporal things to their fullness will serve without fail to bring desolation and death to all that is eternal within us.

Contrariwise, whatsoever brings to naught the worthless toys of time and sense is at the same time bringing to perfection all things that are eternal. Fire, disaster, and tribulation will divest us only of the things that are earthly even as they divested poor Job of buildings, possessions, herds, and family. But the same tribulation that destroys the temporal will work the grace of patience and bring to fruitfulness all the wonderful blessings of spiritual experience, the best and surest teacher known to mankind. Then hope follows experience, and with hope comes the grace of faithfulness and a face that is unashamed. When we go to the grave, my friend, we will be stripped of all that is temporal, and all our five senses will be no more. Is it not much better that God should try us now that, after He has tried us, we should receive a crown of life?

I am amazed beyond measure at the slavery men endure in their efforts to gather about them all manner of temporal things, knowing, as they surely must, that all these shall fade as a leaf and wither as the green herb.

We spend our health to gain our wealth;
We sweat and toil and save.
We spend our wealth to gain our health,
And all we get's the grave.
We live and work for things we own;
We die, and only get a stone.

It is the Lord who sends our tribulation, for He in love would teach us what true values really are. The Holy Spirit teaches us by much tribulation that by experience we may be complete in all understanding, knowing in truth that "these light afflictions, which are but for a moment, are working for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen; for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal." 2 Cor. 4:17-18 Choose the eternal, then, and let it never slip from your grasp. Hold with a loose grip all things, which belong to this present life, for they are swiftly passing away and withering into nothingness before our eyes.

It is God who worketh in us to will and to do His good pleasure. When our Lord promised that another Comforter would come who would abide with us forever, He made the truth very clear that the Spirit would not only dwell with us, but that He would dwell in us. It is the Holy Spirit who enters the heart of a man when he is born again. It is the Holy Spirit who gives saving faith. It is He who cleanses with the blood, purges with the Spirit, and washes with the washing of regeneration. It is the Holy Spirit who renews the life of God within us, as Paul so beautifully taught when he said: "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to His mercy He saved us, by the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Ghost; which He shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Saviour." Titus 3:5-6 The Holy Spirit is a person. He is God. He indwells the believer with the express purpose of transforming him into the very image of Christ. That is why Paul said, "It is God that worketh in you both to will and to do His good pleasure."

If personal names denote the personality of the Holy Spirit, to an even greater degree do personal ministry, personal acts, and personal treatment manifest to all that He who dwells within us is indeed a person and not merely an influence. The Holy Spirit loves, as I think is evidenced by the fact that the very first fruit of the Spirit is love. Gal. 5:22. The Holy Spirit is given to guide us into all truth; John 16:13; therefore He is a guide. He is given to comfort; therefore He is a comforter. John 14:26 The Holy Spirit makes intercession according to the will of God; therefore He is an intercessor. Rom. 8:26 The Spirit teacheth us all things and is truth; therefore He is a teacher, and all He teaches is truth. 1 John 2:27 He takes the things of God and shows them to us; therefore He is a revealer. John 16:13. He shows us things to come; therefore He is the true source and spirit of prophecy. We will speak of each of these ministries in more particular as time passes, but our thought for the moment is merely to show that only a person can be a teacher, a prophet, a guide, an intercessor, a comforter.

Furthermore, be assured that He who dwells within is a divine person, even God Himself, because personal treatment denotes personality. "Grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption," said Paul. Eph. 4:30 And who but a person could thus be grieved? Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that, which is good to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace unto the hearers... Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice, because these are the things that grieve the Spirit and spoil our experience, bringing us into the dust of desolation; but be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, as God for Christ's sake has forgiven you. See Eph. 4:29-32.

The Holy Spirit says, "Today if ye will hear His voice, harden not your hearts, as in the day of provocation, in the day of temptation in the wilderness, when your fathers tempted Me, proved Me, and saw My works forty years. Wherefore I was grieved with that generation..." Heb. 3:7-10 Nothing grieves the Holy Spirit so intensely as unbelief. I am sure we are right in concluding that unbelief is the blasphemy of the Holy Ghost. It is the one sin that cannot be forgiven in this age. Since all things are of faith, how, then, can forgiveness be found in unbelief? Avoid all unbelief, for what can God do for any man who tempts Him with his unbelief? It was unbelief that caused God to swear that Israel should not enter into His rest. Heb. 3:11 Therefore "take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief 'in departing from the living God." Grieve not the Spirit through this one most damning of all sins.

"Ye stiff-necked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost." were the words of Stephen before his death; and from this statement we conclude that the Holy Spirit can be resisted, and that this personal treatment denotes His personality. It is a damning sin to be unbelieving, but what a dreadful evil is present when men willfully resist that which they know to be the truth! In this resistance against God's Spirit men continue, because the carnal mind is an enemy of God and is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be; so they who are in the flesh cannot please God.

"How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation, which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard Him; God also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to His own will?" Heb. 2:3-4. The salvation, which the Spirit brings can be neglected. The gift which the Spirit gives can be neglected, as the words "neglect not the gift that is in thee", 1 Tim. 4:14, clearly teach. Our neglect of the Spirit and the things of the Spirit is an error that works to our detriment in this age and in that which is to come. It is an error of almost unbelievable magnitude. "The slothful man roasteth not that which he took in hunting," Solomon said. Prov.
12:2. The man who hid his talent in the earth lived to see the day when the Lord said, "Thou wicked and slothful servant." See Matt. 25-26-30 Therefore the Spirit saith, "Be not slothful in business, but fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." It was Felham who said, "Negligence is the rust of the soul that corrodes through all her best resolves," and Shakespeare said, "To persons grafted in a serious trust negligence is a crime."

How often my heart is saddened when people send the message back with the notation, "I have no time to read"; and of course there are many others who have no time to pray, no time to meditate, no time to wait on God, too busy to fast, too tired to pray, too poor to tithe, and too short-sighted to be thankful. All the while the Spirit is saying, "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation." That verse was not written to sinners, though it is to sinners that most preachers direct this text. If we can grasp even in part the marvelous extent of the promises given in Hebrews, chapter 1, then we may understand why the apostle, upon ending his wonderful chain of reasoning, commenced chapter two with the precise adverb "therefore," saying, "Therefore how shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?" It is amazing what wisdom, light, and understanding will come to those who persistently refuse to corrode their souls by neglecting the Spirit.

"It is the Lord," John said in the long ago. "It is the Lord," our voices echo today. "It is God that worketh in you" was the apostle's word. "It is God that worketh in you" is the word today. O, Holy Spirit, faithful and true, teacher and instructor of every heart, open wide the eyes of our understanding that we may know that salvation is not of ourselves, but of the Lord. Gifts and graces are not of man. It is God that worketh in us both to will and to do His good pleasure. Stop us in our tracks and make us know that human effort avails us nothing, but by His Spirit we are changed from glory to glory.

More and more like Him! Repeat the blest story
Over and over again;
Changed by His Spirit from glory to glory,
I shall be satisfied then.

Now, when Jesus had promised the Holy Spirit, He said to His disciples, "I will not leave you comfortless; I will come to you." And again, "I will pray the Father and He shall give you another Comforter, that He may abide with you forever; even the Spirit of truth whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth Him not, neither knoweth Him: but ye know Him, for He dwelleth with you and shall be in you." Let every believer rejoice in the indisputable knowledge that Christ by the Holy Spirit has come to abide in his heart. "Christ in you" is the hope of glory. I pray to God Almighty, whose I am and whom I serve, that He will grant the reader special grace in wisdom and understanding as we read and meditate upon these holy things, that our hearts may be opened and our spiritual minds illumined to grasp the vital truth that it is God who is at work within us. It is that person divine, the Holy Spirit, who from hour to hour and day to day is transforming us into God's image, renewing our spirits in the very likeness of Christ, sanctifying our lives, giving power for service and victory, bringing us to the fullness of adoption as His sons, living His life within us, giving us victory over sin, the world, the flesh, the devil. We are born again, not of the will of man, but of the will of God - not of corruptible seed as at the first, but of incorruptible seed, the Word of God, which liveth and abideth forever. It is God, I tell you! It is the Lord! It is Christ in you, the hope of glory! And what is glory but full sonship in Him?

Be gone forever, ye works of men! Flee ashamed to your hiding place, all forms of self-reformation! Let self-righteousness blush with shame and hide from the wrath of God! If a worm could by self effort or reformation remake itself into the form of a man, then also may man by self effort and reformation transform himself into the likeness of God; but these are things that cannot be. He who in the beginning formed man of the dust of the earth, He who breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, He alone has power and glory to transform that man into the image of God. He alone is the Creator, and He alone can accomplish the task set forth in that eternal decree, "Let Us make man in Our image and after Our likeness." How does it come about that we who say that only God can save us suddenly begin to depend upon ourselves as though some ability were given to the saved to bring about God's likeness? I was deeply impressed recently when I read these words in Acts 15:1: "And certain men which came down from Judea taught the brethren, and said, Except ye be circumcised after the manner of Moses, ye cannot be saved." How can saved men make such silly affirmations as that, as though an insignificant nick in the flesh would determine heaven or hell for a man? And how much more preposterous do such statements appear in view of the fact that God, who knoweth all things, had already sent forth the Holy Spirit into their hearts, filling them with joy and gladness, even as He did the disciples at Pentecost! Acts 15:7-10 In the face of the spiritual witness these men had received, we could as well believe that except we gash our hand we could not be saved.

There comes a time in life and experience when we must see by the Holy Spirit that God is neither interested in nor concerned about ritual and ceremony. He takes no delight in the number of times we attend meetings in a week, nor is He overjoyed with the number of times we read our Bibles in a year, good as such reading may be. He is not interested in hearing about how much we give to the poor nor how faithfully we tithe nor how often we fast. Commendable and good as such devotions are, they will not change the inner man, but should rise as an incense from the life within as naturally as perfume arises from a rose. I am sure you have read the wonderful utterances of David, who, in that far off dispensation when sacrifice and offering were the order of the day for every Israelite by the commandment of God, lifted up his heart in prayerful understanding and said to the Lord, "Thou desirest not sacrifice; else would I give it: Thou delightest not in burnt-offering. The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit; a broken and a contrite heart, O God, Thou wilt not despise." Psa. 51:16-17. David was in fact saying, "Let those offer sacrifices and burnt offerings who live on the level of outward form and ceremony, but, as for me, purge me with hyssop and I shall be clean. Wash me and I shall be whiter than snow. Make me to hear joy and gladness that the bones, which Thou hast broken may rejoice. Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me. Open Thou my lips, and my mouth shall show forth Thy praises." These are the sacrifices of righteousness. These are the bullocks upon the altar of God.

Learn, O brother, and understand, O sister, that it is God who worketh in you. It is the Lord, that divine person, the Holy Spirit, whose divine names, divine acts, divine graces, divine ministries all indubitably hail Him, not only as person, but as God Himself, dwelling, living, and abiding in the believer's heart. It is because God is dwelling in you that you have become the habitation of God through the Spirit. Because the Holy Spirit dwells within, you are the mystical church, "My Father's house", and you in person have become a mansion or abiding place in that house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

In conclusion there is another thought we must introduce here. God is working in us to this end: to will and to do His good pleasure. We are not our own; we are bought with a price. Therefore seek not your own will, but let God be glorified in your body and in your spirit, which belong to God. No man knows God's will of himself It is the Holy Spirit who knows God's will, and He abides in us. Is not this what Paul was saying when he said, "Likewise the Spirit helpeth our infirmities: for we know not what we should pray for as we ought: but the Spirit Himself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered. And He that searcheth the hearts (the Father) knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit (the Holy Spirit), because He maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God." Rom. 8:26-27

If we know not what to pray for as we ought, the only effectual prayer is the prayer we pray in the Spirit; and I am perfectly convinced that the man who dwells in the Spirit will also pray in the Spirit and that without ceasing. Not only will his lips breathe out the will and mind of God in prayer, but his very life will be the out-breathing of God's will. So often I have said and written that there is but one element to real faith, and that one element is the will of God. He who walks in the will of God will walk the stormy waters with Jesus, remove the difficult mountain, or tear up the sycamore tree by the roots, for nothing shall be impossible to him who walks in God's will. He who walks in God's will never attempts anything that savors of his own mind or his own will.

The will of God is His good pleasure. It is the good pleasure of God that is being done in your life by the Holy Spirit. Cease, I pray you, from damning the circumstances about you. Cease from moaning over your difficult estate. Complain no more of lions' dens, fiery furnaces, or of feet that are hurting with fetters. It is not the devil who is making life miserable for you. It is the Lord working in you both to will and to do His good pleasure.

Before the ages were formed or ever the world began, before God breathed into Adam the breath of life, He saw every man in Christ. He beheld every man perfect. He rejoiced in the final triumph of His labor, the perfection of all things. His eye-lids tried all the interim years in which with longsuffering and infinite care He would break and melt and mould and shape the vessels and fashion them after His pre-arranged and predestined plan. We feel the crushing hammer blows now; He sees the breaking. We feel the sting of the burning, fiery furnace; He sees the melting, the separation of the gold from the useless dross. We sense the fearful hurt of the molding; He sees a vessel, perfect, finished, and fit for the Master's eternal use. How great it is to look beyond the trial of the beginning to the joys of the end! How precious to send the vision soaring far above the dank and dismal valleys to God's beautiful mount of perfection where "saviours shall come up on mount Zion to judge the mount of Esau; and the kingdom shall be the Lord's!" Obadiah 21

The Holy Spirit is a person. The Holy Spirit is God. It is God who worketh in us to will and to do His good pleasure. Oh that from the fathomless depths of our spirits our voices may re-echo the words John whispered on that wonderful morning so long ago, "It is the Lord!"

As the stream of time is rushing on to the boundless ocean of eternity and the evening sun is sinking toward the horizon of this the sixth day of man's labor, the lengthening shadows herald the certainty that the nightmarish rule of corrupt and carnal man is near its end. The sun, which God set to rule man's little day, will finally bid the earth its last adieu that the Sun of righteousness may arise forever with healing in His wings.

Deep shadows creep along the country lanes And birds are winging homeward to their nests. Bright little lights wink out from window panes, And bid the weary toiler home to rest.

The approaching end of the age is bringing into focus all the awesome predictions foretold by God through seers and sages, beginning with Moses and all the prophets, clearly stated by our Lord Jesus Christ, and confirmed by the Holy Spirit in His apostles. To all who have eyes to see and hearts to understand it should be evident beyond the realm of the least doubt that these are the days of vengeance. These are the days of the fulfillment of all things spoken concerning the end of the age. The startling things we now see, the defiant and mocking voices we now hear, the appalling circumstances, which we cannot control declare with great plainness of speech that the end of the age is at hand. Tribulation is even now in our midst and a time of trouble such as the world has never known is even now upon us.

Dare any man doubt that we are now re-living the days of Noah? Is it not evident beyond the slightest word of argument that as it was in the days before the flood so it is now? The infallible testimony written of the days of Noah so long ago now reads like a condensation of today's newspaper. "The earth was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence. And God looked upon the earth, and, behold, it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth." Gen. 6:11-12 These things have their background in a corruption forbidden of God and hateful in His sight. The sons of God, mingling with the daughters of men, brought forth giants in the earth, terrible men of renown who increased the wickedness of the earth until it knew no bounds.

In our day the world is also full of giants. We find them in the political world and we find them in the religious world. The Roman Pope, the giant religious leader of five hundred million souls, extends his hand of friendship to the giant leaders of bloody and godless communism. World renowned evangelists (men of renown. Gen. 6:4) receive cloaks and honor from cardinals and praise the merits of ecumenism. If there ever was a time since Noah's day when the sons of God mingled with the daughters of men it is certainly now. The towering giants produced by this sordid union are in large part responsible for the abounding corruption and staggering violence so typical of the system of the swaggering and drunken harlot of Babylon.

We would indeed be very foolish to close our eyes to the ever increasing signs of the end of the age, but I must confess that as time passes I for one am losing interest in them. There is something of much greater importance than these outward passing things, and it is toward this greater realm that our thoughts should now be turned. As I consider the days of Noah, abounding with crime and violence and the mingling of the sons of God with the daughters of men, incurring the judgment of God upon the world, I am persuaded that in the heart and mind of Noah, that one man who alone was righteous before God, there was one thing more important than all else, and that one thing was the building of the ark which God had told him to prepare against the day of judgment and tribulation which was to come. Had Noah wasted his time concentrating his efforts against the wickedness of his day, he would probably have been drowned with the rest of the world. God had not commanded him to save the world and turn these sinners back to God. He had commanded him to build an ark to save his house. I know I will run afoul of thousands when I say that Christians today are concentrating on the wrong things. God has not commanded us to save the world, but to dwell and abide in Him who is greater far than the ark of Noah's building. "It is in Him, and through the shedding of His blood, that we have our deliverance - the forgiveness of our offences - so abundant was God's grace, the grace which He, the possessor of all wisdom and understanding, lavished upon us, when He made known to us the secret of His will. And this is in harmony with God's merciful purpose for the government of the world when the times are ripe for it - the purpose which He has cherished in His own mind of restoring the whole creation to find its one Head in Christ; yes, things in heaven and things on earth, to find their one Head in Him. In Him, too, we have been made heirs, having been chosen beforehand in accordance with the intention of Him whose might carries out in everything the design of His own will, so that we should be devoted to the extolling of His glorious attributes - we who were the first to fix our hopes on Christ." Eph. 1:7-12 (Weymouth) The most important project in the earth today is not the vast expensive program to put a man on the moon nor the futile efforts of men to provide food for an exploding world population nor yet is it any one of a hundred other grand notions of humankind. The most important project in the world and the thing by far most important in the eyes of God is the formation of that true and mystical church, that wonderful ark which is in truth the body of Christ. There are almost endless millions of people today talking about the church, but for all their talk they are looking at the wrong thing. They are looking at a harlot system, which defiantly calls herself the church, calling herself by Christ's name to take away her reproach, but in no sense is she the church which is His body. In no sense is she the ecclesia, the called out ones. There are tens of thousands of people and preachers without number who are full of talk and sermons about the body of Christ, but they have never seen by the Spirit what the body of Christ really is. They have adopted theories, imbibed traditions, and latched on to teachings, but there is something revolutionary and unspeakably different when our spirits are made alive to the awful and solemn truth that, in like manner as the Holy Spirit over-shadowed the virgin Mary to form within her a man in God's own image, a Son ordained to be the living habitation of God, so now His overshadowing presence is forming a vast family of sons who in that same image of Christ will form one body of sons, who forever and ever will be the habitation of God through the Spirit. God Himself shall live in them and walk in them and they shall be His sons that in coming ages He might subdue all things unto Himself through them. These He has also chosen and ordained in His own divine way and through His infinite wisdom to be the fullness and completeness of His Christ - even the mystical body of Christ.

What purpose other than this could have been in the divine mind when He came to us by the Holy Spirit and planted the incorruptible Christ seed in the womb of our spirit and we were born anew - not of the will of men, not of the will of the flesh - but born of God? The purpose of God when His creative Spirit overshadowed the virgin in the long ago, planting the Christ seed in her womb, was that she might bring forth the Christ. And shall not we who are born of that same incorruptible seed, the living word of God, see the Christ come to maturity within us, first the blade, then the ear, and afterward the full corn in the ear? The hour is at hand for those who believe it when it shall be no longer "I", but "Christ", and the life, which we now live in the flesh shall be lived by the faith of the Son of God, who loved us and gave Himself for us. The "I" has been crucified; the "Christ" has been born. The old is passing away. Behold, all things are becoming new. With every breath, we breathe in Christ and breathe out self till Christ is all and in all to us.

In our understanding of spiritual things there is a handy key which will open the door of understanding to many a secret. It is this: All natural things have their spiritual counterparts. For example the planting of the seed whether natural or spiritual brings forth after its kind. But it is equally true that spiritual things are opposite to natural things. For example, the natural man who would exalt self advertises, brags, and keeps his picture and name before the eyes and thoughts of the people, but in the Spirit it is "he who humbleth himself that shall be exalted. In the natural realm the man who would be rich hoards his money and gathers to himself as much as possible of this world's goods, but in the Spirit the rule is, "Give, and it shall be given unto you, good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over..." Thus it is written: The first man (Adam) is of the earth earthy. The second man (Christ) is the Lord from heaven. And again: The first man was made a living soul, but the second man is a life giving Spirit.

If we bear in mind this simple rule, we will have no trouble understanding how it was that, when the Christ seed was planted in the physical womb of the virgin, the purpose was to bring forth the incarnate Christ. Incarnation means "in flesh". Therefore at the appointed time she brought forth the incarnate Christ and He was separated from her. But, when the incorruptible seed is planted in the believing heart, the purpose is no longer to bring forth flesh and blood, but to bring forth Christ after the Spirit. Therefore He shall not be separated from the believer as He was from Mary, but shall increase within him, until He possesses spirit, soul, and body and he, the believer, will say, "It is not I, but Christ." Therefore, if any man be in Christ, he is a new creation. Old things have passed away and, behold, all things become new. The mind of Christ begins to dwell in that man until the mind of Christ is his mind and his own mind has been put away. The life of Christ dwells in him until the life he now lives in the flesh is lived by the faith of the Son of God, who loved us and gave Himself for us. Therefore it is written: "As we have born the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly." 1 Cor. 15:49

The greatest hindrance to the growth and maturity of the incorruptible seed is the incessant intrusion of the big "I", the giant ego. We want Christ, but we want self to live also. We want to possess the gifts, but not the Giver. We want to possess Christ, but we don't want Him to possess us. Whatever happens, we insist upon preserving self. We always take good care of the "I", but it is only when we begin to live the "not I, but Christ" life that all things are freely ours.
If the Spirit of God will help us, surely we will not fail to clearly understand that the most important thing imaginable now and forever is our personal relationship to Jesus Christ. All that can be done of good works and mighty deeds outside of Him falls under the category of filthy rags and works of iniquity. Truly shall God's Son speak in His displeasure on the Day of Judgment, saying, "I never knew you; depart from Me ye that work iniquity (rebellion)." It is in Him and through the shedding of His blood that we have our redemption. God has made Him to be all things to all men. Therefore let all who read these things know assuredly that not only has God made Him both Lord and Christ but all else besides, for His Spirit has declared and His word agrees that "God has made His Son, Jesus Christ, unto us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption." 1 Cor. 1:30

We are not taught by the apostle that we are to receive our wisdom from Christ as a student would receive wisdom from an instructor. We are taught the fathomless fact that Christ Himself is our wisdom. In Him are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge, Col. 2:3, and wisdom that dwells apart from Him is foolishness with God. 1 Cor. 3:19 We will never attain to the wisdom of God by attending the universities and colleges of this world. Wisdom does not come to our hearts from the pages of books nor from the lips of clever instructors. God's wisdom comes in Him, whom God hath made unto us wisdom. "How knoweth this man letters, having never learned?" demanded the Jews as Christ taught them the wonderful wisdom of God. John 7:15 And to their question Jesus replied, "My doctrine is not Mine, but His that sent Me. If any man will do His will, He shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God or whether I speak of Myself. He that speaketh of himself seeketh his own glory, but he that seeketh His glory that sent him, the same is true, and no unrighteousness is in him."

Let your mind grasp this truth: Wisdom is not a thing but a person, and that person is none other than Jesus Christ. Wisdom is not an abstract noun. He is our wisdom. God hath made Him wisdom. The great and wise King Solomon realized that wisdom was not some abstract thing, but a person, for, when writing of wisdom, he used the pronoun "I", saying, "The Lord possessed me in the beginning of His way, before His works of old. I was set up from everlasting, from the beginning, or ever the earth was. When there were no depths, I was brought forth; when there were no fountains abounding with water. Before the mountains were settled, before the hills was I brought forth: while as yet He had not made the earth, nor the fields, or the highest part of the dust of the world. When He prepared the heavens, I was there: when He set a compass upon the face of the depth: when He established the clouds above: when He strengthened the fountains of the deep: when He gave to the sea His decree, that the waters should not pass His commandment: when He appointed the foundations of the earth: Then was I by Him, as one brought up with Him: and I was daily His delight, rejoicing always before Him; rejoicing in the habitable part of His earth; and my delights were with the sons of men. Now therefore hearken unto me, O ye children: for blessed are they that keep my ways. Hear instruction, and be wise, and refuse it not. Blessed is the man that heareth me, watching daily at my gates, waiting at the posts of my doors. For whoso findeth me findeth life, and shall obtain favor of the Lord. But he that sinneth against me wrongeth his own soul: all they that hate me love death." Prov. 8:22-36

Jesus Christ is the wisdom of God, and God has made Him to be our wisdom also. When Paul wrote the remarkable words, "Let this mind dwell in you which was also in Christ Jesus", he was telling the saints of God that their only hope of wisdom lay in the casting away of their own minds that the mind of Christ should dwell in them. The mind that dwelt in Christ Jesus was the Father's mind. Christ possessed the wisdom of God because God the Father dwelt in Him. Likewise also we shall possess the wisdom of God because of the Christ who dwells in us. He Himself has spoken, saying, "If any man love Me, he will keep My words; and My Father will love him, and We will come unto him and make Our abode with him." John 14:23 It is not God's will that His Son, Jesus Christ, should dwell in some remote corner of our being, hidden among the rubble of our lives as Rachel hid her father's gods among the camels' furniture, Gen. 31:34, but Christ must be crowned Lord and Master of our lives. He must reign now as King upon the throne since the kingdom of God is even now within us, and His sitting upon the throne will be complete when His mind is in possession and our minds have been cast away. No man can ever claim to be fully Christ's possession while his own mind remains in control, but when the mind of Christ shall dwell in us, ordering and directing God's kingdom within, then we are fully His, and God has made Christ to be our wisdom.
Tens of thousands of people today are fully aware that the abounding distress, turmoil, upheaval, and senseless violence in this modern world, together with all sin and iniquity, are the direct result of the dominion of the carnal mind of man, which is basically and thoroughly corrupt according to every deceitful lust. And there are multitudes who know full well that, when the dispensation of the kingdom of God spreads its light over the earth, all its intrinsic glory and wonder will flow forth like a river from the mind of Christ, and many ten thousands there are who hope in that day to reign with Him in His glory. Though we may entertain great hope of reigning with Christ in His kingdom, have our minds grasped the meaningful significance of the words of our Lord, "The kingdom of God is within you"? Luke 17:21 In this evil world in which we presently dwell there are many kings and presidents, dictators and emperors, but none of them have ever possessed a universal kingdom. None among them can reign as lord supreme, but in their selfish clamor, strife and bloodshed, war and rebellion are ever with us. But, when at last the kingdom of God's Christ has come, then shall His will be done in all the earth even as it is now done in heaven. Then those who reign with Him will have their part in putting down all other rule and all other authority. 1 Cor. 15:24 "For He must reign till He hath put all enemies under His feet ... And when all things shall be subdued unto Him, (the Son), then shall the Son also Himself be subject unto Him (the Father) that put all things under Him, that God may be all in all." 1 Cor. 15:25, 28

Let us then take heed to the words of our faithful Lord when He spoke, saying, "The kingdom of God is within you." It is within you and within me that God's kingdom has its first beginning. When all things within you and all things within me have been subdued unto Christ, when all our inner enemies are under His feet, when the mind of Christ dwells in us and our whole life is ordered and directed by the mind of Christ, then and then only are we fit to sit with Christ Jesus in His glorious kingdom throne, subduing all the world to Him. How could any man possibly imagine that one could reign with Christ in the glorious and universal kingdom who has not first submitted himself as a willing and obedient subject of the kingdom of God now being set up within himself? The man who does not let the mind of Christ dwell in him now has no hope - no hope, I repeat - of ruling with Christ in the age to come. He who has not submitted himself to the rule and mind of Christ in this age can never hope to dispense God's law and God's will in the kingdom age to come. How truly ring the words of the apostle Paul: "The husbandman that laboreth must be first partaker of the fruit. Consider what I say; and the Lord give thee understanding in all things." 2 Tim. 2:6. Consider it well. Consider it thoroughly, and may the Lord fill you with understanding.

The more our hearts bow down in meditation upon the seriousness of these eternal things the more we are brought face to face with the solemn dignity of our personal relationship and association with Jesus Christ. God has made His Son all things to us. He has made Him to be both Lord and Christ. Acts 2:36 He is the image of the invisible God, the firstborn of every creature. By Him were all things created that are in heaven and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones or dominions, or principalities, or powers; all things were created by Him, and for Him: and He is before all things, and by Him all things consist. And He is the Head of the body, the church: who is the beginning, the firstborn from the dead; that in all things He might have the pre-eminence. For it pleased the Father that in Him should all fullness dwell. Col. 1:15-19 Neither by the eloquence of words nor by the beauty of phrases can we say more plainly or more emphatically than this that it is our personal association and participation with Christ that counts above all else. Our association with denominations or sects is as useless as the chaff that the wind driveth away. Our association with Christ Jesus is as gold tried in the fire. It is better than rubies, and all the things that may be desired are not to be compared with it. O ye simple, understand wisdom; and ye fools, be of an understanding heart! Receive my instruction and not silver, and my knowledge rather than choice gold. Let this mind dwell in you which was also in Christ Jesus, for God has made His name to be the greatest authority in the universe that at the name of Jesus every knee shall bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth.

There are many false christs in the earth in our day, who blind the minds of men and hinder them from fully trusting in God's one and only Christ. Chief among the false christs are the religious denominations and sects that number legion among us. Under the flimsy shadow of their frail wing men put their confidence, trusting in their energetic prophets who, instead of directing men to follow Christ, all too often direct their minds toward busy programs, inspired by their own personal ambitions. Jesus warned us that one of the great signs of the end of the age would be the existence of many false christs and many false prophets. Matt. 24:11, 24 Why then do we who believe that Jesus was the greatest prophet who ever lived bury our silly heads in the proverbial sand while we steadfastly refuse to recognize that the pulpits of the land are as full of false prophets.
today as were the groves and high places in the days of Elijah? And, when Elijah comes, he will come against these false prophets even as he came against the prophets of Baal in the long ago.

Turn then from these vanities, for Jesus is God's only Christ, the head and firstborn of a vast family of sons who, because of their loving subjection to Him, are now rising in His image. Turn away your faces from the false christs of denominationalism, the heads of which on June 10th, 1969, met in Geneva, Switzerland, with the Pope of Rome. Must our eyes be so dim that we are blinded to the fact that the great multi-headed beast system spoken of in Revelation (read Rev. 13) is now rising to its full stature? Are God's sons unaware that the hour is at hand when none shall buy or sell or preach or write without the permission of this beast system?
Rev. 13:15-17. This system will be replete with all signs and wonders, healings, tongues, prophecies, and all the rest. They will be full of the very things they rejected in the hour when God was pouring out of His Spirit, but their wonders are lying wonders. 2 Thess. 2:9-10 The hour is at hand when men shall call fire down from heaven to deceive all that dwell upon the earth and the image of the Beast will open his mouth to speak blasphemy against God - a thing which, in my opinion, he is already doing; for these lying systems that insist upon calling themselves the church are in truth blasphemers of God, denying the infallibility of God's word, the virgin birth of Christ, the divinity of the Lord, the power of His blood, the truth of the resurrection, the ascension and return of Christ. In these dread hours when the cup of iniquity is full and the swaggering harlot system is drunk with the blood of God's saints, we may well thank God for the elect few now scattered in the four corners of the globe who have made Christ their hope, their refuge, and their high tower. He alone is the solid rock.
Through the shedding of His blood we have our redemption; neither is there salvation in any other, for there is no other name under heaven, given among men, whereby we must be saved.

Jesus is all this poor world needs today. Blindly they strive, for sin darkens the way. Oh, to draw back the grim curtains of night! One glimpse of Jesus and all would be bright.

In these tremendous days when the Spirit of God is calling His elect people to leave the harlot systems of religions, saying, "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters," let the minds of God's saints be illumined that they may clearly see that all their hope for time and eternity is wrapped up in the person of God's Son, Jesus Christ our Lord. In Jesus Christ and in Him alone has God given us all things. With great reverence and fear I make these solemn affirmations. It is not salvation men need. It is Christ. There is no other name under heaven, given among men, whereby we must be saved. It is not healing we need. It is Christ; for if the Spirit of Him who raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in us, He that raised up Christ shall make alive our mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in us. Rom. 8:11 It is not wisdom we need. It is Jesus Christ, for God has made Him to be wisdom unto us. It is not righteousness we need. It is Jesus Christ, whom God hath made unto us righteousness. Neither is it sanctification, the subject of so many sermons, that we need. It is Jesus Christ, whom God hath made unto us both sanctification and redemption. 1 Cor. 1:30

On every hand we hear men and women sighing for faith. If only I had faith to believe God for healing or for deliverance or some other blessing, how wonderful it would be! No, my friend, you are quite wrong. It is not faith you need. It is Christ. When the lame man was healed at the temple gate and all men marveled, Peter said, "The faith which is by Him (Jesus) has given this perfect soundness in the presence of you all." Acts 3:16
"By grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God." Eph. 2:8 Every gift of God, my brother or sister, is wrapped up in the person of God's Christ and is inseparable from Him. "He that spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things?" Rom. 8:32

For many years A. B. Simpson suffered the trials of a weak and infirm body, but, when at last he was led of the Spirit to receive his life and strength from Christ, a dear friend said to him, "You were healed by faith." "Oh, no," Simpson replied. "I was healed by Christ." And what he answered was surely true. It is not faith healing we need. It is Christ the healer. Men are always trying to build up faith or, worse still, they are trying to work it up, hoping against hope that, when they get their faith worked up to a sufficiently high pitch, they will be able to suddenly release it to seize the prize and carry it off captive with them. For this very reason men everywhere rin from city to city and from country to country, seeking out men who advertise themselves as men of great fait, capable of praying the prayer of faith for just about anything their clientele demands. It's a great moneymaking racket, performed by racketeers beyond the reach of the law. It is the greatest moneymaker because "all that a man hath will he give for his life." But it is not the prayer of faith we need, my brother. It is Jesus Christ who with Himself freely gives us all things.

In reading the word of God, have you noticed that the words "Him" and "Himself are given a place of outstanding prominence? "For as the Father hath life in Himself, so hath He given to the Son to have life in Himself, and hath given Him authority to execute judgment also, because He is the Son of man." John 5:26-27. There is no life apart from Himself. In Adam all die, because there is no life in Adam. It is only in Christ Himself that all are made alive. "Lord, we know not whither Thou goest, and how can we know the way?" sighed doubting Thomas. "I am the way, the truth, and the life," replied Jesus. He does not give life, my friend, my brother. He Himself is life, and beside Him there is no life. "I give unto them eternal life, and they shall never perish," Jesus said; but is it not entirely true that this life eternal is Christ Himself, who said, "And this is life eternal, that they might know Thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom Thou hast sent"? John 17:3 He who would receive eternal life may only receive it by receiving Jesus Christ. "He who hath the Son hath life and he who hath not the Son of God hath not life." John 5:12 "In Him was life; and the life was the light of men. And the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehended it not" — that is, darkness cannot comprehend light. John 1:4, 5. Men who live in the darkness of their traditions are never able to comprehend that Christ is all and in all. They must be forever trying to grasp more and more things as gifts from His hands, never quite understanding that God, who made His Son the Alpha and the Omega, the A and the Z, has also made Him to be all the other letters of the alphabet as well that all heavenly riches may be embraced in Him.

"And when the even was come, they brought unto Him many that were possessed with devils: and He cast out the spirits with His word, and healed all that were sick: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, Himself took our infirmities and bare our sicknesses." Matthew 8:16 Himself! Himself! Himself! took our infirmities: Himself bare our sins! Christ has given us all these things in Himself and nothing apart from Himself.

"Our fathers did eat manna in the wilderness," said the Jews; but Jesus replied, "My Father giveth you the true bread from heaven; for the bread of God is He which cometh down from heaven and giveth life unto the world. Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness and are dead. This is the bread that cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof and not die. I am the living bread which came down from heaven; if any man eat of this bread, he shall live forever." See John 6:22-59 When Paul wrote to the Galatian Christians, he used the joyful greeting, "Grace be to you and peace from God the Father, and from our Lord Jesus Christ, who gave Himself for our sins, that we might be delivered from this present evil world, according to the will of God and our Father." Galatians 1:3-4 When he explained our identification with Christ in His cross and the resulting transformation that took place, he said, "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless, I live; yet not I, but Christ, liveth in me and the life which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God who loved me and gave Himself for me." Galatians 2:20 And to the Ephesians he wrote: "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave Himself for it, that He might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word." Ephesians 5:25-26 He gave Himself for our sins to deliver us from the present evil world. He gave Himself for me that I might be delivered from myself to be identified with Him and live with Him; and He gave Himself for the whole church, which He loved, that it might be sanctified and cleansed by the water of life and by the word of God and presented to Himself.

From time immemorial there has been a dividing wall between Jew and Gentile. Strife, envy, jealousy, war and persecution have been their lot. Neither League of Nations, the United Nations, nor any treaty can overcome a hatred so deep-seated. It is the ancient animosity descended from Jacob and Esau, sharpened by years and multiplied by millions. "Peace, peace," the nations cry; but there is no peace in the hearts of men who daily clamor for possession of the weak and beggarly things of this present evil world. Where enmity holds its dreadful sway, the dove of peace can find no rest for the sole of her foot. But peace there will be, for He has said, "Peace I leave with you; My peace I give unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." It was upon the foundation of this great knowledge that Paul was able to boldly declare to a world full of strife and envy, "He is our peace who hath made both one and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us; having abolished in His flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances, for to make in Himself of twain one new man, so making peace ... for through Him we both have access by one Spirit unto the Father." Eph. 2:14, 16, 18

One would indeed need to be a silver-tongued orator or a writer with a golden pen to describe the glory that shall descend like a mantle upon the world when He Himself becomes the peace of the whole world. We have become so accustomed to peace conferences, disarmament conferences, wars and rumors of war, that we take it as a matter of course, knowing full well in ourselves that nations who go to the disarmament conference with one battleship will come home with two and nations who had one cannon will return with two. But peace universal and serene is coming, and it is coming in Himself and in no other. How our tired hearts long for that blessed kingdom morning when men shall learn war no more, when lame men shall leap as the hart and the tongue of the dumb shall sing, when nothing shall hurt or destroy in all God's holy mountain, for men shall have become one in Himself and His knowledge shall fill the earth as the waters fill the sea!

Well may we hymn God's praise because of the glory of His purpose in all the earth, but know this, oh man: God had in mind and purpose realms much greater than the earth when He declared His intention to reconcile all things to Himself by His Son. The false prophets, dwelling and preaching among us, have blinded the eyes of many believers to the greatness of Christ's redemption and God's purpose in Him. The minds of men have been confined to such a narrow channel that they can scarcely believe that Christ is the redeemer of any except a chosen few who by their own striving have made themselves acceptable in His sight. But "it pleased the Father that in Him should all fullness dwell, and having made peace through the blood of His cross, by Him to reconcile all things unto Himself; by Him, I say, whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven." Col. 1:19, 20

Why do people who profess to believe the word of God fly into a fury, write nasty, sarcastic letters, and cast us out of their midst because they dare to tell them that by Him and "through the blood of His cross" God will reconcile "all things", whether they be things in heaven or earth or under the earth, and that every knee in heaven and earth and under the earth shall bow at (in) the name of Jesus Christ? How small and insignificant these false prophets rendered the mighty Lord of heaven and earth! How frail have they made His omnipotence, how shortsighted His omniscience, how vacillating His immutability, how loveless His love, how merciless His mercy! Surely the God they serve is one to be placed on the mantelpiece and their Christ is but a doll in a manger! It is time to shake ourselves free from the corrupting influences of religious systems of whatsoever name or creed they be that we might behold the glory of God our Father, who in His greatness holds the universe He has made in the hollow of His hand, and the glory of Christ our Redeemer, who has in His cross even now reconciled all things to Himself.

Nowhere in scripture do we ever read of God's being reconciled to man, but that He through the blood of His cross has reconciled all things to Himself. Col. 1:20 He gave Himself & ransom, 1 Tim. 2:6, when He gave Himself for us. Titus 2:14 By Himself He purged our sins away. Heb. 1:3. Himself suffered and was tempted for us, Heb. 2:18, when He offered Himself a sacrifice to God for our sins. Heb. 7:27 And should it seem strange to any of us that, having accomplished such a mighty redemption by which He has reconciled all things unto Himself, He should also present the church to Himself & glorious church without spot or wrinkle or any such thing, Eph. 5:27, and that He Himself should become the chief cornerstone, or better still the headstone of it? Yet in all these things "Christ pleased not Himself" but received in Himself every reproach of the human race.

In these the final hours of man's sixth day we have become very much aware that everything in the universe is a satellite of something greater about which it unceasingly orbits. The moon is a satellite of the earth about which it continually orbits. The moon with the earth and the other planets are in their vast orbit about the sun, and the sun and our great universe are in orbit around the Pleiades. Even your own physical body is a universe of orbiting atoms, each revolving around the other. But what, my friend and brother, is the sun and center of your universe? Does your life revolve around a religious system that dares to call itself a church? Or does your life revolve around that Son of all the universe, Jesus Christ Himself? Has Christ, the Sun of righteousness, been lost to you in the cloudy skies of church activity, attending meetings, listening to sermons, giving to missions, building buildings, and other things so numerous that they cannot be numbered at all? Has the church system become the axis about which you continually orbit? Then, my friend, you are definitely wrong.
You have forgotten that the true saints are the church and that the center of their universe is the Sun of righteousness, the Son of God, Jesus Christ Himself.

I will not gain friends for myself when I tell you in the sincerity of my heart that the system which men everywhere call the church is that one and self-same Babylon of confusion described so thoroughly in Revelation, chapters 17 and 18. She has become chief among all false christs and false prophets in this the end of the age. Her sun and center is not Himself but herself, who even now boasts of the vast increase of her riches and resources, now estimated in excess of five hundred billion dollars. She boasts of her works, her programs, her alms deeds. Her radio and T.V. programs often exalt the person of an individual man of flesh and blood. Her magazines at times display a dozen pictures of one great man or one gifted woman, but Christ, the bread of life, is not exalted; neither is He given to the hungry multitude. When, oh Christian, will you learn that today all about us and on every hand false prophets and false christs are claiming the attention of the people until the people are as deceived today by them as Israel was deceived by the prophets of Baal in the days of the wicked Jezebel?

Wherefore saith God, "Come out from among them and be separate, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters." God cannot receive you or call you sons and daughters as long as you bury your life among the systems of religion. They are abomination in His sight, because your life is centered about them instead of Himself.

One wonderful day, the last day of the Feast of Tabernacles in old Jerusalem, Jesus our Lord stood up and cried aloud to the people: "If any man thirst, let him come unto Me, and drink. He that believeth on Me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water." John 7:37-38. That, oh child of God, is the secret of eternal blessedness. Our faith and relationship to Jesus Christ makes us the source of rivers of living waters, ceaseless in their silent flow forever and ever and ever. It is not our relationship to systems or our faith in human programs of whatsoever sort or magnitude they may be that sends forth the gushing streams of life. The secret of eternal blessing is found in our relationship to Himself.

High upon the massive shoulders of our towering Rocky Mountains there rests innumerable cold, forbidding glaciers. Embraced within their frozen bosoms are countless millions of tons of ice, continually replenished by the freezing rains and eternal snows that fall in summer and winter upon them. As the summer sun shines upon them, they pour their turbulent steams down the mountain slopes to join their watery hands with the laughing brooks in the valley far below until together as a serene and mighty river they wend their wonderful way through the endless prairies and parched deserts, irrigating the farms, racing through the turbines, watering the thirsty fields, making glad the birds and fishes and those who love to play on the broad breasts of the lakes, and onward, ever onward, to the boundless ocean of God. But what of the silent glaciers from whence these living waters flow? Why, they do nothing at all except to be glaciers! And that is the way, Jesus said, it is with you and me who believe on Him as the scripture has said. All we need in this life or in the glory of the life to come is just to be sons of God, who believe - not as man hath said, not as the systems teach - but who believe on Him as the scripture hath said.

In these last times, these days when any hour may be the last before He appears, may He Himself become the center of your universe, the center of your life as you present yourself to Himself.
CHAPTER ONE
THE SEVEN SPIRITS OF SONSHIP

"My beloved spake, and said unto me, Rise up, my love, my fair one, and come away. For, lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone; the flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land; the fig tree putteth forth her green figs, and the vines with the tender grape give a good smell. Arise, my love, my fair one, and come away." S. of S. 2:10-13

The winter is past; the rain is over and gone. Winter is the season of the year when all things lie dormant in a state of typical death. It is a time when trees are stripped of their leaves and fruit is forgotten, when the flowers die, song birds fly away, and even great beasts hibernate in dens of the earth. Winter is a time when men's lives are sustained only by that which has been stored away, and should it continue long, all things would perish from the earth.

The six dispensations from innocence to grace have for mankind been a long, dreary winter of death. They have been a time of great and dreadful death when all but a few of the human race have been in a state of spiritual sleep. The heavens, once wide open to Adam, have remained closed since the fall while men have groveled in gross darkness and appalling ignorance, knowing not that all about them a radiant, eternal world of light and glory and liberty shines with a brightness of a million suns.

Now when anyone falls asleep, a strange thing happens to him. Except for his breathing he is in a state of death. Realities are shut out from him. He knows neither where he is nor who he is. Whether he is alone or in company he knows not. Friends and acquaintances, sickness, pain and joy are all forgotten to the sleeper, for he like the dead knows not anything.

It may be hard for you to understand what I now tell you, for sleep may hide it from your eyes, yet some will surely understand that a glorious awakening is even now at the door. Long ago in lovely Eden, we are told in Holy Scripture, God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam. Gen. 2. In that sleep all things were shut out from him. The glory of the angels, the magnificence of the eternal world, wisdom and understanding with counsel and might were obliterated by the deepening stupor that fell upon him. Knowledge was gone, and even the wonderful glory of God's presence was shut out from him so that he knew not anything of the eternal realm and little, indeed, of the natural realm.

The omissions of God's word are often as important as forthright statements, and here I think we have an omission of tremendous importance. Though it is said that a deep sleep fell upon Adam, it is not said that...
Adam ever awoke from the deep sleep that came upon him. All his remaining nine hundred years he remained dead asleep to eternal things. Certainly I could be wrong, but I myself am convinced that never again were the heavens open to Adam as heretofore, and never again did any of his posterity completely walk in all the light and presence and glory of God until that wonderful day when Jesus Christ, the second Adam, was baptized in Jordan and the heavens opened to Him, and, being opened to Him, they never more closed except for that one awful hour as He suffered vicariously on the cross of Calvary.

There is much more to the fall of man than at first appears to the casual reader. Adam, being both male and female in one, was a Son of God and perfect. He was like unto that blessed company who at last shall be in Christ, for in Christ there is neither male nor female, but sons of God, for sons of God are male and female in one as it was in the beginning. What need had Adam for a mate like unto the beasts of the field? He, being a son of God, possessed that perfect chaste virgin within himself and could have replenished the whole earth with his kind in God's image by a word of power as God by a word had willed him into existence in the beginning. But, as the beasts were brought before Adam to be named every male with his female, he must have imagined after the outward and fleshly to be as the beasts instead of after the inward to be as God. Therefore it is said, "But for Adam there was not found a help meet for him." Gen. 2:20 Thus the deep sleep fell upon him and in his sleep the virgin, the female, was taken from him to be presented to him from without in another form, to be possessed even as the beasts possessed their mates, and the children that were brought forth in travail and in pain were not brought forth in the image of God as Adam had been, but in the image of Adam himself, who had imagined after the outward to be even as the beasts.

If we separate heat from cold, we have two dangerous things - fire and frost - either of which will kill us, yet, joined together, they are beautiful and harmless. If we separate judgment from mercy, we have sadism on the one hand and confusion on the other, but joined together we have peace. Positive together with negative is powerful and useful, but either one alone is helpless. So also, while male and female were one in one Adam, there was a pure virgin sonship and harmony with God; but, separated the one from the other as the beasts, the door was opened wide for all disobedience with its attendant train of sin and death. Thus, when Eve was tempted by the serpent, she was no match for his satanic wisdom, for, when male was separated from female, wisdom was separated from understanding. Hence she, being separated from the knowledge of God that dwelt in Adam, became a prey to the knowledge of good and evil, and Adam, likewise no longer possessing that pure virgin within himself, was moved in passion as the beasts toward that which was without to bring forth sons, not in the image of God, but after the image of himself, in manner as the beasts of the field who, having no knowledge of God, desire only to sustain their physical life and reproduce themselves.

Thus they had partaken of the tree of knowledge of good and evil. Their eyes were opened to see their outward forms and to know the grief of sustaining their bodies by sweaty toil and the sorrow of reproducing themselves in desperate pain and travail. The good spirit and glory that had been their covering was departed from them and they knew the shame of their nakedness before the Lord.

But we are near the end of our long night of deep sleep. The day of waking, of sonship, and of the open heavens is at hand. With every tick of the clock our salvation is nearer than when we first believed. Each violent deed, each act of lawlessness, each war and earthquake that rocks the peace of the world brings us one day nearer to the hour when that first company of 144,000 virgin sons of God shall stand on Mount Zion with Christ and in Christ, clothed upon by the seven spirits of God as a rainbow round about the throne to govern the world in righteousness for-evermore.

One day during the life of our Lord on earth His friend Lazarus fell sick and Jesus, hearing of his illness, remained two days where He was until Lazarus had died. Then Jesus said to His disciples, "Our friend Lazarus sleepeth; but I go that I may awake him out of his sleep." But when He saw that the disciples did not understand, He said to them, "Lazarus is dead, and I am glad for your sakes that I am not there." Please read John 11:1-46 How well these words, our friend Lazarus sleepeth, fit the entire picture of the human race from Adam even until now, but the hour of awakening is almost here. Jesus, the first born from the dead, is about to call "comeforth" to all who are in Christ - not just to Lazarus or some other lonely man, but to all that great company whom he (Lazarus) represents, that all who died in Adam will live forever in Him.
Come now, and let us reason together in the Spirit, for there is an ever increasing longing in my heart to make at least the elect of God to see something of the length, the breadth, the depth, and the height of the goodness, the wisdom, and the love of God. God cannot be sufficed with the weak and sickly twaddle advanced by a harlot church as truth. What good is it for men to spend their lives studying doctrine only to find in the end that they know not God? All striving about doctrine is vanity and vexation of spirit, but to enter into the secret place of the Most High, to abide under His shadow and find delight in His presence is the all important thing. What a disastrous tragedy it is for men to begin in the Spirit and then imagine they can come to perfection by adhering to codes and ethics, rules and traditions. I tell you of a truth that a man who knows in his heart the truth that God loves the world, himself included, knows infinitely more than all his instructors who do not know in fact, but only in theory.

The time has come for you and me to so believe into Christ Jesus that here and now we will experience an awakening from the long winter of our sleep of death. The time has come for us all to stop looking through the polished doors of buildings that men erroneously call churches and start instead looking into the heart of God Himself. The time has come to exchange our sitting in comfortable pews for sitting at the feet of Jesus Christ. High time it is to cease from giving ear to the frothy eloquence of trained puppeteers who hold men captive to their wills, teaching them only what they want them to hear, and to sit instead, as Mary sat, at Jesus' feet to hear from His lips the unfolding of His purposes for the ages.

There are not many people who are sufficiently awake to believe it, but at this very moment tens of thousands of church goers of every sect and creed are walking in the counsel of the ungodly, standing in the way of sinners, and sitting in the seat of the scornful. Their delight is not in the law of the Lord, neither do they meditate in it either day or night. They are filled with doctrine and program, tradition and church activity, and, though they profess to be believers, they would not know Christ if they met Him on the street. Oh, let us awake and turn away from such vanity and come to know Him! Of a truth that lowly woman who washed the feet of the Lord with her tears, kissing them without ceasing and wiping them with the hair of her head, knew more than all her learned critics, for she, dwelling in the love of God, believed all things while her learned critics, dwelling in the dismal hut of their human traditions, succeeded only in making the word of God of none effect.

It was in the evening of the sixth day that the Lord made the first man in His image. Now in the evening of the sixth dispensational day, even the dispensation of the grace of God, the Lord is again bringing an elect people whom He has chosen into the very image and likeness of His Son, the Lord Jesus Christ. Oh, how happy are those people whose God is the Lord! How blessed the people who, like the blind man of old, have cast aside their hindering garments to run after Christ, who giveth sight that all may follow Him! How wise the people who have cast off their affiliation with the world and all its outward show of vanity, refusing the mind of satanic wisdom together with useless forms and ceremonies of an harlot church system that they may be partakers of the mind of Christ and the sevenfold spirit of sonship! Upon them as upon their Lord shall rest the seven Spirits of God even as the prophet Isaiah foretold saying,

The Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon Him,
The Spirit of wisdom and understanding;
The Spirit of counsel and might;
The Spirit of knowledge and fear of the Lord.

These are the seven Spirits continually before the throne of God by which the world will be governed in righteousness. These are the Spirits that will rest upon all the sons of God in that great kingdom when the whole world shall be governed in righteousness by that man whom God hath chosen. It was of these seven Spirits that John spoke when he wrote, "John to the seven churches which are in Asia; Grace be unto you and peace from Him which is, and which was, and which is to come; and from the seven Spirits which are before His throne." Rev. 1:4

"And round about the throne were four and twenty seats: and upon the seats I saw four and twenty elders sitting, clothed in white raiment; and they had on their heads crowns of gold. And out of the throne proceeded lightnings and thunderings and voices: and there were seven lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are the seven Spirits of God." Rev. 4:4-5 The seven lamps of fire are the seven Spirits of God. This is the fulfillment of the ancient type, the candlestick, which stood in the Holy Place in the tabernacle in the wilderness, which was made of pure gold (divine) and had seven golden lampstands and seven lamps burning pure olive oil, a symbol of the Spirit of God.

"And I beheld, and, lo, in the midst of the throne and of the four beasts, and in the midst of the elders, stood a Lamb as it had been slain, having seven horns and seven eyes, which are the seven Spirits of God sent forth into all the earth." Rev. 5:6 The seven horns of God's perfect power and the seven eyes of God's full perfection are the seven spirits of wisdom and understanding, counsel and might, knowledge, reverence, and deity that are ever before God's throne.

I am powerless to describe the magnificence that is here - seven Spirits of God blazing as seven lamps of fire, radiating forth the perfect light! As the seven lamps of the candlestick are but one candlestick, so also the seven Spirits are but one Spirit, even the Holy Spirit of God. The seven horns of power on the head of one lamb, even the Lamb of God, are but one Spirit of power, and the seven eyes likewise are one Spirit of God. Wonderful beyond words are the glories portrayed here, but our hearts well nigh stand still as we behold with John the dazzling glory that appeared before him. John saw one sitting upon a throne, and He that sat was to look upon like a jasper and a sardine stone: and there was a rainbow round about the throne in sight like unto an emerald. A rainbow is one but it has seven colors, and the seven colors of that glorious rainbow represent the sevenfold Spirit of God, even as the seven lamps of fire, the seven horns, and the seven eyes.

The first rainbow that ever appeared to men was a promise and a covenant from God to assure the world of His goodness and mercy. Here again it appears in the glorious age that even now casts its rays of dawn upon us, promising the world that all its inhabitants will be governed in righteousness by the elect whom God has chosen and upon whom shall rest forever the seven Spirits of God. And there was a rainbow round about the throne! What a magnificent promise for a benighted world that from time immemorial has known nothing but unrighteous government! Even the throne of Solomon was plagued with unrighteousness, greed and taxation so fearfully oppressive that the whole kingdom was divided at his death. The reign of David, good as it was, was filled with bloodshed until he who was a man after God's own heart was denied the right to build the temple because he was such a bloody man. What kingdom or empire has not fallen prey to wickedness and corruption until it finally sank beneath the waves of its own sin and perished beneath the weight of its own iniquity? The historian Edward Gibbon, has listed five primary causes for the decline and fall of the mighty Roman Empire as follows:

1. The rapid increase of divorce and the undermining of the sanctity of the home.
2. The spiraling rise of taxes and extravagant spending.
3. The mounting craze for pleasure and the brutality of sports.
4. The building of gigantic armaments and the failure to realize that the real enemy lay within the gates of the Empire in moral decay.
5. The decay of religion and the fading of faith into a mere form, leaving the people without a guide.

Even the most casual look at the above deductions should convince any man that the same five pallbearers who carried out the corpse of the Roman Empire are at the door of our own nations to carry them out also, for I doubt that any of the mighty empires of the past, the days of Noah, or even Sodom itself could hold a candle to the rampaging iniquity that is sweeping every nation on the face of the earth in our day. Were it not for the mercy of God in sending great tribulation on the earth in the very near future, the whole earth would doom itself.

The ordinary man is kept in the dark and knows practically nothing of the abounding corruption in governmental circles, the fraud, the cheating, the outright lying and endless graft, the hobnobbing with crooks and criminals, the receiving of campaign funds from gangsters and dope peddlers, and the thousand things of which the word of God declares, "It is a shame even to speak of the things that are done by them in secret."

But a better day is coming and it is coming very soon - the day of the rainbow round the throne in sight like unto an emerald, the day of the seven lamps burning with fire, which are the seven Spirits of God resting heavily upon those glorious pure virgin sons of Zion, God's masterpiece and the hope of all creation. The day is at hand when the seven eyes of perfect insight and understanding shall search the hearts and minds of men.
and nations, and the seven wonderful horns of power shall bring into one all nations of the earth in righteousness before Him.

"Awake! Awake! Put on thy strength, O Zion; put on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem, the holy city: for henceforth there shall no more come into thee the uncircumcised and the unclean. Shake thyself from the dust; arise, and sit down, O Jerusalem: loose thyself from the bands of thy neck, O captive daughter of Zion. For thus saith the Lord, "Ye have sold yourselves for nought; and ye shall be redeemed without money." Isa. 52:1-3

It is time to awake out of sleep, for the night is far spent and the day is at hand. Even now our salvation is much nearer than when we believed. These are not idle words, but words of truth and soberness. It is high time to awake out of sleep. It is high time to realize that the solemn words of Jesus are being fulfilled in all the world about us. It is time to diligently take heed that the searching prophecies of Paul are being fulfilled in that idolatrous system that dares to call itself the church, whose members have on every hand become lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, despisers of those that are truly good, traitors, heady, high minded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God: having a form of godliness but denying the power thereof.

One of the most disgusting trends of our age is seen in the fact that evil men with seducing spirits have seized upon the wonderful truths of God, and though they have neither part nor lot in them, they proclaim them far and wide as great revelations. Oh, how I loathe this evil thing! They are as unscrupulous as Simon the sorcerer who, seeing that the Holy Ghost was given by the laying on of the apostles' hands, offered money that he also might be given the same power that upon whomsoever he laid his hands they would receive the Holy Spirit. But Peter, discerning the wickedness of his evil heart, said, "Thy money perish with thee, for thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money. Thou hast neither part nor lot in this inheritance, for I perceive that thou art in the gall of bitterness and the bond of iniquity." Cf. Acts 8:18-25

All over the world today men for filthy lucre's sake are proclaiming the message of sonship, but the Spirit of God's Son is not in them. Vainly they point to miracles and crowds, converts and disciples as evidence of their sonship, but all these things are empty and vain. We may with confidence affirm that every man and every woman who in any way is seeking to build up his own little kingdom does not possess the Spirit of sonship. A man who seeks to be or willingly becomes the central figure is wrong and does not possess the Spirit of sonship, for the true Spirit of sonship points men away from self and toward Jesus Christ. If I seek in any way to hold you as my disciple, I am wrong and void of the Spirit of sonship, but if, after you have read this article, your spirit cries within, "Our Father who art in heaven, hallowed be Thy name", then I think you are becoming His disciple and the true Spirit of sonship is working in you. "Because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of His Son into your hearts, crying, abba Father. Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ." Gal 4:6-7

Those blessed sons of God who are to reign with Him in His kingdom will not be men who have made great names for themselves, but men and women who through contact with Christ Jesus our Lord have partaken fully of the sevenfold Spirit of sonship. Their wisdom and knowledge comes not from schools or universities, but from the blessed fact that they have been with Jesus.

THE SPIRIT OF THE LORD

The Holy Spirit is the Spirit of the Lord. When a man is filled with the Holy Spirit, he is not filled with an influence, a power, or a thing. He is filled with a divine person. Therefore it is said the Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him. If all people who seek to be baptized with the Holy Spirit had the beautiful understanding that they were seeking to be filled with that divine person who bears within His mighty self, not only all the attributes of personality, but all the attributes of divine personality, then their approach to God would be very different than it is. Almost always people who are seeking the baptism of the Holy Spirit are mistakenly seeking a blessing, the receiving of which, they hope, will impart to them some sort of miraculous power that will enable them to live more powerfully or perhaps endue them with a supernatural gift. To speak with tongues is often their highest aim, for, if they can attain to that phenomenon, then they are happy and satisfied in their belief that they have received all that God has for them in this age.

How pitiful is such an understanding! How desperately short we sell ourselves when we seek the baptism of the Holy Spirit as an experience that we are to attain instead of presenting ourselves as empty vessels to be filled with that divine person, the Holy Spirit! The one hundred and twenty souls who were filled with the Holy Ghost at Pentecost were not receiving an overwhelming blessing; they were receiving a divine person who had come forth from heaven at the bidding of Christ that He might dwell in them and abide with them throughout all the age. For this purpose our blessed Lord Jesus Christ left this promise: "I will pray the Father and He shall give you another Comforter, that He may abide with you forever; even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive; because it seeth Him not, neither knoweth Him: for He dwelleth with you, and shall be in you. I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you. Yet a little while and the world seeth Me no more: but ye see Me: because I live, ye shall live also. At that day ye shall know that I am in the Father, and ye in Me, and I in you." John 14:16-20 This divine person, who is God and is sent forth by God, full of all wisdom and truth, understanding, counsel, might, knowledge, and reverence brings in His mighty fullness untold blessing both to the world that knows not God and to those blessed ones who through His power and the cleansing of the blood of Christ have been brought from darkness into light, being translated into the kingdom of God's dear and precious Son.

It is through the wisdom and power of that divine person, the Holy Spirit, that the world is convicted of sin, given the spirit of repentance, and made ready for the cleansing blood of Jesus Christ. Therefore Jesus said, "Nevertheless I tell you the truth; It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send Him unto you. And when He is come, He will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment.

Of sin, because they believe not on Me;
Of righteousness, because I go to the Father, and ye see Me no more:
Of judgment, because the prince of this world is judged."
John 16:7-11.

See then the eternal weight of blessing the Holy Spirit has brought to a world that knows not God in first convicting the sinner of his sin - not only in telling him of it, but fastening it upon him, declaring the fact of sin, the fault of sin, and the fruit of sin. But God be praised, He does not leave us in the wilderness of despair in our conviction, but reproves the world of righteousness, pointing sinners to the Son of God, who by His righteousness was so acceptable to God that He could not be holden by death, but is risen from the dead and gone to the Father (compare verse 10) that we might become the righteousness of God in Him, and that all who believe in Him may be free from sin that He might be just and the justifier of him that believeth in Jesus. See Rom. 3:26 Likewise also the Holy Spirit convicts the world of judgment: First, that all who persist in sin will come into judgment; second, that Satan, the prince of this world, is judged; and third, that Jesus Christ has fully borne the judgment of God that we may be justified from all things as Paul by the Spirit has declared. "Being justified freely by His grace, through redemption that is in Christ Jesus, whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in His blood, to declare His righteousness for the remission of sins that are past through the forbearance of God." Rom 3:24-25

Great in goodness is the blessing of the Holy Spirit toward a world of unbelieving men, but behold how great is the Spirit of the Lord toward those who have yielded their lives to the control of Him who is the Spirit of truth, for "when He, the Spirit of truth, is come, He will guide you into all truth: for He shall not speak of Himself; but whatsoever He shall hear, that shall He speak: and He will show you things to come. He shall glorify Me: for He shall receive of Mine and shall show it unto you." John 16:13-14

In the Greek language from which our New Testament was translated the word spirit is a neuter noun. Thus in Greek a spirit should always be referred to as it. But so definite is the fact of the personality of the Holy Spirit that even in Greek personal pronouns are used when referring to Him. A prime example of this fact is found in John 16:13-14 where eight times the personal pronoun "he" is used with reference to the Holy Spirit.

Know then, O man that it is the Spirit of the Lord that rests upon and abides within the sons of God. He who is baptized with the Holy Spirit has not received a mere exuberant blessing in his soul, but a divine person capable of speaking, loving, reproving, teaching, convicting, and transforming, One who will guide him into all truth, for He is the Spirit of truth, and One who will show him things to come. Where in ten thousand worlds can greater truth be found than this: “The anointing which ye have received of Him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man should teach you: but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in Him.” 1 John 2:27

THE SPIRIT OF WISDOM

The second Spirit to rest upon the sons of God is the Spirit of wisdom. As the rainbow round about the throne was seven colors yet one bow, so in like manner the seven Spirits of sonship are one Spirit. As each color of the rainbow has its own glory and manifestation, so do the seven Spirits before His throne as they rest upon the sons of God, transforming them into the image of Christ.

To understand what I say you will have to come out of all former tradition. Just as Peter left the safety of the boat to place his feet on the forbidding waves of a turbulent sea, so to follow Christ you must now leave the seeming safety of the ship of church tradition to walk with Him in realms forbidden to natural men. It becomes necessary to see the invisible, hear the inaudible, and touch the untouchable. Thus the invisible things of Him from the creation of the world become clearly seen, even His eternal power and Godhead. Rom. 1:20 Divine wisdom is not something that can be learned from books and teachers. Wisdom must be imparted by God. So great is wisdom and all that pertains to it that the Spirit of God moved upon the wise and understanding Solomon to write a whole book to display that it was a living personality. Numerous writers have often in the holy scripture diligently set forth the marvels of it until the innermost soul of the reader tingles with anticipation in the hope of being partaker of that wisdom which laid the foundation of the earth and hung the stars upon nothing. Such wisdom is too great for man. The natural mind can never attain it.

If we will step from the little boat of human understanding to tread the waves of revelation with Him, we will come to believe that wisdom, like the Holy Spirit, is not a thing to be studied but a living personality. She is one of the seven lamps burning with fire before the throne, one of the seven colors of the rainbow round about the throne. Oh, how different do spiritual things become when we trace them from death to life, from inanimate things to living personalities! In the triumphant words of Jesus, "I am the resurrection and the life", resurrection passes from the dead and lifeless realm of theology to the realm of personality and living being which Christ Himself is.

Hear now the declaration of wisdom as she seeks to lead us from the realm of the known to the realm of the unknown, from the grave of dead philosophy to the celestial realm of living things.

"I, wisdom, dwell with prudence and find out knowledge of witty inventions. The fear of the Lord is to hate evil: pride, and arrogance, and the evil way, and the forward mouth do I hate. Counsel is mine, and sound wisdom: I am understanding; I have strength. By me kings reign, and princes decree justice. By me princes rule, and nobles, even all the judges of the earth. I love them that love me; and those that seek me early shall find me. Riches and honor are with me; yea, durable riches and righteousness. My fruit is better than gold, yea, fine gold; and my revenue than choice silver. I lead in the way of righteousness, in the midst of the paths of judgment: that I may cause those that love me to inherit substance; and I will fill their treasures. The Lord possessed me (wisdom) in the beginning of His way, before His works of old. I was set up from everlasting, from the beginning, or ever the earth was. When there were no depths, I was brought forth; when there were no fountains abounding with water. Before the mountains were settled, before the hills was I brought forth; while as yet He had not made the earth, or the fields, or the highest part of the dust of the world. When He prepared the heavens, I was there: when He set a compass upon the face of the depth: when He established the clouds above: when He strengthened the fountains of the deep: when He gave to the sea His decree that the waters should not pass His commandment: when He appointed the foundations of the earth: then I was by Him, as one brought up with Him, and I was daily His delight, rejoicing always before Him; rejoicing in the habitable part of His earth; and my delights were with the sons of men. Now therefore hearken unto me, O ye children; for blessed are they that keep my ways." Prov. 8:12-32

Leave not wisdom in the grave clothes of human theology, but let her be raised, even as Christ, from the dead to abide and grow a living reality in your life, a lamp of fire, a color of the rainbow, the Spirit by which the world will be ruled in the age which is at our doors.
THE SPIRIT OF UNDERSTANDING

The third Spirit of sonship is the Spirit of understanding. Since the prophet Isaiah has called understanding a Spirit, we must free ourselves once again of the notion of dealing with understanding as a dead and inanimate thing. We cannot learn understanding as we would learn arithmetic, for it, being a lifeless fact, can as well be performed by a machine as by man, but understanding is a living thing that enters as a Spirit into the soul, a lamp burning with fire, a Spirit before God's throne. How easy it is to miss the vital significance of one word in Scripture! When the Scripture speaks of the quick and the dead, it is speaking of the living and the dead, for "quick" here means "living". 1. Pet. 4:5. And again, when Paul says, "The word of God is quick and powerful", Heb. 4:12, the meaning is living and powerful. So also when Isaiah says, "He shall make Him of quick understanding", Isa. 11:1, He means He will make Him of living understanding. If understanding then is a living thing, how apt it is that it should be called a Spirit that shall rest upon the sons of God, who are indeed the branch from the rod of the stem of Jesse. Isa. 11:1 Jesse was the father of David, the king. Matt. 1:6 Christ is the rod or vine from the stem of Jesse, and we are the branch out of His roots even as He said, "I am the vine; ye are the branches." And upon this branch shall rest the Spirit of living understanding.

"Wisdom is the principal thing," said Solomon; "therefore get wisdom, and with all thy getting, get understanding." Prov. 4:7 It is sport to a fool to do mischief, but a man of understanding hath wisdom. It is better to get wisdom than gold, and understanding is rather to be chosen than choice silver, for "understanding is a wellspring of life unto him that hath it." Prov. 16:22

Understanding does not judge either by the sight of the eye or by the hearing of the ear, but with righteousness it judges the poor and reproves with equity the meek of the earth. Isa. 11:3-4 In the face of the condemning multitudes it cries, "Judge nothing before the time until the Lord come, who shall bring to light the hidden things of darkness; and then shall every man have praise of God." It was neither love nor forgiveness alone that led Jesus to say to the woman taken in adultery, "Neither do I condemn thee", but the Spirit of understanding, for He knoweth our frame and, remembering that we are dust, He said, "Go and sin no more".

The next time you stand ready to condemn men for their slowness to see the glories you behold, give place to the Spirit of understanding that it may possess you; then you will see that God alone can open the eyes of him that was born blind. We have great pity for the man who is blind or who bears in his body some physical deformity, for understanding has taught us that these afflictions came through no fault of his own. Why then do we cast away the Spirit of understanding from us by demanding that he whose spiritual eyes have never been opened should be able to see the mountains filled with the hosts of the Lord? If the men who stoned Stephen to death had seen the heavens open as he did, they would not have stoned him; therefore the Spirit of understanding in his soul whispered, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge."

"Be not children in understanding, howbeit in malice be ye children, but in understanding be men." 1 Cor. 14:20 I greatly fear that for many hundreds of years God's people have been men in malice and children in understanding. From time immemorial the church has been a vast feuding ground of malice, envy, bitterness and strife, full of pettiness, peevishness, whisperings, debate, deceit, backbiting, and evil speaking: Men in malice and children in understanding!

Have you ever prayed that God would open the eyes of your understanding that you may know what is the hope of His calling and what the riches of the glory of His inheritance in the saints? Ah, how much better this would be than to seek gold and silver to the detriment of your devotion to God, for the heart of God is truly pained when He from heaven beholds His sons neglecting their fervent devotion to Him while they diligently rush about to attain temporal things. Walk no longer in the vanity of your mind, having the understanding darkened, while alienating yourself from the life of God through ignorance. Never spend your days seeking riches, for they make themselves wings and fly away, and if by the will of God riches increase, set not your heart upon them.

Just as the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, so the knowledge of the holy is understanding. Prov. 9:10. We can never over-emphasize the importance of our coming to know (iod since so much is involved in it.
Wisdom is the principle thing; therefore get wisdom, and with all thy getting get understanding. But neither wisdom nor understanding will ever be ours by following the traditions of the dead church systems, for the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, and the knowledge of the holy is understanding.

"Trust in the Lord with all thine heart and lean not unto thine own understanding," saith the Lord. Prov. 3:5 Yet God's people are always leaning on their own understanding and so often our own understanding is nothing more than the faulty understanding of other men whose traditions, interpretations, and deductions we have accepted. Human understanding is terribly limited. It is limited by lack of knowledge, lack of facts, the presence of prejudice and carnal thinking. "Every way of man is right in his own eyes, but the Lord pondereth the heart." Therefore lean no longer upon thine own understanding in anything. Judge neither after the sight of the eyes nor the hearing of the ears, but seek that living Spirit of understanding that comes from God alone, for "when wisdom entereth into thine heart, and knowledge is pleasant unto thy soul, discretion shall preserve thee, and understanding shall keep thee, to deliver thee from the way of the evil man, from the man that speaketh forward things." Prov. 2:10-12

THE SPIRIT OF COUNSEL

We shall call it the Spirit of counsel, for that is what it is. Too long the world has known human counsel, which is in fact nothing more than the advice of the carnal mind. As an animal looks at all things through the eyes of an animal with the limited understanding of a beast, so fallen men with carnal minds see all things through carnal eyes and give their counsel as carnal men. They even dare to give spiritual counsel from their carnal minds, but this can only result in death. There are counseling services in every city where counsel is given for a fee. Some of it is good; some is deplorable and bad, and often the counselor is in as great darkness as the counseled. It is nothing short of amazing to behold what the world will accept as a counselor as infants counsel the aged, unmarried instruct the married in the arts of home-making, and the childless counsel the fathers and mothers in the arts of guiding the family.

The carnal mind has nothing to offer in counsel but darkness and death, for the carnal mind is death, but the spiritual mind is life and peace. The darkness of the carnal mind becomes ever more dark and corrupt as the centuries of our fallen state increase. The counsel given by the wise men of earth brings naught but greater frustration until the hearts of men are failing them for fear and looking after the things that are coming upon the earth. The whole system that calls itself the church has rejected the counsel of God. Is it any wonder, then, that the world of sinners has done the same thing so that when we pipe there is no dancing, and when we lament, none do mourn?

But the age is very near at hand when the sons of God will reign with Him, not in rejection and sorrow, but in transcending glory. The mind of Christ shall dwell richly in all the sons of God and from that divine mind shall flow forth the counsel of the Lord. Now counsel is advice; it is advice of the Lord. Counsel is good judgment. It is judgment taken by consultation with the Lord. It is a godly and deliberate purpose. The exact counsel that Jesus Christ Himself would give will be the counsel of the sons of God, the branch of the Lord, for upon them shall rest the Spirit of counsel.

Long centuries ago the apostle John looked through the telescope of divine inspiration and beheld at the end of the age a church neither hot nor cold, but lukewarm ready to be spewed from the mouth of the Lord. He saw how rich they were in gold and silver and the increase of goods and property, and he heard (hem boast, "We have need of nothing." But they knew not that they were wretched and poor and miserable and blind and naked. Rev. 3:16-18 They knew only the counsel and wisdom of the natural mind, neither seeing nor comprehending their wretched estate. Hear now the counsel and wisdom of God to them, for the counsel given to them may well be the first counsel that shall be given to all the world when the sons of God begin their righteous reign. "I counsel thee to buy of Me gold tried with fire that thou mayest be clothed, that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear: and anoint thine eyes with eye salve that thou mayest see. As many as I love I rebuke and chasten." Rev. 3:18-19 My heart is filled with prayer and desire that the eyes of our understanding may be enlightened to see that that which John beheld in this great vision is in reality the condition in which all Christians live who still adhere to the miserable bondage, the wretched nakedness, and spiritual blindness of the existing church systems, for they have rejected the counsel of the Lord against themselves that they may go on in their coldness, love of money, and spiritual death.
The hour is nigh when all the world shall come under the Spirit of counsel manifested in God's sons, for God has said, "I will call the man that executeth My counsel from a far country," for there is no counsel like the counsel of God which declares the end from the beginning, and from the ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, "My counsel shall stand, and I will do all My pleasure." See Isa. 46:9-11

THE SPIRIT OF MIGHT

The nations of the earth are vainly mustering their mighty men of war. The measured tread of their armies reverberates throughout the earth. Their arsenals are filled to overflowing with weapons of unimaginable destruction, but for all this their hands hang weak and their hearts faint, for they find themselves powerless to cope with the forces of lawlessness and wickedness that rise on every side like specters from the tomb. Men have forgotten God. They do not know that nations are but dust in the palm of God's almighty hand. They fill their mouths with statements of blasphemy as they declare their feeble war against Him. But He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh; the Lord shall have them in derision.

Do not forget that God is never late. Neither is He ever found sleeping or unprepared. There are no emergencies with God, for He knows the end from the beginning. Think not in thine heart that Satan hath almost obtained the victory, for Satan has no power at all but such as is given him of God. There is no power but of God. The powers that be are ordained of God. Rom. 13:1 Satan and the nations that serve him are doing only what they are permitted to do, for God that ruleth in heaven and in earth setteth up and putteth down whom He will. While the nations loudly rattle their swords, vainly boasting of their secret weapons, God is secretly preparing His sons of might, for the Spirit of might shall rest upon them. The stone is being cut from the mountain without noise and without hands to smite the earthen feet of the image man has builded, Dan. 2:34, that the kingdoms of this world may become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His mighty Christ, and He shall reign forever and ever.

The wonderful age that next shall dawn will know the glory of the Spirit of might as it rests upon God's holy sons. The world will know the wonder of true authority and might with wisdom, counsel, and understanding. The bruised reed He will not break, and the smoking flax He will not quench. He will reprove with equity the meek of the earth, and with the breath of His nostrils will He slay the wicked. Every yoke shall be destroyed because of the anointing, for all power in heaven and earth is given unto Him.

The knowledge of God cannot be learned in schools and universities. The knowledge derived from schools and instructors in this world is for this age only and is as lifeless and dead as the things with which it deals. But the knowledge of God is not an accumulation of dead facts, but a living reality that springs like a resurrection from the Spirit of knowledge, which is in truth the manifestation of the Holy Spirit of God. Oh, how lively things become when God gives us the Spirit of wisdom and the Spirit of understanding that we might know that counsel, might, knowledge and reverence are living things with personality proceeding forth from the indwelling presence of God's Holy Spirit.

If you find such a positive statement hard to believe, perhaps you can first believe a more negative one. When we speak of evil things, we speak of lying, adultery, whoredoms, infirmities, errors, and so forth; but the Lord does not hesitate to say that some people have lying spirits, spirits of bondage, spirits of adultery, spirits of whoredoms, spirits of error, spirits of infirmity, unclean spirits, and many others. While modern learning scoffs at all such teaching, they themselves who scoff are filled with the spirit of delusion that they should not know the truth.

I do not believe in the nonsense of demonology as practiced by some Christians, who seem to delight themselves in continually talking about demons of this and demons of that, and who continually talk of casting out demons. They are usually betrayed by their own imagination. The truth is that every truly repentant soul is delivered from every evil by the omnipotent power of the blood of Christ and the transforming power of the Holy Spirit the moment he believes. The best way to "give place to the devil" is to start talking about him. The point is, however, that since the Lord recognizes the evils above mentioned as spirits rather than mere circumstances, then we should be able to understand what is meant when God speaks of the Spirit of wisdom, the Spirit of knowledge, the Spirit of truth, or any other. We should be able to see that these are not mere human attributes, but personable beings and living realities as alive as God Himself, living things proceeding from that divine person, the Holy Spirit.

God’s people are destroyed for lack of knowledge, for the workers of iniquity have no knowledge, who eat God’s people as they eat bread. Ps. 53:4 But the Lord giveth wisdom; out of His mouth cometh knowledge and understanding. Prov. 2:6 The knowledge of God makes one wiser than all his enemies so that he has more understanding than all his teachers. His knowledge is high; we cannot attain unto it, but He giveth knowledge, sound wisdom, and discretion. In Him are hidden all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge that our hearts might be comforted, being knit together in love unto all riches of the full assurance of understanding to the acknowledgment of the mystery of God.

We are living in the hour when God has a controversy with the inhabitants of the land because there is no truth, no mercy, nor knowledge of God, but lying and swearing, killing and stealing, and committing adultery. Hosea 4:1-2. The world is filled with a knowledge that is leading it to destruction, and the people of God are chained with the shackles and death of tradition, but God is separating a people from the knowledge of the world that He might impart to them the Spirit of knowledge, for the kingdom age is at hand when the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea.

THE SPIRIT OF FEAR

The fear of the Lord has nothing to do with being afraid. The fear of the Lord is reverence for the Lord. It is profound respect mingled with awe, affection, and veneration. It is reverential trust with hatred of evil. The fear of the Lord is clean, enduring forever. Psa. 19:9 The fear of the Lord is to hate evil. Prov. 8:13. The fear of the Lord is strong confidence, and His children shall have a place of refuge. The fear of the Lord is a fountain of life to depart from the snares of death. Prov. 14:26-27 By the fear of the Lord men depart from evil, Prov. 16:6, for the fear of the Lord tendeth to life. Prov. 19:23

God has spoken of a people of whom it is said, "There is no fear of God before their eyes." Rom. 13:18 With their tongues they have used deceit, whose mouths are full of cursing and bitterness, and the way of peace they have not known. The blessed Spirit of reverence for the Lord has fled from the presence of God's people, for they seem to think nothing of light and silly talk in the presence of that which should be deemed holy. They approach God loudly and carelessly in prayer, willingly barter spiritual things for temporal gain, and quote scriptures in jest, making a mock of reverence.

The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, and the beginning of knowledge, too. God will never grant wisdom and understanding to the man whose soul is void of true reverence for God, for true reverence is true humility, and true humility places God's will above all else in the universe. "We ought to obey God rather than man" is its plea.

These are the seven Spirits of sonship that shall rest like a cloud of glory upon the sons of God. By these shall the glory and order of God's kingdom be established. Wisdom hath builded her seven pillars: wisdom, understanding, counsel, might, knowledge, reverence, and deity. These are the seven lamps of life before the throne. These are the seven Spirits of God. Rev. 4: 4-5 These are the seven eyes of the Lamb. Pev. 5:6. This is the rainbow round about God's throne.

CHAPTER TWO
THE SIX WATERPOTS OF STONE

"Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom. And with all thy getting get understanding." "If thou criest after knowledge, and liftest up thy voice for understanding; if thou seekest her as silver, and searches! for her as for hid treasures; then shall thou understand the fear of the Lord, and find the knowledge of God. For the Lord giveth wisdom: out of His mouth cometh knowledge and understanding." Prov. 2:3-6 Therefore "happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding. For the merchandise of it is better than the merchandise of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold. She is more precious than rubies: and all the things thou canst desire are not to be compared unto her." Prov. 3:13-15
Human interpretations of the scripture and natural ways of looking at things are fruitless vines and wells without water. Let wisdom teach us that our natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, for they are spiritually discerned. 1 Cor. 2:14 This scripture is doubly true. Firstly, the natural man cannot receive them because he is natural and the things of God are spiritual. Thus to his ears all spiritual things have the ring of foolishness. That meat is for the belly and the belly for meat he understands well and desires much, but meat for the spirit is meat to eat that he knows not of. John 4:14,32 Secondly, the natural man cannot receive the things of God because God does not show them to him. The Lord refuses to mix the pearls of His understanding with the husks of the swine. "It is not right," says God, "to take the children's meat and cast it to the dogs." This the Holy Spirit consistently refuses to do. It was for this reason that Jesus, when speaking to the multitudes, always spoke in parables that hearing they might hear and not understand, and seeing they might see and not perceive. See Matt. 13:11-15

Many people dislike the thing I now say, but, because it is the truth, it must be stated. God has decreed that He will awaken and make alive every man in his own order. 1 Cor. 15:22-23 Every man is left in the outer darkness of the natural and carnal mind until his turn comes to be awakened, convicted, quickened and made alive, and converted. All the evangelism in the world HIM not speed up nor hasten the conversion of a soul. There is a time to be born in the natural, Eccles. 3:1-2 and a time to be born in the Spirit, Acts 31:48 We may try to hasten a man's conversion and we may think we have succeeded, but in the end we will find we have an abortion on our hands. If God's people would be honest before God and before themselves, they would soon discover that the reason for the millions of backsliders in the church system is that they were rushed and hurried into milking a profession. Because they were not under deep in conviction of sin, there was no true repentance in their hearts and, because there was no true repentance in their hearts, there was no true conversion. If we analyze this inspired statement, "Godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of: but the sorrow of the world worketh death", our minds are forced to the conclusion that, whenever there is godly sorrow for sin, it is accompanied by true repentance of sin, and, whenever true repentance occurs, there will never be a repentance of our repentance. The backslider is a man who has repented of his repentance, if indeed he ever did repent in the lust place. This is strong talk, I freely admit, but it is the explanation of the fact as it is. The inexcusable error of mass revival meetings and conversions of our day is that the revivals are man-made and the conversions are not accompanied by the penitential cry of a broken spirit, "God be merciful to me, a sinner". In its place we find some ridiculous capsule type conversion that sounds something like this:

"Do you believe you are a sinner?"
"Yes."
"Do you believe Christ died for sinners?"
"Yes."
"Will you receive Him as your Saviour?"
"Yes."
"Then you are saved!"
"I am?"
"Yes. The Bible says you are saved. God bless you." When we see such conversions as this, is it any wonder that few, if any, converts can be found six months after the great evangelist has closed his campaign? And how true are the words of the old song,

"Not much crying for mercy;
Not much kneeling to pray."
Just a card signed or handshake
Is the new-fashioned way."

Let us turn away from the understanding of men that God may give light to our eyes and wisdom to our hearts. "Open Thou mine eyes," David prayed, "that I may behold wondrous things out of Thy law."

Ps. 119:18

It is in the hope that God will open wide the eyes of our understanding that I now attempt to set before you a truth which God has made real to my heart and a parable which to my knowledge has not been hitherto unfolded.

For almost two thousand years we have been listening to the sweet sounds of the gospel of grace. Because grace above all else is the truth of this present dispensation, it is perfectly normal that the grace of God should be the theme of our songs, the burden of our sermons, and our rejoicing night and day. But what was the theme of Abraham's song, seeing he lived in a dispensation long before grace was revealed? Abraham, who lived in the dispensation of promise, undoubtedly rejoiced in that wonderful promise, "In thee and in thy seed shall all nations be blessed." The promise of God was always upon his heart. No doubt he talked about it to Sarah at meal times. He prayed about it at family worship and dreamed of it in the night. He planned for it; he hoped for it; he rejoiced in it; and all through the weary, fruitless years and years of waiting he staggered not through unbelief.

The immutable promise of God and the hope it held was ever before him, quickening his steps and gladdening his heart as he looked for the city that hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God. As Paul triumphed in the gospel of grace and Abraham rejoiced in the gospel of promise, so Moses exulted in the holy law of God, and others, as Adam and Noah before them, walked in faithfulness to the covenant God had given them.

What shall we now say of the hour in which we live? Everywhere on earth and at all times the elect of God are awed by the blessed assurance that a new dispensation is about to dawn upon us. The kingdom of God is at hand. The covenant in which we have walked for the past two thousand years is waxing old as did all covenants before it and a new age, even the dispensation of the kingdom, is about to be established. "In that He saith, "A new covenant", He hath made the first old. Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away."

Heb. 8:13

Once again the ancient truth is gripping our hearts, "He taketh away the first that He may establish the second."

Heb. 10:9

Just as all previous dispensations have had their gospel (good news), so also there will be a gospel (good news) of the kingdom of God, and it is with this gospel of gospels that we now address ourselves throughout the pages of this book.

"The third day there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee; and the mother of Jesus was there: and both Jesus was called, and His disciples, to the marriage. And when they wanted wine, the mother of Jesus saith unto Him, They have no wine. Jesus saith unto her, Woman, what have I to do with thee? Mine hour is not yet come. His mother saith unto the servants, Whatsoever He saith unto you, do it. And there were set there six waterpots of stone, after the manner of the purifying of the Jews, containing two or three firkins apiece. Jesus saith unto them, Fill the waterpots with water. And they filled them up to the brim. And He saith unto them, Draw out now, and bear unto the governor of the feast. And they bare it. When the ruler of the feast had tasted the water that was made wine, and knew not whence it was: (but the servants which drew the water knew); the governor of the feast called the bridegroom, and saith unto him, Every man at the beginning doth set forth good wine; and when men have well drunk, then that which is worse; but thou hast kept the good wine until now. This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee, and manifested forth His glory; and His disciples believed on Him."

Jesus Christ is the King of the coming kingdom; therefore it is not in the least strange to find that everything that happened during His eventful ministry was symbolic, typical, and prophetic of the coming kingdom of God. He is the King who will reign in the kingdom. Therefore all the events of His ministry were a magnificent, though miniature, display of the unspeakable glory of the kingdom age. In the first few chapters of the gospel of Mark we see a most informative display of events that will occur at the very beginning of His kingdom reign. I hope none of us will imagine that the kingdom of God is going to be a long series of revival campaigns and healing meetings, for that is not the truth; but the deliverance of individuals from all manner of evil and bondage as portrayed in the gospels is, in fact, God's promise of universal deliverance when He shall reign in the glory of His kingdom, the age of "setting things right." When the kingdom age begins, Christ will do for all the world what He did for individuals during the three and one-half years of His ministry on earth and possibly in the same order. This progress of the kingdom of God is clearly evident in Mark's gospel. "Jesus came to Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying, The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand; repent ye, and believe the gospel." Mark 1:14-15 This is followed by the call and preparation of the men who were to reign with Him - a work, I must add, that has continued throughout the entire age of grace. Mark 1:16-20 Then comes the voice of authority (verses 21,22) - a voice almost unknown all through this age of grace, but when Christ's reign begins, all mankind will know that authority rests in Him whose name is Wonderful, Counselor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. The government will be upon His shoulder to order it and establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even forever. See Isa. 9:6-7 Moffat's beautiful translation of this passage reads as follows: "For a child has been born to us, a son has been given to us; the royal dignity He wears, and this the title He bears - A wonder of a counselor, a divine hero, a father for all time, a peaceful prince! Great is His authority, endless is His peace, over David's throne and His dominion, to base it firm and stable on justice and good order from henceforth and forever - thanks to the jealous care of the Eternal."

Next in His ministry came the miracle of the casting out of I lie unclean spirit. I need not tell you that in our day no spirit is more rampant in the hearts of the people than the unclean spirit. I he filth of Sodom and the abominable corruption of the days of Noah are everywhere manifest from the throne to the dungeon, in high places as well as low places, from the mansions of millionaires to the gutters of skid road. I think we should give heed to the very significant fact that in this particular instance I he man with the unclean spirit was in the synagogue. The church system in our day has become "the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird." Rev. 18:2 No wonder the angels are calling, "Come out of her. My people."

When the unclean spirit had been cast out, then followed the healing of the raging fever. Mark. 1:29-31 This wicked world is like the troubled sea that cannot rest, whose waves cast up mire find dirt. A dreadful destroying fever rages in the earth as nation rises against nation, kingdom against kingdom, army against army, black against white, husbands against wives, and parents against children. But the rabid and tempestuous fevers will all be healed by His matchless skill and all will rise in peace to minister unto Him. In verses 32-34 we are told of the healing of all that were diseased and all that were possessed of devils. And in verse 40) the leper was delivered from his uncleanness. Leprosy is a loathsome, wasting disease, defiling and emaciating the body as MII defiles the soul. But, blessed be God, in His reign the dominion of sin will be broken forever. Righteousness shall cover the earth. The hearts of men will be filled with the knowledge of the Lord, and "in that day shall there be upon the hells of  the horses, HOLINESS UNTO THE LORD." Zech. 14:20 We could continue this line of thought throughout the four gospels. We could watch as Jesus touched the palsied man and delivered him of his wearsome trembling, or stand with Him among the tombs of the dead to marvel as He raised them to the life, which He Himself is. When He shall reign, all that are in the graves will hear the voice of the Son of God and they who hear shall live. Sail with Him, if you will, on the threatening sea and hear as He speaks peace to the troubled waters (the nations).Weep for joy as they cease from their turmoil and fretting and reflect as a mirror the face of the Prince of Peace.

According to the gospel of John, the third day there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee. This, too, is a revelation of the kingdom of God. The third day was the third day after John's witness as recorded in John 1:15-34. Verse 35 speaks of the next day, which would be the second day. The third day mentioned here is important in that it is symbolic of a future day in which all past ages will find their fulfillment. Whereas a day is with the Lord as a thousand years, then the "third day" after these events definitely speaks of the kingdom of God, John's day being the first, the day of grace the second, and the kingdom day the third.

There is to be a wedding on the third day, which Jesus will attend, not as a guest but as the bridegroom. With Him will be His many brethren who have come to sonship by His grace, even the fullness of God's Christ. This is the bridegroom who is to be united forever with that New Jerusalem bride, whom John saw descending from heaven as a bride adorned for her husband. Rev. 21:1, 2:9-27 Never was there such a bride as this and never such a groom. Of this union Adam was a type before Eve was separated from his body. But we must leave those blessed meditations for each thoughtful saint to peruse for himself while we consider in more detail the six waterpots of stone.
"And when they wanted wine, the mother of Jesus said unto Him, They have no wine. Jesus saith unto her, "Woman, what have I to do with thee? Mine hour is not yet come." The hour which He calls "My hour" will come when His kingdom is come, but that all men might foretaste the glory of that wonderful age when His hour has come, He set before us this prophetic miracle to gladden our hearts and to quicken our understandings in anticipation of the holiness, the power, and the glory the world will know when His hour, His kingdom, has come.

The six waterpots of stone represent the six dispensations, which precede the kingdom of God. The water which each contained is that special undying truth presented by God to the world in each dispensation - innocence, conscience, human government, promise, law, and grace. I think it is clearly evident that these waterpots were either altogether empty or very nearly so, and it is significant in the light of what we are about to say that Jesus our Lord ordered that they all be filled or re-filled with water; and they were filled according to His command right up to the brim. John 2:7 It is true that the truth that once filled the six dispensational waterpots has almost completely run out until there remains scarcely any truth in the earth. Preachers who disbelieve the virgin birth, deny the power of the blood of Christ, contradict the story of creation, puff at the truth of verbal inspiration, despise the resurrection, and scoff at the second coming of Christ proclaim their unbelief before the congregations of the land. Even among those who profess personal salvation there is an incredible ignorance of the purposes of God and a slavish adherence to every imaginable tradition. Whichever way we look at it the waterpots are empty and the life-giving glory of their truth has leaked out into the sands of tradition and heresy. While God's people are speaking of the dark ages of the past, they are unaware that all about us darkness covers the earth and gross darkness the people. Isa. 60:2.

The gospel of the kingdom of God will embrace within itself all the truth and revelation of all previous ages and much more besides, because the truth of those ages was weak through man's flesh - weak as water because of the sin and darkness of the human heart; but in the kingdom age, the age of "setting things right", that which was once as weak as water will be transformed by the Spirit into the strong wine of the kingdom, a strong spiritual wine that will gladden every heart and cause to live all that was ready to die. Let not our hearts ever imagine that our wise heavenly Father has been wasting time through the ages since Eden. Be that far from the truth. Little by little, line upon line, and precept upon precept He has been breaking the bread of life to mankind, lavishly spending entire dispensations to establish in the human family one golden nugget of truth that His divine nature in all its aspects might be revealed to us who are to have dominion, and that we through His Son, Jesus Christ, might become the possessors of the divine nature, that as He is so we might also be in this present world.

THE WATERPOT OF INNOCENCE

The noun innocence is an English word of very common usage, but that we might have a better understanding of the extent and purity of its meaning, I quote the following lengthy summary of it from Funk and Wagnall's Dictionary of the English language: (1) the state of being innocent; the condition of being free from evil or from that which corrupts or vitiates; purity of heart; freedom from taint. (2) Freedom from guilt as of some specific crime or charge; absence of legal guilt. (3) Freedom from harmful or noxious qualities; harmlessness; innocuousness. (4) Simplicity or ignorance arising from natural lack of intellect, or imperfect development or attainment. (5) Freedom from illegal taint. Some of the synonyms of innocence are: blamelessness, goodness, faultlessness, guiltlessness, harmlessness, innocuousness, inoffensiveness, purity, simplicity, sincerity, sinlessness, stainlessness, and virtue. The word innocent is explained as follows: Not tainted by sin; pure; ignorant of evil; blameless, as an innocent babe. In a more general sense, holy, sinless, free from guilt of a particular action or crime; free from qualities that can harm or injure; innocuous, harmless; of artless or ingenious disposition. Along with this beautiful statement belong the synonyms blameless, clean, clear, faultless, guileless, guiltless, harmless, immaculate, innocuous, innoxious, inoffensive, pure, right, righteous, sinless, stainless, upright, virtuous.

The first dispensation is the dispensation of innocence. It was not the Lord who gave it that lovely name; nevertheless, I cannot imagine a name that could be more fittingly ascribed to that illustrious genesis of the ages or that could better or more beautifully describe that blessed period of virtue and holiness that filled the world with its fragrance before the dark cloud of sin passed between man and his Lord. One would need a mind a thousand fold more fruitful than any mind on earth to contemplate the surpassing blessedness of an age in which those who governed it were untainted by sin, blameless as babes, free of crime, holy, harmless, undefiled, and devoid of any quality that could harm or injure as they walked in the smile of God. If there is any way of knowing how long that blessed age of innocence continued, I confess I am quite ignorant of it. There may be some slight evidence in Gen 5:3 in that Adam lived one hundred and thirty years and begat a son in his own image. Thus he probably lived a hundred or more years in his innocence before any of his sons were born. That, of course, is quite irrelevant, and, had it been necessary for us to know the number of years he continued in this blessed state, the Lord would certainly have made it plain to us. We are assured, however, that "in the day God created man, in the likeness of God made He him." Gen. 5:1. From the very beginning, before ever the dispensational tree began to bear its sevenfold fruit, God had sounded forth the mighty, irrevocable fiat: "Let Us make man in Our image, and after Our likeness, and let Us give him dominion."

With the most emphatic emphasis I solemnly state that the divine edict, "Let Us make man in Our image, and after Our likeness, and let Us give him dominion...", is forever irrevocable, irreversible, and completely immutable. Until men of God are able to understand that all things, both good and evil, that have fallen across our pathway have been ordained by the wisdom of God to work steadfastly and immutably toward the goal that man should be at last in the exact image of God who created him, we will never understand life as we should nor comprehend the ways of God. Until we understand, oh child of God, that the temptation and fall of man in Eden's lovely garden was an essential part of the eternal purpose, we will fall short in all spiritual understanding. We will find ourselves standing among that bewildered, tradition-ridden throng who by their teaching would have us to believe that Satan is wiser than the omniscient One in that he was able to thwart the plan of God by his chicanery when the Omnipresent was somehow absent. The beginning of all wisdom is the fear of God. Wisdom declares that there is no true wisdom apart from Him. None can fathom His omniscient ways nor gainsay the wisdom of His counsel. From Him everything comes; by Him everything exists; and in Him everything - everything - ends. He is before all things, and by Him all things consist. With what infinite wisdom did Paul say by the Spirit, "The creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him who hath subjected the same in hope." Rom. 8:20

Someone will certainly ask me, and justly so, "Why would God allow an age so glorious as the age of innocence with all its splendor and peace, ruled by a son of God as Adam was, to come to such an ignominious end? Why would He allow Adam, who was God's son, a man holy and undefiled in innocence, untainted by sin, free from qualities that could harm or injure, blameless, faultless, guileless, guiltless, immaculate, inoffensive, spotless, stainless and upright, to fall with the creation into a condition where his very nature became the enemy of God, his mind reprobate and bent to do all things that are not convenient, filled with all unrighteousness and wickedness? Why would God permit such an apparent calamity as this to befall man?" Was it a mistake? God is incapable of mistakes. Was it an error? God is incapable of error. Was it the cleverness of Satan? No! A thousand times no! It was all a part of the aeonian purpose to fulfill in God's omniscient manner the unalterable edict, "Let Us make man in Our image."

But someone will say, "Was not man already in God's image, since God made him so"? Yes, it is true that he was in God's image in all the beauty of his innocence, but there was one respect in which he was not in God's image. The innocence of man, being fraught with ignorance, falls as far short of the innocence of God as man's righteousness falls short of His righteousness. Bulwer made the remarkable statement, "Innocence is but a poor substitute for experience." Weigh the force of that irrefutable fact. Does it not disclose like an inspiration the absolute necessity of man's fall and the dreadful nightmare of his experience with sin? "The innocence that feels no risk and is taught no caution is more vulnerable than guilt, and oftener assailed." (N. P. Willis). Innocence and ignorance are like two sisters, one gullible and the other vulgar. How well it has been said that innocence and mystery never dwell long together!

The garden of innocence, though the most beautiful place on earth, is yet of all the most dangerous. It is perhaps innocence even more than self-will that makes every child imagine his parents are old-fashioned and archaic, too old-fashioned to be sympathetic and too set in their way to be understanding. What young people fail to understand is that their parents have already sailed these treacherous seas to learn in the school of experience that the innocent-appearing fruit of transgression contains the sting of death in its folds. Both innocence and ignorance are easily attracted by pretty faces.
With man's fall the age of innocence as a dispensation passed away; but let no man imagine that God has cast innocence away! Nay, rather through the tearful night of the fall there will come an innocence that Eden never knew, an innocence made pure and beautiful, refined and wise by both knowledge and experience. The criminal who has expiated his crime and paid the penalty of his guilt stands before the world as an innocent man. His innocence is no longer cursed with ignorance, but blessed with the knowledge of both good and evil. It is here the redemption that is in Christ Jesus has its powerful effect upon all who believe, for they who believe on Him are justified from all things from which we could not be justified by the Law of Moses. Acts 13:39 The blood of Jesus Christ, God's Son, cleanses from all sin, and because it does, we stand before God's throne innocent of the great transgressions. Psa. 19:13

The day is coming when Eden will be restored and mightily enlarged, for all the world will be an Eden, and those who have dominion in that glorious realm will be innocent men - not innocent and ignorant as was Adam, but innocent with knowledge from experience even as Christ, who was made sin for us that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him. And there shall be no night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun, for the Lord God giveth them light, and they shall reign unto the ages of the ages. Oh, fill to the brim the blessed waterpot of innocence that the Lord may turn it to wine!

THE WATERPOT OF CONSCIENCE

When man sinned and departed from the realm of innocence, his conscience was immediately awakened. Instinctively he knew within himself all that was good and all that was evil. It was a new realm to him and a new experience. As the piercing pains of an infirmity are a new revealing experience to one who has never known suffering, so the awakening of the conscience was a new experience to Adam, stabbing him with the pangs of conviction when he put forth his hand to evil, and comforting him when he did that which was right in the sight of God.

Conscience belongs to the realm of the Spirit, and the spirit of man is one in essence with the Spirit of God from whom it came. If we could grasp the depths of it and understand it fully, we would discover that our conscience is in fact God consciousness. Conscience is identical with the spirit. The spirit of man is the candle (light) of the Lord, searching all the inward parts of the belly. Prov. 20:27 It knows right from wrong and possesses an inherent understanding of good and evil. Is not this what Paul was saying to the Gentiles when he wrote. "For when the Gentiles, which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law, these, having not the law, are a law unto themselves: which show the work of the law written in their hearts, their conscience also bearing witness, and their thoughts the mean while accusing or else excusing one another." Rom. 2:14-15 Since the spirit in man came forth from God, Eccles. 12:7, and receives understanding from God, Job 32:8, it is therefore God-conscious, knowing the mind of God and the law of the Lord without instruction. Thus any man who truly walks according to the dictates of a pure conscience would find himself walking with God even as Enoch and Noah, who both were shining lights in the dispensation of conscience.

It is of great necessity that God's people awake to see all things as God sees them and understand them as God understands them. How often need we repeat the fact that all things from the Garden of Eden to the new heaven and the new earth, whether weal or woe, treasure or tragedy, have their sure foundation in the purpose and plan of God? Let it be well understood that God knew that man would not remain in innocence. He never intended that man should remain there. Adam in the ignorance of innocence was not fully in God's image as the entire race of Adam will eventually be. However foreign to tradition this statement may be, I declare without hesitation that, had Adam remained in innocence without the knowledge of good and evil, it would have utterly spoiled and ruined God's purpose in man for the government of the universe. If God's unalterable will was to make man in His image and give him dominion, something more was required than the pretty face of innocence. Man must know good and evil, and that by experience. The best general an army can have is a man who has experienced the blood and sweat and tears of the ranks and has seen the blood and fire and vapor of smoke. "Woe to thee, O land, when thy king is a child, and thy princes eat in the morning!" Eccles. 10:16 Ignorance rules the world now, but it will cease to be in the kingdom of God.

God did not intend that man should remain in the realm of conscience to walk side by side with the lusts of the flesh, the lusts of the eyes, and the pride of life. Neither did He intend that man should remain in the dispensation of promise, but that he should reach forward until the shadow of promise becomes the reality. Nor did God believe or hope that man would keep the holy law, written as it was on tables of stone, for it is spiritual and man is carnal, sold under sin. The law cannot be kept by carnal men and, even if it could, it would be incapable of purging the conscience from dead works. The law must pass from tables of stone to the tables of the heart. Then the law of God becomes the nature of man even as it is the nature of God.

The dispensation of conscience ended with the flood. Though Enoch and Noah and others walked in harmony with the Spirit of God within them, the mass of mankind had a conscience seared as it were with a hot iron, until at the end of that dispensation we have the disquieting testimony that "the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually". Gen. 6:5 While some walked with a conscience void of offence, Acts 24:16, others had a conscience seared as with a hot iron, 1 Tim. 4:2, completely incapable of knowing the mind or will of the Lord. "Unto the pure all things are pure: but unto them that are defiled and unbelieving is nothing pure; but even their mind and conscience is defiled. They profess that they know God; but in works they deny Him, being abominable, and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate." Tit. 1:15-16

Some years ago my wife and I stopped for breakfast at a restaurant a few miles west of Eau Claire, Wisconsin. As we rose to leave, I was intrigued by a little sign a boy had placed on his newspaper rack. It read: "Take a paper and put ten cents in the box. Your conscience is my only protection." I don't know the person who made that sign, but evidently he knew, as you and I also do, that any man who obeys his conscience will always do the thing that is right. Say not in your heart the dispensation of conscience ended in failure. Indeed, it did, but we have not seen the end of conscience, for it is evident that those innocent ones whom God is preparing to rule the world will also be people with a pure conscience, void of offence toward God and man.

THE WATERPOT OF HUMAN GOVERNMENT

"And God blessed Noah and his sons, and said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth. And the fear of you and the dread of you shall be upon every beast of the earth and upon every fowl of the air, upon all that moveth upon the earth, and upon all the fishes of the sea; into your hand are they delivered." See Gen. 9:1-17 This last clause is the most significant part of the new covenant God made with man after the flood had brought an end to those who sinned against their own consciences. Man was made lord over all things, the fish, the animals, the birds, and the beasts of the field. All were put beneath his power. He was even given authority to put to death either man or beast who had shed human blood. From this we clearly see how completely the government of the earth was placed in the hands of Noah and his sons.

Suffice it to say now that God never intended this new covenant to succeed, and indeed it did not. At Babel a curse was placed upon humanity from which we have never recovered and from which we never will recover until all things are united in Jesus Christ. Human government had to fail. God intended that it should. Just as innocence with ignorance was found wanting, and conscience, defiled by man's sinful nature, had to fail, so man must learn and that by experience that the carnal mind is not fit to rule the world and must fail under every system from democracy to totalitarianism. Oh, how evident this is on every side in our day! Human government did not end with the call of Abraham, but continues on even in our day and will continue until He comes whose right it is to reign, and God will give the government to Him. Ezek. 21:27 Man has tried every system of government that his mind could conceive - monarchies, democracies, communism, kings, presidents and dictators - but there is no soundness in any of them. There is only a continual degeneration until now at the end of the age nature itself is rebelling against man's misrule and threatening to destroy him from the face of the earth.

Nevertheless, let us not see only the abject failure. The failure is an important part of the plan of God. Before God writes "finis" to the rule of man, every person from the least to the greatest will know that every system the human heart can devise must end in failure, because man is evil and carnal, self-willed, selfish, and self-seeking. Because in our day above all other times men and women are lovers of their own selves, all the horrible confusion of 2 Tim. 3:1-11 has been turned loose upon us. But let us remember and never forget that the first edict concerning man was this: "Let Us make man in Our image, and after Our likeness, and let Us give him dominion..." Child of God, the Almighty Lord, the Maker of heaven and earth, has decreed that the government of this world is to be given to man. Human government was the plan devised in the mind of God before ever He made man, but it is not to corrupt and carnal man that the final government of the world will be given. It will be given to men who through the victory of Jesus Christ have come into the fullness of God's image and likeness. Throughout the ages, the dispensations, and the millennia past God has been preparing a first fruit company in His image. They have suffered with Him. They have gone to the cross with Him. They have been changed by His Spirit from glory to glory. They have cast off the works of the flesh and the carnal mind. They have let the mind of Christ dwell in them; and even now they are laid away, waiting for that blessed hour when they will rise to reign with Him.

Despise not the waterpot of human government, for the truth it contains is the eternal edict of the Lord. Man in God's image will rule the world and the universe. Today, to be sure, it is weak as water and the vessel is empty as well, but the hour is at hand when this water also will be changed to the strength of a wine that will gladden all creation when the world is ruled by the "body of Christ", that man whom He has chosen.

THE WATERPOT OF PROMISE

Dispensations once begun never end. Innocence did not end with the fall. Innocence of the Edenic type is still with us in every baby that is born. Conscience did not end with the flood. Conscience is still with us and is to be found in the hearts of all Adam's descendants. Human government did not end with the call of Abraham. Human government still continues all about us, a greater failure than ever. Neither did the dispensation of promise end with the coming of the Law of Moses. The promise is still with us. Every man who is waiting for the kingdom of God is patiently awaiting the fulfillment of a promise. The Law of Moses did not end with the coming of Jesus Christ, but it was completely fulfilled in Him, and now He abides in me and in every man who believes. All who dwell in Him love His law, for it has become our nature even as it is His nature. And what shall we say of grace, the unmerited favor of God? Will grace end with the coming of the kingdom? It can easily be shown that the grace of God has scarcely begun to be manifested in this age. The truth is that it is in the ages to come that God will show the exceeding riches of His grace. Eph. 2:6-7 This passage clearly shows that in the ages to come God will use us as living proofs, testimonies and witnesses of His kindness and grace. In this age He has but few witnesses; in the ages to come He will have myriads.

I regret that in considering the covenant of promise it is necessary because of space to confine ourselves to a mere outline. If the child of God will let his mind roam in the shining paths of spiritual revelation as he considers the far-reaching horizons of the promises given to Abraham, he will soon realize that the pages necessary to embrace its truth could not be written. When the Almighty speaks of a seed as numerous as the sands and as uncountable as the stars, then mankind is left gasping for breath and groping for words. The two covenants given to Adam and the covenant given to Noah were very great, but the covenant given to Abraham is so all-embracing that it is with shamefacedness I attempt to set forth a few of its precepts.

Man, because of his ignorance, had failed in innocence. Under conscience he had become corrupt because of the lusts of his own flesh, his conscience being completely defiled. In human government he had also failed, desiring to make a name for himself at the abominable tower of Babel. But now a new covenant is given, a covenant that will never pass away, but remain forever. The covenant of promise given to Abraham was repeated on three different occasions, and on each occasion terms of ever increasing significance were added to it.

Abram was the grandson of Shem nine generations removed, but Shem outlived Abram by thirty-five years. After the dispersal at Babel the Lord said unto Abram, "Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will shew thee: And I will make thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing. And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed." Gen. 12:1-3

This is the first part of the covenant, and any thoughtful reader will see that, though four thousand years have elapsed since the promise was made, it is still only partially fulfilled, and a very small part at that. How strange must Abraham often have felt as year after year, decade after decade, he walked along the road of trust without the remotest or most insignificant sign that the promise of God would ever be fulfilled! But God is unlike man, who is of few days and ever encompassed with uncertainties. One day with our Father is as a thousand years and a thousand years are but yesterday when they are past. One of the delights of my life has been to gaze with awe upon the giant redwood trees of California. It is believed that some of these mighty monarchs are five thousand years old. They were saplings while Adam was still on earth and they were standing there when God made His covenant with Abraham four thousand years ago. Who but our wonderful Lord would plant a seed in the ground, looking forward five thousand years to see the forest? But that is the kind of thing He delights in doing. So He said to Abraham, "In thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed", and while Abraham, poor human that he was, expected to see the promise completely fulfilled in his lifetime, the Eternal was looking forward, not only to millenniums and dispensations, but to ages of ages - yea, to eternity itself.

When God's promise to Abraham is complete, every nation will be blessed in him and in his seed and every son of Adam will be found walking in the light of the Lord. All that was cursed will be blessed and all that was lost will be found.

It was after Abraham was separated from the members of his family that the Lord entrusted to him the first part of the covenant - that He would make of him a great nation and all the families of the earth would be blessed in him. But, when he was also separated from Lot, the Lord renewed and enlarged the covenant with him, saying, "Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward: for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever. And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth: so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered." Gen. 13:14-16 I doubt not that Abraham saw the whole earth on this occasion and not merely a tiny strip of country we commonly call Palestine. Since his seed was to be as innumerable as the dust of the earth, it would require the earth to contain it. Indeed, Paul confirmed this very view when he said, "For the promise, that he should be heir of the world, was not to Abraham or his seed through the law..." Rom. 4:13 In like manner as Jesus Christ was taken to a high mountain and shown all the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them, and that by Satan, so the Lord showed Abraham the whole world and made him heir of it.

Consider how great this promise was that he should be the heir of the world. His seed was to be as the dust of the earth because he was the heir of the world. The whole world was to become his possession and the possession of his seed. He was not made heir in a spiritual sense only, but in a literal sense as well. Even in this age of sin, when all men walk in a measure of darkness, that promise has seen a partial fulfillment. The seed of Abraham both spiritually and literally is planted in the uttermost parts of the earth, possessing and inhabiting the choicest places of the world. Perhaps the greatest blindness in the Christian world is our failure to understand that after the death of Solomon, the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob was divided into two distinct houses and two distinct kingdoms - the house of Judah, consisting of Judah and Benjamin, and the house of Israel, consisting of the remaining ten tribes, 1 Kings 12:16-24, the house of Judah, possessing the royal scepter, Gen. 49:10, and the house of Israel, or Ephraim, possessing the birthright. Gen. 48:16-20 Simeon said by the Spirit that Jesus Christ would be the glory of God's people, Israel, Luke 2:33, and so He has been, but the house of Judah rejected him. Of them it is written, "He came unto His own, but His own received Him not." Paul said, "Blindness in part has happened to Israel," and it is my sincere opinion that our blindness is most readily seen in that we neither know nor wish to know that we are the house of Israel, and heirs of the promise made to Abraham. It is almost, if not altogether, impossible to grasp the full significance of the promises given to Abraham if we fail to understand that it was Abraham's seed, both physical and spiritual, who were to become possessors of the earth and the blessers of every nation in it.

Notice further the progress of the promise made to Abraham, who dwelt in Ur of the Chaldees near to the famous city of Babylon. The Lord said to him, "Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, and I will make of thee a great nation." Gen. 12:1-2 His obedience at first was incomplete, and it was not until after the death of his father that he separated himself as God had told him. After this came the separation from his nephew, Lot, and with this obedience came a great expansion of God's promise. "Lift up thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward, for all the land, which thou seest, to thee will I give it and to thy seed for ever." Gen. 13:14 This was the promise of the land and everything in it. God has not written off the earth. Heaven itself will scarcely exceed the glory that will come upon this earth when the promises made to Abraham are all complete. I say without fear or hesitation that what Eden was to the whole earth in the days of Adam's innocence, so the earth will be to the whole universe when the water is turned to wine.
Though Abraham was separated from his country, his father's house, and now his nephew, there was still a more important separation that must be made. It was the slaughter of the flesh. There is not space enough in this article to prove that the warring kings of Canaan, five kings against four, Gen. 14:9, were symbolic of the flesh, but after the slaughter of these kings Abraham was met and blessed by Melchisedec, priest of the most high God, that strange priest without father, without mother, without beginning of days nor end of life. Heb. 7:1-3 He, bringing forth bread and wine, blessed Abraham, saying, "Blessed be Abram of the most high God, possessor of heaven and earth." Gen. 14:17-19 But Abram was greatly troubled, for, though the promise was great, no child was given in whom the promise that he should be a great nation and possessor of the earth could be fulfilled. The Lord added at this time yet another promise to the covenant. "And He brought him forth abroad, and said, Look now toward heaven, and tell the stars, if thou be able to number them: and He said unto him, So shall thy seed be." Gen. 15:5 Men have always been intrigued by the stars and it is, I suppose, for this reason that men are reaching for outer space. The vastness of the universe and the number of the stars are so completely beyond the comprehension of man that it is entirely incredible; but, though we know little of the heavens, the facts have already gone beyond our wildest imaginations.

Astronomers now conclude that a rocket, traveling ten thousand times the speed of Apollo 14, would take four million, five hundred thousand years to reach the farthest star visible to the naked eye. It is estimated that our Milky Way galaxy contains about one hundred thousand million stars. Light travels at the incredible speed of one hundred eighty-six thousand miles per second or five trillion, eight hundred eighty billion miles in one year. At this speed the moon is one and one-half seconds away, Delta Cephei is about two thousand years away, and Hercules is fifty thousand years away. It is estimated that there are between five hundred billion and one trillion planets in our galaxy. I once sat enthralled as I listened to an astronomer speak of the universe. In the course of his talk he made this astonishing statement: "It is estimated that the stars in the heavens and the sands of the sea are about equal in number." "So," saith God, "shall thy seed be."

At long last came the wonderful day when Isaac, the promised son, was born, in whom the promises would be realized. Then came the great trial of offering this young man upon the altar of sacrifice, but, when Abraham in obedience to God had offered his son on the altar, the Lord again confirmed the covenant with him, saying, "By Myself have I sworn, for because thou hast done this thing, and has not withheld thy son, thine only son: that in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of heaven and as the sand which is upon the sea shore; and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies; and in thy seed shall all nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed My voice." Gen. 22:16-18

In the blessing, "Thy seed shall be as the sand" and "thy seed shall be as the stars", we have a double promise and a double blessing. From Abraham there would arise a seed of faith, a spiritual seed as numberless as the stars, and from Abraham there would come an earthly seed as numberless as the sand of the sea, possessors of the earth and blessers of the universe. If you have faith at all, you will clearly see that the promises made to Abraham have only just begun to see fulfillment. His seed was not as the sand only, but as the stars also, for "in Isaac shall thy seed be called." Rom. 9:7 Paul has clearly stated that the particular seed of Isaac was Jesus Christ, Gal. 3:16, the Saviour of the world and the Redeemer of Israel. John. 3:16. "It is in Him, and through the shedding of His blood, that we have our deliverance - the forgiveness of our offences - so abundant was God's grace, the grace which He, the possessor of all wisdom and understanding, lavished upon us when He made known to us the secret of His will... in Him, too, we have been made heirs, having been chosen beforehand in accordance with the intention of Him whose might carries out in everything the design of His own will, so that we should be devoted to the extolling of His glorious attributes - we who were the first to fix our hopes on Christ." Eph. 1:7-12 (Weymouth). Vast beyond all human ability to comprehend or teach was the covenant of promise given to Abraham that through him and his seed, redeemed and saved by the shedding of the blood of Jesus Christ, all mankind would find their Head in Jesus Christ and all the universe would be restored and governed.

THE WATERPOT OF LAW

The fifth dispensation is the dispensation of law. The law was given by Moses. God established the law through him. The pure water of truth contained in this fifth waterpot will eventually be the law of the whole universe. It will never again be found written on tables of stone, from thence to speak terror to unregenerate men, but saith God, "A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you: and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh. And I will put My Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in My statutes, and ye shall keep My judgments, and do them." Ezek. 36:26-27 There is nothing weak or insipid about the law of God. Paul told us that the law was "weak through the flesh". The flesh is corrupt and carnal. It is an implacable enemy of God. All its desires are contrary to God. Thus the law was completely ineffectual because unregenerate men lived after the flesh and not after the Spirit. The law is spiritual, but I am carnal, sold under sin. Rom. 7:14 The trouble is not with the law. The trouble is with you and me. It is not the law that needs to be changed; it is the people. It was for this very purpose that Jesus Christ came - that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. Rom. 8:1-4.

There is a great evil among the nations, for they are always changing their laws to accommodate the corruption of the people. God does the opposite to this. He changes the people to suit His laws, taking away the stony heart, converting them, and making them alive in His Son, Jesus Christ. Men want to break the Sabbath so we change the law to make it legal. Because a few people insist on degrading themselves with the filth of Sodom, the law forbidding sodomy is changed and homosexual acts are made lawful. Because some insist on smoking marijuana, the government appoints a committee, hoping to legalize it by a change of law. Thus corruption is added to corruption, sin-to-sin, and abomination-to-abomination. The Lord does not change His laws nor discard them to suit the carnal minds and filthy ways of sinful, ungenerated people. He does exactly the opposite to this. Instead of discarding the laws or changing them to suit the unregenerate heart, He has provided a way whereby the heart itself can be changed and the soul converted, bringing it into harmony with the nature of God. Then the word of the Lord and the law of the Lord flow as naturally and joyfully from the renewed heart as from the heart of God Himself. Those of us who are in Christ Jesus have discovered for ourselves the wonderful truth spoken before by Ezekiel the prophet, "I will give them one heart, and I will put a new spirit within you; and I will take the stony heart out of their flesh, and will give them an heart of flesh: that they may walk in My statutes, and keep Mine ordinances, and do them: and they shall be My people, and I will be their God." Ezek. 11:19-20 By this be it forever known that God cannot change His law to suit the carnal man, but instead He converts the carnal man that he may be in harmony with the law of God.

David, the sweet singer of Israel, was one of the most informative of all inspired writers. His spiritual experience lifted him so far above all slavish subordination to written commandments that his inspired soul exulted, "Thou desirest not sacrifice; else would I give it: Thou delightest not in burnt-offering. The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit: a broken and contrite heart, O God, Thou wilt not despise." Psa. 51:16-17 This man, who had sinned so terribly against God and against Uriah, 2 Sam. 11, knew he had no hope in the law. He had broken it and was condemned. Being guilty in one point, he was guilty in all. "Thou desirest truth in the inward parts" he sobbed, "and in the hidden parts Thou shall make me to know wisdom. Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean: wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow. Make me to hear joy and gladness that the bones, which Thou hast broken may rejoice. Hide Thy face from my sins, and blot out all mine iniquities. Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me." Psa. 51:6-10

How clearly it can be seen from this prayer of repentance and this earnest plea for a new heart and a new spirit that it was not God who was changing His laws to condone David's sin, but it was David who must be converted, changed, and regenerated that he might be conformed to the image of God. That is what conversion is for. That is why Peter said, "Repent and be converted that your sins may be blotted out" when the distraught and convicted multitude cried, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" It is man's heart that is wrong and evil and unregenerate. God is holy and the law is holy and the commandment just and good. Rom. 7:12 No more forceful argument can be presented to demonstrate the incontestable necessity of conversion and the new birth than the fact that man is carnal, sold under sin, contrary to God and all that emanates from Him. In his natural condition he is an enemy of God, unconverted and unregenerate and by nature a child of wrath, without God and without hope in the world. Though the lawbreaker may try henceforth to keep the law, his efforts are hopeless because he who offends in one point is guilty of all. His one and only hope is in Christ.

He is the Ark of the Covenant and the law is kept in Him. Thus it follows that all who believe in Him are justified from all things. Acts 13:37 Their hearts are transformed by His power. Because Christ lives in them, God's law is in their hearts, and so it has come to pass that He who condemned them in time past now presents them faultless in Christ and witnesses of the righteousness of God.

I greatly long that God's people would see as God sees and understand truth with the understanding of God. When the law was given to Moses on two tables of stone, do you imagine for even a moment that God either expected or hoped that the people would be able to keep that law? The all-wise Lord was well aware of carnal man's inability to keep His law. He knew man would transgress and stand condemned before God, and that is exactly what He wanted, for, the moment man breaks the law, his eyes are open to see his need of a righteousness much higher than his own. He awakens to his desperate need of a change of heart, a conversion, a new birth, a transformation, a new spirit, and a new mind. Well do we know that we cannot be justified by a broken law. The righteousness of God can never be attained in this manner. Therefore the law of God manifests our depravity graciously, lovingly, and kindly, leading us to the Lord Jesus Christ, the only Man who ever kept the law of God. The apostle Paul said, "The law is our school-master (pedagogue) to bring us to Christ." The Roman pedagogue was a slave whose duty it was to take the children to the school and see that they did not play truant on the way. Young's translation of this passage says, "The law is our child conductor to Christ that by faith we may be declared righteous." How wonderful that is! Let everyone who reads these lines know of a certainty that the law is not our enemy, but is God's servant, God's policeman, if you please, to bring us to Christ. Without the law we would never see our need of Him. The law is not an enemy of Christ. It is His best friend, ever pointing men to Him. Law is not an enemy of grace, because its divine purpose is to cause us to trust in Christ that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him. 2 Cor. 5:21

In the wilderness tabernacle the laver of cleansing was made from the brass mirrors of the Israelitish women. Ex. 38:8 The laver represented the law of God, but the water it held was for the cleansing of the priests. The brazen laver could never cleanse, but like the law it represented it could show the people as a mirror their uncleanness and send them to the water for the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Spirit. 1 Tim. 1:8. is a revealing scripture: "The law is good if a man use it lawfully." It follows, then, that it would be bad to use it unlawfully. Its lawful use is to bring men to Christ. Its unlawful use is to try to attain righteousness by it. "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul: the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple. The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart: the commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eyes. The fear of the Lord is clean, enduring forever; the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether. More to be desired are they than gold, yea, than much fine gold: sweeter also than honey and the honeycomb." Psa. 19:7-10

What I am saying here is not the picture painted by orthodoxy. To people of understanding, however, it may be clearly seen that the law, condemned by many as our enemy, is in fact our faithful friend and pedagogue in the hand of the Holy Spirit to display God's righteousness and so bring us to a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ, whom God has made unto us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption. 1 Cor.1:30. Psa. 119 is the longest chapter of the Bible, and every verse but three speaks of the law of God either as law, precepts, statutes, commandments, judgments, or some other kindred expression, each verse expressing the infinite value of God's law. Paul, to whom God committed the gospel of grace, made these enlightening observations: "Wherefore the law is holy, and the commandment holy and just and good." Rom. 7:12 "I delight in the law of God after the inward man." Rom. 7:22 Of course he did, because, when Christ enters the life of any man, He who kept the law transforms the believer into the image of God who gave it.

Have you considered what this present world would be like if all men loved God with all their strength? Well, men do love God when Christ comes in. Have you considered what the world would be like if every man kept the law, “thou shall not steal? Or “thou shall not covet?” Or “thou shall not bear false witness”? Or “thou shall not kill?” Or “thou shall not commit adultery?” Or “honor thy father and mother?” Think for an hour or two what a transformation would come over all the earth if this law were in every heart. The world would be transformed in one day, would it not? It is impossible lo imagine the peace, the security, the happiness that would settle upon us. There wouldn't be a policeman, a jail, a broken home, or a broken heart in all the world. Let me assure you that when the kingdom of God fills the earth and the universe, the law of God, abiding in every heart by the indwelling Christ, will pervade the whole universe. Because the law of God is the nature of God and the nature of Jesus Christ, it will also be the nature of every man. The hour is not far away when this fifth waterpot will be refilled to the brim to become a wine living and vital and real to all the earth and to the universe as well.

THE WATERPOT OF GRACE

The law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ. John 1:17. We have already stated that the law, briefly contained in the ten commandments of Exodus, chapter 20, is the very nature of God, manifesting His character and holiness as nothing else can possibly do. Grace came by Jesus Christ, and grace also is the nature of God. Let us never forget that it was God the Father who "so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life. For God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through Him might be saved." John 3:16-17 "Ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though He was rich, yet for your sakes He became poor, that ye through His poverty might become rich."

It never was God's intention to save either Jews or Gentiles by the law. The foundational and fundamental purpose of the law was to show man that, if he would ever attain the righteousness of God, righteousness would have to be imputed to him as a free gift of God's grace; otherwise it could never be attained. "In the case of a man who works, pay is not reckoned as a favor but as something due; whereas in the case of a man who in place of working believes in Him who acquits the ungodly, his faith is credited to him as righteousness." Rom. 4:4 (Weymouth) There is no possible way that man can come into the image of God by his own merit. Neither his innocence, his conscience, his government, his law, or even the promise would do him any good at all if he did not believe. God is making man in His own image; therefore man must have God's righteousness, which can only be received through faith in Christ. With God's Christ is given God's innocence, God's righteousness, God's holiness, God's law, God's grace, God's nature, and God's mind. Yea, and furthermore with God's Son comes the wisdom and the understanding with which to govern the world in righteousness and reconcile all things unto Him. All must be Christ. Christ must be all. He must be all and in all.

"The grace of God that bringeth salvation has appeared to all men, teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world; looking for the blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ; who gave Himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto Himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works." Tit. 2:11-14 That is the teaching of grace, at least in part. It has appeared to all men and the purpose of its appearing is to bring salvation. Grace not only teaches us to live soberly, righteously, and godly, but also empowers the believer to do this fully. His grace redeems us from the realm of iniquity, filling the soul with godly zeal for every good work. Show me a believer whose life is not transformed by grace divine and I will show you a man who has never truly believed. He who truly believes into Christ is both justified and purified as well, and this the grace of God abundantly teaches.

It should be the desire of every child of God to remove his feet as far as possible from what we might term technicalities concerning grace and law. Always remember that, if we must descend to any form of carnal argument concerning spiritual matters, the spirit of revelation immediately abandons us to the dark mists of the natural mind. Someone has wisely said, "A religious argument is like a dog fight in a flower bed. Nothing is settled but the flowers." I have seen men argue about doctrine until all grace and love had fled and nothing was left in them but angry retorts and contradictions. Let us put from us all forms of contention and strivings about the law, or grace, or innocence, or restitution while the Holy Spirit reveals all things to our understanding. Then we will see how the feathers of this beautiful dove fit themselves together. As the members of the physical body with their diversity of gifts and uses work together in marvelous harmony so that the eye cannot say to the ear, "I have no need of you" or the hand to the foot, "I have no need of you", so let us see all things as integral parts of God's eternal purpose whether they be of conscience, or promise, or law, or grace, or the kingdom, working together like true yoke-fellows toward an eternal goal and not as enemies one of the other.

We have already shown that the truth of a dispensation once begun has no end. The truth each brought is fulfilled in Christ and we are made perfect in Him. The waterpots of truth will be refilled at the marriage of the Lamb and the wine of their ancient truth will be presented to the world, not as water, but as life-giving wine. I now say that the grace of God will never end. Times without number men have preached that the day of grace will soon be ended. Nonsense, my friend! Grace is God's inner nature] If grace must end, then God Himself must end; but that which is eternal has no end.

As the covenant of law was given by Moses, so the gospel of grace was revealed by Paul, who said, "If ye have heard of the dispensation of the grace of God which is given me to youward; how that by revelation He made known unto me the mystery (as I wrote afore in few words...)") Eph. 3:2-3 It is for this reason that his epistles take foremost place in the New Testament, and all his writings are an unfolding of this most glorious truth. The covenant of promise concerned a family; the covenant of law concerned a nation, but the covenant of grace concerns the whole world, and by it all who believe are justified from all things from which we could not be justified by the law of Moses. See the universal potential contained in these awe-inspiring words: "Unto me, who am less than the least of all saints, is this grace given, that I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ; and to make all men see what is the fellowship of the mystery, which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God, who created all things by Jesus Christ: to the intent that now unto the principalities and powers in heavenly places might be known by the church the manifold wisdom of God, according to the eternal purpose which He purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord.” Eph. 3:8-11

The transforming power of God's grace, which comes to us in Christ in this age and the marvelous hope/or others in the ages to come is developed by Paul in these words: "You hath He quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins: wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of the world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience: among whom we also had our conversation in times past in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind; and were by nature the children of wrath, even as others. But God, who is rich in mercy, for His great love wherewith He loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ (by grace are ye saved); and hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus: that in the ages to come He might shew the exceeding riches of His grace in His kindness toward us through Christ Jesus. For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God.” Eph. 2:1-8

Lest any man should doubt God's intention concerning the redemption of all mankind and the restitution of all things, Paul twice in this passage, verses 5 and 8, reminds us and every other recipient of God's grace that it was only by God's boundless grace that we ourselves were saved from the most appalling depths of sin. Why then should we who were the first to receive such marvelous grace now think that it will be denied to others in the ages to come? And especially so since verse 7 clearly teaches that it will be by us that God in ages to come will demonstrate this grace in all His universe!

THE KINGDOM OF GOD IS AT HAND

The third day there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee. One day John bore faithful record that Jesus was the Son of God. The next day, standing with two of his disciples, he said, "Behold the Lamb of God;" and the two disciples left him standing alone and went to follow Jesus. John 1:15-35. The next day, that is, the third day, there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee. For the past two thousand years servants sent of God have been pointing men to Jesus Christ. "Behold the Lamb of God" has been their theme. But now the third day, the long awaited kingdom of God, is at hand, that gloriously wonderful age in which Christ in all His fullness shall reign, and all the sons of God will reign with Him. The kingdom age will be the beginning of true human government, for every man who will reign with Christ in the glory of that age will be a transformed man, a true son of God, a man made in the image of Christ and the likeness of God. They will all be innocent men, not as Adam, whose beautiful innocence was despoiled by the ugliness of ignorance, but as redeemed men, whose holy innocence was made perfect through experience and suffering and now stands spotless, faultless, and uncondemned through the blood of Jesus Christ our Lord.

In that blessed kingdom day the promise of God, confirmed and re-confirmed to Abraham, will no longer be a promise afar off. No more will he or his children be looking for a city which hath foundations, for at the end of the kingdom age the Holy City, the New Jerusalem bride of Christ, having twelve foundations, will be seen descending from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. Blessed be the name of the Lord!

Weakness will change to magnificent strength;
Failure will change to perfection at length;
Sorrow will change to unending delight;
Walking by faith changed to walking by sight.

The law of God, once thundered from Sinai, before which the unregenerate cringed in terror, will then be written in every heart to become the conscience and nature of the sons of God. In that day the ransomed of the Lord with choral voice and a harmony that fills the universe will sing:

The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul!
The testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple!
The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart!
The commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eyes!
The fear of the Lord is clean, enduring forever!
The judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether!
More to be desired are they than gold, yea, than much fine gold;
Sweeter also than honey and the honeycomb!
By them is thy servant warned,
And in keeping of them is great reward.

Psa. 19:7-11.

And what can I more say of the grace of God in that wonderful day when it falls like the dew of Hermon from the lips and lives of the sons of God? Wonderful though grace has been in this age of grace, it has been as weak as water compared to the power and glory of its manifestation in the kingdom age and the ages and ages that will follow. Then shall the grace of God be as a sun going forth through the heavens and as a shield to every man. "For the Lord God is a sun and a shield: the Lord will give grace and glory..." Psa. 84:11 Jesus Christ is the firstborn of many brethren. He is the eldest and head of all the sons of God. Of all the host of living stones He is the head stone. In that blessed kingdom day, when the water is turned to life-giving wine, "He shall bring forth the headstone thereof with shouting, crying, Grace, grace unto it." Zech. 4:7 With the understanding that grace will be fully manifested in that blessed kingdom age through the family of God's sons, I believe all who read these lines will understand as never before, yea, even as water turned to wine, the significance of Paul's inspired statement when he said, "God hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus, that in the ages to come He might show the exceeding riches of His grace in His kindness toward us, through Jesus Christ." The greatest witness to the grace of our loving Lord will be manifested to all nations when by His infinite grace we stand in His likeness and in His presence, living, immortal, incorruptible testimonies of the grace of God that brings salvation. Thus through His kindness toward us shall all men in ages to come be shown the exceeding riches of His grace.

On that memorable day of Pentecost, there came a sound from heaven as a mighty rushing wind, and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost and began to speak with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance.
Then the mockers and men who lacked understanding said, "These men are full of new wine;" but Peter, standing up, said, "These are not drunken, as ye suppose... but this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel; And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out My Spirit upon all flesh..." Acts 2:13-
17. The age of grace was initiated with the pouring out of the wonderful new wine of the Holy Spirit as God changed and filled and transformed the lives of countless believers, but the best wine, the wine of the Spirit in all its fullness, is reserved for the age to come, even the kingdom, which is at the door.

The third day there was a marriage in Cana, and on that day when they wanted wine, Jesus said, "Mine hour is not yet come." He is the king and His hour comes in fullness only when the kingdom comes. When at last the glory of that age dawns upon the world, His first command will be, "Fill the waterpots with water." Then will the water of truth, drawn from the waterpots of the ages, be found to be no more water, but life giving wine, and this will be the gospel of the kingdom of God, which will gladden every heart until the earth and all the universe as well shall sing the glad refrain with things in heaven and earth and in the sea, "Blessing and honor and glory and power to Him that sitteth upon the throne and unto the Lamb for timeless ages." Amen and Amen!
CHAPTER THREE
THE ELECT OF LAODICEA

That we are now living in the end of the dispensation of grace there can be no reasonable doubt. Not only is this statement true, but the rapidly accumulating evidence declares that we are now seeing the final hours, if not the closing moments, of that great drama of the church age which had its beginning almost two thousand years ago. The momentous days in which we live herald the end of a dispensation, and their importance is magnified when we grasp the fact that the conclusion of the dispensation of grace is also the conclusion of the sixth dispensation since Adam. It is the end of the sixth one thousand year day. "Six days shall thou labor and do all thy work," saith the Lord, "and the seventh is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God." Six days for man's labor, innocence, conscience, human government, promise, law, and grace - but the seventh is the Lord's day, the dispensation of the kingdom of God!

For six thousand years man with his carnal mind has fumbled and bungled, muddled and fought, cheated and destroyed, and we at the end of the age with all our vaunted scientific know-how are the worst bunglers and muddlers, war mongers, cheaters, and polluters of all time. So dreadful has the situation become that "except those days be shortened, there shall no flesh be saved." We need no flood to destroy us as overwhelmed the earth in the days of Noah. We are perfectly capable of destroying ourselves. We have polluted the air, the water, the land. We have polluted the minds, the conscience, and the morals of men until the thoughts and imaginations of the human heart are only evil continually. Corruption reigns supreme from the throne to the dungeon. How true a word of inspiration was given by Paul when he wrote, "Because they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them up to a reprobate mind, to do those things which are not convenient; being filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity, whisperers, backbiters, haters of God, despisers, proud, boasters, inventors of evil things, disobedient to parents, without understanding, covenant breakers, without natural affection, implacable, unmerciful: who, knowing the judgment of God, that they which commit such things are worthy of death, not only do the same, but have pleasure in them that do them." Rom. 1:28-32 All national corruption springs forth like a wild beast from its lair when the people forget God.

Paul in his epistle to Timothy gave such a vivid prophetic description of the last days of this age and with such plain language that no amount of comment could add aught to the truths he wrote. We need only to watch the news media to know that each and every prediction he made is now in glaring fulfillment on every hand. There is no place one can look or walk without being faced with the literal fulfillment of every word he uttered. Even the most ungodly or unthinking, the unconcerned, the unbeliever, or the atheist could not fail to be impressed with the accuracy of Paul's prophetic account, written almost two thousand years ago. It is unthinkable to imagine that anything less than divine inspiration could have written in such vivid detail the things we now see fulfilled on every hand. Look and carefully consider, deciding in your own mind whether anything he spoke of the last days is untrue, or whether any detail of the things he prophesied in 2 Tim. 3:1-7 is missing from our society. These are the things he wrote: (1) "This know also that in the last days perilous times shall come, (2) for men shall be lovers of their own selves, (3) covetous, (4) boasters, (5) proud, (6) blasphemers, (7) disobedient to parents, (8) unthankful, (9) unholy, (10) without natural affection, (11) truce-breakers, (12) false accusers, (13) incontinent (that is, exercising no control over the appetites and passions), (14) fierce, (15) despisers of those that are good, (16) traitors, (17) heady (headstrong), (18) high minded (self-important), (19) lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, (20) having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof". In connection with this corrupt trend Paul adds this caustic comment: "For of this sort are they which creep into houses, and lead captive silly women laden with sins, led away with divers lusts, (21) ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth." Peruse these twenty-one statements of prophetic inspiration and you will agree that without one exception they are being fulfilled in our day. Not only do they find fulfillment in our country, but they are being fulfilled in every corner of the globe regardless of any system of government and regardless of any system of religion.

Should it be thought by some that the prophecies of which we have spoken describe only the condition of the temporal world around us, let it be fully known that all things spoken of the church system are now also in exact fulfillment and in the exact condition that God has told us they would be.
Christ, the faithful and true witness, the Amen, the beginning of the creation of God, sent a message to the church of our day - to the Christians who live in the end of the age. Just as Paul's prophecy to Timothy concerning the last days was exact and accurate in every detail, so Christ's prophecy to the church at Laodicea, the church that represents the spiritual decadence at the end of the age, is exact in every detail. See Rev. 3:14-22. "I know thy works," He begins; and wise He was to open His allegations with that statement. Never in the history of the world has there been so much church work. It is positively indescribable - at home and abroad, on the air and off the air, in the buildings and outside the buildings, in the mail and on the street, everybody zealous to convince somebody of something and, worse still, almost everyone begging for money to propagate his work. Yet for all this enormous and almost unbelievable effort, the preaching, the broadcasting, the television, the great campaigns, the literature, the personal work, the Sunday Schools, the missionary work, the Bible Society work, feeding the hungry, clothing the poor, and all the plans and schemes that go along with these programs to carry them out, the judgment of God upon it is, "Thou art neither cold nor hot: I would that thou wert cold or hot. So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of My mouth." As lukewarm water turns the stomach and provokes vomiting, so lukewarm professors turn the heart of Christ against them. He is sick of them and cannot bear them, and so He spues them out.

I fear that such as this is not a very happy prospect. We would be wise to stop dead in our tracks and retrace our steps that we might discover where it was we left off serving God and loving Him to cram our lives full of endless works and alms deeds, all the while growing lukewarm in soul and distasteful to the Lord. He who once appointed burnt-offering and oblations now says to those who offer them, "Bring no more vain oblations; incense is an abomination unto Me; the new moons and Sabbaths, the calling of assemblies, I cannot away with; it is iniquity, even the solemn meeting." Isa. 1:13 That is what happens when Christians become filled with works while love for God has simmered to lukewarmness. They serve the house of the Lord, but not the Lord. Therefore they become obnoxious and distasteful to the Lord and He is obliged to spue them as a sickening thing from his mouth, "because thou sayest, I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched and miserable and poor and blind and naked..." Rev. 3:17 What good is going to come to any of us if, after all our labors, all our works, all our alms, and all our good deeds, together with our vast increase in goods and numbers, we ourselves are found to be wretched and miserable and poor and blind and naked? Has not the divine verdict already been passed upon us? "Because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of My mouth."

Oh, my friend, are you ministering to the house of the Lord or are you ministering to the Lord? Are you ministering because of the need around you or are you ministering to the Lord? Are you trying to satisfy the need of men or are you satisfying the need of the Lord? Are you laboring because you enjoy it or are you laboring because He has directed you?

Long ago Judas Iscariot asked the seemingly reasonable question, "Why was not this ointment sold and the proceeds given to the poor?" (Not because he cared for the poor, but because he was a thief and hoped that he might gain.) But Jesus gave him an answer that we with our many works should thoroughly consider, for it is just as true today as it was then. "The poor you have with you always, but Me ye have not always." If our alms-giving or our abundant work is not a ministry wholly to the Lord, prompted by His direction and accomplished with an overflowing heart, it is worthless and accomplishes nothing, but tends to produce the spirit of Laodicea in our hearts.

I greatly fear that in our careless reading of the word of God we overlook the tremendous import of the things the Holy Spirit has to say. Have you, oh reader, paused long enough to consider the devastating statement of Rev. 3:17, spoken so clearly against the professing church at the end of the age, that system to which many who read these lines still belong and of which they have become an integral part? Let us then carefully consider it, because the Spirit witnesses within my soul that man cannot reach the celestial heights and the planes of glory of which I shall presently speak until the full force of his present wretchedness breaks upon him and causes him to cry out as Isaiah the prophet did when he saw the majesty of the Lord, "Woe is me: for I am undone: because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips; for mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts." Isa. 6:5 Isaiah was a mighty prophet, outstanding among the seers. From his sanctified lips had thundered the message of the Lord, but in the same year that the good king Uzziah died, Isaiah attained to a new experience in God. He saw the Lord, high and lifted up, and His train filled the temple. He saw the seraphims of glory, each with six wings. With twain he covered his face, with twain he covered his feet, and with twain he did fly. And each cried to the other, saying, "Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of hosts: the whole earth is full of His glory." And the posts of the door moved at the voice of Him that cried and the house of the Lord was filled with smoke. See Isa. 6:1-6

In that moment of revelation Isaiah saw two dreadfully disconcerting facts; first, that he, the prophet of the Lord, was a man of unclean lips, and second, that the people among whom he dwelt were a people of unclean lips. It was not until he saw the holiness and the glory of the Lord that he saw the uncleanness of his own heart and how corrupt were the words of his own lips. Nor could he see the corrupt and wretched condition of the people around him until he had seen the Lord! Then he knew how wretched and miserable and naked they were, "for," he said, "mine eyes have seen the King!"

A big man never appears small until he stands beside a much bigger man. I am acquainted with a giant of a man who stands six feet eight inches in height and weighs over three hundred pounds. But once I saw a man who stood eight feet six inches in height. The ring he wore on his finger would encompass three of mine. Beside him the first giant was almost a midget. Thus it was with Isaiah. He was a very holy man. The prophecies, which poured from his lips were holy utterances and sacred words of truth. But now before his wondering eyes the Lord in His glory appears and from that presence all divine he fain would run to hide himself because of his own uncleanness and the uncleanness of the people among whom he dwelt. Then his ears were opened to the angelic voices of the seraphims, those heavenly beings always associated with the holiness of God, and, when their voices fell upon his ear, crying one to another, "Holy, holy, holy is the Lord God of hosts; the whole earth is filled with His glory", the soul of Isaiah cringed as he remembered the brashness of his own words, and he cried, "I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips; for mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts."

Have courage, man of God, and fear not to seek the Lord. It is the purpose of the most, high God to reveal His glory to us that we might repent of things both good and bad as we behold ourselves in the light and glory of His greatness and holiness. Our kind heavenly Father would never consent to open the eyes of His prophet to such excellent glory only to depart and leave him in his undone and unclean condition. Be that far from His transcending wisdom! The glory of God was revealed to Isaiah that he, beholding his undone estate, might cry for help and cleansing, and, as sure as God is God, both help and cleansing immediately came. "Then flew one of the seraphims unto me, having a live coal in his hand, which he had taken with the tongs from off the altar: And he laid it upon my mouth and said, Lo, this hath touched thy lips; and thine iniquity is taken away, and thy sin is purged". Isa. 6:7 There and then the prophet was transformed and a new commission was given him.

Think it not strange, then, that we who undoubtedly dwell in the age of Laodicea should find ourselves face to face with the same disconcerting revelation, that, in spite of our abounding works, our fervent labors, and all our vain imaginings that we are rich and increased with goods and have need of nothing, we should now hear the terrible voice of God in judgment, declaring that we are wretched and miserable and poor and blind and naked, and that we, instead of being spiritual giants as we supposed, are naught but dwarfs. We are not rich, but poor! We are not full of revelation, but blind! We are not clothed in white raiment, but are naked in God's sight! We are not full of heavenly joy, but miserable! We are not exalted saints, but poverty stricken wretches. Terrible as this truth may be, there is no better place to stand than in that place of known and acknowledged emptiness before God. I insist that any revelation that does not bring personal desolation and repentance is a lie and not from God. I suppose Isaiah could have fled from the revelation of his own undone condition to continue on as he had always done, and I suppose that we, too, may flee away from the things now clearly spoken from the lips of God concerning the miserably blind, naked and confused system in which we have been pleased to dwell. But, if we will now seek the face of God and deliver ourselves from it, then all the good and marvelous promises made to those who dwell in our age will be ours both here and now.

Consider briefly the import of the adjectives used by the Spirit of God to describe this Laodicean period of which we so willingly have become a part. These are not words to be read without heed or to be passed over without thought and consideration, prayer and repentance. These are words so descriptive of the existing church system that all who by God's Spirit are convinced of their truth will cry with repentance, "Woe is me, for I am undone; for I am a man of unclean lips and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips", and, girding up our loins with truth, we will/Zee from the death and darkness all about us. We will come out from among them. We will repent of our desolation and poverty and open the door for Christ to come in.

"Thou knowest not," saith the Lord, "that thou art wretched." Wretched is a strong word. A wretch is a base, vile, or contemptible person, a despicable character, a miserable unhappy person, sometimes a person viewed with pity. "Ah," we say, "but I am certainly not to be included among such as these!" How readily we compare men with men and judge our spiritual stature by comparing ourselves with the wretched state of those around us! This unspiritual habit has existed from time immemorial. Men do not trouble to compare themselves with the standard of the Almighty, but prefer rather to compare themselves with the low standard of their neighbors.
What their friends do they can do. If their neighbor can do such and such and be a Christian, then so can they.
Paul fiercely rebuked the Corinthians for that fault. "For we dare not make ourselves of the number, or compare ourselves with some that commend themselves: but they, measuring themselves by themselves, and comparing themselves among themselves, are not wise." 2 Cor. 10:12
Indeed, such a practice is anything but wisdom. It is the height of foolishness. We may safely take the stand that whatsoever the crowd is doing is almost certain to be the wrong thing. Whatsoever is popular is open to question, and "whatsoever is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God." Luke 16:15 My Christian brother, born in the self-satisfied, decadent age of Laodicea, if your spirit longs to overcome in this hour and to sit among the overcomers with Christ in His throne amid the splendor of His glorious kingdom, then it is time for you to cease and desist from your compromising with the world, because the world is an enemy of God. It is time to quit compromising with the church of Laodicea, for Laodicea is to be vomited out of the mouth of the Lord. It is time to stop comparing your spiritual state with that of other men, because the spiritual state of the people of this age is extremely wretched and miserable, even while they proudly proclaim their spiritual riches, their gifts, their baptisms, their converts, their power, and their great works.

Behold now the transformation that overtakes a man who for a few moments find himself standing in the illuminating presence of God's Christ. Daniel the prophet, like Isaiah, was a man of God - a man so upright and righteous in God's sight that he was compared to Noah and Job. Ezek. 14:14 But now, as this saintly man waits before God in fasting and prayer, humbling himself and confessing his sins before God, it came to pass that he lifted up his eyes and looked, and "behold, a certain man clothed in linen, whose loins were girded with the fine gold of Uphaz: his body also was like the beryl (chrysolite) and his face as the appearance of lightning, and his eyes as lamps of fire, and his arms and his feet like in color to polished brass, and the voice of his words like the voice of a multitude. And I, Daniel, alone saw the vision: for the men that were with me saw not the vision; but a great quaking fell upon them, so that they fled to hide themselves. Therefore I was left alone, and saw this great vision, and there remained no strength in me: for my comeliness was turned in me into corruption, and I retained no strength." Dan. 10:5-8

"I have heard of Thee by the hearing of the ear," cried Job, as the vision of God burst upon him, "but now mine eye seeth Thee. Wherefore I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes." Job 42:5-6 "Woe is me, for I am undone; for I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips; for mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts," wept Isaiah at the presence of the Lord. "Depart from me, for I am a sinful man," cried the disconsolate Peter when he saw God's glory in the miraculous draft of fishes. Luke 5:8 And now the greatly beloved Daniel, Dan. 10:11, a man comparable to Noah and Job in his righteousness, saw, as he stood in the excellent glory of the Lord, the riches of his own comeliness turned in him into corruption and the glory of his strength faded away until none was left!

Hear this, my brother and sister, contentedly dwelling in the tepid lukewarmness of Laodicea, these men did not come to see themselves as God saw them by priding themselves that they were rich and increased in goods and had need of nothing, but by yielding their flesh to the two-edged sword of the Spirit, who destroyed their shackles and cut away all earthly ties and bondages. Through terrible physical affliction Job came into a new and blessed relationship with his Lord. Isaiah reached the glory of his experience "in the year that King Uzziah died." Much food for thought lies in that statement, for it is only when the thing that once ruled our life as king perishes and passes away that we are able to "see the Lord" and enter into that new relationship with Christ that God has ordained. It was not by glorying in the past that Daniel reached his new relationship, but, in fasting and prayer and chastening his soul before his God, he saw himself corrupt, and felt the great strengthening hand of God laid upon him. Dan. 10:18
My brother, it is time to stop and listen. It is time to cease from endless works, religious labor and activity. It is time to seal the lips from saying, "We are increased in goods," we have gifts of the Spirit; we have healings and miracles; we have prophecy and tongues! How often I have heard men say, "We believe in salvation by the blood; we believe in the coming of the Lord; we believe in divine healing and the baptism of the Holy Spirit. That is the fullness. That is the fourfold gospel. There is nothing more than this." And then they recite the seemingly impressive story of their works and labors at home and on the mission field, on radio and television, priding themselves in many works and meetings and in the number of their assemblies. Ah, my poor blind and naked brother, knowest thou not that thou art indeed wretched? Knowest thou not that even now during the days of thy life thou art quoting the very words that will condemn thee at the judgment? For then will the people of this Laodicean age protest against the judgment of the Lord, saying, "Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name cast out demons, and in thy name done many wonderful works?" And has not God already forewarned that He will say unto them, "I never knew you; depart from Me, ye that work iniquity (rebellion)"? Matt. 7:23

Christ described the church of Laodicea with all her abundance of works, gifts, and possessions as a wretched church - and not wretched only, but poor and blind and naked as well. There they sat, satisfied with their abundance, only to discover in the end that their gold and silver were cankered, their garments moth-eaten, all that they esteemed riches naught but corruption, and themselves poor indeed. They have mistaken learning for the knowledge of truth. They have gifts and imagine this to be the grace of God. Wit and oratory are mistaken for wisdom and anointing. Ordinances abound, but they have forgotten the God of ordinances. Works abound, but the will of Him who purposes all things is far from them and they are poor indeed. This Laodicean period in which we now dwell is completely wretched. What other word could more adequately describe the condition of the present harlot thing that insists upon calling herself the church! Wretched is she in every sense and pitied by all who have discovered the truth, poor and poverty-stricken in soul and spirit while boasting of great riches, starving to death in the midst of her imagined abundance, blind and deaf because she can neither see her state nor recognize the danger of living in it. Lacking godliness and virtue, she cannot see afar off and has forgotten that she was once purged from her sins. Her gold and silver are cankered. Her wine is mingled with water. The garment of Christ's righteousness is changed for the filthy rags of profession, self-righteousness and church membership. But these will not suffice; neither will they endure the scrutiny of the judgment of God. Every man should bow in thankfulness to God that our blessed Christ, while pronouncing judgment, should mellow the harshness of His words by avowing His undying love for us all. It is remarkable and nothing less than divine that He should end His searching judgments with this heavenly assurance: "As many as I love I rebuke and chasten: be zealous, therefore, and repent." Rev. 3:19 In all our affliction He is afflicted. In all our sorrow His heart is made sad. Where we have been blind He longs to stretch forth His healing hand that we may see the invisible things of Him whose eye directs the course of all the ages. He pities our deafness and hardness of hearing and fain would unstop our ears that we might hear the voice of Him who spoke worlds into existence and sent millions of suns and myriads of stars racing in their orbits in obedience to His will. Even now He would open our ears in this hour of make-believe and pretence that we might hear Him say, "Come out from among them and be ye separate, and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." Blessed be the name of Christ, who wounds and heals, scourges and makes whole. He proves our sins upon our heads, convicting the world of sin and righteousness and judgment, but does not forget to unveil the fountain that is open in the house of David for all sin and uncleanness. All is not lost if men will but repent and turn, willingly leaving the system of Babylon and Laodicea to "go forth unto Him without the camp, bearing His reproach." Heb. 13:13

"I counsel thee," says Christ, "to buy of Me gold tried in the fire that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eyesalve, that thou mayest see." Rev. 3:18 These are the words of Christ to a lukewarm system. This is the counsel of God to an erring people who have wrongly imagined themselves to be rich and increased in goods, having need of nothing, but knowing not that in His eyes they are miserable and wretched and poor and blind and naked.

"Buy of Me gold tried in the fire," that thou mayest be truly rich! Gold has always been symbolic of true riches. Though it is a metal of few uses and little worth, yet among the nations of earth it has become a standard by which men measure their wealth. In both the temple and the tabernacle gold was used in abundance to typify and represent the body of Christ, that great spiritual temple not made with hands which is now rising to form a habitation for God in the Spirit. All the riches of God are in Christ Jesus, His Son. In Him and in Him alone all the treasures of the eternal realm are made freely available to all who embrace Him. What peculiar paradox is this that Christ should command the wretched and poor to buy fine gold tried in the fire? However impossible such a command may sound to human reason, the truth is that none but the wretched and poor in spirit may buy the tried gold He now freely offers. The voice of God through the prophet Isaiah, clear as a vesper bell, comes ringing down the corridors of time, "...He that hath no money, come ye, buy, and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price."

It is not to the "rich and increased in goods" that the promises of God are made, but to the poor in spirit who knows he is poor, the blind who knows he is blind, and the deaf who knows his ears are stopped.

Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are they who hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled. Here, my disconsolate brother, is a promise which none but God Himself could make! You in your poverty may buy His gold, yea, fine gold tried by God's fire, both perfect and pure, gold that is the gift of God, gold by grace freely given in answer to your faith. Waste no more money on that which is not true bread, for the bread of God is He, which came down from heaven to give life to all the world.

"Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness, and are dead. This is the bread (Jesus Christ) which cometh down from heaven that a man may eat thereof, and not die."

John 6:49-50

The world itself could scarcely contain the books that should be written concerning the riches of God in Christ. Paul, who taught us that we should never trust in the uncertain riches of this world, 1 Tim. 6:17, seemed to break forth into ecstasies when speaking of the riches of God. "O", he cried, "the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are His judgments and His ways past finding out!"

Rom. 11:13
Why, even scholarly translators seem to be transported by an overpowering emotion as they interpret the things concerning His unsearchable riches. Edgar Goodspeed's translation of Rom. 11:32-36 portrays the unspeakable riches and wisdom of God in these sublime words: "For God has made all men prisoners of disobedience so as to have mercy upon them all. How inexhaustible God's resources, wisdom, and knowledge are! How unfathomable His decisions are, and how untraceable His ways! Who has ever known the Lord's thoughts or advised Him? Or who has advanced anything to Him, for which he will have to be repaid? for from Him everything comes; through Him everything exists; and in Him everything ends! Glory to Him forever! Amen!"

These are the riches of Christ freely bestowed upon all who in this hour of Laodicea will buy of Him gold tried in the furnace of God.

White raiment, too, is freely offered in the stead of the filthy rags of human righteousness. Fine linen, the Lord has said, is the righteousness of the saints. Rev. 19:8  "To her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white: for the fine linen is the righteousness of the saints."

The fine linen in which John saw the bride arrayed was nothing less than the righteousness of Jesus Christ our Lord. God hath made Him to be wisdom and righteousness, sanctification and redemption. Christ, our Saviour, has taken away our sin and now we dwell in Him, and in Him there is no sin. 1 John 3:5

We know that we abide in Him by His Spirit, which He hath given us. True believers in Christ have passed from death across to life, and, if we have passed from death, then we have also passed from sin which brings death, having victory through Him over sin, the flesh, and the devil.

When man sinned in the very genesis of human history, the first discovery he made was this: "They knew that they were naked." If we are embarrassed beyond words to stand naked in the presence of men, how fearful a thing it is to stand naked in the presence of God, stripped of His glory and the righteousness of Jesus Christ! It was this sudden revelation of their nakedness that caused them to hide among the trees of the garden, there to evolve the human notion of sewing fig leaves together to make themselves aprons that, hopefully, the shame of their nakedness might be hidden. But the garments they had made removed not the lurid guilt from their hearts nor cleansed away their sin. They felt no more confident with their aprons than without them, and, when they heard the voice of God (who is the Son of God) walking in the garden, they hid themselves from His presence, being ashamed of their fig leaves and their wretched show of righteousness.

We should not assume that the Lord knew not where they were when He called, "Adam, where art thou?" He who knows all things knew full well where Adam was, but, more important still, the Lord wanted Adam to know the awful truth of where He stood in God's sight. He wanted him to confess his wrong, his nakedness, and his disobedience that he might receive the promise of a better covering, the perfection of righteousness fully satisfactory to God, even the white linen of the righteousness of Jesus Christ. No other righteousness is acceptable to God our Father. "Now a righteousness coming from God has been brought to light apart from any law, both law and prophets bearing witness to it - a righteousness coming from God, which depends on faith in Jesus Christ and extends to all who believe. No distinction is made; for all alike have sinned, and all consciously come short of the glory of God, gaining acquittal from guilt by His free unpurchased grace through the deliverance which is to be found in Christ Jesus. He it is whom God put forward as a Mercy-seat, rendered efficacious through faith in his blood, in order to demonstrate His righteousness - because of the passing over, in God's forbearance, of the sins previously committed - with a view to demonstrating, at the present time, His righteousness, that He may be shown to be righteous Himself, and the giver of righteousness to those who believe in Jesus." Rom. 3:21-26 (Weymouth Original) No man, having partaken of the righteousness of Christ through faith, will ever stand naked and ashamed before God as Adam did. We have an advocate, Jesus Christ the righteous. We have an high priest who is holy, harmless, undefiled, who ever liveth to make intercession for us. "Here is the High Priest we need. A man who is holy, faultless, unstained, beyond the reach of sin and lifted to the very heavens. There is no need for Him, like the High Priests we know, to offer up sacrifice, first for His own sins and then for the people's. He made one sacrifice, once for all, when He offered up Himself. The law makes for its High Priests men of human weakness. But the word of the oath, which came after the law, makes for High Priest the Son, who is perfect forever." Heb. 7:26-28 (Phillips).

In the beginning God called to Adam that he might see his wretched state and his condition of nakedness in the eyes of the Lord. So now Christ rebukes and warns and threatens the shamefully naked and unclothed condition of the Laodicean church that she might repent of her sins and by faith receive from God the pure white raiment of the righteousness of Jesus Christ. I am forced to wonder if perchance the shameful delight taken by those who publicly and shamelessly go cavorting in the nude today may be all too typical of the spiritual condition of the unashamed nakedness of the Laodicean church system of our pathetic day. How indescribably dreadful it is that men and their systems should presumptuously try to modernize the immutable God of glory! How vain and sinful, how jejune and silly it is to hear preachers prate about revamping and updating the church to make it adaptable to the demands of the hour! What devilish notion is it that allows hot dogs and hamburgers to be taken with communion? What wretched abasement is it that permits rock and roll and compass land and sea to make proselytes? Do not your preachers constantly howl for money as though God depended on it? I tell you that, if Jesus Christ should suddenly appear, He would be as busy driving the money changers from your midst and casting out the other clutter you have accumulated as He was in days of old. "Take these things hence" is the word of the Lord. "It is written: My house shall be called a house of prayer; but ye have made it a den of thieves." Rev. 3:18 For saith Christ, "As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten: be zealous, therefore, and repent." Verse 19 Nothing in our day is so desperately needed as the repentance and godly sorrow of Christians because of the abominations that surround and encumber them on every hand.

Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people. Only yesterday, when the British lion roared from Westminster, all the world listened and gave heed, but because of the lukewarmness, the blindness, and the nakedness of the Laodicean church, appalling sin, looseness, and immorality has entered in and stolen away the heart and fiber of the people until we, the proud citizens of the mighty British Commonwealth, a commonwealth raised up by God's hand in fulfillment of God's promise, have become a third rate power in the earth, and the influence and power which God gave as a blessing to the whole world has withered as a green herb. Nor can we say better things for our brother nation, the United States of America, which at its founding was called "one nation under God". The tepid lukewarmness of the Laodicean system has so eroded the moral fiber of her people that crime is rampant, the basest men are exalted to high places, judgment and justice are thwarted, and insurmountable problems arise like specters of doom every passing day. "The ox knoweth his owner and the ass his master's crib, but Israel doth not know; My people doth not consider. Ah sinful nation, a people laden with iniquity, a seed of evildoers, children that are corrupters; they have forsaken the Lord, they have provoked the Holy One of Israel unto anger, they are gone away backward. Why should ye be stricken any more? Ye will revolt more and more: the whole head is sick, Isa. 1:3-5 And all this iniquity and confusion stems from the lukewarm and wretched condition of Laodicea, the church system at the end of the age. Be zealous, therefore, and repent!

My heart is made exceedingly glad, and of this I witness with joy, that out of the sickening lukewarmness of Laodicea there is an ever increasing number of men and women who are being awakened to the sin and iniquity, the lukewarmness, the blindness and miserable poverty of this present wretched system which dares to call itself "the church". There is an awakening in the earth today. People who have walked for many years with the lukewarm throng of Laodicea, thinking there was nothing else for them to do, are being awakened by the Spirit of God. Their eyes are being anointed with God's eyesalve. They are beginning to see that there is a perfect personal relationship, which men may have with God that does not depend on systems or congregations or vain assemblings in their steeplehouses. Their hearts are learning that their relationship with Christ and His body does not depend on assemblings or communions or baptisms or laying on of hands, which are merely kindergarten teachings, but that they must leave the principles of religion and go on to perfection. Heb. 6:1,2. Let us therefore rejoice that the Spirit of God is preparing Himself an elect company in the earth that they may overcome in this age and sit with Him in His throne in the age to come.

Though the direst judgments are pronounced upon Laodicea, it is exceedingly wonderful to notice that to the overcomers who hear His voice the sublimest promises are given. However, let it be clearly understood that these priceless promises are not given to the Laodicean system but to the listening, hearing individuals, men and women who perchance for life have been part and parcel of the system, but now their eyes are being opened, they are seeing things as they really are, their ears are being unstopped, and the voice of the Son of God is gently sounding in their hearts. How good it is, oh Christian, when Christ begins to speak and when He reproves you! Whom the Lord loveth He correcteth and scourgeth every son He receiveth. He uncovers our sin that He may also take it away.

"Behold, I stand at the door and knock," saith Christ. He for whom the church was formed now stands outside its precincts. No longer does He call to the system, but to any man, any woman, any boy, any girl, any race, any nation. You may be cut to the heart, Mr. preacher, because of the things I have said, but it is hard for you to kick against the goads. Better far for you to repent and open wide the door. You may be infuriated, oh believer, but it is the pricking of God's Spirit that you feel as He witnesses to the truth. Repent, then, and open the door to Him who knocks. You will have to leave the church system, of course, with all its machinations. You will have to walk alone with Christ, but in my ear I hear the voice of Christ saying to us now, "He that followeth Me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." That insistent knocking of the door of your heart, that unrest and uncertainty you feel in your spirit is the voice of God's Son warning you that all is not well, that the Laodicean church system is heading fast for judgment and the removal of its lamp from the candlestick of the Lord.

"If any man hear My voice and open the door," saith Christ, "I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with Me." Rev. 3:20 Let the light of divine revelation shine into the darkness of our hearts as we consider the excellent glory of the promise He gives us. "I will come in to him." It is Christ in you that is the hope of glory. Col. 1:27. As it is written, "I will dwell in them and walk in them, and I will be their God and they shall be My people." I understand very little about the Godhead. Such things are too high for me, and I would to God that other men would stop their vain talking also, and admit that such knowledge is beyond their understanding. But I do know that there is One who is called the Father and there is One who is called the Son, and I do know that our blessed Christ prayed for the members of His body, saying, "That they all may be one; as Thou, Father, art in Me and I in Thee, that they also may be one in Us; that the world may believe that Thou hast sent Me. And the glory which Thou gavest Me I have given them, that they may be one even as We are one: I in them, and Thou in Me, that they may be perfect in one..." John 17:21-23

Christ in you the hope of glory is the word of the Lord, and now at the end of the age the wondrous promise is to us all. "Behold, I stand at the door and knock; if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him..." This, my brother, is the identification with Christ of which we have long been writing. This is the unity for which our hearts sincerely crave. The indwelling Christ produces sonship. By it we become as surely one with Christ as Christ, God's Son, is one with the Father, "I in them and Thou in Me, that they may be made perfect in one" was the prayer of our Saviour. Ah, precious unity with Him, the blessed Saviour, the divine Redeemer.
and Advocate who presents us faultless in Himself before the throne of the majesty on high! My inner man weeps with joy when I consider how far this blessedness is removed from the wretched blindness, poverty, and lukewarmness of the Laodicean system.

We shall not invite Christ in as a guest, for it is not as a guest that He has come to dwell. He has come as the King of heaven to set up His throne. Therefore, let all the former clutter of doctrines of men, endless genealogies, and works of righteousness be cleared as profane from His holy temple. It is time for the King of glory to set up His throne and reign within us, for we have heard Him say, "Know ye not that the kingdom of God is within you?" Before ever the kingdom of God is established as a theocracy to govern the world, it must first be established in the hearts of individuals like you and me, though walking among men as He once did, are ruled neither by men nor systems, but by Christ whom God has appointed heir of all things. He must reign until He has put all enemies under His feet, and when all things are subdued unto Him, then shall the Son also Himself be subject unto Him (the Father) that put all things under Him, that God may be all in all. 1 Cor. 15:25, 28

Hail, Thou long expected Jesus,
Born to set Thy people free;
From our sins and fears relieve us;
Let us find our rest in Thee.

Born Thy people to deliver,
Born a child and yet a King,
Born to reign in us forever,
Now Thy gracious kingdom bring.

Now Thine own eternal Spirit.
Rule in all our hearts alone;
By Thine all-sufficient merit
Raise us to Thy glorious throne.

(Charles Wesley)

How wonderful are His words, "I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with Me!" Eating and drinking signifies communion, and communion above all else signifies sharing. When a family seats itself about the table, each person shares the food one with the other, and together they partake of whatever has been provided. Thus they share and thus they partake. Paul's statement, "The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ?" 1 Cor. 10:16, is rendered by Goodspeed in these words. "Does not the consecrated cup mean that in drinking we share in the blood of Christ? Does not the bread we break mean that in eating we share the body of Christ?" So Goodspeed translates it, while both Weymouth and Moffatt use the word participate, saying, "The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not participating in the blood of Christ, and the bread which we break, is it not participation in the body of Christ?" These three descriptive words, communion, sharing, and participating, shine as a heavenly revelation, giving us the knowledge that to "sup" with Christ is to commune with Him, to share in Him, and to participate in and of Him. They "did all eat the same spiritual meat; and did all drink the same spiritual drink: for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them: and that Rock was Christ." 1 Cor. 10:3-4

"I will come in and will sup with him," saith the Lord, "and the bread which we shall break is Myself, for I am that living bread which came down from heaven, that a man should eat thereof and not die." The question, "how can this man give us His flesh to eat", cannot be answered by the natural man and yet how clearly it is seen and understood by those who commune with Him and in their communing partake of Him! They and they alone find their hearts burning within them as He opens the word, which is Himself, to their spirits. It is when Christ shares Himself with His people that they become one with Him because they partake of Him and participate in Him. We become one with Him of whom we partake and one with all that blessed family who, in supping, participate in Him. This is the true body of Christ.
As we become acquainted with God through His word, the truth is progressively unfolded before our eyes that Jesus Christ is both the beginning and the end of all the creation of God, everything in Jesus, and Jesus everything. It pleased the Father that in Him should all fullness dwell. God hath made Him unto us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption. Yea, and all else besides! God has made Him the truth, the light, the way. He is the bread of life, of which if a man partake, he shall live forever. He who is the water of life once spoke to a needy woman, saying, "Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again; but whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life." John 4:13-14

Does your heart cry out for redemption, oh man so burdened down with the sin and corruption of this age? Jesus Christ is your redemption. God has made Him so, and, if you will confess your sins, He is faithful and just to forgive you and to cleanse you from all unrighteousness. Jesus Christ not only saves you. Jesus Christ is your Saviour. Not only does He redeem men, but He is their redeemer and their redemption in one. Your heart cries out for the priceless pearls of wisdom only to find that the wisdom of men is foolishness with God; but God hath made him to be wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption. No man who lives without Christ can be called wise, be he ever so learned; and no man whose life is devoted to Christ can be called foolish, be he ever so ignorant, for in His heart dwells the source of eternal wisdom and understanding. He who has come to abide forever prepares Himself to sup with us and share Himself until we become one with Him.

Jesus loved Mary and Martha and Lazarus, and sweet were the hours of communion they spent in His presence; but Lazarus had fallen ill with a sickness whereof he died. When Jesus heard the news, after two days He returned to Bethany where they lived, and Martha, hearing of His coming, went out to meet Him. "Lord," she sobbed in her distress, "if Thou hadst been here, my brother had not died." "Your brother shall rise again," Jesus smiled, but Martha, disconsolate still, replied, "I know that he will rise again in the resurrection at the last day." And Jesus, sad that she had not seen the truth, spoke words that would teach every believing heart that the resurrection is not so much an event as it is a person, and that person is Jesus Christ, the Son of God. "I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth in Me shall never die. Believest thou this?" John 11:25-26 With these words He made us all to know that he who sups with Christ shares in Him who is Himself the resurrection and becomes a participator in His life.

"I am the resurrection!" Thus He spoke
In lovely Bethany one cloudy day
To weeping sisters; yet those living words
Healed not their wounds nor dried their tears away.
Naught did they see but death. The chasm wide
Was deep and dark and cold. They did not know
Eternal life was standing by their side.

"I am the resurrection!" Yet they wept,
Though life eternal looked into their eyes;
For resurrection came to visit earth
When Jesus left His home beyond the skies.
So life walked down that day with human feet
To where death trembled in the grave's dark gloom;
Life challenged death; he dropped the keys and fled,
And with Christ's life a man came from the tomb.

(Charles S. Price)

"I will come in to him and will sup with him" is the promise of Christ to "any man" of this Laodicean period in which we live. Fiercely He has rebuked the lukewarmness, the riches, the works, the increase in goods, the wretchedness, the nakedness, and the blindness of the professing church of this hour, the system in which many who read this book are still involved, a system so distasteful to Christ that it turned His stomach and He now spues or vomits it out of His mouth. Take no pride that you are a member of such a system and that you assemble weekly with it, for Babylon the great is not only the mother of harlots, but the mother of all the abominations of the earth as well. Rev. 17:5. Why then do we wonder that Christ is still insisting, "Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partaker of her sins, and receive not of her plagues?" Your first step toward the glory of which I write is to "come out."

Now in the end of the age He has turned away from the corruption of the church system to "any man", saying, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock; if any man hear My voice and open the door, I will come in to him and will sup with him." Once again the bread of life is broken to us and He who is the beginning and the end, the first and the last, the Alpha and the Omega now shares Himself with all who bid Him enter. Your soul longs for truth; He is truth. You sigh for life; He is your life. Your spirit cries for wisdom; God hath made Him to be wisdom. Your heart cries for purity and sanctification; God has made Him sanctification. "I am the resurrection" is His word. He does not want to give you things; He gives you Himself, and with Himself all things.

"To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with My Father in His throne. He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches. Amen."

CHAPTER FOUR
IRON MINGLED WITH CLAY

During the years that have gone we have had opportunity to feast upon the rich revelation of the Lord. We have endeavored to write with earnestness and conviction the truth we felt God had given us. The great truths of sonship, the mind of Christ, the purposes of God, the will of God, mystery Babylon, and many others are necessary and of great importance that we might understand God's great program and that we might be able by His infinite grace to lay hold of those eternal realities which He has set before us.

It is extremely sad that after two thousand years of church history the spiritual understanding of the general mill-run of Christians is infantile in the extreme. Their hopes and aspirations centre around a few pet theories and doctrines that they have adopted, and their main hope is that they will go to heaven when they die after they have stayed here as long as possible, but the great eternal purposes of God have never been revealed to them. Their minds have become immune to truth and so inoculated against revelation that their lives are wasted away in the shallows of ritualism and in the sloughs of tradition. Christians have spent their lives "straining at gnats and swallowing camels," plucking out splinters from their neighbor's eye while forgetting the beam that is in their own. Woe to us all, for we have made the word of God of none effect by our tradition and halted far short of the living fountains of water.

During the past weeks my mind has been greatly stirred about many things. All men and women who are walking in the Spirit today must certainly be aware that we are living in momentous hours. Personally I believe that this present day is the most important day of the dispensation. We do not belittle, discredit, nor depreciate the importance of the years that have gone, or do we in any way dishonor the great and mighty manifestations of God's Spirit throughout the entire age of grace. Never can we speak too highly of the revivals, the reformations, the revelations of truth, or the outstanding men and women of God this age has produced. But the great truth of the moment is that the dispensation of grace, the church age, is passing swiftly away and the dispensation of the kingdom of God is at hand. In centuries past we were journeying on a long and toilsome road, but now we have come to the end of it. Through centuries and millenniums we have seen the kingdom afar off. Now it is close at hand. We have patiently waited for the distant day of the coming of the Lord. Now He is even at the doors. Our minds have struggled to find the meaning of the great Babylonish harlot, described throughout the Bible and coming to a dread fullness in the book of Revelation, but now we see the monstrous thing forming before our very eyes and no man lifts his voice against it.

We have long quoted the scripture, "Unto them that look for Him shall He appear the second time without sin unto salvation," but the reality of that truth is beginning to come to pass and He is making Himself known unto those who love Him and long for His presence. The special revelation of Christ to His believers is really only a preparation for our being caught away to Zion where the kingdom will begin and from whence it will spread... over all the earth. It is a preparation for the hour when two shall be working in the field; one shall be taken and the other left. And two shall be sleeping in one bed; one shall be taken and the other left.

The saints are being prepared to take the kingdom. By "saint" we do not mean just any and every Christian. The saints are a very special company and are identical with the sons of God. The vast majority of Christians are far too taken up with their childish religion to make any attempt to be fully partakers of the mind of Christ. They are too busy praying that God will do what they want Him to do to ever be concerned about the will of God for them. Such believers are without doubt saved, but they are saved so as by fire. Only those who have made the will of God and the mind of Christ their prize will ever attain to sonship and a part in Christ's heavenly kingdom. These are the true saints. For this reason the Spirit of God has been calling us apart from church activity and traditions. He wants us to know His voice and He wants us to be known of Him. "My sheep know My voice, and they follow Me, and I give unto them aionian life and they shall never perish." Multitudes of people freely quote that scripture, yet of a truth there is not one Christian among a hundred today who knows the voice of Christ separate and apart from all other voices in the world. It comes as a great shock to see how easily Christians are deceived by wolves in sheep’s clothing and dragons that speak like lambs. For the most part they are as easily deceived by Satan as Little Red Riding Hood of fairy tale fame, who was deceived by the wolves pretending to be her grandmother. The average Christian of our day goes about with his mouth open ready to swallow any poison that is put into it. He lends his ear to the exaggerations and lies that are foisted upon him by pulpit and by air-waves. He seems to grope about for the spectacular. He lends his ear to such a jargon of voices, such a Babel of sounds, such a quagmire of ideas and opinions that he cannot know good from evil. He has become so filled with human opinions and so completely devoid of the spirit of understanding that he cannot discern the voice of a sheep from the voice of a goat, neither can he tell the voice of Christ from the voice of antichrist.

If a man is ever going to know the voice of Christ, he must for a time at least drown out all other voices. He must banish his own opinions as well as the opinions of others. He must discard the will of other men and crucify his own will. He must tune his ear in to heaven and listen to the gentle voice that speaks to the inner spirit and by thus doing he will begin to know who is speaking, whether Christ or Belial. Have you noticed how a mother recognizes the cry of her own baby even though there are a dozen other babies in the nursery? She knows that one voice because she has heard it so often that her ear recognizes it apart from all others. Sheep come to know the voice of their shepherd separate and apart from all imitators or hirelings until it is impossible to deceive them. This is because they have heard that one voice and that one voice alone; therefore they know it and know not the voice of strangers. But Christians are forever listening to a Babel of voices who clamor for their ear while Jesus is left standing in the shadows, weeping as He did over Jerusalem and saying, "How often would I have gathered thee as a hen gathers her little ones, but ye would not."

There is an ever-increasing growth in understanding among all people who are leaving the racketeering systems of a Babylonish church that they might come apart for a while to listen and hear the gentle voice that speaketh from heaven. Thus they learn to receive His mind and be filled with the knowledge of His will. Indeed, we may not notice much growth in ourselves but other men are bound to take notice that we have been with Jesus.

When Moses had been up on the mountain with God, He wist not that his face shone; but others knew that it shone. The religious, fanatical, idolatrous crowd at the foot of the mountain had no shining faces among them as they danced about their golden idol, but the man who went alone with God had to hang a vail over his face because of that glory, that faded only after he returned to them. The Lord Jesus came from the glory and wonder of the transfiguration to the presence of a glum and disappointed multitude who had spent hours trying to cast out a devil, but without success. What Christians need today more than all else is to get away from the excitement of meetings and crowds of people and get alone with God and stay alone with Him until He makes manifest the secret of His will, stay alone with Him until He speaks and speaks again, stay alone with Him day after day until they know His voice and can recognize it as distinct from all the other sounds of earth.

During the last few years I have had many requests to go preaching or to attend religious gatherings, but each time I have felt the Spirit of God telling me not to go. He tells me that He does not want people to hear my voice. He wants them to hear His. Indeed, there may come a time again when He will say, "Go", and when that moment comes, it will be a joy to fulfill His will. But the greatest joy I know just now is to know that many people are learning to walk alone with Him, silencing all outward voices that they might listen when He speaks within.

If we look through the pages of holy scripture or even peruse the pages of history, we will soon learn that all men and women whom God ever chose were lonely people who knew God separate and apart from orders, rituals, ceremonies, traditions, crowds, congregations, meetings, and instructors. What has become of that people who need not that any man should teach them? Where are the people who know that the anointing teaches them all things and is truth? These are the people we must see, for these are the people who know God. If we would take time to consider the greatest heroes of faith the world has ever known, we would know immediately that these statements are true. Enoch walked with God. Noah alone was righteous in his generation. Abraham was a friend of God. Israel was a prince with God. Moses spoke face to face with God. David was a man after God's own heart. But all these men were men who knew what it meant to be separated and alone. They learned never to trust people or to put confidence in men. They trusted neither horses nor chariots, but put their trust in the Lord and were as Mount Zion that could not be moved. They knew what it meant to flee before their enemies. They tasted the bitterness of temptation and persecution. They felt the frustration of misunderstanding and the biting disappointment of seeing familiar friends become traitors. We expect enemies to be enemies and our bitterest foes are often honorable foes, but to discover that the kiss placed upon our cheek by a familiar friend was a signal to the enemy to attack us is a blow that leaves us dazed and disconsolate for many years. Nevertheless we know that even the bitterest things are working together for good to those who love the Lord. As Ahithophel betrayed David and Judas betrayed Christ, so the Ahithophels and Judases who cross our pilgrim pathway teach us that cursed is the man who putteth his trust in man, but blessed is the man who maketh God his trust. We should never spend our lives bemoaning those who have betrayed us, but rather pass our time in thankfulness that we have learned to trust in the living God. Should I spend the rest of my days bemoaning, berating, and deriding the men who have betrayed me, I should have all my time taken up and come to the end of my journey a miserable old man full of bitterness, devoid of understanding, and empty of trust in the living God.

If we really understood the magnitude of the things that lie immediately before us, we would be willing to make all sacrifices that we might be partaker of His glory. Many thousands of people in the earth today are convinced that the kingdom of God is very near, but I greatly fear that only a very few of us realize how great that kingdom is to be or how much our future blessedness in that kingdom depends upon our faithfulness and consecration here and now. There are countless thousands of Christians who want to reign in the kingdom, but I fear that multitudes of them have no real understanding of what such a reign would mean. It is never hard to find people who want to be rulers. The world has always abounded with people both in the church and out of it who would love to seize the rod of iron and beat into submission everybody and everything that would oppose their way of thinking. There is no difficulty in finding such dismally carnal wretches. Even Saul of Tarsus before his conversion was a man of that caliber. I have heard Christians say, "I would like to begin to reign right now!" But God have mercy on the earth if their wish should be granted, for they would be less equipped to rule the earth than Joseph Stalin. Their only understanding would be to beat every opposing force into submission to their will. Let us not become possessed with these foolish, childish, inane notions, for they are only a condemnation to us.

Before long the world will have the opportunity of knowing what it is like to have a dictator with an iron fist, ruling with a carnal mind, drunken with the blood of saints, and reigning over the kings of the earth. But it will not be Christ. It will be the ruthless ruler of the combined might of the two world forces of political and religious Babylon. I predict that before long we will see a lying devilish union between the iron rule of Communism and the clay rule of Democracy, and along with it we will see a lewd and bawdy marriage between the iron rule of dictatorial Catholicism and the weak clay rule of a democratic Protestantism. Thus we will have the two feet of Nebuchadnezzar's image, iron mixed with miry clay. Dan. 2:33, one foot representing religious Babylon and the other foot representing political Babylon. Here we have the two beasts of Revelation 13 working in harmony and the second beast making all the earth worship the first beast. There will be a time of literal hell on earth during their reign. Neither rich nor poor, bond nor free, small nor great will be spared, but all will be forced to bow to their diabolical will. See Rev. 13:16-17
While this dictatorial power of Babylon is endeavoring to crush all beneath its feet, the 144,000 sons of God are being prepared on Mount Zion to take the kingdom and reign with Christ. Rev. 14 This is the stone which Daniel saw cut out of the mountain without hands. Dan. 2:34, 45 The mountain is Zion, and at the very moment when Babylon is at its dreadful zenith, standing on its two shaky feet part of iron and part of clay, the stone cut from the mountain, Jesus of Nazareth with all the sons of God, will roll out and smite the image on its feet. The iron and clay will fall apart and all the empires of this world, all human systems of government, will crash in a heap like the dust of the summer threshing floor and the wind (the Spirit of God) will drive them away. Please read Dan. 2:35, 44. Then shall the stone (Christ) become a great mountain that will fill the whole earth, Dan 2:35, and of the increase of His government there shall be no end.

The world will soon learn experimentally the dread horror of being ruled by the carnal mind and after that it will be ready to submit itself to the rule of the mind of Christ. Let us all assuredly know this; no man, absolutely no man, will be given authority to reign with Christ except he has completely crucified the flesh with its affections and lusts, and the carnal mind with its enmity toward God has been destroyed. Only those who have become one with Christ's will and who love His purpose, being filled with His mind and His will, will be found worthy to reign with Him, for verily, if one carnal mind could reign in the kingdom of God, that kingdom would fall before it was a year old. For six thousand years the carnal mind has proved its inability to rule. Disorder, desolation, and death follow in its wake. As death and hell follow the rider of the pale horse of Rev. 6:8, so disorder, confusion and desolation follow the rule of the carnal mind.

It is always difficult to write an article with emphasis, force, and conviction so that the eyes and understanding of the reader will be enlightened, but it is fortunate for us all that at this particular hour there is a spirit of wisdom and understanding coming among elect people who are the truly called of God. That spirit of understanding, which is born of God's own wisdom, enables them to comprehend things, which are actually incomprehensible. It irons out the wrinkles of misunderstanding and shows the truth to the inner spirit even though we have no power to adequately explain it. Have you not noticed this to be so? Many times during the last months the Spirit of God has witnessed to my heart that certain mysterious things are true even though I had no power nor reason which would or could explain them. Conversely many times the Spirit of God has witnessed to me that certain things were a lie and were born of the spirit of deception, though outwardly they look right and even appeared to be scriptural. There never was a time in all history when men needed so much to be possessed of the mind of Christ as now. It is my firm conviction that during the last few years the spirit of strong delusion has descended upon the earth. It is overcoming the minds of many millions of people, making them believe a lie. This spirit of delusion leads them to think that evil is good, good is evil, wrong is right, and right is wrong. This sinister spirit of confusion, born of Satan, is the very spirit of Babylon, and it will without doubt grow much stronger.

I do not consider myself to be a prophet, but I know I have the Spirit of God, and I predict that we will see an almost unbelievable speeding up of all the machinery which will unite the opposing factions of Roman Catholicism, Protestantism and Orthodoxy. Most of our readers are aware that the book, Mystery Babylon, foretold that this very thing would come to pass, but we freely admit that we did not expect it to come with such unbelievable speed as it has. It is most amazing to notice that, though the sensational preachers of our day have always eagerly grasped every bit of sensational news to pad their sermons and attract a crowd, to my knowledge there has scarcely been one voice that has been lifted either by press or by radio against the coming abominable reunion of the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth with all her harlot daughters.

Not only has there been an absence of voices lifted against this union, but on the contrary men who are considered great and influential in the church system speak with great favor of the coming union of the two systems. The following newspaper clipping will give some idea of what I mean.

"Bonn, Germany. Evangelist Billy Graham said Friday that it would be a great tragedy if the ecumenical policies of the late Pope John were reversed. 'Pope John brought an entirely new era to the world,' Graham told a news conference. 'It would be a great tragedy if the cardinals elect a pope who would react against the policies of Pope John and bring back the walls between the Christian faiths.'"
I think it should be plain for even the dullest mind to see that, when men like Graham, who have the confidence of millions of Christians throughout the entire earth, begin to assure the minds of those people that this lewd union is a great step in the right direction, then we are going to see an endless procession of sincere people, their minds befogged with the spirit of delusion, join the wedding procession to union with Rome. Let no man deceive you, but rather know this: once the spirit of delusion settles upon the earth you will be absolutely amazed as to whom you will see on the band wagon of Babylon's union. The only people on earth who will escape this delusion will be the people in whom is the mind of Jesus Christ. These are the elect sons of God. These are they who have God's name in their foreheads.

Right at this very moment we are at the moment of fulfillment of the prophecy of Jesus when He said, "Except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved, but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened. Then if any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is Christ, or there, believe it not for there shall arise false christs and false prophets and shall shew great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they should deceive the very elect. Behold, I have told you before, wherefore if they say unto you, Behold, He is in the desert, go not forth; Behold, He is in the secret chambers believe it not." Matt 24:24-26.

Do you know that Christians have become so miracle minded that they would gladly run from one side of the continent to the other if they could contact a great miracle worker or a healer by so doing? Christians have become so desperately and pitifully gullible in this regard that hosts of them have made themselves candidates and easy marks for delusion. Let me ask you this question: If you are addicted to looking all about you for signs and wonders, miracle workers and healers, and if you are willing to believe that all such men must of necessity be of God, otherwise they could not do these things, how are you going to recognize the false prophet when he comes calling down fire in the sight of the people and making all the world wonder after him? If you are going to depend upon the things that men say, or if you are going to accept the erroneous theory that seeing is believing, then you are in for trouble. You dare not believe even all you see, for the thing you have seen may not be of God. The word of God distinctly tells us that there will be spirits of devils working miracles that will go forth unto the kings of the earth. Rev. 16:13,14. And may I add this solemn warning! The kings of the earth are not necessarily the crowned heads of the earth, but Peter has told us that we are kings and priests, and I for one am sure that many such kings and priests are even now deceived.

I am not against signs, miracles, or healings, but I tell you that millions of Christians have gone awhoring after these things and, having placed them in pre-eminence above Christ, they have made themselves open to deception. A wicked and an adulterous generation seeketh after a sign, but no sign shall be given but the sign of the prophet Jonas. When all these great deceptions begin to come on the earth, there will be only one place of safety for the people of God. That safety will be found in the witness of the Spirit. The Spirit is truth. Actually we have no need that any man teach us what is right or wrong, for the anointing teaches us all things and is truth. Mark carefully what John said in his epistle. "These things have I written unto you concerning them that seduce you. But the anointing which ye have received of Him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you; but the same anointing teacheth you all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in Him." 1 John 2:26.

Practically every day I receive literature through the mail. Some of it (very little) makes my heart rejoice. Some of it repulses my spirit and I know it is evil. Other some is meaningless, neither good nor evil, but written by someone wishing to have his name before the public. Let me explain what I mean by this. We cannot go by what people say nor by the way things seem to be. For instance, there are several magazines sent to me that are filled with reports that ordinarily should make one's heart rejoice. They boast of remarkable things, most of which seem quite scriptural, but there is something wrong somewhere. Something brings an unexplainable spiritual heaviness that the mind does not understand. You rebuke yourself for the way you feel about it, but the feeling persists. Once this happens to me, I never go on trying to prove to myself that the thing is right or wrong. From there on I just leave it alone. It is not up to us to make decisions for or against things. Our one responsibility is to walk before God and mind our own business. God knows whether such an one is right or wrong and He will judge according to infinite and unerring wisdom.

As further proof of the way the world is heading toward the great union of all the forces of Babylon, we quote the following news item. The author and traveler, Ray Johnson, writes this significant statement. "A year ago when I was traveling through Europe, I was appalled to find that many of the Protestant leaders there were apologizing for Martin Luther and the Reformation. They were saying that the Christian thing to do was to return their churches to the Roman Catholic Church. We all know that there is a great movement on to unite the Protestant church. Denominations with similar beliefs have been urged to unite. This has been done in many cases. Now we understand that five or six of the largest denominations, some of them having very different theological views, are preparing to unite. The feeling seems to be that the main thing is to be united. There is less and less concern to preach that which one is convinced is the truth. Anything, which will cause any division among believers, is wrong. We have heard rumors that the uniting of these several great denominations will be called the Christian Catholic Church. From other sources we have heard that it is to be called the United Church of Christ. Just what name they will take we do not know. But we do know that the plan is to unite as soon as possible with the Roman Catholic Church. These church leaders seem somehow to believe that they will then have fulfilled the Lord's Prayer of John 17 where Christ prayed that they all may be one. You can be sure that the Roman Church will welcome such a unity as long as the Pope is made the head. The Ecumenical Protestant leaders seem to be willing to make almost any concession for the sake of unity. The apostate church of the end time seems to be taking its final form.

The above quotation portrays the whole picture very much as it is — unity at any price. It is the beginning of the fulfillment of the prophetic word which says, "They shall gather together, but not by Me." Isa. 54:15.

In the days of Daniel King Nebuchadnezzar had a terrifying vision that troubled him greatly. He called in all the wise men of Babylon, but none of them could tell him his dream nor give him an interpretation of it. Daniel and his friends went to prayer, earnestly requesting of God that the vision with its interpretation be shown to them. At last the secret was revealed to Daniel and, being ushered into the presence of the king, he recounted before him, not only the dream, but also the interpretation of it.

It is impossible to understand any spiritual thing with the natural mind and it is certain that we need the mind of the Lord and the presence of the Spirit to open our understanding now that we may see the depths of meaning in this vision.

Daniel recounted the vision before the king in these words. "Thou, O king, sawest and, behold, a great image. This great image, whose brightness was excellent, stood before thee and the form of it was terrible. This image's head was of fine gold, his breast and his arms were of silver, his belly and his thighs of brass, his legs of iron, his feet part of iron and part of clay. Thou sawest till that a stone was cut out without hands, which smote the image upon his feet that were of iron and clay. The brass, the iron, the silver, and the gold were broken in pieces together and became like the chaff of the summer threshing floor; and the wind carried them away that no place was found for them; And the stone that smote the image became a great mountain and filled the whole earth." Dan. 2:31-35

Now in the interpretation that followed Daniel showed the king that he, Nebuchadnezzar, was the head of gold. He represented the Babylonian Empire. Then there was to follow a lesser empire, represented by the silver of the breast and the two arms. This we may be sure represented the empire of Media-Persia. Following this was the Grecian Empire represented by the thighs of brass. Then came the iron empire of Rome represented by the two legs of iron. The two legs represent the eastern and western sections of the Roman Empire. Then last of all were the feet, which were made of the unsubstantial mixture of iron mingled with clay so that the feet were partly strong and partly weak.

This great and terrifying image was in itself a representation of the system of world empires from the days of Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, down to the end of the age. It would not be right to pass on further without making an observation which must be evident to all. It is without doubt most remarkable that the head of this great world system was Babylon. It goes without saying that what the head is the whole man is. "Thou, O king, art a king of kings: for the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom, power, and strength, and glory. And wheresoever the children of men dwell, the beasts of the field and the fowls of the heaven hath He given into thine hand, and hath made thee ruler over them all. Thou art this head of gold." Dan. 2:37, 38
For us the feet should be the most significant part of this whole image, for they represent the world systems that exist in our day. For many years the book of Daniel has been a closed book. It was shut up and sealed till the time of the end. Dan. 12:9 But during the last few years it has begun to open and spring into life. Thus we find ourselves living among the very things of which it speaks. The two feet of this image portray the world systems from about the end of the Roman Empire to the end of this age. The feet were made of part iron and part clay, partly strong and partly weak. We may not know all the meaning inferred here, yet it is plain for all to see that we are now seeing the final and complete formation of these mingled feet of Babylon right before our eyes. Any dictatorial form of government is iron. It rules with a mailed fist. It breaks in pieces and subdues all things. Dan. 2:40 On the other hand we are forced to admit that our beloved democracy is the rule of clay. It is a rule where people come and go much as they please. They worship as they please, they vote as they wish, they say what they think, and they do as they like. It is not hard to see that the uniting of these two systems would be as the feet of the image, partly strong and partly broken. It would be political Babylon.

But this image had two feet, both of which were iron and clay. Now just as the political world has its dictators and its democracies, so also has the religious world its dictators and democracies. Roman Catholicism comes under the dictatorial iron rule of the Pope. But practically all forms of Protestantism are more or less democratic and the people think and do much as they please. This is the rule of clay!

There is positively no doubt that spiritual Babylon is on its way to the kind of unity portrayed by the feet which were part of iron and part of clay. Spiritual Babylon is forming right before our very eyes. You have only to watch the newspapers and listen to the reports to see the evidence of it on every hand. Thousands are being sucked into this whirlpool even now. And make no mistake! Following the second session of the Ecumenical Council in Rome, there will be a great speeding up in the progress toward the union of the iron of Rome with the clay of Protestantism. People’s minds have been well prepared. Protestant leaders the world over have raised their voices in favor of the union. People have been "softened up" and they are being prepared to march back to Rome. Make no mistake about it, for it is sure to come. Do not flirt with this harlot system. It will drag you into its vortex and you will be swallowed by it. The hour has come to "come out and be separate and touch not the unclean thing." Both elements are already unclean, but the mixture will be filthy.

"And after these things I saw another angel come down from heaven, having great power; and the earth was lightened with his glory. And he cried mightily with a strong voice, saying, Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird. For all nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth are waxed rich through the abundance of her delicacies. And I heard another voice from heaven, saying, Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues. For her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities. Reward her even as she rewarded you, and double unto her double according to her works; in the cup which she hath filled fill to her double." Rev. 18:1-6

We mentioned above that this great image had two feet, both a crude mixture of iron and clay. One foot represents spiritual Babylon and the other foot represents political Babylon. You may disbelieve this statement, but we will see before long that there will be some sort of an agreement between Capitalism and Communism. Iron and clay cannot mix but they will certainly try. It may be that they will do little more than render lip service to each other and tell lies at the same table. There may even be a war first, but they will undoubtedly unite. Even at this very moment, in spite of all the fire and brimstone that issues from their mouths as they denounce each other, there are signs of growing romance. The oriental east will draw away from the west that the way of the kings of the east may be prepared, but the west will draw closer together until the iron of Communism is mixed with the clay of Democracy and we will have the two feet complete, the iron of Catholicism mixed with clay of Protestantism on the one hand and the iron of Communism mixed with the clay of Democracy on the other. Certainly a weak, rotten, shaky pair of feet to bear the weight of the world systems, but there they are none the less.

This, however, is not the end of the union, for the two systems will become one. Our understanding of Revelation 13 is limited indeed, but two dreadful beasts are described in that chapter. The first beast received his power and authority from the dragon (the devil). The second beast deceived the people who dwell on the earth by means of his miracles. Rev. 13:14. (This should be a solemn warning to all people who hold miracles in great reverence.) But the second beast gave his authority to the first beast and commanded all who dwell upon the earth to worship him, verse 12, and caused all both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond to receive a mark in their right hand or in their foreheads, and that no man might buy or sell save he that had the mark or the name of the beast or the number of his name. Rev. 13:16-17 Now the first beast, which receives worship, is the religious one. This is religious or spiritual Babylon with its head in Rome. The second beast is the political one, who refuses to let people buy, sell, or trade in any manner unless they have first sworn allegiance to the first beast. Whether they are rich or poor, bond or free, great or small will make no difference. Verse 16. They will all be required to do homage to this beastly and dreadful system.

Let us make it perfectly clear here that the real ruling force will not be political Babylon, but spiritual Babylon. That is why it is said in Rev. 17:18 "And the woman which thou sawest is that great city which reigneth over the kings of the earth". Revelation chapters 17 and 18, though too long to quote here, show very clearly that spiritual Babylon is to be the real force in the earth, and she will reign over the kings of the earth just as she did before the days of the Reformation when practically every king in Europe took his orders from the Pope of Rome. As it was then, so will it be again, but much, much worse than before. The two feet of Daniel 2 and the two beasts of Rev. 13 amount to about one and the same thing. They complement each other.

There are few books in the Bible, which so confirm each other as do the two books of Daniel and Revelation. Both are sealed up until the time of the end and have remained a mystery for many centuries, but both are beginning to unfold in a sort of corroborative testimony so that each explains the other and greatly adds to its message.

The awe-inspiring vision of Nebuchadnezzar did not end with the vision of the feet of iron and clay. The greatest event of all was yet to come, for he saw a stone cut out of a mountain without hands, which smote the image on its unsteady feet. The blow fell upon the feet because they represent the ruling power at the time of the end when these events take place and the vision is fulfilled. The moment that blow was struck by the stone from the mountain, the whole Babylonish system fell and crumbled to dust beneath its own weight. It became like the dust of a summer threshing floor and the wind blew it away. Then the little stone cut from the mountain itself became a great mountain and filled the whole earth. Dan. 2:35,44-45 This, of course, is the beginning of the kingdom of God, which will eventually fill the whole earth. The stone is Christ with all the elect sons of God. The mountain is Zion. Thus it is said, "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed." The kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces the iron, the brass, the silver, and the gold. "The great God hath made known to the king (Nebuchadnezzar) what shall come to pass hereafter; and the dream is certain and the interpretation thereof sure." Dan. 2:44-45

In Nebuchadnezzar's vision of Daniel 2 the stone (Christ) cut from the mountain (Zion) smote the image on the two feet and thus destroyed the whole system of Babylon. It is therefore most significant that immediately following John's vision of the two beasts, who controlled the worship and commerce of the whole earth, he says, "I looked, and lo, a Lamb stood on Mount Zion and with Him 144,000 having His Father's name written in their foreheads." Rev. 14:1-7 Then immediately following the marvelous description of this 144,000 sons of God, he saw an angel fly through heaven saying, "Babylon is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations to drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication." Rev. 14:8-20 If you read the remainder of the chapter, you will see vividly the process of the destruction of this Babylonish system by the stone which was cut out of Mount Zion without hands. The stone which Daniel saw and the 144,000 sons whom John saw are identical.

It is scarcely necessary to remind the reader that "Christ" includes the Head (Jesus of Nazareth) together with all the members of His body. This is the true Christ. This is the fullness of Christ. "Behold, I and the sons which God hath given Me." Jesus is the first born of a vast family of sons. This is the vision John saw upon Mount Zion - Christ with the other members of His body ready to take the kingdom and reign. Let it be known here, however, that what God calls the body of Christ is not what Christians call the body of Christ. The church system would include all its converts as members of the body of Christ, but the Father has chosen an elect company of sons who bear His name in their foreheads and in whose mouths there is no guile. The confused Babylonish church system of our day is full of lies, exaggerations, hypocrisy, false teachers, false prophets speaking lies in hypocrisy, having their conscience seared with a hot iron. But that company that stands on Mount Zion is a company chosen out from among all this. They sing a new song. They are undefiled. God's name is in their foreheads, and they follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth.

I must frankly tell you that I believe that the church system of our day has sunk to its lowest ebb. It is ripe for the deception of antichrist. It is worldly minded; it loves pleasure more than it loves God. It loves feasting more than fasting. It exaggerates its successes. It exalts men above Christ. It compasses land and sea to make a proselyte and frequently the proselytes are more the children of Satan than they were in the beginning. The whole system is full of professional mendicants who beg money in the name of their program just as a blind man on the street corner begs in the name of his blindness. Only yesterday I received a long letter filled with a lying false prophecy, which told me all the wonderful things that would happen to me if I would send the writer an offering for his radio work. Cursed be such wicked men! But many are deceived by their guile even though their wickedness should be evident to the simplest mind. The church system is filled with programs of human making. Its costly buildings dot the streets. Its ministers love to wear their long robes and to be called Father, Reverend and Holy in public while their private lives too often hold nothing in common with their profession. More than one widely known preacher of our day has become a millionaire, and that by devouring widow's houses, touting his programs to gullible multitudes, and for a pretence making long prayers for the people. Jesus said they were whited sepulchers - beautiful outside, but full of dead men's bones.

Ah, wicked generation! They profess that they know God, but in works they deny Him, being abominable and disobedient and to all good works reprobate. No wonder Jesus asked, "When the Son of man cometh, will He find faith on the earth?" And no wonder He said, "Many will come in that day saying, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in Thy name, and in Thy name cast out devils, and in Thy name done many wonderful works?" Then will I profess unto them, I never knew you. Depart from me ye that work iniquity." These are the words of the Saviour, and these words are truth.

There is a burning desire in my heart to help all men to see what the true church really is. What is this glorious church of which Paul spoke and which he declared was without spot or wrinkle or any such thing? What is this church of which Jesus said, "Upon this rock will I build My church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it?" Is it this visible thing we see with our natural eyes, which is described in the parables of Matt. 13 as being full of tares, goats, weeds, bad fish, and the leaven of malice and wickedness? Or is it a treasure hid in afield? It is not the great outward thing that sprawls itself over the earth in the sight of all men. It is the hidden thing, which God sees. It is the treasure hidden in the great visible field. It is the priceless pearl hidden among the muck and filth of the oyster bed. It is the few heads of wheat that have managed to live among the crowding moisture-sucking tares. It is the few sheep among the flocks of goats who know the Shepherd's voice and follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth. It is the few clean fish gathered from the net in the end of the age. Please read Matt. 13.

Man loves the visible and glories in what he sees but God sees the invisible and loves what man cannot see. Perhaps the most scathing comment Jesus ever made to the visible Jewish church of His day was that "publicans and harlots go into the kingdom of God before you." Matt. 21:31-32 And thus without doubt it will be in the visible church system of our day. Let us cease to look at the church as that which is visible, and let us see the true church, the elect of God, who amid all this outward show is as a treasure hidden in a field. Let us see it as the hidden seven thousand who in Elijah's day had never bowed the knee to Baal, even though Elijah himself knew it not and thought that he alone was serving the Lord. For as it was in the days of Noah, who alone was righteous in his generation, and as it was in the day that just Lot came out of Sodom, so shall it be in the days that the Son of man shall come. Then they were eating and drinking, marrying and divorcing, and knew nothing until the flood came and destroyed them all.

I have a strong conviction that we are at the end of the dispensation of grace. The kingdom of God is at hand. The church age has served its purpose of bringing forth its elect sons, and, having served its purpose, it is at an end. Men are still looking for another great revival in the church, but it will not come. The next great revival will be in the beginning of the kingdom age when whole nations will say, "Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord (Zion) and to the house of the God of Jacob; and He will teach us of His ways and we will walk in His paths; For the law shall go forth from Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." Micah 4:2

Along with the great kingdom revival mentioned above when all nations come to know God, there is also another very special event when all Israel shall come to know Him, too. This national conversion of Israel is described by Zechariah in these words: "And I will pour upon the house of David and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem the spirit of grace and supplication; and they shall look upon Me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for Him as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for Him as one is in bitterness for his firstborn." Zech. 12:10 "In that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem for sin and uncleanness." Zech 13:1 "And one shall say unto Him, What are these wounds in Thine hands? Then He shall answer, Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends."

There is a great revival coming when the whole earth will turn to God, but it is not coming in the church age. Revivals for this age are finished. You will have to agree that there has been something sadly lacking in the revivals of the last several years. There have been big and wonderful reports, but there has been something missing, for sin continues to increase and coldness is everywhere rampant among the church members. The revivals of the Reformation in the days of Luther, the revivals in the days of the Wesleys and Whitfield in England, the revivals of Finney and Moody in America, and the great outpouring of the Spirit that began in 1900 were revivals of a different order. Then multitudes turned to God and the courses of entire nations were altered. England was saved from a bloody revolution by the Wesleyan revival. America banished the demon of liquor in the days of Billy Sunday. But the revivals of the last few years (whether they are revivals or not may be questioned) have served to popularize religion so that the song "It is No Secret What God Can Do" has been glibly sung on the dance floor and in the theatre just as it has been sung in the church pew, and the song "Just A Closer Walk With Thee" has been used to conclude evenings of frivolity and abject nonsense. There never was so much church building as today, never so much money spent on religion in all its aspects, but there never was so much spiritual poverty. Everywhere there are forms of godliness, but everywhere there is a lack of power.

We are indeed living in momentous hours. The great Babylonish image is standing on its two unsubstantial feet of iron and clay. A spirit of deception has fallen upon the world and Satan has come down with great wrath, knowing that he has but a short time. Men and nations have become "lovers of themselves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, truce breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those who are good, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, having a form of godliness but denying the power thereof; from such turn away." 2 Tim. 3:2-5

In my opinion it is completely unscriptural to look for a revival at the end of the church age. As it was in the days of Noah (see Gen. 6) and as it was in the day that Lot went out of Sodom, so shall it be in the day of the coming of the Son of man. We are approaching the hour when we may well ask ourselves in the words of Jesus, "When the Son of man cometh, will He find faith on the earth?" We are certainly seeing the fulfillment of Paul's prediction: "Evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived."

There was a wonderful day when Israel was preparing to leave Egypt, when a great event happened that has its parallel in our day. Just before the Passover, when the firstborn of every household was sealed, Moses stretched forth his hand toward heaven and there was a thick darkness in Egypt for three days. They saw not one another, neither rose any from his place. It was darkness that could befall. But all the children of Israel had light in their dwellings. Exodus 10:21-23. God has begun to divide the light from the darkness. There is every evidence that gross darkness that can be felt is descending upon all who love and follow the systems of this age, but in the souls of those who follow the Lamb withersoever He goeth there is ever increasing light.
And one took root and sprouted up
   And grew into a tree.
Love sought its shade at eventide
   To breathe its early vows
And age was pleased at height of noon
   To rest beneath its boughs.
The dormouse loved its dangling twigs;
   The birds sweet music bore.
   It stood a glory in itself,
A blessing evermore.

As I thought upon the words of this pretty poem, which I learned when a boy in school, it took the form of a parable in my mind. It came to pass that when the oak tree was grown it, too, bore many acorns, which the birds of the air and the chattering squirrels carried far away, and, as they dropped the acorns here and there, a mighty forest of oak trees sprang up where once no trees had been. Men in course of time, seeing the value of the forest, began to harvest the trees. So excellent was the wood that demands for it became great till thriving industries sprang up about it and great wealth was laid up in store because of it. Towns sprang up here and there with all their bustling industry. So fine and hard was the beautiful wood that nations from afar sent their ships to carry its products to their shores and from it master craftsmen fashioned magnificent works of art. So bountiful was its supply that rich and poor alike shared its benefits. Some was used in homes of humble men and some was laid for floors in the palaces of kings. Yet that traveler on the dusty road, who long ago strewed acorns on the lea, knew not ever that it was from his thoughtless act that all this blessing to mankind had come.

Even thus it shall ever be with those who are led by the Spirit of God. They know not how great a blessing may come to the world because of the Spirit of God that led them and prompted them to do the things they did. I must testify that a whole lifetime of walking with God has taught me that, if we live in touch with His Holy Spirit, we never need have a worry about our being led by Him, for He is always leading, often causing us to do inadvertently things we thought little of at the moment, but which in the course of time brought endless blessing to certain ones, who in their turn brought blessing to others until the end results, all unknown to us, became as the stars of the heavens for multitude and as the sands of the seashore innumerable.

Many a shaft at random sent Finds mark the archer little meant,
And many a word at random spoken
   May soothe or wound a heart that's broken.

Many years ago in the city of Chicago there was a diligent young man who worked as an assistant in the manufacture of shoes. Much of his work was in the back of the shop. Hence he was not often seen. It happened one day, while he was working, that a somewhat timid man walked into the shop and offered the young man a gospel tract. He received it graciously and stuffed it in his pocket to read at his leisure. As he read it that evening, he began to see his need of God and was converted to Christ. He began holding little gospel meetings and preaching on the street. Standing on soap boxes on street corners, he proclaimed the message of Christ to needy men, and hardened sinners came as he reached out his chubby hand to welcome them and point them home to God.

It wasn't long before he was traveling far and wide, proclaiming to needy men the mighty message of the cross as thousands in response knelt at the altars to give their lives to Christ. He traveled across the seas and brought the blessing of his ministry to far away England and Scotland. At the Chicago World Fair he preached the gospel to sixty-thousand people at one time. That man was D. L. Moody, a name that still remains a household word in millions of homes over the earth. We cannot begin to recount here the blessings that have followed throughout the years as thousands of men and women came within the sphere of his influence. The name of D. L. Moody is known all over the world, but the name of the humble man who handed him a tract that day in the shoe store is unknown and forgotten by us all. Do you think God has forgotten the man who planted the seed of God's kingdom in that seeking soul? No, indeed, He has not forgotten, and in the glory of the ages to come he will be a full partaker in all the boundless harvest that has followed because one day, when all looked dark and useless and possibly he felt discouraged, the Holy Spirit led him to hand a simple, written message to a young man he did not know, but whom God had predestined to shine as one of the brightest lights of the age of grace. Can we wonder at all that the Lord has said, "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are sons of God?" "They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars unto the ages of the ages." Dan. 12:3

We shall shine as .the stars of the morning
With Jesus, the glorified One.
We will love Him forever and ever,
Eternally shine as the sun.

Long ago in Ur of the Chaldees, where the mighty river Euphrates empties its sullen stream into the Persian Gulf, dwelt a man by the name of Terah, who was eight generations removed from his forefather Shem, the son of Noah. Gen. 11:10-26 Terah was an idolater and, according to the writings of Jasher, he had a whole house full of idols, which he guarded with jealous care and worshipped continually. The historical writings of Jasher give us the following information: "And all the sons of the earth in those days greatly transgressed against the Lord, and they rebelled against Him and they served other gods and they forgot the Lord who had created them in the earth; and the inhabitants of the earth made unto themselves at that time every man his god; gods of wood and stone which could neither speak, hear, nor deliver. And the sons of men served them and they became their gods."

"And the king and all his servants and Terah (Abraham's father) with all his household were then the first of those that served gods of wood and stone. And Terah had twelve gods of large size, made of wood and stone, after the twelve months of the year, and he served each one monthly, and every month Terah would bring his meat offering and his drink offering to his gods; thus did Terah all the days. And all that generation was wicked in the sight of the Lord, and they thus made every man his god, but they forsook the Lord who had created them. For there was not a man found in those days in the whole earth who knew the Lord (for they served every man his own god) except Noah and his household and all those who were under his counsel knew the Lord in those days... And Abram the son of Terah was waxing great in those days under the house of Noah, and no man knew it and the Lord was with him. And the Lord gave Abram an understanding heart, and he knew all the works of that generation were evil, and that all their gods were vain and to no avail." Book of Jasher, Page 23. (Note: Shem outlived Abraham by thirty-five years. Jacob and Esau were ten years old when Shem died.)

When the appointed time comes for the great Lord of the universe to launch any part of His predestined plan, He always has His vessels prepared and ready for the task. When it was time for the flood to come upon the whole world, though wickedness was exceeding great and the thoughts of every man's heart were only evil continually, and the sons of God were wickedly intermarrying with the daughters of men, and evil giants, the offspring of this intermingling with strange flesh, were in the earth, and the earth was corrupt and filled with violence and all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth, even then the Lord was not without a witness. There was yet one man who walked with God - a man by the name of Noah, who "found grace in the eyes of the Lord; and Noah was a just man and perfect in his generation, and Noah walked with God." Gen. 6:8-9. Just think of it! In the midst of a world filled with corruption, when every thought and imagination of man's heart was only evil continually, when violence stalked the land like a devilish specter, in the midst of it all there was yet one man who knew God and walked with Him, steadfastly refusing to go the way of the world.

Our heavenly Father has never throughout the ages and dispensations left himself without a witness. He always has a people of His own, even if it is but one man. We are now reliving the days of Noah. These are the evil days of which Jesus spoke. These are the days when violence is a way of life and the elected leaders of the land desire to have it so, and, because they were raised in rebellion themselves, they have no will whatsoever to punish the evil doer and restore order to our midst. Crimes of the most evil and dreadful sort are passed off as a sickness and the most brutal and conniving criminal is mollycoddled and babied while countless millions of dollars are spent trying to rehabilitate him. The thing has become so out of proportion now that the jails are full and running over and there is no alternative left but to put these evil doers back among the people to perpetrate their crimes again, whether they be murderers or rapists, bank robbers or drunks. The absurd and evil proposal once suggested here in Canada was that elderly people and welfare recipients should be asked to take these reprobate people into their homes.

Let it be thoroughly known that, once the laws of God are repudiated and defied and men choose to do their own thing, then God turns the nations over to a reprobate mind to do every evil thing that is unwise and inconvenient. For thus the Lord has said: "And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind, to do those things which are not convenient; being filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity; whisperers, backbiters, haters of God, despisful, proud, boasters, inventors of evil things, disobedient to parents, without understanding, covenant-breakers, without natural affection, implacable, unmerciful: who knowing the judgment of God, that they which commit such things are worthy of death, not only do the same, but have pleasure in them that do them." Rom. 1:28-32 Those who read the first part of the chapter will be able to see how the evils of atheism, agnosticism, Darwinism, idolatry (verse 25), lesbianism (verse 26), and homosexuality (verse 27) arise from rejection of God. The first chapter of Romans is an overwhelming description of the evils, which have brought God's judgment upon the world in Noah's day, in Abraham's day, in Sodom's day and in our day. Let there be no mistake. "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." "He that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption, but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting."

In the midst of all the evils of days past and present the Lord God has never left Himself without a witness. Acts 14:17 He always has a witness and He always has a people. That people is always small in number, sometimes reduced to the seven thousand in Israel who had not bowed to the image of Baal and sometimes reduced to just one man as it was in the days of Noah.

Thus, when all the world was wicked in Abraham's day and men greatly transgressed against the Lord and served other gods and forgot the Lord who had created them in the earth, and the inhabitants made unto themselves every man his god, gods of wood and stone which could neither hear nor deliver - in that very day, I say, the Lord said unto Abram, "Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will show thee: and I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great, and thou shall be a blessing: And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed." Gen. 12:1-3. So Abraham obeyed God and went out, not knowing whither he went. Heb. 11:8.

It may not be necessary for us to consider the details of the three great covenants the Lord made with Abram as recorded in Gen. 13:16; 15:5; 22:17; 32:12. Suffice it to say here that God gave to Abraham three kinds of seed. Those who were to be as numerous as the dust of the earth are represented by those who are descended from him through Ishmael and Keturah. Then there was the seed that was to be as numerous as the sands of the sea. These are God's earthly people, Israel, the descendants of Abraham through Isaac and Jacob. It is totally wrong for anyone to imagine that the handful of people whom we call the Jews is all there is to Israel. These people are by no means numerous. The people who are now known as Israel are not really Israel at all. There are, of course, many among them who are true Jews and are of the house of Judah and Benjamin, but the other ten tribes, spoken of by Jesus as the lost sheep of the house of Israel, are also in the world. Jesus and Peter knew where they were, and these have become great nations, especially Ephraim and Manasseh. The Jews are neither a great nation nor are they innumerable. To Ephraim it was promised that he would become a company of nations or a commonwealth. The only Commonwealth of Nations on earth today or in any other day is the British Commonwealth of nations. We actually possess all the promises made to Ephraim in Gen. 48 and 49 as well as promises made to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob long before Ephraim was born. Manasseh was the brother of Ephraim and to him the promise was that he should become a great nation. Surely none would be so hardy that he would deny that the United States of America is the greatest single nation on earth. China and Russia are both big and powerful, but there is no possible way that they could be called great. There are far too many weaknesses in their chain both physically and, above all, spiritually. Every promise made to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob is now the possession of the Anglo-Saxon and Celtish peoples and no other nations on earth have become heirs of those promises. God was not making idle talk when He said that Abraham's seed would be as the sand of the sea shore for multitude and that through him all the families of the earth would be blessed.

There yet remains another seed that was to come from Abraham. We must always remember and never forget that God's promise to bless the world was through that particular seed, Isaac, not through Ishmael nor the sons of Keturah, for "in Isaac shall thy seed be called." Paul, speaking of this particular seed through which the blessing would come, made special mention of Christ. When the Lord led Abraham out, after he was separated from Lot, He told him to look up at the stars and try to number them. Then He said, "So shall thy seed be." I once heard an astronomer make this staggering assertion: "We reckon that the stars of the heaven and the sands of the seashores are about equal in number." Thus Abraham was promised three kinds of seed - the dust seed, the sand seed, and the star seed. He was indeed to be the father of an earthly people, but above all he was to be the father of a heavenly people as well, for "if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." For two thousand years our God has been forming a heavenly people, the true church of the firstborn whose names are written in heaven. Sects and denominations have nothing to do with the true church. Denominations are all man-made systems and they are all Babylon. The church is a people related to God by Jesus Christ. They are a people born of Him, born from above and born free, and when at last they are all counted, they will be found to be a multitude innumerable as the stars of the heavens for number.

There is coming a time of unspeakable glory, plainly revealed in God's word as the times of the restitution of all things. The times of the restitution of all things are as certain and sure as the rising of the sun and the going down thereof. It thrills the soul to notice that at the time of the call of Abraham, when all the families of the earth were so desperately wicked, attempting as they did to build a tower that would reach to heaven - even in that deplorable day of abounding wickedness - God spoke to Abraham, saying, "In thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed." I do not understand the ramifications of it all, but I know that God Himself has spoken, saying that through Christ, who is also the seed of Abraham, He has reconciled the all things unto Himself, of things in earth and things in heaven and things under the earth. Before ever the world began our heavenly Father conceived in His own infinite mind every minutest detail of the purpose of the ages. He has left nothing to happenstance, nothing to chance. There is coming a day when through this wonderful seed of Abraham all families of the earth will be blessed in that fullness of time. There will be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things have passed away. In that blessed hour of restitution:

God shall wipe away all tears;
There's no death, no pain, no fears;
And they count not time by years,
For there is no night there.

The glorious New Jerusalem, the city foursquare, shall fill the earth with the light of the Lord. The people will walk in the light of it and the nations shall bring their glory and honor into it. There men will need no sun, neither the light of the moon, for the Lamb is the light thereof. These are the things, which eye hath not seen or ear heard, neither have they entered the heart of man. These are the things God has revealed to them that love Him. These are the unspeakable things, unlawful for man to utter, the things that belong to the third heaven, which is the realm of the stars and the realm of the Spirit.

Jesus shall reign wherever the sun
Doth his successive journeys run;
His kingdom spread from shore to shore
'Til moons shall wax and wane no more.

From north and south the people meet
To lay their trophies at His feet;
While western empires own their Lord
And savage tribes attend His word.
Do you see, my beloved brethren, the vast extent of blessing, which accrues to the credit of him who is led by the Spirit of God? Is it not a remarkable thing, nay, rather a thing utterly supernal and incredible, that God should speak to Abraham, saying, "Get thee out of thy country" and that Abraham should go forth, not knowing whither he went and with practically no revelation at all as to the vastness of the infinite purposes God had in mind? How could Abraham have known that the step of obedience God was requiring of him that day would lead eventually to the day of the restitution of all things when every family that has ever walked the earth would be blest? O that men who now hear the call to come out of Babylon would manifest the same spirit of obedience!

As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God. I am not including those pretenders who with a passion to do their own pleasure and fulfill their own desires proclaim their actions to be the leading of God. They remind me of the man who prayed that the Lord would give him the wife of His choice, then added, "But, Lord, make it Mary." Silly, isn't it? Yet that is the attitude of the vast majority of Christians in our day and all previous days as well. They mistake their own will for the will of God. Our Father in heaven has His own peculiar way of leading

His people and, should every Christian rise to review the march of time as it has passed, he would recognize the ever present though unseen hand of God moving in all the affairs of life with a certainty that is as unimpeachable as God Himself. I do not say that it is impossible for one to get out of God's will. There can be no question that many thousands have done so. Oh what shipwreck people have made of their lives because of their determination to have their own way about some detail, which at the moment seemed to overpower them! How many young men and young women have been mis-mated in marriage, bringing upon themselves a difficult and troublesome lifetime just because they were infatuated and frivolously mistook their own will to be the will of God? How many girls have foolishly married drunkards in the credulous self-delusion that they would reform them and as a consequence have spent the remainder of their lives in fear, poverty, and terrible disillusionment? My advice to God's people is always this: Never do anything in a hurry. "Every purpose is established by counsel: and with good advice make war." Prov. 20:18. God is never in a hurry. He plants a seed in the ground and patiently waits a thousand years for it to grow to maturity. Some of those mighty redwood trees in the forests of California were saplings when Adam was on the earth. The Lord, who said that Abraham's seed would be as numerous as the stars, did not hurry to give him the promised seed to start the race. He waited till Abraham was an hundred years old. He did not hasten to give Jacob a wife. He let him labor for her for seven years. If we desire to be led by God's Spirit, we must live in the Spirit. If we would have the mind of Christ, it is completely essential that we have no mind of our own.

Many and devious are the ways and paths by which the Lord in faithfulness leads the people He has chosen. I could tell some blessed tales of how He led me through the mountains and valleys of my life. He has led me by the skinny hand of dearth and poverty. He has directed my course by means of storms and pushed me into His way by the evil hand of those who hated me. He has led me by direct intervention and by speaking words of command into my heart. How often do my wife and I, as we kneel together before His throne, offer our humble thanks and abounding appreciation for all the way His star has guided us over the fitful, restless seas of life's journey!

All the way my Saviour leads me;
What have I to ask beside?
Can I doubt His tender mercy
Who through life has been my guide?
Heavenly peace, divinest comfort,
Here by faith in Him to dwell;
And I know whate'er befall me
Jesus doeth all things well.

Let us pursue a little further the thought of having no mind of our own. The man or woman who desires to know the mind of Christ, fervently desiring that His mind should dwell within, must first come to the blessed place of surrender where he has no mind of his own. The Christian who seeks to embrace the will of God must lay aside every trace of his own will. We are bought with a price, even the precious blood of Jesus Christ.
Therefore we are not our own. We are His own purchased possession; we belong to Him. Paul, when he wrote to the Philippians, earnestly exhorted them in these words: "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus." The mind that was in Christ Jesus was undoubtedly the Father's mind, for Christ said, "I do always those things that please the Father." Therefore it pleased the Father that in Him should all fullness dwell. Think of it! All fullness was to dwell in Him! Not as the reward for being a rebel, not as a recompense for loving His own will, but "in the volume of the book it is written of Me, I delight to do Thy will, O God." Because Christ delighted in the will of God, then through Him the Father took away the first to establish the second. He removed all former orders and laws that had been given because of rebellious men and in their place He established an eternal order, founded upon men who love Him and cherish His divine and blessed will. The Lord Jesus Christ did have a will of His own just as we have a will of our own. The fact was perfectly portrayed in the garden of Gethsemane when He prayed these words: "Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from Me. Nevertheless not My will but Thine be done." I sincerely doubt that there is any consecration in a Christian which stirs God's love and affection so much as when He sees His people lay their own wills in the dust and take up His will instead. It will without doubt require the grace of God in their hearts, but there is grace aplenty in Him sufficient for all our needs, for He is full of grace and truth. These paltry, frivolous wills of ours can only bring us into death. They destroy our love, annul our service, cause us to lose our crown of rejoicing, and shrivel our spiritual experiences to the point of non-existence.

I do not know why oft round me
My hopes all shattered seem to be;
But though God's plan I cannot see,
Someday I will understand.

What greater triumph did Jesus Christ ever experience than those hours when in agony and bloody sweat He triumphed gloriously over His own will? And, in thus triumphing over His own will, He triumphed over the cross as well and attained the resurrection, the ascension, and His seat by the Father's right hand, eternal in the heavens. We may say without hesitation that the frightful agonies of the cross were all overcome in the garden of Gethsemane. When man has died to his own will, to his own mind, to his own thoughts, yea, it seems to me that when a man has died to himself, he will never fear death. It will have lost its sting because he has already passed beyond its power in yielding his will. He has been to the garden. He has been to the cross. He has passed through the tomb. He is risen with Christ. He is a citizen of a new realm, even the celestial realm. He has become a citizen of a heavenly country. While he still wanders through the wilderness of this world, his glad heart is singing, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" The sting of death was sin, but now there is no sin. The strength of sin was the law, but now, because there is no sin, there need be no law, for he that is dead to himself is freed from sin. Do you think there is a dead man in all the cemeteries of the world who still remains under the law? I know not. Neither is there any man who with Christ has died to his own will who is under any law, for the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus has made him free from the law of sin and death.

When our Lord Jesus Christ went to the cross, the omniscient God placed all the sin of every man on Him, and having done so, then He crucified Him. God laid my will, my mind, my carnal nature, my old man on Him and, having done this, then He crucified Him. My heart prays that Christians might see that holy truth by the Spirit, for this, my beloved brethren, is absolutely true: If God by His Spirit will reveal to your heart this very moment that every man who ever breathed was included in Christ when the Christ was crucified, then you will see by the Spirit that you, too, were included in Him and the beautiful revelation will dawn upon your spirit that you, too, were crucified with Him - not yesterday nor today - but two thousand years ago. Thus it is an undeniable fact that you are now crucified with Him at this very moment. You should stop and think it over. You should pause here and ask God to make it live in your spirit, for let me assure you, saint of God, that the moment your faith reaches out to embrace the indisputable fact that your old man was crucified with Him by God Himself, then you will know for certain that all these carnal things that have troubled you so long are, in fact, dead things and their show of life is a falsehood.

When the axe is laid to the root of a tree, the tree is immediately dead. It falls to the ground and, though for a number of days the green leaves seem to flourish upon it, it is dead and no power on earth can restore its life. Thus, when you see by faith that you have died with Christ, you will know that the things, which dare to trouble your spirit, are only dead things. Therefore put them off and put them away from you. To these crucified and risen ones Paul now writes, "But now ye also put off all these; anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth. Lie not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds; and have put on the new man..." Col. 3:8-10 He also gives this most blessed instruction: "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with Him in glory." Col. 3:1-4 Glory, my brother, is not a feeling of blessing. Glory is the image and likeness of Christ Jesus. Thus we pray that all men may see that we ourselves, together with our wills, our minds, our carnal natures and our old selves are in fact and in truth already crucified with Christ. The moment we see it and believe it, the blessing of it will be ours.

How shall I describe the blessing that came to my own struggling heart when Jesus Christ revealed to me that, when He died on the cross two thousand years ago, I was included in Him and was crucified with Him and in Him and because of that all the carnal things with which I had struggled so long were in fact dead things. When I died in Him, they died, too, but when I arose with Him, my own will, my own mind and my carnal self did not rise but remained in the tomb. It is by faith, my brother that it might be by grace.

When Paul wrote, "I am crucified with Christ," he was not trying to tell us that he went to an altar of prayer one day and so struggled that he came off victorious. The whole seventh chapter of Romans disproves such a theory. No, he was telling us just what I have stated above. The moment Paul saw by faith that when Christ died Paul also died, then how could he fail to see that the work was done and the crucifixion of his old self was a thing of the past? We don't get rid of our old nature by striving with it. We won't overcome it by becoming a monk or a nun and locking ourselves away from the world. When we see the truth that we were once included in the first Adam when he sinned, for in Adam all die, then our eyes will be enlightened to see that through faith we were included in the last Adam when He gained the victory over all carnality and sin, and, knowing this we can say in truth, "I am crucified with Christ: Nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ, liveth in me, and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave Himself for me." Gal. 2:20

Thus with our old will and our old mind now crucified and with God's will in our heart and the mind of Christ in our head what now is to hinder us from knowing what the will of the Lord is? What could separate us from His will or hinder us from abiding in it? "I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." Rom. 8:38-39

There are so many ways by which our Father leads these blessed souls of His love, these people of His care. We have thought on the blessedness of how we entered this new life in Him, being identified with Him in the death of the cross and in His glorious resurrection. Therefore we should better understand how the leading of God's Spirit and the will of the Lord are accomplished in our lives. For me to live is Christ and to die with Him has been great gain.

First let us consider divine intervention. In the book of Acts, chapter eight, we are told how the angel of the Lord said to Philip, "Arise, and go toward the south unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem to Gaza, which is desert. And he arose and went: and, behold, a man of Ethiopia, an eunuch of great authority under Candace queen of the Ethiopians, who had the charge of all her treasure, and had come to Jerusalem for to worship, was returning, and sitting in his chariot read Esaias the prophet. Then the Spirit said unto Philip, Go near, and join thyself to this chariot. And Philip ran thither to him, and heard him read the prophet Esaias, and said, Understandest thou what thou readest? And he said, How can I except some man should guide me? And he desired Philip that he would come up and sit with him." Acts 8:26-31

What a blessed story this is and how wonderfully it portrays the moving of the Spirit of God in the life of a man who desires nothing so much as to be led by the Spirit of God! Because Philip was living in touch with God, the Spirit was able to speak to him, and so familiar had the voice of Christ become that he hesitated not a moment. If indeed he had hesitated or awaited his own time, he would not have met this Ethiopian at all. The man would not have found the Saviour, but would have returned home still at a loss for the knowledge of God. There are many Christians in Ethiopia today and it is believed that it has been so ever since the memorable day the Ethiopian returned home, rejoicing in the knowledge of Christ. Thus we see how important it is to be led at times by some direct intervention on the part of God. We should point out here, of course, that there is a great difference between being led to speak to a traveler about his soul and being led regarding some decision which will involve one's entire life. It is concerning this latter that we are exhorted never to be in a hurry.

Secondly, God leads His people through calamity. Many saints have learned that God through some great tragedy directed them into His will. For this reason we should always keep foremost in our minds that very necessary truth, "All things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purpose." Rom. 8:28 How glibly we have quoted this scripture to others, but oh how difficult it becomes, when calamity strikes, to sit down and say, "I wonder what eternal good the Lord will bring from this?" When calamities befall us as once fell upon poor Job, when houses and lands are swept away, when stealthy thieves come and steal away our camels, our asses, and our cattle, and death comes to snatch our loved ones from our bosoms, when strength and heart are breaking, it is not at all easy to see the guiding hand of a loving Father through our bitter tears. It is no simple matter to declare that even this is working together for my eternal welfare. How difficult it is to see that only the temporal things are vanishing, that it is the old, unreal things of time that are fading from our sight that the things which are eternal may remain! No, it is not easy. Only faith in Christ will make us see the truth of it. Furthermore, when the evil hand of sickness and pain is laid upon us till nights become nightmares and months and years are spent in utter misery, it is difficult to see that this, too, is a light affliction but for a moment that is working for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory as we look not at the things that are seen but at the things which are not seen, for the things that are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal.

It was not easy for Paul to understand that his thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet him lest he should be exalted above measure, was for his own good. He prayed mightily that it would leave him, but God replied, "My grace is sufficient for thee, for My strength is made perfect in weakness." Therefore Paul triumphantly said, "Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me. Therefore I take pleasure in infirmities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christ's sake: for when I am weak, then am I strong." 2 Cor. 12:9-10 Calamity, my good friend, is very, very often the hand of God, leading us in ways we do not know.

Without doubt it was God's will that Paul should go to Rome to preach the gospel there and to minister to the saints. Paul had often spoken of going and said on one occasion. "I must see Rome also." But Paul's thought as to how he would go to Rome was evidently not God's plan. If Paul had gone to Rome in his way, he would have ministered to the common people as he planned to do, but the Lord intended that this servant of His, who had so often been in chains, would be landed right in the presence of Caesar and his household. To bring this miracle about the Lord created a regular chain of calamities. When Paul appeared in the temple at Jerusalem, a huge mob of misguided people came upon him to take him. Some swore that they would neither eat nor drink until they had murdered him. To avoid these wretches the centurion sent Paul to Caesaria to appear before the governor Felix to be judged. The upshot of it all was that poor Paul was detained in jail for the next two years, awaiting his trial. But in that jail he spoke to kings and queens and governors as the Lord had told him when He called him years before. And how shall we know till the ages to come what eternal blessing may have accrued from it all? Besides this, we must remember that Paul wrote epistles from that jail, words of truth and life that remain with us unto this day. The man who foolishly believes that the only way one can minister to God is by standing behind a pulpit is mistaken indeed. I have reached many times more people by writing than I ever did by preaching. Men who hear preaching are often like men beholding their face in a glass, who, after beholding it, go away and straightway forget what manner of men they were. If Paul had done nothing in his life but preach sermons, we would have had no record of his message now and the truths he preached would have been forgotten long ago, but while he was in jail, he wrote those living epistles of truth which to this very day are filling God's temple with light. How merciful and good God was to lock him up in jail where his preaching was silenced and where few people had any contact with him at all. While there he wrote those burning, flaming words of truth that changed the lives of men for time and for all eternity. The pen is much mightier than the sword and its words, sleeping on the hidden page, awake betimes to speak hundreds of years after the tongue is forever silent. We must then conclude that this term in jail was the leading of the Lord.
It was the will of God for him and it was the mind of Christ.
Finally the long awaited day came when Paul was sent to Caesar. We do not have space to quote the story fully now, but everyone who wishes to read a tale of high adventure should read this remarkable account of Paul's journey to Rome, recorded in Acts, chapters twenty-one to twenty-eight. It is a story of mobs and violence, of jail and shipwreck, of physical healings and conversions to Christ. It tells how Paul was sent to Rome on a certain ship. It describes in detail how the fierce storm, Euroclydon, buffeted them for days, finally wrecking the ship on a small island called Melita. It tells how by a miracle the barbarians were convinced that Paul was a man of God. It tells of the healing of the father of Publius and of the many healings and conversions that followed during the winter months while they waited. The story proceeds to tell how Paul was sent to Rome to stand trial before Caesar, and it was apparently in Rome that he died. One verse of scripture stands out in my mind that seems to be exceedingly wonderful. "All the saints salute you, chiefly they that are of Caesar's household." Phil. 4:22. It leaves one wondering what may have been the blessed result of his standing trial before Caesar, the great Emperor of Rome. "All the saints salute you, especially they of Caesar's household"! Hallelujah! It was all God's will. It was all God's leading, for the steps of a man are ordered by the Lord.

Thirdly, God leads through envy and betrayal. What Bible story could depict this side of the truth better than the story of Joseph and his brothers? No Bible narrative has been better loved than this and almost all of us have known it from our childhood. Could anyone believe that this Joseph, a boy of seventeen years, felt happy as he was led away to Egypt, hated, betrayed, stolen and sold by his own brothers? He felt just as we would feel if the same thing happened to us. He stood on the auction block and was sold as a common slave. His buyer was Potiphar, believed to be Pharaoh's chief executioner. Because he was faithful to God, he was thrown into prison and the Lord was with him there. When he came forth in God's appointed time, he was miraculously landed in the palace of the king, and Joseph was made the second ruler over all the land of Egypt to save his people and deliver the world from death.

His father and brothers were led to Egypt through the calamity of the terrible famine in their land and they were re-united with Joseph as the story says. When their father, Jacob, died, his brethren feared that Joseph would put them to death for their former wickedness, but, instead of revenge, he saw I lie hand of the Lord in the entire course of events and he knew that the whole long and dreadful story was the loving kindness of God and the leading of the Holy Spirit as He brought (hem all into the center of His will. When Jacob was dead, Joseph's brethren sent a messenger to him, saying, "Thy lather did command before he died, saying, So shall ye say unto Joseph, Forgive, I pray thee now, the trespass of thy brethren and their sin; for they did unto thee evil: and now, we pray thee, forgive the trespass of the servants of the God of thy father. And Joseph wept when they spake unto him. And his brethren also went and fell down before his face; and they said. Behold, we be thy servants. And Joseph said unto them. Fear not: for am I in the place of God? But as for you, ye thought evil against me; but God meant it unto good, to bring to pass, as it is this day, to save much people alive. . . . And he comforted them, and spake kindly unto them." Gen. 50:16-21 Thus we must conclude that even through those who betray us the Spirit of God will lead us, for "I being in the way, the Lord led me to the house of my master's brethren."
"Of the writing of books there is no end," the wise man said, and the apostle John concluded his gospel with the words, "I suppose, if all the books were written that should be written, even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written." There never does seem to be any end to the subjects upon which one should write, for the need of the hour presents them continually to mind. Each seems to be as important as the other, for they are all essential to our spiritual growth in Christ. Yet for all our reading there still remains a great gap in our spiritual understanding that can be filled only by the Lord Himself, who takes the things of God and shows them unto His chosen people.

I have experienced an ever-increasing longing in my heart to help the people of God into a closer communion with Him and into a better understanding of His ways, His plans, and His purposes, that in union with Him and Him alone we may enter the glory He is preparing for those who love Him and long to be with Him in righteousness, holiness, and true judgment in that wonderful age when the eyes of all men are opened and all things begin to be restored unto Him.

It is high time for all the people of the Lord to take a sober look at themselves, for to my own great sorrow I am made aware that there are many foolish and vain talkers among God's children who are mistaking their own personal ambitions for the will of the Father, vainly imagining they have attained a place in God that they have not attained. We should never pay heed to any man who tries to tell us that he and his little group are manifested sons of God, for this is nothing but pride, vain glory, and foolishness. Thus far God has manifested only one Son, and that Son is His first begotten, the Lord Jesus Christ. The glory of the fullness of the "in Christ" experience is far beyond the scope of our writing here - indeed, far beyond our ability to write at all. Its fullness has not been reached by any man now living and will not be reached until God brings us to the fullness of that blessed virgin state where male and female are in one as Adam was before Eve was taken from him, and, indeed, as Jesus, the second Adam, was when He came into the world. Theirs was the pure virgin state. Theirs was God's sonship in truth. In Christ there is neither male nor female because they both exist together in that pure state of sonship. The one hundred forty-four thousand sons who stand on Mount Zion are said to be virgins. They were neither male nor female because they were pure sons of God as was Christ Jesus, or Adam before the woman was taken from him. They are the in Christ company who have become a kind of first fruits of that pure virgin state of sonship. As was the first Adam in his pure virgin state of sonship, and as was the Lord Jesus Christ, the second Adam, in His virgin sonship, so also shall be the sons of God, the third Adam, in their pure virgin state of sonship as they stand with Jesus Christ in perfection on Mount Zion to govern the world in righteousness. For the law shall go forth from Zion and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem.

Those people who have vaingloriously laid claim to this blessedness before the time are hindering both themselves and all who believe them, for the moment we lay claim to something we do not possess, we come to a spiritual standstill and can go no farther. Pride has blinded our minds, shutting out the revelation of God. Wonders of almost unbelievable glory lie before each one of us, but when the foolishness of pride enters into the heart, causing us to imagine that we have attained that which we have not attained, we begin to drift...
aimlessly about and lose our way in the uncharted seas. If we will but cast our eyes about us, we will soon see that people who make great claims as to what they have attained often remain at a standstill year after year, or else they have gone the way of thousands of others who seek to build an earthly kingdom over which they can make themselves lords.

THE TRIAL OF FAITH

God has irrevocably ordained that every son whom He receives must be tried by fire. The trial of our faith is just what the expression implies. It is the test or trial of our faith. We may boast of our faith, but God tries our faith to see what kind of stuff is in it. Therefore let not him who girdeth on his armor boast as he that putteth it off. When we have fully won the victory and carried away the prize, it will be time enough to glory; but now we are in the time when faith is being tested to see what sort it is. If we faint in adversity, our faith is small no matter how many boasts we made in the day of plenty.

The trial of our faith was not sent to destroy us, but to prove the genuineness of our confession. The world is full of professors who loudly proclaim the richness of their faith, but man is always looking on the outward appearance while the Lord looketh on the heart. His eyes behold and His eyelids try the children of men. Psa. 11:4. He narrows His eyelids when He hears the confident profession of His people and devises a sure way by which faith may be divided from vanity and presumption. Have you noticed how the eyes proclaim every condition of the soul whether it be love or hate, fear, anger, disgust, concern, surprise, pity, joy, sorrow or understanding? Do not think that the Lord believes every profession we make, for His eyelids express their question and the trial of our faith begins.

For countless ages Christians have asked, "Why do the righteous suffer?" They suffer, first, because God is looking for the true, the pure, the resolute, the strong, and the faithful. He who bears up faithfully and falters not in the dreadful heat of his trial will be as gold tried in the furnace of affliction, pure and without dross. Secondly, suffering has its own purifying effects. It has its own way of separating us from the flesh, causing us to see that it is but dust and profiteth nothing at all. He who grieves and whines over his light afflictions has never known God's purpose in them, neither does he understand the meaning of the text, "Whom the Lord loveth, He chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom He receiveth."

In this fidgety and impatient age when thousands of people are literally killed in their frantic efforts to save a second of time, we have forgotten the meaning of patience. Christians, too, in their haste to see God move have thrown patience to the winds and have tried to bring about the promised sonship through some other means as Abraham did through Hagar. They have mistaken ambition for duty and personal desire for the will of the Lord. But let us pause in our human haste to learn the truth of this sacred scripture: "Let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing." On every hand we hear Christians saying we must have a revival! We must get souls saved! We must be up and doing! Nonsense, man! God can do any of these things by the slightest turn of His will. What we need is patience that, after we have done the will of God, we may receive the promise. The work of patience is a perfect work. The end in view is that we also may be perfect and entire, wanting in nothing. Patience does not manifest itself alone in our ability to hold our peace when someone offends us, nor in keeping our temper when friend husband forgets our birthday, nor in sitting patiently, waiting for the light to turn green. Patience manifests itself in those who, knowing the will of God, are willing to wait out their whole lifetime and many more lifetimes besides, knowing that all God has promised will surely come to pass. It is willing to bear up under the humiliation and the taunts of those who do not understand, knowing that after we have endured patiently we will receive the promise.

Tribulation, trial and patience walk down the pathway of life hand in hand. Those who ask for patience will surely be made partakers of tribulation. Though they may think they will be handed patience on a silver platter merely for the asking, they will find in the end that tribulation is the only platter upon which the Lord offers patience. The precious ambition of tens of thousands of Christians is, not only that they might enter into the kingdom of God, but that they might be counted worthy to reign with Him in the glory of His kingdom. It was for this very reason that Paul went from church to church in his day, confirming the souls of the disciples and exhorting them to continue in the faith, and showing them that they must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God. Acts 14:22 It is one of the marvels of revelation that Paul placed tribulation at the head of a wonderful list of spiritual attainments for which every true lover of God really longs. He taught that tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and experience hope, and hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost, which God hath given unto us. Rom. 5:3-4. This marvel of revelation is like a step-ladder, the rungs of which are tribulation, patience, experience, hope, and love, bearing us from the earthiness of tribulation to the heavenly splendor of the love of God. Oh, wonder of wonders, how great Thou art!

The moment the heart is awakened to the vast benefits of tribulation and the mind begins to understand its infinite working, then we understand for the first time how man in the furnace of affliction can be joyful in his tribulation, even as Paul who said, "When we were come into Macedonia, our flesh had no rest; we were troubled on every side; without were fightings, within were fears." But for all this he said, "I am filled with comfort, I am exceeding joyful in all our tribulation." Cf. 2 Cor. 7:4-5

What a marvelous wonder it would be if we could by God's grace and wisdom raise the sights of groveling Christianity from the boresome bondage and chains of church tradition that all might see the glorious hope of their calling and the riches of God's inheritance in the saints! Oh, that men might lift their hearts to God and stand in awe as they hear the wonderful proclamation, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to His abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a living hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time. Wherein ye greatly rejoice, though now for a season, if need be, ye are in heaviness through manifold temptations: That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honour and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ." 1 Pet. 1:3-7

Therefore, "beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial that is to try you as though some strange thing happened to you: But rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when His glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy." 1 Pet. 4:12-13 Those dear souls who hope to be companions with Christ and His saints in the glory of His kingdom will find first of all that they must be companions with Him in tribulation and patience, (Cf. Rev. 1:9), for we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God. Almost every week precious people write to me to tell me of some shadowy valley of despair through which they are passing. Their tribulation sometimes seems far beyond what any human being should be called upon to bear, but I dare not write and pour out sympathy to them lest I undo the work of sonship the Lord is preparing. Stand still, oh tempest tossed soul, and you will see that One like unto the Son of God is walking in the furnace with you, joyfully beholding the passing away of your dross and tin and the appearance of the priceless fine gold of the love of God.

Those precious souls who are ordained to share the likeness and glory of Christ have many companions in their tribulation. The beloved apostle, who wrote these words, "I, John, who am your brother and companion in tribulation and in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ," Rev. 1:9, knew what trial and affliction were, and he knew the amazing benefits that come from them. Jeremiah wrote, "I am the man who hath seen affliction by the rod of His wrath; He hath led me and brought me into darkness but not into light. Surely against me is He turned; He turneth His hand against me all day. My flesh and my skin hath He made old; He hath broken my bones." Lam. 3:1-4 But then, realizing the goodness of God, he rejoices in his suffering and says, "It is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord. It is good that a man should bear the yoke in his youth. He sitteth alone and keepeth silence, because he hath borne it upon him. He putteth his mouth in the dust; if so be there may be hope. He giveth his cheek to him that smiteth him; He is filled full with reproach. For the Lord will not cast off forever." Lam. 3:26-31

This is a wonderful spiritual lesson to learn, and it is an excellent instruction for all doting parents who turn themselves inside out to make things easy for their children. That is the worst thing they can do for them and the surest way to bring them to destruction. Even in the natural world the greatest men are the men who have known struggle. It gives them a true sense of values and a true understanding of the hard realities of life. These light afflictions, which are but for a moment, are working for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen; for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal.
